MONARCK,

CHARLES,

By the grace of God,

KING OF GREAT BRITAINE,

FRANCE, & IRELAND, DEFENDER

OF THE FAITH, &c.

IF by an vniverſall conſent (moſt dread Soveraigne) there were a Monarck created over all the World, the dedication of this booke would certainely belong to him: for it is a deſcription of the World. But ſince the honours, and Iuriſdictions of the Earth, are as it ſelfe divided into many parts; who can ſo juſtly pretend to this title, as your Majeſtie, that enjoyes the moſt bleſſed part thereof? VVhich of your Neighbours would receiue a view of their owne Countrie, and not judge the offer of it, rather an honour, then a reproach, when thoſe limits, which by this booke appeare to haue circled in their Territoires, for many ages, by the ambition of themſelues, or Neighbours are vtterly defaced; when thoſe Countries which by the gift of Nature, are abundantly fertile in People, and the nourriture of Man, are by the ruines of VVarre made deſolate of both. VVhereas the repreſentation of the whole VVorld, vnto your Majeſtie giues you for others pittie, and your ſelfe glorie: that as ſome other Nations by the vexations of VVarre, are not able to enjoye Peace: ſo your Majeſtie by the advantages of a well improoued Peace, (can either for your owne intereſt, or the protection of thoſe that flie vnto your Majeſtie for ſuccour) at any time declare a warre, terrible to others, not dangerous to your ſelfe: ſeeing the Situation of your Majeſties Kingdomes, your owne vertues, and the pietie of your ſubjects are aboue the Caſualities of warre. This Booke therefore moſt humbly caſts it ſelfe downe at your Majeſties feete, not onely in conſideration of the Subject, but alſo of the language, and the Authours of this edition: who can eaſier diſpenſe with the errour of preſumption, for craving your Majeſties gracious patronage, to a great worke cloathed in a plaine rough ſtile, then the Tranſlator can excuſe himſelfe? otherwiſe it ſhould not be Sacred to your Majeſtie: ſeeing wee all ſerue in this forraine Countrie, to noe other end, but your honour: and my ſelfe vnder the command of a moſt Noble perſonage; who hath more immediate obligations to your Majeſties ſeruice. For the advancement of which, as all my actions ſhalbe directed, ſo ſhall my prayers alſo: that your Royall Majeſtie maye enjoye the bleſſings of Almighty God for a long time in this VVorld, and crowne your Majeſtie with everlaſting felicitie in the next.

Your Majeſties moſt loyall Subject,
& humble Servant,

THE PREFACE TO THE READER.

HEre is presented to thy view (most curteous Reader) the laborious worke of those two Cosmographers Mr. Gerard Mercator, and Mr. Iudocus Hondius, with lively descriptions, clad in new robes, at the charge, care and industrie of Mr. Henry Hondius, Sonne unto the abovesaid Iudocus, and Mr. John Iohnson, to eternize their living memorie. At their request I have undertaken, and by the helpe of God, according to my weake abilitie, translated their Atlas Major into English, for the good of my Countrie-men, and by their direction (who have most interest therein) have enlarged, & augmented it, out of many worthy Authours of my owne Nation, where it was most needfull and requisite, and amended some errours in it, which were escaped in the former editions, & they for their parts have adorned it with new and exact Maps.

This worke then is composed of Geographie, (which is a description of the knowne Earth and the parts thereof) and Historie, which is (Oculus mundi) the eye of the World. These two goe inseparably together, and as it were hand in hand, or as Doctour Heylin saith, are like unto the two fire-lights Castor and Pollux seene together, crowne or happinesse; but parted assunder, menace a shipwrack of our content, and are like two Sisters intirely loving each other, and cannot without pittie be divided: so as that worthy Souldier Sr. Philip Sidney said of Argulus and Parthenia.

Her being vvas in him alone,
And she not being he vvas none.

May as justly be said of these two Gemini Geographie and Historie. These two are of such singular use, that Iulius Cæsar began with Geographick descriptions his commentaries of his warres against the Gaules. And indeed, what Generall is there, which conducts his Armie through passages, over Rivers, Brookes, Mountaines or Woods, quarter or lodge them, or beseige any Citty, Towne or Fort, but he must have continually a Topographick description, and Map of that Countrie, towne or place in his hand, to advance his intended dessigne. For how could I, or any man knowe, where Poitiers in France standeth, and where our Edward the black Prince, of ever living memorie, with eight thousand wearied Souldiers, gave battle to, and overthrew the French Armie, consisting of fortie thousand men, slew many noble men, and tenthousand Souldiers in that field, tooke King Iohn and Philip his Sonne, 70 Earles, 50 Barons, and 12 hundred Gentle-men priſonners: and yet comming out of a bloodie Battle, with a weariſome bodie, to ſhew his humanitie and obedience to his Father and King Iohn, that very night waited on them at their table, if he were ignorant of Geographie and Hiſtorie? Or how could one tell the ſite of Newport, & how the Downes lye by the Sea-coaſt, where that good Prince Count MAURICE of Naſſaw, Prince of Orange of famous memorie, fought the Battle of Flanders the 2 of Iulij 1600 againſt the Arch-Dukes Army, defeated them, tooke the Admirant of Arragon, and a great many of Spanish Dons, and Captaines priſoners, ſlew eight thouſand dead upon the place, tooke 106 Burgunnian colours, eight braſſe field-peeces, and a great deale of amunition and boote, if he knew not theſe two hand-maides, the one deſigning the place, the other the relation. Or for Navall fights, in what part of the narrow Seas, which was by Calis, the Navie of Queene Elizabeth of immortall memorie, commanded by that brave Sea-Captaine Sr. Francis Drake, of famous memorie, anno 88 encountred, and gave chaſe to the invincible Spanish fleete, ſent with a forewinde two fire-ships among them, which ſo routed and frighted them, that they were driven to cut their cables, hoiſt their ſailes, and the Almighty ſeconding this Stratagem with a mightie ſtorme, diſperced them and forced them to ſaile round about the Britiſh Coaſt, through breakeing and unknowne Seas, here a ship caſt away, & there another ſtranded, ſo that of this invincible Navie, commaunded by the Duke de Medina, there returned but 23 ships againe into Spaine, if one knew not Hydrographie & Hiſtorie. Or to know upon what height Panama and Nombre di Dios lyes in the VVeſt-India, and where Mr. Iohn Oxenham one of Sr. Francis Drakes fellowers, with ſeventie men, a litle above this towne, drew a land his ship, covered it with boughs, & marched over land with his Companie, guided by Negros, untill he came to a River, where he cut downe wood, built him a Pinnace: entred the South-Sea, went to the Ile of Pearles, and lying there in Ambuſcado ten dayes, tooke two Spanish ships, laden with 60 thouſand pound weight of gold, and two hundred thouſand pound of ſilver, returning ſafely againe to the maine-land, all which memorable actions, are deſcribed by Geographie, and knowne to be true by Hiſtorie.

Now to obſerve my Authours Method in theſe, and all other Geographick deſcriptions, firſt is given you the name, then the Site, the Largneſſe, the Bounds, the Fertilitie, the chiefe Citties, Townes, Caſtles, Forts, Villages, Rivers, Mountaines, Woods, Foreſts, Cattell and ſtrange beaſts of every ſeverall Kingdome, Countrie and Region of the World, the diverſe rarities and wonders in nature, more in one Countrie, then in an other, the Religion, Cuſtomes, Manners, Conditions, and Qualities of the ſundry nations of the Earth. Here then the great Monarches, Kings and Princes of this Vniverſe, may repreſentively in their Cabinets take a view of the extention, and limits of their owne Kingdomes, and Dominions: yea, and to ſee the Genealogie of diverſe Princes, and the Politicke Government of their Eſtates. And if they be in hoſtility with their neighbour Princes may peepe upon thoſe places, townes and Forts, which lye moſt advantagious & commodious to ſatisfie their ambition, and what memorable and warrlike actions, during the Monarchies of the world have hapned. Here the Noble-man and Gentle-man by ſpeculation in his cloſſet, may travell through every Province of the whole world. Here the Devine hath a ſubject of contemplation, to overview the Holy-land, upon which the Holy Patriarches and Prophets, & the Lord of life, the Prince of our ſalvation trod upon with his bleſſed feete, and take notice of Gibeon and the Valley of Aialon, where the Almighty made the Sonne & the Moone to ſtand ſtill in the Firmament of Heaven, almoſt a whole day, and went not downe, till he had crowned his Captaine Generall, Ioſua and his people with an abſolute victorie over his Ennemies; yea, and ſee by demonſtration thoſe Countries, in admiring the infinite love, & goodneſſe of God, where the glorious light of the Goſpell firſt brake out, and where it is now preached?

preached? whereas millions of other nations lyes ſtill in paganiſme, Mahometaniſme, Idolatrie, ſuperſtition, darkeneſſe, and the shaddow of death, being Strangers from the life of God. Here the Souldier hath matter of delight miniſtred unto him, in beholding the place, & reading the ſtorie, where many bloodie Battles have bene fought, and many famous ſeiges performed. Here the Navigator may perceive how every Coaſt, Promontoire, Haven, Bay, Towne and Fortreſſe lyes, even from Pole to Pole, from Eaſt to Weſt, together with their altitude, longitude and latitude. Here the Marchant ſitting in his counting-houſe, may know what Marchandiſes every Countrie affordeth, what commodities it wanteth, and whither he may tranſport, and vent thoſe which are moſt vendible, to returne gaine and profite into his purſe. Here alſo the Phyſitian may underſtand what Phyſicall herbes, ſimples, druggs, and minerals every Countrie yeeldeth, for the recovering of mans health. In fine, this booke is uſefull for all men, of what profeſſion, quality, or condition ſo ever they bee. To conclude, for the further ſatisfaction of the Reader, I recommend him to the preface in the frontiſpice of this Atlas, made by the Authours themſelves. And if he finde any verball, or litterall faults eſcaped, which happely may be, becauſe my vocation would not ſuffer me to be preſent at the correction of the preſſe: I beſeech him to pardon them, being the tranſlation of a Souldier, whoſe eare hath bin acquainted more with the beating of a Drumme, and the ſound of a Trumpet, then with a learned Vniverſity: which if acceptable unto him, it may give my Authours and my ſelfe encouragement to undertake a ſecond impreſſion, to give more contentment to the Reader, and if it will pleaſe him to give us any helpe, light, or furtherance of ſuch a brave worke, he ſhall share with us in the honour thereof, and oblidge us much unto him. From Amſterdam the firſt of Ianuarij 1636, ſtilo veteri.

Thyne in all love

THE LIFE
OF THE
renowned and illuſtrious Coſmographer
GERARD MERCATOR.

THAT learned and skillfull Coſmographer, of the Illuſtrious Duke of Gulick and Cleave, GERARD MERCATOR, was borne the fifth of March, in the yeare of our Lord 1512. His Parents dwelt in Gulick, his Fathers name was Hubert Mercator, and his Mothers name Emerentine, who dwelt then at Rupelmond upon the confines of Flanders, with their Uncle Giſbert Mercator, Paſtour of the ſaid towne. This GERARD MERCATOR comming out of his child-hood, after he had learned his accidence, for the attaining of the latine tongue, his Father ſent him to the Boſch, that he might ſtuddie there Grammar, and learne the principales of Logicke. From thence he was ſent unto the famous Univerſitie of Lovaine, and was in commons in the Swine-Colledge, where he followed his ſtuddies, till he commenced maſter of Art. But conſidering that the ſtuddie of Philoſophie could not maintaine the charge, and expence of his familly he undertooke the ſtuddie of the Mathematiques, which he performed with ſuch diligence, that within few yeares after, he taught it to others, making many Inſtruments, neceſſarie for that art and ſcience as Sphæres, Aſtralabes, Aſtronomicke rings, and others. Being 24 yeares of age he married with a maide of Lovaine, called Barbeta Scheleken, of whome he procreated ſixe children, three ſonnes and three daughter. And after he was married, he beganne to cut Maps in copper, of the deſcription of the Holy-land, which he finiſhed, and with admiration gave out at 37 yeares of age. In theſe his Mathematicke ſtuddies, he had no Preceptor, but onely read and ſtuddied the learned writing of Gemnia Friſius much eſteemed in thoſe dayes for theſe ſciences. At the urgent requeſt of ſome Marchant, he undertooke the deſcription of Flanders, which he in a ſhort time accompliſhed with happie ſucceſſe. In the yeare 1541 he publiſhed at Antwerpe a treatiſe of caſting of Latine, Italian, and curſive letters, which was well received. And underſtanding that his workes were well accepted among the learned, he began his Terreſtriall Globe, which he finiſhed in the ſpace of two yeares. His fame comming to the eare of the Emperour Charles the fifth, through the recommendations of the Lord of Granville, the Emperour entreated him to cut and make for him many Mathematicall Inſtruments, which unhappely were ſecretly burnt by the Ennemie in a barne, which cauſed him to make new ones. Ten yeares after he publiſhed at Lovaine a Globe, which repreſented the conſtitution and motion of the Heavens, the Planets and Celeſtiall ſignes. In the interim he made a treatiſe, and dedicated it to the Emperour of the uſe of the Globe, and an other of the practiſe of the Aſtronomicke ring. The yeare following, anno 1552, he removed from Lovaine to Duyſ bourg in Cleave-land with all his Familly, where being arrived he made two ſmall Globes, the one of Criſtall, the other of wood, the firſt was engraven with a Dyamant, & enammeled with gold, repreſenting the ſeven Planets, and the chiefe Celeſtiall ſignes: the ſecond contained within that litle capacity an exact deſcription of the World: which at Bruſſels he preſented to the Emperour, with ſome other Mathematicall Inſtruments. Anno 1554, he gave out the deſcription of Europe, which he began ere he departed from Lovaine. And was afterward reviſed, and exactly corrected by him in the yeare 1572. After this being requeſted by a ſpeciall frend of his to engrave in copper. a Map of the Brittiſh Iles, he performed it with great diligence, fidelity, dexterity and perfection. And almoſt in the ſame time he drew with his curious penne, an accurate Map of the Duchie of Lorraine, and went thether in perſon to take not without danger of his life, & weakening of his Spirits. Foure yeares afterward, at the earneſt requeſt of ſome of his frends, he publiſhed a Chronologie: and a while after, put out his new worke anno 1596, to wit, his Map and diſcription of the whole World; not without the admiration of all perſons of quality of his ingenious skill. This done, he amended and corrected the faults, which were eſcaped in Ptolomees Maps, for which he was highly commended. A good while before Abraham Ortelius publiſhed his worke, he had conceived ſome generall and particular Ideas of Maps. but would not give them out, till the ſaid Ortelius had vented a great number of his Coppies: becauſe of the intimate love, which was betwixt them. But at laſt not to fruſtrate the world of his labours, he cauſed anno 85 his Maps of France and Germanie to be printed then cut in a plate, with the Generall and particular Maps of Italie, and finiſhed them anno 90. Then he began his deſcriptions of the Septentrionall Regions, but before he finiſhed them death prevented him. He wrote alſo a treatiſe of the Art of Geographie, which his Heires ſhortly intend to publiſh.

Thus much touching the praiſe and commendations of his Mathematicke, and Geographicke workes. It reſteth now to ſpeake ſomewhat of his Theologicall workes. Before the warres began in the low-Countries, he wrot his Euangelicall Harmonie in a fine order, and Method facile, and eaſie for the Reader, which booke came out anno 1592. Then he made an excellent commentarie upon the Epiſtle of Saint Paul to the Romans: wherein he ſought to diſſolve the high and difficult controverſies of our age, touching the fore knowledge and Predeſtination of God. As alſo upon ſome Chapters of the Prophet Ezekiell, and diverſe others: but beſides all this, he was very skillfull in the ſearch, and deſcription of the Genealogie and famillies of Kings, Princes, and great Lords. And if the Reader is deſirous to informe himſelfe further, touching his treatiſes, he may reade his Epiſtle dedicatoire, which he prefixed before his Maps of France and Germanie, which worke he intituled ATLAS.

For his behaviour, and manner of life, he had a quiet and a meeke ſpirit, and was of great integrity and ſincerity of heart, a lover of peace, both publicke and private, an honorer of his Superiours, a Lover of his Neighbours, and a great favorite of ſtuddie and learning, preferring other men before him. He had an honeſt, a vertuous, a modeſt, and an obedient wife, which could governe well her houſe and familly. Shee dyed the 24 of Auguſt, guſt, anno 86. His Children were well educated, and tooke great paines, in the knowledge of the liberall ſciences. He loved his ordinarie and quotidian ſtuddies ſo much, & with ſuch diligence, that one could ſcarcely ever finde him idle from his booke: but alwayes employed in his Art, or in the reading of one famous Hiſtorian, or an other. For his dyet, he was very ſober in eating and drinking, and yet alwayes kept a good table, and provided with all things neceſſarie. By the knowledge which he gained, he held love and correſpondencie not onely with the learned in all arts and ſciences, but alſo was in great eſteeme and reputation with Emperours, Kings, Princes, Dukes, Earles, and other great Lords, which would be here too tedious to rehearſe in particular. He lived fiftie yeeres with his firſt wife, who deceaſing a while after he married againe. But ſhortly after his ſecond Eſpouſals, he was taken in his left ſide with the palſie, which deceaſe never left him till his dying day. Before his death he ſheweth great ſignes of true repentance, as well in word as in deed. He lived foure ſcore and two yeares, and ſome odd weekes, and then reſted peaceably in the Lord. And thus much of the life and manners of this worthy and famous learned man, GERARD MERCATOR.

THE LIFE

OF THAT

famous, and excellent Cosmographer

IUDOCUS HONDIVS.

IUDOCUS HONDIUS was one of the most skilfull, and famous Cosmographers of our age, borne in the yeare of our redemption 1563. His Parents were Flammings. His Fathers name was Olivier de Hondt, a most ingenious Artisan, and his Mothers name was Petronella of Havertuyn. The place of his nativity, was in a certaine Village of Flanders, commonly called Wackene; a most pleasant, and a delightfull place. But being two yeares old, or there abouts, was brought into the famous Citty of Gaunt. His birth did presage some admirable industrie in this childe: for his face was full of traces and wrinkles, which often betokeneth a great capacity of wit and spirit, which his Father foretold for these, and some other notable markes he saw in him, and that not without just cause: for his ingenious nature and spirit, even from his infancie appeared in him, as pronosticating the rare, and admirable gifts of this child in sublimate and high matters, beyond the common reach of the vulgar. For being but eight yeeres of age, or there abouts, he begann to betake himselfe to the Art of purtraying, and afterward to carve in bone, then in copper plates, and had such a proficiencie therein, which ministred matter of admiration to his Father (and which is most worthy of observation) without the helpe or instruction of a Maister. And tooke such a habite, and delight in it, that he made it as it were his ordinary passetime, and recreation. These fine rudiments, and commencements, purchased him a great deale of love, favour, and respect from every man. His first beginnings in carving and cutting were not fruitlesse. For, by his art and industrie, he grew so famous every where, that the Prince of Parma, who then kept his Court at Bevere, on the land of Waes, having beseiged Antwerpe, sent for him from Gaunt to Bevere aboveiaid, by his Confessour, for to cut some figures in copper, who afterward with faire, & large promisses, would have perswaded him to have gone to Rome with him: so that he could not get from him but by stealth. Besides, he had the gift of writing many faire hands, as the severall coppies of his booke demonstrate, which afterward were printed. He was also from his youth very expert in the knowledge of cutting of letters, & Archetypes for printing: in which skill he was so excellent, that he made it for a time his chiefe profession, and attained to this knowledge, without the helpe of a Master, which is rare, & in my opinion unmatchable. His Father then perceiving his admirable, & ingenious spirit, put him out to studdie and learning, that he might learne the Latin tongue, and the rudiments of the Grecian: wherein he advanced greatly in a short time, and would not be misled from his generous studdie, notwithstanding all games and boyes sports, whereunto youth is given, which indeed is the corruption of this age. Also, these his more serious studdies, could not divert him at his vacant houres, from the exercising of his first art, and knowledge: above all, he was addicted to the studdie of the Mathematicks, and to those things which chiefly did tend to that art he loved. Being twentie yeeres of age, after that the Citty of Gaunt was given over into the Kings hands, he retyred himselfe into the noble Citty of Londō in England, where being setled he began to follow hard his Art of Cosmographie, and with his skilfull Engraver, drew many fine draughts, and master-peeces, as S^r. Francis Drakes voyage about the World: the Holy-land, the Romane Empire, & diverse others; among the rest, his 2 excellent Globes, the one Celestiall, the other the Terrestriall, the greateste that ever was made in the World. When he was 22 yeares old, in the yeare of our Lord 1586, he marryed a maide of Gaunt, named Collette vander Keere, of whome he procreated 13 children, to wit, seven Sonnes and sixe daughters, whereof two of his Sonnes are yet living, & three daughters, whereof one of them HENRY HONDIUS of Amsterdam, makes profession of his Fathers art. Having then dwelt some yeeres in England, he removed from thence with his familly into Holland, and dwelt in the famous Citty of Amsterdam: a chiefe Citty, which with honour can give testimonie of his service to posterity. For in this place aboue all others, by his cunning Engraver, and Mathematicall science, he made a draught of the Regions, and Seas knowne, and unknowne, aswell the Easterne, as the Westerne; yea in such sort, that it were a hard matter to describe in particular the watches, labour and travell, care and diligence which he tooke for the benefite of posterity. And what shall wee say of this Atlas (one of the wonders of the world) which as an Orphan lamenting thé losse of his first Parents, for want of perfection, is by his labour and industrie, accomplished in all partes, as many Kings, Princes, Nobles, Gentle-men, Devines, and Philosophers, with other personnages of quality and condition soever have witnessed to his honour. What shall wee say also of so many sorts of Terrestriall and Celestiall Globes, great, middle & smaller ones, which he cut, and drew out with such dexterity? What shall wee say then of so many fine and curious Maps of all sises, both great, litle, circular, and square, and of the diversity of his Engravers and Compasses, which he so artifically invented & made? Let Egypt then boast of her Ptolomee: Germanie of her Munster: France of her Belle-Forest: and England of her Camden: Spaine of her Vasea: Italie of her Plinie: Holland is not inferiour unto them, and hath just cause to glorie in her great HONDIUS. Wee must not omit also the dilligence, he tooke in publishing the Greeke-Latine Ptolomy, enriched with the Maps of GERARD MERCATOR, and many other excellent workes, which for the avoyding of prolixity, I will passe over in silence. For, if I should here recite his great renowne, and the fame he had, how many brave Princes, and Noble men, did him the honour to visite him, and to come in person to his house to see him and his workes: yea ſometimes foure or five at a time: how he was beloved, reſpected and favored by many illuſtrious, and learned men of quality, this narration would be too teadious. Notwithſtanding all theſe things, which cannot be omitted, and which he hath with good ſucceſſe performed, his future projects were in no wiſe inferiour to his preterit: for he was reſolved, if God had prolonged his dayes, to have given out diverſe other workes: but being 48 yeares of age, a violent ſickneſſe ſeized upon him, in ſo much, that in the ſpace of 4 dayes, he was alive and dead, and ſo dyed on the 16 of Ianuarij 1611, being in the flower of his age, ſtrong and vigorous, and able to have effected great things, which might have done great good to Poſteryti. But the Lord, who is moſt wiſe in Councill, diſpoſeth of every mans life, and death at his pleaſure. To him be given all honour, glorie, and praiſe, now and evermore, AMEN.

THE PREFACE VPON ATLAS.

ATLAS King of Mauritania, was borne of a Royall race, and had for his father Serrenus, or Indigena (as Euſebius withneſſeth out of the moſt auncient Hiſtorians) whoſe ſurname was Cœlus, & whoſe mother was Titea, ſirnamed Terra; his great Grand-father on the Fathers and mothers ſide were Elius or Sol, King of Phœnice, who with his wife Beruth, dwelt in Biblius, both of them excellently verſed in ASTRONOMIE; and in naturall diſciplines, ſo that for their learning ſake, they were accounted worthy of the names of Sol and of Cœlum, vndoubtedly this Atlas, as the Ancients report (namely Diodorus in his fourth booke and fifth chapter) was a moſt skillfull Aſtrologer, and the firſt among men, that diſputed of the Sphœre. He had manie Bretheren, to the number of 45. whom Cœlus begot of diverſe woemen, whereof 17 of them he had by Titea, a moſt prudent Matron, that did many good offices to men, whom he after their mothers name called Titanes. He had alſo ſiſters, among whom the principall were Baſilia who in favour of her mother, brought vp all her brethren, and therefore they called her Grandmother, and Rhea Pandora. Now after the deceaſe of Cœlus, Baſilia being the eldeſt, and excelling the others in prudence and vertue, by the common conſent of her bretheren, and the people, being a Virgin and vnmarryed, ſhee obtayned the Kingdome. Afterwards, being deſirous to leave an heire behind her, ſhe was marryed to her brother Hyperion, and ſhee bare him two Sonns, to wit, Sol and Luna, whoſe prudence Hyperions brethren, admiring; to the intent the Kingdom might not be ſetled vpon his iſſue, they maſacred him, and drowned Sol his Sonn being yet an Infant in the river of Erydanus. Then the Sonnes of Cœlus, whereof the nobleſt of them were Atlas and Saturnus, ſhared their Fathers Kingdomes betweene them. Atlas had for his part, thoſe Countries, which lay next vnto the Ocean, and Lybia, and the ſtreights of Gibraltar, whence Mount-Atlas and the Atlanticke people in Mauritania tooke firſt their name, and Saturnus obtayned Sicilia, and Lybia, who being afterward hated of his people, for the crueltie he vſed againſt his Father Cœlus, fledd into Italie, where by Ianus he was made Partaker of the Kingdome. Now foraſmuch as Dyodorus alledgeth, that Cœlus was the firſt King that reigned among the Atlanticks, the people being before diſperced vp and downe in fields in Collonies, he admoniſhed them, to gather themſelves together, and to build townes. Without all queſtion theſe Kings were very ancient, becauſe Atlas, Sonne of Atlas, having chaſed away his brother Heſperus was King of Iberia, which afterwards in the yeere 738, after the vniverſall flood was called Spayne. Heſperus flying into Etruria, where he was made tutour to Ianus. The Grandfather of Atlas (Elius) reigned in Phenice anno 662 after the deluge. And Diodorus witneſſeth, that thoſe Kings out of the nature of things, and the contemplation of them, they attayned to excellent knowledg; and withall became pious, and more humane, that as Dyodorus truely ſaith, the Atlanticks bore away the bell both for their pietie, and humanitie to ſtraungers, from all other Nations whatſoever, when there were ſcarcely not above 22 or 23 generations compleat, and manie parts of the earth not yet inhabited Atlas had manie Sonns, but among the reſt, one famous for his pietie, juſtice, and courteſie to his ſubjects. His name was Heſperus, who aſcending vp to the top of Mount Atlas, to ſearch out diligently the courſe of the Starrs, was on a ſudden violently carryed away with winds, and appeared no more. So much Dyodorus ſpeaketh of him: but in my opinion (as I have ſaid) I finde he was King in Iberia, into which at laſt, he came with a proſperous winde, where he lived ſo prudently and religiouſly, that when he fled into Etruria, being driven from thence by his brother, for his excellent wiſedome and prudence he was made Tutor to Ianus, and adminiſtratour of the Kingdom, which offices Atlas his brother vndertooke. My purpoſe then is to followe this Atlas, a man ſo excelling in erudition, humanitie, and wiſedome, (as from a loftie watch tower) to contemplate Coſmographie, as much as my ſtrength and abilitie will permit mee, to ſee if peradventure, by my diligence, I may finde out ſome truths in things yet vnknowne, which may ſerve to the ſtudie of wiſedom. And as the world conteyneth the number of all things, the ſpecies, order, harmonie, proportion, vertues and effects; ſo beginning from the creation: I will number all the parts thereof, ſo farre as methodicall reaſon requireth, according to the order of the creation, and will contemplate phyſically, that the cauſes of things may be knowne, whereof conſiſteth that ſcience of ſciences wiſedom, which directeth every thing to a good end, by a provident wiſedom, which doth facilitate the way to the ends. This is the maine ſcope I ayme at. Afterward I will handle Cœleſtiall things in their ranke: then the Aſtronomicks; which appertayne to conjecture by the Starrs. Fourthly, treate of things Elementarie, & laſtly the Geographicks, and ſo (as in a mirrour) will ſet before your eyes, the whole world, that in making vſe of ſome rudiments, ye may finde out the cauſes of things, and ſo by attayning vnto wiſedom and prudence, by this meanes leade the Reader to higher ſpeculations.

The Booke of the CREATION AND FABRICK OF THE WORLD.

The first Chapter.
The ſcope of all Coſmographie.

IT is a common Axiom among thoſe, who are in any wiſe elevated, in the contemplation of the worke of this frame of the world, that God, who is the Authour thereof, is of an immenſe power, wiſedome and goodneſſe, and it is impoſſible, that a man should doubt of his power, who beleeveth that it was created of nothing, and that the matter thereof is not eternall. If there be any man, to whom this power, & goodneſſe of God doth not ſufficiently appeare, as not having yet conſidered well the commendable, exquiſite, and moſt wiſe ornament and diſpoſition of this Fabrick, let him then diligently enquire with vs, ſo farre as the contemplation of the workmanship it ſelfe, may perſwade him, and as farre as is lawfull to knowe by the word of God, and the experience of things. For this is the maine ſcope wee ayme at, that in handling Coſmographie, the infinite wiſedome of God, and his inexhauſt goodneſſe, may be knowne, aſwell by the admirable concordancie of all things to one and the ſame end of God, as alſo by his inſcrutable providence in the compoſition, whereby wee may be continually rapt vp to reverence and honour his Majeſtie, & to embrace his rich goodneſſe. God graunt then, that he will be pleaſed, to enlighten our darke vnderſtanding with his light, and direct our mindes, to the finding out of this true wiſedome. It is ſo then, that this immenſe goodneſſe of God, not able to conteyne his owne glorie in himſelfe, by reaſon of his ſuperabundant fecunditie to beget, was willing to create man, to whom he might communicate the ſame, and having conceived in his wiſedome, to inveſt him with a Bodie, ſuch as wee ſee, and as his firſt Creation sheweth him to be, created and brought forth the world by his Almightie power, and digeſted it into that order, nature, and proportion, according to that Idea, which he from all Eternitie had conceived, furniſhed with all parts neceſſarie for the vſe of man ſo created. Therefore, the chief end of the works of God, & his primarie intention, was to communicate his glorie. The ſecond was the creation of man. The third, the diſpoſition of all things in the world, and the laſt drift of his intention, was the beginning of the worke. It behooveth him then, that will vndertake the deſcription of the world, to begin at its, firſt exordium, who would profitably extend it to Phyloſophie.

Curious men were wont to aſke, 1. what God did before hee created the world, how and where hee was then, when as yet there was neither 2. place, nor time? why hee did not create the world many ages before? and wherefore hee did not make man ſo perfect, that hee could not fall? to which frivolous and rash queſtions, hee will eaſely anſwere who hath knowledge as farre as the Scriptures and the worke of God teacheth vs of the ſacred Trinitie, and who shall diligently obſerve the true definitions of time, and place: but this impietie, and wickedneſſe of men are not worthy the anſwering; for it is religion, not to prye further into the hidden ſecrets, and judgments of God, then hee hath revealed vnto vs in his holy word, and to diſpute of things, that are out of our element, and before the world was, and of things that are above our reach and capacitie, is meere temeritie and folly: ſeing they beget onely opinions, not ſciences, and therefore can bring no true wiſedome along with them: but rather produce ſtrange doctrins, which obſcure, and darken the truth. Let it ſuffice vs then, to knowe the truth of things, ſo farre forth, as hiſtorie and ſence reveale to vs, and not according to opinions, whereof there is no ſcience, and in ſo doing, wee shall not erre, if wee onely proceede in a right order.

I. THou ſcoffing Atheiſt, that enquireſt, what Du Bartas.
Th' Almightie did before hee framed that,
What weightie worke his minde was buyſyed on;
Eternally before this world begon.
(Sith ſo deepe wiſedome, and ommipotence Nought worſe beſeems, then ſloth and negligence)
Knowe (bold Blaſphemer) that before, he built
A Hell to punish the preſumptuous guilt.
Of thoſe vngodly, whoſe proud ſence dare cite
And cenſure ſo his wiſedome infinite.

II. God was not voyd of ſacred exerciſe,
Hee did admire his glories, miſteries.
His power, his juſtice and his providence;
His bounteous grace and great beneficence:
Were th' Holy object of his heavenly thought
Upon the which eternally it wrought.
It maye bee alſo, that God meditated
The worlds Idea, ere it was created:
Alone hee lived not; for his Sonne and Spirit.
Were with him aye, equall in might and merit.

THE PROLEGOMENA
Of the
FABRICK OF THE WORLD.

The ſecond Chapter.
Of God, the beginning and Workmaſter of all things, according to the Platoniſts.

THe Platoniſts from the communion of the ſpecies, which is diſcerned in things and in the order which appeared in them, have very well aſſended vnto that ONE, who is the firſt and the beginning of all things, that is (according as Paul ſaith Rom. 1:20.) that in beholding the diſpoſition, and moſt adorned harmonie of all things, perceived after ſome manner in them, the exiſtence of ſome Providence, and vnderſtanding them to be the worke of ſome one have attayned ſo farre, that they were drawne, aſwell to the meditating of them, as to the affirming their Creation. But when againe, they did diſcend from this ONE, to the Contemplation of his workes, they erred both in the manner, and in the order of the Creation. Firſt of all, in that they make the intellect, or Spirit Fabricator of the World, out of this ONE, and diſtinguiſh him entirely from him, and make him another afterwards. Againe, in this, that ſeparating the matter it ſelfe from all forme, they vnderſtand it not to be the generation of any Idea: for Ideas are ſpecies, or formes, wch can engender nothing but formes, and ſo conſequently muſt of neceſſitie followe, that they vnderſtand it, not to have beene created, but that it is eternall. The originall of this errour is, becauſe they beleeved the matter was onely ſuſceptible of formes, and that it had no communion with the formes of nature, and therefore have not onely once dreamed, that it was in the ſeeds of forms, and that the force thereof, might be conducted by the worker. Whence they were at length conſtraynd to conſtitute a certaine perpetuall, and a formall beginning out of the matter. By the ſame reaſon, they were induced to ſet downe one ſelf-ſame out of ONE, and diverſe from him, ſo cutting too neere the quick, and ſpoyling this ONE, and primarie beginning of all things, of all nature of being, and fearing (without cauſe) they ſhould make this a thing cõpounded: they invented an other beginning of things out of this ONE, begotten of ONE, but diſtinct in Eſſence and proprietie of nature from whome alone as from the Father, firſt and immeadietly depended the firſt modell of the worke of the world, and of the immediate, vertue formatrix of things. The traces of which doctrine, Valentine following added other fancies vnto it, having found out a meane, whereby ONE, whom he calleth Proarche and Bythum, hath proceeded to the generation of the Spirit, & by ſome generation comming betwixt afterwards. Finally, deducing it to the Creation, aſwell of the matter, as of all things, and even mixing therewith this prodigious Phyloſophie of Pythagoras, whom his diſciples following, taught the ſame doctrine in obſcuring, and adulterating the truth in all parts; more then with olde wives fables, but ſeing the raving of theſe men, vaniſhed of it ſelfe, wee will rather have reſpect to the Theologie of the Platoniſts, and to the originall of the world, the which as it hath more appearance of divinity, then all others, and ſeemeth to come neereſt to the Moſaicall truth: ſo likewiſe it may more eaſely drawe vs, to true and ſacred Phyloſophie. And therefore, in propounding a briefe ſumme thereof, wee will oppoſe againſt it a true narration of things drawne aſwell from the ſecrets of the holy Scriptnre, as from nature, confirming the one, by ſolid reaſons, and rejecting the other, wherin it ſtrayeth from the truth; to the end that vnder the colour of a more divine Theologie, the eyes of our vnderſtanding bee not dazled in the ſearch of this phyloſophie, wherin much falſitie is contayned. That it maye alſo appeare to all men, that among the Ethnicks, there was never ſchoole ſo holy, no care ſo fervent, no wits ſo excellent, that by their own induſtrie could attayne vnto the truth of things; conſidering alſo the moſt Religious among them, even the Platoniſts themſelves, wandred aſtraye, and miniſtred matter of erring to others. Wherefore lett vs give thanks vnto God alone, who is the Beginning, the Creatour, the Animatour, the Conſervatour, and the End of the work of the world: And that it pleaſed him by Moſes, and his other Prophets, to reveale vnto vs the Fabrick of the Univerſe, the beginning and fountayne of all Phyloſophie and of all truth.

ONE or Good.

Simonides being asked what God was after three dayes deliberation ſaid that the longer hee thought what God should bee, the leſſe hee understood him.

And Plato. It is hard to finde a God, but to understand him impoſſible.

This then is the Summe of the Platoniſts Theologie, they laye downe three beginnings, in things divine, to wit, ONE, ſpirit and ſoule, which are called in there fables, Cælus, Saturnus and Iupiter: following one an other in order. The chiefeſt whereof is hee, whome they make to be their firſt and Sovereigne God. Him they call ONE, in regard of his moſt ſimple eſſence, and Good by reaſon of his ſuperabundant fruitfulneſſe to engender, and facilitie to commuuicate himſelfe, they deſcribe him to be, neither being, nor eſſence, neither intellect, nor good adjectively: neither to vnderſtand, no not himſelfe, neither to live nor to move; but to be above all theſe things, that is, the Beginning and Original of being, and Eſſence, of Intellect, and of intelligence, of life, and of motion; and the firſt and ſupreame of all things, that maye be apprehended, beſide himſelfe. Againe, that he hath nothing in himſelfe, that he differeth from all things, that he conſiſteth in himſelfe, and cannot be mixed with things ſequent, and yet neverthleſſe that he is preſent in all things, and that he contayneth all things, and in like manner he is everie where, and yet no where, that is to ſaye, he hath no neede of any place, neither is he finite, nor determined, neither within, nor without, but is the power of all things: yea the greateſt power of all powers, and yet is not all things, but above all things.

The Spirit.

That this one or good produceth from his owne abundance, not by conſent of any cogitation, not by any councill, not by any determinate will, not being moved by any meanes, but abiding in his owne habitude, by his owne peculiar perfection, accompanyed by a potentiall act, or an efficacious power, internally he created a beame, which he diſperceth almoſt like the Sunne, that abiding one, and the ſame immoveable, ſpreadeth its light, which beame in aſmuch, that on a ſudden, it is made that which it is, abiding in him, it becommeth a being, but in that it is converted naturally to the Parent, whence it received it motion, it is made living, from whome being fortyfied and repleniſhed with power, and perfection, is enriched by it ſelfe, of the ſame intelligence, and becommeth a Spirit, and Intellect, and aſwell in reſpect to his Father, as to himſelfe becomes intelligent: but in aſmnch as regarding himſelfe, and being well acquainted with his owne power (how farre it is extended, as that from whence the vertue, which is the Genetrix of all taketh her force) defineth to himſelfe his Eſſence, which hethereto was indefinite, and indeterminate, and maketh it explicate, not in applying thereto his Spirit, or in paſſing it into his vnderſtanding, as a man doth in ſeeking of that which hee hath not, or deſireth to knowe, that which he is ignorant of: but by a ſole and a perpetuall Act of his vnderſtanding, which never ſlumbreth. An Internall Act (I ſaye) of his Eſſence, having evermore an eye to his power, and knowing determinately things, which were hidden, without addition of Intelligence ſo (I ſaye) he conceiveth in his vnderſtanding the Ideas, or formative ſpecies of all things, which they call Intelligible Gods, and engendreth them in ſome ſort. Diſtinguiſhed by a formall reaſon, but the ſame in Eſſence as manie Exiſtents ONE. I ſay not one, & manie, but one-manie, as Permenides will have it, for the leſſe numerous unity, aſwell in the thought, as in the ſoule, and as the Intellect is repleniſhed with power received from ONE: ſo likewiſe being full of Ideas,

Ideas, or the formes of all things remayne one, and the ſame with them, all beings exiſting in this, and them true, becauſe they are immutable and eternall, which as a Satyr ſuddenly ſwalloweth them vp, as being engendred from him, & in him, ſuffering them not to bee nourriſhed at Rheas houſe, that is, not ſuffering them to fall into the matter of things naturall & fraile: but keepeth all things in himſelf, & conteyneth them without diſſolution or partition, and poſſeſſeth all things in one, being preſent alſo to all things, and in all places, and yet nevertheleſſe is not in them, but they in him, as depending of him, and conſiſting in him. Now as the Intellect is ONE-manie, that is, One being in himſelfe all, and in Identity of Eſſence, or an unitie impartible, but diſtinguiſhed in himſelfe, according to the parts, abyding together, and inwardly by an alteritie, is not partible in ſequent being, but remayneth alwayes with it ſelfe, as one is not diſtributed into ſequents. For it is not diſperced diſtinctly into many things, according to his internall alterity, but procreateth one onely, according to the ſeminall reaſons, being already by act, and power manie together, to wit, the Soule, whereof wee ſhall come to ſpeake of immediatly. They terme this intellect, the great God, the ſecond God, and beſides not any, but All God, from whome as from the primarie, and Sole all being, all beings immediatly obtaine their Eſſence, and therefore all Gods. They call this alſo the word of God, and an act produced, from the ſame good, and againe the Image of God, becauſe it imitateth the goodneſſe of his begetter, with all his ſtrength, by a copious and a fruitfull proprietie to engender, which forces ſeeing he receiveth them from his Begetter, are yet ſo conjoyned to him, that it ſeemeth onely, to bee diſtinguiſhed from him, by a certaine alteritie. And Plato calleth it Idea, becauſe it comprehendeth in its eſſence, the Patterne and ſole individuall ſpecies of all things. Hee calleth it both the cauſe and the maker of the world, in aſmuch as being made the firſt being, it afterward becommeth the Parent of all beings.

The Soule. The generation of this Spirit is the Soule of the world, the third God, no otherwiſe proceeded from thence, then it from one, for it ſelfe is the word of the Spirit; It is the light ſtreaming forth by the Spirit Creatour of the world, it is an Act, and the whole, produceth outwardly, and the life, which quickneth things inferiour, according as it is enlivened by the intellect, it ſelfe being enlivened by converſion to one, and as the being which looketh to its begetter is made Intellect: ſo the Soule alſo having regard to the Spirit is made reaſon from the ſame intellect. Light and Trace, evermore depending from thence. It being likewiſe of the ſame conjunction, but comprehending from thence inferiour things, one and manie exiſting together, according to Parmenides: One, becauſe that under a Common intellectuall eſſence, it receiveth the reaſons of all formes, and is repleniſhed when it hath regard to its Father the intellect, and ſo manie together, becauſe that when it is converted to it ſelfe, it conceiveth apart by it ſelfe, the ſeminall reaſons of all formes, and their number by order, and by their exceeding great fecundity to produce, being heated within: it animateth them, and giveth them a beginning of motion, to engender formes in the matter, to wit, to create ſence to living Creatures, Nature vigetative to plants, Motion to cœleſtiall bodies, and beſides all this, what ſoever appertayneth to order, Species, Nature, proportion, and the Motion of things. Therefore, the Soule being ſo conſtituted in her Eſſence, that as the One, and the Intellect, the ſame may alſo bee in every place, and being preſent to all things, it cannot be otherwiſe, but it muſt ordaine all things in this viſible world: diſpoſe, vigetate, animate, and conduct every thing as it were in hatching it to its proper being and form: yet the Spirit abideth, not in it ſelfe impartible, but in ſome ſort to all bodies, and inſinuateth it ſelfe into them in every place, that is, according to the reaſon of every ſpecies, but not diſtributed into parts devided by it ſelfe: for it is both according to its ſubſtance, and according to all its eſſence indeviſible, and is both together in all places, and in all things, but worketh diverſly, in exerciſing its forces by the ſeminall, and ſpecificall reaſons, which are many and make one reſemblance, to wit, of ſpecies in things of it ſelfe, and therefore though that in its Eſſence, it becommeth diviſible: yet nevertheleſſe, that is not done by a proper neceſſitie of deviſion (for it abideth alwaies wholly in it ſelfe) but it is becauſe that the bodies by reaſon of their deviſibility, cannot receive indeviſibility, ſo that, this partition of bodies, is not a paſſion, or a neceſſity of the Soule.

The Platoniſts then aſcribe to Divine things, theſe three beginnings in the ſame manner, as I have declared them. As for the firſt, they doe not agree, that it is an Act of ſome One (as it ought not to bee,) or that it hath any action: yet they graunt that it is potentiall, that is to ſay, that it hath the power to produce, retayning the ſimplicity of ONE. But that the Intellect, is an act flowing from one. And that the Soule alſo is an Act from this ſame intellect, and that both the one, and the other, are differing from him from whom they proceede. That he alſo, who begetteth is greater, and better then he which is begotten of him: and therefore, the intellect is leſſe, and worſe then the One, but that it is better, and greater then the Soule, and likewiſe the Soule then the ſpecies, which it produceth. This is the meaning of all the Platonick Theologie, againſt which wee will heere oppoſe that which is more true.

THE PROLEGOMENA
Of the
FABRICK OF THE WORLD.

The third Chapter.

The true Confeſſion of God, and of the Trinity drawne from the ſecrets of the Scripture.

THE word of God propoſeth vnto vs [a] one God, vnder three hypoſtaſes (or ſubſiſtences) diſtinct, but not devided, or ſeperated in himſelfe, every of them hath their proprieties, whereby it is diſtinguiſhed from the other. Now there is the Father, the Word, or the Sonne, and the holy-Ghoſt, which are one, not becauſe they are of one Eſſence, as Man of man, but becauſe they are of one eſſence in number; for conſidering, that they are inſeparable in himſelfe, and all the hidden eſſence of the Father, ſhineth in the word as by an eternall generation, in ſuch ſort, that the word is the ſhining character and expreſſe eſſence of the Father, and that this ſame eſſence ſhineth from the Father by the word in all the Vniverſe, the ſplendour whereof is the holy Spirit. Theſe three have one and the ſame Deitie, omnipotencie, vertue, wiſedome, goodneſſe, will, and may in no wiſe be called three. Seing their force, power, and Action, is but one in number, as the Sonne teacheth us. John the 17 ſpeaking thus of his Father. All mine are thine, and thine are mine, beſides, the Father that dwelleth in me, hee doth the workes. John the 14: 10. and John the 5.: My Father worketh hitherto, and I worke alſo. It is alſo moſt manifeſt by the ſacred Scriptures, that the Holy Ghoſt, the Father, and the Sonne, worke all things. And in the firſt Booke of Wiſedome, it is ſaid: The Spirit is ſaid to have repleniſhed the vniverſe, ſo that of all theſe three, there is but one common operation, but according to their perſonall proprietie, proceeding otherwiſe from the Father; otherwiſe from the Sonne, and otherwiſe from the Holy Ghoſt. Therefore, wee doe not ſet downe three Gods, nor three beginnings of things, as Plato doth, but one indevided, according to himſelfe, preſent in all places, of whom, by whom, and for whom all things were created, exiſting by a triple reaſon: but one and the ſame eſſence diſtinguiſhed into three ſubſiſtences, or Perſons, but which differ not in eſſence, neither are devided among themſelves, neither by leſſer conſequents, are worſer in order, as the Platoniſts make him, but all equall in Divinitie, Eternitie, Power, and efficacie, the Proprietie of whoſe eſſence is neither leſſer nor more then the other, but equallie neceſſarie to the Creation of all things. For in every worke, three things are neceſſarie in a worker, Power or beginning of the internall Act, the Conception and the Diſpoſition of the Act or internall worker, and the iſſue of the Act. Even as in fire, the beginning of the heate, is the Nature, or forme of the fire, the Act of it, is the internall heate. The Action or act proceeding is the heate which cometh out of it. And the Soule is the beginning and motive power, it is the diſpoſition, or will to moove, it is finallie the motion it ſelfe.

[a] God is that one Spirituall Eſſence, whoſe being is of himſelfe from everlaſting to everlaſting. Again, God is one eſſence moſt ſimple, pure and abſolute, and being eſſentially indeviſible is perſonally diſtinguiſhed into the Father, the Sonne and the Holy Ghoſt, and is therefore called Vnitie in Trinitie, and Trinitie in Vnitie, or Vnitrinitie, or Trin-vnitie.

But becauſe that God hath not created the world, either by chance, or through ignorance, ſearching the meanes how, or without wiſdom, but with a great deale of Prudence and wiſdome, it cannot be denied, but that from all Eternitie, hee had conceived ſome certaine determinate modell, and all the Ideas of his works, to which wee give not beginning in the word, as Plato doth, but to the [b] Parent of the word, conſidering that whatſoever the Sonne hath, hee hath it from his Father, and for this cauſe wee will place the Father firſt, as the Seminary reaſon of the world, the Sonne, the force vigetative, the H. Ghoſt the vertue Productive, & animative, the which with him proceeding from the Father, & being ſhed out by the Sonne, it paſſeth into a worke. So, the H. Ghoſt, w^ch is abounding in the Father, awakeneth this Almightie & inexhauſt fountaine of the Father, and the immeſe fecunditie of the Sonne incites him (as it were) to budde forth, and by the quickning ſpiration of his holy Spirit, the Father begetteth the world, by a meane and ſeminall reaſon, having conceived it, gives it to his Sonne, as hee who properlie expreſſeth the Father, from the Sonne already by act the world is brought forth, & yet is not brought forth, but by the meanes of the Holy Ghoſt as being the Chariot, whereby the world ſpreadeth it ſelfe, through its parts, and is animated in all things according to the proper Idea of every one of them. Now the Spirit accompanyeth the work alwayes, and in al things, to the end that that which is conceived by the impregnant activitie, and formed by the quickning motion thereof, is alſo conſerved by the ſame: It accompanies not then all things in ſuch ſort, that therefore it is divided into parts, but indiviſibly, and in the ſame manner as the Platoniſts call it, the Soule of the world to be preſent in all things, and is not ſo ſevered from them, that it becomes, either the Soule, or the forme of every one, but abydeth in himſelfe, and in all things preſent, and diverſe, and ſeparated from all, he formeth all things at once by the power of the Father, by the Act of the Sonne, every one in his Eſſence, and forme, accompliſhing by degrees, both the Eſſence, and the matter, according to the reaſon of the Modell, and afterwards appropriateth all things, according to the Law, conceived of the Father.

[b] The creation of the VVorld peculiarly belongeth to God the Father.

The firſt Chapter.

Of the wiſedome of the Creatour.

HAving purpoſed (friendly Reader) to treate of Geographie it is requiſite for mee, as the weightines, and excellencie of ſuch a worke requireth, to apply all the facultie of my underſtanding thereunto: that I may repreſent before the eyes of every one, aſwell the ſpecies, as the order of all things created: that by this meanes, I might the better conduct and lead the Reader to the contemplation of the univerſe: and the knowledg of the Fabrick of the world, for ſo is it written, O Lord how manyfold are they workes, in wiſedome thou haſt made them, the Earth is full of thy riches! Now it is wiſedom to know the cauſes, and the ends of things, which can never be better known, then by the moſt excellent ordayned frame of the world drawne out by this great, and moſt wiſe Architect, according to the cauſes expreſſed, and noted by order, For as in creating, hee gave to all things their nature: ſo they alſo immediately effected that, which was enjoyned them, and ſhall ſo continue, till the Conſummation of things. And therefore nothing is more ſure, then to ſearch out diligently his worke, as it hath been wrought by this ſame Authour, and it hath beene left vnto us in writ by his holy Spirit, by the Miniſtery of Moſes, faithfull in all his houſe. For wee cannot ſo eaſily erre, in aſſigning the cauſes of things, when as wee ſhall contemplate, the Primary, and principall Lawes of Nature, commonly knowne, and that wee deſcribe the like effects. So then nothing is more certayne, then that all things Ponderous, fall downwards, and all light things aſcend vpwards, that nothing, which hath motion in the world is infinite, & that which is the ſubtileſt, evaporateth from the groſſer, whence wee collect, that heavie things, meete all together in the Center: that the world hath a Spherical form, or Round. And the order of all its parts, and the difference of its ſubtiltie, & nobilitie. By the order of things, their cauſes, & their ends being demonſtrated, wee ſhall eaſily perceive, and ſoone convince the Errours of the Ancient Philoſophers, touching the beginning, and cauſes of things, that by this meanes, the truth may be firmelie fixed and ſetled in the minds of men, to the end they may not be ſhaken nor ſeduced by diverſitie of opinions, & ambiguous reaſons, whatſoever appearance of perſuaſion they may have. And ſo by the ſite & nature of the Cœleſtiall bodyes, marvelous things ſhall be declared, which as yet have not been well ſought into, nor wel known: ſo there are many things, yet to this day deſired in the knowledge of the Elements, which by Art, and the diligent ſtudie of the learned, might be cleared by adding to the Fabrick of the world, the obſervations and lawes of manie learned men diſperſed in diverſe Kingdoms, and ſo in fine, ſome matter of truth may be found out, touching touching the increaſe, and decreaſe of the Moone, the admirable flowing and ebbing of the Sea, and of the cauſes thereof, and ſo the ſearch of things of which concerne the Art of Navigation may be enlarged wherein it ſeemes, ſomethings of great conſequence are yet deficient. And ſo by this meanes, all Geographie might be accompliſhed, and made perfect, to the great good and commodity of Princes and of the whole world, the neceſſitie whereof is ſuch, that without the helpe thereof, Merchants cannot have any acceſſe into ſtrange & forraigne Countries, which might make them familiarly acquainted one with another: neither Princes themſelves know well the large and long extent of their Realmes and Dominions: ſome yeares ſince, I have begun this worke in the deſcription of the Neighbouring parts moſt deſired, before whom now, I ſet forth the firſt Tome of our Geographie, with the Septentrionall and Sarmatick tables: being minded, (God willing) to deſcribe by Tomes al the univerſe, according to that knowledge, which God hath given mee.

The ſecond Chapter.

Of the Fabricke of the World.

Of the beginning of the Creation, and of the matter created.

The firſt day beginneth.

A Litle before the time of Moſes, Saturn was borne, and before him other Gods of the Gentiles; who being given to ſtudie natural things, were the Inventours of diverſe things, and ſowed many hereſies, which afterwards falling into the hands of Philoſophers, great diſputers of the beginning of things, and of great varietie of opinions, among themſelves, produced diverſe ſects: Moſes therefore giving a true narration of theſe ſame beginnings, oppoſeth this moſt ancient veritie, againſt all their errours, and convinceth them, taking his beginning from the firſt matter of things, whereof they had forged many leaſings in their braine, and ending the whole Fabrick of the world, hee ſpeaketh thus in the 2 and 4. Chapters of Geneſis: Theſe are the generations of heaven, and of earth, and not thoſe, which the follie of men hath invented. Herein wee will follow the Text of Moſes conſidering it particularlie, and diligentlie, according to the gift of grace which I have received from the Lord. In the beginning (ſaith he) that is, when as yet there was nothing created, and that the Divine Majeſtie, by his Councels and determinate lawes propoſed to begin the Creation. In the firſt point (I ſay) and moment of the exiſtence of things, which yet were as nothing, but a beginning onely of things, without any forme, or condition of thing, or of exiſtence even (I ſay) in this moment of time, hee began to create: and after God created without any prepared matter, by his immenſe, and incomprehenſible power this huge maſſe, which was without forme, rude, and confuſed, out of which hee afterwards drew, all the parts and members of the world. In this Creation of matter, as alſo in all that which enſueth, three things were neceſſarie. The fruitfulnes of the Paternall power, the effectuall and pregnant power of the word, and the force fructifying, conceiving and quickning of the holy Spirit, for the matter extracted had the beginning of its exiſtence from the power of God, as from a Seminarie reaſon, by the fructifying vertue of the holy Spirit, both formed it, and brought it into being, even as the fruite in the bellie, and being at laſt hatched by the power of God, quickning, and nouriſhing the ſame, is made manifeſt. So the onely God Almightie, conceived, formed, and brought forth into the light, out of nothing in the vigour of his Triplicitie, and without the aſſumption of any ſubject, the matter of all things, which were to be created, not by the operation, firſt of the Father, afterwards of the Word, and finallie of the holy Ghoſt, but all working, and conſpiring joyntlie together inſeperablie; and unceſſantlie, among themſelves in the unitie of the divine Eſſence. Now this which is ſaid, In the beginning, ought to be ſo vnderſtood as Eſdras doth lib. 4 cap. 6. ſaying: O Lord thou haſt ſpoken from the beginning of thy Creature, ſaying, Let it be made, &c. Now in that he ſaith, From the beginning of thy Creature; he sheweth ſufficiently, that this beginning or originall, ought not to be underſtood of the Sonne of God; but of the firſt moment of the Creation, which is alſo manifeſt, aſwell by the prepoſition as by the conſtruction of the words, In the beginning and Creature, for to joyne this verbe, Thou haſt ſpoken, with that of Creature, the thing it ſelfe contradicteth it: ſeeing the Creature was not yet in being, to which God might ſpeake. Moreover, foraſmuch as Moſes (as I have ſaid) wrote deliberately againſt the Gentiles, ſetting downe a beginning to the world. This beginning can be no otherwiſe underſtood, then as we have interpreted it: for if he had ſaid, to have created in his Sonne (which is alſo true) and meaneth thereby no other thing, whence then can we gather an argument againſt the Eternity of the world, or of its matter, ſeeing the beginning it ſelfe is eternall? Moſes then ſpeaketh ſimply of a temporall beginning, and not otherwiſe.

By the Heaven and the Earth, hee underſtandeth not two diſtinct and different bodies, ſignified at this day by the names of Heaven and Earth, for then neither Heaven nor Earth had their beings, according to their proper forme, but that Heaven was made the ſecond day, and the Earth laſt appeared, the third day; the waters being ſeparated, afterward the other parts of the world, created of this primary Maſſe, were reduced into order. By the Heaven and the Earth then, he underſtandeth figuratively, this firſt Maſſe without forme; whereof the Heaven and Earth were formed. Moſes then had to doe with the Gentiles, to whom he teſtifieth, that the Heaven and Earth which wee behold; had heretofore beene created of God, as he will shew afterward, and uſeth names, and things knowne, the better to lead men to the conſideration of their beginning. For Moſes meaning was; to pull out of all human underſtandings, all Rapſodies of Philoſophers; and their falſe doctrine, touching the eternity of the world, and its matter, and by this way to ſubmit it to the glory of God, as hee ſilently ſheweth in his ſecond and fourth Chapters. But, he taketh the Heaven and the Earth figuratively, for the matter of them. Theſe Epethites following, demand it, THOHV & BOHV which he attributeth to the ſame Maſſe, created firſt of all: becauſe it was without forme, vaſt, voyd, ſolitary and vacant; and doth not adjoyne thoſe Epethites to the Heaven and Earth, but to the Earth onely, carrying the Reader by this meanes, from the contemplation of perfect bodies, to their primary matter, and hereby underſtandeth, not the Earth onely in her forme, but this indigeſted and unformed Chaos, uſing nevertheleſſe the word Earth, becauſe it better reſembleth the condition of the Earth, than of the Heaven: as alſo he leaveth at laſt this word Earth, when he continueth the deſcription of this Maſſe, and cals it THE- HOM, that is to say, an Abisse. And so by degrees constraineth the understanding of a contemplating man, yet being voyd of all determinate kinde of things, for the contemplation of the first matter of Heaven and Earth. Nevertheles, in this word Abisse, he painteth out some certaine kinde of forme, of this primary matter, to wit, that it was a liquid and fluide matter, and that bottomelesse, as that which in all things, was like and equall unto it selfe, as water to water, and clay to clay. Also in the 38. Chapter of Iohn verse 38. this first matter is called APHAR, that is clay, which God in the beginning reduced to a solide Earth. It is also called by the most ancient Grecians ὕλη, that is, clay, the first matter of all things. And againe Chaos, from χέω, because it is fusible, by which its first forme was undoubtedly made knowne to them, and to all the world, from the first Hebrew Fathers, and Moses. That Masse then first of all created of God, was clay and a fusible matter, not of diverse natures but of one simple, and indeviduall substance and forme, having in it selfe the seminarie vertue of a terrestriall, wateriſh and a cœlestiall forme, and of all things which God was to forme out of this Masse.

The third Chapter.

Of the Fabrick of the world.

To what end this Chaos was created, and of the foundation and forme thereof.

NOw after that all things were made, all men may easily understand the end, which God proposed touching the Chaos, to wit, that hee might devide it, and forme out of it, as many species of things, as he from al eternity had decreed to be necessary for the Oeconomy & government of the world, and gave and established to all things at once, their force and law, that it might abide immoveable to the end for which he ordained all things. But, forasmuch as he created all other things for mans use, and subjected the to him, til the time shal come, when as he will transport mankinde into his heavenly Mansions; as Paul teacheth us in the 8. of the Romanes. This most wise Architect, created and constituted them in such an order, that by a submissive service and a sweete harmony; they should all bee serviceable to man: which harmony chiefely consisteth herein, that the superiour causes rule over the inferiour, and that all effects, passe the chiefe causes by the meanest and lowest. Afterward also in this, that there is a mutuall inclination in all things according to the consequence of causes and effects, and as it were a certaine love, whereby inferiour things respect their Superiours, as their Benefactours: and likewise the Superiours the Inferiours, as receiving also some benefits from them. And albeit it commeth to passe in these two conditions of nature, that there is some contrariety and strife found in the meaner species of things: Nevertheles, every one of them agree well together in their order; and have their recourse to their primary cause, as to their Center, and yeeld true service, both to God their Creatour, and to man: So that all things according to their proper office, agree together among themselves; but of these things wee will speake more at large hereafter. For the present, I will advertise the Reader to observe well and diligently in the creation of things, to wit, that thou mayest know by what order of what things, and how, and by what meanes God worketh; and so thou shalt learne that which ought to be first in all, the Governement of nature; and that which ought to be the last, what the causes of works are, what the generations of all things are, and also the definition of things and their natures, their Sympathies, and Antipathies, their differences in strength, and debility, their nobility, and ignobility, what is of durance, and what is corruptible, with many others. For whatsoever may bee disputed of the nature of things dependeth on their generation, and primary Creation. He that can comprehend, let him comprehend. There are many things, that are very difficult in the searching of them out: nevertheless, man by a deepe speculation can reach high, principally, when after having invocated the holy Ghost, his maine end and search bee, to glorifie God in his works. Thou mayest here also well observe, the meaning of things naturall, and another order in the worke of nature, than that which the Philosophers have taught, which was impossible for them to conceive by their naturall reason, the beginnings of the world, in such sort, as Moses hath described them unto us: but let us put our Chariot againe into the right way. The Chaos being created, first it is to be thought upon, how God first of all did dispose thereof. Above all things it is necessary first of all to assigne it a fixed place, for wee see, that the heavyest of all bodies is the Earth, to which this Masse hath a better resemblance than to the Heaven. Now had it not beene in a fixed place. it might easily have falne into an infinitie of pieces, the weight alwayes urging the motion. But to the end hee may here marke well the beginning of things, let him well observe, that God of the most baseſt and grosseſt element, of the most ilfavouredst, and without any forme beginneth his creation by little and little, mounting up to the higheſt, to the nobleſt, and to the divineſt things. Observe likewise, he beginneth with the most sollid, and most firme bodies, that the things which ought to be prepared appertaining to the life and perfection of Creatures, which are all fraile and changeable, to the end (I say) that all these things might have a firme subject to which they might bee fastened and made firme: he assigned then a place for the Earth, and the Chaos, to wit, a point in the midst of the void, upon which it rested, and beyond which it is not permitted to moove. This is the greateſt Miracle of all nature, surpassing the capacity of man, and humane credence: were it not that the wheeling course of the starres, and the Navigations round about the world, did not manifestly witnesse the same: for who could beleeve, that so ponderous a weight could subsist hanging in the middeſt of the Heaven? and yet the truth thereof makes us beleeve it, who is he that could understand, that so huge, and so heavy a Masse, can subsist, and without any supporter settle it selfe? what man is he that can imagine that it hath a foundation there where it hath no underpropping? rightly did God then disputing with Iob, in the midst of his anguish demand of him, if he understood where he laid the foundations of the Earth, hee should declare it. Iob 38.4. Here is the inscrutable wisedome of God, and his incomparable power, therefore it is not possible for a man to give a sound reason touching this groundworke, but onely the will of God, who followeth the causes and reasons which are hidden in himselfe, and whom all things must obey. As he willed, so it was done; his will ministers him matter for the framing and forming of all things, his will, from one sole bodie, from one onely forme, fashioneth many of diverse formes; from that which is without life, and without any activity, he produceth it immediately into force, and vigetative vigour, into life, motion, sence, and intelligence, and which is more, all things which hee created, are ſo tied and agree together, by a mutuall love, whereunto all things tend, that hee cauſeth them by the ſole impreſſion of his will, to have a naturall affection, and a certaine inclination to that duty which is imprinted in them, according to their Creators will, by the harmonious conſent of the Ideas in the divine thought: ſo this Chaos, and above all, that which is the heavieſt in it, to wit, the Earth, deſireth unceſſantly the point, which is aſſigned to it in this vacuity, by an impreſſion from the will of God, and is mooved towards him, by a certaine deſire in its ponderoſity, till that it hath obtained a like reſting place on all parts, ſupporting and ſuſtaining upon it, the other parts of the world, as upon its ſhoulders. This then is the nature of the Earth, and ſo likewiſe of the Chaos, and the Sympathy, which it hath with all other creatures, which he ſubjecteth to all in the ſeate, which he hath appointed to it, which is the Center of the world, and being ſettled firme, round about the Center, reſteth, and beareth up all other things, and ſeeing it is moſt imperfect, it ſeekes helpe and bleſſing from on high, to produce that which it is enjoyned to doe. In this point then, the Chaos reſteth neceſſarily, becauſe the LORD hath appointed this for its place of repoſe, and as a bound for the motion of its weight, which law and limit, it cannot, nor will not ſurpaſſe: becauſe the Lord hath ſpoken, it muſt be ſo, and this nature, this Sympathy is given to it from the Lord, as a neceſſary ſuſtentation of all the Species and Indeviduals. For which reaſon, David ſaith, Pſal. 104.5. He hath laid the foundation of the earth upon Baſes, that it ſhould not be mooved for ever. and Pſal. 136.6. O give thankes to him that ſtretcheth out the Earth above the waters. Now becauſe this Chaos is the mother of all Creatures, not onely of the inferiour bodies, but alſo of the celeſtiall, and of all things created, as we ſhall heare anon; we ought not to doubt, but all the Elements, yea all the Heavens, up to the very higheſt, beare the nature of their mother, ſome more, ſome leſſe, and have ſome weight for to incline downewards, towards the midſt, and exerciſe their Sympathy, as well towards the Earth, as among themſelves, by a certaine cherriſhing, a gentle touching, and as it were by a feeling.

Now experience alſo teacheth this, that the weighteſt things, by nature draw more eaſily, and neareſt to the Center of the world, and the ſeate (I ſay) of ponderous things. Whence proceedeth a moſt certaine reaſon of order in the univerſe, that the things which are lighteſt, and ſubtileſt, have the ſuperiour place, and not onely that, but alſo the Spæricall figure of the Chaos, and of the whole world, take from hence their Sourſe, for ſeeing the nature of the Chaos was floating, and ſo altogether, and that all ſides of equall vertue, and facility, was borne by its weight to this reſting place, ſo that all the extremities were equally diſtant from the Center, and ſubſiſted from every part of the Center with a like weight: for if the diſtance thereof had beene unequall from the Center, more weight had laien upon the one ſide of the Center, than upon the other. Suppoſe that in this Cube the Center bee a the extremities, b c d e and that thou beholdeſt b outof d, ro the Angle d inthe midle ſide, the line d a is much longer, than the line c a or e a. The matter then which ſhould reſt upon the Center, according to a b or d a would have much more weight upon it, then that which is according to c a or e a the weight then of d a would beare it downe, and in ſhoveing it forward, it would fall topſie-turvie, upon c a and e a till it came together into a like weight, that is to ſay, of a like diſtance from the Center, the matter being liquide, and fleeting. The Chaos then muſt neceſſarily conſiſt of an equall weight under the Sphericall figure, and no figure elſe could bee ſo convenient for the world, ſince that the ſuperiour and moſt perfect bodies, ought to march about the circumference of the Earth, for the helpe of generation, by a perpetuall circumvolution. Iohn de Sacrobuſco, and ſome other Mathematitians, approove beſt of the Sphæricall figure of the Earth, by ſome apparent Accidents: but it is much more excellent, to demonſtrate every thing from the fountaine it ſelfe, and out of the cauſes (I ſay) becauſe ſollid ſcience proceedeth by this way. It is cleare then, that the point found out of theſe things alreadie prooved, ought to be called the Center of the World; becauſe of the weight thereof, and the ſetling place of al ponderous things. Now Phiſitians call it the loweſt of all, and the other the higheſt, in affirming that the motion towards the middle, is made downeward, but from the middle upward, and that rightly, becauſe that ought to be called ſupreame which is moſt perfect, and which may conferre upon others ſome more excellent nature, but the loweſt is the fartheſt from off them, as well in place, as in condition.

The firſt world yet was a moſt formeleſſe forme, Du Bartas of the Chaos.
A confus'd heape, a Chaos moſt deforme,
A Gulph of Gulphs, a body ill compact,
An ugly meddley, where all difference lackt,
Where th' Elements lay jumbled all together;
Where hot and colde, were jarring each with other;
The Earth in Heaven, the Heaven in Earth was plac'd
Earth, Aire and Fire, were with the waters mixt,
Water, Earth, Aire, within the fire were fixt,
Fire, Water, Earth, did in the Aire abide,
Aire, Fire and Water in the Earth did hide.
For yet th' Immortall mighty Thunder-darter,
The Lord high-Marſhall unto each his quarter
Had not aſſigned, the celeſtiall Arkes
Were not yet ſpangled with their fiery ſparkes.
All, all was void of beauty, rule and life,
All without faſhion, ſoule and motion quite.
But this dull heape of indigeſted ſtuffe
Had doubtleſſe never come to ſhape or proofe,
Had not th' Almighty with his quickning breath
Blowne life and Sp'rit into this lump of death.

The fourth Chapter.

Of the Fabricke of the World.

Of the nature, and forme of the Chaos, or primary matter.

MOſes ſheweth moſt clearely, that the light which was created out of the Chaos in the beginning, was the principle of al things made by God, producing out of the ſame, all the works of the ſixe dayes: now his firſt propoſition argueth evidently, that there was nothing created by God, before this matter, otherwiſe hee would not have conſtituted therein the beginning of the Creation. Seeing then, that all things are made after this matter, and out of it, to ſearch as is requiſite, the originall of nature, and to conſtitute the beginnings, according to the truth of naturall Philoſophy. It is neceſſary above all things to conſider moſt diligently, what this primary matter was. The Heathen Philoſophers troubled themſelves much in the conſideration of this matter, they durſt not deny, but that it was, and yet would in no wiſe grant it to be Effence, they ſaid it was neither quantity nor quality, and that it had neither of them in it, and ſo made it naked of all quality and forme, when they teſtified it to be as a mere Privation. And ſome of them proceeded ſo farre, in their impudency and temerity, as to ſay, that God laboured to ſubdue this matter, and to make it ſubject to formes. What can bee ſaid more fooliſhly, or ſpoken more villanouſly, againſt the Omnipotency of God? to wit, as if he, who was able to make, and to induce formes elſewhere (much more noble than the matter it ſelfe, as they would have it) could not alſo create a matter, which hee himſelfe might ſubject to all the worke? But ſuch is the obſcurity and blindeneſſe of humane underſtanding, that without the guidance of the word of God, it cannot, as it ought, comprehend and know any thing certainly, of that which is ſo farre from ſence, and which hath its originall Divine: Likewiſe this is a very great folly, to goe about to meaſure, and ſearch out of their ſhallow braines, the moſt deepe myſteries of nature, her primary originall (I ſay) and the extreame Abiſſe of the Councels and works of God. Nature her ſelfe can teach us, that all things were created of a matter, but who dare bee ſo bolde, as to obtrude for Oracles the manner and conditions of that matter, which are no where ſhowne, either by Gods word, or any footeſteep of nature, yea which are contrary to the manifeſt word of God? They ſpoile the firſt matter of all forme, and of all condition and kind of being, in ſuch ſorte, that it cannot be ſaid, what way it can ſubſiſt in it ſelfe. But Moſes calleth it in Expreſſe words Earth, Water and the Deepe, before that the concreate forme, or any new ſpecies was wrought upon it. And in Eccleſiaſtes 3.20. it is called Aphar, that is, clay, whence it appeareth, that the ſame had from the beginning ſome kinde or forme of Earth and Water, and conſequently greatneſſe and weight. But ſome one may object, that Philoſophers to diſtinguiſh betweene things, conſidered the matter by it ſelfe, and likewiſe the forme by it ſelfe, to teach more evidently the cauſes of things depending on qualities, and formes, not on the matter, as alſo the generation or production of the kinds, which is wrought by the acceſſe of the forme to the matter, which is well ſaid and wee alſo our ſelves affirme the qualities, and formes to be active, and Begetters of ſpecies, but not the matter voyd of them. But herein they erre grevouſlie in two things, firſt of all in this, that aſcending from the laſt, and moſt perfect forme vnto the firſt of all, which can be imagined, they ſeperate them all equally from the matter, & hold them as acceſſoirs, & induced from elſwhere, ſo that at length they leave the matter naked, whereas according to the true production of ſpecies, deſcribed by Moſes, it is not lawfull to aſcend above the deformition of the Chaos ſignified by Moſes, for this having bin the firſt beginning of things, in this all things are finallie reſolved, according to Eccleſiaſtes. chap. 3 whether could they amount higher paring that, ſeeing they cannot proove it to be compounded? Secondlie, they faile yet more grievouſlie in this, when as they make all formes ſo eſtranged from the matter, that they deny it to have in it any ſeminarie vertue, or ſmall roote, but will have it to take it's primarye beginning elſe where from without the matter, which we impugne, ſeeing it is manifeſt out of the generation of the world, and divine teſtimonies, that the primary matter hath had its owne forme, quality and quantity, and that out of the forme thereof, the formes of other things did proceede. Moreover, it is moſt abſurd, yea contrary to the nature of God, to create ſomething without forme, and without all vertue and quality, as well by reaſon of his purpoſe, as by reaſon of his Majeſty and Omnipotency; of his purpoſe, becauſe ſeing he hath appointed all things for the ſervice of man, to what purpoſe ſhould an idle mother ſerve, which neither can do any thing of her ſelfe, nor is able to bend the qualities, and vertues received, but rather ſlackens them, for if thou wilt ſay, ſhe conferreth ſomething to the qualities received, thou affirmeſt at once things contradictory. The matter not to bee neither quantity nor quality, nor yet to comprehend either as her owne in her bowels, and yet nevertheleſſe, to be endowed with ſome vertue, as ſhee who worketh ſomething.

Now in reſpect of his omnipotencie, and Majeſtie it doth in no wiſe beſeeme God, to create a matter wholly voyd of forme, for ſeeing that hee is a forme forming all formes, a pure light, a pure vertue and efficacie, a pure life, and a breathing goodneſſe, how can hee produce any thing voyd, and dead, who hath directed his maine ſcope unto life? Hee who conceived to create man after his owne Image, how ſhould hee begin a ſluggiſh and dead foundation, and forme man of that then of which nothing can be more unlike, yea, more contrarie to, & eſtranged from God? Hee who maketh the beginning of ſuch an excellent, and incomparable worke to be ſo vild injureth the Almightie, and doth detract from his Majeſtie and omnipotencie. Empedocles and Anaxagoras ſeeme to have had a better and a righter opinion of the primarie matter, whom Plotinus reproveth in his booke, de materia chap. 7. For Empedocles did not ſo endleſly pare from the matter, nor denude it of all qualitie, but when he had learned by experience, that all bodies are reſolved into the Elements, whereof they were compoſed, and did not find any farther reſolution, hee ceaſeth to ſearch out any higher the beginning of the matter, as being ignorant of the firſt matter, whereof the Elements were produced. Now whereas Plotin objecteth againſt him, the corruption of the Elements, it hath no place; becauſe the Elements are not corrupted, but only the mixtures, by whoſe putrefaction, and reſolution the Elements are repurged & reſtored to their integretie. But Anaxagoras comming neereſt to the nature of the Chaos affirmed a certaine watteriſh mixture to be the primarie matter, erring indeed in the mixture, but perhaps becauſe the right name did not occurre he would deſcribe it by a ſimilitude the neereſt to the thing, being taught by a moſt ancient tradition, that the firſt matter of all was APHAR and ὕλη, hee added that this ſame matter, had not onely a paſſive fitneſſe to all things, as others would have it, that it might receive formes induced from elſewhere, but that it actually (ſupply not expreſly, but potentially) conteyned in it ſelfe, or in its owne eſſence all formes, and all ſpecies, wherein ſurely he erreth not farre from the truth, as it ſhall appeare in the progreſſe, but if hee would have the ſpecies to be formed from the matter, as Plotin ſeemeth to ſay, certainly therein hee erred: for the moſt imperfect cannot produce the moſt perfect, but it ſelfe hath need of one to perfect it. Now for to attayne tayne to the true doctrine of the primarye matter, omitting the dreames of the Pagans (I ſay,) breiflly, what I thinke ought firſt to be thought of it, and in the purſuit thereof will proove it out of the word of God, and the conſent of perceptible nature with it: ſuch then is the ſtate of this matter.

The omnipotent God Lord of nature, is able only to create whatſoever hee willeth, whereof John the Baptiſt gives teſtimonie in the 3. Chapter of Mathews Goſpell, and in the 3. likewiſe of Luke, That God is able of thoſe ſtones, to raiſe vp Children vnto Abraham, verſ. 9. And who without any ſubjected matter to worke vpon, was able out of nothing to create this viſible world, much more could hee then alſo in a moment, make out of all, all whatſoever hee would. Nevertheles hee himſelfe, hath followed in creating, a manner, and rule, which hee gave to nature as wee ſhall ſee anon. Now nature being once ordayned, and conſtituted by God, doth not all what ſhee willeth, out of all that ſhee willeth, but ſhee engendreth it out of the matter, which is the neereſt to that, which nature Propoſeth, for ſuch is his infinite providence. So ſhee engendreth, not out of a ſtone corne, but of an earthy and wateriſh moiſture, neither doth ſhee produce fire out of water, but out of oyle, and yet more out of brimſtone, A qualitie then, accommodated to things, which are engendred, is required in the matter, and wee ſee by this vniverſall law of nature once conſtituted by God, that nothing is begot out of nothing, nor out of a matter affected to the contrary, or improper to generation.

All operation then of nature, in the matter affected to the contrary and improper, is violent, leſſe nevertheles in the improper, than in the affected to the contrary. Now that, which ſuffreth force, the operatour being taken away, it returneth to it naturall courſe, unleſſe it be vanquiſhed by an act of longer durance, and by little and little is drawne into the nature of the Operator. All Generation then in the matter is violent, if wee ſay, that it was without all qualitie, and naturall affection, whereby it may be enclined to engender. Now the Generation, and continuation of the ſpecies, their multiplication, and the agreement, and ſympathy of things among themſelves, is neceſſarie as it is ſaid, in the 5 Chap. and as a man may ſee manifeſtlie, throughout in the Oeconomy of the world: It was requiſite then that the matter out of which ſomething was to be engendred, ſhould firſt have ſome nature, and condition proper to it ſelfe, which might be meete to the ſpecies intended, which ought to be engendred out of it.

This ſame nature if in ſome ſort, it had not had a roote in the primarie matter, out of the creation, how could it be inclyned to that dutie, whereunto God had appointed all things, to wit, to ſerve for the uſe of man? what ſympathie could there ever be of things among themſelves? which is ſo neceſſarie to be known and obſerved by us, that the holy Ghoſt, which ſuſtayneth, and directeth all things created to this uſe (the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaking in the 8. Chap. to the Romains deſcribeth it amply) when hee ſheweth us, the incomparable greateneſſe of the glorie, which ſhal be manifeſted to us by the ſervice of theſe creatures, ſaying: The earneſt expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifeſtation of the Sonnes of God in glorie, that is, it doth the dutie, which God hath impoſed upon it cheerfullie, ſuſtayning carefullie mankinde in this life, with a deſire that they might be ſaved, and bee ledd to God their Creatour. And ſo this ſervice of the Creature ſaith hee is done to many in vaine, and unprofitable, and nevertheleſſe is not ſubject to this vanitie of its owne accord, that is, it is not all one, whether it is ſerviceable to the good, or to the badd, but as much as it is able, doth the office, which is enjoyned to it, to the glorie of God and the Salvation of man. Nevertheleſſe, God hath ſubjected it to this vanitie, that it might ſerve alſo to the wicked, though in vaine yet not ſimplye, but by reaſon of him, who hath ſubjected the ſame in hope, if peradventure they might in groping, taſte the benignity and benevolence of God, and be converted. And to ſhew, that it ſerveth to the wicked unwillingly, adding, that it ſhall be delivered from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the Children of God, after which the whole Creation groaneth, to wit, till Chriſt our Lord, and nature having finiſhed the laſt propagation of mankinde, ſhall bring his faithfull ones into the glory of God his Father: thou ſeeſt here moſt manifeſtly, how great the Sympathie of all things is betweene them and man, which were impoſſible to be done out of a matter without all forme, or void of any quality or affection. But thou wilt ſay out of the Philoſophy of the Pagans, that God hath ſince given a forme unto the matter created, out of which there after generation and propagation is made. And to what purpoſe I pray you, hath he made in the ſecond place, and by a ſecond operation, that which he might have done at the firſt, and by the firſt Creation? might hee not aſwell from the beginning, have given the matter properlie qualified, in it's owne nature, as afterward to have given the qualitie, and that by force? Againe, can hee which is all forme, vertue, a moſt perfect, a moſt mightie, and a moſt good act, the beginning it ſelfe, and the fountaine of good, procreate ſomething altogether without forme, and moſt alienated from all manner of affection and action? Now the Lord would create man his chiefe worke, after his owne image, for otherwiſe how could he enjoy the glorie of God in diſſimilitude? Things that are unlike, delight not in things unlike, but abhorre them, it is then requiſite for man to have a great ſimilitude with God, as hee which ought to participate greatlie of his glorie. But the Holy Scripture witneſſeth, that the vniverſall glorie of God ſhalbe manifeſted to his Saints, and that wee ſhalbe like vnto him, becauſe wee ſhall ſee him as hee is, the greateſt ſimilitude then, betweene man and God, ſhalbe in the life to come, the beginnings of which excellencie, he hath received in the Creation, as Moſes teſtifieth in Geneſis, as he who from the beginning of his Creation, ſhould converſe with God, and ſerve him in this world in all obedience, vntill hee were accrued into the ſimilitude, which God concreated with him, and ſhould receive his higheſt perfection in the heavens.

Seing therefore, that man is created after the image of God, and that alſo the other Creatures, for having a true Sympathie with man, to whom they ought to be ſerviceable; have likewiſe obtayned ſome ſimilitude with God in the creation it ſelfe, eſpecially, the primarie matter, to wit, the Chaos out of which all things were created; yea man himſelfe ought to have ſome ſimilitude with his Creatour, for it had beene abſurd, (as I have ſaid before) that God the fountayne of all goodnes ſhould have created ſome ill thing and that hee, who is all life, and quickning vertue, ſhould create a ſtupid bodie, voyd of all qualitie or affection, which ſhould be immediatelie reformed, to the end it might agree, aſwell with the ſpecies, which were to be created, as with man. For ſeing the worke of every Artiſan, ſheweth the Induſtrie, wiſedome, and the ſtudie of his Spirit, how much more then the workes of God, repreſent as well his Intention, as in ſome ſorte his Image? He then, who from the beginning hath thus formed and and ordained nature, that ſhe might bring forth a generation, no otherwiſe then from a matter propperly quallified, hath alſo created and produced the firſt ſpecies of things, out of a Chaos convenient thereunto.

We conclude then, that the Chaos was the firſt of all things, having in its Eſſence, the ſeed of all qualities and formes, a nature (I ſay) ſimple, and not compounded, deducible and diſtributive into ſo many qualities and ſpecies, as there is now in univerſall nature. Alſo that it was like to its Creatour in this, that as God the Father is the beginning of all the Deity, having all things covertly in himſelfe, which are expreſſed actually in the * Word, his Sonne, and ſhed abroad by the holy Ghoſt, and communicated with the Creatures, that ſo alſo the Chaos comprehended all the formes of things, Subſtances and Qualities, ſecretly within her bowels, and intrinſick Eſſence, according to the Seminary and Radicall power, which being by the Creatour extracted out of it, perfected and diſtributed into ſeverall ſpecies, ſerved man by an Act of egredient. And as in God the Father, the multitude of Ideas, not as many, but compriſed under one ſimple unity, is brought forth from God by the Creation into every ſpecies, ſo the Chaos being ~~a nature~~ ſimple, and not compoſed, is produced and made perfect by the Creation in ſo many ſubſtances and kindes, as is requiſite for the body and Oeconomy of the world. And like as the ſubſtance of God is not compounded, neither conſiſting of matter or forme, but an indiviſible Eſſence, yea in thought, ſo alſo the ſubſtance of the primary matter, or Chaos, is not cõpounded nor cõſiſting of matter and forme, introduced from elſewhere, or a new created in it, but in a ſimple Eſſence, created from one act by a ſimple being God and a vitall ſubſtance and life, or a ſubſtantiall forme, or eſſentiall ſubſtance, or in any ſuch ſorte, that the unity of the matter and forme may be expreſſed exiſting: in this nevertheles, before other differences the moſt diſtant from God, that it is corporeall, and groſſe, actually finite in vertue and power, being onely a ſmall beginning of theſe things, and deviſible into different ſubſtances, yea even to contraries, not immediately, but by the degrees of Generation, which are betwixt both. The ancient Philoſophers have not given a ſound deviſion of the Primary matter, in having made two beginnings of things diverſe, and not communicating, to wit, the matter, and forme. In things which are engendred, ſuch a diſtinction brings with it ſome light to the underſtanding, when as we contemplate the matter out of which ſome thing is made, and the forme which it ought to be, introduced: and which as yet doth not exiſt in the ſeverall parts, according as the cauſe of the thing requireth, but when as we make this in the firſt matter, & out of the cauſe of generation, we conceive a matter wholly without forme and void, and we wander a ſtray from the true naturall beginnings.

The Chaos is then in things which are created, out of God, Eſſence of Eſſences, Formé of Formes, Subſtance of Subſtances, not by act, but by power, and that not forraigne, but interiour, making the matter and the beginning of the forme, as a mother to all things. But firſt of all, God is the worker, then the vertue ſpecificall: ordained by God, in forming them, perfecting and preparing for the birth. We ſhall ſee then this opinion of the primary matter, and of the Chaos to bee confirmed by the Creation of the World, and the certaine experience of things.

* The Father worketh of himſelfe by the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt. the word his Son from the Father by the holy and the Ghoſt from the Father and the Sonne.

The fifth Chapter.

Touching the falſe and true underſtanding of the Ideas.

BUt, foraſmuch as through the ſiniſter underſtanding and conſideration of Ideas and formes, many abſurd things are taught by the Philoſophers, queſtions, and intricate diſputes are mooved, and the true order of the operations in nature is obſcured, it behooveth us to ſearch out more deepely the condition and nature of the Ideas and formes; that not relying upon a falſe foundation, we doe not deceive our ſelves, and in ſtead of true Science, conſtitute ſo many vaine opinions as fooliſh dotages. When the Philoſophers would that the formes ſhould bee brought elſewhere into the matter, they aſſigne unto them another beginning, and ſeparated from the matter, to wit, a certaine eternall Idea, out of which they flow, and are joyned to the matter, ſo that every Eſſence is not ſimple, but one compounded of diverſe things, and ſeparated, and incommunicable of matter and forme, and therefore the matter and forme had not any ſimilitude in the Eſſence, nor any Sympathie betweene them, before the compoſition. It is well knowne and uſuall, that every good workemam, before he begin his worke, conceiveth a certaine Idea thereof, by the contemplation of which, he beginneth and accompliſheth it, but there are many things often times, which preſent themſelves over and beſide the modell conceived, he addeth or taketh from it, and if diverſe men ſhall undertake the ſame worke in ſpecies, there will be as many differences, as Workemaſters. There is not then any Idea out of man, which conceiveth and frameth ſuch a modell in his underſtanding, but he himſelfe by the cleareneſſe of his underſtanding, and according to the knowledge which he hath of things, which are acquired, be it true, be it falſe, and according to the judgement of his reaſon, he imagineth and frameth the accedent by experience, or elſewhere he amendeth it, after upon better knowledge. So God as by himſelfe, being the moſt wiſe, moſt mighty, and the moſt skilfvll Architect of the world, hath created all things no otherwiſe, than by a moſt good and exquiſite reaſon. It is neceſſary therefore, that hee of himſelfe from all eternity had conceived an Idea moſt requiſite for his worke; for it is not the propertie of a wiſe man, to make any thing without good order, manner and reaſon for the things which are ſoe made, are either made caſually or raſhly, and cannot promiſe a certaine good iſſue. But hee tooke not this Idea, for the framing of his worke, out of a fore-knowledge of things with a foreknowne ratiocination, and meditation as from a certayne modell after the manner of men, ſeing hee of himſelfe, and without any motion of underſtanding, alteration, in ſpection, and auſcultaion, is all wiſe, Almightie, having in the vertue of his Eſſence repreſented before his view, and pondered all the beginnings of things, the meanes, ends, manners, conditions, number, proportions, habitudes, and all whatſoever ſhould appeare viſible a workmaſter (I ſay) ſo perfect from the moſt internall center, and fountaine of his Eſſence, hath this increated Idea, ſhining forth in all things, and poſſeſſed it eternally: and this Idea is one, and ſimple, as the Eſſence of God is one and ſimple, but proceeding by fruitefulnes, as from

from the Generation and propagation into branches of all formes and ſpecies, according to the intention and ſcope of the Creation in the alone ſpecies of man.

Therefore whenſoever thou art deſirous, to contemplate inwardly, the creation of things, and art willing to ſearch out well their affinitie and Sympathy, it is requiſite for thee to contemplate the ſame, with all the ſubtiltie, and force of thy underſtanding, by what order every thing is created, and whereof, and in what manner the one ſpecies excedeth the other, for from thence the Creatures are known, and the order of ſubjection of every one of them, as farre, as may concerne man. It is now in no wiſe lawfull, to place this Idea out of the ſubſtance and eſſence of God, for it is moſt properlie proper to God himſelfe and communicable to no other but to God onely as his eſſence agreeth to no other, then to God: nevertheleſſe wee deſire with ſome, to make fooles of our ſelves, who have dreamed that all things have beene engendred out of the Eſſence of God, and are as parcels of him, and for this cauſe that the Soules of all returne againe unto him. Seing therefore that this Idea, is inſeparable from the Eſſence of God, it is not lawfull for any man to thinke of any primarie beginning of formes and ſpecies but in God. Now if any one ſhould place the Ideas out of God they ſhould not be the primarie but ſecondarie Ideas, created of the primarie, which is in God, the which when they are placed by the Philoſophers out of things, and are ſaid to enter into the matter, and to conſtitute things themſelves, and the ſpecies compounded, what is that elſe, but to adde a helpe to the Creatour which formeth all things, ſufficient for all things? as if hee himſelfe had not beene able to doe that immediately, or at leaſt, that hee vouchſafed not, who is enflamed with ſuch a great love to his worke, & that he delighteth to be with the Sonnes of men. And if wee grant him, who is all vertue, and a pregnant efficacie, and Almightie for moſt noble effects, to have created a matter without forme, idle and wholly imperfect, and of no qualitie of it ſelfe, why ſhould wee ſay it is created of formes, more worthy and noble than the matter, by ſtrange & miniſtred Ideas? were not that to diminiſh the glory of the Creatour? or wilt thou that the matter be created by ſecondarie Ideas? what Idea I pray thee can be fayned from that which is nothing, & bereft of all Eſſence? For they (forſooth) would have the Ideas to be effectives of formes. Now if any man ſhould affirme theſe Ideas to be made, not onely in reſpect of the firſt Creator of things, but for the perpetuall propagation of the Species, what difference then would there bee, betweene the propagation, and the primary conſtitution of the thing? The Species, ſhould it not be wholly compounded, the forme being induced into the matter? So then, God hath created the firſt man, and the ſame worke of the Creation is conſequentlie renued in every man; how is it ſaid, that the Lord reſted the ſeventh day, and afterwards to create? Gen. 2. verſ. 2. As thoſe who have beene caſt out of the aſſemblie of the faithfull, or Heretiques, who did affirme that the Angels were worldlie Creatures noe leſſe ſhould ſuch be, who affirme the Ideas are placed out of God, to conſtitute the ſpecies of things. For ſuch Ideas are alſo Creatures, no leſſe then the Angels: to this may be added, that which I have ſaid before, that if thou doeſt conſtitute the Species, and the matter ſeparated, and in communicating (as it is neceſſarie, when thou makeſt the matter to be wholly without forme, and that the ſame joyned with the forme, yeeldeth a compound not ſimple) it cannot be, that there is any inclination of the matter to the forme, or appetite, or any Sympathie whatſoever, riſing out of the different ſimilitude. Many frivelous queſtions, and altogether unprofitable, are ſprung out of theſe Ideas ſeparated from God, and from things, the which in what māner ſoever thou reſolveſt them, yet ſhalt thou never attaine unto the truth of the Creation, and Generation, & therefore canſt not affirme any thing certaine, neither of the beginning of Nature, nor of the end and Sympathie.

We ſay then, that there is an univerſall Idea, reſiding eſſentially in God, which is the totall reaſon of all the things, which God was willing to create, diſpoſed and deſtinated, according to his infinite wiſedome and will, and that this Idea is expreſſed by an eternall act, eſpecially in the framing of the world, and that the ſpecies are multiplyed and encreaſed, into many indeviduals, without any Idea, cooperating out of God; in this act of every ſpecies, there is imprinted the character of the Idea of this ſpecies, exiſting in God, out of which impreſſion, it is afterward inclined to the propagation of its ſpecies. Wee call alſo this Idea, or reaſon of all things, to wit, an internall act from the eſſence of God, to have proportion to the ſame eſſence: therefore the creatures which are images of the ſame Idea, are ſaid to have ſome Analogie to the Subſtance and Eſſence of God. From whence the moſt high myſteries of the Trinity, ſhine a looſe off, as through a grate, and the Catholike Doctrines may be illuſtrated excellently, againſt all the hereſies of the Trinity, and may in ſome manner bee made more cleare, theſe obſcurities being diſſipated: and if any one having invocated the holy Ghoſt, ſearch with all his might, and a pious zeale, the Analogie of the creature to the Creatour. But ſeeing the particular reaſons are excited in this univerſall Idea, by the ligament of a mutuall dependency, and perpetuall harmony, in a moſt conſonant melody: it is neceſſary alſo that the reaſons creaturall aſſemble together after ſome manner in a Symphonie by a ſimilitude, but not proportion; becauſe there is no proportion betweene that which is finite, and that which is infinite. Out of this Symphony alſo of the Creatures, or the conſent and concordance of nature and office, followeth a Sympathie, the which is neceſſary; becauſe of the end of the Creation. The things which hitherto have beene ſpoken of, partly in generall, and alſo partly demonſtrated touching the matter and forme of the Species, Miniſtry, and Sympathie, ſhine forth more clearely, and ſhall bee prooved in the hiſtory of the Creation. Let us now then come to ſpeake of them.

The ſixth Chapter.

Of the Fabrick of the world.

Of the time of the beginning of the Creation.

The firſt day.

WHen as the Lord began to create the Starres, and their motion was not yet in being, and conſequently, as yet there was no time, according to the Philoſophers definition; nevertheles this darkſome ſpace, which proceeded or went before the light, is accounted for a part of this day, and is called Night, and Evening: Gen. 1. 5. and conſtituted with the light following, unto its ſetting, a naturall day, equall to them that followed. This eternall ſpace then is meaſured by God, by the firſt, and laſt, according to the greatneſſe of the parts, and there is no difference, with the ſtudie of his Spirit, how much more then the workes of God, repreſent as well his Intention, as in ſome ſorte his Image? He then, who from the beginning hath thus formed and and ordained nature, that ſhe might bring forth a generation, no otherwiſe then from a matter propperly quallified, hath alſo created and produced the firſt ſpecies of things, out of a Chaos convenient thereunto.

We conclude then, that the Chaos was the firſt of all things, having in its Eſſence, the ſeed of all qualities and formes, a nature (I ſay) ſimple, and not compounded, deducible and diſtributive into ſo many qualities and ſpecies, as there is now in univerſall nature. Alſo that it was like to its Creatour in this, that as God the Father is the beginning of all the Deity, having all things covertly in himſelfe, which are expreſſed actually in the * Word, his Sonne, and ſhed abroad by the holy Ghoſt, and communicated with the Creatures, that ſo alſo the Chaos comprehended all the formes of things, Subſtances and Qualities, ſecretly within her bowels, and intrinſick Eſſence, according to the Seminary and Radicall power, which being by the Creatour extracted out of it, perfected and diſtributed into ſeverall ſpecies, ſerved man by an Act of egredient. And as in God the Father, the multitude of Ideas, not as many, but compriſed under one ſimple unity, is brought forth from God by the Creation into every ſpecies, ſo the Chaos being a nature ſimple, and not compoſed, is produced and made perfect by the Creation in ſo many ſubſtances and kindes, as is requiſite for the body and Oeconomy of the world. And like as the ſubſtance of God is not compounded, neither conſiſting of matter or forme, but an indiviſible Eſſence, yea in thought, ſo alſo the ſubſtance of the primary matter, or Chaos, is not cõpounded nor cõſiſting of matter and forme, introduced from elſewhere, or a new created in it, but in a ſimple Eſſence, created from one act by a ſimple being God and a vitall ſubſtance and life, or a ſubſtantiall forme, or eſſentiall ſubſtance, or in any ſuch ſorte, that the unity of the matter and forme may be expreſſed exiſting: in this nevertheles, before other differences the moſt diſtant from God, that it is corporeall, and groſſe, actually finite in vertue and power, being onely a ſmall beginning of theſe things, and deviſible into different ſubſtances, yea even to contraries, not immediately, but by the degrees of Generation, which are betwixt both. The ancient Philoſophers have not given a ſound deviſion of the Primary matter, in having made two beginnings of things diverſe, and not communicating, to wit, the matter, and forme. In things which are engendred, ſuch a diſtinction brings with it ſome light to the underſtanding, when as we contemplate the matter out of which ſome thing is made, and the forme which it ought to be, introduced: and which as yet doth not exiſt in the ſeverall parts, according as the cauſe of the thing requireth, but when as we make this in the firſt matter, & out of the cauſe of generation, we conceive a matter wholly without forme and void, and we wander a ſtray from the true naturall beginnings.

The Chaos is then in things which are created, out of God, Eſſence of Eſſences, Forme of Formes, Subſtance of Subſtances, not by act, but by power, and that not forraigne, but interiour, making the matter and the beginning of the forme, as a mother to all things. But firſt of all, God is the worker, then the vertue ſpecificall: ordained by God, in forming them, perfecting and preparing for the birth. We ſhall ſee then this opinion of the primary matter, and of the Chaos to bee confirmed by the Creation of the World, and the certaine experience of things.

* The Father vttereth of himſelfe by the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt. the word of his Son from the Father by the holy and the Ghoſt from the Father and the Sonne.

The fifth Chapter.

Touching the falſe and true underſtanding of the Ideas.

BUt, foraſmuch as through the ſiniſter underſtanding and conſideration of Ideas and formes, many abſurd things are taught by the Philoſophers, queſtions, and intricate diſputes are mooved, and the true order of the operations in nature is obſcured, it behooveth us to ſearch out more deepely the condition and nature of the Ideas and formes, that not relying upon a falſe foundation, we doe not deceive our ſelves, and in ſtead of true Science, conſtitute ſo many vaine opinions as fooliſh dotages. When the Philoſophers would that the formes ſhould bee brought elſewhere into the matter, they aſſigne unto them another beginning, and ſeparated from the matter, to wit, a certaine eternall Idea, out of which they flow, and are joyned to the matter, ſo that every Eſſence is not ſimple, but one compoupded of diverſe things, and ſeparated, and incommunicable of matter and forme, and therefore the matter and forme had not any ſimilitude in the Eſſence, nor any Sympathie betweene them, before the compoſition. It is well knowne and uſuall, that every good workeman, before he begin his worke, conceiveth a certaine Idea thereof, by the contemplation of which, he beginneth and accompliſheth it, but there are many things often times, which preſent themſelves over and beſide the modell conceived, he addeth or taketh from it, and if diverſe men ſhall undertake the ſame worke in ſpecies, there will be as many differences, as Workemaſters. There is not then any Idea out of man, which conceiveth and frameth ſuch a modell in his underſtanding, but he himſelfe by the cleareneſſe of his underſtanding, and according to the knowledge which he hath of things, which are acquired, be it true, be it falſe, and according to the judgement of his reaſon, he imagineth and frameth the accedent by experience, or elſewhere he amendeth it, after upon better knowledge. So God as by himſelfe, being the moſt wiſe, moſt mighty, and the moſt skilfull Architect of the world, hath created all things no otherwiſe, then by a moſt good and exquiſite reaſon. It is neceſſary therefore, that hee of himſelfe from all eternity had conceived an Idea moſt requiſite for his worke; for it is not the propertie of a wiſe man, to make any thing without good order, manner and reaſon for the things which are ſoe made, are either made caſually or raſhly, and cannot promiſe a certaine good iſſue. But hee tooke not this Idea, for the framing of his worke, out of a fore-knowledge of things with a foreknowne ratiocination, and meditation as from a certayne modell after the manner of men, ſeing hee of himſelfe, and without any motion of underſtanding, alteration, inſpection, and auſcultaion, is all wiſe, Almightie, having in the vertue of his Eſſence repreſented before his view, and pondered all the beginnings of things, the meanes, ends, manners, conditions, number, proportions, habitudes, and all whatſoever ſhould appeare viſible a workmaſter (I ſay) ſo perfect from the moſt internall center, and fountaine of his Eſſence, hath this increated Idea, ſhining forth in all things, and poſſeſſed it eternally: and this Idea is one, and ſimple, as the Eſſence of God is one and ſimple, but proceeding by fruitefulnes, as from the Generation and propagation into branches of all formes and ſpecies, according to the intention and ſcope of the Creation in the alone ſpecies of man.

Therefore whenſoever thou art deſirous, to contemplate inwardly, the creation of things, and art willing to ſearch out well their affinitie and Sympathy, it is requiſite for thee to contemplate the ſame, with all the ſubtiltie, and force of thy underſtanding, by what order every thing is created, and whereof, and in what manner the one ſpecies excedeth the other, for from thence the Creatures are known, and the order of ſubjection of every one of them, as farre, as may concerne man. It is now in no wiſe lawfull, to place this Idea out of the ſubſtance and eſſence of God, for it is moſt properlie proper to God himſelfe and communicable to no other but to God onely as his eſſence agreeth to no other, then to God: nevertheleſſe wee deſire with ſome, to make fooles of our ſelves, who have dreamed that all things have beene engendred out of the Eſſence of God, and are as parcels of him, and for this cauſe that the Soules of all returne againe unto him. Seing therefore that this Idea, is inſeparable from the Eſſence of God, it is not lawfull for any man to thinke of any primarie beginning of formes and ſpecies but in God. Now if any one ſhould place the Ideas out of God they ſhould not be the primarie but ſecondarie Ideas, created of the primarie, which is in God, the which when they are placed by the Philoſophers out of things, and are ſaid to enter into the matter, and to conſtitute things themſelves, and the ſpecies compounded, what is that elſe, but to adde a helpe to the Creatour which formeth all things, ſufficient for all things? as if hee himſelfe had not beene able to doe that immediately, or at leaſt, that hee vouchſafed not, who is enflamed with ſuch a great love to his worke, & that he delighteth to be with the Sonnes of men. And if wee grant him, who is all vertue, and a pregnant efficacie, and Almightie for moſt noble effects, to have created a matter without forme, idle and wholly imperfect, and of no qualitie of it ſelfe, why ſhould wee ſay it is created of formes, more worthy and noble than the matter, by ſtrange & miniſtred Ideas? were not that to diminiſh the glory of the Creatour? or wilt thou that the matter be created by ſecondarie Ideas? what Idea I pray thee can be fayned from that which is nothing, & bereft of all Eſſence? For they (forſooth) would have the Ideas to be effectives of formes. Now if any man ſhould affirme theſe Ideas to be made, not onely in reſpect of the firſt Creator of things, but for the perpetuall propagation of the Species, what difference then would there bee, betweene the propagation, and the primary conſtitution of the thing? The Species, ſhould it not be wholly compounded, the forme being induced into the matter? So then, God hath created the firſt man, and the ſame worke of the Creation is conſequentlie renued in every man; how is it ſaid, that the Lord reſted the ſeventh day, and afterwards to create? Gen. 2. verſ. 2. As thoſe who have beene caſt out of the aſſemblie of the faithfull, or Heretiques, who did affirme that the Angels were worldlie Creatures noe leſſe ſhould ſuch be, who affirme the Ideas are placed out of God, to conſtitute the ſpecies of things. For ſuch Ideas are alſo Creatures, no leſſe then the Angels: to this may be added, that which I have ſaid before, that if thou doeſt conſtitute the Species, and the matter ſeparated, and in communicating (as it is neceſſarie, when thou makeſt the matter to be wholly without forme, and that the ſame joyned with the forme, yeeldeth a compound not ſimple) it cannot be, that there is any inclination of the matter to the forme, or appetite, or any Sympathie whatſoever, riſing out of the different ſimilitude. Many frivelous queſtions, and altogether unprofitable, are ſprung out of theſe Ideas ſeparated from God, and from things, the which in what māner ſoever thou reſolveſt them, yet ſhalt thou never attaine unto the truth of the Creation, and Generation, & therefore canſt not affirme any thing certaine, neither of the beginning of Nature, nor of the end and Sympathie.

We ſay then, that there is an univerſall Idea, reſiding eſſentially in God, which is the totall reaſon of all the things, which God was willing to create, diſpoſed and deſtinated, according to his infinite wiſedome and will, and that this Idea is expreſſed by an eternall act, eſpecially in the framing of the world, and that the ſpecies are multiplyed and encreaſed, into many indeviduals, without any Idea, cooperating out of God; in this act of every ſpecies, there is imprinted the character of the Idea of this ſpecies, exiſting in God, out of which impreſſion, it is afterward inclined to the propagation of its ſpecies. Wee call alſo this Idea, or reaſon of all things, to wit, an internall act from the eſſence of God, to have proportion to the ſame eſſence: therefore the creatures which are images of the ſame Idea, are ſaid to have ſome Analogie to the Subſtance and Eſſence of God. From whence the moſt high myſteries of the Trinity, ſhine a looſe off, as through a grate, and the Catholike Doctrines may be illuſtrated excellently, againſt all the hereſies of the Trinity, and may in ſome manner bee made more cleare, theſe obſcurities being diſſipated: and if any one having invocated the holy Ghoſt, ſearch with all his might, and a pious zeale, the Analogie of the creature to the Creatour. The things which hitherto have beene ſpoken of, partly in generall, and alſo partly demonſtrated touching the matter and forme of the Species, Miniſtry, and Sympathie, ſhine forth more clearely, and ſhall bee prooved in the hiſtory of the Creation. Let us now then come to ſpeake of them.

The ſixth Chapter.

Of the Fabrick of the world.

Of the time of the beginning of the Creation.

The firſt day.

WHen as the Lord began to create the Starres, and their motion was not yet in being, and conſequently, as yet there was no time, according to the Philoſophers definition; nevertheles this darkſome ſpace, which proceeded or went before the light, is accounted for a part of this day, and is called Night, and Evening: Gen. 1. 5. and conſtituted with the light following, unto its ſetting, a naturall day, equall to them that followed. This eternall ſpace then is meaſured by God, by the firſt, and laſt, according to the greatneſſe of the parts, and there is no difference, with the time of the Phiſicians, ſaving that it cannot bee meaſured, but by the compariſon of meaſure, borrowed out of the Creation; for this eternity going before the world, had neither as yet yeares, moneths, or dayes, or any ſuch like accident whereby it might bee meaſured. And if the time of the Phiſitians cannot be meaſured, ſhall it therefore ceaſe to be time? for the meaſuring of time, is an accident belonging to time, it cannot bee defined. Whatſoever is knowne to bee, hath its definition in the nature of it, though it cannot be expreſſed by words. So Eternity is truely knowne to bee, becauſe common underſtanding ſheweth it: conſidering, there is not any man confeſſeth that to be, which never was, and that which is, ſometimes not to be, and therefore that which there is no doubt but that ſome time, or in ſome time it was, and this is a common opinion, that that which was in no time, and which is no part, that that is not at all. For it is impoſſible to conceive the eſſence of any thing, without the circumſtance of time and place. Therefore, for the ſhunning of ambiguous and captious tearmes, and many vaine imaginations, drawne from the definition of times and place, although at this day in uſe, and whereby deceiveable Sophiſters obſcure the underſtanding, as it were with a thick miſt, it is better to apply the ſpirit to the ſubſtances themſelves of time and place, or if thou wilt may rather be called Eſſence, and if yee cannot expreſſe their reaſons, becauſe expreſſe words are wanting, nevertheleſſe to contemplate them, after ſome conceived ſimile. So thou mayeſt imagine time to bee a certaine extenſion of durance, betweene the firſt, and the laſt, which after the Creation of the world, is exquiſitely meaſured, by the conſtant, and immooveable motions of the ſtars, and though there were no ſuch meaſurings before the Creation of the world, yet it ceaſed not to have time in it, and if any ſpeculation requireth the meaſuring, we will apply by our thought the meaſures of this our time, touching the extenſion to the eternall parts thereof. As if wee would in ſome ſorte declare the eternity of God, wee may ſay it was a thouſand ages (I ſpeake of ſo great an extenſion) before the Creation of the World, and beſides them, a thouſand more alſo, and a thouſand beſides, and ſo forward without end. And ſo a common underſtanding, may in ſome ſorte meaſure the parts of eternity, and what neede have we here of any ſubtile Tergiverſations, and Laberinths? Things which are eternall and uncreated, are eaſily conceived by ſome ſuch like conception, when they are not defined or well deſcribed. And the word of God aſcribeth often to him, eternall and infinite ages, from the firſt, to the laſt, accommodating it to the common capacity, which hee likewiſe hath formed. Wee may alſo ſuppoſe the place to bee a certaine ſpace, wherein the thing is, which we will devide into three Species, into that which exceedeth the comprehenſion, into the equall, and into the leſſer, not determining of any thing touching the greatneſſe of the comprehenſion. According to the firſt, man is in a houſe: for the ſecond, every body is in the water, or aire, comprehending on all ſides the extremities: according to the third, every thing, and God principally is alſo in the very leaſt place: the creature according to the figure Synecdoche, but God according to his whole Eſſence. If any one, theſe things being thus determined, ſhould doubt, that ſomething was ordained eternally beſides God, he muſt conſider, that time and place are brought in God, yea from his eſſence, conſidering, that eſſence cannot bee without time and place. For God (as Iohn Damaſcene ſpeaketh excellently, Lib. 1. Cap. 16.) is place of himſelfe. In the like manner, and by the ſame reaſon may one imagine, that he is alſo time to himſelfe. And Tertullian againſt Praxea writeth thus: God, before all things were created, was alone himſelfe to himſelfe, and the world, and place and all (pag. 675.) if hee ſearcheth any other ſubſtance of time and place, he will be ſwallowed up into a bottomleſſe pit inſcrutable, and go aſtray into obſcure ſpeeches, becauſe the depth of God 1 ſurmounteth exceedingly all underſtanding.

1 Before all time, matter, forme and place,
God all in all, and all in God it was.

Let us ſay then with Moſes verſe the fifth, that the beginning of the Creation and firſt naturall day, was made by night, and that the night is the firſt part of the day, and that we ought to begin the time of the World, from the firſt moment of the Creation, and that God therefore hath not onely ordained a weeke of dayes, as a memoriall of the Creation, but he would alſo have us, that wee ſhould take likewiſe the beginning of every day, from the ſetting of the Sunne, and from the Evening, and that thoſe judge a miſſe, who would have that the ancient Hebrews did begin the day from the riſing of the Sunne, perſwading them thereunto by ſome paſſages of the holy Scripture, miſunderſtood, and perverted, in Exodus. Chap. 12. 18. The Solemnitie of the Paſſover is commanded to be celebrated for ſeven dayes, the beginning, and the end whereof is apponited in the evening: And the Lord ordayned the firſt, & the laſt day ſolemne. verſ. 16. ſo that the firſt of John the 19. v. 31. is called the high Sabboth, and the Hebrews call Paraſceve, that is, the preparation, the 14 day of the moneth, in which the Lambe was ſacrificed, betweene two Evenings, & diſtinguiſhed from the Paſſover immediately following as appeareth Matth: 27. 62. Marke. 15. 42. Luke 23. verſe 54. John 19. verſe 31. Theſe are then, two dayes, and two evenings following one another. The firſt is the end of the fourth day, the other after Sunne ſetting, of the night following, which appertaineth to the day following. Betweene theſe two evenings, hee commandeth in the ſixth verſe, that the Lamb ſhould be prepared and ſlaine, but that could not be done in a moment, deviding the one, and the other day; therefore, the evening is taken more largely, for the veſpertine time, and inclining to the end of the day, or next ending the day, and following incontinently. So verſe the eighteenth, when hee commanded them to eate the unleavened bread, upon the fourteenth day from the evening, he meaneth from the evening ending immediately, the day being ſhut up. For ſeeing that the ſetting of the Sunne, diſtinguiſheth the dayes, as yee might in which the Paſchall Lambe was eaten, and the part of the day before the Sunne-ſetting, in which they ſlew the Lambe, may be referred to a day? In Marke the 16. it appeareth more clearely, that the night was the beginning of the naturall day. When the Sabboth-day was paſt (ſaith hee) the women brought ſweete oyntments, which was not lawfull for them to do upon the Sabboth, they did this then in the evening, the Sabboth being ended, becauſe hee addeth, that very earely in the morning, the firſt day of the weeke, they came unto the Sepulcher. The Hebrewes then began their naturall day, from the evening and the ſetting of the Sunne, becauſe the firſt day of the Creation began from the night.

The seventh Chapter.

Of the Fabricke of the World.

The workes of the first day.

THe first thing then which God created, was this Chos, whereof hitherto we have discourſed, to wit, this huge indigeſted Maſſe, the matter and mother of all things, that were to be created, which he calleth Earth, becauſe it approacheth neareſt to the nature and condition Terreſtriall; for the Earth was firſt finiſhed, and brought forth her fruits, and incontinently after, the Chaos being not yet devided, hee calleth it Waters, not becauſe that then the Waters were ſeparated from the Earth, but he ſheweth, that as ſoone as the matter was created, the diſtinction of the Elements was begun, and therefore before he nameth it Water, hee nameth it Abiſſe, as ſome meane thing between a Maſſe without forme, and the firſt diſtinction beginning to appeare, or rather hee gives us to underſtand, the nature of this Maſſe, that it was Aphar, a fleeting matter, inclining to the generation of Waters, which hee purpoſed firſt to ſeparate from the Earth. Now all this Maſſe, how great ſoever it was, was an Abiſſe, becauſe that yet it was uniforme, not formed into any ſpecies. The living Creatures were not yet, the plants, the bright Heaven, yea the Elements themſelves, the Earth, the Fire, Water and Aire, but there was (ſaith Moſes) Solitude, Vacuity, or Solitary unprofitable, and void, according as wee call the Earth uninhabited, barren, and producing nothing for the uſe of man, Deſert. So, this Maſſe was a pure ſolitude, having nevertheles in it the ſpecies, from whence all things which are now might be deduced and formed, which ſpecies is ſpecially underſtood, under the forme of Aphar, of clay, and Abiſſe.

Hee addeth that this Chaos had not yet, that which was moſt neceſſarie for the conſtitution of nature, generative and procreative of all things, to wit, the light. Two things ought principally to be obſerved in the Creation: firſt of all, that it proceede, by the order of things moſt imperfect, and moſt ignoble, to the moſt perfect and moſt noble, as firſt of all, from the Chaos, to the Earth, then to the water, from thence to the heavens, and ſo conſequently. Secondlie, that it inſtitute the nature of all things, their power, actions, order, the manner of doing; the beginnings, and the ends, and the periods of every of them, and the vniverſall law of nature, ſuch in the Creation, which hee would have to be perpetually. Willing then, that the inferiour world, to wit, the earth, the water, & the ayre was the mother of all things, which ought to be engendred, and that the Superiour, was the Father endowed with maſculine vertue, that is, willing to ordayne a ſeminary reaſon in the Elements, but the preparatrix, & excitatrix, to engender power in the heavens, preſently after that hee began to extract the Elements, hee extracted withall the matter of the heavens, to the end, that the father, and the mother might grow vp together, that the power, and all the vertue of the one and the other, might receive engendring, his lawes and rules in the ſame Creation. And therefore from the beginning of the diſtribution of the Chaos, hee ordayned two orders of Creatures, and proceedeth by little & little in the one & in the other, to the moſt perfect, and moſt noble, and then when hee began to diſtinguiſh the maſſe into Elements, hee produceth with the ayre, a Celeſtiall, and Lucent matter, of which afterward, the Firmament and the Starres were to be formed and collected, and as in perfecting his worke, hee devided to every one his Species a part: ſo alſo hee gave to all of them the proper lawes of nature, to the Elements, Elementare; and to the Cœleſtiall, matter Cœleſtiall. It is to bee underſtood nevertheleſſe, that aſwell the Element of the ayre, as the heaven it ſelfe, wherein the Starres are, have beene noted afterward in the ſacred Scriptures, under one and the ſame name, as for that then, which concerneth the name, which was ordayned to them by God, theſe two were in the beginning of one, and the ſame condition, and were created together, without diſtinction, but preſently began to be ſeparated, to wit, when it was requiſite to forme the Firmament, and the Starres of the nobleſt part of it.

Obſerve now, what the matter of the Cœleſtiall ſubſtance was. The Element of water, began now to appeare, and to be gathered together in the Arch of the Chaos, ere there was light, which was neceſſary to the operations of nature. And behold (ſaith hee) the Spirit of God mooved vpon the face of the waters, hee ſtirred vp a vehement wind out of the Chaos, to move the waters, not yet ſeparated from the Earth and to make them mount vp into higher waves, that by this agitation, the water might begin by little & little to ſeparate it ſelfe from the moſt groſſe ſubſtance of the Earth, and the moſt ſubtileſt Spirit being ſtirred out of this wateriſh part of the Chaos, was made ayre, and the more part of the Æthereall ayre, or Cœleſtiall ſubſtances. This blaſt made theſe three things, the firſt day, which without all doubt, made the agitation to endure longer, and it became more forcible, and vehement, a greater abandance of this windie Spirit being ſtirred vp, till ſuch time that at laſt, the earth began to ſuſtaine it ſelfe, and to gather it ſelfe more together, it allayed by little and little this agitation, and this windy agitation being ſomewhat exhauſt and cõſumed, it began by degrees to reſt. When then thou beholdeſt the heaven to be extracted, and formed of Water, not yet ſeparated: thou mayeſt eaſily from thence underſtand, that it hath ſome affinity with the Earth, much more with the Water, from whence the Hebrewes call it SHAMAIM, from the word ESH, which ſignifieth waters, becauſe it is made of waters, and carryeth the Starres about it, as enflamed waters, according to that which Eugebine writeth, touching the Etymology of this noune. But ſeeing that the Chaos had heavineſſe, as well as greatneſſe, and whatſoever hath beene made thereof, reſembleth in ſome wiſe the nature of a mother, the heavier, and the more ignoble, ſettled together in one, but the lighter, and more noble Subſtance, which was as it were the fatnes of all the Chaos, being carried upward, was a long time coupled with the Superiour, whence it came to paſſe, that the Heaven was created of the more noble part of the one, and of the other Elements, before they were ſeparated every one into his place, hence it is that the Heavens excell in beauty, nobleneſſe, and vertue, all the other Elements, as having beene created of the more noble ſubſtance of the Chaos, yea likewiſe in the Heaven, the higher things are more excellent than the inferiour; moreover, the Celeſtials have a perpetuall Sympathy, and affinity with the Elementaries, by which they are mutually enclined, the one to the other, likewiſe alſo the higher things of the Heaven to the lower of them, in ſuch ſort, that there is nothing in the world, which by the Sympathy given to it, ſerveth not in ſome ſtead, and order for the uſe of man. So the heavens and the Stars, by reason of the inclination, which they have to inferiour things, their forme being round, and resting vpon the Center of the universe, make their motion circular and diverse, that they might communicate their vertues to inferiour things, as much as is necessarie for generation. Now this heaven was yet in the first day, of one & the same nature and condition with the other things, and without any difference, and therefore had onely one Sole motiō, which distinguished the day & the night. But as the workmanship of the Creation continued, the most lucent matter of the heaven began to be gathered apart, into diverse Spheres, and Globes of Starres, and Planets, & as every thing began to grow to perfection, and to have its owne proper nature, and motion, so also every one of them, obtayned their owne Sympathie, and operation. So the light, or most resplendant matter, ordayned for the Sunne, began immediately to gather it selfe, into the demy-part of heaven, and to enter within the Globe of the Sunne; so that about ten howers after the Creation (for it began to come into the signe Leo as hath beene demonstrated probably in the Chronologie) it gave light to the world, and 14 howers after, by the daylie motion of the heavens, it set. This light in the beginning, was also more feeble, and weake, because the matter of the Sunne was as yet disperſed, untill that in the fourth day it was shut up and gathered together into its greatenes. This speculation of the gathering together of the Starres into Globes, and encreasing of the light, cannot be in vaine, considering, it was needfull, that there should be light the first day, which made the day, seeing the Sunne was not perfected, till the fourth day: Considering also, that God had not ordayned any other light to make the day, but the Sunne. Likewise, wee must not thinke, that the Firmament of heaven, the Collection of the waters into the matter, the dryneſſe of the Earth, the production of hearbes, fruites, and trees, & all things which God commanded to Sole nature, having beene made in a moment, as the commandement seemeth to import, but by degrees, and in the same order, and manner, which hee afterward willed, that nature should use, & therefore, that all, and every work began then to bee, when the matter proper to its nature, was prepared, but principallie, on that day in which the commandement was given. So then, the separation of the waters, began the first day, and was finished on the third. For if all things had beene created in a moment, God should have seemed rather to have intended to produce things, then to ordayne the natures and lawes of them. The contrarie whereof, wee shall see in the third day. It beeing so then, that every thing ought to be made, with its proper nature, and naturall lawe, immediately when every thing began to be created, the efficatious vertue thereof began and withall, the meane and rule of working, whereby it ought to serve God in his creation, so that all things in their beginning have had in their Creation, as their fore-exercises, and by nature once ordayned, have served their Creatour in the disposition of others. So having made the weight in the Chaos, and the Center & seate of all heavie things being settled, the disposition and order of things have followed naturally: So the Masse being mooved by the winde, made naturally the separation of the Earth, and of the water, and the exhalations assended upward. The things which were formed of a Celestiall condition by their Creatour, have also exercised a Celestiall operation in the generation of hearbes, trees, and living Creatures: so the Creation went forward, the naurall operation followed it, and these two afterwards concurred in the other works of God. Seing then, that this is the order of things, wiselie ordayned, and brought to the scope of the whole intension of the Creatour; the Lover of true Philosophie, may diligentlie observe the order, whereby all things have beene created, what nature of matter the Creatour gave first of all to them, and what hee hath added to their nature, how farre the species is extended in forming the things: moreover, to know if the things environing this Creation, did give any helpe thereunto, this is not to be despised, for by how much the more wee consider things that are more high, so much the more wee shall attayne unto the knowledge of the thing created, the efficacie and the Communion thereof with other Creatures, and consequentlie its Sympathie, and all its operation. Now to the end that the matter of every thing, may be knowne, we must begin with the first matter, which is the Chaos, for as much thereof as may be knowne, according to the forme and qualitie thereof, so much the better also may be knowne the things which are first created of it, and as of them, so of all others. As for the rest, what matters are added by the Creatour for the establishing of the Species, and nature of the thing, this primarie nature created cannot teach it, but it must bee sought out by the latter, as by the apparent greatenes of the thing, the weight, lightnesse, firmenesse, rarietie, fleeting figure, qualitie, colours, office, and such like accidents, and proprieties. The causes efficient whereof nevertheleſſe, are known by long studie and experience. I give advertisement cheifelie of these things, because they are the first foundations (whereunto a Philosopher ought above all to bend his studie) to finde out the causes, and Oeconomy of things. Let every man doe as hee pleaseth but for our part, wee will follow the parts of the world its seate, its proportion, and locall motion, and other things appertayning to Geographie, the rest wee will leave to the contemplation of Spirits more divine: When Moses saith, God said, hee doth not show a sentence given for some peculiar time, but the perpetuall will of him which speaketh & effecteth the things without words or expresse speech, & produceth them in tyme definite. So also in the actions of God, when hee saith, God devided the light from the darkenesse, hee intendeth not an externall action, but the perpetuall will of God, whereby alone hee beginneth and perfecteth all things preordayned in tyme. Now I will not say that in this day, this devision was compleate, after which the fourth day, the Sunne, and all the Starres were finally perfected, but hee giveth the wise, not obscurely to understand this collection of light whereof I have spoken, and that the same proceeded thus farre this day, that the light gathered together in one part of the heaven, might have power to set, leaving behinde it the night, and darkenesse. After the works of this day ended, hee addeth this light to have beene approoved & testifyed by God for good, which hee did not of all Creatures, but of these onely, which above all others bringeth to man an excellent benefit, and illustrateth, and recommendeth excellently, the worke, and the intention of God. So in things following hee extolleth with the same praise the dryneſſe of the Earth, the generations of Hearbs, Trees, and Fruites, the offices of the Sunne, Moone, and the Starres, the waterish living Creatures, after also the terrestrialls. All which things, man being finally created, hee approved them to be very good, as those which were most convenient for his service, for whose ſake they were created. The works of the Lord are great, ſought out of all them that have pleaſure therein. Pſal. 111. v. 2. Light then being brought into the world, the firſt day was accompliſhed, which he ſaith conſiſteth of the evening, & of the morning, or of the night, & of the day, hee calleth it naturall from the Latins. Hee placeth the night before, becauſe that from it the creation began, for the light could not be created the firſt of all things, according to the Idea of all things conceived in the underſtanding of the Workmaſter, but the matter was requiſite before, out of which it ought to be formed. The end of the firſt day.

The eight Chapter.

Of the Fabricke of the World.

of the Heaven.

The ſecond day beginneth.

AFter the couching of the light, followed the ſecond day, wherein the firmament was created. But he addeth not out of what matter God would it ſhould be made: but this is manifeſt by the creation of the light. For ſeeing the light was produced out of the waters, ſuch as we have ſaid, and all light commeth from the firmament, it is certaine that that lucent ſubſtance which brought forth the day, and obtayned the circular motion, was made this day into the firmament. Whence the firmament in the holy tongue is called Shamaim, becauſe it is of the ſame ſubſtance with the light; towit, wateriſh, though a little more ignoble. For the light, as being the more noble, required alſo the more noble part of the ſame ſubſtance, wherefore the ſpecies and nature thereof was alſo later perfected; to wit, the fourth day. This firmament Moſes calleth RAKIA: by which word diffuſion, extenſion, expanſion, and diſtenſion are ſignified. The reaſon therefore of this name is taken out of the worke of the creation, which was made in this order, and ſucceſſe. By and by ſo ſoone as the winde fell to blowe upon the deepe, it exhaled upward, and the ayrie, and celeſtiall ſubſtance was diffuſed, wherein whatſoever was proper to light (digeſted into a luminous eſſence) ſtraight begun to be gathered together, to make vp the day: as alſo the ſubſtance of the future firmament, wherein the light was gathered together, and permanent, elevated on high from the element of the ayre; diffuſed, extended, and diſplayed, as a ſaile or tent about the whole inferiour world, and having diurnall motion, even from the verie firſt day, and carrying about with it the light. This firmament therefore by reaſon of this diffuſion, extenſion, and expanſion, is properlie called Rakia, not for the ſoliditie, or compact force of the ſubſtance, which Rakia doth not ſignifie. Neither doth the matther, whereof this firmament is made, nor that expanſion, which here Moſes attributeth to it; and alſo Iſai: cap. 42. v. 5. and 40. v. 22. Alſo Pſal. 104. v. 2. carie with it neceſſarilie ſuch a ſoliditie, and ſuch a force of ſubſtance; nor is to be ſuppoſed to carie with it: unles ſome argument thereof in the word of God did clearlie appeare. The compariſon taken from a ſaile ſpread & extended with the windes, & a tent firmelie ſet up and diſplayed; doth rather declare the ſtabilitie, immobilitie, and incorruptibilitie of it: ſuch a firmament would God ſignifie, & have to be, that it might be a perpetuall ayde, and upholder, of fraile and corruptible things. And what profit, I pray you, ſhould be there of the rigiditie and force of yron, or hardnes of the adamant; where there is no wearing, nothing that can corrupt? God alſo called this firmament, heaven, or Shamaim, that we might underſtand it to be of the ſame ſubſtance with the light, and together with it to have been created. Here is to be obſerved that Eſdras lib. 4. cap. 6. repeating the creation of the world, ſaith of this firmament: And on the ſecond day (ſaith he) thou created the Spirit of the firmament, and commanded it, &c. The order of the creation teacheth, the proportion of ponderous & heavie things teacheth, the raritie of ſubſtance and experience teacheth, that by how much higher from the center of the world bodies are diſtant, they are more rarified, lighter, and more Spirituall: and therefore it neceſſarilie followeth, that thoſe things that reſide higheſt of all, are moſt Spirituall. Now this firmament is much higher than the elements, wherefore it is alſo much more Spirituall than the ayre, and moſt of all in the extreame ſublimitie of it, where ſo manie Starrs have a perpetuall, moſt conſtant, and leſſe variable motion. Now it was neceſſarie ſuch a heaven to be made, after that the maſculine force, which ſubſiſteth in the ſpirituall ſubſtance, was to be inſerted into it: to helpe the imperfect power of engendring of theſe inferiour things. Neither did it ſuffice, the ſubſtance thereof to be ſuch equallie throughout the whole, that is to ſay homogeneall but according to the varietie and nature of things, a variable and turgent fecunditie was alſo required, which ſhould extend it ſelfe abroad by a naturall inclination to ripen the fruits of the inferiour world: and as it were to doe the office of a midwife in helping them to bring forth. But that fecunditie lyeth in the exundant Spirituall eſſence, & fortitude thereof, wherefore there ought to be made a collection of this Spirituall ſubſtance, which is in every heaven, or part thereof, into one bodie Spherical, as a member genitall. So in the heaven of the Sunne, the chiefe force of the Spirituall ſubſtance is collected into the globe of the Sunne: Mercurie and Venus adjoyned to it for the helpe of generation. So the Moone and the Stars from the firſt beginning of the created light, according to the exigence of their office, were collected every one into their one ſeverall globes: and the fourth day finally perfected. Alſo the heate & ſplendor of the light, or rather eradiation, was neceſſarie to the act of the generation of the Spirituall vertue, production, & intention: wherefore when God created the light, he made light alſo the Spirituall ſubſtance of heaven. Now if it were poſſible for any one to know the naturall cauſe, and originall of light in ſubſtance, he ſhould attayne unto a great myſterie to inquire after, and in ſome ſort to finde out, the nature of the Starres, which without doubt follow their efficient, and materiall cauſe, for if thou doeſt apply all the ſubtilitie of thy minde, thou ſhalt ſee the creation of things almoſt follow the naturall order of cauſes, & from cauſes to deduce cauſes, untill it come to the effect propoſed. And this is the incomprehenſible wiſdome of God, that of one firſt created, he did ſo forme and inſtitute nature, according to the univerſall Idea, that he may be thought no leſſe to have imitated, than created and ordayned it. For creating by his will and power the univerſall Idea of nature, moſt exactlie conceived, he doth alſo moſt exactlie imitate and expreſſe, that both in the Idea, and Fabrick, the ſame naturall ſucceſſe of things and of cauſes ſhould appeare.

O the moſt wiſe power, and moſt powerfull wiſe-dome, above all admirable! How great ought the affinity of nature to be unto its Creatour? Hee ſpake the word, and it was made, his will is the eſſence of it, wherefore as he willeth, ſo is it, and he willeth: and he willeth it for the ſame. God willed, and willed with delectation and ſtudy, that the Heaven and every Star in it, by a variable motion, ſhould ſerve man, and for man, every creature.

This will, this ſtudy, even with a certaine delection, remaineth imprinted in the Heaven: the Heaven willeth the ſame, is enclined to the ſame, and executeth it diligently, with a certaine delectation: the affection of God therefore towards his Creature, is made the affection of one Creature towards another. This is the firſt and chiefe cauſe, and the originall of all Sympathie, whereby every thing is excited to the execution of their duty. It is not needefull that wee ſhould attribute to the Heaven any other cauſe, or the Angels to be moovers, as though it were of it ſelfe immooveable, and diſperſed his beames idlely, and without any affection and Sympathie to inferiour things, whereſoever it hapneth: and much leſſe that we ſhould ſay, that it is perpetually mooved of a divine Spirit, but by a perpetuall nature, according to his will once imprinted in it. Yet in the meane time, if thou wilt perfect this philoſophie concerning Sympathy, thou muſt enquire what ſimilitude, what Analogie with the Creatures and with which of them, he hath given to the Heaven, whereby it is enclined unto them: as alſo from whence, by what order, and after what manner that ſimilitude and Analogie was inducted into it. But when thou haſt aſcended upon this theater, thou wilt cry out, O the profundity of the riches, wiſedome, and knowledge of God; how incomprehenſible are his judgements, and his wayes paſt finding out! which if thou finde nothing, yet it ſhall be a great gaine unto thee, to have learned this imperſcrutability, to the end thou mayeſt learne more highly to admire the infinite wiſedome of God, and with a more ready minde to reverence his Majeſty. This alſo ſhalt thou eaſily gaine, that thou ſhalt finde, there is nothing created of God without cauſe, and juſt reaſon, tending to one ſcope or end. And now I hope thou underſtandeſt what Eſdras meaneth when he ſaith, Thou haſt created the Spirit of the Firmament, and commanded it: to wit, that the celeſtiall matter, which is moſt ſpirituall, perceiving the word of God, or the impreſſion of his will, doth with him put on the ſame affection towards man: to wit, that for his cauſe waxing hot, is extenuated, is made ſpirituall, doth elevate it ſelfe on high, above the Element of the Aire, extend it ſelfe, and there remaine fixed: deviding the waters from the waters. Therefore, the celeſtiall matter, having from the will of God and his impreſſion, obtained this Sympathy, as yet mixed with the Aire, and turned into a more ſpirituall eſſence, by its owne inclination mounted upward; and this is that which he ſaith, The ſecond day was created the Spirit of the Firmament, though as yet there was no contraction of the Starres and Planets into Globes. It executed alſo the reſt of the Commandement, to wit, the deviſion out of the ſame Sympathie, and inclination the ſame day; and remaineth in the ſame office, untill the will of God (from the which the Sympathie thereof hath dependence) be accompliſhed: as witneſſeth that of David, Pſal. 148. He hath eſtabliſhed them (the celeſtiall things) to endure perpetually and for ever; he hath given them a Statute, and they ſhall not paſſe it.

This Firmament was not any particular Heaven devided from others, but one Machine of the Heavens, as is manifeſt: for that the fourth day he ſet the Sunne, Moone aud Starres in this Firmament, comprehending all the Heavens which appeare unto us. But becauſe theſe bodies which God hath ſet in the Firmament (and according to the teſtimony of David, eſtabliſhed with certaine lawes) are found to have divers motions. It appeareth that this Firmament is devided into moe Heavens: but how many they are, we ſhall probably diſcourſe in the Aſtronomicks. But the manner of the deviſion appeareth in the precedent, when as perpetually the ſuperiour things (as more extenuated, dilated and lighter) have aſcended from the inferiour; as the Water from the Earth, the Aire from the Water, the Firmament from the Aire. So without doubt, in the common ſubſtance of the Firmament, by little and little ſuch an extenuation being made, diſcretion and ſubduction on high: firſt, in the loweſt place was the Sphere of the Moone left, and reſted; Secondly, the Sphere of the Sunne, with Mercurie and Venus: Thirdly, Mars, then Iupiter: and thereafter the reſt; in manner that the laſt ſeparation of the ſuperceleſtiall waters, the ſame remaineth, and is the higheſt part of the Machine of the world. The univerſall and perpetuall nature of things, as is the law of things heavy & light, ordained of God, requireth the oeconomy of the diſtribution of the Heavens. For ſeeing that all things are created and formed of the firſt, and one ſelfe matter, and therefore doe reſemble the naturall diſpoſition thereof, the ſuperiours would be no otherwiſe affected among themſelves, than the inferiours among themſelves: except we will ſay, that when he came to forme the Heavens, he did make againe the firſt matter, and gave it another much differing Eſſence, nature, and law: but this what were it, but to extenuate the wiſedome and power of God, as though he had not made the firſt matter fit for the Creation of all things? This being granted, what communion of natures could there be, betweene the celeſtiall and elementary things? what Sympathy? were not this to diſturbe all order of things, and to overthrow Gods ſcope and intent in his Creation? When therefore the univerſall law of nature doth ſo comport it ſelfe thorow all things, communicating among themſelves, it can be no doubt to any, but that thoſe things which proceed from one conformable in it ſelfe, and not diſcordant, obtaine the ſame reaſon unto that one, as the Sonne to his Parent, and every thing engendred, to his progenitor, expreſſe in ſome ſort the nature thereof, and be inclined unto him, as to his beginning bound with the bond of love. Therefore there will bee the ſame reaſon of celeſtiall things among themſelves, as of elementaries, ſeeing that al things were created ſucceſſively of the ſame Maſſe, conformable and concordant in it ſelfe; and the ſuperiours out of their nobleneſſe and perfection, will embrace theſe inferiours, as their beginnings, ſo much the more ſtrongly, by how much they do more communicate in nature, and ſerve man to their utmoſt power. The ſuperiours alſo being more purified, more diſtilled, and excoct, having a more noble forme ſuperadded, will be alſo the more noble inſtruments of God, unto his ſcope and end, and will more ſtrongly performe their office thereunto. Wherefore in my opinion, that which the Aſtrologians perſwade themſelves of the malice of Saturne and of Mars, is moſt abſurd, as we ſhall diſcourſe more at large, in the Aſtrologicks.

The Firmament being created and ſet in his place, was made (ſaith Moſes) from the evening and morning the ſecond day, to wit, beginning from the evening as the firſt, and ending againe at the ſetting, and couching of the light. The reaſon of the day is the ſame as before before, the which ſerving all the time of the Creation, it ſignifieth, that we ought perpetually to retaine the remembrance of the Creation. But he called this Firmament, Heaven; in Hebrew SHAMAIM: if he called it by a vocall diſtinction, he ſo called it for Adam: otherwiſe that which I have ſaid, for God to ſay, to be; this is the very ſame, as to call; to wit, his eternall will whereby he willed the firmament to be out of the Waters and made it.

The nineth Chapter.

Of the Fabrick of the world.

Of the ſuperceleſtiall Waters, and the creation of Angels.

OF the Superceleſtiall Waters, there is no where any open mention made: but Gen. 1.7. Pſal. 148. and 4. Eſdr. 6.41. Of them the opinions of writers are divers: Iacobus Zeiglerus imagineth very fooliſhly, that the firſt matter was created of God infinite, leſt there ſhould be thought any thing to be left without the world void: and that in creating the world out of that matter, he did not exhauſt the infinity thereof, but onely aſſumed ſo much as ſufficed for the Creation, and left the reſt as it was, which he calleth the celeſtiall waters: voide, and darkeneſſe, which he affirmeth to bee excluded from the World, by the Firmament: which opinion is too abſurd. For how can it be admitted, that the infinite wiſedome of God ſhould create any thing in vaine? For that is done altogether in vaine which is left void without the world, and of no forme or uſe. Which if thou wilt ſay was done to fill up that vacuum, I will demand, whether there was any vacuum there from eternity, and whether alſo this was not created? It would bring an inextricable Laberinth of queſtions, nor any meaſure, order and law, in the deduction of the parts of the world out of the Chaos ſhould appeare, but all things ſhould bee done without reaſon, and without naturall conſequence: for there ſhould be no place of extenuating the matter, dilating, and enobling it. Others, and truely not a few, thinke the Superceleſtiall waters, to be the clouds, which are carried in the middle region of the Aire, and that they are ſeparated by the inferiour aire (which is alſo compriſed under the name of Heaven) from the Sea and from the Rivers. But hereunto is contrary the holy Teſtimony of Moſes, which giveth the deviſion to that Firmament, wherein the Sunne, Moone and Starres are placed. For the Aire which is under the Clouds, and ſubject to great mutabilities, cannot be called the firmament: which if they will call the firmament, becauſe of the perpetuall and immutable cituation of it in its place, then ſhould the water alſo be the Firmament, but another firmeneſſe is required. Such a Firmament was requiſite (as I have ſaid) which ſhould ſubſiſt immutable in ſubſtance and vertue for ever, to ſuſtaine the generation and multiplication of things, according to their Species: but this was made after the light, and therefore after the Aire, for the Light could not bee without the Aire, which ought to environ the Maſſe, and to carry the Light, and to make the Day and the Night. Wherefore ſeeing that this Firmament is made of the Aire, and perfected one day after it, without doubt it is another different from this inferiour, and more perfect than it, above the which alſo David placeth theſe waters. Obſerve (Pſalm. 148.) his order in praiſing of God. Firſt, in generall hee citeth celeſtiall things to praiſe him: then ſummoneth all in a juſt order, and diſtinctly. Firſt thoſe that inhabit the Heavens, to wit, the Angels, and the Spirits of the bleſſed: then the parts of the heavens: the Sunne, Moone, & Stars; that is to ſay, the Firmament. Thirdly the heavens of heavens, to wit, the heavens which environ the firmament, and comprehend it within themſelves: or the heaven of heaven, as it is Pſal. 113. Laſt of all, he mooveth the waters which be above the heavens.

Thou ſeeſt how he proceedeth in order from the baſeſt, and loweſt, to the ſupremeſt, and higheſt: adding alſo a ſingular and ſpeciall cauſe wherefore they ought chiefly to praiſe God: to wit, becauſe God hath eſtabliſhed them to endure for ever, and hath given them a law and office which they can not paſſe unaccompliſhed. After the celeſtiall things, he paſſeth to the terreſtriall, wherein he comprehendeth the windes, lightnings, haile, cloudes, fowles of the heaven: to wit, all elementarie things. Thou ſeeſt then two orders of prayſers: the celeſtiall, and the elementarie. Seeing then he placeth the ſuper-celeſtiall waters among things celeſtiall, and immutable, we may in no wiſe believe them to be the cloudes. And Pſal. 104. v. 3. God is ſaid to make continuate, to touch on another, to lay the beames of his high chambers (that is to ſay, of the world) among the waters: which can be no other, but theſe waters which are above the heavens.

Now whereof theſe waters are created, & to what end, it doth not appeare out of Moſes. For ſeeing they are not viſible, can not be perceived with the eye, and doe not repreſent any thing which might be taken of Gentiles as matter of Idolatrie, and further ſeeing they are the moſt hidden things, and the higheſt of the univerſe Creature, which can not be ſearched out by any man, it imported not much to explicate their originall and end, or ſcope, wherefore alſo Moſes concealeth them, and the holy Spirit doth not openly reveale them. Yet doth he not make mention of them in vaine, but offereth to godlie mindes, matter of conceiving ſomething higher and intimateth the wiſdome of God highly to be admired, and his inexplicable power, where the moſt ſharpe ſubtiltie of the underſtanding is dulled, and is not able to proſecute any further, the wayes, and profund depth of them. But the Originall and matter of them, from hence may be cõprehended, in that he nameth them waters: for he ſheweth that they are conformable & conaturall, of the ſame nature with the firmament. As alſo David when (Pſal. 148.) he attributeth, together with Moſes, the higheſt place in all the univerſe unto them. For ſeeing all things which hitherto, (after the waters moved, and light created) were made; by order of extenuation, and of perfection, were caried up on high, and fixed in their place; it may not be doubted, but by the ſame continued order, it was come to the extreame, (as I may ſo ſay) diſtillation, and ſublimation, in thoſe ſuperceleſtiall waters. Then theſe waters are the moſt cleare, and pure heaven of all, which the divines rightly call empyreum, for ſeeing there is ſo great light in the firmament, and collected out of the ſame ſubſtance of the firmament, which repreſenteth to the eyes and ſence, pure fyre, the ſubſtance alſo of this laſt, and moſt purified heaven, muſt be a fire much more noble and reſplendent, of an equall clearnes throughout: as in the which there is made no contraction of the light into globes, which appeareth to be ſo made, for that God would terminate the oeconomie of whole nature, with the convexitie of the firmament: and therefore writeth that diviſion of waters to be committed to the firmament; to the end that we ſhould underſtand, that the workes of nature are there terminated, and doe not extend higher, than the ſupreame extremity thereof: to wit, the convexity of the firſt mooveable, but that they are all wholly contained within it, and that without that convexitie, all things are quiet and immooveable.

Now for what end this Superceleſtiall water, and this moſt cleare Heaven was created, I will ſay that which to me ſeemeth probable. That the Angels were created there is no man that doubteth, ſeeing there is nothing eternall, except God alone, all the reſt are Creatures, and have a beginning. But when theſe Angels were created, it is not eaſie to ſay. That they were not created before the world, it may be convinced and prooved, for that it is ſaid, In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth; that is to ſay, that Maſſe without forme, the mother of Heaven and Earth. Now if the Creation did begin from that Maſſe, then could not the Angels be firſt created. Yet when the lucent and bright Starres were placed in the Firmament, from that time they tooke their being: for ſo doth the Lord ſpeake to Job, chap. 38. v. 6. Who laid the corner ſtone thereof (to wit, of the earth) when the morning Starres ſung together, and all the Sonnes of God shouted for joy. The Sonnes of God could be no other than the Angels, for man as then was not created. Now if the Angels ſung praiſes to God the Creator, then when he eſtabliſhed the Earth upon the corner ſtone; and together with them, the bright ſhining Starres gave praiſe: therefore the third day the Angels were, and alſo the Starres were, although as yet imperfect. For the firſt day in the morning they began to be created, and the fourth day were perfected: therefore they were much more than halfe perfected, and begun to ſhine, the light being extended, and to praiſe and glorifie God in his ſervice, and obedience. But that that place in Job 38. 6. hath relation to the third day of the creation, thou mayeſt eaſily underſtand, if thou compare the two precedent verſes. For in the firſt he ſpeaketh of the firſt foundation of the Earth, that is, then when God gave it a place of reſt, the Center of the univerſe: which is the very Baſis of the Earth.

Of this foundation David ſpeaketh, Pſal. 104. 5. Saying, Thou haſt eſtabliſhed the Earth upon her Baſes, that it ſhould not be mooved for ever. In the other he ſpeaketh of the figure which the Earth hath obtained by its weight, on every ſide equally affecting the Center; to wit, Sphericall. But in the ſixth verſe, firſt he maketh a moſt profound queſtion, to wit, how that Center, which is the Baſis of heavie things, ſhould be fixed: ſeeing it hangeth in the middle of the fluent and mooveable Aire? Immediately after, he ſpeaketh of the ſuperſtruction, which is accuſtomed to bee elevated on high, and preſſeth chiefely unto the Angles, or corners of the edifices: Who (ſaith he) hath laid the corner ſtone, which ſuſtaineth the Maſſe, aſcending up on high? Thou ſeeſt three parts of the earth brought in queſtion, to be ſettled and eſtabliſhed, in that order wherein they mutually ſucceeded one another in the creation. For firſt the Chaos being created, the Earth began to ſettle into the Center. Secondly, in the ſettling, received a ſphericall figure. Thirdly, the earth at length becomming dry, ſhewed it ſelfe above the waters, and was there eſtabliſhed, Yea the moſt high mountaines thereafter hanging above the waters. Of which eſtabliſhment David ſpeaketh thus (Pſal. 24. 2.) For he hath founded it upon the Seas, and eſtabliſhed it upon the floods. The ſixth verſe demandeth in the ſecond part, who hath raiſed theſe moſt high hilly tops, ſo great a diſtance above the waters, and ſo eſtabliſhed them, that they fall not, and returne to their owne naturall place? Seeing therefore the firmeneſſe and ſtability of theſe was made the third day, when the earth was made dry, ſollide and firme; it is altogether manifeſt, that the Angels were created before this ſiccity and firmitude was accompliſhed: to wit, the ſecond day. And with this agreeth moſt elegantly, the creation of the Superceleſtial waters, made the ſecond day: out of which it is very likely the Angels were created. For there was no ſubſtance in the whole creature more fit hereunto, than that cleare and ardent Aire, in the which the Creatour pleaſed that they ſhould have their ſeate and habitation. Neither was there any other element more convenient for their bodies, than from whence they ſhould take their ſpirit. And Paul Heb. 1. teſtifieth, that the Angels are ſpirits, and a flame of fire, that is to ſay, cleare ſpirits, like the moſt cleare flame: as is almoſt the ſubſtance in the Empyreall Heaven. So that the Angels ſeeme to bee created of the Superceleſtiall waters; as the Starres: but animated, rationall, and mooving themſelves up on high, and downe below, for the ſervice of God: whereupon they are called Angels of light, that is to ſay, light ſhining Angels, created out of the light, and dwelling in heavenly light, and doe appeare unto men with great cleareneſſe of light; as to the Shepheards, Luke 2. 9. And to the women, Matth. 28. 3. And to Peter, Acts 12. 7. The end of the ſecond day.

The tenth Chapter.

Of the Fabrick of the world.

Of the congregating of the elementary waters: and preparation of the earth for generation.

The third day beginneth.

THe third day God ſaid, Let the waters which bee under the Heaven, bee gathered together into one place, and that which is dry appeare. Moſes minded not to ſay, that finally the third day he ſaid this, and began to ſeparate: but that his eternall will was that this third day, the diviſion of the earth and water ſhould be perfected, and the earth be dried up, and ſhould appeare more high above the waters, having received the waters within her boſoms, to be the ſeat and habitation to all future living creatures, and a ſtorehouſe to affoord all ſuſtenance. What things ſoever are in God are eternall: his will of deviding, as well as of creating was from eternitie; and alſo of accompliſhing the deviſion, this day was eternall: and when it was finiſhed he willed it to be made from eternity, and approved of it eternally. His ſentence ſtandeth faſt, whereof he can not repent, it can not be redargued, reproved, amended, nor better conceived, becauſe his wiſdome and prudence is infinite, & doth admit no change of counſell & will. Therefore ſeeing this day the deviſion was compleat: God ſaid (ſaith Moſes) that is to ſay, from all eternity, that the deviſion ſhould be made, and that which is dry appeare, that is to ſay, that the diviſion ſhould be made untill that which is dry ſhould appeare. And when did the dry appeare? even now the third day of the creation: for he addeth, and it was ſo, to wit, even now incontinent after the ſecond day, which a little before he ſaid was compleat, and before the end of the third day, which he will conclude after in the third verſe.

Now if any one would comprehend together, the deviſion begun, and perfected in one day, what conſtitution there was of the order, & law of nature, in the creation, creation, when as now we ſee it to worke ſucceſſively, and by cauſes, and conſequent meanes? It will then neceſſarily follow, that God hath created all things without any order, and law of nature, and that after he ordeyned and gave theſe things to nature: which were very abſurd, and impious to thinke: for things ought to bring with them their nature, & law of working, from the creation, unles we ſhould thinke that God in creating wanted either counſell, or was not of power ſufficient. When therefore in the ſecond verſe he mooved the waters with a ſtrong blaſt; we underſtand that he inſtituted the naturall cauſe, in the works following, and that from that tyme the earth was begun to be ſeparated from the water: but that the third day this ſeparation was perfected, and compleate.

This naturall cauſe of ſeparation being obſerved, the cauſe alſo of the inequalitie of the earth, and of the gulphes of the Sea may be knowne. For by this violence of the winde, this Aphar created in the beginning, it ſo came from divers parts, that it elevated very high, and from hence collected the low-ſetled earth up aloft, but there upon made deepe, and great valleys. Thou wilt thinke then that in that part in the which is now the Atlantick Sea, a moſt vehement winde to have fallen upon Aphar, and in lyke manner in that part where now Aſia, and new India are divided: and that the ſame windes have made in the ſame place vaſte concavities of the low ſetled earth & have heaped & raiſed it up on high into firme lands: alſo that from hence are raiſed divers boyſterous windes, which have cauſed the leſſer concavities, & the waters being on both ſides carried on high, have congeſted the earth into mountaynes, ſo by the colliſion, repercuſſion, or beating of the waters one againſt an other, thou mayeſt underſtand, that the earth was ſeparated from the waters, and collected through the midle regions into moſt high mountains: So through Africa, the hill Atlas, and the hils of the Moone. By Aſia the mountayne Imaus, and the Caſpian mountaynes, and other mountaynes every where were produced. Now the waters after a long agitation being purified from all earth, and collected into thoſe places, reſided where the Lord ſet unto them a bound: as David ſaith: Pſal. 103. v. 9. to wit, when as all heavie things approach as neare as ever they can to the center of the world, and the water which is fluent, and glyding, not able to conſiſt accumulated as the earth can; it doth alwayes glide downeward to the nether-place, untill it come to the very bottome, the plummet, or lead, from whence it cannot aſcend againe, unles a more heavy thing poſſeſſe the bottome. Thereof it commeth, that all waters not being oppoſed, or ſtopped by higher bars, doe runne into the Sea.

Now heare it is to be thought, the Sunne, the Moone, and the other Stars to be ſo farre forth collected, and compacted together, that in the nature which is given them, they begin to have more vehement forces. For now they increaſed unto the 3 day in clearenes of light, & naturall vertue. Wherefore it is certaine, that it helped much in drying up of the earth. The winde alſo in ſome ſort as yet blowing through the ayre, drew, out of myre, and dirt, humors perfectly excocted, & extenuated by the Sunne: that for two cauſes the earth might be dryed up, and grow into a greater ſolliditie: as David ſaith, Pſal. 24. God hath eſtabliſhed the earth upon the waters; that is to ſay, by ſiccitie, and ſolliditie: without the which it had remayned fluxative, and (relapſed to the deepe places) had, according to its nature, ſettled under the waters: to wit, as being more heavie; and therefore forcing them upwards. But we muſt underſtand this ſiccitie of the earth; not to be abſolute, but in mediocritie: ſo great as ſufficed for the eſtabliſhment of the earth, and creation of plants. For the herbes were created before it ever rayned, which have neede of moiſture, and man was formed of clay the 6 day. But withall conſider this, if the earth had beene altogether dry, it could not have beene raiſed into high mountaynes, and remaine firme. For there is a certaine moyſture which bindeth the earth, whereof, comming to be deprived, it glideth away as the ſand. Neither had it beene fit for the engendring of thoſe things, which God would produce in the bowels thereof. Here is alſo to be obſerved, how great the wiſdome of the creator was in making hollow thoſe bayes, and chanels, as receptacles of the waters; for ſo hath he diſtributed the Sea throughout the whole world, that all the Kingdomes of the world may have commerce one with an other, and what things ſoever either nature, or art affordeth, may tranſport whither they will. And (which is moſt of all) that the earth, with the waters collected together, making one Sphere, might remaine in one equall ballance: for otherwiſe the earth ſhould not be eſtabliſhed upon the waters, but the more heavy weight being collected into one part, ſhould preſſe downe all the maſſe of the earth, towards the center of gravitie, and of the world: and that depreſſion of the earth, having elevated more high, & aloft, the waters lying on the other part, would have cauſed them to overflow, & poſſeſſe the next adjoyning lands. For after that the earth in the ſame quantitie is heavier than the waters, it is neceſſary that firſt the bodie of the earth, conſiſt by it ſelfe in an equall ballance. And alſo that the Seas environning the orbe of the earth, and communicating together, ſhould be ſo diſtributed, that on every ſide lying in an equall ballance, they ſhould not bring more waight into one halfe of the Sphere, in what circle ſoever you compaſſe it, than in an other thereunto oppoſite.

If the Seas did not communicate together, but ſome remained ſhut up within their owne bayes and chanels, the earth could in ſome ſorte (although not throughout, and in it ſelfe) conſiſt equally ballanced. For what weight wanted in one halfe thereof, the waters would ſupply ſhut up in it. But ſeeing the uſe and office of the Seas, required a communion of them among themſelves, for the neceſſary circuit of navigation: the ſame alſo the exoneration and disburdening of the Rivers requireth: which by the onely communication of the Seas, equally, and according to an equall ballance, may bee diſtributed into all the parts of the Sphere: it was firſt and chiefely neceſſa- (as I have ſaid) that the earth ſhould remaine in an equall ballance, neither could that be ſupplyed by the waters: for they ſhould be raiſed and heaped up higher, in the lighter, then in the heavier part: and therefore ſhould flow downe, till they had obtained an equall height on every ſide from the Center. Now if wee grant, that theſe waters ſupplying that equall ballance, are ſo ſhut in, that they cannot flow out: yet two inconveniences would follow; the one, that being ſubject to corruption, they would infect thoſe things next unto them, and ſhould not be ſo uſefull to humane things as they ought: the other, that the earth having drawne their ſubſtance into her bowels, or being by little and little extracted by exhalation, they ſhould abandon their place, and take away that equality that retaineth the whole, that it cannot budge one way nor other. Which if any one will maintaine that the waters may be there conſerved, wee will anſwer, that in vaine are imployed a great number of meanes (wherein there is more operative labour, and to the reſt unprofitable) to doe that which may bee done without the ſame: and indeed both more compendiouſly and more profitably. Wherefore then the ſentence ſtandeth faſt, that the Machine of the earth is in it ſelfe equally ballanced, without budgeing one way or other, and conſequently alſo the Sea, which is contained within the boſome of it. And alſo that the Sea is in continuall motion, leſt it ſhould be corrupted and infect the aire, and kill the fiſhes. Moreover, it waſheth the earth both within and without, that all things ſhould be cleane and wholeſome: all corruption being conſumed and diſſipated, by motion and attrition. The conſtitution of the weight of the Center, and of the world importeth all theſe things: which if they had beene knowne, and examined by the ancients, they had judged almoſt true, that which is of the ſituation and greatneſſe of the continent of the new Land, found out in our age: and of the Meridionall Continent, not yet diſcovered, ſituate under the Pole Antartick. For ſeeing that the Lands knowne to the ancients, are comprehended in 180. degrees of Longitude, that is to ſay, doe onely poſſeſſe the one halfe of the Sphere, it was neceſſary there ſhould be alſo as much Land in the other halfe. And ſeeing that Aſia, Europe and Africa, for the greater part, are ſituated beyond the Equinoctiall, towards the North; it was neceſſary as great a continent to remaine under the Pole Antartick, which ſhould bee equivalent in the other Lands, with the Meridionall parts of Aſia and new India, or America.

God (as ſaith Moſes) called the dry land EREZ ſeparated from the waters, and prepared for the life ſoliving creatures, that is to ſay the Earth; and the waters gathered together, MAIM; that is the Seas. But it is not to be thought, that ſo ſoone as this ſeparation was made, he gave theſe names, no more than before, the names of the day, of the night, and of the Heaven. For to whom ſhould hee have told them, when as man (whom it chiefely concerned to know theſe workes) was not yet created? Unleſſe any will mainetaine, that they were told to the Angels. But I holde for an aſſured truth, that here is inſinuated another, and a very greate myſtery: to wit, a teſtimony of the immenſe love, and moſt loving and moſt bountifull converſation of God with man; whom with a ſingular purpoſe and affectionate ſtudy he created. For I thinke that this manifeſtation of names, ſignified not that this preſent day it was, but after in a familiar conference with Adam. For when God brought the creatures to Adam that hee ſhould give them names, there is no doubt but hee had longer ſpeech with him, and treated with him amply of the Creation: naming the light, the day, the night, the Heaven, the Earth, the Sea, the Sunne, the Moone, and principall parts of the world: by meanes whereof, he might leave to his poſterity the true hiſtory of all this great worke: as alſo to be conſerved in ſome meaſure, after Adam; even to Moſes.

This word EREZ (that I may uſe the words of Auguſtine Eugebine) properly ſignifieth that which is trampled and troden upon; derived of the word RAZAZ: the letter Aleph added, according to the propriety of the Hebrew tongue, which demonſtrateth the counſell and intention of creating the earth. For it was created, to the end that the moſt excellent creatures, for the which all things were created, might tread and walke upon it. MAIM, which is as much to ſay, as reſounding, braying, tumultuating; commeth of the verbe HAMAH, which ſignifieth, to bray, cry, and make a noiſe. From this deductiõ therefore of the ſaid Auguſtine, it appeareth, that EREZ and MAIM, ſignifie ſuch an earth, and ſuch waters, which is now the earth that ſerveth as a pavement to terreſtriall creatures, and a ſtay to them which walke and reſt upon it; and the vaſt Sea, which being gathered together, by the exaggeration of the Rivers, hath a perpetuall fluxe and refluxe roaring and making a great noiſe. And truely ſeeing the Latine word Terra, is derived of tero, it anſwereth very properly to the word EREZ. Note this alſo, which the ſame Auguſtine admoniſheth, that the word THEHOM, is derived from the ſame verb HAMAH, and ſignifieth, the reſounding, and tumultuating Abiſſe, or deepe: therefore by the ſignification of the name, thou underſtandeſt that ſeparative winde, which in the ſeventh Chapter I have declared to have beene incontinent from the beginning in the Chaos: nor any other ſpirit but this blaſt, to be underſtood to have agitated the whole Maſſe; and therefore the diſtinction of the water from the earth, to have beene made partly in a naturall manner.

The eleventh Chapter.

Of the fourefolde degree and order of things created.

HItherto hath beene no other creation but of thoſe things which pertained to the generation of things neceſſary to the life of man; and might ſerve them for their habitations, to wit, the Elements, of which, or by the which, theſe things ought to bee engendred and ſuſtained. Common ſence divideth all things created into three claſſes, or rather degrees; into thoſe things which have a being; thoſe things which have life or faculty vegetative; and thoſe things which have ſence. Which diviſion well underſtood and conſidered, agreeth very elegantly to our ſubject, and aideth greatly our ſpeculations, and giveth underſtanding. In the firſt degree, it behooveth not to underſtand one naked eſſence, without all forme, quality and efficacy, ſuch as the Philoſophers dreamed the firſt matter to be: for I have ſhewed that God never created any ſuch thing, but it behooveth to underſtand the things, the which whatſoever they are in vertue or power, yet are they without all motion: that in whatſoever place they are, there they reſt, there hang, there by themſelves they remaine immooveable, neither doe aſſume to themſelves any augmentation, or, to ſpeake more plainely, which have not in themſelves force of encreaſing: but as nature firſt formed them, ſo they are, and remaine, not having in them any life. In the ſecond degree are all things which have in them the firſt degree of life, to wit, faculty vegetative, & vertue of encreaſing, and aſpire no higher unto life. In the third degree are thoſe things which (beſides vertue vegetative) have alſo ſenſitive, and move themſelves by their owne proper vertue, according to the cõdition of their ſence. Hitherto the degrees of the creation proceed from the firſt matter: and becauſe the vulgare opinion is, that the ſpirit of man (by which onely he differeth from brute beaſts) is not created of the firſt matter, but particularly and ſingularly of God: they doe put man himſelfe in the number of other living creatures, and comprehend him in the third degree of creatures.

But

But when I ſhall have ſhewed in his place, that even the Spirit of man is extracted out of the firſt matter, by intermediate degrees of perfection, it will appeare that we muſt conſtitute in him a fourth degree of Creatures. Therefore the firſt degree is of thoſe things which are. The ſecond, of thoſe things which are, and have a vegetative vertue; which is the firſt degree of life. The third, of thoſe things which are, which live, and have ſence: and by ſence moove voluntarilie. The fourth, of thoſe things which are, which live, have ſence, underſtand, and diſcourſe: or, to ſpeake more briefly: 1. which are. 2. which grow. 3. which have ſence. 4. which underſtand and diſcourſe: for the ſuperior degrees comprehend the inferiour. To theſe 4 degrees it behooveth a Philoſopher diligently to apply his minde, and aſcending, and proceeding by theſe degrees, to obſerve the order of the creation. Neither yet is it to be imagined, that all thoſe things which are of the firſt degree, were procreated before thoſe things which are of the ſecond: for it was not neceſſarie, that precious ſtones, and metals, ſhould be before herbes. For we muſt ſet downe this in the firſt place: that thoſe things were firſt to be created, which were firſt moſt requiſite for the uſe of man. Pearles and mettals, though they had beene created long after man, could bring, nor cauſe no diſcommoditie at all unto him. But thou wilt ſay unto me, it was neceſſarie theſe things to have beene created before the ſeventh day: thou ſayeſt well, but underſtand, is is to be judged, thoſe things then to have beene created, when God commanded the earth to engender them: for the earth is ordeyned to be the mother of theſe things, & remayneth mother, & in herſelfe, & of herſelfe, conceiveth ſeed, whereof ſhe produceth perpetually theſe things, & according to her fecunditie perfecteth them in their time. But the tarditie & ſlownes of the perfection of a new ſpecies, doth not hinder generation; becauſe it is the laſt, and doth not engender conſequently. For if one pearle ſhould procreat another pearle, & one mettall another like unto it ſelfe, then was it neceſſarie a ſpecificall and ſeminarie vertue, to have beene given to mettall, and pearle: which was the proper worke of the Creator, & not of the earth. So had it beene alſo neceſſary, that pearles, and mettals, ſhould have beene perfected, and received from God into them, a ſpecificall vertue before the ſeventh day. So that if we obſerve the order expreſſed in the generation of the world, it ſeemeth that it behooved to have beene made, the third day: for there ſhould have beene a like manner of engendring both in the one, and the other: and both the one, and the other, ſhould have beene numbred in the ſame degree: to wit, of things vegetative, and a like increaſed in growth, the one, as the other. Therefore ſeeing that the Seminarie facultie of theſe things conſiſteth in the earth; although ſome aſſiſtant, and (perhaps) formative vertue come from the celeſtials; it is to be thought that the creation of theſe things was then perfected, when the ſeminarie propertie, and generative vertue was given of the Lord to the earth, which nevertheles according to the naturall progreſſe of things it is credible was done the 3 day, when as the earth was ſufficientlie made ſollide, and the Stars now next had received their compleate forme. No inconvenience therefore doth from thence ariſe if mettals, and pearles, and all things which in like manner are engendred of the earth, have not a proper vertue of propagating their ſpecies: they are ſaid to have been procreated only certaine years after, when as the ſeminarie propertie, and ſpecificall vertue, which maketh the generation compleat, was in the beginning given to the earth.

Here now is preſented a double conſideration of generation, which muſt be prudently diſtinguiſhed, to the end that the juſt order of the creation, manifeſtlie repreſented in Geneſis, be not diſturbed: and that the reaſon of the order may be thorowly knowne. There is one propertie of the generation of the ſame ſpecies, which alwayes produceth his like: as a horſe produceth a horſe, a ſheepe a ſheepe &c. to the very end of the world, becauſe it is done of its proper ſubſtance, and by its proper vertue of engendring. Of the admirable myſterie whereof we will ſpeake in the chapter following. An other generatiõ there is, which engendreth not his like, but differing in ſpecies, according to the qualitie of the Spirits, of a divers kind which concurre together. So the earth engendreth gold, ſulphur, lead, and ſuch like things, unlike unto it ſelfe, and of an other ſpecies: the vertue whereof it hath in it ſelfe from the creation, and not after; nor doth acquire it any where els, but from the Worke-maſter the Creator.

You ſee then a double generation of ſpecies, of the which that which is made of the ſame ſpecies, requireth alſo the perfectiõ of the ſpecies with in ſixe dayes of the creation: whereby it may receive from the Creator this ſpecificall facultie of engendring, which neither the earth, nor the heaven, nor any ſpecies before created can give: it onely belongeth to the Creator, to communicate this vertue to the ſpecies that are created. And therefore although that the waters had produced the firſt ſpecies of fiſhes, & flying foules; yet he did not make the ſame ſpecificall vertue perpetuall, & proper to them all, but perfected the ſame vertue begun with the living Creatures in the proper matter of the ſame ſpecies, taken from the waters, & imprinted it, and gave it unto them, ſaying: increaſe, and multiply, and fill the waters of the Sea, and let foule multiply in the earth. But whatſoever ſpecies received not this benediction, they could not be multiplyed of themſelves, but have a certaine accidentarie generation otherwhere: to wit, of a certaine element, or elements, whereunto God hath imparted that vertue of generation, then no doubt when every of them, having obtained a perfect ſpecies, received alſo his proper nature, and his proper ſpirit accordingly, as alſo he communicated this ſame vertue to perfect living creatures. And therefore ſeeing that the ſpecificall vertue of theſe ſpecies was imprinted in the elements already perfect, it was not neceſſarie to produce ſtones, pearles, mettals, and ſuch like to be conſpicuous before the ſeventh day; for their creation was already effected in the elements. Neither had they need of any further creation; their generation depending now naturally from the elements.

Now theſe degrees of things being conſtituted, let thoſe who are ſtudious of the further ſecrets of Philoſophy take diligent heed, which of theſe are moſt noble; and by what order, by what alſo, and how many meanes they are brought to the perfection of their ſpecies. But becauſe the underſtanding, and reaſon, adde ſomething above ſence, and motive vertue; and this hath more than the vegetative: and againe, that this is the firſt acceſſe of thoſe things which are unto life, it is eaſie to be underſtood, that by the ſame order that theſe degrees are numbred, they are alſo formed and enobled by nature. We have an example of all in the generation of man, in whom the ſpecificall vertue imprinted by the Parents in the ſeed, and therein produced, firſt formeth the body, and the entrals, which all the while till the heart bee formed, consist in the first degree: but so soone as the heart is formed, receive a vegetative nature, and begin to attract to themselves nourishment, and to grow: but in the end almost of sixe weekes, having obtained the third degree, they moove: and then truely, can a man discover no appearance at all of understanding, or of a reasonable soule in the fruit, and yet of necessity the substance of the reasonable soule is in the fruit, even from the first conception: if we grant that the soule was engendred of the Parents; but then as yet it is formed and finished last, as being the most noble. Al generatiõ then proceedeth from the ignoble to the more noble, and is perfected by the soveraine degree of every species, nor doth ascend further. For nothing is able to overpasse the bond of his species; because further forces of extending it selfe, are not given to it, but the benediction of generation is terminated in the same species. So those things which onely are, although in nobility they excell others in their kinde, yet they cannot attaine to the power of growing. Of those things which have the faculty vegetative, some are more noble than others: but they cannot attaine unto sence: and living creatures, whose marke in their species is sence and motion, doe not attaine unto understanding: for this surpasseth all things, and representeth the image of God.

The same order now (Reader) thou wilt observe to have beene kept in the creation of things. for hitherto God hath created the things which are: hereafter (the more noble substance being taken from these) he will create those things wh^ch are of the second degree, to wit, herbs and plants; that done, living creatures which are of the third degree, and among them, first those things which come from the waters, & more ignoble, after the terrestrials, which being endowed with a more subtile, dry, and warmer spirit, are also more subtile in sence, and approach something to the understanding. Finally man himselfe, who should have the dominion over the other in reason and wisedome. So the more noble are last after all created, because they have need of a more noble matter, and more purified and digested, and therefore they are later perfected: nature, which was first created, alwayes working according to the spirit, and manner given him from Gods Idea. But the Idea of God is the worke of his wisedome, the will of order, vertue, and proportion of things to be created, and sustained. In summe, if any man will search more diligently the order of things, and consider the communion and difference of species, he will perceive that the creation of things (beginning from the more base and ignoble species) so almost ascended upward, as a tree hath at the first but onely a trunke, wherein all things which are from the roote to the very top, are but one and the same thing by the communion of species, every one of the parts in the meane time having their veines therein: but when they begin to have any difference among themselves, the first division of the trunk is made into branches, after (every branch remaining a certaine time untill their veines divide themselves one from another) is made the second division, and so consequently untill wee come to the last branches and fruits. So the Chaos is the onely trunk of all the species to bee created, having his roote and beginning in the universall Idea, Creatrix, which is in the minde and divine will. In this trunke all things as yet are one, lying hid and communicating in the seminarie propriety of the Chaos. Furthermore, as this universall Idea, creatrix of things, by the division of the species into their determinate number and forme, ascending by little and little, doth divide it selfe, so of one simple species of Chaos without forme, the differences of species by little and little do arise, for so long the substances of all the destinated species remaine one, untill they tend perfectly to the difference in that wherein they communicate. Whence those things which as yet communicate, being contained in one branch, do cohere and stick together, untill they come into the way of their proper species, every one following their owne high, and extreame, and perfect species. So there being of all the parts, as through all the branches of the creature, made all excoction, distillation, purification, extenuation, sublimation, or after what manner else soever this last act, tending to the extreame end of operation, is to be named, at length we come to all the species conceived. But that is to be remembred, that those things which are of a more high degree are more slowly perfected. Seeing they ascend by intermediate degrees. So a living creature seeing he ascendeth by three degrees, to wit, by being, and by a vegetative species, even unto sence and motion, it is necessarie that that which is vegetative be perfected in one degree first. For so it is to be thought of that universall Idea which is in God, that it doth so make its impressions in the creation, that beginning from the trunck by an inconfused order, and right way, it doth by little and little go by the lesse noble, and more noble species, to the production of the highest, and perfecteth together those that are of the same degree: after those which are of a sequent and more noble ranke, as we see in the creation of plants, living creatures, and of man.

Now the species which consist in one degree, or are of one kinde, as in the kinde of plants, the willow, and the oake, are distinguished by certaine degrees, or by a kinde of excellence, & noblenes one from another, wherefore there is something more perfect, or more noble, and later effected in the one than in the other, thence it commeth that the oake groweth and increaseth more slowly than the willow, yet nevertheles the creation of the oake was finished the third day, as well as that of the willow. For (as we shall anone see) the specificall vertue is brought forth together with the bud of the herbe, and imprinted in the plant by the Idea formatrix. For the creation of things which are like to engender like to themselves, is finished by these two; to wit, by the same species, and by the specificall vertue, that is to say of propagating the species: the increasements which follow after, and the generation of fruits, are naturall works of the same species, which follow that vertue and the creation. But here it behooveth to remember what we have said in the 7 Chapter, which is, that so soone as the matter of any thing was prepared, there withall together the species of things to be created was brought forth; although the thing it selfe was of later growth, as the Sunne begun to be created the first day, when God created the light, and yet was not perfected till the fourth day. So the waters being prepared, the species of fishes begun to be created the third day, and the earth being dryed up, the species of terrestriall living creatures: and yet these things were not perfected till the fifth day. So the third day the species also of herbes and of plants began to be created, and yet were not finished till the fourth day. For Moses onely noteth the time when the works were finished. The species therefore of plants, and of terrestriall living creatures, were brought forth when the earth, the mother of them, was perfectly finished: but the things of a more ſolid ſubſtance were finiſhed later, as the oake the fourth day did grow later than the herbes. Theſe things concerning the degrees and order of things to be created conſidered, come we now to the creation of plants, which is the other part of the worke of this third day.

The twelfth Chapter.

Of the Creation of Herbes, Trees, and of the Spirituall ſubſtance.

AFter the ſeparation of the waters (which are under the heaven) from the earth, during the blaſt, as yet followed the other worke of this day, the creation of herbes, whereof now we will treat. For as much as man, and the other living Creatures, were to live of herbes and fruits, the creation paſſeth to the ſecond degree of things, which is the firſt of life, and becauſe they were to ſerve for their nouriſhment, God found out a meanes whereby they ſhould be multiplied by ſeed, and ſpecificall vertue, or propagative, which God bleſſed that they might ſuffice unto all living Creatures. For although the benediction of multiplication be not added, a man may well underſtand that it was done, becauſe he hath annexed it to other Creatures & v.29.30. of the ſecond of Gen. he giveth theſe things there for foode to all living Creatures. But the benediction, which is expreſſed of fiſhes and of fowles, is verſ.22. increaſe, and multiply, & replenish the waters and the earth: and to men he ſaith, verſ.28. increaſe, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and ſubdue it, and have dominion over the fish of the Sea, and over the fowle of the ayre, and over every living thing that mooveth vpon the earth. The earth then being prepared for generation, God ſaid, let the earth put forth her bud, every herb producing ſeed according to its kinde, that is to ſay, from whence may grow the herb of the ſame ſpecies, and every Tree bearing fruit, yeelding fruit according to its kinde, whoſe ſeed is in it ſelfe vpon the earth: that is, let it bring forth fruit wherein the ſeed of the ſame ſpecies may ſpring in the meane time, while the tree groweth upon the earth, out of which another tree of the ſame ſpecies may ſpring. When he ſaith, let the earth put forth her bud, it is certaine that the herbe, and the tree, had not their perfection in the ſame inſtant that he ſaid it, but both the one, and the other by the ſpecificall Idea, and benediction of God, from one point, and atome (as it were) of the earth; no otherwiſe than from a ſeed (which being but ſmall, hath yet all its vertue in the leaſt part, & bud thereof, which is contained and lyeth hid in one of the ends) commeth to burgen, bud and by little and little to grow into a great plant, or tree.

Now that we are come to the firſt degree of life, it is neceſſarie firſt to ſearch diligently, & proſecute the nature and condition of the Spirituall ſubſtance, from whence life taketh its beginning. As I have ſaid from the 6 Chapter, that all things are come by evaporation, and exhalation from the Chaos: afterwards the elements being ſo prepared for generation, and the celeſtiall things for influence, the omnipotent Creator tooke the atomes of vertues, or the leaſt particles of the water and the earth, whereinto he put a ſpecificall vertue according to the Ideas, and according to the number of the Ideas comprehended in his wiſdom, and withall added the benediction of engendring their like, to the end they might multiply the ſame ſpecies, being perpetually conſerved. But the Spirituall ſubſtance is the more noble part of every element, or generative bodie, which attracting nouriſhment, converting it into its nature, and protruding it forward to the increaſe and groweth of the bodie; hath vertue from the benediction, and from nature. So the earth, the water, the aire, and other bodies, exhale from themſelves a Spirituall ſubſtance, by meanes of the heat; which by the ſpecificall ſubſtance of the ſeed is converted into the ſame nature, and ſpecies, and affoordeth increaſe & growth, or motion, or ſence, according to the condition of the ſpecies. The like ſubſtance, when it is engendred in the bowels of the earth, & produceth its ſpecies within the earth, doth not bring any increaſe at all to the ſpecies, but is coagulated, curded, and bound together into it indiſſoluble, not poſſible to be disjoynted from it: neither doth exhale otherwhere, diffuſing its odour or vertue, but onely by contraction, and operation of the permanent qualitie. So gold is coagulated and joyned together in the qualitie of the Spirituall ſubſtance, and receiveth not increaſe, but rather is contracted by the ſulphureous heat, that it may be made more ponderous, and weightie. Stones are in like manner engendered. Herbes, and trees, ſeeing they are to grow & increaſe, have a more ſoft nouriſhment, apt to extend: therefore alſo they exhale and yeeld odours and vertues, and at length by little and little are conſumed, being come by growth to maturitie. This Spirituall ſubſtance is that alone which preſerveth its ſpecies, (I meane that which is in the plant, not that which is without) for this being firſt attracted, and drawne from that, is changed into the ſpecies, and afterwards doth nouriſh it, and conſerve it: and doth nouriſh it ſo long time, as there is nothing which corrupteth the ſame ſpecies, conſerving alwayes the ſame characteriſmes, and markes of leaves, of flowers, branches and fruits; the odour, ſavour, colour, and other accidents, ſo firmlie, that if but a little ſlip, or bud, be graffed into an other plant, there alſo will it follow its owne naturall propertie, changing all its nouriſhment into its own ſpecies. But all the nouriſhment ſo attracted, is changed into the forme of that part whereunto it laſt commeth. So the juice of a tree being come to the fruit, is changed into the ſpecies of fruit; being come to the leafe, is changed into the ſpecies of the leafe. And the nouriſhment of the living Creature, when at laſt it is attracted to the liver, is converted into the liver: when to the roots of any muſcle, it paſſeth into its ſubſtance and ſo of all others: and every member draweth unto it ſelfe that which is moſt fit for it ſelfe. But ſome things which are unfit to nouriſh the bodie, nature expelleth, ſome into haire, ſome into nayles, ſome into ſcabs, others otherwiſe: or quite out of the bodie. Some things which by a hidden vertue are appropriated to ſome part of the entralls, do ſtrive thitherwards, by a naturall propertie. Therefore this ſeminarie and ſpirituall ſubſtance, is a thing very divine, wherein there is from the creation all ſpecificall facultie, and vertue formatrix, wherin is ſtirred up by meanes of the heart all motion of the bodie neceſſarie to the living Creature. But by it is firſt formed the heart in the very middle of the living Creature, that the vertue thereof might be ſtill ready to aſſiſt all the extreame parts of it: and doth affoord like ſeed for generation, that the continuation of the ſame ſpecies may remaine to the end of all things. But we muſt know and conſider this, that the ſame ſpecies doth not come by influence from the Stars, but from that into the which God first put it, and whereunto he gave the benediction of generation: the Starres surely are a help, but the originall and root of all species, is in these inferiour things. But seeing that this world is (as it were) one body, having harmonious parts among themselves, and conspiring together in one, as also all living creatures, to the image whereof, and of God, man (as a little world) was created, bearing the image of God, and having like oeconomy of parts; it is credible that the world hath also the Sunne for its heart, as the beginning of all life, and that it had its being from the beginning, when the light was created, and that it performeth the same office in the world, within the concavity of the Firmament; that the heart doth in man, cherrishing all things above, and below, by its heat and light, and that therefore it hath beene placed in the middle of the world, or a little higher, even as the heart in man.

The thirteenth Chapter.

Of the tree of life.

God hath given such a seminary species throughout the whole world, where the temperature of the element was proper thereunto, that the vertue of that species was never any where wanting; for the plants do not change their place, nor walke upon the earth like living creatures, but abiding in their place, do there cast mature seed: neither was care of transplanting them imposed to man, as to whom all things necessary presented themselves voluntary, and of their owne accord. And seeing that the wisedome of God hath created nothing in vaine, and without cause, which is not profitable to some necessity of life; it is most certaine that there is not any disease, nor defect of nature, for the which he hath not provided a propitious remedy. Wherefore he hath caused to bud and spring so many species of plants, as was needfull for the conservation and sustentation of the life of man, and of all living creatures, and placed the tree of life in the midst of Paradise, to the end that man by the use thereof, might preserve his life in health, untill, being made more divine by the exercise and obedience of the commandement, he might be translated into heaven. So also the brute living creatures, seeke succour for their nature: the Swallow the Chelidony, the cat the neppe, named the herbe, from the cat, the toad the plantine, and sage, the dog grasse, called dogs tooth, the torteise marjoram, the weesell rue, the storke origan, the partridge parjetary, called also perdicium, the hawke hierac, the dove vervine, the pye also being sick, is said to carry bay leaves into her nest, that she may chace away her sickneese by them. So we beleeve that the harts have shewed, that the herbe dictamum healeth them being wounded with arrowes, the weapon ejected by eating thereof. We suppose that the hindes have demonstrated the herbe called Saselo, and that the serpents have made fenell in high estimation: for we know that by the tasting and eating thereof, they have stripped themselves of olde age, and by the juice thereof, regained the sharpeneese of their sight. Which also a man might shew more at large, seeing that beasts themselves instructed by nature, have shewed to mortall men the vertues of many herbs knowne unto them. But he hath created in every region such species of plants, as are most agreeable in temperature to men, and living creatures there borne, which by experiments is often prooved; so that by the only abundance of plants which one seeth spring, a man may almost perceive to what popular (that is to say, ordinary diseases) every region is subject. So among the Danes, Frises, Hollanders, who are much subject to that disease, cõmonly called Scorbut, there is in abundance the herbe called Cochlearia, as a proper medicine to that disease. So in marish places. So the Tamarisk acklowledgeth the native soyle: the inhabitants are often exposed and subject to the indispositions of the spleene, as their paile colour sheweth, which is discovered in their swelling skin, and puffed up hypochondries. In like manner is observed, that in those quarters where wormewood groweth in great abundance about hedges, in court yards, the inhabitants are ordinarily afflicted with the obstructions of their entrals, weakeneese of the stomack, and suffusion of the gall, that if the passages of the entrals be not opened by the use of the said herbe, and strengthned, and made firme by the evacuation of the gall, they come first to have the jaundise, and after, by little and little, engender water betweene the skin and the flesh. And although that some things are contrary and venimous to some, yet being used in their kinde, they are healthfull; so of the very worst poyson is made the noble treacle, and there is nothing created so averse from the nature of man, the use whereof is not some way or other profitable. Now let us treat of the seed. God created the herbes and the plants of the atomes of the earth, by the worke of the wisedome, Idea, and benediction of God: but so he created them, as they now spring of seed; for there is the same operation of the first generation, as of the second, seeing the same species is, and remaineth.

As then out of the seed groweth the plant, so it is produced of the atome of the earth, formed by the Idea into a certaine species: and on the contrary. And from the seede a little young bud, contained in one of the ends thereof: in what part it maketh the point of the seed, it attracteth the humor of the earth, or of the water, and formeth one little roote or moe, according to the property of the species, and the nourishment being attracted by them into the other end of the seed, produceth the trunke, and thereafter the branches and leaves, that adhere unto it. But the specificall vertue is in this little young bud, which changeth into its nature and species, all the nourishment that it attracteth. The same reason is in the the terrestriall atome, formed by the Idea, for it produceth its bud no otherwise than doth the seed. Furthermore, as this nourishment attracted, is carried higher, so is it more and more changed into the forme of that which springeth from it, into branches divided from the trunck, into leaves, into flowers, and into fruits. The most perfect of all is the fruit, wherein is perfectly accomplished the seed which is given for the multiplication of the species. And the higher things excited to encrease by the heat, do attract juice from the inferiours, but the roote not able to administer sufficient nourishment to the higher, taketh new attractive rootes: whereby it gathereth nourishment more copiously. Hence it followeth, that those plants which have more rootes, their higher parts have need of more nourishment, and their fruits are more moist, except the rootes be of greater use than their fruits: wherein the divine wisedome hath provided for the use of living creatures. So the herbs, the roots whereof are ordained to be eaten, attract more juice, and their rootes are more succulent, and more grosse: nature procuring increase principally to rootes, and not to herbes: and those that are more long, are ordinarily rily of a more dry and a more fat ſubſtance: as thoſe which ſeeke a more dry nouriſhment at the bottom. From the accidents and properties of rootes, many things may bee obſerved, which appertaine to the ſearch of nature, and of thoſe of herbes. But in herbs, the juice attracted is carried upward by the parts not yet changed: but in trees, by the barke, as being more ſpongious, till that (having ſtaied there a certaine ſpace of time) it bee changed from the nearer part, and that which is moſt noble & more purified, is then carried upward into flowers, into fruits, and for ſeed. Many ſpeculations will preſent themſelves here to one that will ſearch after them. Now that the juice attracted is ſo carried upward, as I have ſaid, the graffings of young ſciences in trees teacheth us ſufficiently; for in them the humour attracted is firſt communicated to the barke of the young ſciences, there ſtaying ſome ſpace of time, doth unite the barkes of the young ſciences to the barkes of the ſtemmes, and after conjoyneth wood to wood: but the ſpecies which is in the ſtemme, is changed into the ſpecies of the young ſcience, which is engraffed. So according to the commandement of God, the ſame ſpecies produceth alwayes the ſame things, whether from the ſeed, or from the young ſcience engraffed, and conſequently bringeth forth branches, leaves, fruits, and ſeed, according to the nature of the ſpecies. It is not unprofitable alſo to conſider, in how long time, and how long ſpace from the earth, the fruit and the ſeed come to their growth, and with what humours the plants are delighted about the roots, and what they avoid: and (if it be poſſible) after what manner the juice is changed through every degree, in the root, in the truncke, in the leaves, in the flowers, in the fruit, and in the ſeed: for ſo the nature of the ſpecies may be more exactly knowne. This at leaſtwiſe is acknowledged, that the nouriſhment of the plant, is much more noble in the fruit, than in the plant: but moſt noble in the ſeed, as that which is the end, and ſcope of the creation of all this ſpecies.

Now by thoſe things we have already ſaid, a man may gather, that divers herbs and trees have been created in divers regions, and experience teacheth, that there be ſome in America, or new India, which are found no where in this our continent, Aſia, Africa, and Europe; which have not beene in the uſe of men untill ſome travelled thither, which I ſuppoſe was after the time of Chriſt and his Apoſtles. In like manner there be there living creatures, which are not at all found in our cõtinent, w^ch^ without doubt have been there from the creation of the world. Whereupon I preſume that theſe Lands were not overwhelmed with the flood, when God would deſtroy mankinde, Gen. 6. unto v. 7. For no men at all were there, and therefore the living creatures there created, and there inhabiting, ought not to be deſtroyed, as man was to periſh whom it repented that he had created, ſeeing that in living creatures he found no cauſe wherefore they ought to bee deſtroyed. But in this our continent the living creatures ought to periſh; except ſome had been preſerved in the Arke, for they were not able to live in the waters.

When therefore God created here and there thorowout the world the vertues of the tree of life, by one and the ſame meanes he provided, both for the one and the other eſtate of man: for that of innocency, and the other of ſinne; and the vertue of the tree of life in paradiſe, or diſperſed thorowout the world, was not for naught. For the world comming to be repleniſhed with men, all ſhould have had acceſſe to the tree of life: but the herbs and the plants growing here and there, had been equevalent, and man had had a certaine choice, and the benediction had diverted all ſicknes. Seeing then that they were moſt wiſely created for the uſe and ſervice of man, as well in the ſuperiour, as in the inferiour world, what a faire harmony was there then? when the lower things did accord with the higheſt, and expected help from them; and the higheſt communicated their gifts to the loweſt, and all things ſerved man, untill he ſhould be tranſlated of God into his heavenly habitation. This correſpondencie, this beautie of ſtate had continued inviolable, if Adam had not ſinned, yet this ſame harmonie, if one conſider it more diligently, is as yet diſcovered in the traces of the firſt nature, for there is nothing ſo little which doth not ſerve to ſome thing, and which doth not depend of one more perfect: all things are for man.

Seeing therefore all things tend to their end and ſcope, and that ſcope (that is to ſay man) conſiſteth of divers parts, which yet keepe among themſelves a moſt agreable harmonie, as that wherein life conſiſteth: of thoſe ſome ſerve to the ſtomach, ſome to the liver, ſome to the heart, ſome to the blood, ſome to the reynes, &c. wherefore there are ſo many ſimples, or plants, as there be entrals in man, and affections of them. And ſeeing that every thing changeth into its ſpecies the nouriſhment that it attracteth, and that there are divers ſtations in mans bodie, and divers wayes to every extreame ſtation, by the which the nouriſhment paſſeth, as in the ventricle, the liver, the blood, the ſplene, &c. thoſe ſimples are ſtronger, or paſſe ſooner as frends by the middle ſtations, which carrie their verture entire even to the extreams, and there worke: and as for thoſe which can not be there changed by nature, either they are venimous, or noyſome to nature. Thoſe things which are changed in the firſt ſtations are frends to nature, or of ſmall vertue. Thoſe which of an entire vertue penetrate unto the extreame ſtations, being frends to nature, are they which are more appropriat to that member, or to that part of the entrals, & have certaine characters whereby they may be knowne, if a man take diligent heed. For we ſee that thoſe which reſemble nature, greatly communicate alſo in figure, as oynions, garlik, & ſuch like, have a forme of a ſmall ſcallion for their roote, and produce almoſt a like herbe upward, if their flowers differ in colour this commeth to paſſe by a certaine difference, and peculiar propertie that is in them.

So there are many herbs and trees which have dented leaves about like a ſawe, which for the ſame cauſe ſo bud, and therefore they have ſomething alyke in nature, wherein they do agree. Manie herbs alſo and plants have their leaves not dented about, but terminated equally; many that are dented, grow pointed, many round, as rue, many ſharp edged, hard, and pricking as the yewe tree. All ought diligently to be obſerved, for they are not ſuch by caſualty, but by nature, ſo producing them perpetually: wherefore ſeeing nature produceth nothing temerarie, raſhly, and the cauſe of the ſame figure is created to be perpetually the ſame, it is neceſſarie that many things, by a certaine law of ſpecies, are like, & have a certaine communion of nature. Moreover ſeeing there is a conſpiration, and ſocietie both of celeſtiall, and terreſtriall things, tending to the ſame ſcope and end, which is man; and the celeſtiall are eternall, & the ſpecies alſo in this inferiour world are æternall, having alwayes the ſame generations in forme, and in figure, and depending every one of their proper celeſtiall cauſes; it is neceſſary, that taking heed to the characters of the plants, a man do gather, and obſerve many things which have reſpect to one and the ſame Star, and many things alſo participating of the ſame nature (among the phiſitians) in which things they have a mutuall correſpondence, as in figure, colour, taſt, and other qualities: for ſo, by the reſemblance, a man may learne to judge of the nature of things. For every nature hath its proper character, which it ever keepeth a like nature in the heavens communicating its vertue thereunto. Theſe things according to my ſpeculation (ſuch as it is) I was deſirous to admoniſh the reader, that he might advance, by his ſtudies, a thing above all others moſt profitable; wherein Salomon obtained much praiſe 3. King. 4. 33. For why may not a man ſearch by ſtudie and induſtrie the things which are before his eyes, and follow perpetually in figure, and in forme, the ſame law of nature? It is a laborious worke indeed: but labor overcometh all things.

I have heard the moſt learned Reinerus Solinander, Phiſitian to the moſt Illuſtrious Prince Juliers, diſcourſing moſt accuratly, and pertinently, touching the characters of herbes: who I would to God he would proceed to take ſome paynes in ſo neceſſarie a part of Philoſophie (if there be any able to doe it, it is he, being of that great dexteritie of judgement, in the ſearching out of the nature, and cauſes of things) we ſhould have in briefe the demonſtrations of the characters, & hidden appropriations of them to every part of the entrals.

Therefore while God doth conſtitute every where the vertues of the tree of life, the Pſalmiſt ſaith well Pſal. 111. 2. The works of the Lord are great, ſought out of all them that have pleaſure therein: he doth alwayes direct to his ſcope or end, the worke which he had preordayned: be it that Adam obeyed the firſt command, or not obeyed, and that in ſoveraine wiſdome, mercie, goodnes, and juſtice.

After that, according to my ſmall underſtanding, I have treated of the nature and varietie of plants, there is one ſoveraine miracle of nature very remarkable; which is that ſo many things which are in every ſpecies, as for example the greatnes, the forme, the figure, the odour, the taſte, the colour, the leaves, the ſinewes, the rootes, the barke, the vertue; and infinite things which are in one only plant, are hidden in one ſo ſmall graine of ſeed as I have ſaid. For all the vertue of the ſpecies is hid in one ſo ſmall a graine, when as that little graine hath nothing in it like unto all that, no not any appearance at all, but is wholly homogeneall, of the ſame kind, and appeareth alogether of the ſame nature. Wherefore methinkes I judge aright that the moſt ſimple Idea which in the beginning formed the ſeed, accompanieth as yet the ſpecies, & continueth the ſame worke untill generatiõ ceaſe. And this is that which Chriſt ſaith, John 5. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I alſo worke. Whence it appeareth, that although there be a Sabbath, or reſt, from the creation, yet is it not from the ſuſtentation of the Creatures, but that this worke endureth even to the end of all things: I doe not ſee what other thing can here be ſaid.

He that is curious of this ſpeculation, let him conſider chiefely what accidents are proper to every ſpecies, and ſearch out the cauſes of them if he can: in the firſt place, that he give good heed to the figure, and that he obſerve by what order the growth thereof is made from the roote unto the top: in what manner alſo it doth proceed, and is diſtributed by the barke, by the veines, and by the ſinewes, even to the compaſſe thereof, and ſo at length without doubt he ſhall finde out the proper character of all nature. The end of the third day.

Of the Fabrick of the world.

Of the creation of the Lights.

The fourth day beginneth.

ALthough the creation of lights was not perfectly finiſhed till the fourth day, yet they begun to be created the firſt day: that is evident, becauſe there is no other light that diſtinguiſheth the day from the night, than that of the Sun: as verſe 14. that property is aſcribed unto it: and now three dayes are already paſſed, wherefore, that light which diſtinguiſhed the firſt day from the night, without doubt was that light of the Sun to come, diſperſed as yet, but contracted into the Hemiſphere of Heaven, environing the whole Chaos, and which from the beginning turned upon the Poles of the world. So that the firſt day, the Heaven and the motion thereof, together with the light, begun to be created. For in the 4. verſe it is ſaid, that God ſeparated the light from the darkeneſſe; which could not make the day and the night, but by the collection of the light into one part of Heaven, and extending it in Paradiſe. Therefore, ſeeing the day followeth the night, the creation of the light fell to be in that moity, which was under the Horizon of Paradiſe, where becomming more ſtrong and more collected, by its motion towards the Weſt, aſcended from the Orientall part of Paradiſe above the Horizon thereof, and made the day. But the collection of the ſubſtance of the Sun, of the Moon and of the Stars, was not perfectly finiſhed till the fourth day: for Moſes deſcribeth the time when the workes were fully finiſhed, which dependeth, and is defined from the perpetuall will of God. Yet the Sun (which I have ſaid before, Chapter the twelft, to be the heart of the world, even as the heart is in living creatures) ought to have been created before all things: therefore he begun with the firſt creation of the light. But the Sun having received a moſt cleare and lucide ſubſtance, obtained the dominion and rule of the day; the Moon of the night, as not illuminating the night by its owne light, but by that of the Sun: yet it hath alſo its proper light, but very little; yea in the whole ecclipſe thereof when the aire is cleare, yet appeareth the circle of it, but the light very ſmall. But the Stars and conſtellations, ſeeme to have a ſtronger light, but far inferiour to that of the Sun.

That is to be obſerved which he ſaith, that the lights were placed in the Firmament of Heaven: and verſe 8. he calleth the Firmament, Heaven: whence a man may gather, that the Chaos was created much leſſe than the world now is, and from APHAR, and (as it were) a ſlimy Abiſſe of the Chaos, the matter being educted and extenuated, was elevated upward, and by little and little, as it departed further from the Center, being made more and more ſubtile and noble, as it extended it ſelfe, begirded and compaſſed the more groſſe Elements. And ſo the Empyreall Heaven was made the moſt ſubtile and noble, as being the throne of God, and the habitation of the bleſſed. Under that the Primum mobile, the firſt mooveable, a Heaven a little more groſſe, and leſſe noble. Under that the other Heavens and Planets, which by how much neater they are to the earth, by ſo much they are of a more groſſe and leſſe noble ſubſtance, leſſe extended. So that the Heaven of the Moone is the moſt groſſe, and next in condition to the Elements. This expanſion or extending, maketh the ſuperiour things lighter, and the ſeparation of them from thoſe that are more groſſe, maketh them more noble. Moreover, the luminous matter which was prepared for the ſubſtance of the Stars and lights, was not extended, but contracted, that they might ſhine more ſtrongly, and become more conſpicuous. So it commeth that the Stars are of a thicker ſubſtance than the reſt of the Heaven, yet equally light, becauſe it is fiery, and alſo thicker, that the light might bee the more ſtrong and powerfull; and the reflection of the beames caſt from the other Stars, which doth illuminate the night: eſpecially that which is reflected from the moone; but that light which is directed from the Sun, doth divide the day from the night.

Beſides theſe offices of the two lights, it is added, that they may be for ſignes, and for ſeaſons, and for dayes, and for yeares. Here the Aſtronomers, by ſignes underſtand certaine aſpects of the Stars, whereby things to come are betokened: but they erre greatly, for that wherefore theſe lights were created, is of far greater moment than the divers divinations of the Aſtrologers, to wit; that men, whom God had lodged in this his edifice, might learne to know the omnipotency and goodneſſe of their Creator: which David ſheweth very clearely, Pſal. 19. 1. The Heavens declare the glory of God, and the Firmament sheweth his handy worke. And S. Paul, Rom. 1. 19. That which may be knowne of God is manifeſt in them, for God hath shewed it unto them: for the inviſible things of him, from the Creation of the World are clearely ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternall power and God-head. Theſe two lights therefore are for this cauſe chiefly ſet in Heaven, that by theſe works of God, the omnipotency majeſty, and Divinitie of the Creator, might be made knowne unto men, and not to the intent they ſhould ſerve for the vanity of Aſtrologers. Moreover, they are given for the deſignation of times, when they are to bee changed. So they will demonſtrate the end of times, and judgement of the world, when they ſhall be obſcured, and diſſolved. So at the time of the paſſion of Chriſt, when the time of the Law was to be changed, Dioniſius the Aareopagite ſaw the admirable ecclipſe of the Sun. And Ioſhua perceived the admirable hand of God by the Sun, Ioſh. 10. 13. They are alſo ſet to define the dayes and the yeares. The Stars alſo, which by night adorne the Heaven above, doe alſo illuminate the earth below; and by their poſition ſhew the annuall circuit of the Sunne. The end of the fourth day.

The fifteenth Chapter.

Of the Fabrick of the world.

Of the creation of fish and fowle.

The fifth day beginneth.

THe ſecond degree of things having beene created, now is handled the third, concerning things which are, which have vegetation and motion: and firſt of thoſe which come from the waters, which are of a leſſe ſollid ſubſtance, doe more eaſily encreaſe, and are not ſo long lived, which are divided into many ſpecies, and every one of them engender among themſelves the ſeed of their ſpecies, from the which ſpecies comming to maturity; and diſperſed, the ſame ſpecies groweth: but the individuals of every ſpecies, have alwayes the ſame characters or markes. So that there is alwayes the ſame number and figure of the bones, the ſame colour, the ſame forme of body and of other members, the ſame force, nature and ſavour, as alſo in herbs and in plants, but divers ſpecies have alſo divers impreſſions of characters, differing in figure, or ſome accident: of which difference, if thou canſt gather the cauſe, thou mayeſt contemplate more nearely the proper nature of every ſpecies. For the proper nature of every ſpecies maketh different impreſſions of characters, and this doth follow the other, as from the effect a man may gather the cauſe, and from the cauſe, the nature. In the contemplation of foules, the ſame things offer themſelves to be conſidered. But becauſe that the ſubſtance of foules is more ſollid, and conſequently, longer-lived, therefore alſo the workemanſhip of them was later finiſhed this day: although they begun to be formed together, when the waters were gathered together into the Seas. For the matter of every thing being prepared, incontinent the Creation proceeded, and ceaſed not till all things were fully finiſhed, and the Sabbath, or reſt from all the worke of the Creation was come. For there is no cauſe wherefore, the matter being once prepared, the creation of things ſhould be ſuſpended. God created many things as well as one, and the naturall order of creating things, is elegantly obſerved. The Stars alſo, which ſerved more nearely unto life, were now alſo the precedent fourth day perfectly finiſhed, that they might the more powerfully conferre their aid, than when the herbes were created. So the nature of things created, ſo ſoone as it was prepared, began to exerciſe its office, and all things cooperating together, the Fabrick of the world went forward. O admirable wiſedome, which ſufficed for the creating of the order, the nature, the ornament, the perfection, and the vertues of ſo many moſt different things; and all without ſtudy or reaſoning! for hee ſpake the word, and they were made. It ſhall bee good here to make an anatomy of every one of the ſpecies, that it may be knowne in what things the impreſſions of the characters of every one are different, and in what manner, and by how many ſtations the nouriſhment is changed into the ſpecies, in what ſtation the blood is created in fiſhes. Thou ſhalt find alſo in fiſhes, by the admirable providence of God, a little bladder full of aire incloſed in it, which taketh increaſe together with the fiſh, whoſe office is to ſuſtaine it pendant, in what part of the water ſoever it bee, leſt by the weight of the body it ſinke to the bottome. Thou ſhalt finde alſo in females many egs, which being broken againſt the rocks, or otherwiſe by the vertue of nature forced out, come to multiply their ſpecies, and even as the ſeed of the plant, being caſt beyond its mother (ſeeing it hath a ſpecificall vertue in it ſelfe) produceth the ſame ſpecies in its element: be it in the earth, or in the water. So alſo theſe egs of fiſhes being caſt into the water, there receive life, and ſhew the ſame ſpecies, and the ſame character of their mother. Neither ſhall it be unprofitable alſo to rip up the ſeverall ſpecies of birds, and to conſider their interiour parts, and the functions of every one of them, that the cauſes of the impreſſions of the characters, and the originall of their proper nature may more rightly be knowne. In the which are procreated egs one at a time, and are excluded, having for their coverture a ſhell ſomewhat hard, leſt the ſpecificall vertue ſhould more eaſily come to exhale: the which alſo, being ſe-parated from their mother, keepe their ſpecificall vertue, and being hatched by the heate of the mother, or alſo by ſtoves, as is uſed in Egypt for the ſpace of ſixe moneths, or a moneth, produce birds of the ſame ſpecies. Moreover they are conceived by the copulation of the male & female, as other living Creatures. But here heed is to be taken principally to the difference of fiſh, and of foules, that though they were perfectly finiſhed in one and the ſame day, yet doe they not conſiſt of the ſame matter: but foules, becauſe they reſemble more terreſtiall living Creatures, as is manifeſt by the blood, and by the whole conſtitution of their bodie; they have more terreſtriall ſubſtance than fiſhes, that they ſeeme to come of muddie water, and fiſhes of more pure water. Foules therefore are of a middle ranck betweene terreſtriall living Creatures, and fiſhes; nearer to the nature of terreſtriall living Creatures, than of fiſhes: and therefore later this day finiſhed. But there is one thing moſt worthie to be obſerved in all living Creatures, that is, that they doe imitate in ſome ſorte the ſhape of man; whole nature (as it were) tending to the forming of man, and not having its entire perfection but in man, for although they have a longer head, they are furniſhed with all inſtruments in ſome ſorte alike, for ſence, and motion; the bones of the head are alike, their back-bone anſwereth in ſome ſort to the back-bone of a man, and their ribbes to his ribbes, and all the members are formed according to the nature, and operation of every one. The end of the fifth day.

The ſixteenth Chapter.

Of the Fabrick of the world.

Of the creation of terreſtriall living Creatures.

The ſixt day beginneth.

WEe have ſeene two ſortes of the third degree of things created, Fiſhes and Foules; now followeth the third kinde, terreſtriall living Creatures, which, how much the later they were created, ſo much the liker are they unto man, both in ſenſe and motion: but in reaſon man ſurpaſſeth them all, they being deſtitute hereof. But of terreſtriall living Creatures ſome are more like man then others, as they write of the Elephant, that it is a docible beaſt, and commeth neare to man in underſtanding. What ſhall wee ſay of the Ape, which ſporting, imitateth mans actions? is angrie, laugheth, applaudeth, ſeriouſly ſmelleth, warily beholdeth a thing, as deliberating, whether it be good to eate; craks nutts with her teeth, like a man, and while ſhe is buſie about her owne worke, lookes upon the by ſtanders what they doe: ſhe hath head, feete, and hands very like thoſe of man, and in all things, is that, amongſt living Creatures, which commeth neareſt the characters, and nature of man. For this cauſe it were not amiſſe diligently to conſider the anatomie of this Creature, and to examine how much, and in what, the interiour diſpoſition thereof differeth from that of man; that the animall vertues may be knowne by the inward impreſſions. For I thinke that thoſe depend upon theſe, or being after a ſpeciall manner ingrafted by nature, are by impreſſion of the character, as by a fit inſtrument, ſtirred up unto action, which yet ſeemeth ambiguous and doubtfull. For it appeareth that every thing hath in it ſelfe a certaine principle of its owne nature, which dieth with it, ſo that the cauſe of the nature of every thing is created together with it, and is not from elſewhere. But wee muſt anatomize every ſpecies, that the inward difference of all living Creatures among themſelves, may be perceived, and the difference of the animall vertues may appeare, from the diverſitie of the impreſſions of their characters, ſo ſhall you finde out, for what reaſons, the vertues animall are more excellent in foules, than in fiſhes, in beaſtes than in foules, in men than in beaſtes, and underſtand a moſt excellent order, from things leſſe ſolid, to things more ſolid; from the leſſe perfect, to the more perfect, from the leſſe lively, to the more lively; from things temporall, to thoſe eternall.

All living Creatures are nouriſhed of ſuch things as the earth bringeth forth, every one chooſing naturally what beſt agreeth with his owne nature, and this is profitable to be known. For although the nature of every one changeth his nouriſhment into his ſpecies, yet is there ſome vertue in herbes, and fruites, which turneth and altereth the ſaid aliment into their owne nature, eſpecially where there is affinitie of natures, and eaſie digeſtion, yea they can alſo change venime and corrupt it; but by the force of a contrarie nature. Birdes alſo feede on fiſhes, as being in kinde nearer them, and every thing delighteth in that which comes nearer the nature thereof, except that which is of the ſame ſpecies, which every living Creature loveth, man onely excepted, who hath forgot his originall. Venemous beaſts, beſides their nature good for ſomething, have this commoditie, that they every where ſuck up the venime, & are nouriſhed with it, but other beaſtes devoure them without harme, ſo well hath nature provided for the ſafetie of living Creatures. But here remaineth one queſtion to be anſwered: whether that the ſame nature, and condition of living Creatures, which now is, had beene the ſame, in caſe man had not ſinned? without doubt they ſhould have died, their life being worne out, & ſhould have beene foode one for another, otherwiſe the world could not have contained their multiplication. And to what end ſhould they have beene immortall, when they were onely ordained for the ſervice of man? ſeeing ſuch an infinite encreaſe ſhould have beene for no uſe: They had reverenced man, undoubtedly, and beene obedient to him, for God, Gen. 1.28,29,30. made Adam Lord of all things under heaven. And Geneſ. 3.21. God made Adam and his wife coates of skinnes, which doubtleſſe were taken from bruite beaſtes, for God had before made an end of creating.

The ſeventeenth Chapter.

Of the Fabricke of the World.

Of the Creation of man, and the firſt and principall end of the Creation.

THe fourth degree of things created, and the moſt perfect is man, for whoſe uſe and ſervice all things were hitherto created, and as all thoſe things among themſelves have a kinde of order, & harmonie, for their mutuall aſſiſtance, ſo all theſe together have a certaine conformitie, and harmonie unto man, in nature, qualities, and operations, and therefore man is of the greekes called the little world But this conformitie, and harmonie, is ſo farre as concerneth the animall part of man.

Furthermore there is a thing farre more noble in man, that he exceedeth the dignity of all the Creatures, to wit, the reaſonable ſoule, according to which he was created after the Image and the ſimilitude of God. And becauſe man, according to his ſubſtance, is a rea-is a reaſonable creature, and received a bleſſing, that he ſhould encreaſe and multiply, by the generation of his ſpecies: there is no doubt but from that bleſſing, he hath alſo received power to beget a reaſonable ſoule, which is the chiefe part of the ſpecies. Which that it ſhould be new created in every man, is not agreeable, ſeeing God the ſeventh day ceaſed from all the workes of his creation, and then kept the Sabbath.

And there are yet in this inferiour world, the reliques of that matter, of which the celeſtiall and ſuperceleſtiall things were created; ſo that there is a naturall inclination and ſympathie, of the Superiour world, unto the Inferiour, and a reſpect and deſire of the Inferiour unto the Superiour. For from hence alſo dependeth the proclivity, and cooperation of things ſuperiour, unto the inferiour. The thing moſt noble, that is in the higher world, is the Empyreall Heaven, or thoſe ſuperceleſtiall waters, out of which I have ſhewed the Angels to be created. So that the reaſonable ſoule may be begot of the reliques there of, in this inferiour world: and why may it not, ſeeing gould which is incorruptible, is begot of the far more groſſe and ignoble matter of the earth? Therefore the eternall and immortall ſoule, may much rather be begot of the reliques of the ſuperceleſtiall waters, that it may be like unto Angels, and the bleſſing and commandement of God gave power to beget the ſoule of ſuch reliques, to propagate and multiply the ſpecies. Now ſee what gifts of the holy Ghoſt or God, are in this ſoule. Here are underſtanding, reaſon, judgement, memory, love of what is truly good, juſtice, joy in the holy Ghoſt, free election of will, and what elſe. For in theſe things he beareth the reſemblance of God and his image, in the immortall ſubſtance of the reaſonable ſoule. For man was created in this order and manner, firſt he formed the humane ſhape, of APHAR, or clay, in which undoubtedly thoſe bowels, which are firſt made in generation, began to be formed, as the heart, then the liver and thoſe things which depend immediately upon the heart. Which being formed, hee breathed into his face the breath of life. All living things draw breath thorow the mouth and noſtrils, whereby the heart is kindled with life and motion; ſo through the mouth and noſtrils he breathed ſpirit, which was without queſtion, of the reliques of the ſuperceleſtiall waters; or ſome part of them was firſt conceived in the maſſe or lump of the body, of which the reaſonable ſoule by the holy Ghoſt accompanying it, was at length formed: but firſt the animall life was produced by the common aire. For the reaſonable ſoule and the enliving animall, are not the ſame; ſeeing they have different offices the one from the other: and the animall ſoule going before, the rationall remaineth, and the animall ſoule is a certaine harmony and common operation of the interiour entrals, conſpiring to the life of the animall; as for the rationall, it is the image of the divine Eſſence. But that the Animals have obtained life, it commeth to paſſe undoubtedly by the Spirit of God working with the like blaſt of aire; although it be not ſaid ſo, for it is eaſily underſtood, that in like things God hath wrought after a like manner. The gifts, which the reaſonable ſoule brought with it, were neceſſary in man, if he ought to be the image of God; that he might contemplate the workes of God, and might acknowledge, adore and worſhip his Creator. For the knowledge of God was required unto the ſcope of the creation of man; for what bleſſednes had he had with God, without the knowledge of him? Seeing therefore he knew the chiefe power and goodneſſe of God, and that the contemplation and familiarity of God was pleaſant to him, God would try in him, whether he that was enriched by him with greateſt gifts, whereby he could obey God, would acknowledge and reverence God his Creator: for ſo bountifull a Father required voluntary, and willing obedience and love, whereby to be worſhipped, and condigne ſervice received from him. He gave him an eaſie command, that hee ſhould not eate of one tree; where there were ſo many full of beſt fruits, for ſight and taſte, that he ſhould onely abſtaine from that, and it is credible, that he obeyed God a while: for as many thinke, hee remained not in Paradiſe one hower, or ſome dayes or weekes.

It is likely rather that he remained ſome yeares in the obedience of God, as George Cedrenus thinketh, that being ſolidly taught the workes of God; by the helpe of the holy Ghoſt, and longer contemplation; he might declare them to his poſteritie. And ſeeing men then lived long, the true doctrine of God, by the tradition of a few (to wit three, Adam, Methuſalem, and Noah) came to Abraham, by whoſe holy covenant with God, it was eaſily preſerved in the poſteritie of Iacob even unto Moſes. But idolatrie too much prevailing, about the time of his birth, God would by the deſcription of the chiefe of his workes by Moſes, reduce men to the acknowledgement, and worſhip of one onely God. Here then is propounded to our contemplation, the generation of the world, which he deſcribed, partly by tradition, partly by the revelation of the holy Ghoſt; whereby wee may attaine, the true and perfect deſcription of the whole world which wee ſeeke for. He had without doubt frequent talke with God, wherein he was taught concerning the creation, the nature of things, Gods counſell, & other things, which were neceſſary for man to know. God brought to him the living Creatures, that he might behold them every one, and give them names according to their nature; which could not be done in a ſmall ſpace of time. Georg Cedrenus in the abridgement of hiſtories, ſaith, ſome ancients were of opiniõ, that Adam ſinned not, nor was caſt out of Paradiſe, untill the ſeventh yeare, and makes it probable by good reaſons.

The eighteenth Chapter.

Of the Fabricke of the World.

Of the fall of Adam.

IN the meane, whileſt Adam dwelt in Paradiſe, being made more familiar with God, perhaps not ſeriouſly conſidering Gods command, he lent his eares unto Sathan, and heard him long with patience, who, being become Gods enemy, becauſe by his juſt judgement, he was caſt out of Heaven, laid waite for man, perſwaded him that Gods commandement was given him for ſome other end, than he had heard from God, when nevertheleſſe he knew that God his Creator was true and juſt, and had not given his commandement in vaine, but that the ſerpent was a lyar, and juſtly throwne downe from Heaven. For it is not to be doubted, but that he had much converſation with God in Paradiſe, and divers diſcourſes whereby he was inſtructed concerning the Creation, and nature, and the end of all things. Yea he acknowledged the power of God, from ſo wiſe a Creation, and the right judgement given againſt the Serpent, that of right he ſhould not have given eare to the Serpent, and that it was folly for him ſo to doe: nevertheleſſe, in this he did not ſinne againſt God, becauſe God had not forbidden it. For it had made for the greater glory of God, if Adam had not ſinned: for then had man given a certaine teſtimony of himſelfe, that he was well created, as all things were very good. Gen.1.31. Hee could have interrupted the Serpents ſpeech, and rejected him, and hee had not ſinned. It was the beginning of ſinne, but it was not ſinne, that he gave eare to Sathan, for God had not forbidden this, and as yet he had power to contradict him: but his longer patience and familiarity cauſed conſent, and he forthwith ſinned by tranſgreſſing the commandement, wherewith the holy Ghoſt offended, left him, and ſpoyled him of his gifts, which he had received in the creation, and were preſerved in him by the holy Ghoſt, ſo long as he did not ſinne, God conſidering the event, but not approving it, becauſe he had forbidden it, & Adam ſo making experiment of his conſtancie. Of this lapſe Eccleſiaſticus writeth moſt plainely and moſt truely, chap.15.verſ.14. God created man from the beginning and left him in the hand of his counſell giving him theſe ordinances and commandements, if thou wilt thou ſhalt keepe the commandements, and teſtify thy good will. Hee hath ſet before thee fire & water, put forth, thy hand to which thou wilt. Life and death are offered unto man, good and evill which he pleaſeth ſhall be given unto him. But now, ſince God knew before that he would ſinne, why did he not create him ſuch a one, as could not fall? God did all things well and like a Father. It was his favour, that man was adorned with ſuch excellent giftes of minde, that he might eaſily obey ſo ſmall a commandement, and man of right ought to have beene thankfull for ſo great gifts by obeying his creatour. Hee could therefore as Eccleſiaſticus ſaith, have ſtoode if he would, but that he fell it was the fault of himſelfe, not of God predeſtinating or willing; for God had created all things very good, and Fatherly ordred them. So when he ſinned, he was deprived of the holy Ghoſt, which dwelt before familiarely with him, from whome he had life not mortall, if he had not ſinned, who had ſuſtained him in holy life by the grace and favour of God: being deſtitute therefore of the familiar preſence of the Spirit of Cod, he perceived nothing in himſelfe but carnall affections, whereby his minde being drawne away, (as is evident from Paul, Rom.7.15. and the verſ. following, & 24.) he alſo was made carnall, that is, addicted to the concupiſcence of the fleſh, as beeing conſtituted in the ſame ſubſiſtence, for he ſaith, there is another Law or neceſſitie in the fleſh, than in the Spirit or underſtanding, and that it draweth the Spirit captive into ſervitude. And that which is captive, is not in it owne power, but is ſubjected to the power of another. Hee ſheweth then that the Spirit in the beginning was not carnall, but became ſuch when it was made captive to the fleſh. It is altogether neceſſary to know, and obſerve this originall of originall ſinne, that the Spirit from the beginning was not created carnall, or frayle or unable to reſiſt evils, for this would argue the impotencie of the Creator, that he could not create man fit for that end which he had conceived, and would violate his authoritie. Now what calamities are acrewed unto mankinde from this ſinne, learne from that place of Saint Paul, chap.7. for if the fleſh could doe ſo much againſt the Spirit, adorned with ſo many abilities, and preſerved by the holy Ghoſt. What ſhall it not doe againſt the ſame Spirit made captive thereunto, and forſaken of the familiaritie of the holy Ghoſt. Heare what the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom.3.12. of all both Jewes and Gentiles. They have all gone out of the way, they are all become unprofitable, there is none that doth good, no not one. He ſpeakes of mans nature alone, but when it is in Chriſt, and man is helped of the holy Ghoſt, he is not ſuch, the naturall gifts of the minde, underſtanding, reaſon, judgement, memorie, and other giftes ſuffice not, if the Spirit be not preſent, the ſupporter and governour of theſe. But the concupiſcence of the fleſh is not onely a privation of righteouſnes, but a true inclination unto thoſe things which pleaſe the fleſh: and therefore ſince the minde is a follower of the ſame inclination, it is not onely deprived of righteouſnes, but hath poſitive evill, to wit, a perpetuall inclination to pleaſe the fleſh, from whence all ſinnes ariſe, and therefore that inclination is called originall ſinne. Now if it were onely a privation of righteouſnes, Paul had no occaſion to exclaime: wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the bodie of this death? Rom.7. For a regenerate man is freed from his minde. But in the regenerate, ſinne originall yet abideth, which is an argument, that originall ſinne is more then a privation, & an evill which cleaveth to Nature, and is propagated by generation. In ſinne (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) my mother conceived me. But God fore ſeeing that this ſinne would come upon man, ſaid, in that day, in which thou ſhalt eate of the tree of the knowledge of good & evill, thou ſhalt die the death; for this ſinne was to be expiated with the death of the bodie. Therefore it is a Law unto all once to die, to the end, that that which is come upon them beſides the creation, may be aboliſhed in thoſe, that are to bee ſaved. As for Paradiſe, where it was, and what were the Rivers thereof, I will ſhew in the ancient reformed Geographie. Man having beene created out of Paradiſe was tranſported into it.

Of the Fabrick of the World.

Of the ſecond and ſubordinate purpoſe of the Creator in creating Man.

BEcauſe God foreſaw that man would ſinne, leſt ſo wiſe a creation of all things, and the end whereunto it was ordained, ſhould bee in vaine, which Adam violated by ſinning, it pleaſed him therefore to repaire the fall of man, by a new benefit, ordaining a meanes, whereby being delivered, he might be reſtored to his former condition, and that the intent of the firſt creation might take effect, he promiſed his Sonne ſhould take fleſh upon him, who ſhould ſatisfie for the ſinne of Adam, with which all men were tainted from their birth, that he ſhould appeaſe God the Father, and obtaine the helpe of the holy Ghoſt againe, which being promiſed, and beleeved, they might by the ſame intention, as before, attain to eternall life. From this fore-knowledge, God uſing his wonderfull providence, ſo finiſhed the creation of all things, that in both eſtates, of obedience, and the fall, he preſerved for man the meanes to obtaine eternall life, ſo that nothing was made of God in vaine, onely the death of the fleſh remained, which was due to originall ſinne, untill that was taken away from man altogether, and he being wholly pure, as he was created, might come to God, according to the end wherefore he was created.

Moreover, becauſe all men were guilty of originall ſinne, as I ſhewed in the former Chapter, ſo that they could not by the gifts of nature, come unto Chriſt, God

God therefore ordained Repentance, Baptiſme, and Communion, the chiefe Sacraments, whereby man, before al the world, might yeeld himſelfe unto Chriſt, and by faith might approove and accept his ſacrifice for the ſinnes of man, whereby he might bee armed againſt the force of ſinne, bee delivered by this onely meanes, from the power of originall ſin, and obtaine the helpe of the holy Ghoſt againſt the force thereof. Yet the fight with ſinne remaineth, ſo long as we live, till it be abolifhed by the death of the fleſh, on which the originall thereof dependeth, and therefore the death of the fleſh was enjoyned of God, becauſe of the fall of Adam, that that ſinne which is beſides the creation, might bee rooted out: by meanes whereof, man is ſaved: yet is there no acceſſe unto God the Father, but by Chriſt. It is written, John 3. 13. No man aſcendeth up to Heaven, but the Son of man, who deſcended from Heaven. The way was to bee opened, by Chriſt: And is behoved Chriſt to ſuffer and ſo enter into his glory. Luc. 24. 26. That therefore I may adde that which of many is not rightly diſputed, before the incarnation of Chriſt, none of the holy Fathers aſcended into Heaven, but were reſerved in a certaine place in joy and happy expectation, untill the comming of Chriſt. This place, the Fathers called Limbus, not that of Hell, but as I ſuppoſe, that of the heavenly Paradiſe, in which Abraham, as father of the faithfull, was moſt eminent, into whoſe boſome or Congregation Lazarus after his death was carried by the Angels. But after the death of Chriſt they were brought into Heaven, according to his teſtimony: Father I will that where I am my Servants may be alſo. So that Chriſt Ieſus in his time, aſcended with this ſpoyle and captivity into heaven. Therefore this originall ſinne, and fight therewith, continueth unto the death of the fleſh, but by faith in Chriſt we are armed & preſerved againſt it, by the help of the H. Ghoſt, as Adam had been preſerved if he had not ſinned. Becauſe of the fight thereof with the Spirit Paul cryeth out, Wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death (to wit; that is aſſayed thereby) I thanke my God (ſaith he) by Ieſus Chriſt, whom the Father hath given me for a Saviour, and an Helper by his Spirit, till this ſinne be utterly abolifhed in the death of the fleſh.

An introduction TO VNIVERSALL GEOGRAPHIE, as well moderne, as ancient.

Chapter the firſt.

What Geographie, the Globe, or the round Earth is.

GEOGRAPHIE, is a deſcription of the whole Earth, as much as is diſcovered to us. This Greeke word Geographie, is compounded of the Noune γαῖα, or γῆ, in ſtead whereof this word γεω is uſed in compoſition, that is to ſay, Earth, and of the verbe γράφω, I write, whence is made this compound word γεωγραφία, that is to ſay, a deſcription of the Earth.

Geographie is differing from Coſmographie, as the part from the whole, and is alſo diſtinguiſhed from Corographie, as the whole from the part: for Coſmographie is the diſcription of all the world, which is derived from the Greek Noune κόσμος, that is to ſay, World, and from the verbe γράφω, that is to ſay, I write, when one ſpeakes of the whole world, we underſtand the world, as well Elementary, as Celeſtiall.

Corographie is the particular deſcription of ſome Region, or Country, and commeth alſo from this Greek word χώρος, or χώρα, that is to ſay, Region, and from the verbe γράφω, which is to ſay, I write, as the deſcription of Spaine, Italy, Germany, France, &c.

Topographie is the particular deſcription of a certaine place, as of a Countrey, of a Territory, or of a Towne, or of a Village, under which are compriſed Mannured Lands, Medowes, Trees, Places and buildings, repreſented by writing. This is alſo a Greek word, and compounded of the Noune τόπος, that is to ſay, a place, and of the verbe γράφω, that is to ſay, I write.

But Geographie is properly the deſcription of the ſituation of the Earth alone, wherein firſt is to be marked, that in the terme of Geographie this word is not onely taken for one of the foure Elements, as in a phiſicall terme, but thereby we underſtand conjoyntly, the earth moiſtened with the waters, which are ſhowred upon it, making both together the Center of the whole world, which becauſe of the round figure is called Orbis, or the Globe of the earth. For the Globe is a ſollide body round on all ſides, contained in a Superficies, having in the middle thereof, a center or point, whereof all lines which are drawne from thence, unto the Superficies, are equall, this then is a ſole Globe, compounded of the one and the other Element, from whence rebounds one onely Convex or Superficies, that is to ſay, which appeareth without concavity.

The Geographers diſtinguiſh diverſly the Globe of the earth, into certaine Circles and parts, whereof we are to treate in order.

did not ſinne againſt God, becauſe God had not forbidden it. For it had made for the greater glory of God, if Adam had not ſinned: for then had man given a certaine teſtimony of himſelfe, that he was well created, as all things were very good. Gen.1.31. And that which is captive, is not in it owne power, but is ſubjected to the power of another. Hee ſheweth then that the Spirit in the beginning was not carnall, but became ſuch when it was made captive to the fleſh. It is altogether neceſſary to know, and obſerve this originall of originall ſinne, that the Spirit from the beginning was not created carnall, or frayle or unable to reſiſt evils, for this would argue the impotencie of the Creator, that he could not create man fit for that end which he had conceived, and would violate his authoritie. Now what calamities are acrewed unto mankinde from this ſinne, learne from that place of Saint Paul, chap.7. for if the fleſh could doe ſo much againſt the Spirit, adorned with ſo many abilities, and preſerved by the holy Ghoſt. What ſhall it not doe againſt the ſame Spirit made captive thereunto, and forſaken of the familiaritie of the holy Ghoſt. Heare what the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom.3.12. of all both Jewes and Gentiles. They have all gone out of the way, they are all become unprofitable, there is none that doth good, no not one. He ſpeakes of mans nature alone, but when it is in Chriſt, and man is helped of the holy Ghoſt, he is not ſuch, the naturall gifts of the minde, underſtanding, reaſon, judgement, memorie, and other giftes ſuffice not, if the Spirit be not preſent, the ſupporter and governour of theſe. But the concupiſcence of the fleſh is not onely a privation of righteouſnes, but a true inclination unto thoſe things which pleaſe the fleſh: and therefore ſince the minde is a follower of the ſame inclination, it is not onely deprived of righteouſnes, but hath poſitive evill, to wit, a perpetuall inclination to pleaſe the fleſh, from whence all ſinnes ariſe, and therefore that inclination is called originall ſinne. Now if it were onely a privation of righteouſnes, Paul had no occaſion to exclaime: wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the bodie of this death? Rom.7. For a regenerate man is freed from his minde. But in the regenerate, ſinne originall yet abideth, which is an argument, that originall ſinne is more then a privation, & an evill which cleaveth to Nature, and is propagated by generation. In ſinne (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) my mother conceived me. But God fore ſeeing that this ſinne would come upon man, ſaid, in that day, in which thou ſhalt eate of the tree of the knowledge of good & evill, thou ſhalt die the death; for this ſinne was to be expiated with the death of the bodie. Therefore it is a Law unto all once to die, to the end, that that which is come upon them beſides the creation, may be aboliſhed in thoſe, that are to bee ſaved. As for Paradiſe, where it was, and what were the Rivers thereof, I will ſhew in the ancient reformed Geographie. Man having beene created out of Paradiſe was tranſported into it.

The nineteenth Chapter.

Of the Fabrick of the World.

Of the ſecond and ſubordinate purpoſe of the Creator in creating Man.

BEcauſe God foreſaw that man would ſinne, leſt ſo wiſe a creation of all things, and the end whereunto it was ordained, ſhould bee in vaine, which Adam violated by ſinning, it pleaſed him therefore to repaire the fall of man, by a new benefit, ordaining a meanes, whereby being delivered, he might be reſtored to his former condition, and that the intent of the firſt creation might take effect, he promiſed his Sonne ſhould take fleſh upon him, who ſhould ſatisfie for the ſinne of Adam, with which all men were tainted from their birth, that he ſhould appeaſe God the Father, and obtaine the helpe of the holy Ghoſt againe, which being promiſed, and beleeved, they might by the ſame intention, as before, attain to eternall life. From this fore-knowledge, God uſing his wonderfull providence, ſo finiſhed the creation of all things, that in both eſtates, of obedience, and the fall, he preſerved for man the meanes to obtaine eternall life, ſo that nothing was made of God in vaine, onely the death of the fleſh remained, which was due to originall ſinne, untill that was taken away from man altogether, and he being wholly pure, as he was created, might come to God, according to the end wherefore he was created.

Moreover, becauſe all men were guilty of originall ſinne, as I ſhewed in the former Chapter, ſo that they could not by the gifts of nature, come unto Chriſt,

God

God therefore ordained Repentance, Baptiſme, and Communion, the chiefe Sacraments, whereby man, before al the world, might yeeld himſelfe unto Chriſt, and by faith might approove and accept his ſacrifice for the ſinnes of man, whereby he might bee armed againſt the force of ſinne, bee delivered by this onely meanes, from the power of originall ſin, and obtaine the helpe of the holy Ghoſt againſt the force thereof. Yet the ſight with ſinne remaineth, ſo long as we live, till it be aboliſhed by the death of the fleſh, on which the originall thereof dependeth, and therefore the death of the fleſh was enjoyned of God, becauſe of the fall of Adam, that that ſinne which is beſides the creation, might bee rooted out: by meanes whereof, man is ſaved: yet is there no acceſſe unto God the Father, but by Chriſt. It is written, John 3.13. No man aſcendeth up to Heaven, but the Son of man, who deſcended from Heaven. The way was to bee opened, by Chriſt: And it behoovod Chriſt to ſuffer and ſo enter into his glory. Luc. 24.26. That therefore I may adde that which of many is not rightly diſputed, before the incarnation of Chriſt, none of the holy Fathers aſcended into Heaven, but were reſerved in a certaine place in joy and happy expectation, untill the comming of Chriſt. This place, the Fathers called Limbus, not that of Hell, but as I ſuppoſe, that of the heavenly Paradiſe, in which Abraham, as father of the faithfull, was moſt eminent, into whoſe boſome or Congregation Lazarus after his death was carried by the Angels. But after the death of Chriſt they were brought into Heaven, according to his teſtimony: Father I will that where I am my Servant may be alſo. So that Chriſt Ieſus in his time, aſcended with this ſpoyle and captivity into heaven. Therefore this originall ſinne, and ſight therewith, continueth unto the death of the fleſh, but by faith in Chriſt we are armed & preſerved againſt it, by the help of the H. Ghoſt, as Adam had been preſerved if he had not ſinned. Becauſe of the ſight thereof with the Spirit Paul cryeth out, Wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death (to wit; that is aſſayed thereby) I thanke my God (ſaith he) by Ieſus Chriſt, whom the Father hath given me for a Saviour, and an Helper by his Spirit, till this ſinne be utterly aboliſhed in the death of the fleſh.

An introduction TO VNIVERSALL GEOGRAPHIE, as well moderne, as ancient.

Chapter the firſt.

What Geographie, the Globe, or the round Earth is.

GEOGRAPHIE, is a deſcription of the whole Earth, as much as is diſcovered to us. This Greeke word Geographie, is compounded of the Noune γαῖα, or γαῦς, in ſtead whereof this word γῆ is uſed in compoſition, that is to ſay, Earth, and of the verbe γράφω, I write, whence is made this compound word γεωγραφία, that is to ſay, a deſcription of the Earth.

Geographie is differing from Coſmographie, as the part from the whole, and is alſo diſtinguiſhed from Corographie, as the whole from the part: for Coſmographie is the diſcription of all the world, which is derived from the Greek Noune κόσμος, that is to ſay, World, and from the verbe γράφω, that is to ſay, I write, when one ſpeakes of the whole world, we underſtand the world, as well Elementary, as Celeſtiall.

Corographie is the particular deſcription of ſome Region, or Country, and commeth alſo from this Greek word χώρος, or χώρα, that is to ſay, Region, and from the verbe γράφω, which is to ſay, I write, as the deſcription of Spaine, Italy, Germany, France, &c.

Topographie is the particular deſcription of a certaine place, as of a Countrey, of a Territory, or of a Towne, or of a Village; under which are compriſed Mannured Lands, Medowes, Trees, Places and buildings, repreſented by writing. This is alſo a Greek word, and compounded of the Noune τόπος, that is to ſay, a place, and of the verbe γράφω, that is to ſay, I write.

But Geographie is properly the deſcription of the ſituation of the Earth alone, wherein firſt is to be marked, that in the terme of Geographie this word is not onely taken for one of the foure Elements, as in a phiſicall terme, but thereby we underſtand conjoyntly, the earth moiſtened with the waters, which are ſhowred upon it, making both together the Center of the whole world, which becauſe of the round figure is called Orbis, or the Globe of the earth. For the Globe is a ſollide body round on all ſides, contained in a Superficies, having in the middle thereof, a center or point, whereof all lines which are drawne from thence, unto the Superficies, are equall, this then is a ſole Globe, compounded of the one and the other Element, from whence rebounds one onely Convex or Superficies, that is to ſay, which appeareth without concavity.

The Geographers diſtinguiſh diverſly the Globe of the earth, into certaine Circles and parts, whereof we are to treate in order.

The ſecond Chapter.

Of the parts of the Globe or of the Sphere, and of its Circles.

IN the firſt place the axletree is ſet in the Globe which the Latins call Axis, or a right line, which paſſeth through the Center of the earth, and is the Diameter of the whole world, called by the Greeks Diameter, compounded of the prepoſition διὰ, that is to ſay, per, or through, and of the verbe μετρέω, that is to ſay, I meaſure: as a meaſuring through the middle, about which the whole world wheeleth, and turneth about.

The extremities of the Axletree are called the Poles of the world, ſo called Poli from the Greeke verbe πολέω, that is to ſay, I turne, whence they are called by the Latins vertices, as turnings and hinges, becauſe all the round frame of the world wheeleth about them, whereof the one of them is called arctus ceu urſalis, or the Beare-pole, from the Greeke word ἄρκτος, that is to ſay, a Beare, which is a conſtelation in heaven, neere unto this Circle, the other is named Antarcticus, becauſe it is right againſt, and Diametricallie oppoſite to the Pole Arctick.

The Pole Arctick is that, which appeareth alwayes in the places, where wee inhabite, and hath divers names, as Borealis, or Boreus, and alſo Aquilonaris, or Aquilonius, from the winde Boreas, or Aquilon, which bloweth from this corner, and is called alſo Septentrionalis, from the ſeven Starres, which the Latins call Triones, and which are commonly called Charles waine.

The Pole Antartique, is termed alſo by the Latins, Auſtralis, and Auſtrinus, and Notius, from the winde called Auſter, and Notus, and Meridionalis, which is the ſoutherne windes, taking the name from that Region of the world, and is never ſeene in this our Hemyſphere, but lies hid under the Horizon. Moreover, the Globe of the earth is accompained with eight principall Circles, doubly divided. Firſt, into an equall number, the greater and leſſer: the greater are theſe which have the ſame Center as the world hath, and which cut and divide the Globe, or the Sphere into two equall parts. They are called in this manner Equinoctiall, or Equator, Zodiaque, Horizon, Meridian. The leſſer Circles are thoſe, which have a different center, and other than that of the Globe, or of the Sphere, and part the Sphere or Globe into two unequall parts. Theſe are the two Tropicks, and the two Polers, or the poles of the world.

Againe among all theſe aforeſaid Circles, ſome of them are termed, Rights, or Paralels, that is to ſay, diſtances, which have an equall ſpace the one from the other, becauſe they have the ſame Poles, as the world hath, and in regard that they are of an equall diſtance among themſelves in Latitude. Theſe are called the Equator, the two Tropicks, and the two Polares, the other three called Oblique, or byaſing, becauſe they have their Poles differing from the Poles of the world.

The third Chapter.

Of the foure great Circles.

THeſe great Circles are diſtinguiſhed into fixed, and moveable. The fixed, or immoveable are thoſe, which alwayes hould one and the ſame place in the Globe, or in the Sphere, and hence it comes, that they are painted out upon the ſuperficies or upperface of the Globe. Theſe are the Æquator, and the Zodiaque. The moveable are thoſe, which are not alwaies ſettled in one place, but change their place diverſly, and according to the variety and change of places and Countries, and for this cauſe are placed without the ſuperficies of the Sphere, theſe are they which are named Horizon, and Meridian, but it behooveth us to ſpeake of each of them in particular.

The Horizon.

ὁρίζων, Horizon, by the Latins is called Terminator, Finitor, & Finiens, a Bounder, a Finitor, or Finiſhing, which is a great Circle, moveable, which ſeperateth the viſible part of the world from the inviſible, that is to ſay, the inferiour Hemiſphere from the ſuperiour. It is very well repreſented upon the Covercle or upon the upper face of the Globe, for the ſuperficies thereof, which is the upper part, maketh the true office of the Horizon, when it divideth the whole Globe into two equall parts. Now the ſaid Horizon is of two ſorts, the one, which is conceived by reaſon, and underſtanding, the other, which is knowne by the ſence. That which is comprehended by the Intellect, hath it extention unto the Sphere of the fixed Starrs, & divideth into two equall parts, the whole Globe of the world, ſo that one of theſe Hemiſpheres appeareth above the earth, and the other is hidden under the earth, and is divided againe into two ſorts, the one right, the other oblique; the right is that, which paſſeth athwart from the two Poles of the world, hath its Pole, or point verticall, under the Æquator, which cutteth betweene them in forme of right angles. The Oblique is called that, whoſe pole, or point verticall, meeteth, either on this ſide, or that ſide of the Equator, and cutteth the Equator by oblique angles. The one being elevated on high from the poles of the world, the other altogether declining downeward. Thoſe which have this Horizon perceive the riſing, and the ſetting of the Sunne, and of the other Starrs by oblique motion. But the Horizon wee knowe by ſence, is that which being bounded and terminated by our ſight, extendeth as farr as our ſight can pearce, ſeparating the viſible part of the Globe, from that which is inviſible: the Diameter whereof, is a hundred, and fowre-ſcore furlongs in length, that is to ſay, 22 thouſand paces, and a halfe, of 5000 of Germane, with the five eight parts. And is thought, that it paſſeth no further; becauſe that our ſight can not extend any further. The Horizon is called mooveable, or divers, becauſe one cannot change the place, to any place whither ſoever he goeth, beſides, if one moove out of his place never ſo little, which wayes he will, even in that inſtant he changeth alſo the Horizon, the Heaven, and the Region, and by this meanes one may imagine an infinity of Horizons. It is likewiſe to bee knowne, that the Horizon hath two Poles, whereof one of them in the Arabick tongue, is called Semith, and by the vulgar corrupted, Zenith, and is no other thing, than a point which is right over the croune of our heads, the other is commonly called Nadir, but to ſpeake more properly, Nathir, diametrically oppoſite to the other, and is right over the head of the Antipodes.

Of the Æquinoctiall.

Æquinoctiall is a word borrowed from the Latine Æquinoctialis, which is alſo called Æquidialis, and in Greek, ἰσημερινὸς, from the word ἴση, that is to ſay, alike and from ἡμέρα, that is to ſay, day, and beſides is termed by the Latins AEquator. This is a Circle of the Sphere, the greateſt of the five Paralells, & which divideth the Globe into two equall parts, the Septentrionall, and the Meridionall; diſtant by an equall ſpace from the two Poles, whereunto, when the Sunne is once come, it maketh through the whole world, the night and the day of an equall length and durance, whence whence likewiſe it taketh the name of Æquidiall, and Æquinoctiall. The Æquinoxe, or Æquidiall, as the ancients call them, happen twice a yeare, the one in the beginning of the Signe Aries, or the Ram, which is called Vernall, and the other in the beginning of Libra, or the Ballance, called autumne. But Navigators commonly call the Æquator, the middle line, or ſimply the Line, by a certaine Emphaſis, or by prerogative and excellency.

The Zodiaque.

The Zodiaque is one of the greateſt circles of the Sphere, placed croſſe-wiſe betweene the two Poles of the world, which toucheth with the one ſide the Eſtivall Tropick, in the beginning of Cancer, or of the Crab, and with the other, the Hyvernall Tropick, in the beginning of Capricorne, cutting the Æquator in the middle, and is likewiſe by the ſame Æquator cut in the beginning of Aries, and Libra, ſo that the one halfe thereof boweth towards the Pole-Artique, and the other on that part of the Pole Antartique: it is divided into twelve parts, which are commonly called the twelve ſignes, from whence commeth the Latine word Signifer, that is to ſay, Signe-bearer, and the Greek ζωοφόρος from the Greek word ζῳδίων, that is to ſay, Animall, or Beaſt; becauſe there are repreſented in it the twelve ſignes of living Creatures, the names whereof, the Poet Auſonius hath compriſed in this Diſtique.

Sunt Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo,
Libraque, Scorpius, Arcitenens, Caper, Amphora, Piſces.

The firſt of theſe verſes containe the ſixe Septentrionall Signes, and the ſecond the ſixe other Meridionall. To every ſigne there is attributed thirty degrees, which make together 360. degrees, and make alſo the diviſion of the whole Globe of the Earth.

The Meridian Circle called by the Greeks μεσημβρινὸς, from the Greek word μέση, that is to ſay, Demi, or halfe; and ἡμέρα, that is to ſay, Day, as the Meridionall Circle (to wit, that which paſſing through the Poles of the world, and the point verticall of every place) cutteth a thwart the Æquinoctiall Circle, and divideth the whole earth into two equal parts, leaving one of its parts to the Eaſtward, and the other to the Weſtward, and is ſo called, that when the Sun is aſcended up to the higheſt point of our Hemiſphere, it maketh alwayes with us mid-day, or the halfe of the day, and all thoſe which are under one and the ſame Meridian, ſituated towards the North, or towards the South. And on the other part, maketh alwayes mid-night, or the halfe of the night, when it commeth to the ſame point in the inferiour Hemiſphere. This is becauſe the principall office of the Meridian is, to ſhew the mid-day, and the mid-night. Now the verticall point is nothing elſe, but the top, or the higheſt part of Heaven being right perpendicular over the head of every one. The Meridian is called mooveable, becauſe that if you, or any other, ſtirre never ſo little towards the Eaſt, or towards the Weſt, you preſently have another Meridian; in ſuch ſort, that it alters with us continually, according to the change of places, or of Countrey wherein we are, and ſo by this meanes, a man may ſee there is an infinite number of Meridians, for looke how many right points may bee given over our heads, ſo many Meridians there may likewiſe be given.

The fourth Chapter.
Of the foure little Circles.

THe Tropicks are two Circles, diſtant one from another, of an equall diſtance from the Æquator, whereof the one of them neareſt to us, is called the Tropick of Cancer, the other lying Southward, is called the Tropick of Capricorne. The Latines call them Solſtitiales, that is, Solſtices, becauſe the Solſtices are made in them: for the Sun never paſſeth beyond them, but when it commeth to one of them, it returneth backwards: from whence they have taken their name, from the Greek verbe τρέπειν, that is, to turne, or from the reverſion. The Tropick of Cancer, or the Crab, which is alſo called Eſtivall, is neareſt to the North among all the Circles, thorow the which the Sun maketh his courſe; to which when it commeth, it goeth no further towards the North, but returnes againe to the other part of the world, towards the South, taking againe his Eſtivall courſe, in which time, the dayes are at the longeſt of all the yeare in our Hemiſphere, and the nights the ſhorteſt: and this name, the Tropick of Cancer, was given to it, from the ſigne Cancer, or the Crab, which is in the Zodiaque, inſtanly whereupon, the Sun beginneth to returne. The Tropick of Capricorne, which is called alſo Hyvernall or Brumall, is the Circle neareſt to the South of all other, thorow the middle whereof the Sun paſſeth, whereunto the Sunne being once come, goeth no further toward the Meridionall part, but makes his returne in the winter towards the Septentrionall part, which makes us to have the longeſt nights of all the yeare, and ſhorteſt dayes. It is called the Tropick of Capricorne, from this ſigne, when the Sun comes to paſſe it.

There are two polare Circles furtheſt diſtant of all, and next neighbours to the Poles, being equally diſtant from their Poles, whereof the one of them, is that which we alwayes ſee, and is called Arctique, as the Pole it ſelfe is, from the Greek word ἄρκτος, that is to ſay, Beare; becauſe it is marked neare the feete, with the little Beare: it is called alſo Septentrionall, Boreall, and Aquilonian, from that part of the world, under which it is ſituated.

The other polare Circle, equall and paralell to the Pole Arctique, is called Antarctique; becauſe it is diametrically oppoſite to the Arctique, it is wholly hidden under the Earth, by the oppoſition whereof. wee cannot perceive it. It is alſo called Auſtrine, or Auſtrall, or Meridionall.

The fifth Chapter.
Of the Zones.

THe foure leſſer Circles, divide all the ſuperficies of the earth, into five diſtances, ſpaces, or Regions, which the Geographers call Zones, the Greeke word ζώνη, ſignifies a girdle, and is taken for a ſpace & intervall, which is in the Globe of the earth, betweene two ſmall Circles, or elſe cloſed betweene a little Circle, and the Pole.

The Zones receive ſundry denominations, according to the qualitie, and the nature of their ſituations: the one is called the Torride, or burning Zone, the two others are called Could, and ſome what temperate: that which lies in the middeſt betweene the foure others is called the Torride, becauſe of the heate of the Sunne, which is perpetually hot and burning in this place over which hee paſſeth, & the way through which hee goeth, for which reaſon the Anciens thought it not habitable.

This then is the Torride Zone, which is a ſpace of place ſcituated, betweene the two Tropicks, which conteineth 47 degrees in latitude, and over which the Æquinoctiall Circle that cutteth it, and devideth it in the middle is ſituated. The two others, which are ſcituated in the extremities, of the Globe, next to the Poles of the world, whereof the one of them lieth next the Pole Arctique, and the northerne part, and the other towards the Pole Anctartique, on the other ſide of the South, are called Fridgid or cold, becauſe they are extreamely diſtant from the courſe and way which the Sunne holdeth and for this cauſe, by reaſon of the extremitie of the cold, the Ancients held them not habitable. Their bounds are limited one from another by their proper Pole, and are alſo called Polars from the ſaid Poles, touching their extenſion in latitude, it is three and twentie degrees and a halfe.

The other two Zones remaining are called temperate, and accounted habitable, becauſe they are placed betweene the cold and the hot, and participate of the temperature of them both, the one whereof is called Septentrionall, ſhut in between the Circle Arctick and the Tropike of Cancer, or the Crab: the other is called Auſtriall or Meridionall, bonded with the Circle Anctartique, & the Tropike of Capricorn, both which conteine 43 degrees.

The ſixth Chapter.
Of the Paralells, and Climats.

THere is another way alſo to divide the ſuperficies of the earth, to wit, by the change and the diverſitie of the length of dayes, for thoſe, who inhabite right under the Equator, have perpetually the day, and night of an equall length, juſt twelve howers long, but as much as is gayned on this ſide, or on the other ſide of the Equator, lying towards the one, or the other Pole: So much in ſummer the dayes encreaſe in length, and on the other ſide the nights are made the longer in winter, for this cauſe the Geographers, according to the encreaſing of the dayes, have diverſlie diſtinguiſhed the regions, or parts of the earth, which they call Paralels, or Climates.

Paralels are Circles equally diſtaut one from another drawne from the weſt to the eaſt, any man may ſee them at his pleaſure, delineated upon the Globe of the earth. But Ptolomy, who was followed by a greate number of other Geographers, hath made 21 Paralels, in that part which extends it ſelfe towards the North, keeping this proportion, and intervall: ſo that one of the longeſt dayes of a paralell ſurpaſſeth the day, the longeſt of the paralell precedent. The Climate is a ſpace of the earth, betweene two paralels, in which on the longeſt day it maketh the change, or encreaſe of halfe an howre. But the word Climate, and Paralell ſignifie ſometimes a ſpace, comprehended betweene two Circles.

Moreover the Climates are diſtinguiſhed into thoſe, which are Septentrionalls, and the Meridionalls, either of them taking their beginning from the AEquator, extending towards their proper Pole. Hence it comes to paſſe, that where the Climate lyeth furdeſt from the Equator, ſo many halfe howres, the longeſt day, exceedeth the day equall to the night, to wit, which is 12 howres, and going bakward giveth you to underſtand, under what Paralell, or Climate every place is ſituated, you are to mark well the number of howers, of which the longeſt day in the ſaid place, exceedeth the day of the right Sphere (which as is ſaid) is alwayes twelve howers; for this number being doubled, ſheweth the number of the Climates, and being quadruple, giveth you to underſtand the number of the Paralels.

Moreover, antiquity knew onely but ſeven Climates, being of opinion, that that which was beyond the ſeventh climate, could hardly be accounted habitable, being not as yet diſcovered. Theſe Climates tooke their denominations from the moſt renowned places over which the middle place of the Climates extended, namely, the firſt was called per Meroen, or dia Meroes, which was an Ile lying upon the river of Nilus, and a city in Africa. The ſecond, per Syenem, a Towne of Egypt, or dia Syenes. The third, per Alexandriam, or dia Alexandrias, which is alſo a Towne of Egypt. The fourth, per Rhodum, or dia Rhodes, an Iland well knowne. The fifth, per Romam, or dia Romes. The ſixth, per Pontum Euxinum, or dia Ponton. The ſeventh, per Boryſthenem, or dia Boriſthenes: ſome others adde unto them, two more, that is, per Ripheos, the eighth, and per Damam, the ninth. But our moderne Authors, who have found out by experience, that the earth was inhabited beyond theſe above ſaid Climats, have ſuppoſed foure and twenty Climates, reaching over the 67 degree of the elevation of the Pole; the firſt was over Meroes, the ſecond over Syena under the Eſtivall Tropick, the third over Alexandria, the fourth over Rhodes, the fifth over Rome and Helleſpont, the ſixth over Millan and Venice, the ſeventh over Podolia and Tartaria the leſſer, the eighth over Wittenbergh, the ninth over Roſtock, the tenth over Ireland, the eleventh over Bohus a Fortreſſe in Norway, the twelfth over Gutie, the thirteenth over Bergin a towne in Norway, the fourteenth over Viburgh a towne in Finland, the fifteenth over Arotia a towne of Sweethland, the ſixteenth over the mouth of the River of Dalenkaul, and the other which remaine over the other places of Norway, Sweethland, Ruſſia, and the places bordering upon the next Iles by the like intervall. Now it is certaine, that from the Equinoctiall Circle, to the place where the longeſt day is limited to twenty foure howers, it hath the extenſion of twenty foure Climates, but from this place to the Pole, the Climates cannot be certainly diſtinguiſhed; becauſe that from thence afterward, the dayes increaſe in ſuch a ſorte, firſt not by halfe howers, but from the beginning by whole dayes: After by weeks, and in time by moneths; So that under the Poles, one of the Hemiſpheres is enlightened and dried by the light of the dayes which laſt ſixe moneths: the other by the like ſpace of time, is over-caſt with a thick darkeneſſe and a continuall night.

For the reſt the ſame conſideration, which hath beene made of the Climates from the Equinoctiall towards the Pole Arctique, the like alſo muſt be obſerved from the ſame Equinoctiall on that ſide, which lieth towards the Pole Antarctique, in making a like number of them, nevertheleſſe, the Authors have given no other proper appellations to ſuch Climes, but named them by thoſe which were oppoſite to them, adding this Greek prepoſition ἀντὶ to them, as ἀντὶ τῆς Μερόης, that is to ſay, oppoſite to that which is over Meroe, and ſo of the others, as ἀντὶ τῆς Συήνης, which is oppoſite to that which paſſeth over Syena, notwithſtanding, a man may call them by the ſame proper name, as the others: as, the firſt Climate, by the Mountaines of the Moone, and the Sources of Nilus; the ſecond, by the Promontory commonly called Cabo de Corientes, under the Hybernall Tropick, and ſo of others: but for the more eaſie conceiving of of the latitude of the Climates and Paralels from the Equinoctiall, the diſtances of the one from the other, and the length of the longeſt dayes, we have prefixed annexed this foregoing Table.

The ſeventh Chapter.

Of the diviſion of the Earth into three hundred and ſixty degrees, with the longitude and latitude thereof.

THe circumference and roundnes of the whole Circle according to the Geometricians, is divided into 360 parts, and this ſame diviſion is received into the ſection of the Sphere and of the Globe. The Earth then, as the Sphere is divided into 360 parts, which they call degrees. Every degree is divided into 60 Scruples, which make 1000 Roman paces, or an Italian mile, 4000 of them make a common Germane mile, or an ordinary Almaine mile: ſo that every degree containeth 15 Germane miles, and the whole counted together, make five thouſand and foure hundred: which is the whole circumference of the Globe of the Earth: and its Diameter, or the halfe part thereof equally into two, is a thouſand ſeven hundred and 18 Germane miles, with two elevenths: the ſemi-diameter, from the Superficies of the Center, eight hundred fifty nine, with one eleventh.

Moreover, the degrees by which the Earth is meaſured, are of two ſortes, the one of longitude, the other of latitude. The longitudes are diſtinguiſhed by the Meridian Circles, and the latitudes by the paralels. There are thirty ſixe Meridians, which are faſtned upon the Globe, every Meridian having ten degrees, which number being multiplyed, maketh three hundred and ſixtie. Ptolomy hath placed the firſt Meridian in the Fortunate Iles, which at this day are called the Canaries, ſince the Spaniſh Pylots have placed it in the Ile of Goſ-hawks, which in their language is called Aſſores, and ſome of them have placed it in the midſt of Spaine. From the Æquator to the one or the other Pole, are marked out nine Paralels, each of them containing ten degrees: then multiplying this number by foure, ye ſhall finde in all thirty ſixe Paralells, as in the longitude: now we muſt hold that the longitude is a certaine ſpace or intervall of the Æquator, cloſed betweene two Meridians, the one from the Iles called Aſſores, from whence it taketh the beginning, the other from that place or Region, whereof we would know the diſtance. As touching the breadth or elevation, that is, a going backward, or the length of a place or of a Countrey diſtant from the Æquator, either towards the one or the other Pole. Alſo the elevation of the Pole is the ſame as is the latitude from a place. But this latitude is of two ſortes, the one is Septentrionall from the Æquator to the Pole Arctique in our Hemiſphere; the other is meridionall or Auſtrall from the Æquator in the inferiour Hemiſphere to the Pole Antarctique.

Of the foure quarters of the world, and of the windes,

THis whole, which beareth the name of the world, and of the Heaven, is no other than a body, which in its owne circuit, boundeth and enfoldeth al things: it receiveth differences in the parts thereof, which are called the Regions of the world, or the points and places from whence the Sun ariſeth, and that part is called Orient or levant: where the Sun goeth downe, that is called Occident or couchant. The ſpace through which the Sun maketh his courſe of the one ſide, is called South. and the part oppoſite to it, is called the North: to theſe foure there are added foure other Regions, and parts of the world, interpoſed and interlaced betweene the foure firſt. Betwixt the Septentrionall or North, and the Orient and the Levant Æquinoctiall, the Orient of the Summer is called the Orient of the Sun in Summer. Betweene the Levant Æquinoctiall and the South, the Levant or Orient Hybernall or Winter. Betweene the North or Septentrionall and the Occident Æquinoctiall, the Occident or the Couchant Summer. Betweene the Occident Equinoctiall and the South, the Couchant or the Occident Winter. Moreover, in the foure principall parts or hinges of the world, there are attributed foure principal windes, which from thence are called Cardinals. Their names and their Regions are repreſented in this ſorte by Ovid, lib. 1. of his Elegies. De triſtibus Elegie 2.

Nam modo purpureo vires capit Eurus ab ortu.
Nunc Zephyrus ſero veſpere miſſus adeſt.
Nunc gelidas ſicca Boreas Bacchatur ab arcto.
Nunc Notus adverſa prælia fronte gerit.

Now ſtraight takes Eurus ſtrength from purple Eaſt.
Now Zephyrus at night is ready preſt.
Now boyſterous Boreas from North doth blow.
Now Notus in his fore-head wars doth show.

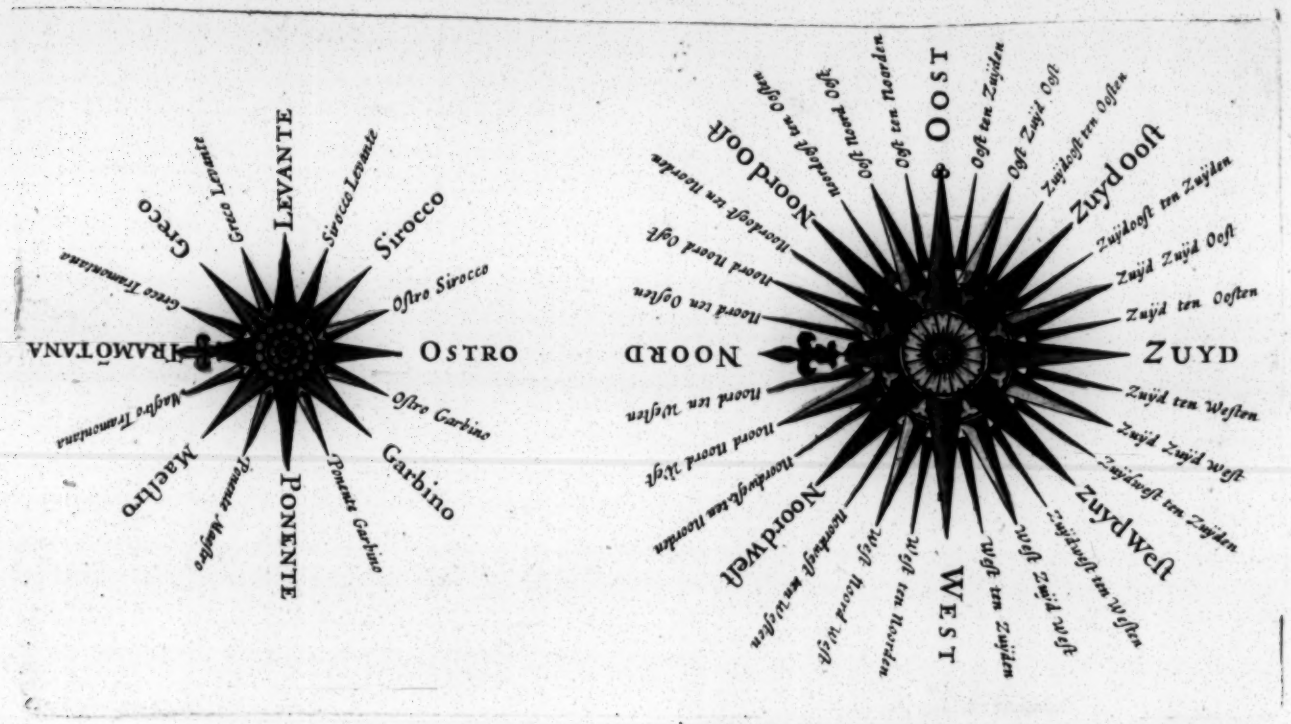
But the names of theſe aforeſaid winds, being deſcribed unto us by the Poet in Greek termes, the Latines have given them proper names in their Language, and have called that which bloweth from the North, Aquilo; that which commeth from the Eaſt, Subſolanus; from the South, Auſter; and from the Weſt, Favonius. Which may eaſily be knowne by the figure here repreſented, B.

But of all theſe windes thus diſtinguiſhed by their names, as well new as later Authors, have ordred the ſituations ſo divers and variable, that a man can ſcarcely compoſe thereof a certaine figure, to gather all their ſo ſundry opinions. It is true that the Italians, who ordinarily ſaile upon the Mediterranean Sea, which is called the interiour Sea, and hath its extenſion betweene Europe, Aſia and Africa, have made ſixteene ſortes of windes, which are divided according to this manner following, C.

But

But the Europeans and all the Germanes who saile upon the exteriour Sea, or the great Ocean, have given proper names to the windes as seemed best unto them, and have made of them two and thirty; which they call by names, as is demonstrated in this Table.



The ninth Chapter.

Of Dimensions or measuring of places.

THe Romans measured the distance of places by the number of a thousand paces, which they called Milliare; and because they marked every space of a thousand paces with a stone: thence they called their miles or milliaries, Lapides. As for example, when they said, ad decimum lapidem, that was, ad decimum milliare, ten thousand paces or the tenth millier. Foure thousand paces make a common Germane mile, hence it is that one degree of the Globe of the earth, containeth sixtie thousand paces, miles or Italiane milliers, but are fifteen thousand ordinary Germane miles. The Grecians measured the distance of Places by Furlongs, the Furlong is an hundred twenty five paces, whereof eight furlongs make an Italian mile, that is a thousand paces; and two and thirty furlongs make an ordinary Germane mile. The Persians measured the length of their lands by that which they called Parasangæ, every one of them containing thirty furlongs. The Egyptians had also that called Schœni, that is, Cordes; which French word is yet in use in many places of France: but the Schœni of Egypt were not alwayes of an equall distance and length; for some allowed sixty furlongs to the Schœnus, others fourty, some gave them onely thirty. At this day the thousand or milliers are very commonly used among the Germanes. The Danes, the people of Norway, Sweds, English and Scottish use the word mile or meile: the same also do the Poles, Bohemians and other Nations, as Slavonia, which have their mila or mile. Also the Italians use this word, and call it in their Language, miglio. The Frence and Spanyards measure the distance of Couutreys per leguas or leucas; the one call them lieues, the other, leguas. The Italians also and the English, speaking of the length and distances of the Countreyes of Germanie, Slavonia, France and Spaine, distinguish them by miles. The Italiens call them leghe, and the other leagues. The Russians and Muscovites measure their lands by certaine spaces, which they call in their language, Voreſt. But all these sorts of measures and dimensions may easily be knowne by the figure, which is hereunto applyed, E.

Nevertheless, we must here observe there is not a Nation, but hath and keepeth alwayes their owne measures and dimensions, and of places equall: for the Germanes according to the diversity of their Countries, have great miles and little; and others common, whereof fifteene make a degree in the Globe of the Earth. There are also in France and Spaine miles unequall, as are the Miles among other Nations, and some English Mathematicians, as the Italians make sixtie miles for a degree.

which being placed under theſe Celeſtiall bodies, admitteth generation and corruption, and is not onely of ſimple bodies, as fire, aire, water and earth, but alſo of ſuch as are compoſed of them, which the Sages have ſaid to be of five ſorts. For ſome are imperfectly mixed, which wee call Meteors, to wit, the hailes, raines, ſnows, thunders, lightnings & winds. There are others perfectly mixed, but without ſoule, as ſtones, mettals, marbles, ſome others that have a vegetative Soule, and growing, as plants. There are ſome againe, that have the ſenſitive, as brute beaſts, and others which over and above all have a reaſonable ſoule, as are men. But for our part wee will leave thoſe things to Aſtronomers, and Phiſitians, which properlie belong to their vocation, and ſo here conſider principallie, the circuite, and comprehenſion of the earth. All the earth then diverſlie interchapt with Seas, Rivers, Mariſhes make a round body compleat with all theſe things, ſo that Homer calleth it for this reaſon Orbicular or round. And Numa Pompilius for the ſame conſideratiõ dedicated to the Goddeſſe Veſta, a Temple of a round forme. And that no other can be the forme of it, is ſufficiently ſhewed aſwell by the proofe that Ariſtotle draweth out of ponderous things all which tend to a certaine point; as thoſe of the Mathematicians upon the Ecclipſes, and ſhadowes of dyalls. Moreover the long and aſſured obſervations of Travellers, make ſufficiently known that the longitudes and latitudes of places are diverſifyed according to their Intervals. So that it is very certaine, that there be Perices, Antices, & Antipodes, which to juſtifie by a long diſcourſe were ſuperfluous. Antiquitie, and thoſe of our age aſſure us, that this round conteineth in its greateſt circuit, 360 degrees, ſo that if yee allow to every one 15 Germane miles, or 60 Italian, yee may eaſily comprehend the whole roundnes of the earth, which in the opinions of many, is accounted but a point, in regard of the univerſe, (as Plinie ſpeaketh in his ſecond Booke of his naturall hiſtorie. Chap. 68.)

The circuit of the earth.

It is nevertheleſſe the matter of our glorie, our manſion, the place of our dignities, and honours, in which wee deſire riches: for this all men ſtrive, & quarrell, in this we make civill warres, and by mutuall murtherings, make the earth more large by oppreſſing of men. Finallie, not to dwell upon publique warres betweene nation, and nation, it is the earth that maketh us to chaſe, away our neighbours, and which maketh us to entrench upon their poſſeſſion for the enlarging of ours. And yet nevertheleſſe when wee ſhall have atcheived our end to the prejudice of our neighbour, and likewiſe chaſed away all our neighbours, what part of the Earth doe wee thinke wee ſhall poſſeſſe. Put the caſe likewiſe, that our limits ſtretch as-farre as wee wish, after our deceaſe, how much earth will ſerve our turne? This little ſhall ſuffice for the earth, in that it maketh with the Sea a round body, and viſible to all. In that it is diſtinguiſhed from the waters, & is called in holy writ, Drineſſe, it is the proper manſion of man. To her only, for her excellent worth, we have impoſed the ſurname of venerable Mother. Shee receiveth us from our firſt birth, and being borne nouriſheth, and maintaines us thereafter without ceaſing, and for the laſt office having received us into her boſome; abandoned of the reſt of nature, covereth us as a good mother. The waters are converted into raine, hardned into hayle, encreaſed into floods, and are precipated into Torrents. The aire thickned with cloudes, ſheweth it ſelfe furios by her tempeſts. But is ſweete, gentle, and indulgent, accommodating her ſelfe, as a handmayde, for the uſe of man. What is it ſhe engendreth not? what is it ſhe doth not produce of her owne accord? what ſweet odours? what ſap, and juice? what diverſitie of colours? how faithfully doth ſhe render the uſe of that, which is concredited to her? how many things doth ſhe nouriſh for our ſakes? But it will not be amiſſe to adde that which is called a Promontorie, an extent of earth which reacheth upward, and appeareth a farre off, which is oppoſed to that, which is called Gulfe. Such are found in the utmoſt parts of Italie, Lacinium, and Zephyreum: in Sicilie, Lilybæum, in Aſia, Sigæum. That which is called an Ile, is a part of the earth encompaſed with water on all ſides, as Creet, Cyprus, Sicilie. Pen-Inſula is that, which is joyned to the firme land by a ſtrait, which they call Iſthmus, and the Pen-Inſula Cherſoneſus: as there is the Goulden Cherſoneſus, the Cimbrick, or Dazick, Taurick and others. Wee muſt adde ſomething touching the Sea, wee call the one the Mediterran, the other the Ocean. The Ocean which the Scriptures call the Abyſſe of waters, for the extent and depth thereof, ſurpaſſeth all other Seas, extendeth it ſelfe through the whole earth, here and there, with a crooked courſe through many coaſts of the world, ſundrie people, Iles, Capes, & Promontoires, changing ſtill the name with the place. In ſome places called Occidentall, in others, Orientall, Æthiopian, Spaniſh, Atlantick, Scythian, Gauliſh, Brittiſh, Germane, Hyberboreall, and Ycie. In other places by the marks our new Navigatours have given it, as the South-Sea, or Pacifique Sea, Archipelagus of Lazarus, the Indian-Sea, the Lantchidoll. It hath many Gulfes, the Arabian, Perſian, Gangetick, the Grand, Sarmatick, Mexican, the Read-Sea. Among the ſtreights of the Ocean, theſe are the moſt noble, that of Gibraltar and Magellan. To theſe may be added that of the Anian betweene the two laſt coaſts Occidentall of America, and Orientall of Tartaria. The Mediterranean ſeperateth Africa from Europe, and taketh ſundry names according to the diverſitie of the countries which it coaſteth. The Sea hath in aboundance, fiſh, plants, and precious ſtones. This is remarkeable, that nature by an admirable artifice would repreſent in the Sea, almoſt all things, w^ch^ are ſeene on the earth, and in the ayre. I leave the Elephants, Swyne, Tortois, Dogs, Bullocks, Horſe, Faulcons, Swallowes. Shee hath repreſented man by the Sea-man, Mare-maids, and Nereides, and that which is almoſt incredible by the Monkfiſh. And as for the Syrenes and Nereides (although by ſome ignorant, reputed for fables) yet by many Authors, both ancient, & moderne, they are eſteemed for true Creatures, ſeeing at diverſe times, and places they have bin ſeene. And if any man doubt thereof, let him go to a village called Swartwale, neere unto the Brill in Holland, where hee ſhall ſee a Mare-mayde dryed, ſtuffed with flocks, and kept for a teſtimonie of truth, hanging upon the wainſcot, or ſieling of the Church. Now the Corrall, Pearl, Amber, Succin, Spunge and other innumerable things, make us to admire and adore the Soveraigne. But thus much may ſuffice for this: let us come to the diſtribution of the parts of the world, which the Ancients ſometimes divided into two, Aſia and Europe; ſometimes into three, Europe, Aſia, Africa, or Libya: which is more notable among the Ancients, that knew not yet the new world. But the diſcovery of America, hath cauſed a fourth part to be added.

The qualitie of the earth.

The Sea and the commodities thereof

Mercator divideth into three parts, all this Terreſtriall Globe. The firſt conteineth that, which the Ancients divided into three parts. The ſecond that which wee call America. The third is the South region or Magellan. But wee divide this Univerſe into five, Europe, Africa, Aſia, America, and the Southland.

A PORTRAITURE OF THE VNIVERSALL EARTH.

SEEING that for the better attaining unto the knowledge of every thing, naturall reason requireth, that it be declared in generall first, before we descend to the particulars thereof, and that the whole may bee knowne from the part in grosse; I have thought it my duty according to this rule, before I come to handle the first Tome of our Geographie and Septentrionall Regions, to present you with a Portraiture of the universall Earth, and of its foure parts, Europe, Africa, Asia and America; and as I also hope to doe in these Tomes following: to the end, that the worke and the universall discription, may receive from it the more perfection: and likewise that he who shall see the figure of his own Countrey, should not be deprived of a thing so profitable. For the contemplation of things in generall, is pleasing and necessary to him which searcheth out the knowledge of naturall things, yea how little soever it be. For if a man please to consider what the rising and setting of the Sun is, the cause of Summer and winter, whence proceedeth the inequalitie of dayes & nights that how finally and in what place, bred, multiplied, encreased, made, altered, and changed, from the beginning of all things, all which cannot bee better taught without any danger, & with greater contentment, than from the union, and reference to these five tables. And as it is not enough for a man, that hath a large, and a spatious house, to know well all the roomes, belonging to it, but it is also very fitting, and most necessary, to consider, in what place of the town, his house standeth, that on a sudden, when any fire, or any hurly-burly should rise how farre, or how neere hee is from that present danger. So it is no lesse pleasing, & necessarie, to know in what part of the world yee dwell, what Nations, or people inhabite neere, or more remote from you, that when calamities of warre shall seize upon you, you may timely resolve with your selfe upon the feare, moderation, or what order yee were best to take. Moreover, because Cosmographie is the light of History, aswell Ecclesiastique as Politique, and that the idle spectator may learne more than the Traveller, by his labours, who changeth oftner the heavē, than nature, yee will reape lesse profit in parusing of particular Tables, if yee doe not joyne thereunto the Generalls, which are made for representation of the whole earth, & of my greate Europe, which I caused to be printed at Duysburgh. God preserve thee in the meane time Reader, & make thee enjoye these rare things, considering with the learnd Buchanan, that it may be the glory of so short a sojourne which is ordained here for us on earth, that it may draw us as wel to celestiall things, as from terestiall & fraile, may raise our Spirits on high, as if they ought to minde nothing more than eternall things.

Percipias rerum sit quamvis parva portio, verbis
Quam nos magnificis in regna superba secamus,
Partimur ferro, mercamur sanguine fuso,
Ducimus exigua gleba de parte triumphos.
Illa etenim moles per suspectata seorsim,
Magna quidem: sicum stellati tegmine Cœli
Componas, puncti instar erit, vel seminis, unde
Condidit innumeros senior Gargetius orbes.
Hac illa est hominum sedes, hac illa ferarum,
Et volucrum domus: hoc angusto e carcere quantum
Surripit Oceanus terra circumfluus humor,
Quippe per Herculea irrumpens divortia meta,
Europam Lybiis late sejungit ab oris?
Adde huc claustra Arabum, quaque arctant æquora campos
Hyrcanos: huc adde lacus laxasque paludes,
Et qua præcipiti labe sactant flumina montes
Vertice, vel pigris stagnant immota lacunis.
Dumque hac vi rapiunt, hac Orbem gurgite mergunt, Conditur exigua sub aquis pars maxima terra.
Quod superest, magno velut insula parva profundo
Innatat: hac etiam quantum vel squalet arenis?
Vel tumet in vastos sine fruge, sine arbore montes?
Vel nimijs ardet flammis? vel frigore torpet?
Vel jacet humano indocilis mansuescere cultu,
Vel fœcunda malis animantum in funera succis?
O pudor, o stolidi præceps vesania voti!
Quantula pars rerum est, in qua se gloria tollit,
Ita fremit, metus exanimat, dolor urit, egestas
Cogit opes ferro, insidijs, flamma atque veneno?
Scilicet & trepido fervent humana tumultu.

OF THE WORLD.

THis universall Globe, which is rather an object of the secret conceptions of humane understanding, than of the sharp-sightednes of our eyes, in regard of the perfect clearenes, and absolute puritie, is called by the Grecians κόσμος, which name Pithagoras gave it first, the Latines Mundus. Plinie in his second Booke, and the first Chapter of his naturall Historie, saith, it is that, in the compasse whereof all things are enfoulded. Apuleius describing this excellent frame, worthy of all admiration, saith, It is that, which consisteth of the conjunction of heaven, and of earth, and of the nature of the one, & the other. Aristotle, in his booke of the world, describeth it by the causes, to wit, that it is the order, and disposition of things universall preserved by God, and by its part, a congregation of the Heaven, and of the Earth, and of the natures of them. Apuleius describeth it more at large. The world (saith hee) is an ordinance well adorned by the gift of God, a proper guarde of the Gods. The supporter whereof, for so I call the Center, is the earth, strong, and immoveable, which is the Genitrix and Nurce of all living Creatures; all high things being environed and covered after the manner of a roofe, by the clearnesse of the aire. Moreover it is the house of the Gods, which wee call Heaven, which wee behold, laden with Celestiall bodies, with most beautifull & lucent torches of the Sunne, the Moone, and the rest of the Planets, wherewith it is carried through the whole universe upon the Chariots of dayes and nights, wheeling about with them the innumerable troups of Starres by a continuall course having no end, by any revolution of time. Now that the forme of the world is round, as a most absolute, and a perfect Globe; the latine name chiefely & the consent of those, who call it so, & decipher it round, prooveth it evidentlie: but also many other naturall reasons, make us beleeve, that it is so: not only because this figure is most capable, & most simple, & that all the parts fall into themselves, & that it supporteth it selfe, & is comprehended & enclosed in it selfe: having no neede of any tye or joincture, not sensible of beginning or ending in any of the parts thereof, but also by the view, because that on every side, yee alwayes see the halfe in our hemysphere, because also all the parts thereof have a like forme, which in any other figure cannot bee, and it is ridiculous in those who believed that it was not of a round forme or spherical, but of a round figure pointed on the top, or ovall, or of some other figure. The parts of the world are two, the Æthereall, or Celestiall, & Elementarie or Sublunarie. The Æthereall is this luminous Region, which conteineth all the Celestiall Spheres, exempt from all change. The Elementarie is that,

EVROPE.

The Countrie.

WEE will firſt repreſent unto you Europe, though it be the leaſt of all, yet are mooved thereunto, aſwell by reaſon of the excellence of the Soile, as for the multitude of the inhabitans, and merit of the brave actions of thoſe, who have poſſeſſed it hetherto. Plinie calleth it, A nurcing mother of people, the Dominatreſſe over all other nations, and by much excelleth all other Countries in Beautie. And verily albeit the other parts, are greater, and larger, yet nevertheleſſe they are leſſe inhabited. Europe then for theſe, and ſuch like reaſons ſhall be the firſt we diſcribe as the moſt noble portion of the inheritance, of Iaphet, The eldeſt Sonne of Noah, who enlarged his bounds upon the Territories of Sem, and Cham his bretheren. Now followeth the Etymologie of the ſource and reaſon why it is ſo called. Herodotus beleeveth that the derivation of the name is unknowne: others bring it from Europa Tyrea, the daughter of Agenor King of Phœnicia, who the ancient fables ſay, was raviſhed by Iup. and turned into a Bull, who tooke her upon his back, and carryed her into Sydon of Creta, or into Cypreſſe. Others ſay, that after ſhee had beene raviſhed, ſhee was taken up into a ſhip, that carried in her prow the ſhape of a Bull, ſome others affirme it was a ſhip bearing the picture of Iup. for their patronage, and of a Bull. Palephatus ſaith, that one Candiot called Taurus, tooke away out of Italie or the Tyrrhenian Region, Europa the Kings daughter priſonner. Some againe ſay, that he had with him a legion of Souldiers, who carried in their Colours the picture of a Bull. Others affirme that ſhee was ſo callee for her beautie, becauſe ſhee reſembled this Virgine that was raviſhed. The Bull ſurely, which they would have thoſe of Europe to beare for their Armes, doth not unfitly reſemble the manners, and nature of the Europeans. He is ſomewhat of a loftie courage, inſolent, imbelliſhed with hornes, of a white colour, a large throate, a fat necke, a leader and commandour of Heards, of great continencie, but if he be brought to unlike ſexe, then he ſheweth himſelfe extreamely hot, but afterward chaſte & moderate: ſuch is almoſt the Nature of the Europeans, eſpecially thoſe which inhabite the furtheſt parts Northward. Andron Teïus thinketh that there were two Nymphes marryed to the Ocean, whereof one of them was brought to bed of Aſia and Africa, the other of Europa, others derived it from Europus, whome they ſay reigned in this Province. Becanus will not be perſwaded, that Europa hath its ſource from Greece, becauſe it was firſt inhabited by the Cimmerians before the Grecians, and the diverſitie of their languages makes one beleeve, that it is ſo called by the way of excellencie, as overvalluing of other Regions: for Ver a monoſillable formed with its diphtongue, is nothing elſe, but great, excellent, and ſurpaſſing others. Hop ſignifyeth a multitude of people. The ſaid Becanus in a certaine other booke which he made uſe of in his ſecond edition, added much here & there with his owne hand, and among other things obſerved, a new opinion of the Etymologie of Europa, in theſe words, But when I conferre more carefully (ſaith hee) this name with the holy Scripture, I remember another reaſon, much better, and more happily met withall. Wee ſee, that to Iaphet dilation is promiſed, and as ſome others interpret it, Ioye, which he ſhould attaine vnto, when Chriſt had redeemed us by his death. E then ſignifyeth a lawfull marriage; Ur, excellent; Hop, hope, whence ſpringeth that Europ is an excellent hope of a legitimate marriage, which was proper for that part of the Countrie, which Noah gave to Iaphet for inheritance, for albeit that the poſteritie of Sem were covenant with God manie ages in the race of Abraham, yet it was divorced; but the marriage whereby Chriſt hath joyned Europe to his Church, ſhall never be broken, ſo that Europe is rightly called the portion of Iaphet. There are other appellations of this part of the world. Some call it Tyria, whome they ſay was the mother of her, that was raviſhed. But among the Authours of holy writ, many call it Iapetia of Iaphet, of whome I have ſpoken. Ptolemie writeth, that it was called by a common name Celtica, from people that inhabited in it here and there: for in diverſe places of the world, which at this day wee call Europe, dwelt the Celtians. That Europe is called ſo in good earneſt, it appeareth manifeſtly in Strabo, citing Ephore; where dividing the parts of the Earth, he ſaith, that that part which is towards the Eaſterne winde, is inhabited by the Indians: that which is towards the South, by the Ethiopeans: that which is towards the North, by the Scythians: and that which is towards the Weſt, by the Celtians. The Aſians call all the people of Europe Francks. The Turcks call thoſe Francks, which make profeſſion of the Romiſh religion: and Romei, thoſe which follow the Greekes; The Abiſins of Ethiopia in Africa as many Ephemerides witneſſe, tearme us alſo Alſranges, and the Chriſtian Provinces Frankia; thus much for the name. For the ſituation, ye muſt preſuppoſe, that Ptol. & ſome ancient writers have placed Europe, betweene the Climates 4 and 9, betweene the Parallels 11 and 21, betweene the degrees of latitude 36 and 54, and of longitude, betweene 17 and 61. In our age the declination of the Sunne being changed, as hath beene obſerved and many Countries diſcouvered, and ſince added to our Europe, even to the 72 degree Northward, wee were driven, to finde out ſome further Markes of Climes and Parallels. Europe then is ſituated, betweene the Climes 4 and 18. Parallels 11 and 36. and degrees of latitude 36 and 72: but for the longitude if it be conſidered, as farre as it extendeth, it may be taken from the Spaniſh Cape of S. Vincent unto the lines také from the Source of Tanais, to the Northerne Ocean, betweene the degrees almoſt of 17 and 71. and for the ſhorteſt, from the ſame Cape unto Malea a Cape of Morea, leaving the Iles in the Ægean Sea, which may belong to Europe, betweene the degrees 17 & 58; ſo that the Southerne parts of Europe, are under the degree of 36 in latitude. The mount Calpa in Spayne, one of Hercules Pillars, the moſt Southerne Cape of Sicilie, called Odyſſia: and the Cape of Peloponeſa, at this day Morea, Tenaria by the Ancients, now Cabo Maini in which places the longeſt day is 24 howers longe, and 30 minuts, & the limits moſt Northerne wil be 71 degrees, and a halfe. The Cape of Scandia the furtheſt Northward, called at this day Wardhuys, where it is all day for two moneths, 22 dayes and 7 howres. Now the line drawne perpendicularly, from the Head of Tanais, to the Ocean-Sea Northward, is ſet downe by us for the Eaſterne bound of Europe, according to common opinion, from which wee will not digreſſe: for divers ancient Authours agree not one with an other about the Eaſtern bounds of Europe. Ariſtotle, and others of the ſame opinion, part Europa from Aſia by the River Phaſis, or by the ſtreight, which lyeth betweene Pontus Euxinus, & the Caſpian Sea. Dioniſius, Arrian, Diodorus, Polybius & Iornandus, make them onely by the River Tanais. Abraham Ortelius maketh them from the Ægean Sea, and Pontus Euxinus, Palus Meotide, Tanais and from the Iſtmus, which fountaines run right Northward; ſome againe ſet downe others. Ptolemy placeth them by this ſame Tanais, continuing a line, which he draweth from theſe fountains to the Sea. Following it with the moſt expert Geographers, and deſcending from this line, and ſpringhead of Tanais towards the South, wee will ſet downe with other Authors, the Bounds of Europe to the Meotid marſhes, Boſphorus Cimmeriã, Pontus Euxinus, Boſphorus, Thracian, Propontide, & the Ægean Sea to the Mediterranean, wch divideth it towards the South from Africa, towards the Weſt, the maine Ocean beateth daylie upon her Coaſts, and the Northerne Sea cloſeth its bounds towards the North. Strabo giveth it the ſhape of a Dragon, whereof Spayne hath the Head, France the Neck, Germany the Bodie, Italie and Cimbricke, Cherſoneſe, or Denmarke for the right and left wings.

The temperature. Thus much for the ſituation. Now followeth the temperature of the aire, with the qualities of the Countries. The aire in it is very milde and temperate, which maketh it to be inhabited in all places, though the regions, which lye about 60 degrees in latitude, can hardly be manured by reaſon of the extremity of cold. Strabo ſaith in his 2 Booke: That all Europe is commodious for habitation, ſaving onely ſome ſmall part thereof, becauſe of the over coldnes, to wit, neere unto Tanais, Meotis and Boryſthenes, which may ſeeme ſtrange to ſome, ſeing that thoſe places named by Strabo which lye under the 47, 48, and 49 degrees of latitude, enjoye no leſſe gentle aire, then they doe in France, neare Burdeaux, Orleans and Paris: but the high mountaynes, which are in ſome places of the earth, cauſe that thoſe places become thereby more colde, and lye without manuring. Europe ſurpaſſeth all other parts of the world, not onely in abundance of all things through the admirable and ſweete temperature of the aire, pleaſant proſpect, and multitudes of people; but alſo for the fertility of Fruits, Trees, Plants, all ſorts of Beaſts, Mettals, and other things neceſſary for mans life, and though ſhee hath not Vines in every place, yet where Wine is wanting, there are drinks made of Corne and Fruits, which ſupply that want. And what it wanteth in Pearls, and precious ſtones, Spices, and other things, nevertheleſſe ſhe hath them in abundance brought out of Aſia and all other parts. Beſides, ſhe is the mother of the Tamers and ſubduers of the whole world. Did ſhe not bring forth Alexander the great of Macedonie, and the Romanes, who by a continued ſucceſſion, and an eternall providence, ſubdued all Countries then known in this inferiour world. And Germanie, to this day beareth princes, that keepe, and maintaine the rights, and pretentions of the fourth Monarchie; as farre as the furie, and force of our cruell Enemies will permit. And the great perſonages of Europe, reverenced, and as it were adored in the times of our great Grandfathers, have not they added to their Empire America, (which as ſome thinke was unknowne to our Anceſtours) and likewiſe the richeſt, and chiefeſt parts of Africa, and of Aſia? hath not ſhee beene the mother of ſo many Kings, & warlike Princes (rare elſwhere) for the name of Chriſt? For our Europe holdeth, beſides the renowned Romiſh Empire, more than 28 Kingdomes if ye ſet downe in them the 14, which Damian of Goës numbreth in Spaine, which embraced the Chriſtian religion. Wee ſee then the bleſſing of Noah to be accompliſhed towards the Europeans: God ſhall enlarge Iaphet, and he ſhall dwell in the Tents of Sem, and Canaan ſhall be his ſervant. Gen. 9. 27. For Europe is the nurcing mother of people, victorious over all others, as wee have heretofore alledged out of Pline, and hath many times triumphed over the other parts of the world, which fell to Sem and Cham: for it is certaine, not onely by Divines, but alſo from Ioſephus, and others, that Europe fell to Iaphet the Sonne of Noah, and to his poſterity. What ſhall I ſay of ſo manie Cities ſo populous and renowned? Heretofore Africa grew proud of her Carthage: and Aſia of her Babylon, Ninevie, and Ieruſalem. At this day America, of her Cuſco; & Nova Hiſpania, of her Mexico: but who ſeeth not at this day farre greater in every Province of Europe? Travell onely in concept through Italie, that little Eye of the world, and it will give you a moſt ſufficient teſtimonie thereof, conſider therein the ſumptuous magnificencie of Rome, the royall richeſſe of Venice, the nobilitie of Naples, the brave Trafiques and Negotiations of Genua, the beauty of Milan, and other places: in fine, of other commodities, and marvelous profits, which if a man ſhould hold his peace, yet the thing it ſelfe would proclaime it. Let then the other parts of the world be ſilent. There is none to be paralleld to it, Europe. Her Provinces (as wee call them at this day) are Spayne, France, Germanie, Italie, Hungarie, Tranſilvania, Dalmatia, Greece, Polonia, Lithuania, Muſcovia, Roxolania, Denmarke, Sweedland and Norwegh. There are alſo Iles in the Northerne Ocean, England, Scotland, Ireland, Iſland, Friſland, and others elſwhere. In the Mediterran Sea are the Baleares, Majorca & Minorca, Corſica, Sadinia, Sicilie, Malta, Corcyra, Creta, & many others well peopled. Who can declare beſides the number & ſundry qualities of her Lakes, Pooles, Rivers, and ſuch waters, which beſides the Fiſh wherewith they abouud ſerve as walls, and ramparts againſt their Enemies, & if I ſhould ſpeake of the Sea & commodities thereof, time would faile me rather than matter, which ſhall be repreſented in their time. In her there are no Mountaines wanting, among which the Alpes and Pyreney-Mountaines lye white with continuall ſnowe: no leſſe may I ſay of the Woods & Foreſts, in wch many beaſts are bred, very profitable and neceſſary for the uſe of man, ſeldome any hurtfull. What ſhall I ſpeake of publicke workes, ſacred and common, & of private alſo? Yee ſhall behould in her magnificent and high ſteepled Churches and Temples, and an infinite number of Abbeys, Monaſteries and Hoſpitals, many excellent Palaces of Princes, innumerable faire and excellent houſes of great Lords, to conclude an incredible nnmber of ſumptuous buildings, both publique and particnlar. Here wee have the right of Lawes, the dignity of the Chriſtian Religion, the force of Armes, an infinite number of grave Senators, and Councellours, aſwell of State as other profeſſions, and if wee ſhould nominate the Chiefeſt of them, both the one and the other, never was there ſeene in any other parts of the world, ſuch a multitude of great perſonages, as are in this one quarter of Europe onely. Moreover, Europe manageth all Arts and Sciences with ſuch dexterity, that for the invention of manie things, ſhee may be truely called a Mother, and for the conſervation of many rare things, to beare the title of a Nurcing Mother of humane wiſedome: ſhee hath in her moſt excellent Academies, for all manner of learning, whereas other Countries are all of them, overſpread with Barbariſme: in fine, one cannot relate fullie the vertues and qualities ſpoken of before: the Vices (wch are exempted) are known by theſe additions following. The Francons are ſimple, blockiſh, & furious; the Bavarians ſumptuous, gluttons, and braſenfaced, the Sweeds light, bablers, and boaſters; the Thuringeans diſtruſtfull, ſlovens, and quarrelſome; the Saxons diſſemblers, double-hearted, and opinionative; the Belgians good horſmen, tender, docible and delicate; the Italians proud, revengfull, and ingenious; the Spaniard diſdainfull, cautious and greedie; the Gaules proper, intemperate, raſh-headed; the Cimbrians high minded, ſeditious and terrible; the Sarmates gluttons, proud, and theeves; the Bohemians cruell, lovers of novelties, filtchers; the Illyricks variable, malicious and ryotous; the Pannonians rude, ſuperſtitious; the Grecians miſerable. Briefly there is an other gentile forme to expreſſe thoſe vices by: A Pont of Polonia, a Monck of Bohemia, a Warrior of Auſtria, a Religious Sweed, Italian devotion, Pruſſian religion, German breakfaſts, the French conſtancie, all of them not worth a nut.

The fertilitie of Europe.

The power and Gouvernement

THE POLE ARCTIQVE,

And the deſcription of the Septentrionall or Northerne Lands.

HAVING (curteous Reader) already premiſed the generall deſcription of the whole Orbe of the earth, and of Europe apart; I have reſolved, after the example of Ptolemie, Prince of Coſmographers, to begin Coſmographie from the Pole it ſelfe, and the particular Regions lying thereabouts under it: that ſo deſcending, to wit, from the higher to the inferiour; and proceeding from the left hand to the right, I may by little and little conjoyne the North with the South, and the Eaſt with the Weſt. Which that it may proove happy and fortunate both to me and the Chriſtian Republique, I pray, and earneſtly beſeech the moſt good and great God. The Pole is the extremitie of the Axel-tree, that is, a ſtreight line drawn through the Center of the Globe, from the one ſide to the other, which the Latines call vertices. They are two: the Septentrionall or North Pole called Arctique, which doth alwayes appeare to us in the North. The other the Meridionall or South Pole, called Antarctique; and appeareth to them that inhabit the South. This breifely ſufficeth in this place to have ſpoken concerning the Poles, now I come to the Regions lying under the Pole Arctique, which are Greeneland, Friſland, Nova Zembla, with many mo, which we will treat of very breifly, ſo far forth as they are knowne unto us. Greenland is ſo called of greenneſſe: an Iland the greateſt part of it as yet unknowne, It is ſituate betwixt the Circle Arctique and the Pole: the extreame paralels whereof towards the South, are in the degree of 65 and towards the North, in 77. In this Iland (if we give credit to Nicholas Zenit, who in the yeare 1380 in his voiage into thoſe parts, was ſore toſſed up and downe in thoſe Seas neare adjoyning) there is continuall winter for the ſpace of 9 moneths, during which time it never raineth, and the ſnow from the beginning of winter is never diſſolved untill the end of it: yet is not hurtfull at all to the graſſe, for here is marvellous increaſe of paſture, and abundance of beaſts and milch cattell, by reaſon of that wonderfull plenty of paſture, ſo that they ſet up great piles and heapes of butter and cheeſe to ſell to thoſe that uſually ſaile thither. All this countrie is full of cruell beares with whom the inhabitants have continual war. There be alſo Foxes: and if it be true, as ſome ſay, Unicornes. Wee know but onely two places that are habitable: Alba, and the Monaſtery of S. Thomas, in the South are theſe Rivers; Thor, Boior, Naph, Land; in the Weſt, Iver, Nice, Ham, Fiſte; in the North, Feder, Diver: Mare pigrum doth touch Greenland, which is alſo called the Icie Sea: of that Sea Plinie writeth thus, Hecateus calleth the Septentrionall Ocean Amalchia of the river Paropamiſus, which runneth by Scythia; which name in their language, ſignifieth congealed: Philemon ſaith, that the Simbrians called it Morimarusa, that is to ſay, the dead Sea, unto the Promontory Rubeas and beyond Gronium. In Greenland there is a Monaſtery of preaching Friars, ſituated by a mountaine vomiting fier: at the foot whereof there is a fountaine of continuall ſpringing water, by the heat whereof not only al the lodgings of that monaſtery are made warme like a ſtove, but alſo bread and meate are cooked without any other fire. All the fabrick of this Monaſtery conſiſteth of ſandy ſinders, which the ſame mountaine caſteth up out of the midſt of the flames. For the exteriour cruſt of theſe ſtones, water being powred vpon them, is mollified, whereby it commeth to paſſe, that ſtones laid one upon another are glued together, as with moſt tough morter. The ſame fountaines do make warme the gardens neare adjoyning, ſo that they are alwayes green with flowers and herbs. Alſo the next coaſt of the Sea, by the benignity of theſe waters is never frozen, but alwayes open for fiſh and men: whereupon there is ſo great a concourſe of Sea-foule and fiſh from the colder places, that not only theſe Monkes, but alſo all the inhabitants neare adjoyning, have whereby they may live ſweetly and ſufficiently. There are in this Iland two Epiſcopall ſeats, under the ordination of the Arch-Biſhop of Nidroſia, which is the Metropolis of Norway. The inhabitants are of inconſtant ſpirits, and much addicted to Magicall incantations. They are reported by their art Magick and Charmes, to raiſe tempeſts on the Seas, and endanger the ſhips of ſtrangers that they may pillage them: for they have little boates, made of the hides of beaſts, which have a thick skin, which feare not the agitation of the Sea, nor to be ſplit againſt the rocks: and by this meanes aſſaile other ſhips which labour againſt the tempeſts and waves of the Sea. The moſt part of them are Chriſtians, but through the negligence of their Paſtors, many did backſlide to idolatry. Friſland, an Ile altogether unknowne to the ancients, is greater than Ireland: in it is a great indiſpoſition of the heaven, not ſo clement. The natives have not any fruits at all, but live for the moſt part upon fiſh. Their principall City beareth the ſame name that the Ile doth, and is ſubject to the King of Norway. The inhabitants for the moſt part, give themſelves to fiſhing: for there is ſo great quantity of of fiſh of all ſorts taken in their port, that many ſhips are laden thereby, which they carry to the Ilands neare adjoyning, to be ſolde. Zieglerus affirmeth, that the Sea next to this Iland on the Weſterne part, is full of ſhelves, flats, and dangerous rockes: it is named of the inhabitants Icarium, and the Iland Icaria. This Iland beginneth in this our time to be knowne unto us againe, and that by the happy labours and diligence of Engliſhmen. Nova Zembla is an Iland ſituate under the 76 degree. Here the aire is very rigorous, and moſt extreme colde: the Countrie deſert, woody, rigid, and very unpleaſant; they want fields, there groweth neither graine, graſſe, nor leaves, nor is to be found any other living creatures, but bears foxes, and other ravenous beaſts. The Hollanders alſo of late, ſailing into the Northerne Sea, neare unto the Ilands which they call the Iles of Orange, ſituated towards the North part of Nova Zembla, in the height of 77 degrees, were forced to go on ſhore, enter the liſts, and fight againſt great Sea-beaſts, ſurpaſſing the Oxe in greatneſſe of body; which the common ſorte call Walruſſchen: they have a mouth like a Lyon, a skin much more hairy, foure feet, two teeth growing and ſtanding out from the upper part of their mouth, ſmooth, hard and white, that in price they are valued no way inferior to thoſe of the Elephant. Here are three paſſages or ſtraights, the ſtraights of Waigats, Forbiſher, and Davis. The ſtraight of Waigats the which is alſo called Naſſovic, is extended towards the Eaſt, to the angle of the croſſe; after to the North-eaſt, to the angle of debate, inclining a little towards the Eaſt. This ſtraight is found to be paſſable, therefore the Hollanders (having thorowly viewed the coaſts on both ſides) paſſed into the quiet and tranquill Sea. On the right ſide dwell the Samnites, on the left ſide certaine Barbars, whoſe paths and foot-ſteps were ſeene, but themſelves in perſon never appeared, although with great labour and diligence they were ſought for. The Samnites have an ill-favoured body, and are of rude behaviour, yet in wit ſeeme to bee capable and fit for the knowledge of arts. They are clothed from the head to the foot with the skins of deere, the richer ſorte with cloth furred with skins. They all weare their haire long, and curle it. They are of a low ſtature, have abroad and ſmooth faces, little eies, ſhort feet. They are all Idolaters, and have images of wood, unpoliſhed and rude which they worſhip, and whereunto they offer Sacrifice. The ſtraight of Forbiſher, hath that name of Martin Forbisher, an Engliſhman, who in the yeare 1577, ſeeking a paſſage to go to Cathaia by the North, came to a certaine ſtraight wherein he found both Ilands and men, void of all civility, they live upon raw fleſh of wilde beaſts, which they take by hunting, they eat alſo raw herbes, like bruit beaſts. Their houſes are covered with whale skins. It is there moſt bitter colde. They learne their dogs to beare the yoake, and draw upon the ice all things neceſſary. Their weapons are bowes, arrowes, and ſlings. They are much delighted with things that ſhine and glitter, and things that make a tinkling ſound. What religion they uſe, and what knowledge of God they have, we are altogether ignorant. They have no wood there: great ſtore of harts, and as the countrie is barren, ſo are the inhabitants ſtupid and blockiſh, ſlow and dul, and without any ſpirit or underſtanding. They do not at all mannure the earth, but content themſelves with what it produceth of its owne accord: they live by hunting: their drinke is the warme blood of beaſts, or the water of ice: there be no rivers nor fountaines, for the colde is ſo violent, that it cloſeth up the pores of the earth, that no ſpring of water can breake out: the men are very ſtout hunters, and above all, cunning foulers: they uſe a certain kinde of boat made of skins, wherein onely one man can ſit, who hath no need of any mo oares but one; in his right hand he holdeth an inſtrument wherewith hee ſhooteth at birds: the practice hereof hath been ſeen in England, where a man whom Martin Forbiſher brought with him from hence, ſhot Swans in this ſorte with the great admiration of all men, the Queen giving him leave ſo to do. This man having on a certaine time at Briſtow, ſeen the trumpeter of Captain Forbiſher get upon his horſe he would alſo get up; but with his face towards the horſe taile, not without great laughter and pleaſure to the beholders. The ſtraight of Davis, named of one Iohn Davis, who diſcovered it, who in the yeare 1585, and the year following, ſeeking a paſſage by the North to go to China, did run along the coaſt of America, or rather Greenland to the Northeaſt, from 53 to 75 degrees. That which you ſee diſcribed in this table of thoſe foure Iles, by ſo many Euripes, under the North Pole itſelfe, is taken from the journall of James Knox of Bolduc, or the Buſſe, who reporteth that a certaine Engliſh Friar, minorite of Oxford, a Mathematician, hath ſeene and compoſed the lands lying about the Pole, and meaſured them with an aſtrolable, and deſcribed them by a Geometricall inſtrument. Of this, Mercator hath made a table, grounded rather upon the report of another, than upon any knowledge hee himſelfe had of it. This Knox ſaith, that theſe foure Euripes meeting together, ſo violently precipitate themſelves into this deepe Gulfe (where alſo he maketh a black rock to ſtand under the Pole, the compaſſe whereof is 33 leagues) that the ſhips once entring therein, cannot retire by any force of the winde; and that there is never ſo much winde there, as is able to turne a winde mill. But theſe things to be falſe, our Argonauts of late have ſhewed: and namely, the Hollanders, who have diſcovered and obſerved thoſe places, in which it is ſaid that theſe Euripes are: who have found the Sea to be open unto the 81 degree of latitude, and no ſuch attractions of waters towards thoſe places which lye right under the Pole, as are fained; when yet the beginning of that attraction is written to be in 77. But of the Septentrionall or Northerne people thus writeth Mela: In the coaſt of Aſia (ſaith he) the firſt are the Hyperboreans to the North, under the conſtellation of the Pole, where the ſun doth not riſe and ſet every day, as with us, but firſt riſeth in the Equinoctiall of the ſpring, and ſetteth in that of autome: ſo that they have ſixe moneths day, and as many night. The earth there is narrow, expoſed to the ſun, fertile by nature, the inhabitants juſt, and live longer and more bleſſedly than any other men. They delight to live at eaſe: they know not what belongeth to wars or diſſentions: they are Worshipers of Apollo, and were wont to ſend him of their firſt fruits by their vergins to Delos, and after by the people, who incontinent carried them further: they are reported to have obſerved this cuſtome a long time, but is now broken off by default of the people. They dwell in woods and forreſts, and when they thinke they have lived long enough, crowned with garlands chearfull and merry, they caſt themſelves from a rock into the Sea, that is to them an excellent funerall. But Hecatæus long ſince hath written a book of theſe things, cited of Plinie, who out of Mela hath deſcribed many things touching this people. Of which two approoved Authors, both the one and the other confirme the truth hereof. Paulus Jovius in his deſcription of Muſcovia hath theſe words: In the utmoſt coaſt of that Ocean (where Norway and Sweden are joyned to the continent) are the Laplanders, a people marvellous ſavage, who if they ſee but a ſtranger or a ship, will flee away. They know neither fruit nor apples, nor any benignity of the earth or heaven. By their onely skill in shooting, they get to eate, and clothe themſelves with skins of wilde beaſts. Their chambers are little caves filled with dry leaves, and the hollow truncks of trees ſo wrought either by fire put within them, or by age. Some inhabiting by the Sea, where is great ſtore of fish do uſe very fooliſh but fortunate arts to take them, and do lay up their fish dried hard with the ſmoak. They are of a low ſtature, of a pale and dull countenance, but ſwift of foot. Their nature the Muſcovites who are next neighbours to them, are ignorant of, and ſay, that to aſſaile them with a ſmall multitude were dangerous, and to provoke with a great armie ſuch who lead a life needy of all things, they do not eſteem profitable or honourable. Beyond the Laplanders there be found Pygmies who after they come to their full growth, ſcarce exceed the meaſure of one of our children of ten yeares of age: a timerous people, expreſſing their ſpeech after a chattering manner, in ſuch wiſe that they ſeem to come neare in nature to the Ape, as they are remote from the juſt ſtature of a man. Beyond theſe people are other nations much more remote, unknowne to the Muſcovites, by reaſon no peregrination of any perſon hath bin thitherwards unto the Ocean, but onely by fame and hereſay of Merchants. But it is manifeſt that Duidna runneth with great force towards the North, and that there is there a very great Sea, ſo that from thence to Cathaia, following the coaſt on the right hand, it is credible by moſt certain conjecture, a man may paſſe by ship. But concerning the habitation of the Hyperboreans, it is expedient to heare Julius Scaliger Exerc. 37. concerning navigation from the Hyperboreall Sea, towards China, writing thus: But whether or no any navigation may bee made by that Sea unto China, the opinions of men are divers, yet theſe be ours: from the river Duvina, they preſcribe to coaſt that countrie which compaſſeth Scythia, even to the oriental angle, in dubling whereof, it behooveth them to change the north wind with the weſt; whereof they that ſpeak in that manner, ſhew, that they are ignorant of the nature both of that ſea, windes and coaſt: for the weſt and eaſt windes are there ſo rare, that they are almoſt unknown: but the north wind ſo frequent, that nature ſeemeth to have given it the right of command there: the winter tyrannizeth there ten months, during which time the ſea is covered over with ice. In Summer perpetuall obſcurity, which after mid day for an howre or two, beginning a little to clear up, by and by is renewed as much as before. And then is there more danger by reaſon of the ice: the huge cruſts whereof floting up and domne reſemble mooving Ilands, running and beating one againſt another.

ISLAND.

The names by whom, and wherefore given.

ISLAND, among the ſundry Ilands of the Occidentall Ocean, which are ſubject to the Kingdome of Norway, is the greateſt: it hath its name of the ice, whereby it is commonly frozen. It is alſo called Sneland, of ſnow: alſo Gardaretsholme, that is, the Ile of Gardart, from the name of the firſt diſcoverer: as Amgrinus Ionas an Iſlander writeth. Many deem this to be Thule, whereof the ancients write, which alſo Ptolemie calleth Thule: the middle whereof he placeth in degree of latitude, 30. 20. of longitude, 63. This Soline maketh to be five dayes and nights ſailing from the Orcades: celebrated by the Poets when they would intimate any thing to be far ſeparated, as moſt remote from the continent of the whole world: hence Virgl: —Tibi ſerviet ultima Thule: the utmoſt Thule ſhall ſerve thee. Seneca: —Terrarum ultima Thule, the utmoſt of all Lands. Claudian: —Thule procul axe remotum, Thule far remote from the axeltree. Statius, —Ignotum vincere Thulen, to vanquiſh the unknowne Thule: yet this is to be noted, that Thule is uſed by Statius himſelfe for Britaine in theſe verſes.

Cærulus haud aliter quum demicat incola Thules,
Agmina falcifero circumvenit acta covino.

And for a moſt remote Region in that of Juvenal.

De conducendo loquitur jam Rhetore Thule.

Suidas ſaith, that it took that name of Thule a King of Egypt. Iſidore, of the Sun, in theſe words: Thule the utmoſt Ile of the Ocean, betwixt the Septentrionall and Occidentall Region beyond Britaine, having its name of the Sun, becauſe in it the Sun maketh the Solſtice of Summer, and beyond it there is no day at all: whence it commeth that the Sea there is ſlow and congealed. Reinerus Reneccius: that it took that name from the Saxon word Tel, that is to ſay, limit, as if it were the limit of the North and of the Weſt. But truly, whether there ever was any Thule or no, Sineſius doubteth: and Giraldus writeth, no ſuch any where ever appeared, and the more learned ſort are of divers opinions. Many have affirmed Iſland to to have been called Thule, but to theſe are oppoſite, Saxo-Grammaticus, Cranzius, Milius, Iovius, Peucerus Ortelius is of opinion that Tilemark (a Marquiſat of Norway) is that Tule of the ancients: but ſeeing that (according to Iſidore) Thule lieth between the north and the weſt, we muſt ſeek it elſwhere. The moſt learned Gaſpar Peucerus, in the book of the dimenſion of the earth, writeth, that Shetland is called of Mariners, Theleuſell: which if it be ſo, wee may well ſay with the moſt learned Camden, that Thule is found out, and that it is not Iſland, or Tilemark, but Shetland. For this Ile is betwixt Scotland and Norway, horrible colde, and on all parts expoſed to ſtormes and tempeſts: the inhabitants whereof, have in ſtead of meale and bread, fiſh dried with the winde and bruiſed. Surely Solinus placeth it neare unto Britaine. There are many other Iles (ſaith hee) about Britaine, of the which Thule is the utmoſt, in the which, in the ſolſtice of ſummer, the Sun paſſing from the ſigne of Cancer, there is almoſt no night: in the ſolſtice of winter, the day is there ſo ſhort, that the riſing and ſetting of the Sun are conjoyned together. Beyond Thule is the Sea ſlow and congealed. Thence from the Promontory of Caledonia, to go to Thule, is two dayes ſailing. But although the Pole Arctique is not ſo elevated at Shetland, as Pitheas Maßilienſis (as Strabo reporteth) hath imagined, yet the affinity of the name before mentioned, the elevation of the Pole agreeing with that of Ptolemie, and that it is diſtant two dayes ſailing from the Promontory of Caledonia, according to the deſcription of Solinus, makes us nevertheles to judge that it is that ſame of Thule. But of theſe this ſufficeth; I now returne to Iſland. But Iſland is not ſituated under the firſt Meridian (as one hath noted) but in the eight degree from it: the length thereof is 100 Germane miles, as the vulgar writers have it; to theſe the aforeſaid Jonas ad-44: the latitude 65 Germane miles: the heaven rigorous, and for the moſt part it is unmanured, eſpecially towards the notherne part, by reaſon of the vehement blaſts of the ſoutherly winde, which ſuffereth not ſo much as the ſhrubs or fruit trees to grow to any height there, as Olaus writeth. The ground not at all fit for ſowing, neither doth it bear any corne: but the paſture is ſo good (as all who have written of it report) that there is danger leſt the cattell be ſuffocated with fatnes, if they be not reſtrained from it. Jonas acknowledgeth that they have no other beaſts for labour but Horſes and Oxen: that the oxen and cowes have no hornes, but the ſheep have: they have little white dogs which they love extremely: white Falcons in great abundance: there are alſo white Ravens or Crowes, very hurtfull to little lambs and pigs: alſo white bears and hares; yea (as our Iſlander, before mentioned, often witneſſeth) Eagles with white tailes, which Plinie (as he addeth) called Pygargos. Velleius witneſſeth, that this Iland beareth no other tree, but birch and juniper, ſo that the whole Iland is in great want of wood: unles it happen (as it doth ſometimes from the Septentrionall parts) that great trees by tempeſtuous windes rooted up and blowne into the water, are caſt upon this coaſt, like ſhipwracks by the fury of the waves, which the inhabitants uſe for fire buildings, and to make ſhips. It was made ſubject to the Kingdome of Norway the yeare 1260 in the which this Jonas ſaith they did firſt do homage thereunto. Wherefore the King of Denmarke (who is alſo of Norway) ſendeth thither every yeare a Governour, who maketh his reſidence in the Caſtle of Bciſtede, and they do now obey him, as they did once their Biſhops, by whom they were converted to the Chriſtian faith under Adelbert. Some thinke that it begun to be inhabited in the time of Harald Fairhaire, the firſt King of Norway; to wit, after hee had expelled and chaſed away all the little kings out of Norway, who ſeeking new habitations, remooved hither with their Families, and (looſing by little and little the deſire of returning into their countrie) there remained. It ſeemeth that this happened in the year of Chriſt 1000. Jonas the Iſlander writeth, about the yeare 874, where you may finde the order and names of all theſe Biſhops. Crantzius nameth their firſt Biſhop Iſleph. It ſeemeth that it came under the government of the Norwayes, before 200 yeares, by that which is extracted out of the Eclogues of Nicholas Zunius: where we read that Zichmi, King of Friſland, brought thither his army, but in vaine; for he was repulſed and chaſed away by the Garriſon which the King of Norway placed there. The Iland is divided into ſo many parts, as there be cardinall points in the world: they call the Orientall part, Auſtlendingafiordnng: the Occidentall, Weſtfiordung: the Septentrionall, Nortlendingafiordung: the Meridionall, Suydlendingafiordung. They have no cities: in place whereof they retire to the mountaines. Here is a fountain, the malignity of the exhalation, and fuming of the waters thereof, corrupteth the nature of every thing, and whatſoever is ſprinkled with the exhalation of this fume, is changed into the hardnes of ſtone, the forme only remaining. There is alſo another fountain of peſtilent water, which whoſo taſteth, falleth down dead as with poiſon. But the Septentrionall Ocean, where this Iland is ſituate, doth affoord ſuch abundance of fiſh, and bringeth ſo great profit to the Republique of Iſland, that not onely the weale, and proſperity of many men, but of the whole Iland ſeemeth to depend thereupon: for from thence they all live, get ſuſtenance, and ſuſtane their Families. Here, if I would reckon up all the ſorts of the fiſhes of this Sea, time would faile me: but it will not be amiſſe to make mention of ſome of the rareſt of them: for nature no where is more ſeene to ſport her ſelfe, in the variation of the formes of fiſhes, than in this northerne Sea: the Hyena a moſt monſtrous creature, is there ſeene of Sailers: Zyphius having the head of an Owle, ſtriking horror to the beholders, the Sea-horſe, having a maine cauſing deſtruction to fiſhermen: the Sea-oxe, of an aſhcolour, ſometimes goeth out of the water and feedeth on the Sea-ſhoar, a little hollow skin cleaveth to his noſe, by the helpe whereof he liveth in the water, which being broken, he joyneth himſelfe of his owne accord to other oxen: the calfe (which they ſay) goeth on his foure feet in the bottome of the Sea, having a moſt hard skin, which can ſcarcely bee pearced with many blowes. There are alſo ſeen Nahuai, whoſe fleſh whoſo eateth, dieth preſently; having a tooth in the inner part of the head, ſtanding out ſeven cubits; this, ſome have ſold for Unicornes horne: it is ſuppoſed to reſiſt poyſon. This beaſt is fourtie els in length. Roider, 130 cubits, but hath no teeth: his fleſh is good to eat, and the fat cureth many diſeaſes: the Brittiſh Whale, 30 els long, wanteth teeth, and hath a tongue 7 els long. There is alſo a ſort of moſt mighty Whales which ſeldome appear, more like an Iland than a fiſh: they cannot purſue other fiſhes becauſe of their greatnes, yet take them by a naturall art of their owne. There is alſo another fiſh full of griſtles, ſomewhat like a Ray, but much greater: when it appeareth it ſheweth like an Iland, doth overſet ſhips with her wings: and other things. George Agricola ſaith, there bee there three mountaines reaching up to heaven, the tops whereof are alwayes white with ſnow, the nether parts burne with fire: the firſt is called Hecla, the ſecond, of the croſſe; the third, Helga; that is to ſay, holy. Not far diſtant from Hecla, are mines of brimſtone, the onely merchandiſe almoſt and cuſtome of the Iland; for the merchants lade their ſhips therewith, and carry it away: when this mountain is in his fury, it ſoundeth like horrible thunder, caſteth out huge ſtones, vomiteth brimſtone, doth fill all far and near with aſhes, that a man cannot till the ground within 20 miles of it. They that of curioſity approach near unto the mountain to contemplate the nature and cauſes of this burning, are eaſily ſwallowed up quick within one gulfe or other, for there are many, and covered over with aſhes, that no man can take heed to himſelfe: this place therefore they call the priſon of curſed ſoules. And withall it hapneth when the ice thaweth, for 8 whole moneths, that great flakes daſhing againſt the ſhoare, make a great noiſe, which the inhabitants ſay is the howling and lamentation of ſoules. Of the ſame nature alſo there is another mountaine, by name Helga: this mountain in the year 1581 (as Jonas teſtifieth) with ſo great noiſe and thunder did caſt up fire and ſtones, that fourſcore miles off, they beleeved great canons to be ſhot off. It hath within it a certain gulfe, where ghoſts preſent themſelves ſo apparant to the company of men, that thoſe that know not when they died, hold them for living; and do not know the error of their ſence, till they be vaniſhed. But theſe things are either fabulous, or, without doubt, deluſions of devils. Jonas himſelfe thinketh them fabulous. Crantzius writeth, that the Iſlanders dwell for the moſt part in caves, little hollow manſions diged out at the ſides of the mountains, ſpecially in winter. For want of wood they build houſes of fiſh bones. Jonas on the contrary ſaith, that there are many temples and divers manſions of wood and ſtone, very ſumptuous and magnificent. Biſhopricks, Hola: under which are the Monaſteries, Pingora, Remeſtede, Modur, Munkeniere, Schalholt, under which Monaſtery are Videy, Pynebar, Kirkebar and Skiada. Yet it is to be ſeen in the writings of Velleius, author of this table, that there are 9 Monaſteries, and beſides, 329 temples. The Biſhops are ſent thither from the Academy of Hafnie in Denmark: whereof, the one is preſident over the Northerne part of the Iland; the other, over the South: both of them having their publique Academies joyned to their houſes, wherein both of them are bound to nouriſh and inſtruct at their owne charges, 24 children. The inhabitants are contented to live under one roofe with their beaſts: lie and feed as they do. They lead a holy ſimple life, deſiring no more than nature affoordeth them: for they have the mountaines for their houſes, and fountaines for dainties; Bleſſed is that people whoſe poverty no man envieth, and ſo much the more bleſſed becauſe they embraced Chriſtianity. But the Engliſh and Daniſh merchants, ſuffer them not to reſt and be contented with their own: for (by reaſon of exportation of fiſhing, frequenting this Iland) together with all kinde of merchandiſe, they have brought in all our vices. They celebrate the memorable actions of their Anceſtors by verſes graven in rocks, to vindicate them from oblivion. They live moſt upon fiſh, which alſo being dried and beaten, as it were, into meale, they uſe in ſtead of bread for the table: but the daintier ſort, bread twice baked. In times paſt water was their drink, and to the richer ſort milke; but now they have learned to mingle fruits, brought unto them from other parts therewith, loathing to drinke pure water: for thoſe of Lubeck, Hamburgh and Roſtock, yearly frequenting this Iland, do carry thither meal, bread, bear, wine, Engliſh cloth, linnen, yron, ſteel, gould, ſilver, tyres for women, and timber to build ſhips: for theſe they export Iſland cloth, great pieces of brimſtone diged out of the earth, fiſh hard dried, butter, tallow, fleeces of wool, the skins of wilde beaſts, foxes, white falcons, horſes, and other ſuch like things. Here is ſo great abundance of fiſh, that they make high piles thereof abroad out of their houſes, exceeding ſometimes their houſes in height. There is ſuch abundance of ſalt butter, that beſides their ordinary veſſels, they fill their other ſweet cheſts, fourty foot long, and five broad. But I will annexe the verſes of Eraſmus Michael, which he hath in the third book of navigation, concerning Iſland.

The generall Deſcription
OF THE
BRITTISH ILANDS,

Compriſed under the name of England, Scotland and Ireland, with the circumjacent Iles, as the Orcades, Hebrides, Mona, or Angleſey, Vecta, or VVight, Garnſey and Garſey, with others, faithfully collected, and for the moſt part enlarged, out of that learned and famous Hiſtoriographer of our moderne times, VVilliam Camden, and and other Authors beſides.

The ſite and bounds of Brittain.

GREAT Britain (except Java) is the greateſt and moſt famous Iland (without any compariſon) in the world; yea, as one ſaith, a ſecond world out of the world, ſevered from the Continent of Europe, by the interflowing of the Ocean, lieth againſt Germany and France, triangle wiſe; by reaſon of three Promontories ſhooting out into divers parts, to wit, Belerium, called the Cape of S. Burien in Cornwall, Weſtward; Cantium, that is the Fore-land of Kent, Eaſtward; and Traviſum, or Orcas, that is, the point of Catnes in Scotland, Northward. On the Weſt ſide, whereas Ireland is ſeated, Verginius called the Weſterne Ocean, breaketh in; from the North, it hath the moſt vaſt and wide Hyperborean Sea beating upon it; on the Eaſt ſide againe, it is ſore enforced with the Germane Sea; and Southward it lieth oppoſite to France, with the Britiſh Sea. Disjoyned from thoſe neighbouring Countries all about, by a convenient diſtance, every way fitted with moſt commodious and open havens for traffique with the univerſall world, and for the generall good as it were of mankinde, thruſting it ſelfe forward with great deſire from all parts into the Sea. For between the ſaid fore-land of Kent and Calis in France, it ſo advanceth it ſelfe, and the Sea is ſo ſtraightned, that ſome thinke the Land there was pierced thorow & received the ſeas into it, which before times hadbeen excluded: for the maintenance of which their conceit, alledge Virgil, in that verſe of his.

Et penitus toto diviſos Orbe Britannos.

And Brittans people quite disjoyn'd from all the (world beſides.

As alſo becauſe Brittain (ſaith Servius Honoratus) was in times paſt joyned to the Main. And likewiſe Claudian, who, in imitation of him wrote thus:

——Noſtro deducta Britannia mundo:

Brittain a Land which ſevered is from this our [Roman] world.

Certes, that the outward face and faſhion of this Globe of earth hath bin with the inundation of Noahs flood, as alſo by other cauſes, altered; that ſome mountains thereby encreaſed in height, many places higher than other ſettled low, and became even plaines and vallies, that waterie waſhes were dried up, and dry ground turned to be ſtanding waters, yea and that certain Ilands have been violently broken off from the firme Land, carrieth ſome likelyhood of truth. But whether the ſame bee true indeed, or whether there were any Ilands at all before the deluge, it is not my purpoſe here to argue, neither take I pleaſure without good advice, to ſuſpend my judgement upon Gods workes. That the providence of God hath ordained divers things to one and the ſame end, who knoweth not? and verily, the parcels of earth diſperſed here and there within the Sea, ſerve no leſſe to adorn the world, than Lakes ſpread upon the earth, and hils raiſed aloft, as well Divines as Philoſophers have alwayes held.

The forme of the Iland.

Livius and Fabius Ruſticus have likened the forme of great Brittain to a long diſh, or a two edged axe, and ſo it is indeed ſhapened towards the South, as Tacitus witneſſeth, whereupon the fame went of the whole. But Northward, that huge and inorm tract of ground running beyond unto the furtheſt point, groweth narrow and ſharpe like a wedge, ſo large and of ſuch exceeding greatneſſe in circuit they of old time took it to be, that Cæſar, who was the firſt of all the Romans, that diſcovered it, wrote, how he had found out another world: ſuppoſing the ſame ſo great, as that it ſeemed to contain within it, the Ocean, and not to bee compaſſed about therewith. And Julius Solinus Poliſtor hath left in writing, that for the largenes therof, it deſerveth well near the name of a ſecond world.

The dimenſions both ancients and moderne.

As for the dimenſion, thoſe who have calculated the ſpaces of heaven, place Britain under the 9 and 13 Climates of the Northern temperate Zone, and between the Paralels 18 and 26, which make the longeſt day in the North parts of Scotland at the Summer Solſtice, 18 howres long, and no night at all, but only an obſcure twilight. And for the meaſure thereof Cæſar in his time writeth, that the coaſt of Brittain, which looketh towards the South, containeth 500000 paces; that which is towards the Weſt, 700000, and that which is towards the North, 800000; making in all the whole circuit, to be 2000000 paces. But theſe of our modern times, have now at length by many and ſundry voyages, found out in ſome ſort the true dimenſion and juſt compaſſe of the whole Ile more exactly. For from the point Traviſum (ſaith Camden) unto the Cape Belerium, the reaches, and crooked turnings of the Sea-banckes, along the Weſt conſidered, there are rekoned much about 812 miles; from thence keeping the Sea ſide, as it bendeth Southward, untill you come to the foreland of Kent, 320 miles, whence coaſting by the Germane ſea with the crooked creeks and inlets for 704 miles, it reacheth to the aforeſaid point, Traviſum: ſo that by this account, the whole Iland taketh in compaſſe 1836 Engliſh miles.

The aire is ſo kinde and temperate, that not only the Summers be not exceſſive hot, by reaſon of continuall gentle windes, that abate their heat, which as they reſpect the fruits of the earth, ſo they yeeld a moſt wholſome and pleaſing contentment to men and beaſt: the winters are alſo paſſing milde; for the raine falling often with ſtill ſhowers (to ſay nothing of the aire it ſelfe ſomewhat thick and groſſe) diſſolveth the rigor of the cold, and withall, the Sea which compaſſeth it, with moderate warmth doth comfort the Land in ſuch a ſorte, that the cold with us is much more remiſſe, than in ſome parts of France and Italy. Whereon it is that Minutius Felix prooving that God by his providence hath a ſpeciall regard of the ſeveral parts of the world, as well as of the whole, ſaith, that Brittain though it want otherwhiles the aſpect of the Sun, yet it is refreſhed with the warmth of the Sea flowing round about it, neither need you to marvell at his ſpeech, conſidering the warmth of the Sea. The Seas (ſaith Cicero) ſtirred to and fro with the windes, do ſo waxe warme, that a man may eaſily perceive within that world of waters, there is encloſed a certaine heat. To the temperatenes alſo of this Iland, Ceſcenius Getulicus, a very ancient Poet ſeemeth to have reſpect, when he verſifieth thus of Brittain:

Non illic Aries verno ferit aëra cornu
Gnaſia nec Gemini præcedunt cornua Tauri,
Sicca Lycaonius reſupinat plauſtra Bootes.

The Ram unkindely ſmites not there
In ſpring the aire with horn,
Nor Taurus the horn'd Bull of Crete
Untimely go beforn:
Where Dryver height Arctophylax
Doth his dry wain up turn.

For the temperature Cæſar likewiſe writeth thus, The places in Brittaine bee more temperate, as in France. Semblably, Cornelius Tacitus, No extremity there is of cold, the ſoile (ſetting aſide the olive and vine, which are proper to warme countries) taketh all kinde of grain, and beareth it in abundance; it ripeneth ſlowly, but commeth up quickly; the cauſe of both, is one and the ſame, to wit, the over much moiſture of ground. Howbeit, the ground enriched ſo with al ſorts of Corne, Orpheus hath reported it to be the very ſeat of Ceres in his poem, thus:

The Soile.

ἰδ' ἀυρία δῦμαι' ἀνάσσης
Δήμητρος.

Lo here the ſtately Hals
Of Ceres Queen.

It hath been the very Storehouſe for victuals of the Weſt Empire, from whence the Romans were wont yearly to tranſport into Germany with a fleet of 800 veſſels, bigger than Barges, great ſtore of Corne, for the maintenance of their armies, which defended the Frontiers.

Hearken alſo what Camden citeth out of an ancient Orator; who with open mouth reſoundeth forth the praiſes thereof to Conſtantine the Emperor in his Panegeric pag. 3. O happy Brittain (ſaith hee) and more fortunate than all other Lands beſides, which firſt ſaweſt Conſtantine the Emperor! for good cauſe hath nature endowed thee with all the bleſſed gifts of aire and ſoile, wherein there is neither exceſſive cold of winter, nor extream heat of Summer; wherein there is ſo great plenty of grain, that it ſerveth ſufficiently for bread and drink: wherein the forreſts are without ſavage beaſts, and the ground void of noiſom ſerpents. Contrariwiſe, it hath abundance of tame cattell: the dayes there are very long, and the nights never without ſome light, whiles thoſe utmoſt plaines by the ſea ſide caſt and raiſe no ſhadowes on high, and the aſpect both of ſky and ſtars, paſſeth beyond the bound of the night, yea the very Sun it ſelfe, which ſeemeth unto us for to ſet, appeareth there onely to paſſe and go aſide. Hear alſo if it pleaſe you what another Author ſaith to Conſtantius, I aſſure you it was no ſmall dammage to the Common-wealth, to loſe the bare name onely of Brittain: ſo to forgo a land, ſo plentifull in corne, ſo rich in paſture, ſo full of mines and veines of mettall, ſo gainfull in tributes and revenewes, ſo accommodated with havens, and for circuit ſo large and ſpacious. Moreover the ſingular love, and motherly affection of nature to this Iland an ancient Poet lively expreſſeth thus:

Tu nimio nec ſtricta gelu, nec ſydere fervens,
Clementi cælo temperiéque places.
Cum pareret Natura parens, varióque favore
Divideret dotes omnibus una locis,
Sepoſuit potiora tibi, matremq; profeſſa,
Inſula ſis felix, plenaq; pacis ait.
Quicquid amat luxus, quicquid deſiderat uſus,
Ex te proveniet, vel aliunde tibi.

For aire ſo milde and temperate
Right pleaſing is thy ſeat,
Where neither reigneth chilling cold,
Nor yet exceſſive heat.
What time Dame nature brought things forth,
And of her onely grace
Beſtow'd her favours manifold
And gifts on every place,
Like mother kinde, the better part
Aſide for thee ſhe laid;
O happy Iland mayeſt thou be,
And full of peace ſhe ſaid:
What ever vaine exceſſe affects,
What may mans need content,
Shall come from thee, or elſe to thee
From other Lands be ſent.

It ſeemeth Dame Nature ſtrove and took delight in perfecting of Brittain, having ſet her out in ſuch an excellent manner and forme of beauty for the adorning of the univerſe, and by ſuch a variety and pleaſing diſcription, delighteth the eyes no leſſe than Pearles. The inhabitants are of a goodly ſtature and conſtitution of body, faire of complexion, and the women very beautifull. They are gentle and courteous, eſpecially to ſtrangers, and full of courage, their vertues are well knowne to all men for their atchievements in war. Touching the name of Brittain there are various opinions. Sr. Thomas Eliot, a worſhipfull Knight, and Humphrey Lhuyd, reputed by our Countrie-men for knowledge of antiquity to carry with them credit and authority, refer it to the Brittiſh word, Prid-Cain, that is, a pure white forme. Pomponius Lætus reporteth, that the Brittains of America in France, gave it that name. Goropius Becanus, ſaith, that the Danes ſought here to plant themſelves, and ſo named it BRITDANIA, that is, Free Dania: others derive it from Prutenia, a Region in Germany. Bodine ſuppoſeth it tooke the name of Bretta, a Spaniſh word, which ſignifieth, earth. Some think that the Grecians, who took a pride in impoſing of names upon Countries, pronounced it ſo, and hearing the native people thereof called Brith and Brithon, added Tania to it, and ſo made it Brithtania, which ſignifieth a Region, and was called Britania, becauſe it was the Region of the Brittans, as Mauritania is named from Mauri the Moores: Luſitania, from the Country of Luſus, and Aquitania from waters. But Camdens Etymologie is the beſt and moſt probable, who fetching it from the Brittiſh language, deriveth it from Brit, ſignifying painted, and taine, a nation: which agreeth not only with the Brittiſh tongue, but with the records of the moſt ſincere and truſty Hiſtoriographers, all with one conſent affirming, that the Brittaines uſed to paint themſelves blew, with wood, to make them ſhew more terrible to the Enemy. As for the name Albion (ſaith Camden) I paſſe not much, conſidering that the Greeks gave it to this Ile for difference ſake, ſeeing all the Ilands round about it, were called Brittiſh or Britanies. Brittain, ſaith Plinie, renowned in the Greek records and ours, lieth betwixt North and Weſt over againſt Germany, France and Spain, but with a great diſtance betweene them, they being the greateſt parts by farre of all Europe. Albion it had to name when all the Iles adjacent, were called Britanies, whereupon Catullus writing againſt Cęſar, ſaid thus:

Him Gaule doth feare, him Brittains dread.

Who alſo in the ſame frame of verſes, called it the utmoſt Ile of the weſt. And it may be this name Albon ſprang from the vanity, fabulous inventions and unconſtant levity of the Greeks, in coining names, which they termed ἄχαριν ὑπερλογίαν. For ſeeing they had in fabulous wiſe named Italy Heſperia, of Heſperus the ſon of Atlas; France Gallatia, of the ſon of Polyphemus: It cannot otherwiſe be, but that in the ſame vein of fabling, they called this Iland Albion, of Albion Neptuns ſon: which thing Perrottus and Lilius Giraldus, have put down in writing: unles a man would derive it of ΑΛΒΟΝ, which as Feſtus witneſſeth, ſignifieth white: For it is environed with white rocks, which Cicero termeth Mirificas moles, that is, wondrous piles: and hereof it is, that upon the coined pieces, bearing the ſtamp of Antonius Pius and Severus, Brittain is pourtarited ſitting upon rocks in womens habit. And the Britiſh Poets themſelves name it Ines Wen, that is, the white Ile. The Scots yet to this day call it Albanik, and their Country, Albin: Now let us come to the diviſion of Brittain. Our Hiſtoriographers will needs have that diviſion of Brittaine to bee moſt ancient, whereby they divide it into Logria, Cambria, and Albania, that is into England, Wales, and Scotland. But the moſt ancient diviſion of Brittain in the opinion of many learned men, is that which is found in Ptolemy, in the ſecond book of his Mathematicall conſtructions, where he treateth of the Paralels, namely, into Brittain the great and the leſſe. But by their leave (ſaith Camden) as learned as they be, they themſelves ſhall ſee, if they pleaſe to examine thorowly and exactly in that place the proportion of diſtance from the Æquator, and compare the ſame with the Geographicall deſcriptions, that he calleth our Iland there, Brittain the great; and Ireland, Brittain the leſſe. Howbeit, ſome of our later writers named the hither part of this Iland towards the South, the Great, and the further part northward, the Leſſe. The inhabitants whereof in times paſt, were diſtinguiſhed into Maiatæ and Caledonii, that is, into the inhabitants of the champaine, and the Mountainers; as now the Scots are divided into High-land-men, and Low-land-men. But for as much as the Romans cared not for that further tract, becauſe as Apian ſaith, it could not bee profitable to them, nor fruitfull; having ſet down their bounds not far from Edenburgh, at the firſt they made this hither part, reduced already into a Province, two fold, to wit, the Lower and the Higher, as it is gathered out of Dio. For this higher or nearer part of England (together with Wales) he termeth the Higher, and the farther or Northern part the Lower. Which thing the every Quarters and abiding places of the Ronan Legions in Dio, do proove. The ſecond Legion Auguſta, which kept at Carleon in Wales, and the twentieth ſurnamed Victrix, which remained at Cheſter, or Deva, he placeth in the higher Brittain: but the ſixth Legion that was reſident at Yorke, ſerved as he writeth, in the lower Brittain. This diviſion as it is ſuppoſed, was made by the Emperor Severus, becauſe Herodian reporteth that after he had vanquiſhed Albinus, Generall of the Brittiſh forces, who had uſurped the Empire, and reformed the State of Brittain, divided the government of the Province in two parts, betweene two Prefects. After this, the Romans did ſet out the Province of Brittain into three parts: namely into Maxima Cæſarienſis, Brittania prima, and Brittannia ſecunda. Whereas therefore Brittain had in old time three Arch-Biſhops to wit, of London, Yorke and Caerleon in Wales, it is thought that the Province which we now call Canterbury, made Brittannia prima, and the Province of York made Maxima Cæſarienſis. In the Age next enſuing, when the forme of the Roman Empire was daily changing, either by ambition, that more men might attain to places of honor, or the wary forecaſt of the Emperors, that the power of their Preſidents, which grew over great, might be taken downe and abridged, they divided Brittain into five parts; to wit, Brittannia prima, Secunda, Maxima Cæſarienſis, Valentia, and Flavia Cæſarienſis. Valentia ſeemeth to have been the North part of Maxima Cæſarienſis, which being uſurped and held by the Picts and Scots, Theodoſius Generall under Valens the Emperor, recovered out of their hands, and in honor of him named it Valentia; which Marcellinus ſheweth more plainely in theſe words, The Province now recovered, which was faln into the enemies hands, he reſtored to the former ſtate in ſuch ſort, as by his own procuring, it had both a lawfull Governor, and was alſo afterward called Valentia, at the pleaſure of the Prince. Now that the ſon of this Theodoſius, added Flavia, we may very well conjecture, for that before the time of this Flavius, wee read no where of Brittannia Flavia. Wherefore to make up this matter in few words, all the South coaſt, which of one ſide lieth between the Britiſh Sea, and the river Thames, with the Severn Sea on the other ſide, was called Brittannia prima; Brittannia ſecunda, was that which now is Wales; Flavia Cæſarienſis, from Humber to Tine, or the wall of Severus; Valentia, from Tine, to the wall or rampier neare Edenburgh, which the Scots call Grameſdike, and this was the utmoſt limit of the Roman Empire in this Land, when this laſt diviſion was in uſe. Afterwards, when the Barbarians made invaſion on every ſide, and that the ſtate of the Roman Empire decayed, and civil wars daily encreaſed among the Brittans, this Iland as bereft of all life and vigour, lay for a time languiſhing, and forlorne without any ſhew at all of government: but that part which inclineth toward the North, became two kingdomes, to wit, of the Scots and Picts, and the Roman Pentarchy or five portions in this hither part, became the Heptarchy or ſeven kingdomes of the Saxons. For they devided the whole Province of the Romans (ſetting Wales aſide, which the remnant of the Brittans poſſeſſed) into ſeven kingdomes, that is to ſay, Kent, Southſex, Eaſtſex, Eaſt-angle, Weſtſex, Northumberland, Eaſtſex, and Mercia. The Countries were called either Conventus or Pagi, which we by a peculiar terme name Shires, of Scyre a Saxon word, which ſignifieth to divid. But ſince the time of the Romans, Saxons, and Dane, Brittain hath been divided into two famous Kingdomes to wit, England and Scotland; which by the comming in of King James, were reunited, and are now under the government of Charles the firſt, and now theſe two kingdomes are called againe by the ancient name, Great Brittain. This Iland is environed round with the Sea, wch S. Baſil calleth terrible and dangerous: ſometimes it breaketh in, and drowneth the low grounds, but after a while they become dry again. It flowes into the Iland with ſuch force, that meeting the ſtreams of the freſh waters, turneth them back by her cource. It is dangerous to paſſe, eſpecially in winter, which occaſioned Julius Firmius to ſay to Conſtantine the Emperour, That in the midſt of winter, which was never done before, he had trampled under his feet the raging waves of the Britiſh Ocean; under the motion of his oares, the billowes of the Sea, almoſt unknown to us, have trembled; and the Brittains affrighted at the unexpected face of our Emperor; what can ye wiſh more? the Elements vanquiſhed and gave place to your forces. The Sea aboundeth with all ſorts of fiſh, as Salmon, Cod, Ling, Stockfiſh, Herings, and abundance of other fiſh beſides: there are alſo Muſſell-Pearles, which are round, and have a King among them as the Bees have. Sueton reporteth, that Cæſar paſſed into Brittain for the fineſſe of theſe Mother-Pearles, which they tolde him were there, and were ſo big, that he might poiſe them them in his hand; ſo that with ſome of them he made a chain, and dedicated it to his mother. Among the Iles, Ireland is the famoſeſt, whereof we will treat in the particular Maps. The next are the Orcades, ſome 30 Iles, lying a little diſtance one from another, called in old records Argath, that is, upon the Gettas, as it is interpreted: Camden thinketh it rather to bee upon Cath, becauſe Cath lieth right over againſt Scotland, which at this day is called Cathneſſe, from the Cape and Promontory thereof. In Solins dayes, all of them were not inhabited, being over-grown with bulruſhes and long Sedge. But at this day they are peopled, there are neither woods nor forreſts in them, they bear good barley, but no wheat. Julius Agricola, was the firſt of the Romans that ſailed round about the Brittiſh Iles, and the firſt that diſcovered the Orcades, and brought them in ſubjection to the Roman Empire: afterwards they were ſubject to the Norwegians and Danes, anno 1474, Chriſtian, King of Denmark, ſold to King James of Scotland all his right and intereſt to them, for a ſum of money: the chiefeſt of them all is the Biſhoprick of Pomonia; the Natives call it Main-land, as if it were a continent. It is full of lead and tin. Ocetis is alſo mentioned by Ptolemie among theſe Iles, which Camden conjectureth to be called Hethy: I cannot yet reſolve (ſaith he) whether Hey numbred among, them is that Duma which Plinie ſpeaketh of, yet he rather beleeves that fair Ile, the city whereof that ſtandeth alone, called Dumo, is Dumna; as to beleeve with Becanus, that it is Wardhouſe in Lapland. John the Mair alſo calleth one of them Zeland, being fifty thouſand paces in length. The Natives in theſe Iles brue their bear with barley, which makes very good drink: the Inhabitants are much given to drinking, and yet Botius ſaith, they are never drunk nor diſtempered. Their neighbouring Iles called the Hebrides, are 44 in number, which Beda calleth Mœnames, Ethecus, the Beteoricks, Giraldus, the Incades, and Lucades: the Scotſh, the Weſterne Iles. But Ptolemie, Plinie, and Solin, the Ebudes, which ſeem to be ſo called of their barrenneſſe: for Solin writeth, that the people thereof never knew any fruits, but lived onely upon fiſh and milke. And Eb-Eid in the Brittiſh tonuge ſignifieth, without fruit. Plinie makes them to be 30, Ptolemy, 33: the firſt is Ricina; Plinie, Ricnea; Anthonie, Riduna, now called Rachne, which is a ſmall Ile over againſt Ireland: the neareſt is Epidium, now called Ila (as Camden witneſſeth) which is reaſonable great, and hath in it fruitfull fields: between that and Scotland, lieth Jona, called by Beda, Hy, and Hu, ſituated in a plain, having an Epiſcopall ſeat in the ſmall towne of Sodore, whence all the other Iles about it are likewiſe called Sodorenes, as depending upon this Dioceſſe, renouned for the Sepulchers of the Kings of Scotland: ſince called by Ptolemy Maleos, and at this day, Mula: whereof Plinie ſpeaketh thus, Of thoſe that remain, Mella extendeth it ſelfe more than five and twenty thouſand paces. Hebuda the Eaſterne, now called the Weſterne, reacheth far over the Coaſt of Scotland. And Hebuda the Weſterne, turning towards the Weſt, is called by the Natives Lewes, in which heretofore Mac-Cloyd ruled, and is now called in an olde book of Manias, Lodhus. It is uneven by reaſon of divers hils, that are full of ſtones, and is ill peopled. But the greater of them all is Fuſt: ſeparated from the ſea by a little chanell: the others, ſaving Hyrtha, are held of no great account, being all full of ſtones and flints, which make the wayes troubleſome and very hard to paſſe, the reſt are over growne with ſhrubs, which ſcarcely grow green. Nevertheleſſe the Scots bought all theſe Iles of the Norwegians for ready money, to joyne them to their Kingdome, though they reaped but little profit by them. The inhabitants (namely theſe Scots and Iriſh) were high minded and lawleſſe men, that would in no wiſe be tyed to the ſeverity of Lawes, neither feared they any condemnations. As for their faſhions, habits, language and behaviour, they differ not much from the wilde Iriſh, ſo that it may eaſily be diſcerned, that they are diſcended of this Nation. For the reſt of the natures of theſe Iles, hear what Solin ſaith, They being ignorant of fruits, lived only upon fiſh and milk, all of them had one King only: and the King had nothing of his own, for all appertained to the Commonalty. He was bound to do equity by certain lawes, leſt through avarice he ſhould turne from the truth: and that poverty might make him to do juſtice to every man, as he that having nothing of his own was fed by the Commons, neither was he permitted to have a wife of his own, but as his affection led him, took one while one, and at other whiles another woman: whereby his deſire and hope of a lawfull iſſue was cut off from him. Mona and Vecta, Gerſey and Garnſey follow, whereof we will ſpeake in the particular diſcriptions and Maps of England and Scotland in their due places. And thus much for Brittain in generall.

The firſt Generall deſcription
ENGLAND.

The ſeverall derivations of England.

THE greateſt and moſt Southerne part of the Albion Iland, is by the Latins called Anglia, from Angria a place in Weſtphalia, commonly named Engern, where the Angles were ſeated. Some ſeeke the name out of Pomerania, where the town Angloen flouriſhed. Others from Angulus an angle or corner, as if it were a corner of the world, as ſome building upon that ſtale verſe ſeem to hold,

Anglia terra ferox, & fertilis angulus orbis,
Inſula prædives, quæ toto vix egit orbe.

England a fruitfull angle is,
without the world ſo wide,
An Iland rich, that hath ſmall need of all the world beſide.

Neither doth Goropius his conjecture deſerve credit, but rather a ſmile, which deriveth Anglos, that is Engliſh men, from Angle, that is, a fiſhing rod or a fiſh-hook: becauſe (ſaith he) they hooked all unto them, and were, as we ſay, good anglers. But leaving theſe, we will come to that which is more probable. Surely we muſt ſeek for ſome other ſeat of our Angles or Engliſh men, which Beda willeth Camden to look for between the Saxons and Jutes: The Angles (ſaith he) came out of that countrie which is called Angulus, and is reported from that time to lie waſte, between the Provinces of the Saxons and Jutes. Now ſeeing that between Jutland and Holſatia, the ancient country of the Saxons, there is a little Province in the kingdome of Dania, named at this day Angel, beneath the city Flemsburgh, which Lindibergius in his Epiſtles, calleth, Little Anglia. I dare affirme (ſaith Camden) that now at length I have found the place of our Anceſtors habitation, and that from thence the Angles came into this Land. And to aver this the more confidently, he hath good warrant from the authority of that ancient writer Ethelwardus, whoſe words be theſe: Old Anglia is ſited between the Saxons and the Giots. In which very place, Ptolemy ſeemeth to ſet the Saxons: ſo that a Poet of the middle time ſung not untruely in this manner:

—— Saxonia protulit Anglos,
Hoc patet in lingua niveoque colore. ——

That Engliſh men from Saxons drew deſcent
Their color white and tongue make evident.

Again, he that ſeeth the Etymology of Engelbert, Engelhard, and ſuch like Dutch names, may ſee perhaps the originall of Angli alſo. Moreover, it may ſeem out of Procopius, that the Friſons likewiſe came with others into Brittain. The Iland Brittain (as Pithæus a ſingular good man, and in all ſorts of antiquity moſt skilfull, hath exemplified unto Camden out of the Kings Library in Paris) three moſt populous Nations do inhabit; which had every one their ſeverall King to rule them: and theſe Nations be called Angli, Friſons, and after the name of the very Iland, Brittans. The Romans commanded the greateſt part of England almoſt 500 yeares, from the time of Julius Cæſar, till Theodoſius the junior: in whoſe time, the Garniſons being drawn out for the defence of Gaule, they quitted England. Againſt whom the Brittains having wars and not able to ſubſiſt; called in the Saxons out of Germany to aid them: but afterward, the Saxons growing great, and making confederacies with the Picts, joyned with them againſt the Brittains; and at laſt expulſing their own hoſts, became Maſters of their lands, livings, and houſes. That part of England that looketh towards the Eaſt or German Sea, was named the Angle-Saxons; becauſe they firſt ſeized upon Anglia, or England. The Weſterne part ſeparated from it by the rivers Severn and Dea, which ſpeak to this day the old Britiſh language, are called Walha, or Wales; and they themſelves are alſo called by an ancient name Cambres, and their Countrie Cambria, and the Engliſh Saiſſons, and their Country alſo Logria. It is bounded on the North towards Scotland, with the rivers Tweed and Solway: on the South with France, and the Britiſh Ocean. Weſtward it hath the Iriſh Sea beating upon it. The temperature and aire, as is ſaid in the general deſcription of Brittain, is milde and ſweet: the ſoile more fat and fruitfull, having the fields and plains covered with wheat, rye, barly, beans, and peas, rich paſture grounds, and ſweet meddows lying along the rivers ſides, abundance of Cattell and an infinite number of ſheep, which cover the mountains, hils, and fields, loaden with thick fleeces of wool, which for the riches thereof and making of cloathes, may truly be called the goulden Fleece: the ſheep alſo are much commended for the daintenes of their fleſh. There growes all ſorts of trees, ſaving the Fir-tree, and (as Cęſar ſaith) the Beech-tree: but for the abundance of Bay-trees, Theſſalica is not to be compared unto it, and for Roſemarie, there is ſuch ſtore of it in ſome places, that they make hedges and encloſures therewith: the vines and grapes grow ſeldome ripe, and are ſet in Gardens rather for ſhades and pleaſure than for their fruit. In the earth are found mines of yron, lead, and tin in abundance, and ſome gould and ſilver that is extracted out of them. There are found great ſtore of Corniſh Diamonds which in brightnes exceed thoſe of India, though not in hardnes. Among the Brigants are found many Agath ſtones, of a blackiſh color, they are light, will burne in water, are quenched with oyle, which being chafed, retain the color of the things wherewith they are rubbed: they grow between the clifts of the rocks, are of a ruſty and reddiſh hue, but being poliſhed, are of a blackiſh ſplendor. The whole countrie is free from wolves, which were never ſeen there ſince K. Edgar made Luduall Prince of Walles to pay him 300 wolves a yeare for tribute, which performing three years together, in the fourth he could finde no more. In no place of the world are there ſuch ferce Maſty-dogs, and abundance of Crows and Rooks which ſo devoure and peck up the corne, that the husband men are conſtrained to keepe boyes to skar them away with ſhooting, becauſe they will not riſe at ones voice. There are alſo great ſtore of Kites and Puttocks. The chief cities are London and York, whereof a Poet verſifieth thus:

The ſituation.

The Cities and Towns

Londinum Caput eſt, & Regni urbs prima Britannæ:
Eboracum à primâ jure ſecunda venit.

In Brittain London is the fareſt town,
The ſecond place Yorke claimeth as his own.

Canterbury the Metropolitan See, Lincolne, Briſtow, Gloſter, Shrewsbury, Bath, Exeter: the famous

Universities of Cambridge and Oxford, Norwich, Sandwich and many mo, named in the particular descriptions. Thorow London floweth and ebbeth the river Thamisis, so called from Thame and Isis, two rivers which meet and joyne in one: this river feeleth the violence of the sea more than any river in Europe, ebbing and flowing twice a day: upon whose banckes many fair Towns and Princely Pallaces stand, which prospect made a German Poet write thus:

Tot Campos, silvas, tot regia tecta, tot hortos;
Artifici excultos dextra, tot vidimus arces,
Vt nunc Ausonia Thamisis cum Tibride certet.

We saw so many woods and Princely Bowers,
Sweet Fields, brave Pallaces, and stately Towers,
So many Gardens drest with curious care,
That Thames with royall Tyber may compare.

As touching the Commonwealth of England, it consisteth of a King, Noble men, and Gentry, Citizens,
The King. Yeomen and Artisans. The King hath power and command over all, neither holdeth he his Empire in vassellage, nor receiveth his vesture or enstalment of another, nor acknowledgeth he any Superior but God alone. He hath also many rights of Majesty peculiar to himself: wch the Lawyers term, Sacra sacrorum, that is sacred; and individua, that is, inseparable; because they cannot be severed; the common sort term them Royall Prerogatives. The next to the King, is his first begotten Son; who is the Heir apparant and assigned Successor, was first entituled Princeps juventutis, that is, Prince of the youth; and were named Cæsars; of the Greekish Empire, Despota; of the Kingdom of France, Dolphins; and of Spain, Infants: so from the time of Edward the first, the Heires apparant of England, were entituled Princes of Wales. But whereas the Kingdoms of Brittain have been formerly divided, are now by the happy comming in of King James, growne into one, who was stiled King of Great Brittain, and so now our Soveraigne King Charles; whose eldest Son Prince Charles, the lovely joy and darling of Brittain, is stiled Prince of Great Brittain: and as he is borne thus, to the greatest hopes; so all Brittain from one end to another, pray uncessantly from the very heart, that God would vouchsafe to blesse them with the greatest vertues, and continuance of honors, that they may by many degrees and that most happily, exceed, our hope surpasse the Noble acts of their Progenitors, and out live their years: and to conclude, the Translator wisheth, that seeing it hath pleased God of his immense goodnesse, after so many yeares past, to reunite England and Scotland, by the lawfull inheritance of King James and his Sacred Majesty, I will end with his Fathers speech at White Hall, anno 1607.

Iam cuncti gens una sumus, sic simus in ævum.

One onely Nation now are we,
And let us so for ever be.

After the Prince, the next title of honor is a Duke. But in England they adorned none with it, untill that Edward the third created Edward his Son Duke of Cornewall, by putting a wreath upon his head; a ring upon his finger and a silver rod in his hand. Like as the Dukes of Normandie were in times past created by a sword, and a Banner delivered to them, afterwards by girding the sword of the Duchie, and a Circle of gold, garinshed with litle golden roses in the top. And the same Edward the third, created in a Parliament his two Sons, Lyonell Duke of Clarence, and John Duke of Lancaster, by the girding of a sword, and setting upon their heads a furred Cap with a Coronet of gold and pearles; and a charter delivered unto them. A Marquesse hath the next place of honor after a Duke. This title came to us of late dayes, and was not bestowed upon any till the time of Richard the II. for he was the first that made his Minion Robert Vere, who was highly in his favor, Marquesse of Doublin, and then it began with us to be a title of honor, for before time those that Governed the Marches, were commonly called Lord Marchers, and not Marquesses as now wee terme them. They were created by the King by cincture of the sword, & the imposition of the Cap of honor, and dignitie with the Coronet; as also by the deliverie of a charter or writting. The next degree are Earles, called in Latine Earles. Comites, and seem to have, come to us from our Ancestours the Germans: for they in times past as Cornelius Tacitus writeth, had their Comites, who should alwayes give attendance upon their Princes, and be at hand in matters of Counsell and authority. King John was the first that used in creating them the cincture of the sword. For Roger of Hovenden writeth thus: King John vpon the daye of his Coronation, girded The cincture of the Sword. William Mareschall with the sword of the Earledome of Strigulia, and Geffrie Fitz-Peties with the sword of the Earledome of Ellex; who albeit they had bin called Earles before, & Governed their Shires, yet were they not girt with the sword of an Earledome, and upon that day, they waited at the Kings table, wearing these swords by their sides. In the age next ensuing, there came up the imposition of a chaplet Cap with a circle of gold that now is turned into a Coronet, & a mantle, or robe of State, are by three severall Earles borne before him that is to be created: & betwixt two Earles arrayed also in their robes of State, is brought in his surcoat unto the King, sitting upon his throne: where kneeling downe, while the patent, or charter of his creation is a reading, the King saith in these words: This same N. wee erect, creat, constitute, make, appoint and ordaine, Earle of S. and wee give and grant unto him, the name, title, state, stile, honor, authority & dignitie of the Earle S. and into it by the cincture of a sword really do invest: then is the robe or mantle of Estate done upon him by the King himselfe, the sword hung about his neck, the Cap with the Coronet put upon his head, & the said Charter of the Creation being read and delivered into his hands. Among the Earles the most honorable are called Count Palatines, by the way of Excellencie, for as this terme Palatine, was a name in ancient times common to all that bare office in the Kings Palace: so Count Palatine was a title of honor, and dignity conferred upon him, that before had beene an officer Palatine, with a certaine royall authority, to sit in judgement within his owne Territoire. As for the Earle Marshall of England, Lord Marshall. King Richard the second, gave that title first to Thomas Mowbray Earle of Nothingham, whereas before they were simply stiled Marshals of England, and after the banishment of Mowbray he granted that Holland, Duke of Surrey, should be substituted Earle Marshall in his place, and should carry a rod of gold in his hand enamelled black at both ends whereas before they used one of wood. Next after Earles, follow in order Vice-Comites, whome wee call Vice-counts, an Vice-Comites. old name this is of an office, but a new title of dignity, not heard of with us, before Henry the sixts dayes, who conferred that title upon J. Lord Beaumont. In the ranke of the superior, or chiefe nobility, Barons Barons. have the next place: there are Barons of divers ranks, which were in ancient times, and now accounted very honorable. In the dayes of King Henry the third, there were reckoned 150 Baronies. And hereupon it was that in all the Charters, and Histories of that age; all noble men in manner be called Barons, and wereby that title was then very honorable and under the terme of Baronage, all the superior States of the Kingdome, as Dukes, Marquesses, Earles and Barons, in some sort were comprised, but it attained to the highest pitch of honor, since that King Edward the third, out of so great a number, which was seditious & turbulent, called the very best, by writ or summon unto the high court of Parliament: and hereupon, they onely were accounted Barons of the Kingdom, whom the King had cited by vertue of ſuch ſummons unto the Parliament: ſince that time, the Kings by their Patents, and putting on of the Robe of honor, have given this honor. They are created Knights, for the common law doth not acknowledge Baron to be a name of dignity: and they that be in this wiſe created, are called Barons of the Parliament, Barons of the Realme, and Barons of honor, for a difference between theſe and them of olde. The next degree be Knights, in all nations they take their names of horſes, for the Italians call them Cavellieri; the French, Chevaliers; the Germans, Reiters; and our Britans in Wales, Margogh all from riding. The denomination of Milites was tranſferred unto thoſe that bare any of the greater offices in the Princes Court. But Camdens opinion is, they were at firſt ſo called, who held any lands or inheritances as tenants in fee by this tenure, to ſerve in the wars: for thoſe Lands were termed Knights fees, and thoſe that elſe where were named Feudatory, that is tenants in fee; here called Milites, that is, Knights: as for exemple Milites Regù, the Kings Knights, for that they received theſe lands or manures from him, with this condition; to ſerve him in the wars, to yeeld him fealty and homage; whereas others who ſerved for pay, were ſimply called Solidarij and Servientes. But theſe called Milites, or Equites; are with us of foure ſorts. The honorableſt be thoſe of the order of S. George, or of the Garter: a ſecond degree are Banerets: in a third ranke, Knights of the Bath: and in a fourth place, thoſe whom we call in Latin Equites aurati, or Milites. King Edward the third, for to adorn Martiall proweſſe with honors, ordained at Windſor that moſt noble order of Knights, whom (as ſome ſay for his own garter given forth as Signall of Battell that ſped fortunately) he called Knights of the Garter: who wore on their left legs a blew grater carrying this impreſſe, Hony ſoit qui mal ypenſe, that is Shame to him that evill thinketh. But others attribute it to the garter of the Queen, or rather of Ioan Counteſſe of Salisbury, which fell from her as ſhe danced, and the King took up from the floore, at which the Noble men laughing, the King ſaid, ſhortly it would come to paſſe, that that garter ſhould be in high honor and eſtimation. This is the common and moſt received report: neither need it ſeem to be abaſe originall thereof, conſidering Nobilitas ſub amore jacit. Bannerets, who are termed untruely Baronets have their name of a Banner: for it was granted unto them in regard of their martiall vertue & proweſſe to uſe a foure ſquare Enſigne or banner; whereupon they call them Equites vexillarij; and the Germans, Banner-Heeren. The antiquity of theſe Knights Bannerets cannot be fetcht from before the time of King Edward the third, who dubbed Iohn Chandos Knight Banneret, with his Banner.

Concerning Knights of the Bath, they in former times were wont to be ſelected out of the flower of the nobilitie at the Coronation of Kings, and Queenes, and at their marriages, ſometimes alſo when their Sons were inveſted Princes of Wales, or Dukes. But in our dayes, the daye before they are created being clad in an Eremits gray weed, with a hood, a linnen Coife, and booted withall, come devoutly to divine ſervice, to begin their warfare there, as if they would employ their ſervice for God eſpecially, they ſup alltogether: and upon every one of them there waite 2 Eſquires, and one Page: after ſupper they retire themſelves into their bed-chamber, where for each of them is prepared a prettie bed, with red curtaines, and their owne armes faſtned thereupon, with a bathing Veſſell, ſtanding cloſe by, couvered with linnen cloathes, wherein after they have ſaid there prayers, and commended themſelves to God: they bathe themſelves that thereby they might be put in minde to be pure in bodie, and ſoule from thenceforth. The next morrow early in the morning awakened they are, and raiſed with a noiſe of Muſicall inſtruments, and doe on the ſame apparell. Then the high Conſtable of England, the Marſhall, and others, whom the King appointeth come unto them, call them forth in order, and tender an oath unto them, namely, that they ſhall ſerve and worſhip God above all, defend the Church, honor the King, manitanie his rights, protect Widdowes, Virgins, Orphans, and to their power repell, and put by all wrong. When they have ſworne to this by laying their hands upon the Goſpell, they are brought with State to morning prayer, the Kings Muſitians, and Heralds, going before, and by them likewiſe are conducted to their bed-chambers, where after they have deveſted them from their Eremits weed, they put on a Mantle of Martiall red Taffata, implying they ſhould be martiall men, and a white hat with a white plume of feathers over their linnen Coife, in token of ſincerity, and tie a paire of white gloves to the pendant cordon of their mantle. This done they mount upon Steeds, dight with ſaddle, and furniture of black leather, with white intermingled, and having a croſſe in the frontlet. Before every one of them, rideth his owne Page, carrying a ſword with a gilded hilt, at which there hang gilt-ſpurs, and of either hand of them ride their Eſquires: with this pompe, and trumpets ſounding before them, as they go along to the Kings Court; where when they are brought by two ancient Eſquires to the Kings preſence, the Page delivereth the girdle, and ſword, hanging thereto, unto the Lord Chamberlaine, and he with great reverence unto the King, who therewith girdeth the Knight overthwart, and commandeth therewith, two elder Knights, to put on the Spurrs, who in times paſt were wont with good wiſhes, and prayers to kiſſe his handes, that was to be Knighted.

Now as touching thoſe Knights, which are made in theſe dayes, either for ſome brave ſervices performed in the warrs, or for their birth, worth and ſome remarkable ſervice done to their Prince and Countrie, he that receiveth the dignity of a Knight kneeleth downe, and the King with his ſword drawne, ſlightly ſmiteth him upon the ſhoulder, ſpeaking unto him theſe words withall in French; Sois Chevalier au nom de Dieu, that is: Be thou Knight in the name of God, and after he ſaith moreover, Avances Chevalier, that is, Ariſe Sir Knight. Next in degree after theſe Knights are Eſquires, termed in Latine Armigeri, that is: Coſtrels or Bearers of Armes; the ſame that Scutiferi, that is ſhieldbearers, or homines ad arma, that is, men at Armes. The principall Eſquires at this day are counted thoſe that are ſelect Eſquires for the Princes bodie, next unto them be Knights eldeſt Sons, and their eldeſt Sons ſucceſſively. In a third place are reputed yonger Sons of the eldeſt Sons of Barons, and of other nobles in higher eſtate. In a fourth ranke are rekonned thoſe unto whome the King himſelfe together with a title giveth armes, or createth Eſquires by putting about their neck a ſilver coller of S. S. and (in former times) upon their heeles a paire of white ſpurs, ſilvered. whereupon at this day in the weſt parts of the Kingdome, they be called white Spurs, for diſtinction from Knights, who were wont to weare gilt-Spurs: and to the firſt begotten Sons onely of theſe, doth this title belong. In the fifth and laſt place, be thoſe ranked, & taken for Eſquires, whoſoever have any ſuperior publicke office in the Common-weale, or ſerve the Prince in any worſhipfull calling. Gentlemen or the common ſort of nobility be they, that either are deſcended of worſhipfull parentage, or raiſed for their worth vertue or wealth. Citizens or Burgeſſes be ſuch as in their own ſeverall Cities, execute any publicke office, and by Election have a roome in our high Court of Parliament. Yeomen, are they whom ſome call Free-borne, or Free-holders, which our Lawe tearmeth Homines legales, that is, Lawfullmen, and who of Freelands may diſpend fortie ſhillings at leaſt by the yeare. Laſtly Craftsmen, Artiſans, or Workemen, be they that labour for hire, namely, ſuch as ſit at worke, Mechanick Artificers, Smithes, Carpenters &c. which were termed of the Romans Capite Cenſi, as one would ſay, taxed or reckoned by the pole, and Proletarij.

Knights of the Bath.

The Parliament.

Now follow the Courts of England. As touching the Tribunals, or Courts of Iuſtice in England there are three ſorts of them, ſome be Eccleſiaſticall, others Temporall, and others mixt of both, which being the greateſt, and moſt honorable of all, is called the Parliament. Conſiſting of the King, Clergie, Superior Nobles, the Elect Knights, and Burgeſſes. It is not held at ſet, and certaine times, bur ſummoned by the King at his pleaſure, ſo often as Conſultation is to be had of high affaires, & urgent matters, that the Common weale may ſuſtaine no dammage, and at his will alone it is diſſolved. Now this Court hath ſacred and Soveraigne authoritie in making, confirming, repealing, and expounding Lawes, in reſtoring ſuch as be attainted, or outlawed to their former eſtates, indeciding of the hardeſt controverſies, betweene private perſons, and to ſpeake at a word in all cauſes that may concerne either the ſafetie of the State, or any private perſon whatſoever. The next Court after this, is the Kings Court, which is kept in the Kings Palace, and accompanieth the King whereſoever he remooveth. The Kings Bench is ſo called, becauſe the Kings were wont there to ſit as Preſidents, it handleth the pleas of the Crowne, and manie other matters, which pertaine to the King, and the weale publike, and withall it fifteth & examineth the errours of the Common-pleas. The Common-pleas hath that name, becauſe in it are debated the Common-pleas betweene ſubject and ſubject, according to our Lawe, which they call Common. The Exchequer tocke that name of a boord or table whereat they ſat. This Court by report began from the very Conqueſt of the Realme, and was erected by King William. In this all cauſes are heard, which belong unto the Kings Treaſurie. The Star-Chamber, wherein are diſcuſſed & handled Criminall matters, Perjuries, Conſenages, Frauds, Deceits, Ryots or Exceſſe. This Court is right ancient, and for dignitie moſt honorable, for it ſeemes that it may clame antiquity, ever ſince the firſt time that ſubjects appealed unto their Soveraigns, and the Kings Councell was erected. As for the name of Star-Chamber, it tooke it from the time, that this Councell was appointed at Weſtminſter in a Chamber there anciently garniſhed and beautified with Stars: for we read in the Records of Edward the third. Counſeil en la Chambre des Eſtoilles prez de la Receit a Weſtminſter, that is, The Councell in the Chamber of Stars, neere unto the Receit at Weſtminſter. The authority of this Court was much augmented, and eſtabliſhed by that moſt ſage and valiant Prince King Henry the ſeventh. The Court of Wards and Liveries, hath the name of Pupils or Wards, whoſe cauſes it handleth was firſt inſtituted by Henry the eight, whereas in former times, their canſes were heard in the Chancerie, and Exchequer: for by an old ordinance derived out of Normandie, and not from Henry the third (as ſome doe write) when a man is deceaſed, who holdeth poſſeſſions, or Lands in chiefe by Knights ſervice, as well the heire, as his whole patrimonie, and revenewes are in the Kings power, tuition, and protection, untill he be full 21 yeeres of age, and untill by vertue of the Kings Briefe or Letter, reſtitution and delivery be made unto him againe thereof. The Court of Chancery is as it were the Princes conſcience, his mouth, eye and ear, to ſtrike and daſh out with croſſe lines Letters, Commiſſions, Warrants and decrees, paſſed againſt law & right, which not improperly they term to cancell: and ſome think the name of Chancellor came from this cancelling, ſeing in a gloſſary of later times we read: A Chancellor is he, whoſe office is to look into and peruſe the writings and anſwers of the Emperor, to cancell what is written amiſſe, and to ſigne that which is well. There is another Court alſo divided out of the Kings Privy Councell, called the Court of Requeſts, which giveth hearing like the Chancery to cauſes between privat perſons; but ſuch as before were preſented unto the Prince, or his Privie Councell.

The Court of Faculties, wherein there is appointed a chiefe Preſident, who heareth and conſidereth of their grievances, and requeſts that are petitioners for ſome moderation; and eaſement of the Eccleſiaſticall Law, ſometimes overſtrict, and rigorous, and a Regiſter beſides, who recordeth the diſpenſations granted. The Court of Peculiars, which dealeth in certaine Pariſhes exempt from the Biſhops Iuriſdictions in ſome Dioceſſe, & are peculiarly beloging to the Archbiſhop of Canterburie. Now for the adminiſtration of Iuſtice, England is divided into 39 Earldoms, the Earldomes into Hundreds, the Hundreds into Decimas. The King hath in every ſhire to decide, & to end quarrells, and Controverſies, a Lieutenant Governour to governe the Countie.

In every Country there is choſen a High-Sherif, who is the Treaſurer of the Country or ſhire where he liveth: for his charge is to ſee that the publike monies of the Shire be collected and gathered up, and cauſe the fines to be paid and delivered up to the Treaſurer. He is alſo an aſſiſtant to to the judges at the Aſſiſes, to give his helping hand, that the Lawes be duely executed, to impanel a Iurie of twelve men, that are to make enquiry, & to give up their vredict to the judges upon Criminall cauſes. For the Iudges in England take no notice of the fact: but from them and as the evidences and witneſſes are given in. There are two Lord Chiefe Iuſtices of England, which ride their Circuit every halfe yeere, and at the ſhire Townes, aſſiſes and ſeſſions are held, where they pronounce the ſentence condemnatorie of the Lawe againſt al malefactours, who are brought by the ſherrifes to the place of Execution.

To conclude, England affordeth good and wholeſome meats, which they have in abundance, and dainty variety of all ſorts: their beere and ale for the moſt part is made of barley mault, which hath a very good taſte, and is tranſported into forrain countries. For their cloathes and habits they are comely and decent, and the womens attire honeſt and modeſt. England hath two Archbiſhopricks, and fixe and twenty Dioceſſes, wherein there are 9284 Pariſh-Churches. And thus much for England in generall, we will now come to the particular diſcriptions thereof.

THE SECOND MAP OF ENGLAND

Containing Northumberland, the County of Cumberland, and the Bishopricke of Durham.

WEE have finiſhed that which we had to ſpeake of England in general, my method requireth now to run thorow the particular parts thereof. The Romans divided England into divers Provinces. The Saxons divided it into ſeven parts; the Kingdomes of Kent, Suſſex, Eaſt-Angles, Weſt-ſex, or Weſt-Angles, Northumberland, Eaſt-ſex, and Mercia. Now it is divided into Counties, which may bee called Aſſemblies, or Borroughs, called in Latine, Conventus, or Pagos: which the Engliſh in a name proper to themſelves, call Shires. At firſt, in the yeare of Chriſt 1016 Etheldred reigning, they counted but 32. Afterward, under King William the firſt, 36 and after that they added three more unto them, which made 39, as is ſeene at this day. To which were joyned 13 more in Wales, where of ſixe of them were in the time of Edward the firſt. Henry the eighth eſtabliſhed the reſt in a full Parliament. Mercator whom we intend to follow, diſcribeth them all with their Iles very well in ſixe maps, and as true as poſſibly he could. In the firſt place he repreſenteth Northumberland, which beareth almoſt the forme of a triangle, but not with equall ſides: the South ſide is ſhut in with Derwent running into Tine, and with Tine it ſelfe, where it butteth upon the Biſhoprick of Durham: upon the Eaſt ſide, the German Sea lieth: on the Weſt and North ſides it is parted from Cumberland, afterward with Chevet hils, and with the river Tweed it affronteth Scotland, and was the limit of both kingdomes; in this country were ſet two Governors, the one called L. Warden of the middle Marches, the other of the Eaſt Marches. The ground for the moſt part is rough, and hard to be manured. In divers places they have pits of Sea-coales This part was ſubdued by Oſca the brother of Henziſt, and his ſon Icbuſa was brought under the power of the Saxons, and came firſt of all under the protection of the Kings of Kent, with their two protected Dukes. Then the kingdom being eſtabliſhed by Bernice, that which reached from Teſis, to the Scottiſh Sea, was counted the beſt part of it, which was ſubject to the King of Northumberland: whoſe race being ended, all that which lay beyond Tweed, was ſubject to the Scots. Alfred after that left it to the Danes, which, Athelſtanus by little and little overthrew. The people nevertheles raiſed Eilrick the Dane for their King, whom Ealdred ſuddenly expulſed, ſince which time the name of King ceaſed, and the Governors thereof bare the the title of Earles. The inhabitants are a moſt warlike nation, and good horſemen. And whereas they addicted themſelves as it were wholly to Armes, there was not a man among them of the better ſort, that had not his little Towre or Pile. Likewiſe the Kings heretofore honored many of them with the titles of Baronsthough they were come of a mean parentage, that he might encourage them and make them carefull to maintain their military vertues. There is in Northumberland the city of Newcaſtle, much commended for the Haven, being of a great depth: when the Norman Empire began to grow great, the Monks called it Monkcheſter, and on a ſudden took this new name; from the new Caſtle which was built by Robert the Son of William the Norman, and encreaſed by little and little by trading with the Germans, and tranſporting Sea-coles into many parts of England.

Northumberland.

The ſituation.

The furtheſt town of England is Berwick, the name whereof ſome derive from Berengaire a Captain. Lelandus takes it from Aber, which is a gate or an entrance into old Brittain, to the end that Aberwick might ſignifie a Burrow upon the mouth of the river: whatſoever the ſite be, it reacheth far into the Sea, ſo that it is almoſt ſhut in betweene the Sea and the Tweed. Ye may ſee there the two rivers called Tine, the North and the South, ſo called becauſe that the ſides coming ſo neare together, is encloſed, for ſome affirm that it ſignifieth Tin in the Brittiſh tongue: the Southern ariſeth in Cumberland, near unto Alſten more, where hath bin a Coper mine: after it hath run a long courſe toward the North, it turneth Eaſtward, and holdes its courſe right with the Picts wall. The Northern Tine ſpringeth from the mountains, which ſerve as bounds joyned to the river Redes, which is contrary to it, having run to Redſquire a craggie mountain, overfloweth. At Cotterford the two Tines run one into another. The Tweed parts England and Scotland, and is called the Eaſterne bound: whereof Nechamus ſaith:

Anglos à Pictis ſe jungit limite certo
Flumen quod Twedum priſtina lingua vocat.

The river is great and floweth from the Scottiſh mountains, and runneth very crooked a great way, between the bounds of theſe parts, but comming neare to Carra a Burrow town, ſwelleth with many brookes that run into it, and beginneth to divide the neighbouring countries, and having received the Till into it, diſchargeth it ſelf into the Ocean. There are others beſides, as Coqueda, Alaunus and Wanſpeth, which I will paſſe over.

Cumberland lieth Weſtward and Northward from Weſtmorland, the utmoſt Region of the Realm of England: on the North it bordereth upon Scotland: on the South and Weſt ſides, the Iriſh Sea beateth upon it: and Eaſtward, it butteth upon Northumberland. It took the name of the inhabitants, who were the true and naturall Brittains, and called themſelves in their own language, Kumbri and Kambri. This countrie, although it be ſomewhat with the coldeſt, as lying far Northward, and ſeemeth rough by reaſon of the hils; yet for the variety thereof it ſmileth upon the beholders, and giveth content to as many as travell in it: for after the rocks bnnching out, the mountains ſtand rich with mettall mines, and betweene them great Meers, ſtored with all kinde of wilde foule, you come to pretty hils good for paſturage, and well repleniſhed with flocks of ſheep, beneath which again you meet with goodly plains, ſpreading out a great way, yeelding corne ſufficiently.

Cumberland.

The ſituation.

The Romiſh Empire begining to decline in Britain, though this Countrie had beene greevouſlie torne in peeces by the Scots, and the Picts, yet nevertheleſſe it kept the Britans their firſt inhabitans longer than any others, & were the laſt of all that came under the power of the Saxons. But when the Saxons affaires were cut off by the Daniſh wars, they fell into decay, and had pettie Kings, which were called Kings of Cumbria, till the yeere of our Lord CCIↃ XLVI, in which time King Edmund ſpoyled all Cumberland of their riches, and having puld out the eyes of the two Sons of Dumaile King of that Province, he permitted Malcolme King of the Scots, to hold this Kingdome under him, that he might defend the Northerne parts thereof from England, and againſt the incurſions and inroads of their Enemies, aſwell by Sea, as by Land. Since which time the eldeſt Sons of the King of Scotland for a time were called Governours of Cumberland. But England being conquered by the Normans, this Countrie fell likewiſe into their hands, which Ranulphe of Meſchines obtained. But King Stephen to get into the favor of the Scots, yeelded it to them againe, to the end they might hold it from him, and from the Kings of England by right of fief. But Henry the ſecond his Succeſſor, having perceived that this prodigall liberalitie of Stephen was hurtfull, aſwell to himſelfe, as to his Kingdome, redemanded of the Scotch, Northumberland, Cumberland, and Weſtmorland. Who conſidering prudentlie, that theſe parts belonged to the King of England, aſwell by the power of his forces, as by the right he had to them, in all integrity reſtored the above named Confines, and in ſtead of them received from him the county of Huntedunens, which appertaineth to him by ancient right. There is in this quarter the moſt ancient city Carlile, which is pleaſantly ſeated, garded on the northſide, with Eden; on the eaſt, with Peterill; on the weſt, with Caud: and beſides theſe naturall fences, it is fortified with ſtrong wals of ſtone, with a Caſtle and a Citadell to defend it. The many Antiquaries which have been taken out of it, ſhew ſufficiently that it flouriſhed under the Romans. This territory hath in it 58 Parochial Churches. There are moreover divers Lakes covered with all manner of foules: there are divers rivers alſo, among which, Irth a little river, which maketh way towards the Sea, wherein the Muſcles and Cochles after they have with a kinde of yawning or gaping ſucced in dew which they luſt after to conceive by, bring forth Pearles or Shell-berries, which the inhabitants ſearch after at a low water. The Ocean alſo which beateth upon theſe coaſts, bringeth forth a mullitude of divers good fiſhes, which is a ſhame to the inhabitants, that they are ſo ſlothfull and lazy, as not being carefull to fiſh there as they ought. The mountains there are full of thick mettals, among the which the mountains called Derwent fels, wherein coper mines were diſcovered, and ſome ſmall veins of gold and ſilver in them. If Cęſar had known of theſe mines, he would not have writ, that the Brittains had uſe of coper brought unto them from beyond Sea, ſeeing that the mines not only ſerve all England over, but alſo affoord great plenty beſide, which is tranſported out of the Realm: here alſo is found black lead, with which painters uſe to draw their lines, and make pictures of one colour in their firſt draughts. We muſt not forget the Roman wall, which runneth over the higher parts of this Territorie, made by Severus the Emperor, who was carefull to ſeparate and make ſure the part of this Ile againſt the incurſion of an untamed Nation, by a rampart and an entrenchment which he made there. This was the moſt renouned bound of the Romiſh Province, 122 paces long. Spartan ſaith he fortified Brittain, which is the honor of his Empire, having carried a wall thorow the Ile overwhart two hils unto the Sea, for which he atchieved the name of Brittannicus. Beda ſaith it was eight foot broad and twelve foot high, the traces whereof are not onely to be ſeen at this day, but alſo the remainders and great pieces of it extend in ſome places a great way, and onely ſpoiled of the battelments and plaiſtrings.

The Roman wall.

The Biſhoprick of Durham bordereth on the north ſide upon Yorkſhire, which is ſhaped in the faſhion of a triangle, the utmoſt angle whereof is made up to the weſt, where the northerne limit and the ſpring-head of Tees do meet: ſouthward it is bounded in with the continued courſe of the river Tees, running down along by it, the other that looketh Northward, is limited firſt with a ſhort line from the utmoſt point to the river Derwent, then with Derwent it ſelfe, untill it hath taken into it, Chopwell, a little river, and afterward with the river Tine. The Sea coaſt faſhioneth out the baſe of the triangle which lyeth Eaſtward. On that part where it gathereth narrow to the weſtern angle, the fields are naked and barren, the woods thin, the hils bare without graſſe, but not without mines of yron: as for the vallies, they are reaſonable graſſie; but on the eaſt part, the ground being well mannured, is very fruitfull, and the encreaſe yeeldeth good recompence for the husbandmans toile, it is alſo well garniſhed with medowes, paſtures, and corn-fields, beſet every where with townes, and yeeldeth plenty of Sea-coles. This countrie with the other Territories thereunto adjoyning, was tearmed the land or Patrimony of S. Cuthbert, for ſo they called whatſoever belonged to the Church of Durham, whereof S. Cuthbert was the Patrone: who in the primitive ſtate of the Engliſh Church, being Biſhop of Lindefarn, led all his life in ſuch holines, that he was cannonized among the Engliſh Saints: our Kings alſo and the Peers of the Realm, becauſe they verily perſwaded themſelves that he was their Tutelar Saint and Protector againſt the Scots, went not onely in pilgrimage to viſit his body (which they beleeved to have continued ſtill ſound and incorrupted) but alſo gave very large poſſeſſions to this Church, and endowed the ſame with many immunities. The chief city of this countrie is Durham, ſeated high, and ſtrong withal, yet taketh up no great circuit, ſhaped in an ovall forme, environed on every ſide (ſave on the north ſide) with the river, and fortified with a wall. Towards the South ſide, where the river fetcheth it ſelfe about, ſtandeth the Cathedrall Church, making a ſtately ſhew with a high Towre in the miſt, and two ſpires at the weſt end. In the midſt there is a Caſtle placed, as it were between two ſtone bridges over the river, the one eaſtward, the other weſtward; from the Caſtle northward, is ſeen a ſpacious merkate-place and S. Nicholas Church. They rekon that there are in this quarter and Northumberland 118 Parochiall Churches, beſides many Chappels. The rivers are Tees, in Latin Teiſes, and Teiſa, Polydore Atheſis: this river ſpringeth out of a little rock called Stanemore, and is encreaſed with many brooks which run into it from all parts, and runneth behinde the rocks out of which they cut marble ſtones, near unto Egleſton. Afterward it watereth many other places, and at length diſchargeth it ſelf with a large mouth into the Ocean.

The Countrie.

ON the West and Northside, Westmoreland is bounded with Cumberland, on the East with Yorkeshire, and the Bishopricke of Durham: so called because the most part of it is unmanured; for the Northerne Englishmen call such places as are not tilled Moores: for Westmoreland is nothing else but a Westerne mooriſh Countrie. The more Southerlie part of this Shire, contained in a narrow roome, betweene the Rivers Lone and Winandermere, is reputed fruitfull enough in the Vallies, although it can shewe manie Selles, with rough and stonie rocks, lying ever bare without grasse, and is tearmed all by one name, The Baronie of Kendale, or Candale, that is, the dale by Can: for it tooke name of the River Can, which running rough upon stones, cutteth through it. Then from the springheads of Lone it runneth more betweene Mountaines, which causeth it to make manie turnings, betweene which there are in some places, divers steepe downefalls, under which there be divers Vallies, and manie hollow places like Caves. The first Lord of Westmoreland was Robert de Vipont, his Son John succeeded him, and after him his Son Robert, who had two daughters onely. Long time after King Richard the second created Raphe Nevill of Raby the first Earle of Westmoreland, a man of the greatest, and most ancient birth of English nobilitie, as descended from Uchred Earle of Northumberland, whose Successors flourished in this honor till rhe fifth Earle Charles. The chiefe Citie of it is Aballaba, now called Apelby memorable it is for the antiquitie, & situation onely, but so slenderlie inhabited, and the building so simple, that were it not that by reason of the antiquitie, it had deserved to be counted the chiefe towne of the Shire, and to have Sessions, and Assises kept in the Castle, which is the Common gaole for malefactors, it would be litle better than a Village. On the west bank of the River Can, standeth Kendale called also Kirke by Kandale a town of very great trade and resort much recommended for the induſtrie of the inhabitans in it, which have great trafficke, and vent good store of wollen clothes throughout all parts of England. This Countie hath 26 Parishes in it. The Rivers thereof are Lone, Ituna or Eden and Eimote. Lancashire is called in the English Saxon tongue Lonkashire, and the County Palatine of Lancaster because it is a County honoured with the title of Palatine. The Site thereof westward lyeth under the feete of the Mountaines, which extend themselves into the middest of England. It is so enclosed betweene Yorkeshire on the Eastside, and the Irish Sea on the West, that on the Southside, where it boundeth upon Cheshire, it is broder, and by little and little the more Northward it goeth, where it confineth upon Westmoreland, the narrower it groweth, and there by an arme of the Sea, insinuating it selfe, is interrupted. A good part of it, which butteth upon Cumberland beyond the said Arme, where the ground is plain and champain it yeeldeth good store of barly, and wheate, that which lyeth at the bottome of the hills, is better for oates: The Soile every where is meetely good, and tolerable, unlesse it be in certaine moist places, and unwholesome, called Mosses, which nothwithstanding make amends for those their discommodities, with more plentifull commodities, for if their upper coate be pared away, they yeeld certaine unctuous & fattish Turfs for fewell, and sometimes they finde under ground trees, which have beene a long time buried there. Underneath also in diverse places they affoard abundance of Marle, which serveth in stead of Mucke, to enrich their grounds. A man may judge of the goodnesse of the Soile, partly by the constitution, and complexion of the inhabitants, who are to see to, passing faire and bewtifull, and partly by the Cattle: their kine, and oxen, which have goodly heads, and faire spread hornes, and well proportionate bodies withall, so that you shall finde no one point wanting, which Mago the Carthaginian requireth, as Columella specifieth out of him. This Shire had first of all Lords, which were called Lords of the honor of Lancaster, afterward Earles, & thirdly Dukes. I passe now to the Cities, the chiefest whereof is Manchester, which Antonie the Emperour called Mancunium and Manucium, according to the varietie of the Copies. For antiquitie, pleasantnesse, well peopled, manufactures of wools, the Seate of justie, the faire Church and Colledge founded by Thomas Lord de la War, it farre excelleth in beautifulnesse the Townes lying round about it. Ormeskirke is a mercate Towne, wel known by reason of the sepulture therein, of the Stanleys Earles of Derby. And also Lancaster the principall Citie of that Countrie, which the natives call more truely Loncaster, becaus it tooke the name from the River Lon. There are in it 36 Parishes, which are well peopled: there are also manie Lakes, and Marshes, among which is the Poole Merton, and Winander mere, the greatest Lake in all England full of fish, and breedeth a peculiar kind of fish found no where else, called Achare. There are manie Mountaines, and those very high as Ingleborrow-hill, at the spring-head it ascendeth as it were by degrees with a huge, and a mightie ridge westward, & at the furthest end, mounteth up into the aire as if an other hill were set upon the head of it. Penigent haply so called for his whitish, and snowy top, for so Pengwin signifieth in the British tongue, and riseth aloft with an huge bulke. Pendle-hill advanceth it selfe up to the sky, with a loftie head: But this Mountaine is memorable for the harme, that it did not long since, to the Countrie lying beneath it, by reason of a mightie deale of water gushing out of it, as also for an infallible prognostication of raine, so often as the top thereof is covered with a mist. Cestria followeth, called Cheshire, and the Countie Palatine of Chester. On the Southside it is hemmed in with Shropshire, on the Eastside with Staffordshire and Darbyshire, on the North with Lancashire, and on the West with Denbigh, and Flint, toward the Northwest it runneth far into the Sea with a long Cantle, or Promontory, which being enclosed betweene two Creeks, receiveth the Ocean on both sides, entring into the land, and swalloweth up all the Rivers into these litle Seas. The Countrie is barren, and beareth but litle Corne, but abounds in Cattle and in Fish. It hath a famous towne in it, which Ptolemie called Deunana, Antoine the Imperor, Deva from the river Dee, the Engliſh Cheſter, & Weſtcheſter having a fourſquare forme, encloſed with wals. On the South-weſt ſide riſeth a Caſtle, built by the Earles thereof, wherein the affaires of the Palatine are treated of twiſe a yeere. There are other townes, as Finborrow and Congleton, this Shire hath more then 68 Pariſhes in it. The Rivers thereof are Dee abounding in Salmons, and commeth out of Wales from whence it is beleeved, it taketh his name. Then Wever, Merſey and Dane. Carnarvonſhire, which the Latine Hiſtorians call Snaudonia, and Arvonia, on the North and Weſtſide it looketh towards the Sea, the Southſide is cloſed in by Merionithſhire, and the Eaſt part boundeth upon Denbighſhire, the River Conway paſſing through it, where it looketh towards the Sea, the Soile thereof is very fruitfull, and peopled with a number of ſmall Townes. Among the other Townes it hath in it Bangor the Epiſcopall Seate. It hath in it the River Conway, which divideth this territorie on the Eaſtſide, and breedeth Cockles, which being filled with the airie Dewe, have pearles. The inward part of this Countie is montainous, and craggie with divers crooked hills running betweene them. The quarter of Denbigh called Denbighſhire ſhooteth Eaſtward to the River Dee, and ſeemeth as it were for very feare to have ſhrunke back, and with drawne it ſelfe from the Sea more inwardlie into the Countrie. On the North, ſometimes the Sea beateth upon it, on the Weſt Merionith and Montgomery, on the Eaſt Cheſhire, and Shropſhire hemme it in. The Weſterne part is barren, the middle part which lyeth down in the Valley, is very fruitfull: the Eaſtſide feeleth the nature of the Valley, which is contrarie to it: but that which lyeth on the further ſide of the Dee is very favorable. In this quarter lyeth the River Cluida, truely happie for the bewtie, fertilitie, & wholeſomeneſſe thereof, in which Ruthum ſtands, which is a place of the greateſt trafique in all that Valley. There is a territoire in it called in the Brittiſh tongue Marlor Gimraig, and in Engliſh Bromfeild, very pleaſant. The principall Towne in this part is Denbigh, and the River Cluid. There is another ſmall Countrie, called Flintſhire, more long than broad, on the North ſide it is bounded with Denbighſhire, and the Iriſh Sea beateth upon the North part, or rather the Arme of the Sea of Dee. On the Eaſt is butteth upon the Countie of Cheſter, and in ſome places upon Denbigh. It is not very mountainous but often riſeth in hills, which fall downe into very fruitfull plaines, eſpecially where they looke towards the Sea: they bring forth the firſt yeere in ſome grounds barlie, in other places wheate, & Rye, which yeelde twentie fould encreaſe, afterwards four or five yeeres one after an other abundance of oates. There ſtands the town of S. Aſaph, belonging to the Engliſh, where there is an Epiſcopall Seate, under which there are manie Pariſhes, and Ruthlan, which maketh a good ſhewe with a Caſtle. Merionithſhire called in Latine Mervinia, runneth from the Village Montgomery, to the Gulfe Lunat, and the Ocean, which on the Weſtſide beateth ſo ſore upon it, that it is verily thought to have carried away by violence ſome part of it. Southward it is ſevered from Cardiganſhire by the River Dovy. On the North it boundeth upon Carnarvon and Denbighſhires. As for the inland part, it ſo riſeth with Mountaines, ſtanding one by an other in plumps, that as Giraldus ſaith, it is the rougheſt, & moſt unpleaſant Countrie to ſee to, in all Wales, there are not many townes in it. By the Sea in the little territorie named Ardudwy, is the Caſtle Arlech, well fortified and ſtandeth upon a very ſteepe rock, looking down into the Sea from aloft, and is the chiefeſt in that Shire. It hath in it Mountaines of a wonderfull height, yet narrow, and paſſing ſharpe at the top, in the manner of a needle, and thoſe not ſcattering, here and there one, but ſtanding very thick together, and ſo even in height, that Shepards talking together, or railing one at an other on the tops of them, that if haply they appoint the feild to encounter and meet together, they can hardly doe it from morning till night. Montgomeryſhire, is bounded on the Southſide with Cardigan, & Radnorſhire, on the Eaſt with Shropſhire, on the North with Denbighſhire, and on the Weſt with Merionithſhire. Although it hath manie a high hill in it, yet by reaſon of divers plentifull Vallies, it is a good Countrie aſwell for Corne as Paſture. The principall towne thereof is Montgomery, which is ſituated upon a rock, having a pleaſant plaine under it, built by Baldwin, and Eſtabliſhed for a Frontier upon the Confines of Wales. Through it runneth the Severn, the greateſt River in Brittanie next unto Thames. This River immediately from his ſpringhead, maketh ſuch a number of windings in and out in his courſe, that a man would thinke many times he returnes againe to his Fountaine: yet for all that he runneth forward, or rather ſlowly wandreth, through this Shire, Shropſhire, Worceſterſhire, & Gloſterſhire; infuſing a certain vitall moiſture into the ſoile every where as he paſſeth, untill at length he mildly diſchargeth himſelfe into the Severne Sea. Here ſtandeth Shrewsburie, it is ſeated upon a hill of a reddiſh Earth & Severn, having 2 very faire bridges upon it, gathering himſelfe in a manner round, in forme of a Circle, and ſo compaſſeth it, that were it not for a ſmall banke of firme land, it might go for an Iland. It is not onely ſtrong by nature, but alſo by Art, very much reſorted unto, abounding in Marchandiſes, and rich by the diligence of the Citizens, for making of cloaths, & their trading with Wales, ſince it hath beene inhabited by the Engliſh: they count in it 170 Pariſhes. There remaineth briefly to be deſcribed in this Map, the 2 Iles, Man and Angleſey. The Ile of Man, ſtretched out juſt in the midlevel, betweene the Northerne Coaſts of Ireland and Brittaine, and extendeth it ſelfe from the North towards the South ſome 30 Italian miles, but reacheth in breadth, where it is wideſt ſcarce above 15 miles, and where it is narroweſt 8. In Bedes dayes it conteined in it 300 famillies, like as Angleſey 96: but now it numbreth but 17 Pariſh Churches. Flax, & Hempe it beareth abundantlie: it hath freſh Paſtures, and feilds, which by good manuring beare Barlie and Wheate plentifully but eſpecially oates, which make the people to eate much Oaten-bread. It is ſtored with Cattle every where, and hath mightie flocks of Sheepe. The chiefe towne thereof is Caſtle-towne, but the beſt peopled is Duglar, by reaſon it hath a good haven. On the Weſt ſide lieth the Ile Balacuri where the Biſhop of it often keepeth his reſidence, & is ſubject to the Archbiſhop of Yorke. And the Pile-Fortreſſe, which lieth in a ſmall Ile, & holdeth a garniſon in it. It is reported that on the Southerne Cape there is a ſmall Ile called the Calfe of Man, wherein there are abundance of Sea-foules called Puffins, and of theſe Ducks bred of the rotten wood of ſhips, which they call Bernacles; the Scotch, * Claike geeſe, and Soland geeſe. In the middle of Man ariſeth Mountaines, the higheſt whereof is Sceafel, from which in a cleari day, one may ſee Scotland, England and Ireland. Their judges are choſen among themſelves and are called Deemſters, which judge all cauſes, and pleas without evidences, charge or expences. For the Magiſtrate taketh up a ſtone, and delivereth it ſealed to the Plaintife, with that he citeth his adverſe partie, and witneſſes. If it be an ambiguous matter, it is referred to a Iurie of twelve men. It hath Crowners which adminiſter the Office of Vicounts. So the Eccleſtiall Iudge ſummoneth & determineth, which they muſt obey in eight dayes, or elſe they muſt go to priſon.

The fourth Map of

ENGLAND,

VVhich containeth the first Map of

CAMBRIA or WALES.

The Countrie. Name. The Site.

CAMBRIA or Wales, the ancient inhabitation of the Britans, tooke its name from Cambre the third, Sonne of Brutus, according to the opinion of some, which Mr. Camden thinketh to be fabulous. It is severed from Lhoegria, or England, by the Rivers Severn and Dee, and on all the other sides environned with the Irish Sea. The name of this Countrie before the conquest compriſed in times past, the whole countrie beyond Severn; but afterward reached not so farre.

The Soile. All this countrie is mountainous, rough, craggie, saving neere unto the Sea-side, where the Soile is most fertill. Now in ancient times three people ruled wales, the Silures, Dimeta and Ordovices: for these held not onely the twelve shires of Wales, but those two also beyond Severn: Hereford-shire and Monmouth-shire, which have bin now long reckoned among the counties of England. The Silures, according to Ptolomees discription, inhabited those regions, which in Welch are called by one name Deheubarth, that is, the South-part, but at this day by new names, Hereford-shire, Radnor-shire, Brecknoc-shire, Monmouth-shire, and Glamorgan-shire, wherein to this day are yet some remainders also of the name Silures. Plinie was of opinion, that the Silures held the other part of the countrie, which extendeth it selfe towards the West, and is called West-wales, conteineth the territoire Mardunense, or Carmaerden-shire, Penbrock or Cardigan-shire. But Ptolomee, which knew Britanie most exactly placeth here an other people, whome he calleth Dimetes or Demetes, and both Gildas and Nennius have used this name Demetia for this Countrie. The Ordovices, which are likewise called Ordeveces, held heretofore the two other principalities (which they tearmed Guineth, & Powis, the English North-wales and Powis-land) to whome these Regions appertained, which are called now by new names in English Montgomery-shire, Merioneth-shire, Carnarvon-shire, Denbigh-shire and Flint-shire.

Now the Welch-men are a warrlike Nation, & defended their liberties under their Pety-Kings, for many ages together: and though they were shut but from the English Saxons by a deepe ditch, a wonderfull peece of worke, which King Otta caused to be digged: yea nevertheless oftentimes they destroyed their townes, by putting them to sword and fire, and suffred many losses and inconveniences from them. Nevertheless they would in no wise be brought to receive the yoake of servitude, so that matters in no manner could be composed, nor appeased because of the irreconceliable hatred betweene these Nations, untill that Henry the seventh descended of them, put forth his healing hand, to the afflicted, and that Henry the 8, received them upon such equall conditions of right & liberty as the other English enjoyed, Now this countrie by an ancient custome, appertaineth to the eldest Son of the King of England, who is called the Prince of Wales. It resteth now that wee looke into the severall parts of Wales, in such order, as wee have set them downe, reckoning onely those, which wee have mentioned in the descriptions of Mercators Maps. Wee will first then begin with Hereford-shire, and wee will speake nothing of the bounds thereof, but referre that to the fifth Map of England, & will there describe the rest. The English Government then declyning Raphe, Sonne of Walter Medatinus commaunded this territorie under the title of an Officiall Earle, whome the Normands bereft of this honour, and in whose steed they placed William Fitz Osbern, neerely allied to the Dukes of Normandie. Roger his Sonne, surnamed Bretevill succeeded him, who being banished dyed without heire male: and King Stephen gave Hereford-shire to Robart de Bossu, Earle of Leicester, but in vaine: for Maude Augusta, the Empresse advanced this honour upon Miles, Sonne of Walter, Constable of Glocester, and made him Constable of England, who had for his issue foure children, to wit, Roger, Walter, Henry and Mabel, but these one after another had no issue. Now followeth Radnor: the Mortuo mary, or from Mortuo-mari, called by the English Mortimers: the first of the Normans that gained this Region in chasing away Ericus Sylvaticus the Saxon. And as for a long time they excelled all others in this region: finally, King Edward the third, in the yeare of our Lord 1329, created Roger of Mortuo-mari Lord of Wigmor, Earle of this Welch bounds, or as they vulgarly tearme it, of the Marche, who presently was put to death. Brecknockshire obtained the third place, William the Redd reigning, Barnard de Novo mercatu or Newmarck, a Norman being a man full of courage and councill, gathered many English and Normans, and troopes together, was the first that assaulted this Countrie, & tooke it from the Cambres in a difficult warre, and marryed Nesta the daughter of Prince Gruffin, the which having dispossessed his Sonne Mahel of his patrimonie, Sybela his sister did inherite it, & cast this honour upon her husband Miles Earle of Hereford, which successively fell one an other with large revenues to the Breoses, Bohumes and Steffords in this territorie, and they being banished it came to the King. The Countie of Monmouth lyeth under Brechinie and Hereford, towards the Southerne Region, during the Heptarchie of the Saxons, it was subject to the Welch upon the Mountaines, who nevertheless, as wee may see in the ancient Lawes, were under the commaund of the Easterne Saxons. But in the first times of the Normands, the bordering Dukes afflicted it grevously, principally Hamell Balun, Hugh Lacy, Walter & William Claire, Earles of Strighill, and Breyn of Wallingford, having vanquished the Welch litle by litle, they reduced under their power, the one the upper part of this territoire, and the other the lower, which they call Netherwent. The last Region of the Silures is Glamorgan, whereof the Earles of Glocester since the losse of the shire, have bin Lords being descended by a right line from Fitz-haimon the Clares and Spencers, then Bellocamp and a Nevill or two, by a daughter of Nevill issued from the Spencers. Richard the third King of England, being slaine, Henry the seventh tooke the inheritance of this territorie, and gave it to Iaſpar his Uncle Duke of Bedford, who dying without iſſue, the King recalled to himſelfe all his right againe, and left it to his Son Henrie the eight, whoſe Son Edward the ſixth, ſould the moſt part of it to William Herbert, whome he had created Earle of Penbroke, and Baron of Cardaff. I come to the Dimetes, here the territoire of Maridowne preſents it ſelfe firſt of all: in it there is a ſpring, which twiſe a daye hath no water in it, and twiſe a day guſheth out againe in mutation of the ebbing and flowing of the Sea. Penbroke is a neere neighbour unto it. The firſt that was ſtiled Earle of Penbroke, was Gibbert, ſurnamed Strongbow, ſonne of Gilbert de Clare in the time of King Stephen, and he left it unto his Sonne Richard Strougbow, the renowned Conqueror of Ireland. His onely daughter Iſabella, honored therewith her Husband William Lord Hempſted Marſhal of England, a vertuous man, aſwell for his actions in warre, as in peece. After him his five Sones were ſucceſſively one after an other Earles of Penbroke, viz. William, called the younger, Richard, Gilbert, Walter, and Anſelm: all of them dying in a ſhort ſpace without iſſue. Afterward, King Henrie the third, inveſted William de Valentia, of the houſe of Luſigman in Poictou into this Earledome, and gave him the ſword of this Countie. After him ſucceeded his Sonne Aimar. The third Region of the Dimetes is Ceretica or Cardiganſhire. The Normans Government being ſcarcely eſtabliſhed, held the Coaſt thereof with happy ſucceſſe: for they tooke litle by litle frõ the Welch, the maritimate places committed the greateſt part thereof to Cardigan, Sonne of Blethin, a moſt prudent Britan, by reaſon whereof, he had great authoritie throughout all Wales, & was a great frend to the Engliſh. But when as his Sonne Oenus by his daylie incurſions troubled the Engliſh: the unhappy Father being deprived of his patrimonie, was conſtrained to retire himſelfe into Ireland, whereupon Henry the firſt, gave Ceretica to Gilbert Earle of Clare. But Cardigan with his Sonne being afterward reconciled to the Engliſh, received alſo that which belonged to his inheritances: ſince which time Roger of Clare, by the bountie of Henry the ſecond gott Ceretico. Now it remaineth to ſpeake ſomething of the Earles of Ordovices, among which Montgomery poſſeſſed the firſt place. The Princes of Powis, begotten of the third Sonne of Roderick the great, held it with ſome others by a continuall ſucceſſion, untill the time of Edward the 2. for when Oenus the laſt Lord of Powis, of the Brittan blood left Haviſſa his onely daughter behinde him, Iohn Charleton an Engliſh Knight married her, and was made Lord of Powis by the right of his wife by Edward, who bare a red Lyon quartered in a goulden ſhild. The heire-males of whome, were by this honour illuſtrious to the fourth generation untill that in Edward, the male ſucceſſion ceaſed. Merioneth-ſhire is called by Girald, Cancens lons land: Heigh Earle of Cheſter poſſeſſed it firſt, having layd a garniſon of the Normands in it, when he held Gruffin the Sonne of Conan priſonner, but afterward he recouvered it with the reſt of the principallitie, and left it to his Succeſſours, untill the fatall period being ended, it ceaſed in Leolin. The Inhabitants of this Country are wholly given to the keeping of Cattle, & feed much upon Milke, Butter and Wheate, and excell in bewtie, complexion and comelineſſe of bodie all other people of Britanie: but have an ill report among their Neighbours, becauſe they are much given to women & Idleneſſe. Above Merioneth-ſhire lyeth Carnarvon-ſhire: over whome preſently after the comming in of the Normans into Britanie, Gruffin the Sonne of Conan commaunded, who being not able to reſiſt the Engliſh troupes, which fell into Wales, gave way to the ſtorm, & having by his integretie got finally into the favour of King Henry the firſt, he recouvered eaſely his lands from the Engliſh, and left them to his Succeſſours untill the time of Leolm. Who having provoked by many injuries his bretheren and his Engliſh Neighbours by their inroads, was conſtrained as to hold this Mountanous Countrie and Mona or Angleſey by feife from Edward the firſt, for which he yeerely payed a thouſand Markes. Which conditions being afterward not obſerved by him, but rather he gave the reynes as well to his owne obſtination, as to his brothers diſloyaltie, attemting once more to trie his fortune by the ſword, he was ſlaine, which put an end to his Gouvernment, and of the Brittans in Wales. Now wee come to Denbigh-ſhire, whereof touching the qualitie of the Soile, wee have already ſpoken in the third Map of England. The Weſt-part is ſomewhat more plentifull, and pleaſant towards the Sea-ſide, is but here and there inhabited, and mounteth up more with bare and hungrie hils; but yet the painefull diligence, and wilie induſtrie of the Huſband-men, hath begunne a good while ſince, to overcome the leaneneſſe of this Soile, where the hils ſettle any thing flattiſh, as in other parts of Wales likewiſe. For after they have with a broad kind of ſpade, pared away the upper coate, as it were or the ſord of the Earth into many turfes, they pile them up artificially on heapes, put fire to them, & burne them to aſhes, which being throwne upon the ground ſo pared and flayed, cauſeth the hungrie barrenneſſe thereof ſo to fructifie, that the fields bring forth a kinde of Rhye, or Amel-corne in ſuch abundance, as it is incredible. Neither is this a new deviſe thus to burne ground, but very ancient as wee may ſee in Virgill and Horace. Now as the affaires of Wales began to decline, and decay by reaſon of their own ſeditions, and the Engliſh incurſions, without any hope of being able to redreſſe them, the Earles of Cheſter, Warren, the Mortemers, Lacey & Gray, were the firſt Normands which enjoyed litle by litle this ſmall ſhire, and left it as an inheritance to their Succeſſours. Now followes an other ſmall ſhire of Wales, called in Engliſh Flint-ſhire. The Earles of Cheſter were the firſt of the Normands, who by ſmall battles fought againſt the VVelch-men, brought this territoire under ſubjection. Edward the firſt tooke to himſelfe this ſame & all the maritimate coaſt of Wales. He appointed the Inlandiſh parts to Governours, ſuch as he thought good, imitating herein the Councill of Auguſtus, who tooke to himſelfe the mightieſt, and outwardeſt Provinces, and gave the others to Proconſuls by lot. And thus much for Wales.

The fifth Map of
ENGLAND,

Containing Cornwall, Devonshire, Somersetshire, Dorcetshire, VViltshire, Glostershire; and of VVales, Monmouth, Glamorgan, Pembrock, Cardigan, Radnor, Brechnock, Hereford, and VVorstershires.

Cornwall. The situation. CORNWALL hath on the south side, the English Sea; on the north, the Irish; on the west, the westerne Cape; and on the east, the French Sea. The river Tamer separateth it from Devonshire. This Countrie is The Soile. very fruitfull, and full of rich veines of mettals, not onely of Tin, but some gold and silver also, yea and Diamonds. The Ermgus or hundred-headed thistle, groweth there in abundance, all a long the shore side. It is fruitfull yet not without much labor. It hath many towns lying upon the coasts, and well peopled. This countrie hath 161 Parishes. The principall haven in it is Falemouth, of exceeding great capacity, able to receive 100 ships, which may ride very Devonshire. safe in it under the winde. Devonshire is bounded on VVest side, with the River Tamer; also on the South Coast, it bordereth upon the Ocean, whence by the eastern bounds, where it confineth upon Dorset and Somerset shires, it returneth back unto the northern coasts, which is hemmed in with the Severn Sea: as it is larger from the one and other side than Cornwall, so hath it here and there most commodious The Soile. havens, and no lesse rich in mines of tin, divers pleasant pastures, and cloathed with faire woods and forrests, though in some places the soile be but leane: the principall city is Excester, in Latin, Exonia: this city, although the neighbouring soile be wet and dirty, and that it will scarcely bring forth any poore oats, and often a huske without a grain in it: yet it aboundeth in all manner of merchandises, through the riches of the inhabitants, and the reforting of strangers unto it; so that all things that are necessary for the use of man, are found in it. Also there is Plimmouth, which from a poore fisher village, is now become a great town, that it may be compared to a city: and such is the commodiousnes of the haven of it, that without striking saile, admitteth into the bosome thereof the tallest ships that be, and harboreth them very safely, and is strongly fortified both by art and nature against an enemy. it bred that famous Knight S. Francis Drake. Somersetshire. Somersetshire is bonded eastward, with Wiltshire; southward, with Dorcetshire; westward, with Devonshire; and up- The Soile. on the north side, the Severne Sea beateth. The soile is very rich, yeelding great plenty both of pasture and corn, and in some places hath Diamonds. The chiefe city is Bristow, famous for the faire buildings, for the two rivers, the wall, haven, traffique, and the number of people which resort unto it: the other townes are Wels, and Bath, famous for the springs and bathes of hot waters, honored with the title of a countie: it hath Dorsetshire. in it 385 Parish Churches. Dorcester or Dorsetshire is bounded on the east, with Southampton shire; on the west, with Devonshire; on the South, with the Brittish Ocean; and on the north, with Somersetshire and The Soile. Wiltshire: a fruitfull soile it is, the north part thereof being overspread with wods and forrests, from thence is garnished with many a fair hill, whereon feed flocks of sheep, in great number with pleasant pastures, and fruitful vallies bearing corn: it hath a descent even unto the very Sea shore. Dorcester is held for the principal town of the shire; which is neither great nor faire becaus it was spoiled of the wals and circuit by the furie of the Danes. There are other townes in it also, as Birtport, Lime, Weymouth, Poole, Warham, Shiburn, Sturminster, and Winburn. This county hath 248 Parishes: the rivers that run through it, are Lime, Trent, Rivers. Carre, Ivell, wey, Stur, and Alen. Wiltonia, called so Wiltshire. from Wilton, which heretofore was the chiefe towne: now Wiltshire is altogether a midland Country, bounded on the east, with Oxford and Southamptonshires; on the west, with Somersetshire, on the north, with Glostershire; and on the south, with Dorsetshire, and part of Hampshire. Among other shires, this is very The Soile. pleasant for the fruits and pastures in it, and breedeth a number of warlike and hardy men. Wilton in times past was accounted the Capitall city, from whence it took the denomination. There are other towns in it, as Malmsbury, Greeklade, Calne, Chippenham, Trubridge, Salisbury, and Marleborow, with 304 Parishes. The rivers which water it are Isis, Avon, Willyborne, Adderborne, Ellan, and Kennet. Gloster, commonly Glocestershire. called Glocestershire, on the west, butteth upon Mon- The situation. mouth and Herefordshires; on the north, upon Worcestershire; on the east, Oxfordshire; and on the south, Wiltshire. It is a pleasant country and fruitfull, stretch- The Soile. ing out in length from Northeast unto Southwest. It hath quarries of yron in it: the part that lieth Eastward hath many hils covered with sheep, and the middle part hath a most fertile plain, watered with the Severn which doth as it were infuse life into the soile. The principall town is Glocester, an ancient city built by the Romans, reacheth to the river Severn, where it riseth, and hangeth down towards it, and upon that side which the river leaveth it, it is fortified and girt in with a good wal: it is very faire in regard of the great number of Churches and beautifull houses in it. The other townes are called Tewksbury, Deorhirst, Campden, Winchelscomb, and Chircheſter, with 280 Parishes. The rivers that water it, are the Severne, Aven, and the Ouse, which meeting with the water of the Thames, is called the Thames. Monmouth shire is Monmouthshire. closed on the Northside, with the river Monow, on the East with the River Wy; on the Westside, with the river Remnie, which severeth it from Gla- The situation. morganshire; and on the Southside, with the Severne Sea, whereinto the said rivers, together with Uske, that cutteth thorow the midest of the Countrie, are discharged. As for commodities necessary to mans The Soile. life, it hath not onely sufficient for it selfe, but also affordeth them in plentifull manner to their neighbours adjoyning. The chiefe towne is Monmouth, encompassed with a wall and a ditch on the Northside where the river defendeth it not. In the midst of the towne hard by the merkat-place, standeth a Castle. It hath in it also Chepstow, and Aber-genny, which Anthonine calleth Gobannium, Newport, and a town which Antonine named Iska, now Uske, surnamed the second Legion; now, Caerleon and Caerloon, Arush by the Brittains. Glamorganshire, the Brittains Glamorganshire. call Morganuc, Glath-morgan, and Glad-Vorganuc, that is the Region of Morganuc, so named, as some suppose, of one Morgan a Prince; as others think of one Morgan an Abbay. It is a maritime Country, and stretcheth out directly more in length than in beadth: on the Southside, it is bounded with the Severne Sea, but where it looketh towards the Land, it hath on the Eaſtſide, Monmouthſhire; on the North, Brecknochſhire; and on the Weſt, Carmardenſhire bordering upon it. Northward it is rough and unpleaſant, becauſe of the mountains; but bending downe Southward, by little and little becometh more milde and of a better ſoile. In this part there is a ſmall city called Landaff, that is the Church by Taff: ſituated ſomewhat low, yet a Biſhops Sea. It hath 165 Pariſhes in it. The towns are Caerdiffe, Cowbridge, Neath, Swinſey and Loghor. Carmardenſhire. Caermardenſhire on the Eaſt, is limited with Glamorgan and Brecknochſhires, on the Weſt, with Pembrockſhire, on the North with Cardiganſhire, ſevered from it by the river Tivy; and on the South, with the Ocean: it is plenteous enough in corn ſtored abundantly with cattle, and in ſome places yeeldeth pit cole for fewell: the chief city is Caermarden, pleaſant for the medowes and woods about it, very ancient, and hath been girt about with a wall, which is yet to be ſeen: there is alſo new Kidwelly and the old that lyeth almoſt ruinous, by reaſon of the antiquity: for the inhabitants having paſſed over the little river Vendraeth, Vehan, built a new Kidſhelly, entiſed thither by the commoditie of the haven, which notwithſtanding being at this day choaked with ſhelves and bars, is at this preſent of no uſe. There is 87 Pariſhes in it. Pembrokeſhire. The rivers in it are Vendraeth, Vehan, Tovie and Taff. The Sea retiring Southward, and with a mighty compaſſe, and ſundry bayes incurving the ſhores, preſſeth on every ſide upon the county of Pembrock, unleſſe it be on the Eaſtſide, where Caermardenſhire, and on the North, where a part of Cardiganſhire bordereth upon it. It is a Countrie plentifull in corne, ſtored with cattle, and full of Marle, and is apt to beare wheat, plentifully ſerved with fiſh, and ſaleable wine, and that which is far above the reſt, by reaſon that Ireland confineth ſo neare upon it, it is of a very temperate and wholeſome aire. Upon the innermore and Eaſt creek of Milford haven, ſtandeth Pembroke the Shire town, upon a long narrow point, all rock, and a forked arme of Milford haven ebing and flowing cloſe to the town wals on both ſides. There are other towns alſo, Tenby, Hertfordweſt, and S. Davids. It hath only two rivers running thorow it, called by one name, Gledauh: And Milford haven, than which there is not another in all Europe more noble or ſafer, having ſuch variety of nooked bayes, and ſo many coves and creeks, that a thouſand ſhips may harbor and ride ſafely under the banks of it on every ſide: it hath 16 creeks, 5 bayes, and 13 Rodes. Upon the river Tivy lyeth Kilgarran: there is that notable Salmon-leap, where the river from on high falleth down right, and the Salmons comming out of the Ocean, coveting to go up further into the river, and meeting with this obſtacle in the way, bend back their tailes, and to give a greater leap up, hold faſt their taile in their mouth, and letting their hold goe, give a jerke, as a twig unbended, and skip over to the great admiration of the beholders. Cardiganſhire. Cardiganſhire is a champain countrie, and lieth weſtward toward the Sea, and part Southward, where the river Tivy ſeparateth it from Carmardenſhire: but on the Eaſt and Northſides, which bound upon Brecknoch and Montgomeryſhires there is a continuall ridge of hils that ſhoot along, yeelding goodly paſture grounds, under which there be ſpred ſundry large pools: the chief town is Cardigan, ſtrongly fortified by Gilbert ſon unto Richard Earl of Clare, which afterwards being by treaſon yeelded up, Rhiſe Ap Gryffin raiſed. The river Tivy runneth thorow this country, being heretofore full of Bevers, and now aboundeth in Salmons. Radnorſhire is of a triangular forme, and the further Weſt it goeth, the narrower ſtill it groweth. Radnorſhire. On the Southſide, the river Wy ſepateth it from Brecknochſhire, and on the North part lieth Montgomeryſhire. The Eaſt and South parts thereof be more fruitfull than the reſt, it is well ſtored with woods watered with running rivers, and in ſome places with ſtanding Meeres. Radnor is the principall town of the whole ſhire, built fair as the manner of the country is with thatched houſes. The river Wy runneth thorow the weſtern angle, but being by the rocks put out of its courſe, leaveth that ſoile, and falleth downe into the Sea. Brecknochſhire, on the Eaſt is bounded with Herefordſhire, on the South with Monmouth and Glamorganſhires, and on the Weſt Cardiganſhire: though this country riſeth often in mountaines, yet the vallies are every where fruitfull. Brecknochſhire. The principall town is Brecknoch, ſtanding in the very heart of the country, which the Brittains call Aber-Hodney, becauſe the two rivers Hodney and Uske, do meete in that place. There are two other ancient townes, Buelth, and Hay: Buelth is pleaſantly ſeated with woods about it, and fortified with a Caſtle: Hay lieth hard by the river Wy, well knowne, as it ſeemeth to the Romans, whoſe coine is often digged up there, and the ruines ſhew, that in old time it was walled: Wy watereth the Northerne part: the Iske runneth thorow the midſt of it, which maketh this Country to abound in river fiſh, which are taken in theſe two rivers Isk and Wy: for they are full of goodly Salmons and Trouts, and the wy hath an excellent kinde of fiſh, called Vmbræ: there is in it alſo a large broad poole, which the Brittains call Linſavethan, that is, a lake of ſtanding water. Herefordſhire lieth in compaſſe round like a circle, is bounded on the Eaſtſide with Worceſter and Gloceſterſhires, on the South with Monmouthſhire, on the weſt with Radnor and Brecknochſhires, and on the North with Shropſhire. Herefordſhire. It is a right pleaſant country, fruitfull in Corn and full of Cattle, furniſhed with all things neceſſary for mans life. Hereford the Shire town, is ſituated between fat plains, fertile fields, and almoſt girt in round about with divers rivers, and on the South the river Wy maketh haſte to get out of it into Wales. There are alſo Leimſter, Webley, Ledbury, Roſſe. It hath 176 Pariſhes. The rivers which run thorow it are Wy, Luge, Monow and Dove. Eaſtward there is a hill they call Marcley hill, which in the yeare 1571 as though it had wakened upon the ſudden out of a ſleep, rouſed it ſelfe up, and for the ſpace of three dayes together mooving it ſelfe with a roaring noiſe in a fearfull ſort, and over running all things that ſtood in the way, advancing it ſelf forward to the wondrous aſtoniſhment of the beholders. Worceſterſhire is bounded Eaſtward with Warwickſhire, on the South with Gloceſterſhire, weſtward with Hereford, and Northward with Staffordſhire, This Countrey is of a temperate aire, and of a fertile ſoile: the chiefe town is Worceſter, which it ſeemeth the Romans built: the inhabitants are much reſpected for their making of cloathes, for the beauty of their building, for the number of their Churches, and a Biſhops Sea. There is alſo Eoviſham, Bromſgrave and Durtwich. In theſe parts there are 352 Pariſhes. The rivers Severn and Avon run thorow them. Worceſterſhire.

THE SIXTH MAP OF ENGLAND,

Containing Yorkshire, Lincolneshire, Derbyshire, Staffordshire, Notinghamshire, Leceſtershire, Rutlandshire and Norfolke.

The ſituation.

FIRST, Yorkſhire preſenteth it ſelfe, which is the greateſt Shire in all England; on the Weſt ſide it is bounded with hils from Lancaſhire and Weſtmorland; on the North, the Biſhoprick of Durham; on the Eaſt ſide, the Germane Sea; and on the South it is encloſed with Cheſhire, and Darbyſhire. then with Notinghamſhire, and after with Lincolne ſhire. It is indifferent fruitfull: If in one place there be ſtony & ſandy barren ground, yet in another place, there are for it cornefields, as rich and fruitfull; though it be void and deſtitute of wood in ſome places, yet here and there you ſhall find it ſhadowed with thick Forreſts: ſo providently hath nature beſtowed ſuch a temperature upon it, that the whole countrey may ſeeme by reaſon alſo of that variety, more gracefull and delightfull. Here in ſome places is found black Amber. Some affirme it to be the Agath ſtone, which the ancients eſteemed to bee one of the rareſt Gems and ſtones. Here lieth Eboracum, commonly called Yorke, the ſecond City of the whole Ile, and the faireſt of all others, for the rare honour, aſſurance, and a ſingular ornament of all the Northerne parts; faire, large, provided with all neceſſaries, adorned with many faire buildings, as well publike as private, and inhabited with very rich and wealthy men. Vre, which is called Ouſe, ſeparateth it into two parts, joyned againe at a very large ſtone bridge. There is alſo Kingſtone upon Hull, which from a little Borrow and fiſhers Cabins, is now come to this dignity, to be the moſt famous trading towne of all this Countrey, by reaſon of the magnificent buildings, firme Bulwarks, abundance of ſhipping, the multitude of Merchants reſorting thither, and plenty of all things, and ſome other ſmall townes beſides; namely, Doncaſter, Halifax, Pomfret, Shirborne, Wetherby, Kingſton, Patrington, Wakefielde, with others. For it hath in it 39 Townes, and 459 Pariſhes, among the which there are many Chapels, which may be equallized in number to great Pariſhes. The chiefeſt Rivers are Dane, Caldere, Arus, Werfus, Nide and the Ouſe, which ſpring out of the neighboring mountains, and run thorow the principall parts of it. There are others alſo, Cokar, Foſſe, Derwent, Foulenes, Hull, Teyle, Dove, Rhie, Rechall and Wiske, there is alſo Abus, an excellent arme of the Sea, commonly called Humber, into which Ure bringeth many rivers, and other great rivers diſcharge themſelves there, it is one of the greateſt armes of the Sea that aboundeth in fiſh, of any river in England. Lincolnſhire is a very great countrie, wel nigh 60 miles long, and in ſome places 30 broad. On the Eaſt ſide the Germane Sea beateth; Northward, it reacheth to Humber; on the Weſt, it butteth upon Notinghamſhire; and on the South, it is ſevered from Northampton ſhire, by the river Welland. The principall towne is Lincolne, great and famous; reaching out upon the back of an hill. Upon the river Welland ſtandeth Stanford, a towne well peopled, of great reſort, endowed with ſundry immunities, and walled about. Grantham alſo, a towne well inhabited, adorned and ſet out by a Schoole built by Richard Foxe, Biſhop of Wincheſter, and with a faire Church, and a ſpire Steeple of a mighty height. This Shire hath in it much about 630 pariſhes. Many rivers water it, among the reſt, Witham; full of Pikes: Lud, Trent, Welland,

Idel, Dan. Here is alſo that arme of the Sea, called the Waſhes. There are the long waſhes and the ſhort Waſhes, which every tide are covered over with water, but when the tide is paſt, a man may ride over them on drie land; yet not without ſome danger, becauſe of the quickſands. Darbyſhire is confined with Leiceſter ſhire upon the South, with Staffordſhire on the Weſt, and Notingham on the Eaſt ſide, reſembling the forme of a triangle, but not equally fronted. For where the point of it lieth Southward, it is ſcarce ſixe miles broad; but it ſo enlargeth it ſelfe on both ſides, that where it looketh into the North, it is about 30 miles broad. The river Derwent divideth it after a ſort into two parts; which river breaking out of the North limit thereof, and taking his courſe Southward, ſometimes with his black waters, ſtained with the ſoile and earth that it paſſeth by, runneth down apace into the Trent. For trent overthwarteth the ſaid narrow point lying Southward. The Eaſt and South parts are well mannured, fruitfull and well ſtored with Parkes: the Weſt part beyond Derwent, called the Peake, being hilly, ſtony, and craggie ground, is more barren: howbeit, rich in lead, yron and Coles, which it yeeldeth plentifully, and alſo feedeth ſheep commodiouſly. The chiefe city is Darby, famous for the ſeat of juſtice, which is adminiſtred to their adjoyning neighbours: the riches of this City conſiſteth for the moſt part, in ſelling wheat to the inhabitants of the mountaines. There are about 106 Pariſhes in this Shire the rivers w^ch^ run through it, are Trent, Dove & Derwent. In the Weſtern parts are not only found lead, yron and coles, but Stibium alſo, in the Apothecaries ſhops called Antimonium, which minerall the women of Greece uſed to colour their eye-browes: mil-ſtones likewiſe are here hewed out, as alſo grindle-ſtones and whet-ſtones. Sometimes in theſe mines is found a certaine liquid oare, which therefore Mineraliſts call Fluor, which reſembleth Chriſtall. Staffordſhire hath on the Eaſt, Warwicke and Darbyſhires, it is broad in the midſt, and narrow at both ends: the North part is full of hils, and ſo leſſe fruitfull; the middle being watred with the river Trent, is more plentifull, clad and covered with woods, pleaſant corne fields and medowes: in the South there are coles digged out of the earth, and mines of yron. Stafford is the head towne of the ſhire; howbeit the greateſt credit and honour thereof came from Stafford Caſtle adjoyning, which the Barons of Stafford built for their owne ſeate. There is alſo Lichfield, a towne low ſeated, yet of a good bigneſſe, divided into two parts, with a ſhallow poole of cleare water, notwithſtanding they are joyned in one, by a bridge or cauſie with their ſluces: this was anciently the habitation of the Biſhop of Lichfield. There is in this Shire 130 Pariſhes. The rivers that water it, are the Dove, Hans, Churnet, Taine, Blith and Trent, which iſſueth from two ſprings, and is attributed to it as a particular right. The North part riſeth pleaſantly into little hils, which beginning here, run through the midſt of England, even as far as Scotland. In the midſt of this Countrey is the ſpacious forreſt of Needwood, full of Parkes with deare, wherein the Nobility and Gentlemen thereabouts take their pleaſure, and diſport themſelves in hunting. The County of Notingham, called Notinghamſhire, is confined on the Eaſt ſide, with Lincolneſhire; Northward, with Yorkeſhire; Weſtward, with Darbyſhire, and Southward, with

The ſituation. Leiceſterſhire: the South and Eaſt parts thereof, are made more fruitfull by the River of Trent, with other ſmall rivers running into it. The weſt part is taken up with the foreſt of Shirewood, which ſtretcheth out a great way. The chiefe towne of this Shire is The towns. Notihngam, which is ſeated upon the ſide of a Hill. The Engliſh Saxons named it Snozzenzaham, in regard of certaine Caves, and paſſages under ground, which in old time, they hewed and wrought hollow under thoſe huge and ſteepe Clifts, which are on the South ſide hanging over the little river Lin, for places of receit, and refuge, yea and for habitations. Aſſerius interpreteth this Saxon word in Latin Speluncarum Domum, that is, a houſe of Dens, or Caves, and in Britiſh, Tui ogo banc, which ſignifieth the very ſelfeſame. The Towne for the naturall ſituation thereof, is right pleaſant: as on the one hand, lie faire, and large medowes by the river ſide, ſo on the other ſide, riſe hills, with a gentle and eaſie aſcent, and is plentifully provided of all things beſides, neceſſary for mans life. On the one ſide lyeth the Foreſt of Shirewood, which yeeldeth ſtore of wood for fire, on the other, Trent, which ſerveth it abundantly with good fiſh.

The reſt anſwerable for largenes, for buildings, one or two faire Churches, a ſpacious and beautifull merkat place, and a moſt ſtrong Caſtle, well furniſhed and fortified. There are alſo other Townes beſides, as Suthwell, Newarke, Mansfield, Blythe, Soroby, and Worken-ſop, no leſſe renouned for the plentifull revenue of Liquorice, that groweth there, as alſo for the Earle of The Rivers Shrewsburies houſe, there are 168 Pariſhes in it. The Rivers, which run through it are the Trent, Lin, Snite, Idle. The Province of Leiceſter, commonly called Leiceſter-ſhire. Leiceſterſhire, confineth on the South to Notingham; on the eaſt to Rutland and Lincolne, on the The ſituation. north to Notingham, and Darbyſhire on the weſt to Warwickſhire: on the ſouth lyeth Northampton-The ſoile. ſhire. It is all Champian Countrie, bearing corne in abundance, but for the moſt part without woods. The The towns. chief towne or Citie of this Countie is called by writters, Legeceſtria, Leogora, Legeoceſtre, & Leiceſter, more famous for her antiquitie than for the authoritie ſhe hath. There is another market towne called Loughborrow, which now among all the townes of this ſhire may rightly challege the ſecond place, next unto Leiceſter, whether a man regard either the bignes or building thereof, or the pleaſant woods about The Foreſts. it. For with in very little of it, the Foreſt of Charnwood, or Charley, extendeth it ſelfe far: wherein is ſeene Beaumannour Parke, which the Lords of Beaumont compaſſed about with a ſtone wal, Lutterworth, Hinckly and Boſworth. It hath 200 Pariſh Churches Rivers. in it. The River Soar running into the Trent watereth it. And the brooke Wrek there wandereth, and turneth gently, till it diſcharge it ſelfe into the Soar. Rutland-ſhire. Rutland, or Rutlandſhire is almoſt environned with-The ſituation. in Leiceſterſhire, except on the Southſide, where it lyeth upon the River Welland, and on the Eaſtſide, The ſoile. where it toucheth thoſe of Lincolneſhire. It is very ſmall, and the leaſt Countie of England, for lying in forme, almoſt round like a Circle, it is in compaſſe ſo far about as a horſeman can ride in one day. The fertility. It ſeemeth to have taken that name of the red colour for that the earth is all red, and ſo red, that even the Sheepes fleeces become thereby reddiſh: for the Engliſh-Saxons called red in their tongue Roet, and Rud, ſo that this Countrie was named Rutland, as one would ſay Red-land. Yet it is never a whit the leſſe fertile or pleaſant for the ſmalenes of it. As for this little Countie, it may ſeeme to have beene made a Shire or Countie, but of late. For in King Edward the Confeſſours time, it was counted a part of the territory of Northampton: and the Hiſtoriographers, who have written above 300 yeeres ago, reckoned it not in the number of ſhires. In the South part thereof ſtandeth Towns. Vppingham upon a high aſcent, whence that name was impoſed, not memorable for any thing elſe, but becauſe it is counted a well frequented Merkat towne, & hath in it a faire Schoole, which together with an other at Okeham, R. Johnſon Miniſter of Gods word, in a good and laudable intent for the training up of Children in good literature lately erected. There are in this ſhire 48 pariſh Churches. Waſh or Guaſh a little Rivers. River which runneth from the Weſtward to the Eaſtward through the middeſt of it, and divideth it in twaine. Northfolke is bounded on the Southſide with North-folke. Suffolke. On the Eaſt and Northſide with the Ger-The ſituation. man Ocean, which is plentifull in fiſh. On the Weſt the greater Ouſe, a River diſporting himſelfe with his manifold branches, and diviſions ſecludeth it from Cambridgeſhire. It is a region large and ſpacious, and Fruitfulneſſe. in manner all throughout a plaine Champian, unleſſe it be where there riſe gently ſome pretty hills, paſſing rich, exceeding full of Sheepe, & ſtored with Conies, repleniſhed likewiſe with a great number of populous villages: for beſide 27 merkat townes that are in it, it is able to ſhewe Villages and Countrie townes 625, it is watered with divers Rivers and Brooks, and not altogether deſtitute of woods. The Soile according to the Soile. the varietie of places, is of a divers nature: ſome where, fat, ranke and full of moiſture, otherwhere but leane, light and ſandie: elſwhere clayie and chalkie. The inhabitants thereof are of a paſſing good complexion. The principall Towne is that ancient Citie, Thetford. There are in it at this day but few Inhabitants, although it be of good bignes, but in times paſt it was very populous, and beſide other tokens of antiquity it hath ſtill to be ſeene in it, a high mount, raiſed up to a great hight by mens hands, fenced with a double rampier, which was made by the Romans or Saxon Kings. There is alſo Norwich, counted a- Norwich. mong the renownedſt Cities of Britanie, for wealth, trading, bewtifull buildings and faire Churches, for the painefull induſtrie of the Citizens, for their fidelitie towards their Prince, and for their humanitie towards Strangers. Yarmouth alſo a Sea towne, & one of the cinque ports, having a moſt commodious havē which is fortified, by nature, and art, and though it bee almoſt environed, on the weſtſide with the water and the River, which hath a draw-bridg over it, & on the other ſides with the Sea, ſaving upon the northſide where it is firme land; yet it is well girt in with very good walls, which by the couſe of the water maketh a quadrāt, though more long than large, in which there is on the Eaſtſide a high mount, which playeth with their Canon every where into the Sea, that ſcarcely lyeth 50 paces from it. It hath 27 Mercat Townes, Borrowes and Villages 625, and 660 Pariſh Churches. The rivers which runne through it, are the Ouſe, Thet, Waveney, Gerne, Iere and Wenſe. To ſpeake ſomething of the Sea, wich is right over againſt Yaremouth, there is the great fiſhing for heerings, and The Heering fiſhing. yeeldeth exceeding great profit. It is incredible what a multitude of Heerings, and other fiſh are taken there about Michaelmas, along that Coaſt. Now let us come to the ſeventh Mapp.

The ſituation.

THE Fens or drowned lands, are ſituated between theſe ſixe Shires aboveſaid, and the Northerne Sea; and Eaſtward, London lieth ſome fifty Engliſh miles from them. The inhabitants heretofore, in the Saxons time, were called Grivy, that is, Fen-men, or Fen-dwellers: they go ſtalking upon high ſtilts, and are given to grazing, fiſhing, and fouling. They were in ancient times dry-lands, and very good ground, as appeareth by the hiſtory, written by one named William of Malmesbury, who lived in the yeare 1200, who relateth that this countrey in his time was a very Paradiſe, and ſeemed a heaven for the delight and beauty thereof: in the very marſhes bearing goodly trees, which for talnes, as alſo without knots, ſtrived to reach up to the ſtars. It is a plain country, and as levell as the Sea: which with green graſſe allureth the eye. If any man walk along the fields he needed not to ſtumble nor to ſlip his foot into a hole. There was not the leaſt parcell of ground that lay void and waſte there: here ſhall you finde the earth riſing ſomewhere for Apple-trees; there ſhall you have a field ſet with vines, which either creep upon the ground, or mount on high upon poles to ſupport them: for in thoſe dayes, there were great ſtore of Vines in England. But ſince theſe countries from time to time, eſpecially in winter ſeaſon, and ſome time moſt part of the yeare, are over flowen by the ſpreading-waters of the rivers Ouze, Grant, Nen, Welland, Glene, and Witham, having not loads and ſewers large enough to void them; but again, when the ſtreams are retired into their own channels, it is ſo plenteous and ranke of a certain fat graſſe, and full hey (which they call lid) that when they have mowen downe as much of the beſt as will ſerve their turnes, they ſet fire on the reſt and burne it in November, that it may come up again in greater abundance: at which time a man may ſee this fenniſh and moiſt tract on a light flaming fire all over. Great plenty it hath alſo of turfe, and ſedge for the maintenance of fewell for fire; of reeds alſo to thatch their houſes; yea and of alders, beſides other watry ſhrubs: but chiefly, it bringeth forth exceeding ſtore of willowes, both naturally, and alſo for that being planted by mans hand, they have ſerved in good ſteed, and are often cut down with their manifold encreaſe, and infinite number of haires (to uſe Plinies word) and withs, to hinder the violent force of the waters ruſhing againſt the banks, whereof alſo here, as well as in other places there are made baskets of them. Beſides all this, the herbe Scordium, called Water Germander, groweth there plentifully, hard by the ditches ſides: but as for theſe Fenny lands, Felix a writer of good antiquity, hath depainted them forth in theſe words: There is a Fen (ſaith he) of exceeding great largeneſſe, which beginneth at the bank of the river Grant, ariſing ſomewhere with ſedge plots, in other places with black waters, yeelding a duskiſh vapor, with woods alſo among the Iles, and having many turnings of the bank, reacheth out in a very long tract from South to Northeaſt as far as the Sea. It is no ſmall parcell of ground, reaching in length from Suffolk to Wanfleet in Lincoln ſhire, 68 Engliſh miles, and if ye count alſo the nooks, that run out of it, ye ſhall finde it to be twelve miles more. It beareth in breadth ſome 30 miles, otherwhiles 20, and in the narroweſt part, ten: William, a monke of Crowland, in his life of Guthlak hath deſcribed the Fens thus, in theſe verſes following:

The Soile.

A ſpacious Fen in England lies from Gront that river ſide,
Among the winding cranks of lakes and rivers far and wide,
Is ſpred, and neare unto the bankes of Eaſterne Sea doth ſtretch
It ſelfe, and ſo from Southerne ſide along Northeaſt doth reach:
In muddy Gulfe unwholſome fiſh
it breeds, as reeds doe ſhake
There growing thick, of winds as words a whiſpering noiſe do make.

Joyne hereunto alſo (if it pleaſe you) thus much for the Soile out of Henry of Huntingdon: This Fennie countrie (ſaith he) is paſſing rich and plenteous, yea and beautifull to behold, watered with many rivers running downe to it, garniſhed with a number of Meers both great and ſmall, which abound in fiſh and foule: and it is firmly adorned with woods and llands. And for a finall concluſion of this matter, take with you alſo theſe few words of William of Malmesbury ſpeaking of his time. So great ſtore there is here of fiſhes, that ſtrangers coming hither, make a wonder at it, and the inhabitants laugh thereat to ſee them wonder. In the Summer ſeaſon when the eeles run, eſpecially in a thundry night, they take in their channels and drains with their meere nets, ſometimes three or foure tubs full of great eeles, yea ſome times they are ſo full, that they are ready to break their nets, beſides goodly pikes, pearches, and great roches in abundance. Moreover, the Meers are ſo covered with Coots and Ducks, and the plaſhes with foule, that in moultring time, when they cannot flie, they take two or three thouſand at a draft with their nets.

The Ile of Ely.

Part of this Fenny countrie that lieth more South, and is the greateſt part by far, is named the Ile of Ely, which name, Beda hath derived from eeles: Polidore Virgil fetcheth the originall thereof from the Greek word ελος, that ſignifieth Mariſh: others from Helig, a brittiſh word, betokening willowes, wherewith it doth moſt of all abound. As for Ely it ſelfe, it is no ſmall City, and hath many priviledges. Hervie being a Biſhop of it, ſought by all meanes poſſible to augment the dignity of his Church, and obtained that it might be every where tol-free (theſe are the very words of the book of Ely) He ſet it fret from the yoke of watch and ward, that it owed to the Caſtle of Norwich, he made a way from Exning to Ely thorow the Fens ſixe miles in length, he began the faire Palace at Ely for his Succeſſors, and purchaſed to it faire lands, and not a few Lordships. And his Succeſſors abridging the number of the Monks it flouriſhed with riches and wealth in great abundance even unto our time, and their feſtivall and ſolemne holy dayes they celebrated with ſo ſumptuous proviſions and ſtately pompe, that a Poet in that age wrote theſe verſes not improperly.

Prævisis aliis, Elienſia Feſta videre,
Eſt quaſi prævisa nocte videre diem.

See after others Ely Feaſts, and ſurely thou wilt ſay,
That having ſeen the night before, thou ſeeſt now the day.

The Church likewiſe, which now began for age and long continuance to decay, they built up by little and little, and brought it to that ample ſtatelines which now it hath: for large it is, high, and faire, but ſomewhat defaced by reaſon of Noblemens and Biſhops Tombs (not without ſome ſhamefull indignity) are broken downe. There is a faire Grammer-Schoole (in ſtead of the Monkes convent) wherein 24 boyes are maintained and taught. Foure ſpeciall things there are about this Church, the Lanterne on the very top thereof, juſt over the quire, ſupported with eight pillers, and raiſed upon them right artificially, by Iohn Nothum the Biſhop. Under the Church towards the North, ſtandeth S. Maries Chapel, a ſingular piece of worke, built by Simon Montacute Biſhop. On the other ſide there is a huge heap of earth, caſt up round of a great hight, which they call the Mount, having had a winde-mill upon it. And laſtly, a Vine bearing grapes in great plenty, which now is withered and gone: theſe foure a Monke of this place in times paſt, knit up in this rime:

Hæc ſunt Eliæ, Lanterna, Capella Mariæ,
Atque Molendinum, necnon dans Vinea vinum.

Theſe things you may at Ely ſee,
The Lanterne, Chapell of S. Marie,
A wind-mill mounted up on high,
A Vineyard yeelding wine yearly.

There are alſo other towns, as Crowland, Spalding, Wilſey, Walepool, and wisbich, with the Biſhop of Elies Caſtle in it, which is a priſon for Recuſants. Upon the Fens likewiſe frontiers Cambridge, S. Ives, Peterborow with a ſtately Minſter, old Lin and Kings Lin, which by reaſon of the ſafe haven, yeeldeth moſt eaſie acceſſe. It is a large City, encompaſſed with a deep trench, and wals for the moſt part thereof, divided by two ſmal rivers, having fifteen bridges or thereabouts over them.

Over againſt Lin, on the furtheſt ſide of the river, lyeth Mershland, a little moiſt merſh-country as the name implieth, divided and parted every where with ditches, trenches, and furrows, to drain and draw the waters away: a ſoile ſtanding upon a very rich and fertile mould, and breeding abundance of cattle: in ſo much that in a place called Tilnyſmeth, there feed much about 30000 ſheep, but ſo ſubject to the overflowing of the Sea, tearing the dikes, and troubleth it ſo grievouſly, that it can hardly be holden out, and though there be many artificial hils and mounts made for the ſheep at a ſpring flood to goup unto: yet divers times they and other cattle are drowned. Many concluſions have been tried for the draining of the Fens, but take little effect, and have not been undertaken onely by mean men, but alſo by the greateſt of the Countrie, yea by ſome Kings: among the reſt, one of the principall was the L. Margret, Counteſſe of Richmond: after her time, Iohn of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaſter: afterward the Earle of Arundell: and not long ſince, King James and others. But this work was hindred by one impediment or other, or by ſome important affaires hapning in the Kingdome: alſo often by the property and nature of the Country, many competitors in the ſixe adjoyning Shires, not agreeing together, neither the right manner of draining them, being undertaken, kept it back, to the great diſlike of many. For ye muſt underſtand that theſe grounds are of ſuch a nature and ſituation, that if the rivers were but diked a good height on both ſides, by giving the rivers more liberty (as they do in Holland in the Low-Countries, which in ancient times alſo have bin all drowned lands) or elſe in turning and carrying new channels ſome other way, that the water might not ſtay in ſuch abundance behinde; they would become dry of themſelves, without the help of mils or draines To this end, for the performing of a worke ſo good and profitable for the whole Country, there is made by ſome Noblemen and Gentlemen a common purſe; by whoſe foreſight and good conduct there is no queſtion but it may by the helpe of God, be brought to good effect.

THE SEVENTH MAP OF ENGLAND,

Warwickshire. The ſituation.

WARWICKSHIRE is bounded on the Eaſtſide with Leiceſterſhire, and the Watling-ſtreet-way: on the South, with Oxford and Gloceſterſhires: on the Weſt, with the greateſt part of Worceſterſhire: and on the North, with Staffordſhire. It is divided into two parts, the Feldon, and Woodland, that is, into a plain champain, and a woody Country. The Feldon lieth on this ſide Avon: the South part lieth in a plaine champain Countrie, being rich in corne and green medowes: Woodland is full of Groves and Woods, having nevertheleſſe ſome meddowes, fields, and divers veines of yron in it. The chief city is Warwick, which is adorned with faire buildings: on the Southweſt part ſtandeth a Caſtle, very well fortified as well by nature as by art. The other townes are Leamington, Long Ichingdon, Harburie, Manceſter, Coventry, Stafford, and others: it hath 158 Pariſhes. The rivers that run thorow it, are Avon, Nen, Arrow, Alen. Northampton ſhire is ſituated in the very midſt of England, from the Southweſtſide, where it is broadeſt, drawing it ſelfe narrower by little and little, reacheth out in length to the Northeaſt: on the Eaſt, lie Bedford and Huntingdon ſhires; on the South ſide, Buckingham and Oxford ſhires; Weſtard, Warwickſhire: and Northward, Rutland and Lincolne ſhires; ſeparated from it by Avon the leſſe, and Welland, two rivers. It is a champain Countrie, a fat and fertile ſoil, exceeding populous, well furniſhed with Noblemens and Gentlemens houſes, repleniſhed alſo with towns & Churches, in ſo much, that n ſome places there are twenty, and in others thirty ſteeples with ſpires or ſquare towers within view at once. The chief town is Northampton, which ſeemeth to be all built of ſtone, is reaſonable large, and encompaſſed with wals, above which there is ſeen a ſpatious plain round about it. On the Weſtſide there ſtandeth an ancient Caſtle: the other towns, are Barkley, Torceſter, Craſton, Deventrie, Wedon, Higham, Undale, Peterborrow, & Weldon, having 326 Pariſhes. The rivers that water it are Uſa, Avon, and Welland. Huntingdonshire taketh the third place, it confineth Southward, upon Bedfordſhire; on the Weſt, upon Northamptonſhire; Northward the river Avon: and Eaſtward Cambridgeſhire: a countrie good for corne and tillage, and towards the Eaſt, where it is fennie, it is very rich and plentifull for the feeding of cattle: elſewhere right pleaſant, by reaſon of hils & ſhadie groves. The chief town is Huntingdon, from whence the ſhire taketh its name: there are others alſo, as S. Ives, S. Needs, and Cunnington with 78 Pariſhes: the rivers Ouſe and Avon water it. Next followeth Cambridgeſhire, which ſtretching out in length, butteth on the Eaſt upon Norfolk and Suffolk: on the South, upon Eſſex and Hertfordſhire: on the Weſt upon Bedford and Huntingdonſhires: and Northward, upon Lincolneſhire: and the river Ouſe which croſſeth it overwhart from Eaſt to Weſt, divideth it into two parts: the lower and South part is better manured and therefore more plentifull, being ſomewhat a plain, yet not altogether levell, for the moſt part (ſave onely where it bringeth forth Saffron) is laid out into cornefields, and yeeldeth plenty of wheat and the beſt barley, of which ſteeped in water, and lying wet therein, till it ſprout againe, then after the ſprout it is a full corne, which being dried and parched over a kill, they make ſtore of mault withall. The farther and Northern part becauſe it is fenniſh ground, by reaſon of the many floods that the rivers cauſe, and ſo diſperced into Ilands, is called the Ile of Ely, a tract paſſing green, freſh and gay by reaſon of moſt plenteous paſtures. The principall city is Cambridge, and is one of the Univerſities of England: yea the Sun and a moſt famous mart and Storehouſe of good Literature, ſcience, and Godlineſſe, it ſtandeth upon the River Cam, which in ſporting wiſe, having beſprinckled the weſt ſide thereof with manie Iflets, turning into the Eaſt, divideth it into two parts, and hath a bridg over it, whence aroſe this later name Cambridge. Beyond the bridge is ſeene a large, and ancient Caſtle. On this ſide the bridge, where by far the greateſt part of the Citie ſtandeth, you have a pleaſant ſight every where to the eye, here fair ſtreets orderly ranged, there a number of Churches, and 16 Colledges, the ſacred manſions of the Muſes, wherein a number of great learned men are mainteined, and wherein the knowledge of the beſt Arts, and skill in tongues ſo flouriſh, that they may be rightly counted the fountaines of Literature, Religion, and all knowledge whatſoever, who right ſweetly bedew, and ſprinkle with moſt wholeſome waters, the gardens of the Church, and Commonwealth throughout all England. Suffolk hath on the Weſtſide Cambridgeſhire, on the South the River Stour, on the Eaſtſide the Germane Sea, and on the North two little Rivers, called the Leſſey Ouze, and Waveney. It is a very ſpatious Countrie, full of havens, and of a fat and fertill Soile (unleſſe it be Eaſtward) compounded (as it is) of Clay & Marle, by meanes whereof, there are in every place moſt rich and goodly Cornefeilds, with paſtures, where there are made great ſtore of cheeſes, vented into England, and other forraine Countries. There is Newmercate built of later yeares, where the King hath a houſe, and more within the Countrie is that renowned Towne of S. Edmundsbury, which men ſuppoſe to have beene in old time the chiefe towne of this Shire, and to have taken this name, in regard of Norwich, that is the Northerne towne. The other Townes are Ixning, Bretenham, Hadley, Ipſwich, Debenhamie, Oxford. There are in it 575 Pariſhes. Oxfordſhire, Weſtward is joyned upon Gloceſterſhire, on the South the River Iſis or Tamis, Eaſtward it bordereth upon Buckingamſhire, Northward it is ſhut in with part of Northampton & part of Warwickſhire. It is a fertill Countrie, and plentifull, wherein the plaines are garniſhed with Cornefields and Meddowes, the Hills beſet with woods, ſtored in every place not only with Corne and Fruits, but alſo with all kind of game for hound or hauke, and well watered with Rivers. Oxford the chiefe Citie (ſheweth it ſelfe a loft in a champian plaine) and a moſt famous Univerſitie. Oxford I ſay our moſt noble Athens, the Muſes ſeate, and one of Englands Staies, Nay, the Sunne, the Eye & the Soule thereof, the very Source, and moſt cleare ſpring for good literature & wiſedome: from whence Religion, Civilitie, and learning are moſt plentifully spred into all the parts of this Realme, a faire and goodly City, having 16 Colledges and eight houses in it. There are also Blabac, Burford, Minsterlovelt, Whitney, Woodstocke, Bambury, Burcester, Tame, Dorchester, VVatlington, and 208 Parishes. Buckinghamshire bringeth forth beeck trees, which the English Saxons in elder time called Bucken. It may seeme conjecturally that Buckingam the chiefe town, and so the whole Shire tooke the name from Beech-trees. This Shire is of a small breadth, running forth in length from the Tamis Northward. On the South it looketh into Barkshire severed from it by the Tamis. On the West Oxfordshire, on the North, Northamptonshire, and from the East, first Bedfordshire, then Hertfordshire, and afterward Middlesex. The Countrie generally is of a rich Soile, and full of pastures. Bedfordshire followeth on the East, and South it joyneth to Cambridge and Hertfordshires, on the West, to Buckinghamshire, and on the North to Northampton & Huntingdon shires, and by the River Ouse crossing, it is divided into two parts. The Northside thereof is the more fruitfull of the twaine and more wooddie: the other toward the South, which is the greater, standeth upon a leaner Soile, but not altogether unfertill, for it beareth plentifully, full white and bigg barly. In the midst, it is somewhat thick of woods, but Eastward more dry ground, and bare of wood. Bedford is the principall towne, whereof the Shire also taketh the name. A towne to be commended more for the pleasant situation thereof, than for beauty, or largenesse having a stone bridge, and five Churches in it. It hath others also, as Odill, Bletsko, Eaton, Dunstables, with 116 Parishes. Hertfordshire lyeth partly on the East, and partly on the Southside of Bedfordshire. The Westside is enclosed with Bedford and Buckinghamshires, the South with Middlesex, the East with Essex, & the North with Cambridgeshire, a rich country in Cornefeilds, pastures, medowes, woods, Groves, and cleare running rivers. The chiefe towne is Hertford, which giveth the name to this quarter, though not well peopled yet famous for the antiquitie. Essex, on the Northside, the River Stour divideth it from Suffolke on the East, the Ocean windeth it selfe into it: on the South the Tamis secludeth it from Kent, like as the West part the little River Ley, from Middlesex: and Stour the lesse or Stort, which runneth into it from Hertfordshire. It is a Countrie large in Compasse, fruitfull, full of woods, plentifull of Saffran. There is to beseene Camolodun the Ancient Colonie of the Romans. Barkshire on the Northpart hereof the River Isis, afterward called Tamis, with a winding chanell running through it, with a pleasant & a gentle streame watereth it, and severeth it from Oxfordshire, & afterward from Buckinghamshire, on the Southside, the river Kennel cutteth through it, untill it runs into the Tamis. VVestward it bordereth upon VViltshire, where it carrieth the greatest breath: It is rich and fertill in VVheate, especially where it falleth lower to a Valley. As for the East part that confineth with Surrie, it groweth very barraine, and the soile lesse fertill as standing upon Forests, and VVoods, that take up a great ground in length and breath. Middlesex taketh the name of the middle-Saxons, is seperated from Buckingham by the river Cole, on the westside from Hertfordshire, on the Northside by a knowne crooked Limit, from Essex by the River Lea, & from Surrie and Kent on the South by the Tamis. It is of a pleasant and temperate aire, commodious for buildings and streets, Villages and sumptuous houses, and for the pleasant feilds. The townes are Uxbridge, Draton, Stanes, Radeliff, and others. But London the seate of the British Empire, for it containeth within its Suburbs, and Westminster above 350000 Soules, seated happily by the Tamis side, where there are a great number of shipping, which are of three or 400 tons: the Sea ebbing and flowing up to it, though it lye 60 English miles distant from this City, it stands upon fertill soile, and hath a milde aire round about it. In this City there is a Church founded and consecrated to Saint Paul. There is a faire stone bridge upon the Tamis 330 paces over, divided into 19 great Arches, an admirable worke, adorned on both sides with faire and magnificent buildings and shops, furnished with all manner of Marchandizes, and a streete through the very midst of it. There is also a Royall Exchange, unto which Marchants from all the parts of the world have recourse. Beside this, there is a strong Citadell called the Towre, very well fortified, provided with all manner of munition, which is also the Magazine of Armes, Canon, and all warlike necessaries, for all England, beside the mint that is in it. Neere unto London is Westminster, much celebrated for the pleading Halls, the Kings Pallace, and also for the Church in it, dedicated to S. Peter: famous for the creation, and sepulchres of the Kings of England. In this territorie beside the City, there are some 73 Parishes. The Rivers are Lea, Cole and Tamis compounded of two rivers, to wit, the Tame and Isis meeting together. It hath a very deepe chanell, safe & commodious for shipping to ride in, how great soever they bee, and encreaseth in largnesse some 60 English miles long to the very mouth of it. It is rich in Salmons, and Sturgeons, and for the numerable companie of Swannes, that swim upon it. Southampton, called by the vulgar Hamshire: on the Westside, it hath Dorsetshire and Wiltshire, on the South the Ocean, on the East it joyneth to Sussex, & Surry, on the Northside it bordereth upon Barkeshire. It bringeth forth abundance of fruits, with pleasant and shadie woods, rich in plentious pasture. It hath two towns, the one called Southampton, which though it be but a small towne for trading, yet hath sumptuous buildings, is rich, and well fortified. The other is Wincester, a towne undoubtedly much renowned in the times of the Romans, as that in which it seemed the Romane Emperors, offred their sacrifices, in our age it is reasonable wel peopled. There are also Ringwood, Christchurch, Worwel, Andover, Rumsey, Porthmouth, Cingsclare, Ordiam, Silcester and others: with 253 Parishes. The Rivers are Aven, Stour, Test, and Hamble. Surrey it boundeth partly upon Barkeshire, and partly upon Hamshire, Southward upon Suffex, Eastward upon Kent, and Northward it is watered with the Tamis, & by it divided with Middlesex. It is a small Countrie, but nevertheless reasonable rich. The townes are Godelmingh, Ockley, Effingham, Kingstone, Merton, Croydon, Beddington, Wimbledon, Wandlesworth, the Bourrough of Southworke with 140 Parishes. The rivers are Vey, Mole, Vandale and Tamis. Kent so called for the site, for it looketh upon France with a nooke, or an angle stretching out farre, all enclosed with the ebbing and flowing of the Tamis, and with the Ocean, save that it is bounded with Surry on the Westside, and with part of Sussex on the Southside. It is an uneven Countrie, but Westward more plain, and wooddie, rising up towards the East with manie hills. The inhabitans distinguish it into three parts, the upper next unto the Tamis they say is healthie but not wealthie, the midle they account both healthfull & plentifull, the lower they hold to be wealthie, but not healthie, the most part of it being too moist. Nevertheless it is every where delightfull, by reason of the medowes, pastures, & pleasant feilds, abounding in Apples, and Cherries, it hath some veynes of Yron, the chiefe City of it is Duroverna. A most ancient City Illustros in the time of the Romans, heretofore the Capitall City of the Kingdome of Canterburie, and the Royall seate, and now honored with the dignity of the Prince Arch-Bishopricke of England. Beside there Dover, Hith, Rumney, Sandwich, Gravesend, Rochester, Reptacester and many others. The rivers which water it, are the Tamis, Darent, Medwege & Stour. Southsex, at this day Suffex, lyeth upon the British Ocean all Southward with a streight shoare (as it were) more in length than bredth. The Sea-Coast of this Countrie hath white and greene hils on it, which mounting to a greater height, are called the Downes, which because they stand upon a fat chalke, or kinde of Marle yeeldeth Corne abundantly. The midle tract thereof is garnished with medowes, pastures, Cornefields and Groves, which make a very lovely shewe. The Northerne side thereof is shaded most pleasantly with woods, & it is full of Iron-mines in every place. The Townes are Chicester, Arundel, Lewes, Winckelsey and others. The Soile is watered with manie Rivers.

THE EIGHT MAP OF ENGLAND,

Contayning the foure Iles, ſubject to the Crovvne of England, that is, the Ile of Mona, or Angleſey, Vecta, commonly called VVight, Iarſey and Garnezey.

The Ile of Mona.

THE eight & laſt Map of England, containeth thoſe foure Iles, which are under the King of Englands ſubjection: the firſt two called Mona and Wight, lie upon the Engliſh Coaſt, but the other two upon the French. Mona, which the Engliſh alſo call Mon, Termon, and that is the land of Mon, and Ynis Dowil ſignifieth a ſhadowy or darkſome Iland. The Anglo-Saxon Monez, which is ſevered from the continent of England, by the ſmall narrow-ſtreight Menki. This Ile is about 22 Engliſh miles long, and 17 broad, and ſome 60 in compaſſe. And though that Giraldus ſaith it ſeemed in his time, to be drye, ſtonie, of a hideous aſpect, and unpleaſant: yet now it is pleaſant, well manured: yea, and a fat ſoile, and ſo rich in Wheate, which is cõmonly called the Mother of Wales. It is alſo paſſing rich in cattle, and ſendeth out of it great multitudes: it alſo yeeldeth grine ſtones, and in ſome places Alum, and Coperoſe. This is that moſt notable Ile Mona, the ancient ſeate of the Druides, which was firſt attempled by Paulinus Suetonius, and brought by Iulius Agricola, under the Roman Empire. Manie ages after, it was conquered by the Engliſh men, and was called Angleſey, that is, the Engliſh mens Iland. Mr. Camden addeth, that when the Roman Empire declined in England: the Iriſh invaded it comming out of Ireland, entred in by ſtealth, and neſtled there: for beſide certaine mounts of earth entrenched about, which they call the Iriſh mens cottages, there is a place alſo named Yn Herici Gwidel, of the Iriſh men, who as wee finde it recorded in the booke of Triades, under the leading of Sirigus, put the Britans to flight in that place; neither was it grievouſly infeſted onely by the Engliſhmen, but alſo by the Norwegians: for in the yeere of our redemption 1000, King Aethelreds fleete ſcowring the Seas round about it, waſted this Ile in all hoſtile manner. After this the two Norman Hughes, the one Earle of Cheſter, & the other Earle of Shrowſbury greatly afflicted it, and built Caſtle Aber-lienioc to curbe, and keep under the inhabitants. But Magnus the Norwegian arriving here at the very ſame time, ſhot the ſaid Hugh Earle of Shrowsbury throw with an Arrowe, and after he had pillaged the Iland departed. The Engliſhmen moreover from time to time did invade it, untill that King Edward the firſt, brought it wholly under his ſubjection. There were in ancient time reckoned in it 363 Villages, and even at this day it is well peopled. The principall towne therein at this time is Beaumariſh, which King Edward the firſt built upon a mooriſh ground, and for the ſituation thereof, gave it this name, whereas before time it was called Bonover, who alſo fortified it with a Caſtle. The next town is Newburge, called in Brittiſh Roſſur, annoyed a long time, with heapes of ſand driven in by the Sea. There is likewiſe ſeene Aberfraw, heretofore having beene the habitation, and the royall ſeate of the Kings of Guineth, or Northwales. And in the utmoſt promontorie Weſtward, which wee call Holy-head, there ſtandeth a little poore towne called by the Britans Caer-Guby: ſo named of Kibie a right holy man, and a diſciple of S. Hilarie Biſhop of Poitiers, the natives are very rich, and have ſtrong bodies. They ſpeake the Brittiſh tongue, becauſe they can ſpeake no Engliſh, though they were ſubject three hundred yeeres with the reſt of Cambria to the Kings of England.

Vecta or the Ile of Wight.

The Ile of Wight, or the Whight; it is ſevered from mameland, by a ſmall ſtreight, anciently called Solent, which ſeemeth to have beene conjoyned to it, whence proceedeth, that Britiſh name Guith, which betokeneth a ſeparation, as Ninnius ſaith is thought to be given to it, even as Sicilie alſo being broken of, and cut from Italie, got the name from Secande, the Latin word (which ſignifyeth cutting) as the right learned Julius Scaliger is of opinion. By this vicinitie of Site, and affinitie of name, wee may well think this Vecta to be that Ictis, which ſeemed at every tide to be an Iland; but when it was ebbe, the ancient Britans were wont that waye to carrie tinne thither by Carts, which ſhould be tranſported into France. I thinke it is not that Mictis in Plinie, which likewiſe commeth very neere unto Vecta: for that in it there was plentie of tinne, but in this of ours there is not any veine at all of mettall. This Ile betweene Eaſt and Weſt is of an ovall forme, ſtretcheth out 20 miles in length: and ſpreadeth in the midſt where it is broadeſt 12 miles: having the one ſide turning to the North, & the other Southward. The ground (to ſay nothing of the Sea exceeding full of fiſh) is of a fertill, and of a fatt ſoile, and is thankfull to the huſbandmen, for the Corne that is carried forth of it: breeding every where ſtore of Conies, Hares, Partridges and Phefants. It hath one little Foreſt likewiſe, & two parks with ſtore of Deere for game, and hunting pleaſure. Through the mieſt thereof runs a long tract, or chaine of hills, yeelding plenty of paſture, and feeding for Sheepe. The wool of which, next unto that of Lemſter, and Lotterwold, is eſteemed the beſt, and is in ſpeciall requeſt with Clothiers, whereby there groweth to the inhabitans much gaine and profit. The North part all over is greene with medowes, paſtures and woods: the Southſide lyeth wholly in manner bedecked with Corne-fields encloſed, where the Sea ſo encroacheth within it, that it maketh almoſt two Ilands, and verely ſo the Ilanders call them: namely, the Freſh-water Ile, which looketh Weſt, and the Binbridge Ile towards the Eaſt. At this Ile alſo, the navie of Allectus, after he had uſurped the imperiall dignity in Britanie, lying in eſpiall and ambuſh, awaited the Romans comming againſt him, who nothwithſtanding by the happie meanes of a miſt, paſſed by their ennemies undeskryed, gat to land, and ſet fire on their owne ſhips, that they might be no refuge for them to eſcape unto by flight. Lord Credis was the firſt Engliſh Saxon that ſubdued it, and gave it to Stuffa, and Whitgar, who ſlew all the naturall Britans. Afterward, Wolpher King of the Mercians, reduced the Ile of Wight under his obedience, and aſſigned it over to Edelwalch King of the South-Saxons, then Cædualla King of the Weſt-Saxons, when the ſaid Edelwalch was ſlaine, and Arvandus, the petty King of the Iland made away, annexed it to his dominion, and in a tragicall and lamentable maſſacre, killed every mothers child almoſt of the inborne inhabitants, & the fourth part of the Ile, to wit, as much land as conteined 300 hides, he gave unto Biſhop Wilfrid the firſt that inſtructed the Ilanders in the knowledge of the Chriſtian ſtian religion. The Natives are naturally warriours, ready, ſtout and valliant Souldiers. In Bedas dayes it was counted to containe a thouſand and two hundred hides, now it reckoneth upon 36 Townes, Villages & Caſtles. Among the townes that of greateſt name, is Newport, the principall mercate towne, called in times paſt Medena, and the new Burgh of Meden, whereof the whole Countrie is divided into Eaſt-meden, and Weſt-meden, according to the ſituation eaſt or weſtward. Brading is an other mercate Towne: Newton and Yarmouth, which have their Majors, and ſend Burgeſſes to the Parliament. This Yarmouth and ſharpnore have Caſtles in them, which together with worllies fort, defend the Sea ſhoare towards the Northweſt. Juſt over againſt it ſcarcely two miles of, ſtandeth Hurſt, lying upon a neck of the Land, and looketh unto the Sea for the defence of Southhamptonſhire. There is Quarre, where was founded a Nunnerie in the yeere of our Lord 1132. Gods hill, in which John Worſley, erected a Schoole for the training up of youth in learning: Weſt-Cowe, and Eaſt-cowe lye now ruinous, which King Henry the eight, built at the very entrie into Newport. Alſo on the North-eaſt-ſide lyeth Sandam-Caſtle, furniſhed with great ordinance: neither are there any naturall defences wanting for the defence of this Ile, for it is encircled with a continuall ridge, and a running (as it were) of craggie clifts. There are likewiſe under the water hidden ſtones, & every where there lye banks, ſhelves, and rocks dangerous for Sailers. Theſe two Ilands lye neere unto the Engliſh Coaſt. Among the reſt, more weſtward, lye the two Ilands of Gerſey & Garnzey, which affront France, yet under the Crown of England, and firſt of all upon the Coaſt of Normandie, or the Lexoby, as one would ſay Littorales, that is, Coaſt-men. This Ile is 30 miles or there abouts in Compaſſe, fenced with Rocks and ſhelves, which are ſhalow places, dangerous for ſuch as ſaile that way. The ground is fertill enough, bearing plentie of ſeverall ſorts of Corne, and breeding Catle of divers kinds, but eſpecially Sheepe, and moſt of them with faire heads, carrying foure hornes a peece. Pleaſant for the greeneneſſe of many gardens, and Orchards full of Apple-trees, whereof they make wine of apples, which they call Sidere, and the Engliſh Cider. And for that it is ſcarce of fuell in ſtead of fire wood, they uſe a kind of Sea weed, which they call Vraic, deemed to be that fucus Marinus which Plinie mentioneth, and groweth every where moſt plenteouſly upon craggie Ilands and on Rocks, which they gather in the woods, dry it in the Sun, which ſerveth to burne, and with the aſhes thereof they dung commonly their fields and fallows, to battle, & make them fruitfull. It hath manie farmes, twelves Pariſhes, and a Caſtle well provided called Montorgueil, ſtanding upon a high hill, into which the King ſends a Gouvernour, to governe and defende the whole Ile.

Twentie miles from thence towards the Northweſt lyeth Garnſey, lying out Eaſt, and Weſt in the faſhion of a harpe, neither in greatnes nor it fruitfulneſſe comporable to Ierſey, whereof I have ſpoken: for it hath in it onely ten Pariſhes, yet in this to be preferred before it, becauſe it foſtereth no venemous thing therein, as the other doth. It is alſo better fortified by naturall fences, as being encloſed round about with a ſet of ſteepe rocks, among which is found that moſt hard and ſharpe ſtone Smyris (which wee tearmed Emerill) wherewith Gouldſmiths, and Lapidaries, clenſe, burniſh, and cut their precious ſtones, and Glazers alſo divide, and cleave their glaſſe. It hath alſo flouriſhing Orchards and fruit-trees, full of ſundry apple and peare-trees, whereof they make Cider. Likewiſe it hath a greater name then Gerzey for the commodiouſneſſe of the haven, and the concourſe of Marchants reſorting thether. For in the fartheſt part well neere Eaſtward no haven, but on the Southſide, it admitteth a haven, within a hollow Bay bending inward like a halfe moon, able to receive tall ſhips, upon which ſtandeth Saint Peter, a little towne, built with a long & narrow ſtreete, well ſtored with warlike munition; and ever as any warre is toward, mightily repleniſhed with Marchants. For by an ancient priviledge of the Kings of England, here is alwaies a continuall truce as it were, and it is Lawfull for Frenchmen and others, how hot ſoever the warre be, to repaire hither too and fro, without daunger, & to maintaine entercourſe of trafique in ſecuritie. The entrance into the haven, which is rockie, is fortified on both ſides with 2 Caſtles. On the left hand there is an ancient Bulwark or Blockhouſe, & on the right hand over againſt it ſtandeth an other upon a high rock, & the ſame at every high water is compaſſed about with the Sea: which in Queene Maries dayes, Sr. Leonard Chamberlan, Gouvernour of the Iland, as alſo under Queene Elizabeth (of bleſſed memorie) Sr. Thomas Leighton his Succeſſour, cauſed to be fortified with new works. For here lyeth for rhe moſt part the Gouvernour of the Iland, and the garniſons Souldiers, who will in no hand ſuffer any Frenchmen, and woemen to enter in. The natives of theſe two Ilands, are originally Normands, or Britans, and ſpeake French. The one and the other hath this Vraic for their burning fuell, or Sea Cole which they bring to them out of England, and every where they have in the Sea & waters a multitude of fiſh. Theſe Ilands with others lying about them, belonged in old time to the Dukedome of Normandie, but when as Henry the firſt King of England, had vanquiſhed his brother Robert in the yeer of our Lord 1108. he annexed that Dukedome, and theſe Ilands unto the Kingdome of England. Since which time they have continued firme in Loyaltie unto England, even when Iohn King of England being endited for murthering Arthur his nephew; was by a definitive ſentence, or arreſt of confiſcation, deprived of his right in Normandie, which he held in chiefe of the French King: yea moreover, when the French had ſeiſed upō theſe Iles, he through the faithfull affection of the people, recouvered them twiſe. Neither revolted they when Henry the third Ring of England, had for a ſumme of money ſurrendred over, his whole right, and intereſt in Normandie: and ever ſince they have with great commendations of their Conſtancie perſiſted faithfull unto the Crowne of England, and are the onely remainders that the Kings of England have of their ancient inheritance from William the Conquerour, and of the Dutche of Normandie. The French in the reigne of King Edward the IIII. ſeized upon them, but through the valour of Richard Harlſton, Valed of the Crowne (for ſo they tearmed him in theſe dayes) they were ſhortly diſſeized, and the King in recompence of his valourous ſervice, gave unto him the Captaineſhip, both of the Iland and of the Caſtle. As touching the Eccleſiaſticall juriſdiction, they were under the Biſhop of Conſtance in Normandie, untill that he in our remembrance refuſed to abjure the Popes authoritie in England (as our Biſhops doe) and are now under the dioceſſe of the Biſhop of Wincheſter. This ſhall ſuffice for theſe foure Iles, and for England aſwell in generall as particular.

SCOTLAND.

THE North part of the Iland of Britanie, was of old time inhabited through out by the Picts, who were divided into two Nations, the Decalidonii and Vecturiones, but when the Scots became Lords and Rulers over all this part, it was ſhared into ſeven parts, among ſeven Princes, as wee finde in a little ancient Phamphlet, now called Scotland, heretofore Albaine. For yet to this day thoſe that are true, and right Scots indeed, call Scotland in their Mother tongue Albin, and the Iriſh Albaine, as an other Ireland (which was named Banno from Bards) for the Hiſtorians call Ireland, Scotland the great: and the Kingdome of Scotland in Britanie Scotland the leſſe. Ptolomee Britanie the leſſe. Rufus the ſecond. Tacitus names it Calydoma from the Foreſt. Alſo according to the habitation of the people. Scotland is now divided into High-land-men, and Law-land-men. Theſe being more civill uſe the Engliſh language, and apparell: the other which are rude and unruly ſpeake Iriſh, and go apparelled Iriſh like. Out of this diviſion the Borderers are to be excluded becauſe by reaſon of peace ſhyning now upon them on every ſide, by a bleſſed and happie Union they are to be ranged & reckoned in the very heart and middeſt of the Britiſh Empire, as who begin to be wearie of Warrs, and to acquaint themſelves with the delightfull benefits of peace.

The names of Scotland.

The ſituation. Moreover according to the ſituation and poſition of the places the whole Kingdome is divided into two parts. The South on this ſide the River Tay, and the Northr beyond Tay. Southward it boundeth upon England, and the Rivers Tweed and Solwey. Northward it lyes upon Deucalidon Ocean. Weſtward the Iriſh Sea, and Eaſtward the Ocean & German Sea embraceth it on all ſides. It is 257 Engliſh miles in length, and 190 in breadth. The Countrie is more temperate than France, the coldes being not ſo ſharpe, nor the heate ſo extreame but as it is in England: though the fertilitie thereof may not be compared to England.

The temperature.

The Soile. The Soile is for the moſt part ſulphurus, & very glewie, and therefore fitter for fuell and firing, eſpecially becauſe there is no great ſtore of wood. And yet nevertheleſſe there groweth as much wheate as ſufficeth the inhabitants. It yeeldeth alſo divers mettals, which have ſome ſmall gold and ſilver in them, but for quick-ſilver, yron, lead, and tinne in abundance. In Dreſdalia there is a ſmall Mine of gold, in which alſo is found Azure, ſome precious ſtones, yea Agaths, which will burne in the water, and are quenched with oile. There are good paſture grounds, which feed Cattaile of all kinds, which yeelds them much meate, milke, butter and cheeſe, and great ſtore of wool. Moreover when they went to warre with the Picts into England, and troubled unceſſantly the Engliſh by force of armes, yet they aſpired not ſo ſoone and at once to the height of the Scottiſh State, but for a time were ſhut up into a corner where they were ſeized on, & durſt not (as Beda ſaith) warre any longer than 127 yeeres againſt the petty Kings of the Northumbers, untill, at once they almoſt wholly defeated the Picts, and that the Kingdome of Northumberland groaned under the burden of inteſtine troubles, and upon the frontiers abated by the incurſions of the Danes, when as all the Northerne parts of England followed the name, & good ſucceſſe of the Scots with the regions beyond the Cluyd, and Edenburch frith: for there is no man can gaine ſay, but that it was a part of Northumberland, which was poſſeſſed by the Saxons, and hence it came that all thoſe that did inhabite in the Eaſterne parts of Scotland were called Low-land-men, were of the ofspring of the Angle-Saxons, and ſpake Engliſh. But thoſe which dwelt weſtward where called High-landers, were Scots, and ſpake Iriſh, and were ennemies to thoſe that uſed to ſpeake Engliſh. The Scots are good and valliant ſouldiers, and can endure not onely any hardſhip, & want of victualls, but alſo watching and cold. Edenborrow is the principall Citty. Ptolomee nameth it the Winged-Caſtle: for Adam ſignifieth in the Britiſh tonge a Wing, and Eden-borrow a word compounded of the Britiſh and Saxõ language, ſignifyeth nothing elſe but the Burgh with wings. The reaſon then of the name was ether fetcht from wings of horſe-men, or elſe from theſe wings in Architecture, which the maſter builders terme Pteromata, that is as Victruvius ſheweth 2 walls, ſo riſing up in height, that they reſemble a ſhew of wings. And as it is the ſeate of the King, ſo is it alſo the oracle, or cleſſet of the Lawes and the very Pallace of juſtice, not for Lauden onely, but indeed for all Scotland. Heere for the moſt part are held the high Courts of Parlament, for the enacting or repealing of Lawes, alſo the Seſſions and the Court of the Kings juſtice. It is ſituated on a high hill like Pragh in Bohemia. Harken if it pleaſe you what Mr. Iohnſton ſaith in the praiſe and commendations thereof.

Under the riſing of a hill,
Weſtward there ſhoots one way,
A Caſtle high. on th'other ſide the Kings houſe Gorgeous gay.
Betweene them both the Citie ſtands, tall buildings ſhew it well,
For armes, for courage much renound much people therein dwell.
The Scots-head Citie larg, and faire, the Kingdomes greateſt part:
Nay even the Nations Kingdome whole well neere by juſt deſart.
Rare Arts, and riches, what ones minde can wiſh is therein found,
Or elſe it will not gotten be throughout all Scotiſh ground.
A civill people, here a man may ſee a ſenate Grave.
Gods holy Lawes with pureſt light of Preachers here you have.
In parts remote of Northerne clime would any perſon ween
That ever theſe, or ſuch like things might poſſibly be ſeen.
Say Traveller, now after that thou forraine Townes haſt knowne.
Beholding this beleeveſt thou theſe eyes that are thine owne?

Edenborow is from Eaſt to Weſt a thouſand paces in length, and halfe as much in breadth. Eaſtward neer unto Holy-Ruyd ſtands the Kings Palace, which King David the firſt built: over which within a parke ſtored with game, riſeth a hill with two tops called of Arthur, the Britan Arthurs chaire. On the Weſtſide it hath a moſt ſteepe rock, which mounteth up aloft, upon which ſtandeth a Caſtle with many ſtately turrets upon it: ſo ſtrong that it is impregnable, w^ch the ancient Britans called Caſtle myned Agned, the Scots the Maiden-Caſtle, or the Virgin Caſtle, which is the ſame ſpoken of before by Ptolomee. This Caſtle for a long time was under the power of the Engliſh-Saxons, who poſſeſſed this Eaſterne part of Scotland, till it was reduced wholly under the Scotiſh dominion, about the yeare of our redemption 960. A mile from Edenborrow lyeth Lieth, a moſt commodious haven hard upon the River Lieth, which when Deſſey the Frenchman for the ſecuritie of Edenborrow had fortified, by reaſon of men repairing thether within a ſhort time, from a meane Village it grew to be a bigg towne. Againe, when Francis the ſecond King of France, had married Marie the Queene of Scots, the Frenchmen who in hope and conceit had gaped for Scotland, and began now to have an eye upon England, Anno 1560 ſtrengthned it with more fortifications: But Elizabeth Queene of England ſolicited by the Nobles of Scotland, that embraced the reformed Religion to ſide with them, by her puiſſance & wiſedome, effected that both they returned into France, & theſe their fortifications were layed levell with the ground, & Scotland ever ſince hath beene freed from the French. Moreover there is Glaſcow, Perth, Aberdein, & others: whereof M^r. Iohnſton, who was borne in thoſe parts, upon theſe Townes verſifyeth thus, and firſt of Glaſcow: the Archbiſhops ſea & a univerſity:

The ſumptuous port of Biſhops great hath not adorned thee ſo
Nor mitre rich, that hath beene cauſe of thine accurſed woe.
As Clyds Muſes grace the now,
O Glaſcow Towne for why
They make they beare they head aloft up to the ſtarrie sky.
Cluyd the Beautie of the world for fiſhfull ſtreame renowned.
Refreſheth all the neighbour fields that lye about it round.
But Glaſcow beauty is to Cluyd, and grace to Countries nie.
And by the ſtreames that flowes from thence all places ruſtifie.

Againe in commendations of Perth which King William built both Necham, who lived in that age, as alſo M^r. Iohnſton verſifieth of it in this manner:

By Villages, by Townes, by Perth
thou runneſt great Tay, amaine
The riches of this Citie Perth doth all the realme ſuſtaine.

And M^r. Iohnſton that famous Poët:

Neere to the waters cleare of Tay, and pleaſant plaines all greene
In middle ground betweene them ſtands
Perth proudly like a Queene
Of Noble Kings the Stately ſeate and Palace, once it was Faire for the ſite, and rich withall for ſpring of Corne and graſſe.
To neighbour places all it doth Lawes, cuſtomes, faſhions give Her praiſe to give, theirs, to deſerve, the ſame for to receive.
Of all the Cities in theſe parts walled alone is ſhee.
a ſcambling prey might be.
What Knights ſhee bred, and what rewards they wonne to Knight-hood due Danes, Saxons fierce, bold Britans eke, the Troians of ſpring knew.
Happie for praiſes old, happie for praiſes new of late.
New as thou art thine honor old ſtrive to perpetuate.

And for Abberdein, thus M^r. Iohnſton commends it:

Beſett with loftie tops of hills, and Northward lying ſpred
Among her fifter townes. Aberdein beareth up her head.
The warme Sun beames ſuch temper give to ſharpneſſe of the aire,
That neither ſcorching heat you need, nor pinching cold to feare.
The Sea, the fiſhfull Rivers eke, with plenteous gulphs and ſtreames
Make this place rich, and one of them enricheth it with Gemmes.
Plaine hearted men, of lightſome lookes, and cheerefull paſſing kind,
To Strangers: decent every thing neate you ſhall there in find.
Theire noble Gentrie ancient, theire livings ancient were,
And their demeanes: undaunted hearts and martiall minds they beare.
The juſtice Hall as mother kind ſhe honors due doth daigne Profeſſions all; arts ſtrive with wit, and wits with arts againe
All ſhort of her. But praiſes all of this my Genetreſſe,
That ſhe deſerves, no wit, nor art is able to expreſſe.

Againe of Montroſe he verſifieth thus:

With Roſes gay the Towne it deckt,
an eaſie mount withall,
Stands neere the ſame: and hence, they ſay,
Montroſe folk did it call
In former times by ancient name
Elurca men it knew Ennobled thus you ſee it is by name both old and new:
Both old and new renoume it hath for proweſſe and for wit,
Of men that have their Countrie grac'd and honor won to it.

And as the Poët ſaith:

AEternum memorabit Gallia Cives
Grata ſuos, titulos quæ dedit & tumulos.

That is:

France Thankfully, will aye recount
as Citizens of her owne,
On whom both titles glorious, and tombes ſhee hath beſtowne.

There are alſo many famos Rivers, & Lakes in Scotland, as the Rivers Tay, Dea, Spey, which hath mooving heapes of ſands upon it: Whereof Necham hath thus written:

Spey

Spey raiſing heapes of ſand a maine, that ſhift of times their place,
In conſtant he doth chang eft ſoones, and keeps no certaine race.
A panier ſerves here for a boate:
ſome ventrous Swaine it guides,
Who followeth ſtill the Rivers courſe, while downe the ſtreames it glides.

Moreover, there is a famous Lake, called Logh Lomund, whereof wee will ſpeake at large in the next deſcription. And whether this old diſtiction of our Necham be true or no, which he writeth of it. I leave it to thoſe, who know better the nature of this Lake.

Ditatur fluviis Albania, ſaxea ligna,
Dat Lomund multa frigiditate potens.

With Rivers Scotland is enrich'd, and Lomund there a Lake,
So cold of nature is, that ſticks it quickly ſtones doe make.

There are alſo diverſe other pooles, mooriſh grounds, ſprings & rivers, the Sea about it abounds in Oyſters, Hearings, Coral, Autyly and Shells, of manie ſorts. There are many Out-lets and entrances into the Sea. The Countrie is mountainous, and craggie with ſharp hills, but upon the tops of ſome of them, there are plaines like fields, having graſſe that growes upon them to fatten cattaile. Among the reſt, the Mount Grampe is higher then the others, and divideth Scotland into two parts. The Communaltie call it Gratbain or Gratzhanie, that is a crooked Mountaine. From Aberdonia the Mountaines are full of woods, which is thought to be the Foreſt Calidonia, ſo called by Lucius Florus, it ſpreadeth it ſelfe throw manie Countries, having neither paſſage, way nor path through it by reaſon of the thickneſſe of the woods and trees. In the dayer of Severus, as wee read in Xiphilinus. Argetecox a pettie Prince reigned over this tract, whoſe wife being rated and reviled as an Adultereſſe by Iulia the Empreſſe Frankly, and bouldly made this reply unto her, we Britan Dames have to doe with the braveſt, and beſt men, but you Romane Ladies with every lewd baſe companion ſecretly. The Scots were not the laſt nation of Chriſtendome, that embraced the Chriſtian religion, which they have kept, and honored above all others as appeareth not onely by ancient write, and monuments: but alſo by their Churches, Hoſpitales, and other places, appointed for religious uſes. The Scotch Nation is devided into three orders, to wit, the Spiritualitie, the Nobilitie and Commons. The Spiritualitie hath two Arch-Biſhopricks, the one called Saint Andreas: the other that of Glaſcow, the firſt is accounted Primate of Scotland, having eight Biſhopricks under him, the other of Glaſcow three onely.

Mountaines, Foreſts and Woods.

The Government.

The Republike or Common-weale of the Scots, like as the Engliſh conſiſteth of a King, the Nobilitie, or Gentrie, and the Commons. The King according to their owne record is the direct Lord of the whole Domanie, or Dominion, and hath royall authoritie over all States and degrees, as well Eccleſiaſticall as Lay, and temporall. The Kings eldeſt Sonne is called Prince of Scotland, Duke of Rotſay, and Seneſchall or Stuard of Scotland, but all the reſt of the Kings Children are named ſimply Princes. In the publick ſolemnities of the Coronation, the King promiſeth upon his faith, to all the people, to keepe inviolable the Lawes, and cuſtomes of the Ancients, the faſhions of the Countrie, and to follow the right, which he hath received from his predeceſſors. The ſupreame Court as well for dignitie, as for authoritie, is accounted the Aſſembly of the States of the Kingdome, which is called as in England a Parliament, and hath the very ſame power, as abſolute. It cõſiſteth of three degrees of States, Lords ſpirituall, as Biſhops, &c. Lords temporall, as Dukes, Marqueſſes, Earles, Vicounts, Barons, & of the Commiſſioners for the Cities, Townes & Burghs. Among the Nobles there is a fourth or a lower degree, called Knights, who verily are doubled with greater ſolemnitie, then in any other place throughout Europe by taking an oath, and are proclamed by a Heralt. Of a ſecond ſort are they who are tearmed Lairds and Barons, among whom none was reckoned in old time, but ſuch as held immeadiately from the King their lands in chef, and had jus furcarum, that is, power to hang, &c. In the third place are all ſuch as being deſcended from worſhipfull houſes, and not ſignall with any eſpeciall dignitie be tearmed Gentlemen. The reſt is Citizens, Marchants, noted for their riches and wealth, & have charges and Officers in Towns, chiefe yeoman and Artiſans, which ſoone grow rich, becauſe they are exempted from paying of toles, cuſtomes, & impoſitions in regard they are at the Kings ſervice, when he hath occaſion to uſe them, have alſo a Parlamentarie voice, and to the end, that nothing may be ordained too rigorous in the townes, when the Generall States meete, the King hath permitted them to depute, and ſend thether three or foure Citizens, to give their voice and adviſe freely upon cauſes propounded, with the Commiſſioners of the other two orders. It is appointed and ſolemnly called by the King at his pleaſure, at a certaine ſet time before it be holden. When theſe States above ſaid are aſſembled, and the cauſes of their aſſembly delivered by the King, or the Chancellor, the Lords ſpirituall, chooſe out a part by themſelves eight of the Lords Temporall: ſemblably, the Lords temporall make choiſe of as manie out of the Lords ſpirituall. Then the ſame all joyntly together, nominate eight of the Commiſſioners for the Counties, and as manie of the Commiſſioners for the free Bouroughs regall, which make up in all the number of 32. And then theſe Lords of the Articles (for ſo they are tearmed) together with the Cancellor, Treaſurer, keeper of the privie Seale, Kings Secretaire, &c. doe admit or reject every bill propoſed unto the States, after they have firſt beene imparted unto the King, being allowed by the whole aſſembly, of the States, they are throughly weighed and examined, and ſuch of them as paſſe by the greater number of voices are exhibited unto the King; who by touching them with his Scepter, pronounceth, that he either ratifieth, & approveth them, or diſableth and maketh the ſame voyd: but if any thing diſliketh the King it is raiſed out before.

The ſecond Court or next unto the Parliament, is the Colledge of Juſtice, or as they call it the Seſſions, which King Jeames the fifth 1532 inſtituted after the forme of the Parliament of Paris, conſiſting of a Preſident, 14 Senators, ſeven of the Cleargie, and as many of the Laity (unto whom was adjoyned afterward the Chancellor, who hath the chiefe place, and five other Senators) three principall Clarkes, & as manie Advocates as the Senators ſhall think good. Theſe ſit and Miniſter Iuſtice, not according to the rigor of the Lawe, but with reaſon, and equitie every day (ſave onely on the Lords day and Munday) from the firſt of November to the 15 of March, and from Trinitie Sunday unto the firſt Calends of Auguſt. All the ſpace betweene, as being the times of ſowing, and harveſt is vacation, and intermiſſion of all ſuits, and Lawmatters, they give judgement according to the Parliament ſtatutes, and Municipall Laws, & where they are defective, they have recourſe to the Imperiall Civill Lawe.

There are beſides in every County Civill Iudicatoires or Courts kept, wherein the ſheriffe of the ſhire, or his deputie decideth the Controverſies of the Inhabitants, about violent ejections, intruſions, dammages, debts, &c. From which Courts and Judges in regard of hard, & unequall dealing, or elſe of aliance, and partiality, they appeale ſometime to the Seſſion. The ſherifs are all for the moſt part hereditary. For the King of Scots, like as of England alſo, to oblige more ſurely unto them, the better ſort of Gentlemen, by their benefits and favors, made in old time theſe Sherifs heritable & perpetuall. But the Engliſh Kings ſoone perceiving the inconveniences thereby enſuing, of purpoſe changed this order, and appointed them from yeere to yeere. There be civill Courts in every regalitie holden by their Bailives, to whom the Kings have graciouſly graunted royalties, as alſo in Free-Bourroughs, by the Majeſtrates thereof.

There are likewiſe Iudicatoires, which they call Commiſſariats, the higheſt whereof is kept at Edenburgh, in which before foure Judges, actions are pleaded, concerning Willes, and Teſtaments, the right of Eccleſiaſticall benifices, Tithes, Divorces, and ſuch other Eccleſiaſticall cauſes. In every other ſeverall part almoſt throughout the Kingdome, there ſitteth but one Judge alone in a place about theſe matters.

In Criminall cauſes the Kings Chiefe-Juſtice holdeth his Court for the moſt part at Edenburgh (which office the Earles of Argile have executed now for ſome yeeres,) and he doth depute two or three Lawgers, who have the hearing, and deciding of Capitall Actions, concerning life and death, or of ſuch as inferre loſſe of lims, or of all goods. In this Court, the defendant is permitted, yea in caſe of high treaſon, to entertaine a Counſellor, or Advocate to pleade his cauſe. Moreover, in Criminall matters there are ſometimes by vertue of the Kings commiſſion and authoritie juſtices appointed for the deciding of this or that particular cauſe. Alſo the Sherifs in their territoires, and Magiſtrates in ſome Burghs, may ſit in judgment of Man-ſlaughter (in caſe the man-ſlayer be taken in 24 howers after the deed committed, and being found guilty by a jurie put him to death, but if that time be once overpaſt, the cauſe is referred, & put over to the Kings juſtice, or his deputies. The ſame priviledge alſo ſome of the Nobilitie and Gentrie enjoye againſt Theeves, taken within their owne juriſdictions. There be likewiſe thoſe that have ſuch royalties as that in Criminall cauſes, they may exerciſe a juriſdiction, within their owne limits, and liberties from the Kings juſtice, how beit with a caution, & proviſo interpoſed, that they jndge according to the Law.

Moreover, next unto the King, there is an Atturney of the Kingdome, whoſe charge is as a Gouvernour in the Kings abſence, to maintaine the State of the Kingdome, and during the Kings minoritie to governe it well. As for Sea affaires, there is a Lord Admirall, for militarie actions, a Lord Marſhall, and a Lord Coſtanſtable for the Kings Court and traine to puniſh crimes and offences committed in his Majeſties houſe. And thus much in briefe touching the State of Scotland, laudable and much commended for the faire and orderly proceedings of their Generall aſſembly, the venerable Majeſtie of there Lawes, and the ſetled authoritie both of King, Magiſtrate, and all publick Officers. To conclude, the Scots are of a good conſtitution, and able bodies, of a quick apprehenſion, vigilent hot ſpirited, and able to make wiſe and conſiderate men. What a noble Countrie it is, and what learned and acute men, Scotland hath bred, both in ancient times and ſince the reformations, their learned works and hiſtorie can relate, and thus much for Scotland in generall. Now we come to the particular Maps, & deſcriptions thereof.

OF

SCOTLAND is divided into two parts by the Mount Grampe, which croſſeth it in the midſt, the upper or Southerne, & the lower or Northerne is ſeparated from England by the river Twede and the Mount Zeviot, And where it failes by a newe wall then by the rivers Esk & Setway. On this ſide theſe bounds, ſuch is the order of the Countries frō the Scotch ſea unto the Iriſh. The firſt is Merchia, Merch or Mers, ſo called, becauſe it ſerveth for a bounde, and toucheth the left ſide of the river Twede. On the Eaſt it hath the fenns of Froth, on the Southſide ſhuts it in. Berwick which the Engliſh held is in Merch, likewiſe the Caſtel of Hume, the ancient poſſeſſion of the Lords of Hume, who being deſcended from the familie of the Earles of Merch, are growne to a noble, and faire ſpred familie, Neere unto which lyeth Kelſo famous ſometime for the Monaſterie, and the ancient people of the Hepburnes, Earles of Bothwell, who were for a long time hereditary Admiralls of Scotland, honours deſcended to thē by the ſiſter of Earle Ieames, married to Iohn Priour of Coldingham, baſe ſonne to King Ieames the fifth, and at this preſent conferred upon Francis his ſonne now Earle of Bothwell. On the other ſide is to be ſeene Coldinghā, which Bede calleth, the citie Coldana and the citie of Coludum, happily COLANIA, mentioned by Ptolomee. On the Weſt ſide of Merch on both ſides of the Twede is Terſidale that is, the vale by the river Teſie or Teriat. It is (as is ſaid) ſeparated frō England by the Mount Zeviot. The ſmall Countries of Lidale, Eve & Eskdale bearing the names of the three rivers Lidale, Eve & Esk follow. The laſt is Annandale ſo called from the river Annan, which almoſt runneth through the midſt of it, & following Solway, it diſchargeth it ſelfe into thē Iriſh ſea. To returne unto Forth on the Eaſt ſide it is cloſed in with Lothien, when Cockburne wood, and the Lamyrtan Mountaines ſeparateth it from Mereh. Then bowing a litle towards the Weſt approcheth unto Lauden & Twedale, the one called ſo from the citie Lauden, the other from the river Twede, which cutts through the midſt of it. On the South & Weſt ſide lye Liddeſdale, Niddeſdale & Glotta, cōming neere unto the Twede. The river Nid hath given the name unto Nidisdale, through which it runneth into the Iriſh ſea. Lothien, called ſo by Lothus King of the Picts. On the Eaſt ſide it is bounded by the Froth, or Scotiſh ſea, and Weſtward looketh upon the Vale of Gloth. This Countrie ſurpaſſeth farr the other provinces, aſwell for civilitie as cōmendable manners, as alſo for the plentie of all things, neceſſarie for humaine life. Five rivers water it, the Tine, the two Esks, Leth & Almon, which ſpring partly out of the Lamyriā Mounts, & partly out of the Pictlandiks, & run into the Froth. For townes there are Dunbas, Hadingtō, Dalkeith, Edenburgh, Leth & Limnuch. More Weſtward lieth Glottania, which is ſeized on, by both the ſhores of Glotta, & becauſe of the length thereof is divided into two juriſdictions, in the upper part there lies a litle hill, from whence three rivers ſpring, and runne into three ſundrie ſeas: Twede into the Scotiſh ſea, Annan into the Iriſh, and Glotta into the Deucalidon ſea. The moſt famous of theſe Townes are Lanare & Glaſco, which on the Weſt ſide toucheth Coila, on the other ſide of Coila is Galloway, ſeparated from Nidisdale by the river Cluyd, lying almoſt all Southward, and the reſt of the lands lying on Scotland ſide, is covered by the courſe of his waters, much more fruitfull in Cattle, then in wheate. It hath manie rivers to wit, Vr, Dee, Ken, Cre & Lus, It is a Countrie riſing up everie where with hils, that are better for feeding of Cattle, than for bearing of Corne, in the valleys the rivers overflowing, they make a number of litle rivers, & the Loches or Meeres in everie place, ſtanding full of water, at the foote of the hills out of which in September they take in weeles and weere-nets an incredible number, of moſt ſweete and ſavery Eeles, which the Countrie-people putt into wicker-bas kets, ſalt them, and make great benefit of them; yea noe leſſe gaine then others doe by their litle Galloway naggs, which for being well limmed, well truſt, and ſtrongly made for travell, are in much requeſt & brought from thence. There is alſo the Lake Myrton, whereof one part freezes in the winter, the other never for noe extremity of cold. The laſt coaſt is the Cape Novant, under which in the Gulph of the river Luſſe is a bay, which Ptolomee calleth Rerigonius. Oppoſite to which runneth from the poole of the road Glotta, the Lake logh-Rian (called by Ptolomee Vidogara) exceeding full of Herrings & Stonefiſhe. A litle higher there is a Biland, having the ſea inſinuating it ſelfe on both ſides, with two Bayes, that by a narrowe necke is joyned to the firme land: and this is properlie called Cherſoneſus & Promontorium Novantum, & now the Null of Galloway. All this Countrie is called Galloway. On the backſide thereof, under Vidogora Carrict runneth gently downe to the Poole Glotta. Two rivers cutts betweene it, Stinſiar & Grevan, both of them encompaſſed with fine villages. In the places where it riſeth with hills, the overflowing of the rivers fattens the paſtures, and is reaſonable well accōmodated with wheate, rich enough in terreſtriall bleſſings, and maritimate, not onely to feed it ſelfe, but to afford a great quantitie of them to their Neighbours. The river Dun ſeparateth it from Coil, iſſuing from a Lake of the ſame name, which makes an Iland with the litle Caſtle in it. In Carrict there are very large & tall Oxen, whereof the fleſh is tender delicate and good, & the fatt thereof being melted doth not clod againe, but runneth like oyle. Kyle or Coil followeth, it boundeth Southward upon Galloway, Eaſtward upon Glotta. The river Irvin lyeth upon the Weſtſide of it and divideth it from Cuningham, on the Southſide the river Aire ſeparateth it, upon which ſtandeth the market Towne Aire, this Countrie aboundeth more in couragious men, then in fruits or Cattle: and is covered all over with a ſmall ſand. It ſtandeth upon a ſweete Aire which ſharpneth the induſtrie & by their ſobrietie encreaſeth much the ſtrength of their bodies and ſpirits. The circuit of Aire is about ten thouſand paces. There is a rock about 12 foote hegh, and noe broader then 30 cubits, which rightly is called the deafe-rocke, for if yow make never ſo great a noiſe with your voice, with a ſtaff or any other inſtrument, he which ſtādeth but on the other ſide of it cannet heare nothing, unleſſe he goes backward from it, then he may heare better, and he that is furtheſt of from it beſt of all. Cuningham, adjoyning to Kyle or the Eaſtſide and the North, butteth upon the ſame Froth ſo cloſe, that it reſtrayneth the breadth thereof lyeth backward upon Glotta, & ſhutts it up almoſt into the forme of an ordinary river. The name if one interpret it, is as much as the Kings habitation, by which a man maye geſſe how cõmodions, & pleaſant it is. Eaſtward Renforan lyeth next unto it, ſo named from a ſmall towue that is in it: in which the Lords of the Countrie aſſemble, called by the vulgar ſort the Baronie. The rivers that water it is Irum & the two Carths, which have one name. Next lyeth the Ile and Baronie Glotta or Arran, which reacheth to both the one, and the other ſhoare of Glotta, divided alſo for the largneſſe thereof, into manie juriſdictions, out of it ſpringeth manie rivers. On the left ſide lyeth Aven and Glaſſo which run into Glotta. On the right hãd lyeth the other Aven, which ſeparateth Lothien frõ the territorie of Sterting. Theſe two rivers have taken the commen appellation of the whole Countrie in ſtead of a proper name. Aven ſeparateth Lothien Southward from the territoire of Sterting. This river hath noe river of note, but Caron upon the left ſide of Carron. Hard by the Turfe-wall, which ſevered the lands of the Engleſh & the Picts, as the river Carron croſſeth this Shriefdom of Sterting towards the left hand are ſeene two Mounts, caſt up by mans hand, which they call Dunis pacis, that is, Knolls of peace. And almoſt two miles lower, there is an ancient round building foure and twentie cubits high, & thirteene broad open in the top, framed of rough ſtone without lime, having the upper part of everie ſtone, ſo tenanted into the other as that the whole worke riſing ſtill narrow, by a mutuall interlacing and claſping up, holdeth it ſelfe, ſom call this the Temple of God Terminus, others Arthurs Oven, who father every ſtately and ſumptuons thing upon Arthur. Nimus writeth, that it was erected by Carauſius for a Triumphall Arch, built upon the banck of Carron a round houſe of poliſhed ſtone erecting there this a Triumphall Arch, in memoriall of a victorie. In the midſt ſpace betweene Dunipacis, and this bulding on the right banke of Carron, there is yet to be deſcerned a confuſed face of a litle ancient Citie: but the fundation, & ſtreets are ruinated as well by tilling the ground, as by the neigbours in fetching away the quarrie ſtones.

Where Froth full of his windings & crooked Crankes runneth downe with a roling pace & hath a bridg over him ſtandeth Sterling, commonly called Strivelin aud Sterling. Bourrough, where on the verie brow of a ſteepe rock, there is mounted on high a paſſing ſtrong caſtle of the Kings, which King Ieames the ſixth beautified with new buildings, and whereof this long time the Lords of Ereskin, have bin Captaines unto whome the charge, and tuition of the Princes of Scotland, during their minoritie hath beene other whiles cõmitted. A bout two miles hence, the river Banoc-bourn runneth betweene, exceeding high bankes, on both ſides, and with a verie ſwift ſtreame in Winter, towards the Froth a bourne moſt famous for a glorious victorie, as ever the Scots had, what time as Eduard the II. King of England was putt to flight, who was faine to make hard ſhift and in great haſt, and feare to take a boat, & ſave his life, yea, and moſt puiſſant Armie, which Englãd had ſent out before, was diſconfited through the valiant proweſſe of King Robart Brus: in ſo much as for two yeeres after the Engliſh came not into the field againſt the Scots. On the other ſide of the Countrie of Sterling is Levima or Lennox ſeparated frõ the Government of Remifraw by Glotta, divided by the river Kelvin from Glaſco, from the territoire of Sterling by the Mountaines, & frõ Tarchia a territorie by Fortna. In fine it is boundeth by the Mount Grampie, underneath the foote whereof by reaſon of a deepe valley lyeth the lake Lomund, which ſpreadeth it ſelfe heere under the Mountaines 20 miles long & 8 miles broad, embracing 24 ſmall Iles. Paſſing well ſtored with varietie of fiſh, but moſt eſpecially with a pecular fiſh called Pollac, fownd noe where elſe. Three things are remarkeable in this Lake: the fiſh have noe ſmall bones otherwiſe are good to eate. The waters are troubled ſo much ſometimes yea in calme weather, that the ſtouteſt mariners are faine to returne back, and to ſtrike their ſailes. As touching an Iland that floateth & waveth too and fro I luſt not to make queſtion thereof. For what ſhould let, but that a lighter bodie, and ſpungeous withall in manner of a pumiſh ſtone, may ſwime above the water. Alſo in the Palatinate in Germanie betweene Vilſeca & Velda there are Iles with trees growing upon them, which in boiſtrous & ſtormie weather, floate up and downe. Wee will now returne againe to the Lake. Round about the edg of this lake there be fiſher Cottages but nothing elſe memorable unleſſe it be Kilmoronoc, a proper fine houſe of the Earles of Caſſiles on the Eaſt ſide of it, which hath a moſt pleaſant proſpect into the ſaid lake, but at the confluence, where Levin emptieth it ſelfe out of the Lake into Cluyd ſtandeth the old Citie called Alcluyd. The ſucceeding poſteritie called this place Dunbritton that is, the Britans towne, becauſe the Britans held it longeſt againſt the Scots, Picts & Saxons. For it is the ſtrongeſt of all the Caſtles in Scotland by naturale ſituation, towring up on a rough craggie, and two headed rock at the verie meeting of the rivers in a greene plaine. The laſt hills of the Mount Grampie are cutt betweene by a ſmall arme of the ſea called Gerloch for the ſmallneſſe which raiſeth the furder part of Levinia, on the other ſide there is a large arme called Long, which falls into it. Beyoud the Lake Lomund, and the Weſt part of Lennex there ſpreadeth it ſelf neere unto Dunbriton forth the large Countrie called Argathelia. This Countrie runneth out in length and breadth all mãgled with fiſhfull pooles in ſome places, with riſing Mountaines very commodious for feeding of cattle, in which alſo there range up and downe, wild kine and red deere, but along the ſhoare it is more unpleaſant in ſight, what with rocks, and what with blackiſh Mountaines. Among the Lakes there is one Fin, ſo called frõ the river Fin that runs into it, it reacheth 60 thouſand paces in length. Likewiſe, the Lake Avus is in Argile, upon which ſtandeth a fort well provided. Out of this Lake the river Avus floweth which onely through theſe parts looſeth it ſelf in the Deucalidon ſea. On the other ſide of Knapdale Weſtward lyeth Cantire, which ſevereth Argile from a Promontoire that for 30 miles together, growing ſtill towards a ſharpe point, thruſteth it ſelfe forth with ſo great a deſire towards Ireland (be twxit which and it, there is a Narrow ſea ſcarce 13 miles over) as if it would conjoyne it ſelfe. there is a Lake called Logh Fin, which at a certaine ſeaſon are takẽ in it a wonderfull ſort of herrings. The neerer it cometh to Knapdale the Narrower it is ſcarcely a 1000 paces from it. And all this ſpace is fine ſand, lying low & tender, that the Mariners to ſhorten their voyage, run their barks upon this gravelly ſands. Lorn lyeth cloſe upon Argile, & extending it ſelfe unto Aber & joyneth there with a plaine Countrie not very barren. Where the Mount Grampie ſtoopeth downward, it is better ſituated, this part is called Braid Albin, that is the higheſt part of Scotland, and that part where it mounteth up higheſt Drum Albin, that is the ridge of Scotland, and not without reaſon, for out of this ridge ſpring rivers which runne into one and the other ſea, ſome into the North ſea and ſome into the South ſea. For from the Lake Ern runneth the river Ern, which looſeth it ſelfe in the Iriſh ſea, and falls in at Tau 3000 paces under Perth. This Countrie is called in the ancient britan tongue Straet Ern, which ſignifyeth the vale, along Erne, from whence it taketh the name. For the call Straith, the ſhoars of a running river. Betweene the Mountaines of their Countrie, and Froth lyeth the territoire Taichia, which borroweth its name from the river Taichie, which runneth through the midſt of it.

SCOTLAND.

THE territorie of Taichie is bounded by the Ocell Mounts, which for the moſt part, and with all the quarter, that lyeth at the foote of them, are put under the Goverment of Ern. But the reſt of this Countrie as farre as Froth was through ambition divided into divers Shreifdomes to wit, the Clackmans, the Coultreße and Kinroße. Theſe and the Ocell Mounts all what Froth and Tau, two Armes of the ſea encloſeth Eaſtward, growing narrow in the forme of an angle to the ſea, is called by a cõmon name Fife. This land yeeldeth plentie of Corne, and forrage, yea, and of pit-coles: the ſea beſides other fiſh affordeth Oiſters & Shelfiſh in great abundance. On that ſide, where the Lake Levin cutts through it, It is very large, but after is narrower on both ſides, and taketh an angular forme, even to the citie of Carlile, and is onely watered with the river Levin. The Coaſts are well beſpred with prettie Townelets, repleniſhed with ſtout & luſtie Mariners. From Wimmis Caſtle, the ſhore draweth back with a crocked and winding tract unto Fif-neſſe, that is, the Promontoire, or noſe of Fife, above which Saint Andrewes an Archiepiſcopall Citie, & a ſeate for learning, and good litrature is renowned and hath a faire proſpect into the open maine ſea. The more ancient name of the place, as old memorialls witneſſe was Regelmund, that is Saint Regulus mount. The ancient Scots called it the Church of the petty King. Further, almoſt in the midſt of this quarter lyeth Cupre a notable Bourough, where the Sheriffe ſitteth to miniſter juſtice. Where it toucheth Ern is ſeene Aberneth, the anciẽt ſeat of the Kings of the Picts. There Ern runneth into Tau, & makes it more ſpacious, which iſſuing frõ the Lake Tau in the Countrie Braid-Albin, extendeth it ſelfe above 24 miles, and is the greateſt river of all Scotland, crooking and winding againſt Mount Grampie, runneth into the firtill Countrie of Athol, ſituated among the woods of this Mountaine. Athol, on the right ſhore of Tau, lyeth the Citie of Caledon, that retaineth ſtill the ancient name, which the common people call Dunkelden favored by King David with an Epiſcopall ſea. Some writers interpret it The mount or Hill of Hazels, in regard of the number of Hazeltrees, that grow in the Caledonian Foreſt. For the Caledons or Caledonian people among the moſt renowned ſt Britans, made the other part of the Kingdome of the Picts. The derivation of their name, as the beſt writers approve off comes frõ Kaled a Britiſh word, which ſignifieth Hard, and in the plurall number maketh Kaledion, that is to ſay, hard rough uncivill, and a Wilder kind of people then others ſuch as the Northerne nations, are for the moſt part, who by reaſon of the rigorous cold of the aire, are more rough and fierce, & for their abundance of bloud more bold and adventurous under Caledonia about 12 thouſand paces upon the right ſhore of Tau ſtandeth Perth, and on the left under Athel, towards the Eaſt lyeth Gowry rich for the abundance of wheate. And under that Anguſia ſpreadeth it ſelfe betweene Tay and the Eske. Anguis was called by the ancient Scots Æneia, full of goodly Fields, bearing wheate and Corne, with large hills, alſo pooles, forreſts, paſtures and meddowes, and alſo garniſhed with manie forts and Caſtles. Here ſtandeth Glamis Cupre and Dundee, which Hector Boetius by way of alluſion calleth donum Dei, that is Gods gift.

Townes.

But I beleeve that the ancient name was Toadun, ſo called from a Downe or a hill that is ſituated by Tay, at the foote whereof it was ſeated. Over the river Tau about 14 miles on the right ſide lyeth Abernethy. The Red Cape which is ſeene very farre into the ſea. The river Eske, ſurnamed the Southerne, runneth through the midſt of it. The Northerne Eske from Mernis is a rich ſoill, & it hath for the moſt part plaines and Campanians, untill that Grampie meetes with it beyond Fordon and Dunnotyr a high Caſtle, belonging to the Earle Marſhalls of Scotland, ſloping litle by litle looſeth it ſelfe in the ſea. On the other ſide northward lyes the mouth of the river Deva commonly called the Dee, and about a 1000 paces beyond that the river Done. Upon which Old Aberdon, lyeth famous for the takeing of Salmons, and the other New Aberdon which ſtãdeth neere to Dee mouth, much ennobled by an Epiſcopall dignitie, and a floriſhing Univerſitie for learning and good litrature. I finde in the ancient records, that it was named Aberdea, but at this day both of them are called Aberdon, diſtinguiſhed by the name of Old and New. From this front ſhutt in betweene theſe two rivers, beginneth Marna or Mar, frõ whence enlarging it ſelfe litle by litle, goes on 60 miles in breadth unto Badenach. This Countrie is borne up with a continued ridge of mountaines, out of which there ſprings divers great rivers, that run into both the ſeas. Aber cõfined by Badenach, runneth downe to the Deucalidon ſea, is a very plentifull Countrie for all cõmodities both by land and ſea, and principally happie in Wheate and paſtures, and beſides that very pleaſant becauſe of the ſhadie woods, adorned alſo with dilightfull ſprings and ſweet running rivers, & ſo rich in fiſh, that it may be compared to any place in the Kingdome. For beſides the abundance of river fiſh, which are taken in ſo many riverets, the ſea runs into it with a long Channell, betweene the plaine lands, and cloſeth it in with the edge of the land a litle higher ſpreadeth more largely, and leaves there a marſh, or rather a poole from whence it is called Abria, which the natives call the harbour or Roade, that giveth name alſo to the Countrie, which lyeth round about it. Next unto Mar Northward lyeth Buchania or Buquhan ſeparated from it by the river Done, and beareth forth toward the German ſea. Some derive this later name a Bobus, that is from Oxen and Kine, whereas notwithſtanding the ground ſerveth better to feed Sheepe, whoſe woole is highly commended. Albeit the rivers in this Coaſt every where breed great ſtore of Salmons, yet doe they never enter into the river Ratra as Buchana hath recorded. Upon the banke of Ratra there is a Cave neere unto Stangs Caſtle, the water diſtilling by drops out of a naturall vault, preſently turneth into Pyramidall ſtones, & were not the ſaid Cave, or hole otherwhiles rid, and clenſed by mans labours, in ſhort time it would be filled up therewith. Now the ſtone thus engendred is of a middle nature, betweene yce and hard ſtone, for it is britle, and eaſie to crumble, neither groweth, it ever to the ſoliditie, and hardneſſe of Marble. It is reported there is an other Cave very like to the Pyrenean. From Buquhan Northward lyeth Boena and Bamff a ſmall Sherifdome, which runs up to the river Spey, which ſeperateth them from Murray. Spey iſſueth out of the ridge of Badelnach, whereof I have ſpoken. Not farre from the ſpring-head, there is a Lake, whence Logh-Lutea or Louthea cometh, which by Aber letteth it ſelfe forth into the Weſterne ſea. Neere unto theſe Loghs or Lakes, there ſtood in old time two notable fortifications, the one named Innerves the other Inner-Louthea. Surely, if ye conſider well the nature of the Countrie, & the great commodities of trading, which may be brought thether, and tranſported from thence, this place is very convenient to drive good trading in it: yea the ancient Kings moved with the conſiderations aboveſaid, ſojourned ſometimes in the Caſtle of Evon, which manie ſuppoſed (though falſly) to be Stephonadum: for the ruines of that Caſtle, and ſome traces thereof is yet to be ſeene in Lorn. On the other ſide of Spey unto Neſſe, lyeth Moravia or Murray, which they ſaye was called Varor. Murray. The German ſea, as if it would turne behinde it to the Weſt, ſhutteth in by a great arme the extenſiō thereof. This whole Countrie is fruitfull, as well in fruits as paſtures. But chiefly the heither part, becauſe of the faire neſſe, and the incomes of fruit trees. It have in it two faire townes, Elgina upon the river Loxa or Leſſe, which retayneth ſtill the ancient name, and alſo Neſſe which ſtands upon the river ſo named Neſſe, iſſueth out of the Lake Neſſe 24 thouſand paces long, whoſe waters are almoſt lukewarm, and freezes not be it never ſo cold: yea peeces of Ice being throwne into it in the hardeſt froſt, that is preſently melts by the warmth of the water. Eight miles from the continent of the land Neſſe on the other ſide, putteth it ſelf ſo farre towards the Weſt, that there wāts but a litle ſpace that hinders the ſeas from meeting, to make the reſt of Scotlād a right Iland, for the diſtance betweene thoſe ſtreights and the Scotch ſea, is almoſt in ter chopt by the armes of the ſea, entring into theſe Countries. That part which lyeth betweene the Neſſe on the other ſide, and theſe Streights is ordinarily divided into foure Provinces: Navern, or as the common people call it Strath navern, ſo called from the river Naverne. On the other ſide of the Entrance of the Neſſe into the Germane ſea lyeth Roſſia. Roſſia or Roſſe, ſhooting out high Capes & loftie Promontories even into the ſea. Which the very name witneſſeth for the word Ros ſignifieth in the Scotch tongue a Cape. It is more long than large. For where it reacheth to the German ſea and to the Scotiſh, it riſeth with very high mountaines, which are barren and craggie, but where the ground is plaine, and becommeth feilds, it is as fruitfull as any place in Scotland. The valleys are pleaſant, and watered with many freſh running rivers, full of fiſhe, & beſids hath divers Lakes abounding with fiſh, the greateſt whereof is called Lubre. From the Scotch ſea the Coaſt ſhoves in, and turneth Eaſtward. On the other ſide of the German ſea, opening a waye betweene the downefalls, and cliffts of the high rocks, enlargeth this arme inwardly which makes a ſafe haven for ſea men: for it hath an eaſie entrance into it, and with in a moſt ſafe Shelter againſt ſtormes, and the violence of the ſea, though Navern. the waves riſe never ſo high. Northward, Naverne ſhutteth in the confines of the further Roſſia, ſo named from the river Navern, which as is ſaid the common ſort call Strath navern. Roſſe cloſeth it Southward, & the weſterne part thereof is watered by the Scoth ſea, and part by the Northerne. Then Catneſſe joyneth to Suther- it on the Eaſtſide. Sutherland in ſome manner mixeth land. it ſelfe with it, which borders and bounds upon them, joyning them together by ſome region or aſpect of heaven. For it hath Weſtward oppoſite to it Strathnavern, on the Eaſt and South ſides Roſſia, and on the Northſide Cathenteſſe. The Inhabitants according to the nature of the Countrie, are giv̄e more to the breeding of Cattaile, then to the manuring of lands, and hath nothing in it of note, but hills of white Marble (a wonderfull thing in ſo cold a Climate) but of noe uſe almoſt, conſidering exceſſe in bulding, and that vaine Oſtentation of riches, is not yet reached to theſe remote regions. Cathneſſe is the furtheſt Countrie of Scotland Northward where Navern, meeteth it & are two Countries, which encloſe much the large frount of Scotland in theſe parts. There mounts up three Capes, the higheſt is in Naverne, which Ptolomee calleth Orcas or Tarvedre and Tarviſium. The others in Cathneſſe and Vervedre are nothing ſo high, now called Hoia and Betulium, called not rightly by Hector Boëtius Dume, which at this day is termed by the vulgar people Dunis-bay, others call it Duncans-bay. It ſeemes that ſome letters have beene taken from this word, & made it Dunis-bay. At the foote of a hill, there is a very litle boſome, which the ſhips that comes out of the Orcades makes uſe of for a haven, now the boſom of the ſea is commonly called a Bay. This boſom is called by the common people Duncan or Donacks boſome, frō theſe words, joyned together the people calleth it Dunis-bay. Ptolomee maketh the Cornaby to dwell here, among whom he placeth the river Nabe, which names are of ſo neere affinitie, that the nation may ſeeme to have drawne their denomination from the river that they dwelt by. Neither doth the moderne name of Strath Navern, which ſignifieth the valley by Navern iarre al to gether in ſound frō them. For they commonly call Gernico the Fortreſſe of the Earles of Cathneſſe, for theſe which Ptolomee, and other ſtrangers called Cornaby, the Engliſh call Kernici, and theſe that ſpeake the Britiſh tongue call them to this day Kernicks. And it will not ſeeme abſurd, if ſome think they are called Cornovalles for Kernicovalles, that is to ſay Kernick Galles. Some traces of this name ſeemeth though obſcurely, to be remayning in the midſt of this Iſle. Not farre from thence, lyeth the Caſtle of the Duglaſſes called Abercorne. If both theſe words, or one of them be corrupted with Kernico, I leave that to the judgment of the Reader. Nowe it remaineth that wee ſpeake ſome what of the Scotiſh Iles. This Counſcotch trie of all Britanie hath the longeſt day & the ſhorteſt Iles. night. The Moderne writers have made three orders, of all theſe which lye about Scotland, as if they would crowne them. The Weſterne, the Orcades & Shetlandish Iles. The Weſterne are theſe which reach from Ireland, almoſt to the Orcades in the Schotiſh ſea, which beats upon the Weſterne part. Some call them the Hebrides or Hebudes, others Manavies, others the Beteoricks. The Inhabitants thereof are ſparing, and obſerve the ancient manner of dyet and clothing, through all their famillies. They get their livings by hunting & fiſhing. They boile their meate after they have putt it into a fatt-gutt or the skinne of a beaſt in water. In hunting they eate raw fleſhe, after they have ſquized out the bloud. They drinke whay at their feaſts, which they call Blandium, but the moſt part quench their thirſt with water. They have a manner of making of Oaten cakes and Bache bread which skill, uſe, & the proceſſe of time have taught them. They eate a peece in the morning, and contenting themſelves therewith goe a hunting, & if they betake themſelves to any other labour, they faſt till night. They willingly weare cloathes of divers coulours, and chiefly with fringes. They love coullours a life a bove all purple, & azured blew. They reape but few fruits, ſaving Oates and Barly: of which they make both bread and drinke. For herds & flocks of Cattaile, they have there a great number of them, which maketh them to feede upon Milke, Butter and Cheeſe. There are ſea foule innumerable, and fiſh in abundance, which is the greateſt part of their ſuſtenance. There is found noe venomous or ugly creature in it. The manner of the living of the Shetlanders, is the ſame like the Orcadians, unleſſe in reſpect of houſhold proviſions they are ſome thing leſſe auſtere, but having ſpoken hereof in the generall deſcription, this ſhall ſuffice to conclude Scotland.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ISLES OF ORCADES and HETLAND.

Name.

THE Orcades, otherwiſe called the Orkney Iles, lye diſperced here & there in the Deucalidon, or Germaine Sea, betweene the moſt Northerne Cape of Schotland, called Cathnes and Schethland, tempeſtuous and dangerous; by reaſon of their contrarie tyds meeting, and running headlong together with a great violence from the Weſt Ocean: in ſo much that noe boate with oares, or ſhip with ſaile, is able to ſtemme the tyde, but onely at two ſeaſons. Theſe Straits are paſſable, either when the Sea is calme at a lowe water, or being ſo at a high water. Theſe Channells are called the Picts Straits, or the Pithland Fyrth.

Site.

The ancient Inhabitants & from whome they are deſcended.

The ancient Incola were heretofore the Picts, who in all probability were deſcended from the Saxons driven thither by the Conquering Scots, grounding their reaſon for it from this Verſe out of the ſeventh Panegirica of Claudianus:

——Maduerunt Saxone fuſo
Orcades, incaluit Pictorum Sanguine Thule:
Scotorum tumulos flevit glacialis Ierne.

Theſe Iles are counted two and thirtie in number, whereof 13. are onely inhabited, the reſt for the moſt part are either barren, and ſerue for noe other uſe, but the feeding of Cattle, or are bare rocks and craggie clifts, covered with a kind of rotten Moſſe. Yet part of them are not ſo infertile, but that they beare ſome Barly & Oates; whereof the Natiues make their bread, oaten caks, and brue their beare, having alſo good ſtore of Cattle in them, as Oxen, Sheepe, Kine and Goates, whereof they make plenty of Whit-meats, as Butter and Cheeſe: having beſides great ſtore of litle Naggs, which though they be rough, and ill ſhapen: yet are they of good uſe both for the plough and travelling, being well metled, and very ſwift pacers. But for fiſh and fowle (whereof the moſt part of the Inhabitants liue) theſe Iland abound having this gift of nature, that noe venomous vermine bred or brought thither will liue in them. Wee will begin to deſcribe them by name, and take them as they lye ſcattered from Cathnes, and ſo forward to the furtheſt of them which lieth Nortward towards Schetland. The firſt then which repreſents it ſelf to our view in the Pithland Straits are two Craggs or Rocks, which lye not farre from Dunsby-head, called the Boyer. By Stroma lye three other called the Svvell, and to the Northeaſt of theſe three more called the Hoppers, all which are narrow, but of a good length ſhooting Eaſt and Weſt. Next followes Hoy, wherein there are foure townes, two lying upon the Northſide upon Saint Margrets Roade, namely: Hoy it ſelf and Saint Peters, the other two on the South ſide, as Orlady & Heaſe: to the Eaſtward of this Iland lies Grimſe, Calfa and Flata not inhabited.

On the North ſide of Hoy, lieth the chiefeſt Iland of all Pomonia or Maineland, having in that and Haſpanſa 10. townes. Whereof the prime towne is Haſpanſa or Kirkvvall honoured with a Biſhops Seate, & ſtrengthned with two Caſtles. On the North ſide of it lies 2. S. Magionis, 3. Maineland it ſelfe. 4. *S. The nature and manners of theſe Islanders.

Theſe Iles in Solinus time were not inhabited, being overgrowne with ruſhes, but now they are in a meaſure populous and fertile: and were firſt diſcovered by Iulius Agricola the firſt that euer ſayled about Brittaine. In later times they were poſſeſſed by the Normans or Norvvegians, who held them to the yeare 1266. when Magnus King of Norvvay ſurrendred them up to Alexander King of Scotland, which ſurrendrie ſome of the ſucceeding Kings did afterwards ratifie.

The Orcadeans or people of theſe Iles, according to Maginus are great Drinkers; but noe Drunkards, Bibaciſſimi ſunt Incolæ, nunquam tamen inebriantur: for whenſoeuer any outlandiſh wines are brought unto them, they will drinke their fils. They retaine alſo ſome ſmack of their ancient manners & qualities to this day; being for the moſt part of them very ſparing and moderate in their dyet, contented with homely fare, and ſhort commons, which preſerues them in healt of body and minde: ſo that few of them dies of ſickneſſe, till very age call them away: for (their bodies being of ſo good a temper) they knowe not the uſe of Phyſick, but are able, luſtie, tall and ſtronge men, making hardie and good Souldiers.

THE ISLES OF HETLAND.

THE Isles of Hetland are many in number: the greateſt whereof is by the Inhabitants called the Continent, by reaſon of her extenſion which is ſixtie thouſand paces in length, and in ſome places ſexteene in breadth: there are in it manie ſmall Promontories, I will here onely remember two of them: the one is ſomewhat long, but narrow, ſtretching towards the North; the other is broader, reaching Eaſtward. The Sea-ſides are moſt inhabited; but the inmoſt parts none but birds frequent. The Inhabitants of late yeares haue ſought to mannure it forther then their Forefathers had wont to doe, but to noe effect. They haue their welfare from the Sea, which of all ſides yeeldes them great commodity of fiſhing. Some ten miles from hence towards the North lyes the Iſland Zeal, being about XX. miles in length and VIII. in breadth; ſo wilde and rough that it can beare noe animal, but what is even borne in it. They ſay that in this Iſland there dwels a Marchant of Bremen, which furniſheth them abundantly with all outlandiſh wares, whereof they haue neede, and brings them thither. Betweene this Iſland and the Continent there lyes ſome leſſer Iſlands, as Longa, Orna, Bigga, Sanctiferri. Some IX. miles higher towards the North lyes Vuſta, more then XX. miles in length and VI. miles broad: of a plaine ſoile and not vnpleaſant in proſpect, but onely that it is round-about encompaſſeth with a moſt rough and raging Sea. Betweene this and Zeal are ſited the Iſles of Via, Vra and Linga. Beyond it towards the Weſt are the two Skenies and Burra; towards the Eaſt Balta, Honnera and Fetlara, VII. miles in length, and VII. miles alſo diſtant from Vuſta and VIII. from Zeal, lying right over the Straite that devideth Vuſta from Zeal. There are beſides manie leſſer Iſlands againſt the Eaſt-ſide of the Continent, Mela, the three Oriental Skenies, Chualſa, Neſtunda, Braſa, and Moſa: the Weſt-ſide is environned with the Occidental Skenies, Rottia, Papa the Leſſer, Vonneda, Papia the Greateſt, Valla, Trondra, Burra, Haura the Greateſt, Haura the Leſſer: and as manie Holmes enterlaced betweene them.

The manner of living is the ſame by the Hethlanders, as by the Orcadians, onely that in reſpect of their domeſtical plentie, they are ſomewhat groſſer. Their habit is after the German faſhion, not inconvenient to their meanes and eſtate. Their traffique conſiſte in a kinde of courſe claoth which they ſell to thoſe of Norway, as alſo in a kinde of oile which they draw out of the bowels of certaine fiſhes, likewiſe in botter & in fiſhing. The boates which they fiſh withall, are but ſmall veſſels which they get ready made frō Norway. The fiſh which they take, they partly ſalt & partly drie them: from the ſale thereof, they get mony, to pay their tributes withall, & to fourniſh them their dwelling, houſhold ſtoffe & a great part of their living. Thoſe which are ſomewhat curieux in their houſholding, uſe ſome ſilver among others veſſels. In their Meſure, Number and Weight they follow the practice of the Germans. Their language alſo draweth neere to that of the Germans or the Gothes. They are not given to drunckeneſſe; onely that once a month they haue their meetings and banquetings one with an other, wherein they are merry together and cheer themſelues in ſuch ſimplicitie, that noe quarrel or the like vice, that uſe to follow drunkeneſſe, is found amongſt them: and keepe onely this cuſtome, as they perſuade themſelues, for the entertainement of mutuel loue and fellowſchip. How holeſome the aire and complexion of this countrie be, may appeare by one Laurentius who lived yet in our dayes. This man being aboue hondert yeares of age, was yet ſo vigourous that he married a wife: and being hondert and forthie yeares old, went yet with his boat a fiſhing in a moſt rude and tempeſtuous Sea; and is but lately diſceaſed, not ſo much by the violence of any ſikeneſſe, as by the ripeneſſe of his age.

LAUDEN, OR LOTHIEN.

LOTIEN, which is alſo called Lauden, named in times paſt of the Picts, Pictland ſhooteth out a long from Merch unto the Scottiſh Sea, or the Froth, having manie hills in it, and little wood, but for fruitfull Cornefields, for courteſie alſo, and civilitie of manners, commended above all other Countries of Scotland. About the yeere of our ſalvation 873. Eadgar King of England) betweene whome and Keneth the third King of Scots, there was a great knot of alliance againſt the Danes common Ennemies to them both) reſigned up his right to him in Lothien, as Mathew the Flourgatherer witneſſeth, & to winne his heart the more unto him: He gave unto him manie manſions in the way, wherein both hee, and his Succeſſours in their comming unto the Kings of England, and in returne homeward might be lodged: which unto the time of King Henry the ſecond, continued in the hands of the King of Scetland. In this Lothien, the firſt place that offereth it ſelfe unto our ſight upon the Sea-ſide is Donbar, a paſſing ſtrong Caſtle in old time, and the ſeat of the Earles of Merch, who there upon, were called Earles of Dunbar: a peece manie times wonne by the Engliſh, & as often recovered by the Scottiſh. But in the yeere 1576 by authoritie of the States in Parliament, it was demoliſhed, becauſe it ſhould not be a place, and refuge for Rebels. But Jeames King of Great Britanie (of bleſſed memorie) conferred the title, and honour of Earle of Dunbar, upon Sir George Hume for his approved fidelitie, whome he had before created Baron Hume of Barwick, to him his heires and aſſignes. Hard by Tin, a little River, after it hath runne a ſhort race, falleth into the Sea, neere unto the ſpring-head whereof, ſtandeth Zeiſter, which hath his Baron out of the famillie of the Haies, Earles of Aroll, who alſo is by inheritance ſherife of the little territoire of Twedall, or Peblis, by the ſame river ſome few miles higher, is ſeated Hadington or Hadina in a wide and broad plaine: which Towne the Engliſh fortified with a deepe and large ditch, with a wall or rampier, alſo without foureſquare, & with foure Bulwarkes at the Corners, and with as many other at the inner wall: & Sr. James Wilford an Engliſhman valiantly defended it againſt Deſſie the Frenchman, who with ten thouſand French and Dutch together fiercly aſſaulted it, untill that by reaſon of the plague, which grew hot among the garniſon Souldiers Henry Earle of Rutland, comming with a royall Armie, raiſed the Seige, remooved the French, and having layd the fortifications Levell, conducted the Engliſh home. And now of late King Jeames the ſixth, hath ranged Sr. John Ramſey, among the nobles of Scotland with title and honour of Vicount Hadington for his faithfull valour; as whoſe right hand was the defendour of PRINCE & COVNTTRIE in that moſt wicked conſpiracie of the Gourees againſt the Kings perſon.

Above the mouth of this Tine in the very bending of the ſhoare ſtandeth Tantallon Caſtle; from whence Arch-bald Douglaſſe Earle of Angus wrought King Jeames the fifth, King of Scotland much trouble. Heereby retyring back of the ſhoares on both ſides, is roome made for a moſt noble arme of the Sea, and the ſaine well furniſhed with Ilands, which by reaſon of manie rivers encountring it by the waye, and the tides of the ſurging Sea together, ſpreadeth exceeding broad. Ptolomee calleth it Boderia, Tacitus Bodotria from the depth. The Scots the Froth & Frith, the Engliſh Edenburgh-frith, others, the Freſian Sea, and the Scottiſh Sea, and the Eulogium, Morwiridh. Upon this after yee be paſt Tautallon, are ſeated firſt North-Berwick, a famous place ſometime for a houſe there of religious Virgins, and then Dyilton, which belonged in times paſt to the notable famillie of the Haliburtons, & now to Sr. Thomas Ereskin, Captaine of the guard, whome Jeames King of great Britaine, for his happie valour in preſerving him againſt the traiterous attempts of Gowrie, firſt created Baron of Dirlton, and afterward advanced him to the honourable title of Vicount Felton, making him the firſt Vicount that ever was in Scotland. Againſt theſe places there lyeth in the Sea not farre from the Shoare, the Iland Bas, which riſeth up as it were all on a craggy rooke, and the ſame upright, and ſteepe on every ſide: yet hath it a block-houſe belonging to it, a Fountaine alſo and Paſtures: but it is ſo hollowed with the waves ſo working upon it, that it is almoſt perced through. What a multitude of Sea-foules, and eſpecially of thoſe Geeſe they call Scouts, and Soland geeſe flock heither at their times (for by report, their number is ſuch, that in a cleere day they take away the Sunnes light) what a ſort of fiſhes they bring (for as the ſpeech goeth a hundred garniſon Souldiers, that lay here for the defenſe of the place fed upon no other meate, but the freſh fiſh that they brought in) what a quantitie of ſticks, and little twigge, they get together for the building of their neſts, ſo that by their meanes the inhabitants are abundantly provided of fewell for their fire, what a mighty gaine groweth by their feathers, & oyle: the report thereof is ſo incredible, that no man ſcarcely would beleeve it, but he that had ſeene it. Moreover, theſe Soland-Geeſe lay but one egg, and lay it in ſuch a place on the ſide of this rock, that if a man take it up, he can hardly make it lye in the ſame place againe, & it is the nature of this Gooſe, to hatch this egg, ſtanding upon it with one of her feete.

Then as the ſhoare draweth back, Seton ſheweth it ſelfe, which ſeemeth to have taken the name from the ſituation by the Sea-ſide, and to have imparted the ſame unto a right noble houſe of the Setons, braunched out of an Engliſh famillie, and from the daughter of King Robert Brus: out of which the Marqueſſe Huntly, Robert Earle of Wentoun, Alexander Earle of Dunfirmling, advanced to honours by King Ieames the ſixth are propagated.

After this, the River Eske diſchargeth it ſelfe into this Frith, when it hath run by Borthwic (which hath Barons ſurnamed according to that name, and thoſe deriving their Pedegree out of Hungarie) by Newbottle, that is, the New-building ſometimes a faire Monaſterie, now the Baronie of Sr. Marke Ker by Dalkerth, a very pleaſant habitation of the late Earles Morton, and Muſſelborow, hard under which in the yeere of our Lord 1547, when Sr. Edward Seimor Duke of Somerſet, with an Armie royall had entred

Scotland, to claime and challeng the keeping of a covenant, made concerning a marriage betweene Marie Queene of Scotland, and Edward the ſixth, King of England, there hapned the heavieſt day, that ever fell to the adventurous youth of the moſt noble families in Scotland, who there loſt their lives.

Lower yet and neere unto the Scotiſh Froth is ſeated Edenburg, which the Iriſh Scots call Dun Eaden, that is, the towne Eaden, or Eden-hill, and which no doubt is the very ſame, that Ptolomee named the Winged Caſtle, for Adain in the Britiſh tongue ſignifyeth a Wing, and Edenborow (a word compounded out of the Britiſh, and Saxon language) is nothing elſe, but the Burgh with wings. A mile from thence lyeth Leth, a moſt commodious and a ſafe haven, whereof having ſpoken both of it, and Edenburgh in the generall diſcription, I will paſſe over.

Where this Froth groweth more and more narrow, it had in the midſt of it the Citie Caer-Gvidi as Beda noteth, which now may ſeeme to be the Iland named Jnch-keith: whether this was that Victoria, w^ch^ Ptolomee mentioneth, it is needleſſe to proove: although a man may beleeve that the Romans turned this Guidh into Victoria, as well as the Ile Guith, or Wight into Vectefis or Vecta: certes, ſeing both theſe Ilands bee diſſevered from the ſhoare the ſame reaſon of the name will hold well in both languages: for Ninius hath taught us, that Guith in the Britiſh tongue betokeneth a ſeparation. More within upon the ſame Froth is ſituate Abercorn, in Bedes times a famous Monaſterie, which by the gracious favour of King Jeames the ſixth, was given unto Jeames Hamelton the tittle of the Earle of Abercorn. And faſt beſide it, ſtandeth Blackneſſe Caſtle, and beneath it Southward the ancient Citie Lindun, whereof Ptolomee maketh mention: which the better learned, as yet call Linlithquo, commonly Lithquo, beautified and ſet out with a very faire houſe of the Kings, a goodly Church, and a fiſhfull Lake; of which Lake it may ſeeme to have aſſumed that name: for Lin as is alreadie ſhowne in the Britiſh tongue, ſoundeth as much as a Lake. A ſheriffe it had in times paſt by inheritance out of the familie of the Hamiltons of Peyle: and now in our dayes, it hath forthe firſt Earle S^r^. Alexander Levingſton, whome King Jeames the ſixth raiſed from the dignitie of a Baron, wherein his Anceſtours had flouriſhed a long time, to the honour of an Earle, like as within a while after, he advanced Mark Ker, Baron of Newbottle aforeſaid to the title of Earle of Lothien. And ſo much for Lothien or Lauden.

The Countrie. The ancient and moderne names.

IRELAND followeth, which the Ancients called Hibernia. This Ile by Orphæus, Ariſtotle, and Claudian is named Ierna, by Iuvenall and Mela Iuverna, by Diodorus Iris, by Martian of Heraclea Ioyepina, by Euſtatius Oyernia and Bernia, by the Native inhabitants Erin, by the Britans Yverdon, and of Enliſhmen Ireland. Whence theſe names have had their originall ſundrie, & diverſe opinions have beene conceived from time to time, as in a doubtfull matter. Some derive Hibernia from Hiberno tempore, that is; from the winter ſeaſon, others from Hiberus a Spanjard, and ſome againe from the river Iberus: the Authour of the booke entituded Eulogium from Duke Irnalph, a generall in warre. Poſtellus reading Pomponius Mela in Paris, fetcheth the originall thereof from the Hebrewes: ſo that Irin ſhould be as much as Iurin (in this fancifull mans opinion) that is the Iewes land: The Jewes (forſooth ſaith he) being moſt wiſe Sages, and learned Phyloſophers, knowing by their learning, that the Empire of the world, ſhould be ſetled in the ſtrongeſt Angle, which lieth Weſt, ſeaſed upon thoſe parts and Ireland with the reſt: the Syrians and Tyrians, to lay the foundation of their future Empire, endevored all they could to inhabite thoſe Regions. Although wee read, that in this Iland the aire upon every winde is colde, and winter like. This Iland is ſtretched out from North to South, not broader then it is long, as Strabo hath recorded, but ſhaped in forme of a Lentile or an Egge, nor of twentie dayes ſailing, as Philemon in Ptolomy hath ſet it downe, but according to the later writers, it taketh up 300 miles and no more in length, and hath ſcarcely one hundred & twentie miles broad. It lyes betweene the Circle Artique, and the Tropicke of the Crabfiſh, betweene Great-Britanie and Spaine; and hath Eaſtward England ſeparated from it by the Iriſh Sea, but a dayes ſailing from it, on the Weſt the Huge maine Weſterne Ocean, on the North the Deucalidonian ſea, & on the South the Vergivian Sea worketh upon it. The aire is wholſome milde and temperate. Of Bees there are ſuch numbers, that they be found not onely in hives, but alſo within the bodies of trees and holes of the Earth. Likewiſe it hath Vines, but more for ſhade, than for any fruit they yeeld. For no ſooner is the Sunne paſſed out of Leo, but cold blaſts herein this our Clymate are wont preſently to follow, and in Autumne the afternoone heats are leſſe effectuall and ſhorter both heere, and in Britaine, than to give the full and kind ripening unto Grapes. Beſides this, there is no ſnake in this Country, nor any venemous thing whatſoever. How beit much noyſance they have every where by Wolves, and that I may ſpeake all in a word, whether a man reſpect the fertilitie of the ſoile, or the commodiouſneſſe of the Sea and havens, or the inhabitants themſelves, who are ſtout, hardie, warlike, wittie proper men of bodie, and goodly feature, of a wonderous ſoft skinne, by reaſon alſo of the tenderneſſe of muſcles paſſing nimble, the Iland aboundeth in ſo manie bleſſings, that Giraldus ſaid not without juſt cauſe: That nature had caſt into this Weſterne Kingdome of Zephyrus, a more gracious eye than ordinarie. Now in that otherwiles there goeth of it an ill name it is for that the inhabitants heretofore were wont in ſome places to be wilde and very uncivill, who in a mervaillous contrariety of nature loved Idleneſſe and withall hated quietneſſe. For among the wilder ſort, they beſtowed their maidens in marriage, as ripe and readie for huſbands when they were once ten or twelve yeeres of age. Neither would they by any meanes ſtay for a competent maturity of yeeres: a thing obſerved in all other Countries, but of later yeeres ſince the warres ended, and that Ireland was inhabited by the Engliſh they are growne more civill in their manners & behavior. There was never ſeene any Earthquakes in it, nor ſcarcely any thunder heard in a whole yeare. This Countrie is happie for the fat harveſt and the abundance of fruicts, yet more fertill in paſtures, then in fruits, in graſſe, than in Corne, for the Wheate groweth there thinne and ſmall, and can ſcarcely be fanned and made cleane. The vines are more for ornament and ſhade, than for the grapes they beare, that which the ſpring bringeth forth and what ſommer nouriſheth the abundance of rayne that falls, will not permit them eaſely to gather it in Harveſt: for the winds, and the raynes are more ordinarie there, then in other places. But as Mela ſaith: The ground is ſo ranke of graſſe and the ſame not onely freſh and long, but ſweete alſo withall, that the Cattaile may fill their bellies in a ſmall peece of the day, and unleſſe they bekept from grazing, and not ſuffred to feed long together their bellies will burſt. Hence it is, that they have ſuch an infinite number of Cattaill, as being indeed the chiefe and principall wealth of the inhabitants, & manie goodly flocks of Sheepe, which they ſheare twiſe a yeere, and make of their courſe wool rugs, or ſhag mantles, Caddowes alſo or Coverlets, which are vented in forraine Countries. They have likewiſe excellent good Horſes (which we terme Hobies (that have a ſoft pace, and a round amble, ſetting one legge before an other very finely. There is creeping Creatures, no Snakes nor Serpents, or venemous beaſts, the common favour of Candie, and if any be brought thether out of England, they die aſſoone as they ſmell the ground. Beda reporteth that he hath ſeene leaves puld of from the trees, brought out of Ireland, which have beene layd to the ſtings of Serpents, that preſently the ſpreading venoume ſtayed, and the tumor aſwaged, wherewith the bodie was ſwolne. This Ile hath many good Faulcons, Goſhaukes, and Eagles, there are no leſſe Eagles then Kites in other places: but Cranes are there in ſuch a number, that they flie together by hundreds, and in the Northerne parts a great number of wild Swans. But in all this Ile there are but few Storkes, & thoſe that are there be blackiſh. There are no Pertriges, Pheſants, Pyes, or Nightingals. Girald writeth this as remarkeable for foule, that from certaine peeces of wood floating upon the Sea, there drops ftom it gum, which being afterward hardned, ſome Creatures are bred in it, which firſt taking life, then bills, after feathers, & laſt of all wings to flie in the aire, or to ſwim upon the water, which breede after no other manner. The ſame Authour reporteth alſo, that he hath ſeene manie of theſe foules halfe ſhaped having their ſhels upon their bills, which flew as well as others, which were fledge, and full growne. He reporteth moreover that there are manie foules of a double ſhape called Aurifriſins leſſe then Eagles; but greater then the Vulture or Kite, whereof the one foote is armed with talents, and the other flatt fit to ſwime withall. Thus nature ſporteth herſelfe in wonders. There are others called Martins, leſſe then a black-bird, plumpe as a quaile with white bellies, and black backes, which have this qualitie, that being dead, and kept in a dry place, they never rott, & being layd between cloathes or other things, they keepe them from the moaths, and being hung up in a dry place when they are dead, they renew their feathers every yeare: Moreover, in the woods and foreſts there are manie beaſts, and the Harts & Red-deare grow ſo fat, that they can ſcarcely run, and the leſſe they bee, the fairer, and greater are there hornes. There are manie wilde Boores and Hares. But all manner of Beaſts are leſſe there than in other Countries: there are alſo Badgers and Otters. There are not manie Goates, Hinds, Hedge-hogs: none or very fewe Moles, but infinite Rats. There are great ſtore of Wolves and Foxes; this may ſuffice for that. Ireland hath had heretofore manie petty Kings, but hath a long time and at this day beene ſubject to the Kings of England, and is gouverned by a Vice-Roy called the Lord Deputie, it fell into the hands of the Engliſh 1175 when as Roderick king of Connacht, called himſelfe king of all Ireland, and ſeeking to make himſelfe king of the whole Ile, fought againſt the other kings. When King Henry the ſecond having gathered a power together in the yeere of Chriſt 1172 ſailed over into Ireland, and obtained the Princely tittle of the Soveraigne rule of this Iland. For the States of Ireland paſſed freely over unto him all their rule & poure without any bloudſhed: ſo that ever ſince the kings of England have beene called Lords of Ireland, untill Henrie the eight was called king by the States and Lords of Ireland, becauſe the name of Lord grew odious to ſome ſeditious perſons.

But now ever ſince that Ireland became ſubject unto England, the kings of England have ſent over thither to manage the State of the Realms their Regents or Vice-gerents, whome they tearmed in thoſe writings and letter patents of theirs (whereby authority and juriſdiction is committed unto them) firſt keepers of Ireland, then afterward according as it pleaſed them Juſtices of Ireland, Lieutenants & Deputies, which authoritie and juriſdiction of theirs is very large, ample and royall, whereby they had power to make warre, to conclude peace, to beſtow all Magiſtracies and Offices, except a very few, to pardon all crimes, unleſſe they be ſome of high treaſon, to dub knights, &c. Theſe letter patents when any one entreth upon this honorable place of government are publikely read, and after a ſolemne oth taken in a ſet forme of words before the Chancellour, the ſword is delivered into his hands, which is to be borne before him, he is placed in a chaire of Eſtate, having ſtanding by him the Chancellour of the Realme, thoſe of the privie Councell, the Peeres and Nobles of the kingdome with a king of Armes, a Sarjant of Armes and other officers of State. And verely there is not (looke throughout all Chriſtendome againe) any other Vice-Roy, that cometh neerer unto the Majeſtie of a king: whether you regard his juriſdiction and authoritie or his traine, furniture, and proviſion. There be aſſiſtant unto him in Councill the Lord Chancellour of the Realme, the Treaſurer of the kingdome, and others of the Earles, Biſhops, Barons and Judges which are of the privie Councell. For Ireland hath the very ſame degree of States that England hath namely Earles, Barons, Knights, Eſquires, &c.

The ſupreame Court of the Kingdome of Ireland, is the Parliament, which at the pleaſure of the Kings of England is uſually called by the Deputie and by him diſſolved; although in the raigne of king Edward the ſecond a Law was enacted, that every yeare there ſhould be Parliaments holdē in Ireland, which ſeemed yet not to have beene effected. There be likewiſe foure tearmes kept as in England yeerely, and there are five Courts of juſtice; the Star-chamber, the Chancerie, the Kings Bench, the Common-pleas, & the Exchequer. There are alſo Juſtices of Aſſiſes of Niſiprius, and of Oyer and Determiner, according as in England; yea & Juſtices of peace in every Countie for the keeping of peace. Moreover, the King hath his Sariant at Law, his Attournay Generall, his Solicitour, &c.

Over and beſides in the more remote Provinces, there be Gouvernours to miniſter juſtice, as a principall Commiſſioner in Connaught, and a Preſident in Mounſter, who have to aſſiſt them in commiſſion certaine Gentlemen, and Lawyers, and yet every of them are directed by the Kings Lieutenant Deputie. As for the Comon Lawes Ireland is Gouverned by the ſame that England hath. For wee read in the records of the kingdome thus, king Henry the third in the 12 yeere of his raigne gave commaundement to his Juſtice of Ireland, that calling together the Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, Barons and Knights, he ſhould cauſe there before them to read the Charter of king John, which he cauſed to be red accordinglie: and the Nobles of Ireland to be ſworne as touching the obſervation of the Lawes and Cuſtomes of England, and that they ſhould hold and keepe the ſame. Beſides theſe civill Magiſtrates, they have alſo one militarie Officer named the Mareſhall, who ſtandeth heere in great ſteed to reſtrame as well the inſolencie of Souldiers, as of Rebels, who otherwhiles committed manie, and great inſolencies.

It hath foure principall Cities, Dublin or Divelin, the Metropolitan of all Ireland, the royall ſeate, and the Arch-epiſcopall, famous for the title of a County where uſually the Lawyers meete, and judicall Courts & that which as they commonly call the Parliament: here for the moſt part the Lord-Deputies hold their Courts and reſidence. This Dublin is the royall Citie and ſeate of Ireland, a famous towne for Merchandize, the chiefe Court of Juſtice, in munition ſtrong, in buildings gorgeous, in citizens populous. Seated it is in a right delectable and wholſome place: for to the South ye have hills mounting up aloft, Weſtward an open champion ground, and on the Eaſt the Sea at hand, and in ſight. The river Liffy running downe at Northeaſt, affordeth a ſafe roade, and harbour for ſhips. By the river ſide are certaine wharfes or kayes, whereby the violent force of the water might be reſtrained. For this verbe (Cajare) in old writers ſignified to keepe in, to reſtraine, and repreſſe, which that moſt learned Scaliger hath well noted. A very ſtrong wall of rough building ſtone reacheth hence along by the ſides of it (and the ſame towards the South fortified alſo with Rampiers) which openeth at ſix gates from whence there runne forth ſuburbs of a great length.

Towards the Eaſt is Dammes gate, and hard by ſtandeth the kings Caſtle on high, moſt ſtrongly fortified with ditches, towers and armorie. In the Eaſt ſuburbs neere unto S. Andrew the Apoſtle Church, Henry the ſecond king of England cauſed a royall Palace to be erected for himſelfe, framed with wonderfull workemanſhip moſt artificially of ſmothed watles after the manner of this Countrie, wherein himſelfe with the Kings and Princes of Irelant kept a ſolemne feaſt upon Chriſtmas day. Over againſt it is a beautifull Colledge, conſecrated to the name of the holy Trinity, which for the exerciſe and poliſhing of good wits, with good litrature Queene Elizabeth of bleſſed memorie endowed with the priviledges of a Univerſity, & a famous librarie for the reſtoring of learning & arts unto Ireland. The ſecond is Waterford: thirdly, Limbrick: and fourthly Corke. There are diverſe other Townes, Bourroughs and Villages, whereof wee will ſpeake in the particuler diſcriptions. It hath in it manie Lakes among the reſt one in Hultonie 15 miles diſtant from the Lake Ern; whereof wee will ſpeake elſwhere. Above the towne of Armach, there is a poole, that is not very broad, which if for ſome mounths you truſt a pike into it, the part which ſticks in the mud, becomes yron, that which is in the water will bee ſtonie, & that which is without wil bee wood. There is alſo the Lake Ern, 30 thouſand paces long, and 15 thouſand broad, hemmed in with thick woods and ſo full of fiſh, that the Fiſhers complaine more of breaking their nets, than they doe for want of fiſh. The report goes among the inhabitants, that this place was heretofore good tillage ground, and very well inhabited, but becauſe of their Sodomie, it was on a ſudden turned into a Lake: the Author of nature (ſaith Girald) judged that ground giltie of ſuch abhominations againſt nature, not onely unworthy to beare her firſt inhabitants, but from bearing any in times to come. Ireland is watered with many fine rivers: let us heare their names; Avenmorshour & Ivenliff runneth through Dublin, Borne paſſeth through Meth, Ban through Ulſter, Lin through Connacht, and Moad through Kenelcunill, Slichey and Samaire, Moderne and Furne through Keneleonie: beſides manie others, whereof ſome of them ſpringe out of the botome of the ground, and ſome ſpring-heads from the mountaines, and others in an inſtant iſſue out of the pooles, which by their long courſe divide and ſeparate: this Ile into manie faire parts, chiefly the river Shannon accounted the nobleſt river of all Ireland aſwell for the aboundance, and the long courſe of the waters, as for the multitude of fiſh that is taken in it. The Rivers and Lakes have great ſtore fiſh in them, which properly they breed, and principally of three ſorts, to wit, Saulmons, Trouts, & ſlimy Eeles. The River Shannon is full of Lampreys: but they have not in them thoſe kind of noble fiſhes as are in other Countries, to wit, Pikes, Perches, Guſhions, & almoſt all others, which breede not in thoſe waters: but in ſtead of them the Lakes and Pooles have three ſorts of other fiſh, which are found no where elſe, which are longer and rounder than Troutes, being a wittiſh, a firme and a ſavourie fiſh, not much unlike your Ombers, or Grayfings, but that they have a greater head; the others are of the faſhion, bigneſſe, coulour, and taſt like a hering; the third ſort of fiſh are like Troutes, ſaving that they are not ſpotted. Theſe three ſeverall kinds of fiſh are ſeene onely in ſummer, but never in winter. The ground is uneven bunchie, hillie, tender, ſoft and wateriſh. There are ponds, and moores upon the very top of the Mountaines, which abound in Cattaile, as the woods doe in wilde beaſts. Solm ſaith that the Sea which ſeparated Ireland from England is continually moved with waves, and ſo toſſed, that it is not ſailable, but in ſome dayes in ſommer: but he is deceived, for it is calme enough, if it be not troubled with winds, not onely in ſummer, but alſo in the hart of winter, the Saylers paſſe and repaſſe over it. All the Maritimall Coaſts abound in fiſh. It hath in all 33 Counties, and 4 Arch-biſhopricks: that is to ſay, that of Armach, primate of all Ireland. The Arch-biſhoprike of Develin, of Caſill and of Toam, and theſe 4 have 29 Suffragans or Biſhops under them. Ireland according to the manners of the inhabitants, is divided into two parts: for they that refuſed to be ſubject to Laws, & doe live without civilitie, are tearmed the Irishry, commonly called the wilde Iriſh, but ſuch as being more civill, doe reverence the authority of Lawes, and are willing to appeare in Court and Judicially to be tryed, are named Engliſh Iriſh, & their Countrie goeth under the name of the Engliſh pale. In ancient times it was divided into five parts (for it was ſometimes a Pentarchie) namely Mounſter, which lies Southward; Leinſter Eaſtward; Conacht in the Weſt, Ulſter in the North, and Meth well neere in the very midſt. Thoſe which inhabite within the Engliſh pale: differ from the other Iriſh in dyet, cloathes, and language, like in manners to the ancient Engliſh: they ſpeake Engliſh naturally, and properly, & yet they underſtand the Iriſh tongue by reaſon of their ordinary commerce. They adminiſter juſtice to the Common-weale, by the authority, and right of the Britiſh Lawes. Marrie onely among themſelves, and reject the other Iriſh with diſdaigne. To ſpeake with Mr. Camden of this nation in generall, they are of a ſtrong bodie and paſſing nimble, ſtout & haughtie in heart, for wit quick, martiall; prodigall and careleſſe of their lives, enduring travell cold and hunger, given to fleſhly luſt, kinde and curteous to Strangers, conſtant in Love, in enmity implacable, light of beleefe, greedie of glorie, impatient of abuſe and injurie. And as one ſaid in old time: If they be bad you ſhall no where meete with worſe, if they be good, you can hardly finde better. Theſe Iriſh people are both of a hotter and moiſter nature than other nations, which wee gather by their wonderfull ſoft skinne, which doubtleſſe commeth as well by the nature of the ſoile, as by certaine artificiall Bathings, and exerciſe they uſe. And by reaſon alſo of the ſame tenderneſſe of their muskles they ſo excell in nimbleneſſe, and flexibility of all parts of the body as it is incredible, and run exceeding faſt. There great and noble men, whoſe names have the vowell O put before them as a marke of preeminence, and excellencie as O Neal, O Rork, O Donel, O Brian, &c. and manie of the reſt, whoſe name have [Mac] perfixed to them, have peculier rights, and priviledges of their owne, whereby they had wont in ancient time to domineere and Lord it out, and what with tributes, exactions, payments, and impoſitions upon their ſubjects for their Souldiers, Galloglaſſes, Kernes, and horſemen, whom they were to finde and maintaine. Theſe nobles had their Lawyers belonging to them called Brehons. The chiefe Lord had his Coſharies upon his tenants, that is, he and his wouldlie upon them untill they had eate up all their proviſions, he wold likewiſe laye upon them his Horſe-men, his Kerne, his Horſe-boyes, his Dogges-boyes, and the like to be fed, and maintained by them, which kept the poore people in continuall ſlaverie, and beggery. The Iriſh Souldiers ſerve a horſeback, and on foote: the horſemen have light horſes, eaſie to mannage, and skip a horſeback full armed without ſtirrops, they caſt their javelings, which they hold in the midſt very heavy above their heads againſt their Ennemies. Among their foote ſome are called Galloglaſſes which are their mightieſt men, clothed in a long Souldier coate, which carrie two darts with a head of yron a foote long, broad like a ſword with a ſharp point headed to their javlings. And this is the manner of arming their horſemen and beſt Iriſh Souldiers. They have other foote which are light armed, with Iriſh Kienes, which they call Kernes, who will not beleeve that a man is dead, till they have cutt of his head, theſe are of the ſecond ranke. A third are theire Runners, called Daltins unarmed, and are as ſervants to the Horſmen. Now both horſe, and foote comming to the ſhock or charge, cry with a great noiſe Pharro, Pharro, having a Bag-pipe for their trumpet. A woman lying in child-bed (ſaith Solm. cap. 24.) if ſhe have at any time brought forth a manchild, layeth the firſt meate shee gives it upon her husbands sword, and with the very point thereof putteth it softly into the Infants mouth, in hansell as it were of the nourishment it shall have hereafter, and with certaine heathenish vowes wisheth that it may die no otherwise than in warre, and by the sword. Comming to visite the sick they never make no mention of God, or of the salvation of the Soule, or of making a will, but all their speech tends to give them hope of health & dispaire of his health that calls for the Eucharist. The woemen care not much for a will becawse they know they are to have a third part of their husbands goods, and the rest to be equally distributed among his children, but those that are mightiest be it Uncle or Nephew, carrie often the right of inheritance from the children. There women are much commended for the manner of their mourning, sitting in the corners of streets, lifting up their hands, and crying pittifully when her husband or one of her kindred lies a dying, with Sighs and Hoones propper thereunto, in seeking to keep the Soule from departing in ripping up the Riches, Women, Beautie, the fame of their parents, their frends, horse, cattaile, and asks the Soule why, and whether it will goe, complayning of the ingratitude thereof, and after it is departed out of the bodie, they lament with dolefull cryes, and clapping of their hands. As for their meates, they feed willingly upon herbes, and water-cresses, especially upon mushromes, shamroots, and rootes, so that Strabo not without good cause said, they were eaters of herbes. They delight also in butter, temperate with ote-meale in milke, whey, Beefe-broth, & eate flesh oftentimes without any bread at all. As for the Corne they have there, they lay it up for their horses provender, for whome they have a speciall care, yet some of them make good suppers, for though they have not such aboundance of delicates, & are not so neate, and gentile as they are in the Townes at their meales, yet their tables nevertheless are furnished with beefe, porke, and other meates, which the Season affordeth; they love fatt porke above all other meats. At their meales they sit upon small beds: the first place is given to the Mistris of the house, with long haire hanging downe, and weare a long shagg mantle downe to her heeles, which is commonly yealow, and at supper have commonly a blinde harper, to make them merrie. They use linnen shirts exceeding large, with wide sleeves, and hanging side downe to their very knees, which they steine with Saffron. They have short wollen jackets, plaine breeches, & close to their thighs; over these they cast their mantles, or shag-rugs, with a deepe fringed purple, and set out deintely with sundry coullours within, which they lap themselves in the night, and sweetly sleepe on the very ground. Their women cast over their side garment, that they weare downe to the foote, and with elnes of sendall rowled up in wreathes, they rather loath then adorne their heads, like as they doe their neckes, with chames, and Carkaneth, and their armes with Braslets. These are the manners of the wild Irish, who since the later reigne of Queene Elizabeth, and King Jeames, both of blessed memorie; & now under the Gouvernment of our Soveraigne King Charles, they are much reformed and civilized, and have good orders and manners among them, which they have learned of the English in these peaceable times, that inhabit in most parts of Ireland. And thus much of Ireland in Generall, let us come to the particular maps.

The ſecond Map of
VVherein are deſcribed Vlſter, Connaght, Meth, and part of Leinſter.

AFter the generall deſcription of Ireland, before we begin the repreſentatiō of the ſeverall parts thereof: I thought good firſt to ſet down a diſtribution. It is diſtributed into five parts or Provinces, (for it was ſometimes a Pentarchie) namely, Mounſter Southward: Leinſter Eaſtward, Connacht in the Weſt, Vlſter in the North, and Meth almoſt in the very midſt is ſhut in with all the reſt, in which Provinces there lyes ſome other remarkeable territoires. As in Leinſter, Fingall, Offalio, Leiſie, Oſſerie, & Ormundie. In Meth, Slany, Uriel or Furrie and Delviny. In Connacht, Clarie. In Vlſter the three Counties; Louth, Down and Antrimme, Lecally and Treconcly. In Mounſter are Typperary, Kerrie, Corkeny, Deſmondie, Twomondy, and ſome others. There is an other partition of Ireland, which we have touched in the generall Map, that ought carefully and diligently to be conſidered by him, that will conceive a right of the State, and condition of this Countrie, in that he muſt obſerve, it is divided into the Engliſh, & Iriſh pales: the Natives holding the one, and the Engliſh race the other; the Engliſh pale is ſo called, becauſe it is rounded with Engliſh tenements, and inheritances, as it were with paliſadoes and Rampards: for after the Engliſh had reeſtabliſhed Dermicius into his Countrie, & Kingdome, by the victories, which they gott over the Iriſh they tooke from them this Countrie, their armes, & proviſions: the victorious Engliſh held this part which they choſe for their retreate, & abode; till there hapned ſome difference betweene them, and the conquered Iriſh, having made as it were a divorce of this Ile, they called this part of their retreate the Engliſh pale, in which Lagenia lyeth, now commonly called Leinſter. Meth and this part of Vlſter named alſo Uriel, but the principall part of Lagenia is called Fingall, neere unto Develin Northward, and is the renownedſt of all: Meth followes after. Mercator repreſenteth well theſe parts, and hath diſtributed them into foure Maps, beginning firſt with Vlſter, Meth, and part of Leinſter: wee will repreſent unto you as faithfully as wee can, the forme and qualities of all the ſeverall parts, according to the order, which our Authour taketh. Vltonia in Latin, Vlſter in Engliſh, Cui-Guilly in Iriſh, that is the Province Guilly, and of our Welch Britans Vlw. This Province reacheth unto the Hyperborean Sea, on the one ſide it is ſeparated from Meth by the river Boyne, on the other ſide beyond Connacht by the Lake Ern, and the River Ban. It is a ſpacious Countrie, beſpred with many, and thoſe very large Logges, or Lakes, ſhaded with diverſe thickets and woods, in ſome places fruitfull, in others barraine; howbeit freſh and greene to ſee to in every place, and repleniſhed with Cattle. This Countrie is divided into the hither part, and the further part. The hither part of it was in times paſt divided into 3 Counties, Louth, Downe, & Antrimme, and now the reſt is layd out into ſeven new Counties, Cavon, Termanagh, Monaghan, Armach, Colran, Tir-oen, & Denegall or Tir-conel. This Province was wholly inhabited in Ptolomees time by the Volunty Darni, Robogdy & Erdini. The Volunty from whence peradventure are come Guly, and Vlſter held three Counties, Downe, Antrimme and Louth, which is alſo called Iriel: this Louth had for Earle Sr. John Birminghan, otherwiſe called Brimicham an Engliſhman, whome in reward of his Marſhall Valour, when he had diſcomfited, & in a pitcht feild ſlaine by Dundalke Edward Brus, who aſſuming the title of King of Ireland for a time, had made foule worke with fire, and ſword in Ireland: King Edward the ſecond advanced to the honour of Earle of Louth. He had ſeized likewiſe upon the next quartiers, namely, Tir-oen, whom ſome interprit to be the Countrie of Eugenius. Bremy Iueagh, Mourne, & thoſe places, which the Fitzurſes of an Engliſh race poſſeſſed: which degenerating from their name were called the Mac-Mahons, that is, in the Iriſh language the Sons of Vrſus, or the Beare, with Kilwarnie & Kilulto, much encombred with thick woods. They ruled here as Tirranicall Lords, a long time, and derive their Genealogie from Walter Fitzurſe, who embrued his hands with the bloudie murthering of Thomas Arch-Biſhop of Canterburie, they have no remarkeable thing in them, but make mention of the petty Kings of Ireland. Among the townes of greateſt note Armach is accounted the chiefeſt, becauſe it is an Archepiſcopall Sea, and Metropolitane of the whole Iland: it is the very ſame that Bede nameth Dear-march, and out of the Scottiſh, and Iriſh language interpreteth it the feild of Okes: where about the yeare 560 Columban founded a Monaſterie, which at laſt in an inſtant almoſt was erected into a Metropolitane Sea, by Vivian the Legate, & brought under the power of the Engliſh by Sr. John Crucy, and in our time this ancient church was burnt through the wicked rebellion of O-Neale. This Countrie is full of great Lakes, and Bogges: theſe lye inwardly, but by the maritimate Coaſt, the Sea doth ſo winde it ſelfe in: and with ſundry Creeks, & Bayes: encroch within the land: yea and the Lough, or Lake full of Salmons dilateth it ſelfe beſides Dyffrin a Valley full of woods, the Inheritance in old time of the Mandevils, afterward of the Whites, in ſuch ſort, that it maketh two Bilands, Lecall Southward, and Ardes Northward. Lecall a rich, and battle ground, beareth out fartheſt into the Eaſt of any part of Ireland, & is the utmoſt promontorie, or Cape thereof, which the Mariners now terme S. Iohns Foreland. Ptolomee calleth it Iſanium, perhaps of the Brittiſh word Iſa, which ſignifyeth loweſt. In the very ſtreight thereof flouriſheth Dunum, whereof Ptolomee alſo made mention (though not in the right place) now named Downe, a towne of very great antiquitie, and a Biſhops Sea. Ardes is a little territoire right over againſt it, & ſeparated from it by a Brooke, which the Engliſh race of the Savages, heretofore poſſeſſed, wherein Sir Thomas Smith, Knight of the order, and one of the Queenes privie Councell with a generous courage, peopled it in our dayes, which had a miſchivous event for the Iriſh having by craft ſurprized his Son, whome he had left there as chiefe, cauſed him to be torne in peeces, and devoured with dogs, but theſe deſperate rebels were ſhortly after ſerved with the ſame ſauce, and bought their repentance full deare, for being taken, they were eaten up by Wolves: there are other Lakes alſo mentioned in the Generall Map. Among the Rivers Vinderius, which was well knowne to Ptolomee preſenteth it ſelfe firſt, now called the Bay of Knoc-fergus a ſafe haven, which tooke the name of a towne ſituated upon it, which the Engliſh call Knoc-Fergus, the Iriſh Cari-fergus, that is, the rock of Fergus, ſo called from that moſt renouned Fergus, who firſt brought the Scots out of Ireland into Britanie, there drowned. the River Ban followeth, a moſt faire, and pleaſant River ſaith Girald, which the name it ſelfe witneſſeth, iſſuing out of the Lake Eaugh runneth into the Ocean with two mouths, of all Rivers in Europe, it abounds moſt with Saulmons, and becauſe of the exceeding cleareneſſe thereof; theſe fiſh delight to ſport themſelves in it. Logia diſchargeth It ſelfe after a long courſe into the Sea. For the reſt, the Countrie is full of ſhadie, and thick woods, the Darnes dwelt beyond the Volunces, where at this preſent lye Claneboy, Route, the Glinnes, Krine and all the maritimate Coaſt, even as farre as Loghfoile. Claneboy betokeneth in Iriſh a yellow people. This was the poſſeſſion of the ô-Neales, known by the fatall deceaſe of that Arch-Rebell Iohn ô-Neale, who after many Robberies, and ſacriledges committed, being in one or two skirmiſhes under the leading of Sr. Henry Sidney Lord Deputie, vanquiſhed and weakened, was brought to that exigent, that he was reſolved to goe unto the deputie with a halter about his neck, & ſubmiſively, to crave pardon, but being perſwaded by his Scribe, to ſeeke firſt for ayde of certaine Scots of the Iles Hebrides, who under the conduct of Alexander Oge, had encamped themſelves here, and preyed into the Countrie, he came unto them, who gave him friendly intertainement, and preſently maſacred him, and all his companie in revenge of their Kinsfolke, whome he before had ſlaine: by whoſe death the warre being ended, Queene Elizabeth graunted this Claneboy unto Walter d'Eureux, Earle of Eſſex. Rowte was the habitation and ſeate of the Mac-Guillies, a familly of good reputation in their Countrie. Glmnes, that is to ſay, a Valley, or plaine encompaſſed with Mountaines, which heretofore belonged to the Barons Biſſits, Noble-men of Scotland, who when upon private grudges, and quarrels, they had made away Patrick Earle of Athol, were baniſhed hither, and through the beneficiall favour of Henry the third, King of England, received Lands here. Above the Clinnes right over againſt the Ile lyeth Krine, of ô clahani, a ſmall Countrie through which the Rivers Dan, and Loughfoile runne. Neere unto this River, is ſeene yet the markes of the names of the Derrians. Hard by this ſtandeth the Caſtle of Derry, where in the yeere 1566 Edward Randolph renouned for his long ſervice in the warres, ſpent his life in the behalfe of his Countrie, to his everlaſting fame, and gave Shane ô-Neale (who had then aſſembled and armed all the power he could poſſibly againſt the Engliſh) ſuch an over throw, as that he could never after recouver the loſſe he then ſuſteined. But afterward Sir Henry Docwra Knight, who in the warres of Ireland quit himſelfe ſo well, that with great praiſe, he approved his ſingular valour, and martiall skill, brought heither firſt a garniſon to bridle the Earle of Tir-oens inſolent pride, & eſtabliſhed, and ſetled the ſame with ſo good orders, that it ſtood them in good ſteed for helpe againſt the Rebells, and alſo trained the Barbarous people to civility and their duties. The Robogdy placed above Logia, held all that Northerne Sea-coaſt of Ireland, where ô-Dogherty an obſcure Potentate had borne great ſway. Among theſe Robogh, a little Epiſcopall towne, reteyneth the expreſſe footings of the old name Robogdy, which ſhould be that Promontory Robogdium, unleſſe it be faire-Foreland, from hence the utmoſt Shores all crockie, bend back againe by the mouth of Swilly-Lake, which Ptolomee ſeemeth to call Argita. Beyond theſe, more Weſtward, were the Vennicny ſeated, where Mac-Rwyn, Faid-Mac-Swyn, Netoeth, and Mac-ſwyn-Bannigh, had great lands, and large poſſeſſions. Among theſe Ptolomee placeth the River Vidua, which now is called Crodagh, & the Promontory Vennicmum, which they now call Rams-head, & the fore-land Boraeum, now S. Helens-head. Whatſoever remayneth now behinde in Ulſter towards the North, and South was poſſeſſed in ancient times by the Robogdy and Vennicny at this day it is called the Countie of Donegall or Tirconell that is, as ſome interpret it, the Land of Cornelius, or as others ſay the Land of Conall. This Countie is all in a manner Champian, and full of havens as bounded with the Sea on the North and Weſtſides, beating upon it, and disjoynteth from the Eaſt from Tir oën, with the River Siffer, and from Conaght with the Lake-Earne. Liffer neere unto his ſpring-head, enlargeth his ſtreame, and ſpreadeth abroad into a Lake, wherein appeareth above the water an Iland, and in it hard by a little Monaſtery, a very narrow vault within the ground, much ſpoken of by reaſon of, I wot not what fearefull walking Spirits, and dreadfull apparitions, or rather ſome irreligious horrour, which Cave as ſome dreame rediculouſly, was digged by Ulyſſes, when he went downe to parlee with thoſe in Hell. The inhabitants terme it in theſe dayes Elanu' Frugadory that is: the Ile of Purgatory, and S. Patricks Purgatoire. For ſome perſons devoutly credulous affirme, that Patrick the Iriſh mens Apoſtle, or elſe ſome Abbat of the ſame name, obtained by moſt earneſt prayers at the hands of God, that the puniſhments & torments, which the Godleſſe are to ſuffer after this life, might here be preſented to the eye, that ſo he might more eaſely root out the ſinnes, which ſtuck ſo faſt to his Countrie-men the Iriſh, and withall their heatheniſh errours. Theſe where the Inhabitants of Ulſter, like as the reſt of all Ireland through-out, were by one name in times paſt Cleped Scoti, and from hence carried over with them the name of Scots into the North part of Britanie: for as (Girald) writeth about the yeere of our redemption 400. Sixe Sonnes of Mured King of Ulſter, ſeized upon the North parts of Britanie, whereupon it was by a ſpeciall, and peculiar name called Scotia. Ulſter hath an Arch-Biſhoprick in Armach who hath for ſuffragan Biſhops, Meath or Elnamirand Dune, alcas Dundelethglas, Chlocor, otherwiſe Lugundum, Conner, Ardachad, Raboth, Rathluc, Dani-liquir, Dearrik, or Derry. As this Countrie lay vaſt, and unmanured, ſo the Inhabitants till of late yeeres for want of an inſtruction and humaine Society grew ſauvage. And thus much for Ulſter, and the Countries adjoyning comprehended under it.

The third Map of

containing Meth, Media, or Mediameth, Mounſter and the reſt of Lagenia.

THE third part of Ireland, is called in their owne language Myh, in Engliſh Meth. This Meth is divided in three Countries, Eaſt-Meth, Weſt-Meth, & Long-ford: & had in times paſt Kings, or petty Princes rather to rule it. And as wee read that Monarch or Sole King of Ireland: Slany, cauſed the revenewes of Meth, to be aſſigned and appropriat, to the furniſhing of his royall table. But when the Engliſh had once ſet footing in Ireland, Hugh Lacy ſubdued a great part thereof, and King Henry the ſecond, enfeoffed him in it, and made him Lord of Meth, who whiles he was building of a Caſtle at Derwarth, and holding his head downe, to preſcribe a Carpenter ſomewhat, that he would have done, had by him his head ſtricken of with an Ax. This Hugh begat two Sons, Hugh Earle of Ulſter, and Walter Lord of Trim, who begat Gilbert, that dyed before his Father. By the daughters of this Gilbert, Margaret and Maud, the one part by the Genevils, who were (as they write) of the houſe of Lorrain, and by the Mortimers came to the Dukes of Yorke, and ſo to the Kings Domanie or Crowne: for Peter de Genevill, Sonne to that Maud, begat Joan eſpouſed to Roger Mortimer Earle of March, & the other part by Margaret wife to John Lord Verdon, and by his heires, who were Conſtables of Ireland, was devolved at length upon the diverſe families in England, as Furnivall Burgherſh, Crophel, &c. This Meth lyeth ſtreched out from the Iriſh Sea, as farre as to the River Shannon. For the Soile, it is fertill in Corne, paſture grounds, and Cattaile; plentifull in fiſh, & other Victualls, as butter, cheeſe, and milke; watered alſo with Rivers. The ſituation is dilectable to the eye, and an wholeſome aire: in regard of woods, and Mariſhes, in the Skirts and Borders, it hath a very hard Acceſſe, and entrie into it: and therefore conſidering the multitude of people, the ſtaength of Caſtles, and townes. it is commonly called for the peace thereof, the Chamber of Ireland, within the memorie of our Fathers, becauſe the Countrie was too large to be Gouverned by our Sheriffe, to the end that juſtice might with more facility be adminiſtred, it was divided by authority of Parliament in the 38 yeere of King Henry the eight, into two parts, namely, the Countie of Eaſt-Meth, & the Countie of Weſt-Meth. The Countie of Eaſt-Meth is environned round about with the Countie of Kildar, South with the Countie of Dublin, & the Sea Eaſt, with the Territorie of Louth North, and the Countie of Weſt-Meth Weſt. The whole is divided into 18 Baronies. This Countrie is watered with the River Boyn, a noble River, ſpringing out of the Northſide of the Kings Countie, and after it hath with a ſwift courſe ran certaine miles neere unto Drodagh, a Citie well peopled, emptyeth it ſelfe into the Sea. From this ſwift running, it is to be thought that Boyn tooke his name: for Boan both in Iriſh and in Britiſh alſo ſignifyeth, ſwift.

The Countie of Weſt-Meth, is ſo called in reſpect of the other aboveſaid, to which it adjoyneth, on the weſtſide reacheth unto the River Shanon, and lyeth betweene the Kings Countie South, and Longford Countie North, no leſſe in fertility of the Soile, multitude of inhabitants, or any thing elſe, than the other. Molingar by authority of Parliament was ordained to be the head and principall Shire, becauſe it lyeth in the midſt, & the whole Countrie is layd forth into twelve hundreds or Baronies vidz. Fertulogh, where the Tirells, Ferbille where the Darcies dwell: Delum which adorneth the noble ſtock of the Nogents (who came firſt out of England) with the title of a Parliament Baron; theſe are deſcended from that Sir Gilbert Nogent whom Hugh Lacy the Conquerour of Meth, for his couragious and valliant ſervice in the warres of Ireland rewarded both with theſe Lands & thoſe of Furrie, as that moſt learned Gentleman Richard Stanihurſt hath recorded: Furrie, a foreſaid, as alſo Corkery, where the Nogents dwell, Moyaſſell where the Tuts and Nogents, Maghertiernan, where very many of the Petits, and the Tuts, Moygoily where the Tuts & Nangles; Rathcomire, where the Dalſons, Magirquirke where the Dillons, all propagated from Engliſh blood doe inhabite: Clonlolan, where the O-Malaghlins, of the old royall line of Meth, Moycaſſel, where the Magohigans, meere Iriſh did beare ſway, and others whoſe very names carry a harſh ſound of more Barbarouſneſſe, and the Iriſh loves theſe, rather then the Engliſh, in ſo much as one of their great men gave it out, that he would in noe wiſe learne the Engliſh tongue, for feare he ſhould in ſpeaking Engliſh get a wry mouth. Thus the Crowe thinkes her owne birds faireſt, and wee all are given, to like our owne too well, even with the diſdaine, and contempt of others. Unto Weſt-Meth on the North ſide, joyneth the Countie of Longford, called before time Anale, heretofore inhabited by a numerous ſept of the O-pharols: of whoſe houſe one of them ruled in times paſt in the South part named O-pharol-bay, that is the yellow: the other in the North called O-pharoll-Ban, that is, the white, which is now much inhabited by the Engliſh. Along the ſide of this Countie paſſeth Shanon, the nobleſt River of all Ireland, which runneth betweene Meth and Conaght. He ſpringeth out of Therne-hils in the Countie Latrim, and forward cutting through the Lands Southward, one while overfloweth the Bankes, & enlargeth himſelfe into open pooles, and otherwiles drawes back againe into narrow ſtreights, and after he hath runne abroad into one or 2 Lakes Valeth bonet to Madec, (as the moſt learned Geographer Gerard Mercator hath obſerved, whereof alſo Ptolomee hath made mention, and then by and by is entertayned by an other broad Meere (dalled Louth Regith) the name and ſituation whereof doth after aſort imply, that the Citie Rigia ſtood not farre from hence. But when he hath once gotten beyond this Poole, and draweth himſelfe to a narrower Channell, within the Bankes, not farre from the towne Athlon, thence Shannon having gotten over the waterfall at Killoloe, where he is able to beare the biggeſt ſhips, that are in a divided Channel, as it were with two armes claſpeth about the City Limirick, which the Iriſh call Loumneagh. From hence Shannon paſſing on directly for three ſcore miles or there abouts in length, bearing a great breadth, & making many an Iland by the way, at laſt he runneth out at an huge mouth into the weſt Ocean beyond Knoc-Patric, that is Patrick-Hill.

Conaght the ſecond part of Ireland is named by Giraldus Cambrenſis, Conachtia and Conacia, in Engliſh Conaght, and in Iriſh Conaughtie, that part which beareth Weſtward is cloſed in with the River Shannon, the outlet of the Lake or Lough-Erne, which ſome call TroVis, others Banna, & with the maine Weſterne Sea. In ancient times wee may ſee in Ptolomee, it was inhabited by the Gangani, who where alſo named Concani, Auteri, and Magnatæ. It is ſuppoſed this Iriſh name Conaughtie was compounded of Concani & Nagnatæ, unleſſe you will derive it from the haven Nagnata, mentioned by Ptolomee, which ſince was impoſed upon the whole Countrie: for this haven is called Cuon in their Countrie language, to which if you adde Nagnate, it will differ but a litle from Conaughtie. Well, this Province as it is in ſome places freſh, and fruitfull; ſo by reaſon of certaine Moiſt-places: yet couvered over with graſſe, which for their ſoftneſſe they uſually tearme Boghes, like as all the land beſides every where is dangerous, and thick ſet with many, and tohſe very ſhadie woods. As for the Sea-coaſt, lying commodious as it doth with many bayes, creekes, & navigable rivers, after a ſort, it inviteth the inhabitants to navigation, which ſince the warres were ended, they have found the ſweetneſſe & benefite thereof. As for the Lords of Conacht, wee finde it recorded in the Iriſh Hiſtories, that Turloch O-mor, O-Conor ruled abſolutely in old time this Countrie, and divided it wholly betweene his two Sonnes, Cahel and Brien: but at the Engliſhmens firſt arrivall in Ireland Rothericke bare rule, who ſtiled himſelfe Monarch of Ireland: yet being put in feare, with the great preparation of the Engliſh warre, hanging ſo neere over his head, he betooke himſelfe into the protection of King Henry the ſecond, without trying the hazard of Battaile. But when as forthwith he brake his allegeance, and revolted Miles Cogan was the firſt Engliſhman, that gave the attempt upõ Conacht, though his enterpriſe failed. Howbeit, that King of Conaght aboveſaid, was driven to this exigent, as to acknowledge himſelfe the King of Englands Liege-man, to ſerve him faithfully as his man, and to pay him yeerely, of every tenth beaſt one hide mercatable. And King John graunted, that the third part of Conaght ſhould remaine unto him ſtill, to be held hereditarely for a hundred markes: but William Fitz-Adelm, whoſe poſteritie are called in Latine de Burgo, and Burke or Bourke in Iriſh. Robert Muſcegros, Gilbert Clare, Earle of Gloſter, and William de Berningham were the firſt Engliſh, that fully ſubdued this Countrie, and laboured to bring it to civill Gouvernement. And William Bourke and his lineall poſteritie, being called Lords of all Conaght, gouverned this Province together with Vlſter, for a long time in great peace & tranquility, yea and raiſed thereout rich reveneues, untill the onely daughter of William Bourke, ſole heire in groſſe both of Conaght and Vlſter was matched in marriage with Leonell Duke of Clarence, King Edward the thirds Sonne. But when as he abode for the moſt part in England, and the Mortimers his heires, & Succeſſours looked but negligently to their patrimonie, and inheritance in Ireland. The Bourkes their Allies, whome they had appointed as overſeers of their Lands, taking the advantage of their Lords abſence, and preſuming upon the troubles in England, diſpiſing the authority of Lawes, entring into alliance with the Iriſh by contracting marriage with them, ſeized upon all Conacht to their owne behoofe, & degenerating by little & little, layd down Engliſh civility, and tooke upon them the Iriſh behaviour, whereof ſome who fetched their pedegree from Richard Bouke, were called Clan-Richard: others Mac-William oughter, that is, the upper: other Mac-William eughter, that is the lower. Conaght is at this day divided into theſe Counties: Twomound, or Clare, Gallway, Majo, Slego, Letrim and Roſcoman, The Baronies of Atterith and Clare are alſo under it. The Weſt ſhore is indented in with ſmall in-lets and outlets, or armes of the Sea, hath a border all alonge of greene Ilands, & rugged rocks ſet orderlie, as it were in a row, among which foure Ilands called Arrans, make a Baronie: alſo Inis-ceath, and Inis-bound, which Bede interpreterh out of the Scotiſh tonge to ſignifie, the Ile of white Heighfers, whereas it is a meere Britiſh word. Further within lyeth a Lake called Logh-Corbes (where Ptolomee placeth the River Auſoba) ſpreading out 20 miles or there abouts in length, and 3 or 4 in breadth being navigable, and garniſhed with 300 petty Ilands full of graſſe, & bearing Fine-trees, which Lake when it reacheth neere the Sea growing narrow into a River, runneth under Gallway, in the Iriſh tonge Gallive named ſo (as ſome affirme) of the Gallaci in Spaine. This is the very principall Citie of this Province, and reckoned to be one of the third in Ireland: ſurely, it is a faire Citie, built almoſt round, in manner Tower-like of Eutire and ſome ſtone, and is a Biſhops-Sea, & withall throw the benefite of the haven, and roade above ſaid under it, being well frequented with Marchants, hath eaſie and gainefull trafique, by exchange of rich commodities, both by Sea and Land. Vnto Gallway alſo belongs; Anneria, Klaria, Sligaia, Arellonia, and Alonia, a towne not to be diſpiſed. Alterith ſtandeth not farre from hence (in which remaine ſome footings of the name Auteri) commonly called Athenry, famous for the name of Bimingams of an Engliſh race, and glorieth much of that warlike Baron John de Birmingham, out of which familly the Earle of Louth deſcended. The River Auſobe diſchargeth it ſelfe through theſe Auteres into the Sea, called now Gallway-Bay. The County of Majo is a fertill County, and pleaſant, abundantly rich in Cattaile-deere, Haukes, and plenty of honey, taking the name from Majo, a litle City with a Biſhops-Sea in it. Somewhat higher lyeth the County of Slego, a plentious Countrie for feeding, and raiſing of Cattaile, wholly alſo coaſting upon the Sea, betwixt it and Vlſter, Northward, runneth the River Trobir, which Ptolomee calleth Ravius, as an out-let of the Lake-Erne is ſevered from the neighbouring Counties Le Trim, and Roſcoman, by the Comberous Curlew-hills, & the River Sud divideth it in Twaine: the Inhabitants called this River, which Ptolomee ſpeaketh of Banny, which iſſuing out of the Lake Earne makes the bounds of Conaght and Vlſter. In ſome place here about Ptolomee ſetteth the Citie Nagnata, but what Citie it was, it is paſt finding out. He placed alſo the River Libinus in this tract, which Mr. Camden hath reduced out of exile to Dublin his owne citie. But that place, which Ptolomee pointeth out, is now called the Bay of Slego, a road full of harbours under Slego, the principall place of this Country, where a Caſtle ſtandeth. Next unto this Eaſtward lyeth the County of Letrim, encloſed with Breany, the poſeſſion of the Ancient familly of O Corck, deſcended from Rotherick Monarch of Ireland. Vnder the County of Letsim Southward, lyeth Koſcoman, running out a good length, but narrow cloſed up betweene the Rivers Suc Weſtward, and Shandu Eaſtward, and on the Northſide bounded with the Curben Mountaines. It is a plaine Countrie, but fruitfull feeding many heards of Cattaile, and being tilled yeeldeth plenty of corue. And thus much for theſe parts.

diſcribing the Eaſterne part of Vlſter, and demonſtrateth to the Reader thoſe territoiries followving: Glan-boy, Tir-oen, Arde, Lecale, Evaugh, Arthule, Mourne, Fuſe, Vriel, & diverſe others.

LAGENIA the fourth part of Ireland followeth, called by the Inhabitants Leighnig, by the Britans Lein, the Engliſh Leinſter, the Latins Lagenia: of all the Coaſts of Ireland, it lyeth moſt Eaſtward bounded from Mounſter by the River Neor, beyond which nevertheleſſe it reacheth unto many places, from Conacht by ſome ſpace of Siney, and from Meath, by its owne limits. In Ptolomees time it was the habitation of the Brigantes, Coriondes, Menapians, Cauces, and Blanies, from whome it may very well be, theſe new names were derived & contracted of Lein, Lienigh and Lienſter. The Soile is fertill, and beareth much fruit, the aire milde, neither are the Inhabitants very rude. At this day it is divided into the Counties of Weisford, Caterlough, Kilkenny, Develin, Kildare, the Kings Countie, the Queens Countie, Longford, to which are added at this preſent Fernes, and Wicklo. The Brigantes ſeeme to have planted themſelves betweene the mouth of the River Shour, and the confluents of Neor and Barrow, which in Ptolomee is called Brigus, under the Citie of Waterford. Now becauſe there was an ancient Citie of the Brigantes in Spaine, named Brigantia, Florianus del Campo, laboureth tooth, and naile to fetch theſe Brigantes out of his owne Countrie Spaine. But if ſuch a conjecture may take place, others might with a greater probability derive them from the Brigantes of Britanie, a nation both neere, and alſo exceeding populous: but if that be true which is found in certaine copies, that this people were called Brigantes, both he and the other have miſſed the marke: for that theſe tooke their denomination of the River Birgus, about which they doe inhabite, the very name is almoſt ſufficient to perſwade us. Theſe Brigantes dwelt in the Counties of Kilkennie, Oſſerie, and Caterlough, watered all with the River Birgus. Betweene Neor and Birgus dwelt the Coriondes, where the County of Carlogh or Caterlogh lyeth at this day, and a good part of the quarter of Kilkenny, and likewiſe yet higher, where Oſſerie the upper, and Ormundie, which the Iriſh call Vrrown, the Engliſh Ormund, and the vulgar ſort Wormewood. There is no very memorable thing in them, unleſſe of the Lords of them; but leaving that wee will returne to our purpoſe. Under the mouth of Shour, the Menapians held the Southweſterne Cape, where at this day the Countie of Weisford lyeth, called in Iriſh Countie Reogh, where Ptolomee in times paſt placed the Menapii. That theſe Menapians came hither from the Menapii, a nation in Low-Germanie, that dwelt by the Sea-coaſts, the name doth after a ſort implie. But whether that Carauſius were of this, or that nation, who taking upon him the imperiall purple robe, ſeized upon Britanny againſt the Emperour Diocleſian. This very promontorie, Ptolomee calleth Hieron, that is Holy: and in the ſame ſignification the Inhabitants alſo called it. For the utmoſt towne thereof, at which the Engliſh-men landed, ſet firſt foote in this Iland, they named it in their native language Banna, which ſoundeth all one with Holy. From this Holy-point, the Shore turning full upon the Eaſt, runneth forth along Northward, over againſt which there lye flats, and ſhallowes in the Sea, that endanger manie a ſhip, which the Mariners call the Grounds. But ſeing there is one onely River, that voideth it ſelfe in this place, which cutteth this County as it were juſt in the midſt, and is now called Slane, ſeing alſo at the very mouth thereof, where it maketh a poole, there is a towne by a Germane name called Weisford, the head place of the whole Countie. This towne for bigneſſe is inferiour to manie, but as memorable as any, becauſe it was the firſt in all Ireland, that when Fitz-Stephan a moſt valiant Captaine aſſaulted it, yeeldeth it ſelfe into the protection of the Engliſh, and became a Colonie of the Engliſh, whence this whole territoire, is paſſing well peopled with Engliſh, who to this very day uſe the ancient Engliſhmens apparell, and their language. Above the Cauci were Eblani, where now lyeth the countie of Dublin, and of Meath, one of the fifth parts of the Ile. Now the county of Develin on the Eaſtſide, is wholy waſhed with Iriſh Sea. The Soile thereof bringeth forth corne abundantly, and yeeldeth graſſe and fodder right plenteouſly, beſides it is well ſtored with all ſorts of living Creatures, that are gotten by hunting and hauking for the table, but ſo deſtitute for the greateſt part of woods, that in moſt places, they uſe a clammy kinde of fat turfe, or Sea-cole out of England for their fewell. It is much peopled with townes, and inhabitants, where the River Liffy runneth into the Sea. Houth is almoſt watered round about with the Sea, from whence the race of S. Laurences of England were called Barons of Houth. More inward towards Owelin, Fingall lyeth to it Northward, a ſmall countrie, but well manured and is as it were the garner of the Kingdome for the abundance of Wheate, which it yeeldeth every yeere. The Soile ſtriveth to yeeld fruit by the labour of the Husbandmen, & the more, becauſe the inhabitants in other parts are negligent and lazie. Now let us come to the townes, the firſt that preſents it ſelfe, is Kilkenny upon the Neure, which is as much to ſay, as the Cell, or Church of Canic, who for the ſanctimonie of his ſolitarie life in this Countrie was highly renouned: a proper faire and wealthy Bourrough towne this is, and farre excelling all Midland Bourroughs in this Iland, divided into the Iriſh towne, and the Engliſh towne: the Iriſh towne is as it were the Suburbs, and hath in it the ſaid Canick Church, which both gave name unto it, and now alſo affourdeth a ſea unto the Biſhop of Oſſery. But the Engliſh towne is nothing ſo ancient, built by Ranulph the third Earle of Cheſter, and fortified with a wall on the weſt-ſide, by Robart Talbot, a Nobleman, and with a Caſtle by the Butlers. Somewhat beneath the ſaid Neure ſtandeth a little walled towne, named in Engliſh Thomas-towne, in Iriſh Bala-Mac-Andan, that is, the Towne of Anthonies Sonne: for it tooke both names of the founder Thomas Fitz Anthonie an Engliſhman, who flouriſhed under King Henry the third. There ſtands alſo that ancient towne Rheba, mentioned by Ptolomee, which yet to this day keeps the name Rheba: there is beſides Lechlinie in Iriſh Leighlin, a royall Citie, fortifyed with a Caſtle during the lives of our Fathers, by Bellinghan a moſt noble Vice-Roy of this Ile. There ſtands alſo Roſſe, a great towne well peopled, and much reſorted unto by trading in divers merchandiſes, fortified with long walles by Iſabella the daughter of Count Richard Strong-bow, whereof there are yet ſome remainders to be ſeene to this day. For it is a long time a goe, ſince the ſeditious diferences betweene the people, and the Clergie, hath almoſt loſt the memorie of it, and brought it to this State, as you ſee it at this day. Dermot who firſt drew the Engliſh over into Ireland, granted this & the territoire lying to it unto Fitz-Stephan for ever, who began a Bourgh hard by at Carrick, and albeit the place were ſtrong by ſituation, yet he helped it by art. But when as the ſaid Fitz Stephan had ſurrendred up his right into the hands of King Henry the ſecond, he made it over to Richard, Earle of Penbrock, that he ſhould hold it in fee from him, and the Kings of England, as ſuperiour Lords, from whome by the Earles, Mareſchals, the Valences of the Luſignian line in France, and the Haſtings, it deſcended to the Greyes Lords of Ruthin, who commonly in ancient charters are named Lords of Weisford, although in the raigne of King Henry the ſixth, John Talbot is once called in the records Earle of Shrewsburie and of Weisford. Kildare is the chiefe towne in the Countie of Kildare, adorned with an Epiſcopall Sea. After the Entrance of the Engliſh into Ireland, it was the habitation of Richard Earle of Penbrock, then of William Mareſhall his Sonne in Law, that marryed his daughter, Earle of Penbrock likewiſe, by whoſe fourth daughter Sybell it came to William Ferrars, Earle of Derby, and his daughter likewiſe, begotten of her unto William Lord Veſoy, whoſe Sonne William Veſoy, Lord chiefe Juſtice of Ireland, ſtanding in tearmes of diſfavour, and diſgrace with King Edward the firſt, for certaine quarrells ariſing, betweene him and John the Sonne of Thomas Fitz Gerald, & being bereft of his onely Sonne Lawfully begotten, graunted and ſurrendred Kildare, and other his lands in Ireland, unto the King, ſo that he might enfeoffe his baſe Sonne ſurnamed the Kildare in his other Lands in England. And a while after the ſaid John Sonne of Thomas Fitz-Gerald, whoſe Anceſtours (deſcended from Girald Windeſor, Caſtellan of Penbrock) had with paſſing great valour, performed moſt painefull ſervice, in the conqueſt of this Iland, was by Edward the ſecond King of England, endowed with the Caſtle & towne of Kildare, together with the title and name of Earle of Kildare. In the Countie of Divelin ſtands the chiefe towne of all Ireland in Lagenia; this is that very Citie which Ptolomee called Eblana, and wee Divelin: the Latin writeth Dublinium, and Dublinia: the Welch Britans Dinas Dulin, the Engliſh Saxons Duplin, and the Iriſh Bala-cleigh, that is, the towne upon hurdles: for men ſay, when it was built, the foundation was layd upon hurdles, the place was ſo fenniſh, and mooriſh: like as Hiſpalis or Civill in Spaine, which Iſidore reporteth to have bene ſo named; becauſe it ſtood upon a mooriſh ground upon piles and ſtakes, deeply pitched into the earth. In brief it is a very ancient city which hath ſumptuous buildings a ſafe haven, a ſtrong Caſtle, built and raiſed there by Henry London the Arch Biſhop thereof, enriched with 15 Churches, whereof the famouſt is S. Patricks Church, built or rather repaired by Robart Cumin, an Archepiſcopall Sea, and Chriſt-church, wherein Richard Strongbow, Earle of Penbrock and Subduer of Ireland lyeth, entombed in a very faire Sepulchre. It was Gouverned heretofore by a Mareſhall: but in the yeere 1409. Henry the fourth gave it the priviledge of a Maire, and two Baylifs to be choſen, every yeere. Afterward Edward the ſixth changed theſe Baylifs into Vi-Counts. Queene Elizabeth of happie memorie founded there a Univerſitie for all manner of ſciences, for the better inſtruction and civilizing of the rude and ignorant inhabitants, by the uſe of learning and litrature: it is watered as is ſaid, with Aven-liff, that is the river of Liff, lying ſeven miles from the mouth thereof: for the antiquitie of Dublin there is no certaintie, but that it is very ancient, Ptolomee perſwadeth us to thinke ſo Saxo Grammaticus writeth, how it was pitifully rent, & diſmembred in the Daniſh warrs, afterwards it came under the ſubjectiō of Edgar King of England, which his charter before mentioned confirmeth, wherein he calleth it the moſt noble Citie of Ireland. Then the Norwegians poſſeſſed themſelves of it, whence in the life of Gryffith Ap Cynan Prince of Wales, wee read, that Herald of Norway, when he had ſubdued the greateſt part of Ireland, built Develin. This may ſeeme to be that Herald Harfages, that is, with the faire Locks or Treſſes, who was the firſt King of Norway. Develin at length, when the Engliſh firſt arrived in Ireland, yeelded unto their valour, and by them was manfully defended, when Auſculph Prince of the Dublinians, and afterwards Gottred King of the Iles fiercly on every ſide aſſaulted it: within a while after a Colony of Briſtow-men was deduced hither unto whom King Henry the ſecond granted this citie (happily at that time diſpeopled for to inhabite with all the Franchiſes, and free cuſtomes, which the men of Briſtow have, and that by thoſe very words alleaged. Since, which time it hath flouriſhed every day more and more, and in many tumultuous times, and hard ſtreyghts given notable proofe of moſt faithfull loyaltie to the Crowne of England; for the reſt of Divelin you have it in the generall diſcription. Now let us come to the Rivers and Mountaines. Under Ormond Northward Blew Blemy peaketh up with high tops of Mountaines, and twelve above the reſt, as it were hudled up together, which alſo they terme Phelemge Modona. Out of the Entrailes and Bowells of Bladin hill, their mother ſpring thoſe noble rivers Shower or Swire, Neor, and Barrow, which in old time were termed the three Siſters, running ſweetly through divers Chanels into the Ocean: Neor encompaſſeth, & defendeth manie places, and Townes. Barrow ſtreaming alſo out of Blarem Hill, runs ſolitarily by divers places, with windings, and turnings, and paſſeth by Rheba and other townes. Neor and Barrow joyning afterward and having traverſed ſome few miles together, ſurrenders up their names, and waters into the Shower, as their eldeſt Siſter, which ſuddenly diſcharge themſelves into the Sea, by a mouth very rockie, and full of cliftes, where on the left hand a promontoire very narrow riſing up, having a beakon and tower upon it, as a ſignall for mariners, ſet up by thoſe of Roſſe, that they may the more ſafely come into the mouth of the River, out of the Sea. Neere unto this lyeth Wicklo, or Arcklo, a place of great name, & the Earle of Ormonds Caſtle, who write themſelves among other honorable titles, Lords of Arcklo, under which Caſtle, that River which Ptolomee calleth Ovoca, falleth into the Sea, making a Creeke. There is alſo the River Lifny, which paſſeth through Develin, ſhe runneth with a gentle ſtreame, and haſtens not her courſe, unleſſe abundance of raine hath falne, otherwiſe very ſoftly. This Lifny doubtleſſe was mentioned by Ptolomee, but by the carelesneſſe of the Printers, hath loſt her place; for the Riuer Libnius lying upon the ſame latitude, is put into the coppies of Ptolomee on the other part of the Ile, where there is no ſuch River.

contayning the Barony Ydron, part of the Queens Countie, the Lordship of Tortonel, the townne of Laghlin or Leighlin, wherein there is an Epiſcopall Sea in the midſt of the Barony of Ydron.

ACcording to our Method, Mounſter followeth Leinſter, called by the Iriſh Mown, by the Engliſh Mounſter, which lyeth Southward open to the Vergivian Sea, ſeparated in ſome place from Connaght by the River Siney or Shanon, and elſwhere from Leinſter by the River Neor, it is divided at this day into two parts, that is, into Weſt-Mounſter, and South-Mounſter, in the Weſterne Mounſter, there dwelt in old time, the Gangani, the Luceni, the Velabri, and Vterini: In the South the Oudiæ, or Vodiæ, and the Coriondi, but at this day it is diſtinguiſhed into ſeven Counties, namely Kerry, Limirie, Corck, Tipperary, Holy Croſſe, Waterford and Deſmond. The Gangani, who alſo are named Concani, like as the Luceni their next neighbours, that came from the Lucenſii in Spaine, may ſeeme both by the affinitie of the name, and alſo by the vicinity of place, to have beene derived from the Concani in Spaine. Theſe dwelt in Kerry upon the mouth of the River Shanon, a Countrie full of woodie Mountaines, having neither way nor path through them, but many hollow Valleyes, lying betweene them, & full of thick woods. The Earles of Deſmond have had in time paſt, the dignitie and right of Count Palatines. Girald Earle of Deſmond, a man notorious for deepe treacherie to his Prince and Countrie, wickedly waſted Mounſter, with continuall harrying, and raiſing booties out of the fields, there arrived certaine companies of Italians, and Spaynards, ſent underhand, to aide him from Pope Gregorie the thirteenth, & the King of Spaine, who here fortifying a place, which they called Fort del Ore, their bragging bravadoes, and thundred out many a tirrible threat. But the moſt noble, and martiall Baron Lord Grey, Lord Deputie with his very comming and firſt onſet that he made upon them, decided the matter, and ended the quarrell: for immeadiately they yeelded themſelves, and the moſt part of them were put to the ſword. And the Earle of Deſmond himſelfe at length in his fearefull flight, being forced to take the woods, hard by for his refuge, was ſoone after in a poore cotage, by a Souldier, or two ruſhing in upon him, firſt wounded, and afterwards being knowne, cut ſhorter by the head, and ſo payd worthely, for his perfidious treaſon, and the waſting of his Countrie.

Beneath theſe ancient Suceni lyeth Deſmond, ſtretched out farre and wide towards the South, called in Iriſh Deſwown, in Latin Deſmonia, inhabited in ancient times by the Velabri and Ibernes. As for theſe Velabri, that may ſeeme ſo named of Aber, that is, ſalt water waſhes, for that they dwelt upon ſuch Friths, divided one from an other by many, and thoſe notable armes of the Sea running betweene, whence alſo the Arbatri, and Kantabri in Spaine had their denomination. Oriſius placeth them in the Promontorium Notium, which the Mariners call Beares-head, lying betweene the two Bayes, Maire & Bantre, which looketh towards Spaine farre from it. Under this Cape Notium, the River Iernus is diſgorged into the Ocean, neere unto which is ſeene Dunck-Eran, which the Scots call the Citie Eran, betokeneth not onely that this is the citie Ivernis, whereof Ptolomee ſpeaketh; but ſignifyeth alſo the River Jernus, which name ſeemeth aſwell as the whole Iland to come from Hier, which with the Iriſh ſignifyeth the Weſt: for it is the fardeſt part of all this Countrie Weſtward, as Ireland is the fartheſt Ile of all Europe. The Ibernes, who alſo are called Uternes, that is, the high-Iriſh inhabite upon this River, on the otherſide of the promontoire, where are two havens well knowne Beare-haven and Baltimore, a Bay or creeke abounding in Herings, over againſt which the Mac-carties dwelt, who heretofore bore great ſway, a petty King of Ireland, who in the yeare 1566 tranſported over his Lands, and grounds of inheritance of a great largeneſſe to Queene Elizabeth, and obtained from her, that he might hold them after the manner and cuſtome of England by right of protection and vaſſalage. In the ſame time was created the Earle of Glencar, and Baron of Valence, a perſonage of great fame, and authority, heretofore much animated againſt the Giralds, becauſe they had chaſed away his Anceſtours, whome he ſaid were Kings of Deſmond from theſe parts heretofore poſſeſſed by his Predeceſſours. For the Giralds or Fitz-Giralds, ſprang from the Kildarian race, who having ſubdued, the Iriſh became Lords here of very large and goodly poſſeſſions, and of them Maurice Fitz Thomas was by Edward the third created the firſt Eare of Deſmond, in the yeere of our redemption 1355. Among whoſe poſterity there were great men for their valour, and wealth, whoſe credit alſo & reputation reached farre, and this honour continued to their offſpring, and deſcended in right of inheritance, unto Girald that Rebell, whome ere-while I named, who willfully overthrew a moſt noble & potent familie. After the Iberni followed the Udiæ, called alſo Vodiæ, the footing of which name doth more expreſſely ſhew it ſelfe in Idou and Idouth in the Countrie of Kilkenny: for the greateſt part of them are called Idou & Idouth: They dwell in the Couutie of Corke. Typperarie, Limerick, Kilkenny, and Waterford. In the Countie of Typerarie there is no remarkable thing, but onely that it is a Palatinate, and that a towne called the Holy Croſſe ſtandeth in it, and though it be but litle, yet it enjoyed great and peculiar priviledges, which was given to it, becauſe the Monkes perſwaded men, there was a peece of Chriſts croſſe there ſometimes preſerved. Waterford is the firſt that preſents it ſelfe: and though it ſtandeth in an aire ſome what groſſe, and upon a Soile not very fruitfull, and the ſtreetes therein be with the narroweſt, thruſt cloſe and pend up together: yet ſuch is the convenience, and commodiouſneſſe of the haven, that for wealth freſh-trading, & frequent reſort, it is the ſecond Citie in all Ireland, & hath alwayes ſhewed a ſingular loyalty, fidelitie, and obedience to the Imperiall Crowne of England. For ever ſince that Richard Earle of Penbrock wonne it, it hath continued ſo faithfull, and quietly diſpoſed, that it performed at all times, ſafe and ſecure peace unto the Engliſh, on their backs, whiles they went on in the conquering of Ireland: whence it is that the Kings of England, have graunted unto it Very many, and thoſe right large Franchiſes, which King Henry the ſeventh augmented, and confirmed, becauſe the Citizens had demeaned themſelves moſt manfully, & wiſely againſt that Mock Prince Perkin Warbeck, who being a yong man of baſe condition, by hoiſing up the ful ſailes of impudence, went about to mount up aloft unto the Imperial Diadem, whiles he a meere ſuborned Counterfeyt, tooke upon him to be Richard Duke of Yorke, the ſecond Sonne of King Henry the 4. The Burgeſſes thereof are grave, and wiſe men, it hath a very ſafe, and a quiet haven for the moſt part full of forraine ſhipping. It hath alſo a great number of Inhabitants, which deale in merchandiſe, in which trading they ſhow themſelves wiſe and circumſpect, and great husbands, & caſt up their accounts ſo judicially, that in a ſhort time, they grow rich by their cõmerce. There is not a Bankroute in it, or a Uſurer, who ſeekes by exchange, to couſin, or deceive, or to exhauſt money, or goods from the Citizens. They are gentill, full of humanity, ſober, given to hoſpitality, very pittyfull, and to be briefe, willing to contribute, both to publick and perticular affaires. In theſe parts alſo lyeth Limirick, keeping the third ranke, which nevertheleſſe ought to give place to none, for the faire ſituation of the place & commodiouſneſſe of the River: it is watered by the River Shanon, the Prince of all the Rivers in Ireland. It lies 60 miles diſtant from the Sea: and yet the mariners with their ſhiping, come up to the very walles of it, and there is no danger of rocks, or ſhelves in comming up to it. King John fortifyed it with a Caſtle. It is a very famous mart-towne and a Biſhops Sea of Monſter, and at this day is counted two townes: the upper wherein ſtand the Cathedrall Church, and the Caſtle hath two gates, opening into it, & each of them a faire bridge unto it of ſtone, with Bulwarkes, and litle draw-bridges, the one leading into the Weſt, the other into the Eaſt; you would hardly beleeve, what an infinite number of fiſh are taken there. Next followeth the Countie of Corke, encloſſed within a circle of walles, in an ovall forme with the river Saveren flowing round about it, & running betweene not paſſable through, but by bridges, lying out in length as it were in one direct broad ſtreete: and the ſame having a Bridge over it: howbeit, it is a pretie towne of marchandize, well peopled and now much more trading in it, then when it was ſhut up in the time of the warres. In this Countie the familie of the Curcies flouriſhed in ancient times deſcended from a brother of John Curcy an Engliſh man, that ſubdued Ulſter. Beneath Corke the River Saxeren parteth in twaine, environeth a very large, & a pleaſant Iland, over againſt the principall dwelling houſe of that moſt ancient and noble famillies of the Barries, which thereupon is called Barry-Court. For that familie is derived from Robart de Barry an Engliſhman, a perſonage of great worth and renowned: who not withſtanding chooſe rather among the firſt to be chiefe indeed, than to ſeeme chiefe, who in the winning of Ireland received, wounds, and hurts, and the firſt man he was in Ireland, that manned & brought the hauke to hand. His poſteritie by their long approved loyaltie, & martiall proweſſe, deſerved to receive of the kings of England, firſt the title of Barron Barry, afterwards of Vi-count Butiphant, & for their great lands, and wealth, got among the people the ſurname Barry-More, that is, Barry the great. The preſent Earle of it now is Sir Richard Boyle, whome King Jeames of bleſſed memorie, for his honorable and faithfull ſervice done to his Prince and Countrie created and inveſted him with the honour of Earle of Corke, a man of large and great poſſeſſions, both here & in other parts of Ireland. At the mouth of the River Bany in a fertile Soile, and well wooded, ſtandeth Kinſale, a very commodious port and a towne fortified with old walles, under which in the yeere 1601 the Kingdome of Ireland laye a bleeding, and put it was upon the hazard, as it were of one caſt of a die, whether it ſhould be ſubject to England or Spaine: what time as the Iland was endangered, both with forraine, and inteſtine warre: for eight thouſand old trained Souldiers, under the conduct of Don John John d'Aquila, had on a Sudden ſurpriſed and fortifyed it, confident upon the cenſures, and excommunications of Pius the fifth, Gregorie the XIII & Clement the VIII. Popes of Rome diſcharged like thunderbolts upon Queene Elizabeth, and preſuming confidently upon the ayd of that Arch-Rebell Tir-oen, and his Crue, who had ſent for them under a goodly ſhew of reſtoring religion. But Sir Charles Blunt, Baron Montjoy Lord Deputie, drew her Majeſties forces together, preſently belaid it round about, both by Sea and Land: albeit, his Souldiers were tired, toiled out, and the ſeaſon of the yeere moſt incommodious, as being mid-winter: & withall made head alſo againſt the Rebells, whom the Earle of Tir-oen, ô-Donel, Mac-Gwyre, and Mac-Mahound had raiſed, & gotten together, & with ſuch valour, & fortitude, ſo fortunately daunted and repreſſed their malapert boldneſſe, that with one victorie he both got the town which the Spaniards in it yeelded unto him, who gave them quarter, ſent them for Spayne, and withall overthrew Tir-oen and his men that came to relieve it, & ſo wreſting Ireland out of the hands of Rebells returned victoriouſly home. Below Barry Court the River Savered hard by Imokelly a faire poſſeſſion long ſince of the Earle of Deſmond, looſeth it ſelfe in the Ocean, affording at the very mouth commodious harbours and havens. As Saveren watereth the nether part of this Countrie; ſo Brood-water called in times paſt Aven-more, that is, the great River, moiſteneth the upper, upon which inhabited the noble familie of Roch, which being tranſplanted out of England, hath growne up, and proſpered here very well, and now enjoyeth the title of Vi-Count Fermoy. Neere unto the mouth of this River ſtandeth Admor, a litle towne, called, becauſe it lyeth neere the Sea. Alſo Yogall no great towne, but walled round about, built in faſhion ſome what long, and divided into two parts: the upper which is the greater part, ſtretching out Northward, hath a Church in it, and without the wall a litle Abbey, called North Abbey: the nether part reaching Southward, called the Baſe-towne, had alſo an Abbey, called South Abbey: the commodiouſneſſe of the haven, which hath a well fenced Kay, belonging unto it, and the fruitfulneſſe withall of the Countrie adjoyning, draweth Marchants unto it, ſo as it is well frequented, and inhabited; yea & hath a Majour for the head Magiſtrate. Thus farre in theſe dayes reacheth the Countie of Corke, which in times paſt was counted a Kingdome, and went farther, conteyning within it Deſmond alſo. Aud thus much in brieft ſhall ſuffice for the deſcription of the five parts of Ireland, as they are delineated in the 5 Maps of famous Mercator.

AND ZWETHLAND,
the firſt and ſecond Kingdome in the Northerne parts.

Names of Norway.

AFTER the Britiſh Iles, according to our method the quarters in the Northerne Regions followe, called by the Ancients Scandia, & Scandinavia, by Plinie the Worke-houſe and ſhop of nations, & the Gayne of a people of an unknowne greatneſſe, lying from the fartheſt Coaſt of Germanie Northward, which for a long time and many ages paſt, was divided into three Kingdomes, to wit, Norway, Swethland and Denmarke. Norway offers it ſelfe firſt of all unto us, whereof the Etymologie is not obſcure, for it is compounded of Ner, which ſignifieth North, and of weg, which betokeneth a way, as the way or Northerne tract. It is bounded on the Southſide with Denmarke, Weſtward the Ocean Sea beateth upon it, on the Eaſtſide with the Dofrine Mountaines, by which it is parted from Swethland, and Northward with Lapland, ſeparated from it by the high, and moſt troubleſome Mountaines, which are alwayes couvered with ſnow. All that part which lyeth Weſtward, is full of rocks, and ſharp flints, having noe paſſage, or way through them. It is alſo very ſtonie in the South-quarter, eſpecially in thoſe places, which lye neereſt to Cherſoneſus, or the Biland of the Cimbres, from whence it is diſtant 250 miles by a ſpace: but all that tract, which looketh as well towards the Weſt, as towards the South hath a temperate aire, for there the Sea freeſeth not, neither doe the ſnowes lye long. The Countrie is none of the fertileſt, but yet ſufficeth to nouriſh her owne Inhabitants: nevertheleſſe, it aboundeth in Cattaile and in many wilde beaſts. Among the reſt there are white Beares of a huge greatneſſe, and likewiſe Beavers, or Caſtors with other Beaſts innumerable. This Countrie is exceedingly troubled with certaine litle beaſts, which they call Lemmers, having foure feete, about the bigneſſe of a mouſe, and a skinne of divers coulours, the Inhabitants ſay they drop out of the clouds in tempeſteous weather, they devoure like Locuſts every greene thing on the Earth, and at a certaine time, die all in heapes together, aud with their ſtinck ſo poyſon the aire, that the poore people are long after troubled with the laundis, and with a giddineſſe in their head. In the yeere of Chriſt 1066. or there abouts. The Norwegians, which called themſelves alſo Normands, toſſed up and downe with civill broyles, having abandoned their owne Countrie with intent to ſeeke out new habitations did vexe by their incurſiõs the Countries of Saxonie, Frizeland, Scotland, Ireland, England, Gaule and Flaundres, ruinating Amiens, Arras, Cambray, Terrovenna, Liege, Tonger, Culleni, Aken, and many other townes, which they put to fire and ſword.

The Gouvernment in ancient times.

Now Norway in times paſt was a flouriſhing Kingdome, reaching as farre as Denmarke, and the maritimate Iles, as long as it was governed by an hereditaire ſucceſſion. Afterwards the Kings race failing, during the intermiſſion of the raigne, they were adviſed by the chiefe men, to make choiſe of their Kings by election. Now from Suibdagerus the ſecond, untill Chriſtian the laſt, there were 25 Kings; but at this day it is under the power of the Danes, who are not onely content to draw the Lawfull, and tolerable revenues out of it, but alſo to tranſport the profits thereof into Denmarke; beſides they have an other diſcommoditie in the quality of theire places: for Denmarke hath gott into their owne puiſſance all the Sea-havens in Norway: for if the King of Denmarke were their Ennemy, they could not traficke by Sea, nor tranſport any of their merchandizes or commodities out of it. It hath moſt large, and great Regions, but many craggie Mountaines, Deſerts, and Rocks, which for the moſt part have no paſſages, or wayes through them, the woods being full of Pine-trees. They have five Roy-all Caſtles in it, and as many principall Gouvernours, whereof the chiefe and fartheſt Southward is Bahus. The Townes ſubject nnto it are Marſtrand, ſituated in a rockie Biland, famous for the fiſherie of Herings. The leſſer are Koengeef, Congel, or rather Bahus and Oldewold, if not Odwad. The ſecond Caſtle is Aggerhuſe, upon whoſe ſoile the high maſts for ſhipping, the plankes, and boords of Oak and firre trees, and timber for building are ſent from thence yeerely in great abundance into Germanie, Holland, France, England, Spayne, and other places. It hath alſo under it, the Cities and Townes of Anſloy the Epiſcopall ſea, commended above all by Straingers, for the Court, whereunto in all Norway all judiciall cauſes and ſuits are referred & decided. Alſo Tonſbergh, or Coningſbergh, Fridrickſtadt, Salezbourg, Schin, or Schon, where there are mines of Copper and Yron. Then Hammary the great, and the leſſe heretofore Epiſcopall Lands, but now are under the commaund of the Biſhop of Anſloy, and are ſeparated by the ſtreight Moſian, which runneth betweene them. The third Caſtle is Bergerhuſe, under which are the Cities of Bergin, and of Staffranger. Bergin is the chiefe towne of marchandize in all Norway, and the Garner for Barly, and Corne, and the reſidence of the Gouvernour and Biſhop. There is ſould that noble, and delicate fiſh, which is taken upon the Coaſt of Norway, called Bergin fiſh; becauſe it is ſo tranſported from thence by Marchants into divers Countries. The Citie of Staffranger, though it be under the obeiſſance of the Gouvernour of Bergin: yet it hath its Biſhop apart, who reſids there. The fourth Caſtle is that of Nidroſy, ſo called from the River Nidrus and of Roſa, the name of the Church commonly called Thruntheim, & heretofore Trondon, which was the Capitall Citie of Norway, but at this day is reduced into a Village, which in times paſt was the Arch-Epiſcopall Sea, and Metropolitan of the Kingdome. There is yet to be ſeene the Cathedrall Church, a teſtimoniall of the antiquitie, and ſumptuouſneſſe, by reaſon of the hugeneſſe, and the cunning workmanſhip of the ſtones upon the battlements thereof, that the like is ſcarcely ſeen throwout all Europe: the Fore-carved ſcrineworke of the Altar was burnt by fire Anno 1530, ſo that the loſſe ſuſtayned by that fire was eſteemed to be more worth than 7000 Crownes. The fifth, and fartheſt Fort Northward, as well of Norway, as of all Chriſtendome, is Wardhuys, lying in the little Iland Ward, which at this day is but ſmall and ruinons: being unprovided of fortifications, and having neither Caſtle nor Tower in it. There is in Norway a Lake called the Mos, in which at ſome times there is ſeene a Serpent of a huge greatneſſe: and when they ſee it, they conjecture thereby, that there will happen ſhortly after ſome ſtraing alteration in Norway. For anno 1522 it was ſeene very plainely above the water, being wrethed round, and as they could geſſe a farre off, it was 50 cubits long. After which ſight King Chriſtian was expulſed and driven out of his Kingdome. For the reſt, that part of the Coaſt of Norway, (which lyes Southweſt, whoſe depth could never be ſounded) is much troubled in the ſpringtime with Whales, againſt whoſe furie the Mariners take the oyle of Beavers ſtones, and mingle it with a little water, which is a very preſent remedie, againſt them for aſſoone as they caſt any of it into the Sea, theſe creatures drive downe into the botome of the Sea, and are ſeene no more. In the Sea lying upon this Coaſt, there is a wonderfull rich fiſherie, chiefly for Cod & Stokfiſh, which by the coldneſſe being ſtretched out and hung upon Powles, grow hard and are ſent out in great abundance from them into other Countries of Europe. From thence comes alſo coſtly skinnes, Tallow-butter, Leathers, Traine-oyles. melted pitch, oken Beames, Gall-nuts, Maſts for ſhipping, plankes and ſawne boords, which are ſould there with great benifite. The Inhabitants of this Countrie are of a good nature and diſpoſition, ſimple, loving Straingers, good houſekeepers, and charitable, and have no Theeves, nor piratz among them.

ZWETHLAND.

SUECIA, or Sweden, it ſeems ſo called from the Suions, and Sitons, which were a people of the Sweds, ſituated neere the German Ocean, & likely to be thoſe, whome in our age we call the Sweds, or Swecians onely by changing of ſome letters. It is an acient, & a very large Kingdome, being bounded Weſtward with Norway, Northward with Lapland and Bodia, Eaſtward with Finland, ſeparated by the Bodian Gulph, and is devided from Liefland by the Sea, and from Gothland Southward, ſituated under the longitude of 45 degrees, and of latitude 64 and 65. The aire is commonly very cleare, and conſequently all Swethland healtfull, for the aire is not ſo ſharpe, nor the cold ſo vehement and inſupportable, but that it is to be endured, though in ſome places, there be marſhes, and ſtanding pooles, which ſend forth a thick aire, from which many foggs, and miſts ariſe. It is well one of the fruitfulleſt Soiles of all the Northerne parts, and beareth abundance of Corne, & graine. There is alſo great ſtore of honey, coſtly furrs, ſilver, coper, lead, ſteele and yron; and neere vnto Slabourg, they finde pure ſilver, which is not mixed with any other mettle. It aboundeth alſo wonderfully in fiſh, taken in the Sea, in Lakes and Rivers: yet notwithſtanding in divers places it is full of craggie moũtaines, moiſt, & many mooriſh grounds, which makes ſome parts of this Countrie, yeeld leſſe Corne, and fewer fruits than in the others.

The Provinces of Swethland are divers, ſome Gothiſh as Eaſt-Gothia, whereof Lincopia in the Capitall, Weſt-Gothia, ſeparated from the Eaſterne part by the old Lake. Scare is one of the townes, where the Biſhop reſides. Southerne Gothea or Smalland, Tuichy, and Verenda, whereof Vexio is the chiefe Towne, Mering, and the Ile of Oeland, defended by the fortreſſe called Borgholm, the others are belonging to Norway, and Swethland, as Opland, whereof Vpſall, ſituated upon the River Sall, in the midſt of Swethland, is the Arch-Epiſcopall Sea, and the publicke Univerſitie. Stockholm is a Citie much commended, for the great trading that is in it, for the Kings Court being ſituated upon à marſh as Venice is, and built upon piles ſtruck into the muddie water. They goe thether out of the Eaſterne Sea, through the ſtreight, and deepe chanell of Meler, which is ſo broad at the entrance into it, that ſhips fraughted may come in, without ſtricking their ſailes. Upon the ſoutherne ſhore of Meler, the townes of Southmanie, Telgo, Strengenes a Biſhops Sea, and the Fort of Gripsholme lye, but Nericie Orebo is the chiefeſt Fortreſſe. Weſtward lye the Countrie of Weſtmanie, & the townes of Aroſia and Arboga ſtand upon the Lake. Beyond them more weſtward lyeth Weſterne Dalia, Eaſterne and Solies Dalia ſo called from the Lake Solion, which three Provinces, with the greateſt part of the Mountainous Provinces, are all under the charge of the Biſhop of Saros. In them there are minerall Veines, which reach Eaſtward, as farre as the Baltick Sea, and to the ſtreight of Helſinga, and Gioſſian, and turning Weſtward through Vermelland, right towards the Weſterne Ocean, without breaking off or diſcontinuing, out of which they digg ſome ſilver, copper, lead, yron ſteele and Brimſtone. Opland is ſituated Northward adjoyning upon Geſtricia, afterward followes Helſinga, and Middlepad, beyond them lyeth Northerne and Southerne Angermaine. From thence North-Bodia is divided in Weſt-Bodia and Eaſt-Bodia, which are Provinces of a great extenſion. In fine, more Northward lye Stricfinnia, Lappia, & Biarmia. The Bothick ſtreight, reacheth from the Baltick the Northward right towards Torona, and which paſſeth the Articke circle, ſeparated for the moſt part from theſe ancient Provinces, belonging to the Kingdome of the Sweds, and from Finland a moſt great Peninſula or Biland, whereof the points runne Southward by the Iles Alandes, & Albo, the Epiſcopall Sea, and by Vibourg Northward; So called becauſe it is a finer Countrie then Sweden, but indeed it is ſo named from the Finni, or Fenni, a potent nation, who dwelt here. Finland is devided into two parts, the Northerne and Southerne, upon which adjoyne Natagundia the upper, and the lower; Savoloſia and Tavaſtia ſpacious Countries in Finland. From thence beyond the Finnick Gulphe, lyes Corelia, where of Hexholm happly now Kexholm is the Capitall Citie, and Southward Wotichonia, where the mouth of the River Lovat is, which paſſeth by Novogard, called by the inhabitants Ny. Above Copora lyeth Ingria, having for its defence Iamagrod, and Solonſcia, which is called alſo Ivanogrod, having a Fortreſſe right over againſt Narve. There neighbouring Countries Southward, are the Provinces of Livonia of the Eſthons, which lye from Narve unto Revel and Pernovia. Allantacia, wherein is Narve, Wirie or Weſemberg, Wichia, which hath in it Habſal a Biſhoprick, and the Ile Dagen. The Sweds Rivers are Luſen and Dalecarly. The ſubjects are either of the Clergie, or Layetie of the Nobilitie, Gentrie or Yeaman. They have their Marſhalls, Chancelour, and Senatours of the Kingdome. The Swecian, Finlanders, Laplanders and Gothians, are valiant, curteous to Strangers, and charitable. From Iermanicus the firſt King, to that moſt wiſe and valliant King, of famons memorie, King Guſtavus Adolphus, there hath beene 41 Kings. Swethland hath one Arch-Biſhoprick, and 7 Biſhopricks, and 13 Dukedomes.

The Politique State
DENMARKE.

THe great and populous Kingdome of Dania, is commonly called Denmarke, as the Countrie, or tract of the Danes, of whome noe man, no not the Danes themſelves knowe their offſpring, unleſſe they derive it from Dan their firſt King. Some fetch it from the Dahæ, a people of Aſia, and from Marc, which ſignifieth not a limit, but a region. But Dudo of S. Quintin, an ancient Authour, as Mr. Camden reporteth, ſaith that they ſprang from the Danciones, or by changing of a letter the Dauciones in Scandia, and came to ſeate themſelves among the lands of the Cimbrians. Now it ſeemeth they tooke their name from waters, for this word Aha, in their language ſignifieth a River, and they themſelves call one an other Dane-man as people aquatick or wateriſh: becauſe all Denmarke is as it were Peninſula, as the Map demonſtrateth. Moreover, it is divide into 154 Governements, which they call Haerets, into which there are ſent skilfull Gouvernours, that underſtand well the Lawes of the Kingdome. It had wont to take a King by the Election of the Chiefe-men, rather than by ſucceſſion. The ancient manner of chooſing him was thus, that they ſhould meete in a plaine, where there lay great ſtones, which betokened the durance thereof, and the conſtant ſtabilitie of their Election. At this day they Crowne them at Hafnia, in our Ladies Church before the Altar, whether the Senatours of the Kingdome leade him, and beare before him his Kingly robes, and ornaments, a ſword, a Globe, and a Crowne. And theſe things are not given to any proper families, as they are almoſt every where. But every one is adorned, according to the dignitie, and worth of his qualitie. After that the King muſt ſweare, to keepe ſtricktly the Articles preſented unto him, ſuch as his predeceſſours have obſerved, & withall to defend the Chriſtian religion, and the rights, and cuſtomes of the Kingdome. After this the Biſhop of Roeschilde annointeth him, and the Crowne is ſet upon his head by the Senatours, who takes of them the oath of Allegane or fidelitie, if they have not taken it before. This done, the King makes ſome Gentlemē Knights in ſtriking them gently with his ſword, to wit, ſuch amonge the Nobles, and Chiefe-men of the Kingdome, as have done ſome worthy Acts, of honour and recognoiſſance. Such was the forme of the ancient Politicke State, & the Monarchie of the Danes; which never any nation was able to conquere, nor make them looſe their ancient privileges, and cuſtomes. Contrariewiſe the Danes, Swecians, & Norwegians have ſackt almoſt all Europe, & have likewiſe erected kingdomes, in manie Countries. For the Cimbrians voyages into Italie, are well knowne to all men, the Conqueſts which the Gothes made in Spaine, the eſtabliſhment of the kingdome of the Lombarts in Italie, what they gayned & how long the Normans ſtayed among the Gaults, the raiſing of the kingdome of Naples, & Sicile, the expedition of Godefrey upon the Freeſes againſt Charlemaigne, the variable carriages of the Engliſh among the Gaules, whereof they ſubdued ſome part. The Civill, and inteſtive warres of France, likewiſe how Canutus ſurnamed the great, held five kingdomes at once, that is to ſay: Denmarke, Sweden, Norway, England, and Normandie, beſides that, he was Sonne in Law to Henry the third Emperour, theſe verſes extant doe teſtifie.

Deſine mirari quos garrula laudius effert.
Græcia quos jactat Roma ſuperba Duces.
Danica non ulli veteram virtute ſecundum
Edidit, Hyberno terra propinqua freto
Facto mihi Magni, prepererunt inclyta nomen:
Quinque ſub Imperia Regna fuero meo.
Me ſibi delegit ſocerum, quâ tertius orbis
Arbiter, Henricus nomine ſceptra talit.
Iuſtitia præclarus eram, Regeſque potentes.
Subjectos docui legibus eſſe ſuis.

And what warrlike conqueſts and actions the Gothes, and Vandales achieved in ancient times, Harken what Mr. Joſeph Silveſter in his du Bartas hath briefly ſet downe in Engliſh verſe, which is this:

The warlike Gothe, which whileome iſſued forth.
From the cold froſen Ilands of the North.
Incampt by Viſtula: but the aire almoſt,
Being there as cold, as in the Balticke Coaſt;
He with victorius Armes Sclavonia gaines,
The Tranſilvanian, and Valachian plaines.
Thence flyeth to Thracia, and then leaving Greekes,
Greedie of ſpoile, foure times
  he bravely ſeekes,
To plucke from Rome then Mars
  his minion,

The plumes which shee from all the world had vvon,
Guided by Rhadagiuſe and Alaricke,
Bold Vindimarus and Theodoricke.
Thence flyeth to France, from vvhence expulſt, his Legions
Reſt ever ſince upon the Spaniſh Regions.

By whome, and divers Kings of the race of Oldenbourg, the warres ſucceeded happily, a brave warr-like Nation, populous, and very fortunate in the warres, which they undertooke either by Sea or by Land. The Senatours, and principall men of the kingdome had alwayes the libertie to chooſe their kings, and have ſtill, but many yeeres they have ſet upon the royall throne, and the kings eldeſt Sonne ſucceeded if they had not Lawfull & ſufficient cauſe to divert them from it. And therefore they never denyed their dutie, to their kings progenie and iſſue, and would not ſuffer the kingdome to be divided, if they were not forced thereunto by civill warrs. They ſend their yongeſt children, or bretheren into forrain Countries, ſeing they may not participate in the Gouvernment. Whence comes ſo manie Travaillers, there being ſuch a number of Gentrie, and of the Common people, that being not able to keepe ranke with the beſt of the Countrie, and others they deſire to travell and to purchaſe lands and livings more propper, and commodious for them then in their Native Countrie. For the Northerne people are apt for generation, and propagation, for their contracted heate, makes them hot ſpirited, quarrelſome and Fighters, great Trencher men & Drinkers (becauſe the ſharpneſſe of the cold ayre, cauſeth appetite) which being well digeſted, occaſioneth long life: for ſome of them live till they are 130, or 140 yeeres of age, and it is a ſigne of a long life, when as ſome of their kings have reigned over them 30, yea ſome 40 yeeres, and more.

The Politique State Of DENMARKE.

THere are five Orders and States in the Daniſh Common-weale. The firſt is of the Bloud royall: the ſecond the Nobilitie, but yee muſt knowe this, that among theſe Nobles & Gentrie, there are neither Earles, nor Barons, but all of them muſt ſhewe their Nobilitie by a long deſcent from their Predeceſſours. They beare their armes ſimple, and thinke it were a diſgrace to them to derogate from their Nobility by changing, or augmenting of them. There are yet ſome living, who are deſcended, from thoſe that were preſent at the treatie, made betweene Charlemagnie and Henningus king of Denmarke, upon the River Eidora, as the Vrent, and ſome others. Theſe enjoye their livings with ſuperiour, and inferiour juriſdiction, and have the liberty of the hunting, haire with haire, and feather with feather, as the Earles in Germanie have. Their livings are not held in fief throw out the kingdome, but in free tenure, and poſſeſſion, which comes to them by the right of ſucceſſion. All Caſtles, Lands and Goods, as well moveable as immoveable, left to them by their Fathers and Mothers are equally divided among the Bretheren, but the Siſters muſt receive them by a ſingular priviledge, in ſuch ſort nevertheleſſe, that the Brother muſt have two ſhares, and the Siſter but one. But their manſion houſes & Caſtles are kept by the heir-males. Many Lordſhips, or Tenements come not the primogeniture, but are divided. And ſome if they be deſcended of a good houſe, or are men of note, worth, and deſert, having the kings favour, they may be advanced by marriages, and attaine unto great riches. Among this degree of the Gentrie are the Senatours, or Counſellours of the Kingdome, which muſt not exceede the number of eight and thirtie: unto whome there is appointed by the king & the Realme, honeſt livings to mainteine them, and every one of them hath the Gouvernment of a Caſtle, or of a Fort, as long as his charge & dignitie continueth, for which he giveth nothing to the king, but onely is bound both in the time of peace, and warre, to keepe ſome horſemen, that they may be in a readineſſe whenſoever the king ſhall call for them, & that upou his owne charge, for the kings ſervice and his Countries. If they be ſent Ambaſſadours of the kingdome, they are provided with ſufficient maintenance from the Common purſe, to live honorably and as Princes Ambaſſadours, either in Court or elſewhere. For the king hath Lordſhips, which they call in the Daniſh language Verlehmmge, that is, Free-lands, and Benefices, which he beſtoweth on men deſerving both of himſelfe, and his kingdome, either during their lives, or for ſome terme of yeeres. For which alſo they are obliged, to keepe ſome horſemen, and pay yeerely into the publicke Treaſurie, ſome certaine peece of money, as an acknowledgement, and yet keepe the greateſt part thereof for their paines & ſervice. This kingdome alſo hath a good order, for they are forbidding by the king, to buy any lands or houſes of the Gentrie, that there may happen no diſputes, betweene the king, and the chiefe men of the kingdome, otherwiſe he might take that, which the Nobles are not willing to ſell, which cauſed the principall men of the kingdom, to make this excellent order, among themſelves: yet nevertheleſſe the king is permitted to make an exchange ſometimes with the Nobles, but the Nobles may not purchaſe any lands of the kings ſubjects: becauſe ſome Countrie-men hold their lands by inheritance, & as Free-holders, as hath beene ſaid

The names of the chiefe families of the NOBLE-MEN Of DENMARKE.

THe Lords of Kaas, Guldenſtern, of Munck, of Roſenkrans, of Grubb, of Walkendorp, of Brahe, of Schram, of Paſberg, of Harderberg, of Vlſtant, of Bing, of Below, of Wipfert, of Gue, of Sefelt, of Ranzow, of Schelen, de Freſe, of Sul, of Bilde, of Dreſſelbergh, of Greene, of Brockenhuſen, of Holke, of Troll, of Knutzen, of Biorn, of Seſtede, of Ienſen, of Steuge, of Mattieſſen, of Lunge, of Banner, of Luck, of Roſtorp, of Cruſen, of Foſſi, of Lindeman, of Swal, of Sant-beke, of Quitrow, of Lange, of Galſchut, of Glanbeke, of Crabb, of Marizer, of Kragg, of Ashel, of Beck, of Ru-of Ruthed, of Nagel, of Witfeld, of Split, of Ofren, of Appelgard, of Iuenam, of Podeſſen, of Reuter, of Podebuſſen, which heretofore were Barons, deſcended of the Duchie of Pomerania, where that familie continueth ſtill: of Vren, whoſe progenitours lived in the time of Charlemagnie, of Blick, of Gall, of Wogerſen, of Baſſi, of Solle, of Daae, of Pax, of Paſſelick, of Wenſterman, of Hoken, of Lindenow, of Bille, of Ruten, of Hundermark, of Heiderſtroper, of Wolde, of Papenheim, of Spar, of Falſter, of Norbu, of Worm, of Bilde, of Boockholt of Budde, of Suuaben, of Santbarch, of Gram, of Luken, of Vhrup, of Spegel, of Bammel-berg, of Roſenſpar, of Duvie, of Hube, of Schawgard, of Muſt, of Gris, of Falck, of Brune, of Laxman, of Dure, of Baggen, of Norman, of Goſſe, of Matre, of Roſengard, of Totten, of Rannow, of Krumpen.

The Lord grand-Maſter is choſen out of this Nobilitie, a State like to the Maire of the Pallace of France. He for the moſt part keepes his reſidency at Hafnie, as Vicar, or the Kings Lieutenant, which manageth reſolveth and diſpatcheth the kings affaires. At this day the eldeſt of the three Ranſowes are adorned with it. Next him the Lord Mareſchall, taketh care both in peace, and warre, of all things belonging to the militaire affaires. The Admirall he ſeeth to the building of ſhipping, for the repairing of the old, and hath every yeare the ordering of the Sea affaires; he hath under him a Vice-Admirall, and every of the Kings ſhips hath a Captaine, which is deſcended from a Knight. There is alſo a Chancellour of the Kingdome, unto whome they appeale from all the Provinces, and Iles, and from him to the King and his Councell if neede require. All the Provinces, or Shires are diſtributed into Haerrets, or Gouvernments under which there are many Hundreds and Pariſhes. Thoſe which goe to Law plead firſt their right, among themſelves, but if they cannot agree, they may appeale afterward to the Judge of this Province, from him to the Chancellour, and from the Chancellour, to the king and the Senatours, who give thereupon their definitive ſentence. The Danes have a certaine written Law, made by Valdemarus the firſt, aſſiſted by the Biſhops, and chiefe men of the Countrie, much like unto the Law of Nature, and differeth not much from the Roman Law. And is made to the end that by the vigor hereof, ſuites may not be defered too long, but may be the ſooner diſpatched, and the ſentence more ſpeedely executed. If the firſt Judges have given an unjuſt ſentence, then they are condemned to pay a fine of halfe their goods, where of the king is to have the one halfe, and the partie, interreſſed or wronged the other halfe. It is thought that Valdemarus the firſt joyned the Biſhops to the Senatours, which Chriſternus the third, tooke from them againe for certaines cauſes of rebellion.

The kings Chancellour followeth ordinarily the Court, and hath ſeven or eight aſſiſtants Noble-men, Secretaires and Clarkes, joyned in commiſſion with him, & ſometimes the King himſelfe is preſent at the handling of affaires. But if any weighty matters of importance happen, as touch either peace or warre, or the making of aliances or confederations, with forraine Princes, or for the keeping, and defending of the bounds and limits of the Kingdome, the King cauſeth his Councell to meete, and it is not Lawfull for the King to impoſe any new taxations upon the Realme, and upon the huſband-men belonging to the gentrie without the ſpeciall conſent of the Senatours, or chiefe men of the Kingdome.

There is a ſuper Indendant Generall for the Treaſurie, who receiveth the revenues of the Kingdome, either belonging to the Caſtles, or other Lordſhips, and for the taking of toles, and cuſtomes by Sea & by Land. He looketh alſo to the Accounts, & informeth himſelfe of all things, and giveth his acquitance to ſuch as bring up their moneys. He hath likewiſe under him two Commiſſaries Noble men, and many Clarks among the people, for which he hath a good entertainment.

The fourth degree of State is the Clergie, among whome there are ſeven Biſhops, as the Arch-Biſhop of Londen, the Biſhops of Roſchild, of Ottenſche, of Rip, of Vibourg, of Arhuſen, and of Sleſwik, which have alſo Canons under them. They receive the tenths, which in ſundry Provinces are diverſly given: For the Biſhops receive the halfe of the tenths, & the King receiveth the other halfe, out of which the Canons, and Miniſters have their parts, and ſhare thereof, alſo ſome part thereof is employed in the building, & reparation of Churches. As for the Papall right, the nominations, and proviſions of the Prelates, and Biſhops at all times have heitherto beene given by the King, as they are at this day in France, as appeareth by the anſwere of Valdemarus the firſt King. And as Charles the fifth, was much commended for prohibiting, and enacting, that no Eccleſiaſticall perſon ſhould buy any immoveable goods, without the Princes conſent: ſo Chriſternus the 3. ordained the ſame no leſſe wiſely, that the Clergie ſhould ſell nothing, without the kings expreſſe command. For the reſt Church men, were very well provided for by Chriſternus the third of bleſſed memorie, and many particular Schooles were erected by him in divers places, as two alſo in the Ile, where there is alſo a printing houſe. The whole kingdome hath but one Univerſity, which is at Hafny, founded & eſtabliſhed by Chiſternus the firſt by the permiſſion of Pope Sextus anno 1478, which Fredrick the ſecond, who though he was for ſeven yeeres together hindred by Swethiſh warrs, encreaſed the maintenance & enriched it with 60000 dallers yeerely, for the bringing up and inſtruction of the youth of the Countrie.

The fourth degree are Burgeſſes, and Marchants, which dwell in Townes, and Bourroughs. Theſe have their priviledges peculiar to themſelves, which they enjoy, & which are given them as their owne Lands, and woods limited them. They traficke alſo by Sea, & by land through all the parts of Europe, out of theſe and from the huſband-mens children are choſen the Biſhops, Cannons, Paſtours and the Magiſtrates of the Townes, Clarkes of the Caſtles, and Fortreſſes, the Maſters and Stier-men of ſhipping, out of which alſo ſome men are appointed for the taking up of Toles. Theſe judge the leaſt Cauſes, but for the moſt part have a Preſident out of the Gentrie.

The fifth order is the Countrie-men, which are of 2 ſorts, the firſt are called Freibunden, that is, Freeholders: theſe enjoy their living by inheritance, but give ſome ſmall matter yeerely. They trade alſo, and have the liberty of fiſhing. They are not taxed with ſervitude, or bondage, neither pay they any contribution without the conſent, of the Senatours, and Connſellours of the kingdome. The other ſort are ſuch, which poſſeſſe their good not hereditaire, but farme them of the king, and the Gentrie, or of the Clergie, & are bound to doe ſome homages to their Lords, as they make their conditions, & agree with the Lord from whome they hold their livings.

And thus much have I ſpoken of the Policie of Denmarke in generall, whence it appeareth, that it hath beene a well ordered State. That the Nobility, and Gentrie have alwaies had the libertie, to chooſe a king: nevertheleſſe of a royall familly, whence this good redounded unto them, that the Danes have not been much troubled with ſeditions, unleſſe with ſome Stirrs, a roſen betweene the kings bretheren, or his children, which was quickly appeaſed by the interpoſition of ſome of the Nobility, eſpecially ſeing that the kings children doe not take a part of the kingdome. Beſides that, becauſe they have none but onely Gentrie, they are ignorant of the names, and titles of Dukes, Earles, Barons, &c. ſo that they can not grow ſo rich that they dare oppoſe themſelves againſt the blood royall, becauſe the paternall inheritances, are alwayes divided betweene the Sonnes, and the Daughters. To conclude the higheſt degree among them, is the order of the Golden Knights ſo called, becauſe of the Ornaments, which are given them: but this is not given to none, but ſuch as have deſerved well of the king, and of the State, either in the times of peace or of warre. Thus you ſee the Danes have a flouriſhing State, which may eaſely defend it ſelfe from Strangers, ſeing, they are ſo well united with their king, as their naturall Prince, they are able to reſiſt forraine Ennemies, both by Sea, and by Land. At this day Chriſtian the fourth governeth, whome God preſerve with his Councill, and all thoſe of his State.

DENMARKE.

DENMARKE, is joyned onely to the firme-land by two points. It is bounded on the west with the German Ocean, on the East with the Baltick Sea, Northward it hath Morway and Sweden, and on the Southside Holsatia, Mechelhourg, and Pomerania. It is divided into manie Iles, separated much one from another. The temperature of the aire, & the wholesomnesse thereof, as John Colding saith, recreateth, & keepeth the inhabitants in health. The fertilitie of the Soile nourisheth them, the sweete melodie, of the Birds rejoyceth them, the greene Forests, and woods content them, in which innumerable Heards of Swine, running up & downe in the woods are fed, their fills with mast, and Akornes, which fall from the great Oken, and also from the Beech-trees in abundance. And likewise pasture grounds for the feeding of Oxen, whereof there is such a multitude, that there are sent every yeere above 50000 into Germanie, besides their other commodities of Corne, Fish, Tallow, equipage for shiping: Armes, Oxhides, Buck-skins, Wainscot, Firrewood, Filbeards, & other things, which are transported out of Denmarke, into many parts of Europe; so that Nature hath denied them nothing, which is necessary for the maintenance of humaine life. This Countrie at this day having many armes, & creeks of the Sea running into it, is devided into many parts. The principall whereof are Iuitland, Fionia or Fuinland, See-land, and Scandia, besides the adjacent Iles, neere unto every one of these parts.

Some would have this Iuitland to be called Gothland, heretofore the inhabitation of the ancient Goths, which is so named by Historians, and Geographers. The Cimbricke Chersonesse, or the Peninsula, or Biland of the Cimbrians, and is devided into two parts, the Southerne and Northerne. This Cimbrian Chersonesse is in length 120 miles, and in breadth 80, containing 18 Cities, 4 Bishop Sees, and 20 royall Castles, which is seene in the second Map. The Southerne part heretofore called North Albingia, conteineth the Duchie of Sleswicke, to which also may be added the Duchie of Holst. The Ile of Zeeland, called also Sialand is the greatest in all Denmarke, containing in length 64 miles, and in breadth 52. It was anciently called Codonnonia by Mela, having in it seven strong Castles belonging to the King, and about 13 Cities. Among the townes Haffen, or Hafnia, is the Kings seate, and is also called by the Germans Copenhagen, it is the chiefe Citie of all Denmark, much cõmended for the greatnesse, riches, and commodiousnesse of the haven, and for the depth, and object of the Ile, which they terme Ammager, yeelding safe entrance to Marriners. The beginnings of this Citie were but small. For Absolon Huyd, Arch-Bishop of Londen, built first of all a Fort in this place against the Pyrats, which he called by his name Axelhouse. This place began to be inhabited partly by Fishers, and partly by Marchants, for the commodiousnesse thereof, and thereof was called Kiobmans Haffen, that is, the Marchants haven: these things hapned about the yeere 1165. There is in this place a famous Universitie, the foundation whereof Ericus Pomeranus was the first, that procured it of Martin the fifth Pope, and which Christiernus of Oldenbourg finished, by the permishon of Pope Sixtus, and King Christiernus the third restored it, being falne and decayed by the manie and continuall warrs, conferring upon it great revenues, in such sort, that it mainteineth not onely twelve Professours, and Doctors of the Chaire, but also a great number of poore Schollars, which revenues Fredericus the II. encreased much. From this Universitie there are sent a continuall harvest of learned men, & famous Pastours, as wel into the Kingdome of Denmark, as into Norway. Above Hafnia lyeth Helsinura or Elsineur, standing by the Sea-side neere unto the Castle royall of Croneburgh, and on the other side of the Sea, the Castle of Hillingbourg, with a small Village so named. Here Zeland, and Scandia come so neere together with their Capes, that there is but a space of Sea betweene them called the Sound, not passing three miles over. Here all Vessels, which are bound Eastward are forced to passe betweene these two Castles, and to pay tole to the King. And because these Castles stand on both sides so neere one an other, the King by his shipping, when it pleaseth him may stop the passage of shipping, and hinder them from passing any further. It happens oftentimes that in one day you may see 200 saile of ships come thether, yea sometimes three, from divers parts of Europe. There lyes also in this part Roeschild, heretofore the Episcopall see, where is seene yet to this day faire tombes of many Kings, and Dukes. But now it is reduced to a poore estate: because the Citizens of the other townes, proud of their fortifications forget themselves, and ordinarily hoise up their sailes above their power and abilitie. Now Zeland hath under it the Iles Ammagrio, Huen, otherwise called Ween, and Moone land, in which stand the towne of Stegow, and manie others. Zeland hath one onely Bishoprick, the Pastour whereof holdeth his residence at Roeschild.

Scandia is as famous a Countrie, as any is in all Denmarke for largnesse, and riches: it joyneth upon Sweden. This Scandia is encompassed with the Sea on all sides, saving on that part, where there is a nooke of land, which reacheth Northward, and there it windes towards the East, and joyneth with Swethland. But betweene there are huge thick woods, and craggie rocks, that it is so hard travelling out of Scandia into Gothia part of Sweden, that there is lesse difficulty in passing it by Sea. It is a Countrie, which will give place to none, for the mildnesse of the aire, the goodnesse of the Soile, the commoditie of the haven and trading, the riches brought into it out of the Sea, the fisherie in Lakes & Rivers, the hunting of wild beasts, the inexhausible veines, and Mines of gold, silver, copper, lead, and the number of the townes, & politicke ordinances, whence it tooke the name saith Munster. This Province was heretofore divided into two Duchies, that is to say Hallandia, and Blescida, which conteineth now 23 Gouvernments, & 15 Townes. The chiefe Citie is Londen, where the Arch-Bishop of the kingdome resideth, whose power in times past was so great, that he durst threaten the King with warre, but now it is reduced into order as other Bishopricks, which are but seven in the whole kingdome of Denmarke. When, how, or of whome it was founded, we doe not read in the Histories. For those that imagine it was built by the English, seeme to be led that way onely by the name of the place, being all one with the capitall Citie of England: for the Germans call both the one, and the other Londen. The Danes call theirs in their owne language Lund, which in the Danish tongue signifieth a Forest, or a Wood. There is also the Citie of Malmoge, whom some call Elbogen, famous for the trafick, and the chiefest in the whole Countrie, because of the faires, and the ordinarie commerce, which those of this Countrie have there. In Hallandia standeth the fort Warbourg, built upon the top of a very high mountaine, which the Swedens tooke in 1565, and laid a garnison in it. But Daniel Ranzow besciged, and blockt it up, and layd such hard seige unto it, by the commannd of Fredrick the second King of Denmarke, that at laſt it was forced to yeeld after his death, whoſe head was ſhot of with a Canon ſhot from the Fort of the beſeiged Anno 1569 a perſonage much commended for his learning, and militarie profeſſion. For he being appointed by King Fredrick the ſecond of Denmarke, Generall of the warres againſt the Swetheans, a little before his death in the field of Aſtorfheyd, neere unto Falkenberg, having but 4000 men, he put to flight 26 thouſand. This Countrie hath neighbouring upon them the Iles of Landoe, Hannoe, & Bornholme, a notable Ile divided into foure Gouvernments conteyning three townes, and a Caſtle. In Gothland, where ſtands the ancient Mercate Towne of Wisbich, now leſſe peopled, and leſſe wealthy (though heretofore it hath flouriſhed) becauſe the trading in it, is now carried to other townes. Beſide, Wheate, Butter, Cheeſe, & diverſe of furrs, it beareth exceeding high fir-trees, of which there are manie woods, where with they make maſts for ſhips and it yeelds alſo ſtones for building, & lime for the faſtning of them together. Fredrick the ſecond, was the firſt that conſtituted a Biſhopricke in this Ile, and ordained liberall maintenance for it by a perpetuall ſucceſſion from others. The Rivers of Denmarke are Egidora, commonly called the Eyder. It ſeparateth the Freezes from the Ditmarchians, and then diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Engliſh Sea, & Store full of fiſh, laden with Veſſels, which ſpringing out of the bottome of Holſatia, accommodateth manie townes, and the faire & ſumptuous houſe of the Ranſous Bredenberg, and then with others runneth into the Elve. The Balticke Sea, which wee made before the limit of the Kingdome of Denmarke Eaſtward, is called at this day Belts of Baltheus, which is a Belt or Cincture of warre; becauſe it roundeth, and embraceth the one and the other Peninſulas or Bilands. It ſeemes that Tacitus calleth it Slow, or Drowſie, from the effect ſaith Ortelius, becauſe it is not troubled & toſſed as other Seas are, for you ſhall ſcarcely ſee it ebbe and flowe, as thoſe affirme, who oftentimes have ſailed upon it, but the motion and flowings thereof, goe commonly from the Eaſt to Weſtward. Reaching further, it devideth it ſelfe into two armes: on the left hand lyeth that ſide which betweene Sweden and Bodia, and the other betweene Finland and Livonia: which is called the Finnick Sea.

Hilfrugore, lying upon the ſtreight of the Sound, hath a royall Caſtle upon it, called Cronebourg, which ſtandeth there for the defence of the furtheſt part of the Ile of Zeland. Fredrick the ſecond King of Denmarke layde the foundations of this Caſtle within the Sea, with an infinite charge, ſinking into the botome of the water a great number of huge ſtones, & great flints, locked together with great oken beames, well faſtned together with ſuch cunning, skill, and artifiſe, that the violent beating & raging of the Sea againſt them, how great ſtormes of wind, thunder and lightning, ſoever there come, they ſtand firme, and the billowes breake againſt theſe hard materiales. All the workmanſhip of this Caſtle is wrought with admirable Symmetrie and is within adorned with Conclaves, Chambers, brave Galleries, all hung with Tappiſtrie, which repreſent in order all the Kings of Denmarke. The rooſes are couvered with plates of Copper, and the walles poliſhed with free-ſtones. In the Citie of Londen, there is a clock made with great art, which they call S. Lawrances, ſet in the lower part of the Church, where is ſeene a table faſtned to the wall, drawne out by a number of circles of divers coulours, wherein evidently is ſhowne by ſignes, and markes, the yeere, the month, the weeke, every day & howre throughout the whole yeere, and the moveable feaſts and certaine: beſides that, it ſhoweth the motion of the lights, the Sunne and the Moone, and what place of the Zodiaque they are in every day, with their houſes the one oppoſite to the other. Now this is for the outward part, but within it, al things are carried about with certaine engins, and turning wheeles made expreſſe thereunto, & for a ſurplus by an artificiall cunning, whenſoever the clock ſtriketh, there are two Statures comes out upon this table, repreſenting two Knights, armed de Cap en pied, which tilt, and runne one againſt an other as often, as the great clock which is hung in the ſteeple, ſtriketh. And which is more admirable, in the midſt of this table there is ſet upon a throne the picture of the Virgin Marie, holding a babe in her boſom, on both ſides of her are two gates, and under her feete a Theater in the forme of a Demy Circle, the Arch whereof turneth towards the Beholders. Within there is alſo an Engine, with the picturs of the three wiſe men of the Eaſt, every of them having his Page; in turning of this Engine, which is done at the pleaſure of him that hath charge over it, theſe Images advance themſelves, before whome there comes out a Herault, with a naced ſword in his hand, & threatning makes a thruſt at the left gate. At the opening whereof the parties comes forth, when 2 trumpets ſound tantara: that wiſe man which cometh out firſt, walketh up and downe in a ſtately and magnificent manner upon the Theater; then comming to the Virgin Marie, he falleth downe in a moſt reverend manner, to adore her, which the others likewiſe doe. Their Pages ſtirre not, neither ſhew any kinde of honour or reverence; the laſt puts too the right gate, which giveth a clap eaſie to be heard by the Spectatours. The naturall inhabitants of Denmarke uſe their own language, as the Sweds & Norwegians doe, in ſuch ſort, that theſe neighbouring people doe not underſtand one another. The Daniſh tongue differeth not much from that of Saxonie: neither doe the Saxons underſtand the Danes, nor the Danes the Saxons, unleſſe they converſe ſome time one with another.

FIONIA or Fuynen, next after Zeland, taketh the ſecond place among all the Iles of the Codannian Gulphs, and is ſo called; becauſe of the paſſing beautie, fineneſſe, and pleaſant ſituation thereof. It is ſeparated from the continent of Denmarke by a narrow ſtreight, named Middlefar Sund, which one would thinke was joyned to the maine land. And as it boundeth upon Jutland weſtward, and is right over againſt Zeland Eaſtward; ſo it is thought, it lyeth in the very heart, or midſt of Denmarke, reaching 12 miles in length, and foure in breadth. The Soile is ſo rich in Corne, eſpecially in Rye, and Barly, that it ſufficeth not onely the Country it ſelfe, but alſo tranſport it into forraine Countries, which it yeeldeth without dunging, whence it hapneth as Munſter ſaith, that this is the cauſe why there is ſuch a vile ſmell, & ſtinke in the townes, and villages, that they carry not forth their muckheaps, & dung to fatten their lands. Beſides, it is exceeding rich in fiſh, & for cattaile they have great ſtore, & ſuch a breede of Horſes, & Cowes, that they ſend them forth by troupes, and heards into Germanie. Neither is there wanting in this Ile any Woods, Foreſts, & Chaſes for Red-deere, Harts, Fallow-deere, Hares, and Foxes. Almoſt in the midſt of this Ile, ſtandeth the capitall Citie Otonia, commonly called Ottenſche, a Biſhops ſea, founded (as many ſay) by Otho the firſt, much about the time, when as he converted Herald King of Denmarke to the Chriſtian Religion. It is a place of no ſmall traficke, in which upon twelfth-day as well the Ilanders, as the chiefe Gentrie meete in great numbers, as they uſually doe likewiſe at Kylon in Holſatia. Fuynen is divided into 24 Gouvernments, having 16 townes in it, and ſix royall Forts or Caſtles. The other towns lye round about Ottenſche, wch ſtandeth as it were in t' very Center, & are almoſt of an equall diſtance from it, and lye ſo upon the Sea-coaſt, that becauſe of the commodiouſneſſe of the parts, and havens, they doe not onely traffick into the Balticke Sea, but alſo trade, and ſend their commodities into Sweden, Norway, Germanie, and the Low-Countries. Among which are reckonned Nieburch, Sienburch, Faborch, Aſſens, Bogens, Middlefart, & Ketteminde. The chiefe royall Forts, or Caſtles, are Neuburch, Hagenſchow, Hinſgagel, Eſchebourg, & the Court Rugard. There are alſo in this Ile manie Villages, and Gentlemens houſes, for the ſweeteneſſe of the aire, and the fruitfulneſſe of the ſoile, drawes many gentlemen thether. The Sea furniſheth them with an incredible number of fiſh, ſo that the cods of their nets are ſometimes ſo full, that they can ſcarcely ſtirre their oares, or drawe them up, that they almoſt need no nets, ſeing they may take enough with their hands. Thoſe that dwell along by the Sea-coaſt, beſides the Husband-men, betake themſelves to fiſhing, and reape no ſmall profite by it. In this Iland there are ſome famous places, where Battailes have beene fought, which alſo hath hapned in our dayes: for upon Ochſenbergh, or hill, not farre from the Caſtle of Hagenſchouw, upon the 11 of June, Anno 1530 Lord John Ranzouw Knight, and Generall for Chriſtian the third, King of Denmarke overthrew in a bloudie Battaile Chriſtopher of Oldenbourg, in which defeate two Earles were ſlaine, name by the Earle of Hagh, and the Earle of Tecklenburgh, whoſe bodies were afterward digged out of their graves, and carried to Ottenſche, and buryed in Canutos Church. About the ſame time, there were cut off a great many peſants upon a hill called Fauſchburgh, lying but a mile from Aſcens. There are in the Citie of Ottenſche two faire Churches, whereof the one was dedicated to Saint Canutus, and the other to Saint Francis, in which King John anno 1513 and his Son Chriſtian, after he had beene baniſhed and lived in exile 37 yeers, was buryed in the yeer of our redemption 1559. Neere unto the firſt there is a large, and a ſpacious Mercate place, in which the King of Denmarke an. 1580 renewed the ancient confederation of his Predeceſſours, with the Dukes of Holſatia, and Sleſwick. They report alſo, that in Odenſche the Mother of Chriſtian the ſecond, out devotion ſet upon the Altar in the Gray-Fryers Church, a moſt curious workmanſhip in wood, wrought and carved with ſuch cunning, that the like is not to be ſeene in all Europe. Wee will now come to the other Ilands, which are nintie in all, lying Southward, & for the moſt part habitable, whereof the chifeſt are thoſe which lye oppoſite to the Vandallian townes, & are theſe; Langeland, Lauwland, Falſtria, Aria, Alſa, Toſinga, Aroe. Langeland is ſeven German miles in length. The towne of Rudkepinga, and one of the Kings Caſtles, called Trankera ſtand in it, & it hath many Villages, Pariſhes, and Gentlemens houſes beſides. Lauwland is ſeparated by the ſtreight of Groneſund from Zeeland, & from Falſtria by a ſmall arme of the Sea. This Ile aboundeth in Wheate, & Haſſel-nuts, ſo that they lade whole ſhips of them to tranſport them out of the Countrie. It hath in it five townes, Niſtadt, Naſco, Togrop, Ritbus, and Maribus, alſo ſome royall Caſtles, Gentlemens houſes, Pariſhes and manie Villages. Falſtria is about 4 German miles long, in which there lye the townes of Stubecopen, and Nicopen, which they tearme the Daniſh Naples, and the new Citie of Denmarke, becauſe of the faireneſſe and the Gentileneſſe of the place. Out of this Iland, neere unto one of the Kings houſes, there is a common paſſage ſeven miles over to Warnemund in Germanie, out of which there is tranſported every yeere great ſtore of Wheate, to ſerve their neighbouring Countries. The Iland Aria a mile and a halfe diſtant from Elyſia is couvered with woods, where there is good game for hunting. It hath in it three Pariſh Churches ſome Gentlemens houſes, with the towne and the Caſtle of Koping, and that and Elyſia belong both to the Dukedome of Sleſwick. Elyſia, Alſa, or Alſen is an Iland reaſonable great, and is foure miles in length, & two in breadth, and is ſeparaten from Sleſwick but by a little ſpace, and lyeth right over againſt Flensburger-wyck, known firſt by the habitation of the Engliſh in that Gulphe. In Alſen or Elyſia ſtandeth the town of Sunburgh, with a Caſtle of the ſame name, with ſome others, as Norborch, Oſterholm, Die Holle, Gammelgard. It hath 13 populous Pariſhes in it, which can draw ſome thouſands of armed men into the field. It is full of woods, having good ſtore of Red-deere in them, and divers other wild beaſts. The Sea alſo, and the freſh water Rivers abound in fiſh, there is paſture ground & Cattail, & beareth good Crops of Rye. Taſſinga, or rather Toſſinga, is accounted one of the principall Ilands lying neere unto Swyne-burgh in Fuynen, it is a mile long: wherein, beſide ſome Pariſhes ſtandeth the houſe of Kettorp, belonging to the Roſen-crantzen, and Rantzouwians. From this Iland and the towne of Aſcens, they count it two miles over into Iutland, which is a moſt daungerous paſſage, eſpecially, when the winde is contrarie and that the Sea is much troubled: for then out of the Easterne Sea, there floweth in such a violent and a swift Torrent betweene the Ilands as it were to seeke a passage betwixt them, that the Sea is tossed up and down with exceeding high surges and waves, which whireling about manie Shippers have beene taken in them, and could not escape without great daunger, yea oftentimes many ships and boats have beene swallowed up and have perished in them. Witnesse the Bishop of Slesswick, who Anno 1170 was drownd on the further side of this streight, with a great number of his familie, and being fisht a long time after, was buryed in the Monastery of Forence in Zeeland, likewise An. 1513 King John of Denmarke escaped hardly from being drownd in going over into Jutland, to doe justice and to decide some controversies betweene the Inhabitants, who passing over the Baltick Sea, there rose on a Sudden such a tempest, that his ship Royall was so tossed up & downe by the contrarieneſse of the winde and the storme, that he had much adoe to escape: so that being arrived at Nibourg, comming out of his ship, & standing upon the bridge, & looking into the Sea, as prognosticating his death, (for he dyed within a moneth after) said, adieu Baltick Sea, adieu, thou hast exercised thy crueltie upon me to day, & wilt not hence forward suffer us to passe thee any more. And though all ships were wont to saile commodiously betweene Scandia and Zeeland through the streight of the Sound, yet it often happens, that the least boates, which are in lesse danger of the Iles, parls and shelves, parting from Holsatia, Lubec, and other neigbouring Countries, take their course through this Sea, for which they are forced to pay customes and toules at Nibourg. But before I passe from the Baltick Sea, I will not passe over in silence, a remarkeable thing, which I finde in the historie of our age, that in the furthest part of Scandia, or the Baltick Sea, where the Codannian Gulph endeth, neere unto Elbogen, situated right over against Hafnie the Metropolitan Citie of Denmarke a Sea-monster was found representing the shape of a Monke, with a bauld pate, a clouniſh face, and a sarphi hanging downe his shoulders like a Fryers hood, was cast upō this shoare by the violence of a huge storme, he was dumbe and spake not, as all other Seamonsters doe not, making onely a noise with lamentations and deepe sighs, and lived not passing three dayes whereof rhe lively picture, which is manifest, was sent from the King of Denmarke to Charles the fifth, being then in Spaine, and sent by a Noble man. Moreover, at this day there is to be seene at Swartwall a Village neere unto the Briell in Holland, a stuffed skin of such a Sea-monster which hangeth up in the Church. Aroe lyeth at the Entrance into the Duchie of Slesswick, where they take shipping or boate in Fuynen to passe over the Arsensian, or Ottenseaish bosome or Gulfe unto the Towne of Ascens, and containeth foure well inhabited Villages: the other Iles are these; Romso, Endelo, Fenno, Boko, Brando, Toroe, Aghernis, Hellenis, Jordo, Birckholme. Now to conclude, I will adde hereunto the description of the Ile Huena, lying upon the most famous streight of Denmarke, commonly called Oersound, in which the Castle of Vraniburg standeth, where there is many curious Mathematicall Instruments. In the midst of this Ile, where the Castle is situated and lyeth upon the Elevation of the Pole 54 degrees and a halfe, and is about 37 parts from the West. The circuit where of is eight thousand, one hundred and sixtie great paces, reckoning every pace at five foote, making two reasonable German miles in Compasse. It lyeth in the most famous streight of all the Kingdome through which a great number of Vessels, passe out of the Easterne Sea into the Westerne, which is a most pleasing prospect to see so many ships passe too and fro, and the sight of the adjacent townes is no lesse delightfull, as having to the Southwestward Hafny or Coppenhaghen in Zeeland lying within three miles of it (Helsingor where the ships that passe through, must pay toule) and the Castle of Cronenburgh, Northwestward by two miles distant from it, as also Helsingborg, Northward upon the Coast of Scandia, where also Lands-kroon lyeth but a mile from it. Eastward lyeth Lunda, which though it be no towne, yet it is seene foure miles of. Malmogia is five miles from it; and albeit this Ile is not very great: yet the meanest place in it lyeth not unmanured and wast, for it is very rich in Corne, and Cattaile. There are also good store of Red-deere, Hares, Connies & Partridges in abundance, & lyeth very commodious for fishing. There is in it a Grove of Hasle-trees, in the kernells of which nuts, there was never found any wormes, neither was there ever any Ratts seene in this Iland. It had in it in former times foure Castles, the names whereof remaine there yet unto this day, as Syndeburg, which stood upon the South-coast, Northburg upon the Northcoast, Karhecidia North-Eastward, and Hamera just Eastward. The foundations of these Castles are yet to be seene though ruinous. And though this Iland lyeth in the midst of the brackish Sea, yet it sendeth fort many Fountaines, & Spring-heads of fresh water. Among the rest there is a spring, that in the hardest frost that is, though the winter be never so colde the water thereof never freeses, which is a rare and a strainge thing in these fridged Countries.

DENMARKE,

Contayning the Duchies of Slesvvick, and Holsatia or Holst.

ITUTLAND lying Southward, is called by the Ancients North-Albingie, becauſe it is ſeparated from Germanie Northward, by the river Elve, which watereth the greateſt part of theſe Countries, and containe the two Dukedomes of Sleſwicke, and Holſt. The Duchie of Sleſwick deriveth its name from the Capitall Citie, an ancient towne, for trading called Sleſwick. Heretofore this Country was named the Duchie of Jutland, whome Valdemarus the Nephew of Abel, King of Denmarke, held in feif from King Henry, about the yeere of our redemption 1280. Afterward, the heire-males of the Kings & Dukes failing the Duchie of Sleſwick, being revnited to the Crowne, Queene Margaret having three Kingdomes, graunted this Duchie to Gerald Count of Holſatia, upon this condition that he ſhould hold it by right of feif from the Crown. And becauſe the townes of this Duchie, enjoyed the ſame priviledges with Denmarke, they uſe the like Law as they doe: for the ſubjects may appeale by a ſpeciall priviledge from the judgement of the Magiſtrates, where they live, to the Prince and his Councellours but no farther. Now the Generall Gouvernement of theſe two Duchies belongeth to the Kings of Denmark, & to Adolph Duke of Holſt, and goeth alternatively to the one and the other, therefore when it commeth to the King, it is Gouverned by the Lord Henry Rantſow, the Kings Lieutenant, and Deputie for his Majeſtie. The chiefe Citie is Sleſwick, which is originally a German name; in regard of the ſituation thereof, which ſtandeth upon the River Slie, in the boſome of the Balticke Sea, for Wicke ſignifieth a towne, and a crooked Gulph of the Sea, and among the ancient Saxons a Bourrough. This Citie ſtandeth very commodious for traficke, becauſe of the good haven, which it hath. For in times paſt Merchandizes were tranſported by ſhipping out of Belgia, Britanie, Gaule, and Spayne into the mouth of the River of Eydera in Livonia, which being carried up the River Threana to Hollingſtadium, were eaſely brought to Sleſwick, & from thence over the Eaſterne Sea into the Kingdomes of Denmarke, Norway, and Sweden, alſo into Livonia, Ruſſia, Pruſſia, & into other Provinces in Almagnie, lying upon the Baltick Sea: but now through the variety of Fortune, the magnificencie thereof is decayed. Neere unto this place lyeth the ſtrong Caſtle of Gothorpe to which they give a great deale of Tole, and it hath beene obſerved, that in ſome yeeres there hath paſſed by it 50 thouſand Oxen out of Denmarke into Germanie, and the low Countries, paying the cuſtome of head-money. In this Duchie lyeth alſo Flensbourg, a notable towne. This Citie is ſituated betweene very high Mountaines, and upon the Coaſt of the Eaſterne Sea, with a haven reaching into it, with ſuch accommodation, depth, and ſafetie, that almoſt every Burgeſſe may at his doore lade and unlade his goods. There lye alſo in this Countrie the places of Huſſena, and of Haderſlebie. There is but one Biſhoprick in Sleſwick, two Chapiters, and three Monaſteries, but divers Caſtles belonging, as well to the Princes, as the Nobles. The order of the Senatours are for the moſt part cõpoſed of 24 men, which muſt be of the order of Knighthood, with whome they joyne a Generall Chancellour, and in the name of every Prince two Doctours of the Law; theſe take notice of all things, aſwell in the times of peace, as of warre, and give their definitive ſentence, both in the one, and in the other Duchie. They meete twiſe in a yeere, and in difficult affaires, nothing is decreed by the King of Denmarke, and the Duke of Holſt, but with the vnanine conſent of all the Senatours, among whome the Biſhop of Lubick and of Sleſwick have the firſt voice.

The Duchie of Sleſwick. The power and Gouvernment.

Townes.

Of the Duchie of HOLSATIA or HOLST.

IT is verily thought, that Holſatia was firſt ſo called from the great ſtore of woods, and Foreſts that are in it: for both the Cimbrians and Lower-Germans call woods, and Foreſts Holt, that is, wood: becauſe it is a Countrie full of Buſhes and woods. Some derive the name of it from a hollow ſtone, in regard the Dukes of Holſt were at the firſt called Earles of the Hollow-ſtone. It is bounded Eaſtward with the River Bilen, Weſtward with Store, Southward with the Elve, and Northward with Eydera. It is a Countrie full of woods and Foreſts, bearing great ſtore of Timber & wood, yea in ſuch abundance, that as the Friſons knowe not what to doe with it. And ſeing the woods are great, there is yet ſcarcely ſeene in them a mightie Oke-tree, but onely in every place Beech-trees, from whence there falls a kind of acorne which fattens abundance of their Swine. The feilds for the moſt part are full of fiſh, and beare good crops of Corne, for during the ſpace of three yeeres, they ſcarcely till their grounds, but ſuffer them to ſtand full of water and pooles, wherein every third yeere they take abundance of fiſh which feede upon the graſſe, and when the water is drayned out: it leaveth behinde it a ſlimie mudde, which fattens the ground, and makes the Soile the better. There is not in the whole Countrie any Vines, or Olives, but great ſtore of wilde beaſts, and likewiſe many Horſes. Holſatia is divided into foure parts, that is Ditzmarchio, Holſatia, Storemaria & Waggria, which heretofore were Earledomes, then afterwards at the requeſt of Chriſtiernus the firſt, it was raiſed by Fredrick the Emperour to the tittle of a Dukedome, was bound to furniſh, and maintaine fortie horſe and 80 foote-men for the ſervice of the ſacred Empire. Ditzmarchia was firſt at libertie after ſome hundred yeeres, and though that Fredrick the Emperour had enfeoffed Chriſtiernus the firſt into it, yet it was not wholly in ſubjection to him, whereupon King John, and Duke Frederick his Sonne anno 1100 went with an Armie into it, which was defeated, and ſo the Ditzmarſchians maintained their libertie. untill an. 1159 when as the Nephew of Chriſtiernus the firſt, Duke John, Adolph, & Fredrick the X I. King of Denmarke ſubdued it. The principall towns in Holſatia are Segeberg; which lyeth in Waggeria a Countrie of Holſt, lying ſome foure miles from Lubec. Itzohoa is a famous towne for the ſite, the nature of the place, and the navigation thereof. Store is encompaſſed with a fiſhfull and navigable River, which ſpringeth almoſt out of the midſt of Holſatia, and watereth many places; among the reſt, the faire, and ſumptuous houſe of the Ranſows, called Bredenbergh, mentioned before where hediſchargeth himſelfe into the Elve. Countries, Livonia, Denmarke and Sweden to the great benifit of the Holſatians. There ſtand alſo Crempe & Reynoldsbourg, which beareth the name of the River that runneth through it: the other from his founder. There is alſo Meldorp, Heminckſte, & Tellinckſtee in Ditzmarchia, and the Capitall Citie of Stormary, Hambourg a famous Citie for trading, ſituated upon the Elve, which after it was ruinated by the manie calamities of warre, was repaired againe by Charlemagne, and in the dayes of Henry the fourth Emperour, it beganne to be girt in with walles, three gates, and 12 Turrets. The Countrie is full of mooriſh grounds, & Fenns, eſpecially Ditzmarchia, which lying among ſo many Marſhes, and wateriſh grounds, refuſed alwayes to come under the obedience of the King of Denmarke: yet nevertheleſſe of later yeeres it was forced to beare that yoake. The famouſt Rivers, which water this Countrie, is the Eyder, and others, but ſome of them may rather be called Brookes then Rivers. Beſide, on that ſide which the Balticke Sea beateth upon Holſatia, and the Duchie of Sleſwick, it maketh many gulphes, which giveth much helpe to thoſe of the Countrie, to make a ſafe harbour and retreate for Marchants, and Sea-men, beating in with ſtormes and tempeſts: In divers places whereof, there are great ſtore of fiſh taken, eſpecially Saulmõs, it is a plaine Countrie, which ſeldome riſeth up in hills, and the beſt part that ſheweth it ſelfe betweene them, hath a pleaſant ſituation, and is much commended both for the teſtimonies of warre, where that noble Lord Henry of Ranſow was ſlaine, betweene Lubec and Hambourg, two famous townes. It hath a notable Caſtle of great antiquitie, and merit from him that firſt built it, ſituated at the foote of the Citie. There are ſuch a number of woods, that they couver the ground, chiefly in Ditzmarchia, in which ſtand Borcholt, Burgholt, Alverdorpenholt, Reſenwald, & many others. Thoſe of Holſatia had in times paſt 48 men, which ruled the whole Countrie, and every Pariſh had their addreſſe, & made their appeale to them, who judged all cauſes: but ſince it is ſubjected & devided into two parts, out of which they chooſe a doſſen principall men from each quarter, with a Preſident or Provoſt, who ordinarily is a Doctour in Law, and hath good maintenance from the King, and as Aſſiſtants they have a Secretarie, or Commiſſarie of the Preſident of the bodie of Holſatia. He which is on the Kings behalfe is ordinarily made Gouvernour of Stienbourg, and he whome the Duke putteth in, is Gouvernour of Gottorpe: but the ſubjects may appeale to the Prince, and the Counſellours of both the Duchie of Sleſwick and Holſatia, but to no higher Court. They have a certaine written Law, with a litle alterations not much unlike the common-Law, made by Henry Ranſow, the Kings Lieutenant, Sigefrid Ranſow, heretofore Lord of Nienhouſe, the Lord Adam Traziger, and the Lord Eraſmus Kirſlemy, according to which all ſuits, and controverſies are ended, and penall puniſhments inflicted upon offendours. Holſatia hath foure degrees of States, Nobles, Clergie-men, Citizens, and Husband-men, which are of two ſorts, ſome enjoye their lands, and goods by inheritance, and are Free-holders: the others are bound under the rights of hundreds, of ſervice, of Taxes & impoſitions. The Nobles or Gentrie, hold their Caſtles and Lands, by ſuperiour right meane, and inferiour, they have rights of fiſhing, and hunting as haire with haire, and feather with feather, which they enjoye by free inheritance. There are ſome livings alſo which are feudall, or held by Fee-ſimple, aſwell by the male as female iſſue. The Holſatians have this priviledge, that the Prince can laye no new exactions or toles upon them, neither is it Lawfull for the Prince, to undertake a warre, without the conſent of the order of Knighthood. The Prince is bound by oath to confirme their priveledges, before his ſubjects taketh the oath of Alegance unto him. There are not paſſing 24 ſtemmes of Noble families, the names whereof are read in the Corographie of Holſatia, but there are many houſes of Gentlemen, ſprang and deſcended from them, as the Ranzouians hold at this day, a 150 Caſtles, & many lands belonging to them. There are almoſt as many Aleſelds, and Powiſches. Holſatia hath but one Biſhop, to wit, of Lubec, for that of Hambourg is ſubject to the biſhop of Breme. Three Chapiters, one of Lubec, and other of Hambourg, and the third of Outinenſe. Three Abbeys, to wit, of Rheinfeild, Bordeſholme, and Schiſmare. Ten Monaſteries among which three are for the Moniall Nobilitie, and have great revenues, allowed them and flouriſh ſtill, but the reſt are converted into Schooles, and Hoſpitalls. The controverſies ariſing betweene the Gentrie, are decided by the Senate, or Councill of the Duchie, in which uſually the Prince doth preſide, & which their priviledges doe import. They are permitted in putting in ſufficient caution, to make their appeale from the ſentence of the Senate to the imperiall chamber. The Burgeſſes have their priviledges peculiar to themſelves, and uſe the Romaine Law, as alſo thoſe of Lubec. All fines are for the moſt part ſhared betweene the Princes and the Townes. The benifits of milles appertaine to the Princes. The ſubjects may appeale from the ſentences of the Senate, to the foure Cities to give particular judgement and in ſome cauſes it is Lawfull for them alſo to appeale to the Prince and Councillours of Holſatia, and from thence to the judgement of the imperiall chamber, having put in ſufficient cautiõ. The ſuits or cauſes of the Sea-men or Countrie-men are pleaded by Proctours, & Atturnies openly in the plaine field. There aſſiſted by ſome Gentlemen of that place, with the Provoſts, and two Aſſeſſours as Witneſſes. In the midſt of whome, the plaintines or thoſe, which have any ſuite or controverſie ſtand up, after that they are heard, and their actions duely conſidered, & the defences weighed and weighed on both ſides, all the Countrie-men withdraw themſelves from out of the aſſembly into ſome other place, now after the others have ripely deliberated, upon all circumſtances, they returne againe into the aſſembly, and bringing with them their Pleaders, they pronounce that which they finde right according to the Law. And if any of them will not ſtand to the ſentence, they may appeale to the twelve Judges, ordained thereunto, or to ſome Pariſhes, and from them to the Kings Councell, to whome the Countrie-men are ſubject. From them alſo they are permitted to appeale to the Seſſion-houſe of Holſatia, in which the Prince preſideth, accompanied with the aſſembly of the Senatours, and afterward to the imperiall chamber: if the gravitie of the ſuit exceede the ſumme of a hundred Riniſh gulders, by vertue of a priveledge, given by Ferdinando the Emperour to the Princes of Holſatia.

MVSCOVIE OR RUSSIA.

RUSSIA is two fould, the one is called Ruſſia the black, and confineth upon Poland, and the other Ruſſia the white, which is part of Muſcovia, where the inhabitants are bound to weare white Caps. Doubtleſſe it taketh the name from the River Muſco, which runneth through the chiefe Citie of it ſo called, and is the great Dukes, or Emperours Seate. It is a large and a vaſt Countrie, containing from Eaſt to weſt, about 3300 miles in length and ſome 3065 miles in breadth, lying betweene the 8, and 20 Climates. In the Southerne parts the longeſt day is 16 houres, but in the Northerne parts 22 houres and a halfe. It is bounded on the North with the Frozen Sea, on the Eaſt with Tartary, on the South with the Turkes, and Poland, and on the Weſt with Livonia, and part of Sweden. The ayre in this region is extreame colde, and is ſo vehement, that if water be throwne up into the aire, it will turne to yce, before it falls to the ground. The inhabitants whereof to arme themſelves the better againſt this extremitie of cold, line all their cloathes, yea and their very houſes with furrs, & the Gentlemen, or chiefe men have ſtoves in their houſes to live in, & to thaw themſelves, and when they goe abroad, they uſe to rubbe often their noſes, and eares with ſnow, and peeces of yce, to ſettle, and recall the motive ſpirits into thoſe parts, which otherwiſe would be in daunger of looſing, the ignorance of this preventing remedie, was not the leaſt cauſe, that in the yeere 1598 of 70000 Turkes, which made an inroad into Muſcovie, 40000 were frozen to death: notwithſtanding it is very healthfull, for in the Northerne and Eaſterne parts thereof, they never had any peſtelence among them, beyond the head of the River Tanais, yet in ſtead thereof, they have a burning deſeaſe very rife among them, not much unlike the plague, called the Calor, or hotſickneſſe, which doth ſo infect the head and Bowells, that many of them in a fewe dayes dye of it. But when Summer comes, the huge Seas of yce, which in a manner couver the ſurface of the Countrie, are at the firſt approch of the Sunne ſuddainly diſſolved, the waters quickly dryed up, and the Earth dreſſed in her holyday apparell, ſuch a mature groweth of Fruits, ſuch flouriſhing of herbes, ſuch chirping of birds, as if here were a perpetuall ſpring. The Soile beareth no Vines, or Olive-trees, yea nor any fruit, that taſteth well ſave millions, and cherries, for all kinde of other liquid fruits by reaſon of the ſharpe Northerne windes are either blaſted, or crimpled up. But it yeeldeth all ſorts of graine, as Wheate, Rye, Barly, Buckwheate, Peaſe, and Beanes of all kinds, and their moſt husbandrie conſiſteth in honey and waxe. The chiefe commodities which they tranſport into other Countries are, rich furrs, ox-hides, flaxe, hempe whales greaſe, honey, waxe, Canvaſes, nuts and the like, for mines, they have none but yron, neither is there found in this Country any pearles, or precious ſtones. In it lyeth part of Hyrcyman Foreſt, or Swart-wood, full of all kindes of wild, and ſauvage Beaſts, and in that part of it, which reacheth towards Pruſſia, there are the huge wilde Oxen, called Biſontes, and the great Helenes, or Elants, ſo called by the Germans, and by the Muſcovites Iozzi, or Elecampancs, farre greater then Stagges, having long leggs that cannot bowe. In theſe woods alſo are monſtrous Beares of an incredible greatneſſe, hideous black Wolves, and black Foxes whoſe furrs are moſt rich and coſtly: but for hunting hauking and taking of foule, there is no place in the world to be compared to it; for with their dogges, hounds, Grey-hounds and Toiles, they kill and take all manner of Deere, and wilde beaſts. And for Faulcons, Gerfaulcons, and other Haukes, they take abundance of them in Peccera, which they bring to the hand, and lure, and fly not onely with them at Ducks, Pheſants, & Partridges, but alſo at wild Geeſe, Swans, and Cranes, and at a kinde of Foule, greater then a heath-cok or a Gooſe, with red eyelids, which taſteth better than a Pheſant.

All the Cities, Townes, Bourrowes, Caſtles, Villages, Woods, Foreſts, Lands, Fields, Lakes, Meeres and Rivers of this vaſt and ſpacious Countrie of Muſcovia are under the ſubjection, Commaund, and Domination of this great Duke, whome the inhabitants call their great Czar King or Emperour, and honour him as if he were a God, in ſaying, we enjoye health & life from our great Duke, and looke what revenue or profit is made of all things, is brought into his treaſurie. Neither have they any Dukes or Lords, which hold their livings and lands by inheritance, or fee-ſimple, but ſuch as are beſtowed upon them by the great Duke, and which he may take from them at his pleaſure. The commons living in miſerable ſubjection to the Nobles, and they in as great ſlaverie to the Duke or Emperour, to whome no man dare immediately exhibite a petition, or make knowne his grievances: Nay the meaner Lords are squeamiſh in this kinde, and but on great ſubmiſſion will not commend unto the Duke a poore mans cauſe.

The chiefe Citie is named Muſco, it was once nine miles in circuit, but was fired by the Tartar an. 1571, where there was burnt 80000 men, woemen, and children: yet at this day it is but 5 miles about. It is pleaſantly ſeated, and lyeth in the very hart of the Land, and is very famous for the many Rivers, and Brookes which runne about it: adorned with 16 Churches, whereof halfe and more are made with wood, and durt, as moſt of their houſes are, which have ſeverall roomes in them, as Hals, Kitchins and Chambers, they reckon that they have 41500 houſes within this Citie, and every one of them hath their Orchard & garden belonging to them, and every part of this Citie hath their Chappels. There are in it two Caſtles, the one called Kitaigorod, the other Bolſigorod, the River of Muſco running by the one, and the River Neglinna by the other: the one of them is the Dukes Palace, ſeated in the very middle of the Citie, fortified with 17 Turrets, and three Bulwarks, and garded continually with 25000 Souldiers. This Province is the greateſt, and moſt populous of all this Empire: for it extendeth from Eaſt to Weſt, no leſſe then two thouſand miles, and out of this the great Duke, can ſuddenly levie 70000 foote, and 30000 horſe-men.

Ruſſia containeth in it ſelfe manie other Countries, as the Dukedome of Vlodomire, whereof the great Duke beareth the tittle: it is ſo named from the capitall Citie thereof, which lyeth upon the River Cleſma, and diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Volga.

This Province is ſo fruitfull that one buſhell of Wheate being ſowne yeeldeth twentie. The Province of Novigrod though it be not ſo rich in paſture ground as the other, yet it is as good in Corne-fields. It hath a wodden towne, called Novigrod, as the Dukedome is, and lyeth upon the Rivers Volga and Occa, which meete together. This towne heretofore was the re-gall ſeate, and in great eſtimation, becauſe of the multitude of houſes that were in it, and for the great, and rich fiſherie that is in the Lakes, and Meers thereof, but eſpecially for the ancient, & moſt famous church, which above five hundred yeeres agoe, was dedicated to Saint Sophia, in which they imitated the Emperours of Conſtantinople.

The Province of Rhezan, lyeth betweene the two Rivers of Occa and Don, & is very fruitfull in Wheate and other corne, honey, fiſh and foule innumerable. The chiefe citie is alſo called Rhezan, lying upon the River Occa: there are alſo Corſira, Colluga, and Tulla, neere unto which is the head of the famous River Tanais. The Caſtle of Worotinens lyeth three miles from Colluga, having a towne and a Caſtle ſo called.

Severia is a great Dukedome, abounding in all things, but hath great and vaſt feilds, & many townes, whereof the principalleſt is Staradub, Pativola, Novigrod and Czermgouw. The people hereof are very valliant, and ſo alſo are thoſe of Permia, a Province in which, there is ſuch abundance of Staggs, that they eate them in ſteed of bread. The prime Citie is Sicwiarkscy: there are in the woods Roe-deere, Goates, Martins, and great ſtore of honey. The people are uſed here to handle their armes, becauſe of their continuall warres againſt the Tartarianes.

The Duchie of Smolensko, is ſituated upon the River Boryſthenus, whoſe chiefe Citie is of the ſame name, the one ſide of it lyeth upon the River Boryſthenes or the Neper, on the other ſide it is ſhut in with deepe ditches, and with ſharpe ſtecadoes.

Beſides theſe there are leſſer Provinces, as Miſaiskia, Bielskia, Ruſchovia, Tweria, Pskovia, Podzka, Corrella, Bieleieziero, Wolochda, Vſtiuga, Iaroſlavia, Roſtow, Duina, Suſdalia, Wiathka, Permia, Sibior, Iugra, Petzora, & Great Novigrod, which they call Nowogrod Wielki, in which there lyeth a towne of the ſame name, which exceedeth Rome in greatneſſe.

Petzora is ſo named from the River, and is ſhut in on both ſides with inacceſſible hills, and rocks. There are other Provinces reaching Northward tributairy to the great Duke, as Obdora, wherein they have their Idoll Zolota Baba, that is, the gilded old-wife, Lucomoria, Lappia and Candora, which is ſituated beyond the Pole Articke, ſo that in this Countrie they have for halfe a yeere, together perpetuall day, & for the other halfe as long a night. In this Countrie the hills, which the ancients called Rhiphai, and Hyperborei Montes doe end. They are thought to be perpetually couvered with ſnow, and are heere of that height, that a certaine man having 17 dayes travelled up them, returned back againe, as diſpairing ever to come up to the top. They are a ſimple people, which received the Ruſſian faith and Empire. Anno 1518.

In Moſcovie there are many Lakes, long and wide, as the Ilmen, which the Ruſſians call Ilmer & Ladoga, the white Meere, named by the inhabitants Beilerezioro. There are alſo many and great Rivers, as the Boryſthenes, commonly called the Nieper, and Neſter, and alſo in ſome places Dniper and Dneſter.

The Hercynian Foreſt, or vaſt woods called the Swart-wood, couvered a great part of Muſcovia, but here and there hath ſome houſes, and cottages in it, and by the extraordinary diligence of the inhabitants in hewing downe of the woods and trees, it is growne thinner, and is not ſo hideous, thick and unpaſſable as ſome imagine: there are in Muſcovie an infinite number of fine Churches, and very many Cloiſters.

They uſe the Sclavonian language, and received the Chriſtian faith, Anno 987. they follow the Church of Greece. 1. Denying the Holy Ghoſt, to proceede but from the Father. 2. Denying Purgatorie, but praying for the dead. 3. Beleeve that Holy men enjoye not the preſence of God, before the reſurrection. 4. Communicating in both kindes, but uſing leavened bread, and mingling warme water with the wine, w^ch both together they diſtribute with a ſpoone. 5: Receiving Children of ſeven yeeres old to the Sacrament, becauſe then they beginne to ſinne. 6. Forbidding extreame unction, confirmation, and fourth marriages. 7. Admitting none to orders, but ſuch as are married, and prohibiting marriage to them that are actually in orders. 8. Rejecting Carved images, but admitting the painted. 9. Obſerving foure Lents in the yeere. 10. Reputing it unlawfull to faſt on Sattardayes. But this good they have among them that they read the holy Scriptures in their owne language, and forbid not the layetie to read it. They hold in much eſteeme the Ancient Fathers, as Saint Ambroſe, S. Auſtin, S. Ierome, and S. Gregorie, which they have made to be tranſlated into the Sclavonian tongue, and out of them, or out of S. Chriſoſtome, S. Baſill, & S. Nazianzen, the Prieſts read Homilies to their congregations, and will not ſuffer their hooded Monkes, to preach unto the people, but keepe them in ignorance, thinking thereby to lead them to the practize of a Holy and Godly life, rather then to trouble their braines with deepe miſteries, curious and ſubtill diſputations. The Muſcovites are exceedingly given to drinke, eſpecially hot waters, ſo that all heady and intoxicating drinkes are by ſtatute prohibited, and two or three days in a yeere they are allowed to be drunk. They are for the moſt part of a ſquare proportion, broad, ſhort and thick, grey-eyed, broad-bearded, & good panches: they are permitted to marry 2 wives, which nevertheleſſe they hold not a Lawefull marriage. Adulterie, is accounted with them no great matter, but the lying with an other mans wife; the Woemen are private, and fearefull to offend, but once laſcivious intolerable wanton. It is the faſhion of theſe women, to love that huſband beſt, which beate them moſt, and to thinke themſelves neither loved, nor regarded, unleſſe they be two or three times a day well ſwadled. They are a crafty and a deceivable nation, uſed more to ſlaverie, than libertie, and acknowledge themſelves all to be their Princes ſlaves: they feed on dainty meats in their houſes, having as good meats as a dainty toothſom man can deſire, for things are there ſo good cheape that they buy a Hen, or a Duck for a ſmall peece of ſilver, and when they goe a hunting, hauking or fouling, they have choyſe game. They have no inlandiſh wines, but ſuch as is brought unto them from other Countries, which they doe not uſe, but onely upon their feſtivall dayes, and at their banquets. They have a kinde of beare, which in the heate of Summer they coole by caſting peeces of yce into it, kept for the ſame purpoſe in the Winter. Some of them deſire much to drinke the juice of ſoure Cherries, called murrel-wine, which hath a cleare & a reddiſh colour like claret wine, & hath no unpleaſant taſt, LIVONIA, OR LIEFLAND.

ACcording to our Method, Livonia or Liefland followeth Muſcovie: the originall of which name, we cannot certainely define. Altamer ſaith, it may be, that the Livonians the furtheſt people of Germanie, inhabiting the Vandallian Coaſt, under the pararell of Scandia, which is called Gothland, are ſprong from the Lemovians, which I had rather fetch from the Effluins, which are named Eyſlanders, which hath more likelyhood with it. This nation were alſo called Sudini, and their Countrie Sudina, ſome againe affirme that the Lectunnis dwelt here.

Livonia is a very large, and a plaine Countrie, full of Lakes, and Fennie, being in length along the Balticke Sea about 500 miles, and in breadth ſome 160. It is bounded on the Eaſt with Muſcovie, ſeparated nevertheleſſe from it by the River Nerva, and the Lake Beibus, on the South with Samogithia, and Lituania, on the Weſt with the Balticke Sea, on the North with Finland, and the Finnicke Gulfe. The whole Countrie is plaine, and very fruitfull, and beareth Wheate, and other Corne in ſuch abundance, that in the time of dearth it furniſheth the circumjacent Countries: it affordeth much flaxe, of the fineſt ſort, dryed pitch and aboundeth in Cattaile, eſpecially, in good horſe. Beſides in the woods & Foreſt there are many Beares, Alces or Elands, Mules, Foxes, Sables, Polecats, Martins, Bevers, Squirrils and Weſells. The Hares change their coullour according to the Seaſon of the yeare, as they doe in Swiſerland upon the Alpes, in Winter they are white, and in the Summer aſhgray. And there is ſuch ſtore of game, and of wildbeaſts in this Countrie, that the Peſants thereof are not forbidden hunting, who otherwiſe are miſerably plagued by the Gentrie. In brief, there is nothing neceſſarie for the nouriſhment of humaine life, but is to be found in Liefland, ſaving wine, and oyles, and ſome other things, which the Lord hath beſtowed upon warmer Countries, of which not withſtanding great ſtore is brought into it out of other Regions.

About foure hundred yeeres agoe, the Lieflanders received the Chriſtian faith, partly by the Marchants of Breme, and partly by the preaching of one Meinardus, and the compelling of the German Knights called the Enſifers, or Porte-glaives, who ſeconded that reverend man, but before it laye open, and was ſubject to the many incurſions and dangers, aſwell of inteſtine, as forraine warres, which miſerie it had a long time endured, and laye as a prey, to the next adjoyning Kings, and Princes, untill at laſt Anno 1570 it was brought by the great Lord of the German order, called Gothard Ketler, under the power, and might of Sigiſmund Auguſtus, the King of Poland, and ſo afterward was made, and held a member of the Kingdome of Poland, and the great Dukedome of Lituania. Now when this great Senor Gothard, in the Caſtle of Riga, before the King of Polands Commiſſarie, Nicolas Ratzevil Palatine of Vilna, had reſigned up his order, as firſt his Croſſiers ſtaff, then his Seale, all his letters and papall Bulls, which he had received from the Emperour, and the Pope, and had beſide given up the keyes of the Caſtle of Riga, & the towne with all Offices, and commaunds as the right of the mint, the cuſtomes, and toules of fiſhing, & all other rights and immunities belonging to his order, into the hands of the King of Poland, preſently after this reſignation, this Gothard by the aboveſaid Palatine in the name of the King was treated and inveſted Duke of Curland, and Semigallia, and publickely proclaimed, to whome immediately after the Gentrie of Curland and Semigallia tooke their oath of Allegance, and acknowledged him for their Lawful Lord, & the next day he was declared Duke of Curland, and the Kings Lieutenant Generall, and Gouvernour of Liefland, & was ſo ſolemnly proclaimed from the Seſſion-houſe of Riga, and had the keys of the Caſtle, and of the gates of the towne delivered up unto him, the Gentrie and Burgeſſes had all their priviledges, immunities reſtored & confirmed to them againe, as appeareth by the letters of David Chytræus, which are extant.

Livonia is divided into three parts, whereof every one of them ſpeaketh a ſeverall language, to wit, into Eaſtland, Lettland, and Curland. The Eaſtlanders Provinces are the Harlands, and townes, whereof Revell is the chiefeſt, lying Northward upon the Balticke Sea, and is of no leſſe account then Riga, having a brave haven and a ſtrong Fort, built by Valdimare. The Citizens whereof uſe the Lubick Lawes, and coine foure-ſquare peeces of money. The ſecond Province is Viria or Virland, in which there lye Weiſenburgh, Tolsbergh and Borckholme the reſidencie of the Biſhop of Revell. The third Province is Allantakia, where Nerva ſtands, ſo named from the River that runneth by it, & which lyeth oppoſite to the Muſcovian Caſtle Ivanigrod, this River parteth Liefland from the Ruſſian Commaund. The ſmaller Provinces are called Nyſchlot, and Odenpoa, wherein Derpt, or Topatum lyeth, which is a Biſhops ſea, and a Land-towne; alſo Wernebeck, Helmeed, and Ringen, Iervia, where Wittenſtein, Lais, Overpolen, Vellin, Wichia ſtand, and where Abſeel lyeth, Leal, Lode and Parnouw. The adjacent Iles next Eaſtland are Oſilia, Dageden, Mona, Wormes, Wrangen, Kien, and ſome others, in which they uſe partly to ſpeake the Eſtivian language, and parly Swavish. The townes in Lettea are Riga, Koninchuyſen, Wenden, Wolmar, and the whole Biſhoprick of Riga.

Of all the townes in Liefland, Riga is the capitall Citie, ſituated upon the River Duina, which runneth into the Vendalian Gulph, this towne was the Colonie, and Plantation of the Bremers, & is fortified with a ſtrong wall, Bulwarkes, and Turrets, having good ordinance lying upon the walls, is double moated, and roes of paliſadoes ſtrouck in round about the wall, & Counterſcarfe. It hath alſo a ſtrong Caſtle, in which heretofore the great Dutch Senor Gothard Ketler mentioned before, lived ſome yeeres, and commaunded it, holding it in fief from the King of Poland, but had no juriſdiction over the Citie, for the Burgeſſes were ſtrickt maintainers of their freedomes, & would never ſuffer any Gouvernour or Captaine to beare rule over them, paying the King onely a certaine tribute, and ſhewing obedience to him, but for the reſt they ſtood upon their owne priveledges and rights. This is a Mart-towne for all Northerne wares, and commodities as pitch, flaxe, hempe, waxe, timber and the like. The townes and Caſtles in Curland, are Coldingen, Canda and Winda, called in the Poliſh tonge

Kies, and by us Wenden, where the great Maſters of the German order held their Court, and where heretofore they held their Land-dayes, or great aſſemblies: but now there lyeth a Poliſh garniſon in it: the other Townes are Durbin, Srunda, Grubin, Pitten, Amboten, and Haſenpot. The townes in Semigall are Mitovia, the Court of the Duke of Curland, Seleburgh, Baßenburgh. Doblin, Dalem, Semigal & Curland are ſeparated from the people of Lettea, and the reſt of Liefland by the River Duina. In Liefland there are many Lakes and Meeres, among which Beibas is accounted the chiefeſt, & principalleſt, being 45 Engliſh miles long, and full of fiſh. The Rivers are theſe, as Duina, Winda, and the Beca, with ſome others. The Duna hath his ſpring-head in Ruſſia, and runneth a long courſe through Lituania & Livonia, and diſchargeth it ſelfe within two miles beneath Riga in the Lieflandiſh Gulfe, and ſo into the Balticke Sea. The Winda looſeth himſelfe in the Baltick Sea, the mouth whereof is exceding deepe, and therefore in that place very dangerous. The Beka called by the Natives Embeck, runneth with a ſwift ſtreame, or chanell into the Eaſterne Sea, which falling downe from exceeding high and ſteepie rockes, maketh ſuch a deene and noiſe, that the inhabitants neere unto it growe deafe, and can hardly heare, even as it hapneth to the inhabitants that dwell by the ruſhing downe falls of the River Nilus.

This whole Countrie for the moſt part is without hills, but full of thick, and ſhadie woods, the Hercynian Foreſt, or Swart-wood, runneth farre into this Region with divers armes and parts: upon the mouth of the Duina by the Sea-ſide lyeth Dunamouth, an invincible Caſtle, two miles from Riga beſet with a Poliſh garniſon, to this all forraine ſhips muſt pay toule, & upon the halfe waye there ſtandeth alſo a Blokhouſe, which hath the Kings men lying upon it, where the ſhippiug are ſearched againe. In the Dukedome of Eaſtland, there lyeth alſo a ſtrong Caſtle, and Towre called Felinum, which the Germane Souldiers with the laſt Maſter of their order William of Furſtenbergh, gave over treacherouſly to the Muſcovites, who kept their Maſter in priſon to the daye of his death, and burnt the whole towne. There are five Biſhopricks in Liefland, whereof Riga excelleth the other in dignitie, the others are Derpt, Revel, Oeſel and Gerland.

They live in this Countrie as Gentiles, and Pagans, having no knowledge of God, ſome praying unto the Sunne, & others to the Starrs: there are ſome among them, which worſhip Serpents, Buſhes, and Hedges, Stones, and other things, and were accuſtomed to offer ſacrifices upon Saint Georges daye, as the Boruſſians, Samogites, and Rutheians had wont to doe, unto Pergrubius, which they held for the God of flowers, plants and of all ſeeds. The manner of their ſacrificing was this: their Prieſt whome they called Veurſhayte, held in his right hand a cup full of Beare, & invocating the Devil ſang forth his prayſes, in this manner: thou (ſaid he) driveſt awaye the winter, thou bringeſt againe unto us the pleaſant ſpring; by thee the feilds and gardens are clad with greeneneſſe, by thee the woods, and Foreſts flouriſh with leaves; this ſong being ended, he tooke the cup betweene his teeth, and drinke the Beare ſheere out, without touching the cup with his hand, and having ſo drunke it out, in holding it betweene his teeth, caſt it downe, & tumbles upon his head, which riſing, and filling it againe, the ſtanders by, drank all of them out of it, one after an other, and ſang a hymne in the praiſe of their Pergrubius, after this they feaſted on an other and danced the whole day. And whenſoever they buried any of their dead, they feaſted luſtely about the dead corps, invited the ſame to drinke, and poured out his ſhare upon his dead bodie, afterward they layd him in his grave, laying a hatchet, meate and drinke by him, and a peece of money to pay for his paſſage, calling to him in this manner, goe gett thee into the other World, where thou ſhalt domineere over the Duches, as they have domineered over thee in this world, ſuch was heretofore the idolatrie, and ſuperſtition of this nation: but afterward in the dayes of Fredrick the Emperour, they received firſt the Chriſtian faith, they account it a ſhame to worke much. The woemen borne in this region, are full of pride and love to goe in gewgaw apparell, but for outlandiſh woemen, they ſcorne and diſdayne them, and muſt forſooth be called Madames, or Ladies, neither will they doe any houſewifrie: for in the winter they ride upon ſleades, and in the ſummer are rowed up and downe the Rivers in boates. The chiefeſt of them drinke Methegline, Beare and Reniſh wine, of which the meaner ſort get but a little: the woemen disfigure themſelves, and ſpoile their bewtie by their undecent, and uncomely rayment. The commodities which are tranſported out of Liefland, are theſe: waxe, honey, aſhes, pitch, & tarre, flaxe, hempe, divers ſorts of the furrs of wilde beaſts, hides, leather, and every yeere there is great ſtore of Rye brought out of it.

And ſeing we are now a deſcribing of Liefland, I hope it will not be taken in ill part, that I make a little mention of the Ware-wolves, or Mankind-wolves, which are reported to be here in abundance, becauſe there are ſome writers that hold this to be credible, among the reſt, Olaus Magnus affirmeth it to be true, that in this Countrie every yeere there are ſome men, that turne themſelves into Wolves. We nevertheleſſe with Plinie (as we have ſpoken thereof in Ireland) hold theſe things for fables, thinking rather, that they are poſſeſſed with that malignant deſeaſe of black melancoly, which the Phyſitians call Lycanthropia, which cauſeth ſuch fantomes in them, that they imagine themſelves to be transformed into Wolves, and ſo much concerning Liefland.

The deſcription of

LITUANIA,

SAMOGITIA, RVSSIA the ſwart, and VOLINIA.

LITUANIA hath this name given it from Lituus, which ſignifieth a Huntſmans horne or trump, becauſe the inhabitants of that Countrie are given much to hunting. It is a ſpacious Countrie, frontring upon Muſcovie, and on the Eaſt, is bounded with a part of Ruſſia, which is ſubject to the great Duke of Muſcovie, and on the Weſt it hath Podlaſsia, Maſovia, and Poland; but inclining towards the North, it frontreth upon Pruſsia, but juſt North it confineth upon Livonia, and Samogitia and Southward lye Podolia, and Volinia. The aire heere is colde and raw, the winter hard and rough. This Countrie aboundeth in honey, and waxe, which the wilde Bees make in the woods: It beareth alſo great ſtore of Wheate, but ſeldome groweth throughly ripe, Wine they have none, but ſuch as is tranſported to them from other Countries, neither have they ſalt, but ſuch as is brought and ſold them out of England. There are in the woods and Foreſts, wherewith almoſt the whole Countrie is couvered, all kinds of wilde beaſts, but are of a ſmaller growth, and ſhape than in other Countries: among which there are wilde Beares, Alces or Elands, wilde Oxen, wilde Horſes, wilde Aſſes, Staggs, Hindes, Roe-deare wilde Boares, and Swine, Foxſes, Martins, and other wilde beaſts, but for the infinite number of foule, eſpecially Wood-Cockes and Snipes, I will paſſe that over.

In Lituania and Muſcovie there is alſo a kinde of a ravenous Beaſt, called Roſſomaka, of the bigneſſe of a dogge, having a face, and head like a Katt, a bodie, and taile like a Foxe, and of a ſwart and blackiſh colour. He eateth Carrion, and having mett with ſuch a prey, filleth his panch ſo full, that he is ready to burſt, and ſwelleth licke a bladder, and ſpuing it up againe, never giveth over, till he hath devoured it all.

The Lithuanians were in time paſt ſcarcely known, ſo poore and in ſuch a baſe eſteeme they were by the Ruſſians, that the Lords and Princes of Kiovia, payde them as a ſigne of their ſubjection, Aprons, Clouts, and Corke; in regard of their povertie, and the barrenneſſe of their ſoile. Untill that Vithenes Duke of the Lituanians, gott up his crummes, and encreaſing in power, refuſed to paye this homage, but at laſt the Ruſſians forced him to paye them tribute, & brought them againe under their yoak, whoſe Succeſſours with great hoſtilitie & crueltie made incurſions into their neighbouring Countries waſting and ſpoyling them, whereupon then there were Croſier Lords, made of the Dutch order, which warred againſt them, & cruſhed & ſupreſſed them, till that theſe Countries were ſucceſſive, and brought under the ſubjection of the Dukes Olgert and Keiſtut, after whoſe deceaſe, Iagello was made great Duke of Lituania, who afterward was named Vladiſlaus. He being often overthrowne, and oppreſſed hard by theſe Croſſier Lords, and the Chriſtian Armies, at laſt, through the great mercie of God, ſided with Poland, and embracing the Chriſtian Religion was Baptized, and taking in marriage, Hedwiga the Queene of Poland, was made King of Poland, ſurrendering Lituania over unto his brother Skigellony, to Gouverne the ſame, as the chiefe Duke thereof. This ſpacious Duchie of Lituania is at this day divided into ten Palatinates, or chiefe Provinces, whereof Vilna is the Capitall Citie, commonly called by the inhabitants Vilensky, and by the high-Duches the wilde, built anno 1305 by Duke Gediminus upon the meeting of the two Rivers Vilia and Vilna, being now the chiefe Seate, and reſidencie of the principall Palatinate of Lituania, and the Biſhops ſea, which is under the obedience of the Romiſh ſea, and is ſubjected to the Arch-Biſhop of Leopoli, Metropolitan of Ruſſia, who hath ſeven Biſhops of the Greekiſh Church under him, to wit, of Polocia, Volodomiria, Lucam, Volinia, or Luczko, Pinſca, upon the River Pripet, Kiovia, Præmiſſilia and Leopoli.

Vilna or Terwilde, is a populous, great, and a rich towne wherein the Princes Palace ſtands, girt about with walles, and gates, which are never ſhut. Their Churches for the moſt part are built with ſtone, and ſome with wood timber. There is a faire Bernards Cloiſter, built with carved ſtone, and alſo a fine Ruſſian Court or Caſtle, in which the Ruſſians ſhewe, and ſell thoſe commodities that they bring with them out of Muſcovie. There is no Hoſpitalls in this Citie, or houſes wherein they may ſhewe the workes of mercie to the poore and afflicted. All the Inhabitants of the Citie (ſaving the Magiſtrates) keepes Tavernes, and Innes, and ſell beare, methegline, aqua vitæ, and hot-waters, & will ſuffer any man to come into their houſes, and to ſit downe by their fires, and will give him a draught of drinke, or of hot-waters for nothing, & then he may depart: but if he drinketh more or that he dineth, or ſuppeth with his Hoſt, or Hoſteſſe, then he payes for his ordinarie, which is but reaſonable and very little. The ſecond Palatinate is Trock, the townes whereof are Grodna, lying upon the River Gromum, where Stephen King of Poland deceaſed this life, Lawne ſituated betweene the two Rivers Cznoſius and Vilia, Kowne, Lida, and Vpita. The third Palatinate is Minſcea, in which is the towne of Minſco, and the Caſtles Keidanow, Radaskow, Boriſsow, Lohoisko, Swiſlocz, Bobroisko, & Odruczko. The fourth is Novigrod, wherein the great Citie of Novigrod ſtandeth, built with timber and wood, Slonim, Wolkovisko, Mſczibow, and ſome townes beſide. The fifth Palatinate is Breſtia, ſo called from the large towne of Breſtia, built all with wood, in which alſo ſtandeth the Citie of Pinſco. The ſixth Palatinate is Volinia, in which Luczko is the Biſhops ſea, beſides Volodimiria, Krzemeneſia. The ſeventh Palatinate is Kiovia, the chiefe towne whereof is alſo called Kiovia, which is an ancient Citie, & which in former times hath beene a great deale bigger, as the ruines thereof ſhewe at this day, reaching 6 miles about, and lying upon the Boryſthenes, there are alſo the townes Circas, Kaniou, and Mozer. The eight Palatinate is Miociſlavia, lying upon the frontiers of Muſcovia, & is watered with the Rivers Siham, and Boryſthenes. In it are alſo theſe townes, as Mieciſlavia, Dambrowna, Copys, Slou, an Earledome, Mohilow, Byckow, Reczycza, & Striſsin, all townes with Caſtles. The ninth is Vitebz, in which the towne of Vitebzka, is ſituated upon the River Duina, and Orska, upon the Boryſthenes. The tenth Palatinate is Poloczcea, which taketh the name from Poloczko ſituated betweene Vitebzka and Livonia, upon the concourſe of the two Rivers Polota, and Duina, where is ſeene alſo the townes and Caſtles of Diſna, Droſſa, and Druha. Lectori Sal. Hunc Borysthenis tractum ut ad nostram Geographiæ tabulam adjiciamus duo nos præcipue impulerunt. Primum ut hujus fluminis longitudinem ostendamus siquidem præter Danubium et Volgam cuius tantum fontes in Europa sunt ideoque non Europæ sed Asiæ fluvius esse videtur longiorem ac majorem Europa non habet. Alterum ut annquos M. D. Lithuaniæ terminos Vinculi M. Ducis præsertim temporibus, exponamus, hic multa præsidia secunda cum Tartaris fecerint, arces nonullas quarum nunc ruinæ extant extruxerat ac munierat, quo facilius dominium suum protendere hostemq; longius depellere posset cur autem in eadem ipsa tabula hunc Borysthenis tractum continuate non adjecerimus ea causa est quod protraxisset nostram Geographiæ tabulam ut Hungariæ Moldaviæ, Transylvaniæ, Valachiæ partem continuare atq; in tabulam inscribere deberemus. Prodierit autem lectori qui sit Status hujus Regionis cognoscere. Regio est campestris ac feracissima, sed propter assiduos Scytarum incursus deserta qui semper vsant illuc bonis, et aliquando ultra Czyrkassios progressi Volumam depopulantur plurimos homines bonis illorum direptis in servitutem abducentes. Recertentibus vero illis cum præda Kozacy sæpius occurrere ac omnibus bonis eos tranantes fluvium aliquem reperire solent.

parts, theſe Rivers and the reſt runne all of them into the great Tanais. Within the commaund of Lituania, the famous River Boryſthenes, or the Nieper hath his ſpring-head, ariſing out of a plaine, and Mooriſh Countrie, and running through Ruſſia, diſchargeth himſelfe in Pontus Euxinus. There are alſo the Rivers of Vilia, & Niemen, which run with a crooked courſe and looſe themſelves in the Pruſſian Sea. There is alſo the Duida, and many other Rivers, & Brookes beſide, for the Countrie is full of Lakes, ſtanding Pooles & Meeres. All theſe Rivers, Meeres & Lakes aboveſaid yeeld an incredible number of fiſh, which taſt exceeding well. This Countrie ſeemeth alſo couvered with woods & Foreſts, as a wilderneſſe, whereof ſome of them are ſo great, that they be 10 or 15 miles long. The King of Poland Sigiſmundus Auguſtus, aſſembled at Lubline, all the Palatines, and Chaſtellines of Lituania in one bodie, with the Common-weale of Polonia, and gave unto every one of the Lords, Biſhops; Palatins, and Gouvernours of Caſtles, their place, ranke, and order, how they ſhould take place one of an other & ſit in Parliament: ſo that out of the whole Kingdome of Poland, and the adjacent Provinces, there ſits in Parliament 15 Biſhops, 31 Palatines, 30 great Caſtlelins, and 50 Inferious, & alſo the Realmes Officialls, as the Lord high Mareſchall of the Kingdome, the Lord Chancellour, & Vice-Chancellours, and two Treaſurers, whereof wee will ſpeake more at large in the deſcription of Poland.

The band of Matrimonie is lightlie broken, & Violated by thoſe of Lituania, if both parties give conſent, & afterward they marry againe, when it pleaſeth them. The woemen alſo with the good liking of their husbands, may have ſome fellow-helpers (as they terme them, or rather Cock-hold-makers) of their marriage, but contrariewiſe it is a ſhame for a man, if he cannot content himſelfe with one woemen. When any man is condemned to dye, his Lord forceth him to hange himſelfe with his owne hands, and if he refuſeth to doe it then they compel him to it by threats and blowes. The moſt riches of this Countrie conſiſteth in Cattaile, wherewith the Inhabitants helpe themſelves very much. The Common-people for the moſt part eate very courſe brown bread, made of rye, and barlie, and mingled with branne, but the richer ſort eate good wheaten bread, which is ſifted and very white. Wine is rare among them, many of them drink beare, but the vulgar ſort water: they brew their beare after divers manners, and of divers ſorts of graine, as of wheate, rye, barlie, oates and fitches, which giveth an ill taſt: methegline is there in abundance, both thick and thinne, which they ſeeth, & make to taſte ſo well, that they drinke themſelves drunke with it. It is hard comming into Lituania, becauſe of the abundance of waters, Lakes, and Pooles that are in it, and it hath better trading in the winter with the Inhabitants, becauſe the waters and Rivers are all frozen with thick yce, and couvered with ſnow than in ſummer. The greateſt commerce that is driven there, conſiſteth in all ſorts of fine ſpotted furrs, and skins, as of Foxes, Weſells, Martins, Sabells, and ſuch like, which yeelde them great profite, as alſo waxe, honey, ſope, aſhes, & pitch, from hence is brought alſo great ſtore of wainſcoat into the low Countries, wherewith they planke and line their houſes within the Netherlands, and make Cubbards, Cheſts, Preſſes, and other neceſſarie houſhold ſtuffe with them. As for Samogitia, which in their language they call the Netherland, & by the Ruſſians Samoitzkaſenla, it lyeth Northward, and is a large Countrie, which confineth upon Lituania, full of Rivers, and a vaſt wilderneſſe, which reacheth in length about 50 German miles, and lyeth to the Northward of Liefland, Weſtward the Balticke Sea beateth upon it, and then windeth it ſelfe more towards the North, lying upon the other ſide of Pruſſia. In this part they have abundance of excellent, pure, and white honey, ſo that almoſt every hollow-tree is full of it. Townes and Caſtles they have none, the Gentlemen dwell in Cabbins, and the peſants in poore houſes like Swine-coats. The people of this Countrie are tall, and of a goodly ſtature, but of a rude and clouniſh behavious, which live meanely, and quench their thirſt moſt with water, becauſe there is little beare or Methegline to begotten in this Countrie: before our times, they never knew, what golde, ſilver, braſſe, yron, and wine was; they were permitted to have many wives, and when the Father dyed, the Sonne might marrie his Mother in Law, and the brother his deceaſed brothers widdowe. This people is given much to divination, and witch-craft. In former times they held fire for their Idoll, which they accounted as holy, and of perpetuall durance, and therefore upon the top of a very high Mountaine, mainteyned it continually with wood by one of their Prieſts. Next followeth Ruſſia, which is to be underſtood of the Southerne or Swart-Ruſſia, whereof the chiefe Citie is Leopolis, a towne of trading, & is adorned with the Arch-Epiſcopall ſea, and containeth not onely this Countrie, but alſo the Leopolian, Halicenſian, Bellenſian, and the Premiſſenſian confines. Now remaineth the deſcription of Volinia, lying betweene Lituania, Podolia and Ruſſia, which for the fruitfulneſſe thereof, is much commended: the inhabitants are able, & good Souldiers, ſpeaking the Ruſſian language. This Countrie was once under the commaund of the great Prince of Lituania, but is now annexed unto the Kingdome of Poland. It is at this day divided into three Provinces, that is, the Lucenſian, the Volodimirian, and the Cremecenſian. It hath alſo in it three Provinciall Cities, as Luczko, Wolodomiria & Krzemenec, which have many other ſmaller towns, and places nnder their juriſdictions. In this Countrie there are many Meeres, and ſtanding waters, wonderfull rich in fiſh, and many woods alſo of wilde beaſts.

In this Map and diſcription ye ſhall finde Podalia, lying upon the River Tyra, which now they call the Weſter, it is a very fruitfull Countrie, if they caſt ſeed into the ground, they may reape it three times a yeer. And for paſturage, the graſſe is ſo overgrowne there, and ſtandeth ſo high, that ye can ſcarcely ſee the Oxens hornes that feede in it. The chiefe townes are theſe, Camienick, Bar, Miedzibos, Brezania, & Braſlaw, and thus much for Lituania.

THE PENINSVLA, OR PONTICKE CHERSONEZE.

THE Cherſoneze, ſurnamed Tauricke from the Taures people of the Europian Scythie, according to Ptolomee, was a Province belonging to the Scythians, called Scythick. It is a ſpacious Biland, which reacheth towards the East, betweene Pantus Euxinus, and Palus Meotide unto the Cimmerian Boſphorus, which ſeparateth Europe from Aſia, being 24 German miles in length, and 15 in breadth. That part of this Peninſula, which lyeth East, and Southward, and as it were in the midſt of Perecopia, hath the winter very milde, and the aire very temperate; for about the laſt of December, the winter beginneth there, but in the midſt of Frebruarie is the hart of it, when there falls great ſtore of ſnow, and yet nevertheleſſe laſteth not paſſing three dayes, and when it is coldeſt of all, and laſteth longeſt, it never dureth any longer, than to the beginning of March. This whole Countrie is very fruitfull, and good for the breeding, and feeding of Cattaile, both great and ſmall: yet many of the inhabitants are ſo laſie, that they doe not till, and manure the ground, though it is very fertill of it ſelfe: they live upon their Horſe, Cammells, Oxen, Kowes, Sheepe, and other Beaſts, which they have in abundance, and alſo moſt daintie and curious foule, which ſometimes the Chriſtians, and at other whiles the Turkes doe take, but the Polacks dare not meddle with them: they have alſo divers kinde of game, and huntings, as the Stagge, Goates, Beares & Hares, in that part, which belongeth to the Tartarians, and the Turcks which lyeth next the Sea. There are horrible and hideous Mountaines, which part this Peninſula as the Alpes of Italie doe into the Septentrionall, & the Meridionall parts. Mahomet in the yeere 1475 poſſeſſed the Southerne part, whereof Capha, was the Metropolitan, & became tributaire; in the Northerne part, the Tartarians inhabited commonly called the Crimes, ſwarming up & downe in the great champian fields, betweene the rivers Boryſthenes, & the Tanais, having oftẽ changed paſture, & more then 400 yeers, accommodated themſelves with a town called Crimea, which they made their royall ſeate, and called themſelves Crimes. Afterward, they cut through the neck of this Peninſula, to make it like an Iland, and this cut & ditch, they called Precop, built a Citie, & the Kings ſeate upon it ſo named, which they alſo called Tartares precopenſes. Their King held aliance, and was in ſolemne league & confederacie with the Turke, after he had expulſed his bretheren, and preſſed hard the Citie of Capha, having encamped his Army before it, and he and his two Children were cut of by his Councellours corrupted by his Ennemies, leaving behinde him an unhappie teſtimonie of his amitie with the Ottomans. For, he being dead the Tartarians till then were free, and unſubdued, how good fellowes and bretheren they ſeemed to be to the Ottomans, at laſt were made ſubject, and became tributarie. And as other of the Turkiſh Provinces, were forced to receive for their Gouvernours, not a King, but a Begler-by, that is, a Vice-Roy, ſo they had one put over them, which gouverned them at the Turkes pleaſure. Now beſide Caſan, and Aſtracan, two Kingdomes of the Tartars, that manured the earth, & dwelt in houſes, which are at this daye ſubject to the Muſcovite; beſide the Precopians there are other Champian Tartars, which fleete up and downe in the Northerne plaines without keeping any ſetled place limits, and bounds of their poſſeſſions, devided into troops, and flocks in certaine Provinces, whence they take their name whereof wee will ſpeake in the Maps of Aſia. In the Southerne part ſtandeth the capitall Citie Capha, otherwiſe called Theodoſia, very famours for the commerce, and trading that is in it, and the ancient people of Genua. It lyeth upon the Sea-coaſt, & hath a very commodious haven, and well provided, yee may ſee beſides, that in the time of the Genawayes it was very rich, and had great reſort unto it; but after it fell into the Turkes hands: they ſo penned up the Italian Chriſtians, and uſed them ſo baſely, that now there remaineth no teſtimonies of their riches; and this Citie for the moſt part hath loſt her priſcaine glorie, and ſplendor. The Chriſtian Churches layd flat with the ground, their houſes ruinated, their walles and turrets demoliſhed, whereupon there were engraven many Geneva inſcriptions, all caſt downe, and is now inhabited by the Turks, Arrians, Jewes, and a few Italians, and Greekiſh Chriſtians, and yet mainteyneth it ſelfe in ſome reputation; becauſe of the trafick, which is in it, and the goodneſſe of the haven, lying ſo well for the commerce of this Byland: the ſoile beareth an infinite number of Fruits, of Vines, and of fine gardens. Beſide Capha, there are Precopia, which the ancient Grecians called Eupatoria, Pompeiolis, Sacer Lucus, Dromon, or Achilles Courſe, or Grecida, Heracleum or Heraclea, which at the firſt was but an obſcure Village, and a Caſtle of ſtone, ill fortifyed lying in the confins of the Taurick, or Scythian Cherſoneze, wherein the Princes of the Tartars, or Chams, as they call them, as petty Kings, and ſupreame Lords have a perpetuall Palatinate, which they terme Begum, or Perecopenſe of all, who keepeth diligently the paſſages aſwell of the Rivers Boryſthenes, as of the Tanais, and of all the neighbouring limits, and is appointed to gouverne over all thoſe Tartarians, which inhabite in the champians of Perecopia, and beſide them Collovia, a place of good trading, ſituated on the right hand of Perecopia, ſome ſeven miles diſtant from it: the Cham hath hath there a continuall Gouvernour of his owne. There is alſo Ingermenum, which hath a Fortreſſe of ſtone, a Temple, and a Vault under the ſaid Fortreſſe, and right over againſt it many notable things, carved in ſtone done with great art, and marvellous cunning, for it ſtandeth upon a large and a very high Mount, which made the Turks to give it this name, becauſe of the Caves and Vaults that are under it, which was a towne heretofore in great requeſt rich, and famous. Cherſoneſe, or Corſunum is the moſt ancient Citie of the Tauricks, which the Turkes call Sari Germenum, or the yellow Fortreſſe, for in this quarter, the Soile yeeldeth a yellow earth. The wonderful ruines which are ſeene there, teſtifie plainely, that it hath beene a ſumptuous, a rich and a famous place inhabited by the Grecians, the moſt ancient Citie of the whole Peninſula, very populous, and much renouned for the commodiouſneſſe of the haven. Iamboli, or Balacheium, a towne & Fortreſſe taketh the name from fiſh, becauſe the Sea here aboundeth with them. In this Citie the Genuwayes making uſe of the oppertunity of this place, made it a famous and a commodious harbour, and built there a moſt ſumptuous Caſtle well fortifyed: but now this Fortreſſe and Caſtle, houſes, walls, and ſtately towers with the Armes of the Genuwayes and their titles engraven upon them, are caſt downe, and wholly deſtroyed, this towne now being inhabited but by a few Grecians, Jewes, and Turkes. Mancopia or Mangutum, ſo named by the Turkes, lying along the mountaines and woods, is now not ſo neere the Sea; it hath two Caſtles in it with Churches; and two ſumptuous Grecian Palaces, and is watered with many riverets of an admirable cleareneſſe, ſpringing out of the Clifts, and Rocks. Cernum is a towne belonging to the Tartarians, under the juriſdiction of the Chams, which lyeth obſcure, and lowe, ſituated upon the mouth of Meotis, and upon that ſtraight, which he nameth the Cimmerian Boſphorus, and the Tartars call it, a towne a Caſtle fortifyed with a very ancient, large, and a loftie wall, and for the largneſſe & reputation thereof, differeth much from the other townes of the Mediterranean Tauricke. This towne in the times before the comming in of the Genuwayes into Taurick, ſeemeth to have beene inhabited, and manured with a great number of Mahomitan people, which came thether out of Aſia: for the ancient Mahomitan Temples ſtand aſwell within, as without it in great number, having Chaldean Characters engraven in great ſtones: it appeareth by the ruins thereof, and by the large circuit of this place, that in times paſt, it hath beene a very famous Citie, and was much inhabited by theſe people. The Cham hath a Mint in this towne, and alſo a Fortreſſe wherein the Chams Concubines are kept perpetually, even as long as they live: then upon the furthermoſt part of this region, ſtandeth the Citie Tanas, where the Tanais falleth into the Sea; the Ruſſians call it Azac, which is a place of great trading for all the Eaſterne nations, whether all come to buy and ſell at their pleaſure; there are ſome other townes beſide. The Rivers which water it, are great & many falling downe from the next Mountaines; the chiefe are Boryſthenes, commonly called the Nieper, having a moſt deepe, & a ſwift ſtreame, which running from the North, falleth into the boſome, or River Carcinit, which afterward diſchargeth it ſelfe in Pontus Euxinus upon Oczacovia, Don, Ariel, Samara, and many others. The Cimmerian Boſphorus, whereof wee have ſpoken even now, reacheth unto this Cherſoneſe, and is a ſtreight, which ſeparateth Europe from Aſia about the breadth of two thouſand paces, by which the Palus Meotide runneth, and diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Pontick-Sea; it is called Cimerian of the Bimmerians, who inhabited the coldeſt part thereof. The Palus Meotide, lyeth neere unto the mouth of Phaſis, which receiveth the Tanais into it, called by the Scythians the Mother of the punt, in regard chiefly of the abundance of waters, which fall into it, running out of the Cimmerian Boſphorus, and from divers other places, which make this Palus ſo to ſwell, that they overflow the ſhoars, and banks thereof, by receiving many Rivers into it: this Palus aboundeth in fiſh, & likewiſe Pontus Euxinus, whereof the upper part of the water is freſh, and the lower part brackiſh, at the firſt it was called Axenus Inhoſpitaliter, or according to Sophoclus Apoxinus, either becauſe no ſhipping could come to it, or elſe becauſe of the Barborous Scythians, which dwelt there, and ſlew and murthered all Forrainers & Newcommers into it. The Mountaines are very craggie, and troubleſome to clime and paſſe, eſpecially thoſe, which divide the Cherſoneſe in the midſt, there are divers other beſide very famous, whereof the greateſt, and the higheſt of all, is that which hath a great Lake upon the very top of it. They adminiſter their Lawes and Iuſtice according to the Mahometan Law, among the Tartars in the townes and Burroughs of the Cham and other Sultans. Their Prieſt called Cady, or Judges in the Bourroughs, Begis, or Juriſdictions, are perpetuall, and judge of injuries, betweeee man and man: but ſuch as concerne life and death, or theft, which wee call criminall, or civill, the Cham and his Counſellours judge and cenſure them, and they have no need of any Councellours at Lawe, or Atturneys, for they uſe no ſubtilities, excuſes, puttingsoff, or delayes, For the meaneſt and the worſt conditioned of the Tartars, or Strangers are quickly diſpatched by the Cham & his Judges, who alwayes give them hearing: they themſelves are plaintives & defendants, for they give free acceſſe, and audience to all men. They inſtruct their children in their youth in the Arabick letters, they keepe not their daughters at home, but ſend them abroad to be brought up, and inſtructed by their neereſt kindred, & their boyes growing bigge, are given to the Cham, or Sultans to ſerve them, and their daughters being of age, are given in marriage to the nobleſt Turkes, or Tartars. The chiefeſt, and the nobleſt Tartars follow the Princes Court, neither are they cloathed in coſtly apparell, nor make any oſtentation, but goe honeſtly, and comely according as decencie and neceſſitie requireth. They may have as many Wives, as they can well keepe, and maintaine, according to the Mahometan Lawe, and uſe to buy them ordinarily of the Petigorans, who though they doe not bring them up very delicately, nor keep them proudly, yet nevertheleſſe modeſtly, and cleanely according to the faſhion of that Countrie, but ſuch as beare them children, they make much of them, and they are kept more honourably, & in greater pompe. Before Straungers arrived in this Taurick, or peninſula, this people being wilde and ſauvage ſemed to have had many clowniſh manners, as appeareth yet among the ruder ſort of them: for as then they had not received the rights and Mahomitan Lawes, neither learning, nor civill manners: but now the Tartars have learned humanitie and civilitie of the Turkes, & their falſe ſervice of God; the moſt part of their Nobles are given to Hoſpitalitie. When the Cham walketh abroad, none is kept back from him, yea the meaneſt, and pooreſt may come before him, and having ſeene him, will preſently aske if he have any thing to ſay unto him: they reverence their Princes, and adore them as Gods. Their Judges follow the Mahometan Lawe, which are accounted perpetuall, and Spirituall Divines, and are held among them for men of Equitie, of an upright dealing, and of a honeſt reputation. They know not what controverſies and criminall accuſations of juſtice meane, neither of riots leſſe important to the interreſſed, much leſſe what envie, hatred, exceſſe and all kinde of luxurie, and likoriſhneſſe is, neither are they ambitious either in their lives, or in the manner of their cloathing. Neither doe they carrie in the Princes Court, or at home any bowes, arrowes, ſwords, or other armes, ſaving when they travell, and the Straingers which paſſe by the way-ſide, unto whome they are very kinde and loving, and are given to Hoſpitality. The nobleſt of them eate bread, meate and other victualls, and dinke aqur vita, and methegline. The Husbandmen, or the meaner ſort uſe no bread but eate honey, and have milke mingled with water, which they call Caſſa, and make cheeſe of it, and for their drinke they quench their thirſt with Mares milke. They cut the throats of their Camells, Oxen, and Horſe, when they ſee them taint and ſinke under their burden. For all thoſe which are Artiſans, or handie craft-men, or trade, are either Slaves, or Servants to the Chriſtians, or Turkes, Arrians, Jewes, Saraſins, Petigorians, which are Chriſtians, Philiſtins, or unknowne Cynganes, and people of a meane condition.

The deſcription of the Kingdome OF POLONIA.

THE Kingdome of Poland, taketh the name from the eveneſſe, & plaineneſſe of the feilds, which the Inhabitants in their language call Pole, becauſe the Countrie is ſo litle ſwolne with hills, ſo that one may travell through it in many places, & ſee not a hill. It is a large and a ſpacious Kingdome, which boundeth Northward upon Pomerania and Pruſſia, Eaſtward upon Mazovia and Lituania, on the South part lyeth Hungarie, and on the Weſtſide the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh, Sileſia & Moravia. It is in length 480 miles, & in breadth ſome 300. The aire is pure & good, but exceeding ſharpe, and the winter very cold: in ſo much that it yeeldeth neither grapes nor wines: otherwiſe it is exceeding fruitfull, producing al things needfull for the nouriſhment of man: yea and that in ſuch abundance, that it richly furniſheth other lands; ſo that Poland hath great trading with other Countries, & every yeere there is tranſported out of it great ſtore of corne and graine, as barly, rhye, beanes, peaſe, and ſuch like: alſo amber, wax, honey, furrs, flaxe, hempe, pitch, tarre, hopps and Pot-aſhes. Moreover, we muſt not conceale their trading in oxen and horſe, which are here very large and great, for your Poliſh beeves are very fatt, having an excellent taſt, and their horſe are ſent in great numbers into forraine Countries, eſpecially into Saxonie, and other parts of Germanie. In ſtead whereof they returne curious wines, ſpiceries, and diverſe other commodities, & have not onely all ſorts of wine, but that in an incredible abundance. A great part of the wealth of this land, is conſumed partly in ſpiceries, and partly in Silks, Satins, & Velvets, which are brought unto them from divers Countries. In every part of this Kingdome alſo, there are Salt-pits, out of which they pick great clodds of Salt, which being ground, and beaten to peeces, ſerve for the uſe of man. And though this Countrie is ſituated in a very colde climate: yet it produceth all ſorts of Fruits, as aples, peares, plumes, peaches, cherries, cheſt-nuts, pompions, &c. Alſo in the hills there are Mines, out of which they fetch all ſorts of Mettalls, & Mineralls. And albeit this land is for the moſt part fruitfull and levell: yet upon the confines of Hungarie, Sileſia and Ruſſia, there are great Mountaines, and great woods, wherein there are an incredible number of wild beaſts for hunting, and all ſorts of foule for hauking, and fowling: eſpecially, Beares, wild Horſes, wild Bulls, Elands, Staggs, wild Aſſes, &c. There are alſo in many places ſtanding waters, as Meeres and Pooles, wherein there are taken abundance of fiſh.

The chiefeſt of the Rivers is the Weichſel, which hath it ſpring-head out of the Sarmatian Mountaines, lying betweene the Confines of Sileſia, Moravia, and Hungarie, & running through Poland, being 400 miles navigable and full of ſhipping at laſt diſchargeth himſelfe by Danzick into the Balticke-Sea. The other Rivers, which runne into the Weichel are theſe, the San, Bugh, Hypanis or Bogus: Pilcza and ſome other Brookes, which for brevitie ſake wee will omit. The Warth ſpringeth forth from betweene the Frountiers of Sileſia and Poland, and watering a part of Poland, runneth by Cuſtrin in the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh into the Oder.

Now concerning this nation, it ſeemeth their offſpring was from the Sclavonian and Sarmatian people, who in ancient times came out of Sarmatia, and inhabited here on this ſide of the Weichſel, & tooke in thoſe parts & places, which the Vandals in former times had poſſeſſed, who had ſpread themſelves all over this land, and brought many Countries under their power and ſubjection. This Countrie at the firſt, for a long time was gouverned by their Princes, who contented themſelves onely with the title of Dukes, untill the Emperour Otho the third, made this land a Kingdom, and exalted the Prince thereof Boleſlaus Chrobrus, anno 1001 to the dignitie of a King, and honored him with the Poliſh Crowne, of which title and name 77 yeeres afterward, when as Boleſlaus Audax had tyranically murthered Stanilaus, the Biſhop of Cracow, they were degraded from by the Pope of Rome, which title Premiſlaus, who otherwiſe was but Duke of great Poland and Pomer. Obtained againe in the yeere 1295, from wch time forward unto this preſent yeere, there hath been 16 Kings, who have ruled, and kept this Kingdome. The revenues of this King are about 600000 crownes, moſt of wch he putteth up in his Coffer: for the Kingdome is divided into 4 parts; every of which keepeth the King and Court in allowance, & expences a quarter of the yeare, & contributeth money to his warrs, and the mariage of his daughters. The Gouvernment conſiſteth out of two degrees, the Spirituality, Nobilitie and Gentrie. Over the Spirituality the King hath no power, neither can he undertake any thing, which concernes the affaires of the land; neither hath he power to doe the leaſt thing, without the fore knowledge and preconſideration of the Councill of the Land, as to beginne a warre, to raiſe any new toules & tributes, to eſtrange any thing from the Kingdome, to make or ordaine any new Lawes or Statutes, to demaund any money of his ſubjects over and above his ordinarie revenue, for the coyning of money, not to nominate any certaine Succeſſour, but all muſt be done upon the Realmes-day, which the Poles call Rokosch: ſo that ſome compare this PoliſhGovernment, to the Government of the Venetian State.

The election, or calling of the King, is made by the Senatours, or Palatines of the Kingdome, who have a great power, and authority in this Realme, and are ordained as Councellours to the King: they are in number 34, among the which there are three Lord Caſtellans and a Captaine. The moſt part of the Nobilitie are men of great judgement and underſtanding, which they encreaſe much by their travells, & ſpeake divers languages, eſpecially Latine. They are hardy and undaunted men, that will not lightly refuſe to give battaile to the mightieſt and proudeſt Ennemie, having ſhown themſelves brave Souldiers, eſpecially on horſeback, conſidering that the moſt part of their ſtrength conſiſteth in their Poliſh horſe, whereupon they mounte themſelves, and bring them galantly into the field.

Seing then that Poland, beſides the other incorporate Countries, is divided into great & ſmall Poland, whereof the one lyeth more Northward, moiſtned by the River of Warta, the other Southward, and is watered by the River of Weichell, we will conſider the townes of both parts, whereof the chiefeſt in great Poland is Poſna or Poſen, ſituated upon two ſmall hills, & the aforeſaid River of Warta, running betwixt them, which is girt about with a double wall, and is built of bricke, having upon the one ſide of the Warta great and large ſuburbs, which by nature is ſhut in with riſing hills and deepe ditches. It hath every yeere two principall marts, it is the Biſhops Sea, and all theſe townes following are under the juriſdiction thereof, as namely, the Hamlet of Koſcien, lying 8 miles from it betweene mooriſh grounds: alſo Myedzyrtecze, whoſe houſes are all built with wood, & lyeth not farre from Sileſia and Pomerania, the third is Oſtreſow, ſituated upon a plaine field betweene two woods, the reſt are Wſchow, Sremick, Proneтz and Rogozno. Caliſia is alſo a towne encompaſſed with walls. Upon the River Proſna lye theſe townes, as Gneſna, Pyzdry, Wartha, Nachlo, Land, Konyn, Slupeza & Kolo, which it ſeemeth hath had in former times both walls and a Caſtle in it.

The towne of Gueſna is likewiſe environned with a wall, & lyeth upon a plaine field, between ſome pooles and hillocks, and was the firſt towne, which was built upon the Lech, wherein Boteſlaus Chabrics received from Otho the third the Crown of this Kingdome, for which the Kings yet to this day hold in great requeſt. Siradia is a towne built with wood, having a wall about it, to which Vielunia, Sadeck, Petricovia, Rozpriza and Spicimiria are ſubject. Petricovia lyeth in a mooriſh place. Lancizia is a fine towne, having a wall and a moate about it. And Orlonia hath Piatec, Breſinia, Kornazew, Biechow, and ſome other townes under it. Cuiavia, or Vladiſlavia the great, hath ſubject nnto it Bidgoſtia, lying upon a navigable River called Buda, out of which the Marchants commodities of Poland are brought into the Weichſel. Under Breſtia are Radricion, Cruſphicia and Cowale. Cruſphicia next unto Gneſna, is accounted one of the chiefeſt townes of Poland, built wholly with wood, having a Caſtle built with bricks, lying upon the Lake Goplo, out of which in former times many mice came, & by a ſpeciall judgement and puniſhment ſent from God, ate up Pompilius the Duke of Poland, who dwelt in this Caſtle. Rava is a towne built of wood, and ruleth over theſe townes following, Sochaczovia, Goſtinin and Cambin. Ploczko is a faire towne, ſtanding upon a hill neere unto the Weichſel. and is the Biſhops-Sea. Dodrinia ſtandeth upon a clift by the ſide of the Weichſel, in ancient times it had a faire Caſtle in it, but was deſtroyed by the Croſſier-knights, unto this belongeth Slonsk, Ripin and Gorzno.

Cracow is the capitall Citie of Poland the leſſer, lying upon the Weichſel in a plaine: it is doubble walled very ſtrong, and hath a Caſtle ſtanding upon the top of a high clift, which they call Vanel. In this Citie the Kings of Poland hold their Court, and have their Sepulchres in it: beſide it is the Univerſitie, but hath noe chiefe Advocate in it, becauſe the King himſelfe adminiſtreth that place. The Caſtellan of Cracow taketh place of all the Palatines in the Councill, whereas in other Provinces they take place of all others. Neere unto this Citie lye three other ſmall townes, to wit, Clepardia, Stradomia and Caſimiria. There are 2 Dukedomes within this juriſdiction, namely, Oſwieckz & Zator. Sandomiria lyeth upon the Wiechſel 22 miles from Cracow, ſituated upon a hill, encompaſſed with a wall, having an ancient Caſtle, which hath beene able to defend it ſelfe againſt a great power. Theſe townes following are under it, firſt Checiny ſtanding in a plaine field, and is famous in regard of the mines that are neere it, wherein they finde Azur and Silver: then Korczin, Wiſlicia, Pilzno, Opoczno, Radomia Poloniec, Zannich or Zarnow and Malogoſt. Lublin lying on the other ſide of the Weichſel, is fortifyed with a wall, a moate, and a ſtrong Caſtle. It hath three free-marts in the yeere, unto which there reſorts divers Turcks, Armenians, Grecians, Dutches, Muſcovites, Lieflanders, and a great number of other nations beſide. In the times of Paganiſme, they adored for their Gods, Iupiter, Pluto, Diana, Mars, Ceres and Venus, as other Heathens did. In the yeere 963 they received the Chriſtian faith. At this day there are in Poland many religions and ſects, ſome follow the Romiſh, others the reformed church, and embrace the doctrine of Luther and Calvin. There are alſo Ieſuites, Arrians, Anabaptiſts and Socinians, which Sects are here all tolerated.

PRVSSIA.

PRUSSIA, lying in the furtheſt part of Germanie, tooke the name from the Boruſſian people: for Ptolomee declareth, that they pitching themſelves downe neere unto the Ryphean Mountaines, which run Northward, not farre from the ſpringhead of the River Tanais, at laſt grew weary of that place, & fell with all their might into this Countrie, naming it after their owne name Boruſſia, which by altering of a letter or two is called of this daye Pruſſia. On the Weſt ſide this Countrie is bounded with the River Viſtula, or the Weiſsle, and Northward it is watered all along with the Gulfe of the Balticke Sea, on the Eaſtſide the Alani, fronter upon them, and Southward the Hamaxoby. It is in length from the North to the South part 58 Polonian miles, and from the towne of Torvina to the Caſtle Memula it hath ſome 150 miles in breadth: the aire is pleaſant and healthfull, but raw and coldiſh. The whole Countrie is very fertill, and in that they are much more happie, than their neighbours: the Soile yeeldeth great ſtore of Wheate, which for goodneſſe putteth downe both Polonia and Lituania. It is as rich in honey and Bees, as any other Countrie that lyeth Northward: there are in it abundance of Cattaile, and excellent hunting in the mightie great and thick woods, which are ſtored with all kinde of wilde beaſt: beſide, Beares, wilde Boores, and Red-deere, whereof they are full, there are alſo wilde Bulls, exceeding ſtrong, and ſwift, which are commonly called Buffles. They bred alſo Biſontes, with long and rough haire, which are a kinde of wilde Oxen, and of wilde Horſes, upon which the Inhabitants feede, they have alſo in them abundance of Alces, which they commonly call Elands, Mules, and Martins. Till the time of Frederick the I I. Emperour, many of the Pruſſians were Pagans, and Idolaters, under whoſe gouvernment the Croſſier-dutch-Knights ſubdued them An. 1215, at which time they received the Chriſtian Religion, but afterward in the yeare 1419 the Provinces & townes of Pruſſia, being forced thereunto through the avarice, and crueltie of the Croſſier-Knights, they became ſubject to Caſimirus King of Poland, and 38 yeeres after, renewing their revolt, they ſould Marieburgh with ſome other Caſtles and Townes to the King for 47600 pounds: but afterward the Marie-Burgers refuſing obedience to the King, the warrs continued ſo long on both ſides with variable Succeſſe, till at length the whole Countrie came under the power of Albert of Brandenburg, the laſt dutch-maſter, who at Cracouw, was made by Sigiſmund King of Poland, a temporall Prince, and a Knight. Now the Barbarians being partly expulſed, and partly converted, all this ſpacious region was inhabited by the Polanders, and the Germans: ſaving onely that there were ſome reſidue of theſe Barbarians left neere unto the Lake of Curlandike, which agree with the Livonians and the Lituanians, in manners, cloathes, and behaviour. It is reported Prince Veneduſus divided this Countrie into twelve Dukedomes; whereof the names are theſe: Sudavia, Sambia, Natangia, Nadravia, Slavonia, Bartonia, Galindia, Warmia, Hogerlandia, Culmigeria, Pomiſania, and Michlovia. Among which Sudavia was ſo ſpoiled by the Croſſier-Knights, that of this brave Dukedome, there are ſcarcely ſeven Villages left in the juriſdiction of Luptavia. In Sambia there are manie townes, as Lebenicht, Kneyback, Konincks-bergen, Fiſh-huſen, Lechſtet and Mulmulbergh. In Natangia there are theſe townes, Valdonia, Girania, Centia, Creneburga, Heilighenbeil, Fridlandia, Schippenbeil, & Brandenburgh. In Nadrovia, there are ſcarcely any Peſants Cottages found, all being deſtroyed. In Slavonia are Ragneta, Tilha, Ronum, Licovia, Salavia, Labia, Tapia, Vintburgia, Chriſtaderder, Batia, Ceſtia, Norbeitia, Venſdorp, Angenburgh, and Dringoford. In Bartonia are Nordenburgh, Iobansburgh, Jurgburg, Inſerburg, Richtenerder Bartonia, & Ronum. In Galinda are Orteleburgh, Raſtenburgh, Nyeburgh, Paſſenhum, Dreſchlovia, Lucia, and Lutzenburgh. In Warmia are Reſſel, Streburgh, Biſſchofſteyn, Wartenburgh, Allenſteyn, Melſatia, Helsborgh, Wernieditum, and Guſtedia. In Hoogelandia are Brandenburgh, Tolkiemet, Manhuſen, Scharpony, & Elingba, the greateſt of all, built by the Sea-coaſt very famous for Marchandiſe, and rich Citizens. In Culmigeria are Turunia, a towne of excellent trading lying upon the Viſtula, Culmina, Wentſlavia, Aldufia, Geandentz, Gugeleburgh, Sconſa, Stesburgh, Bartonia, Neumarckt, Rogoſna, Papania, Fridech, Lipno, Leſna, Golba, Luben, Reden, Bergelavia, Lanterguria. In Pomiſania is Marieburgh, a great towne built an. 1302: Menticha, Stum, Chriſtburgh, Prenſmarck, Salfeld, Merinee, Heland, Luhſtadt, Oſterrada, Roſenburgh, Marienburgh, Garneſia, Eulonia Germanica, Lebmulia, Hohenſteyn, Schonenbergh, Culenburgh, Neunbergh, and Salavia. In Michlovia all the townes, but Straburgh are ruinated, & deſtroyed. The whole Countrie of Pruſſia is very commodious for the tranſportation, and bringing in of all ſorts of Marchandiſes, and wares, & that in regard of the many Rivers, Gulfs, and havens in it. The chiefe Rivers are Viſtula, Nemein, Cronen, Nogat, Elbinga, Uſera, Alla, Pregol, Oſſa, Urebincx, Lica, and Lavia, in all which as alſo in the Lakes and Meeres lying next the Sea, there are taken an incredible number of fiſh: upon the Pruſſian coaſt they finde abundance of amber, which will burne like pitch, and is likewiſe good for badd eyes. The Grecians called it Electrum, and named it Electror, from the Sunne in their fixtion of Phaëton. The Amber is of divers ſorts, the whiteſt ſmelleth beſt, at the firſt it was very cheape, and not much eſteemed, next that the yellow, and graye-coloured, the yellow is in moſt requeſt eſpecially, that which is lucent & ſhining through, or of a firie coullour, there is an other ſort, which they call honey-amber, which being chafed hath an attractive vertue in it like the Adamant, which draweth yron and ſtrawes to it, and beſides is good for divers diſeaſes. This Countrie hath in it exceeding huge woods, & wilderneſſes, out of which abundance of wood and timber is hewen down, aſwell for ſhipping, as building of houſes, and other neceſſaries, as alſo many long maſts, which are tranſported into farre Coutries: beſides this, they are rich in Bees, honey, and wild beaſts, whereof the inhabitants make a great deale of profit; at this daye it is divided into two parts, that is, the Kings Pruſſia, & the Dukes. The King of Poland properly poſſeſſeth all that part of the Countrie, which lyeth on both ſides of the Wixel, till it diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Sea, with the Ile which is ſhut in betweene the Viſtula, and Nogato; likewiſe all the Townes and Caſtles, lying upon the new Gulfe, as Elbingh, Tolkemit, Frawenbergh, and Brunsbergh unto the outlet of the Paſſary. The whole Biſhoprick of Warmia lying Southward is a great and a fertill Countrie, full of townes, and Villages, ſituated in the very midſt of the Duchie of Pruſſia, which is under the Kings commaund, and doth immediately belong to the King as well as Poland doth, and is a part of his Kingdome, and hath their owne publick Councill, Lawes, Statuts, & rights (who nevertheleſſe may appeale unto the King) and it hath its owne Treaſurie or exchequer, & alſo a ſpeciall manner of warring. They have 14 Counſellours in all, namely two Biſhops, the one of Warmia, the other of Culmen: three Palatins, that is, of Culmen, Marieburgh, and Pomeran: three Caſtellains, to wit, of Culmen, Elbinga, and Dantzick: three Chamberlains, and three chiefe townes, as of Torne, Elbinga, and Dantzick, theſe meete every halfe yeere, to deliberate, to conſult, and to adminiſter juſtice, in May at Marieburgh, and at Michelmas at Grudent. The Captaines or Gouvernours of the Caſtles, belonging to the Kings revenew are 18 in number, to wit, the Caſtle of Marieburgh, of the Palatinate, of Stuma, of Gneva, Meva, and Stargardia: in the Pomeranian Palatinate, alſo of Slochovia, above Tuchola, Derſania, & Puſci. In Culmen are Brodnica, Grudent, Radine, Colba, Regoſna, Rogenhauſen. The Dukedome of Pruſia in former times, did belong unto the Croſſier Lords of the Dutch order, which afterward was made a Dukedome, under Albert Marckgrave of Brandenburgh, Maſter of this dutch order, and was rent from the Romiſh Empire, Anno 1525, and then came under the Crowne of Poland, which Prince ſitteth in Councill, and upon their Land-dayes or great Meetings taketh place next unto the King: and if any ſtrife ariſe betweene the King, and the Duke, the ſame is appeaſed, and pacified at Marieburg, or at Elbinga by the Kings Councellours, who are bound by new oaths, to judge according unto right & equitie. The Gentrie and others, that have any action againſt the Duke, that is referred to the Loan-months, which the Duke hath ordained therefore, from whence they may freely appeale to the King, & the Dukes Councill reſiding at Marieburgh, but each partie muſt be cited thether, where the lands, or goods are in controverſie, or where the plaintive dwelleth, for he is not bound to appeare before any outlandiſh or ſtraung Judges. The Court-Juſtice is adminiſtred by five Noble men, and three Lawyers. The Judges in the Provinces are ſo ordered, that of three, which every Province nominateth, the Prince chooſeth out one of them, which is to give ſentence, according to the Culmenſian rights, and the conſtitution of the Province. If likewiſe the Prince ſhould attempt any thing againſt their priviledges, liberties, rights, & cuſtomes, and that upon the requeſt and deſire of the ſubjects it be not amended, then it is free for the States of that Province (without being accounted either Rebels or Mutiniters, to have their recourſe to the Kings Majeſtie of Poland, and by vertue of the Covenant, made betweene the King, and the Duke may ſeeke from him the protection of their priviledges. In the Duchie of Pruſſia there are two Biſhops, the one of Sambia, who reſideth at Coninckſbergh, the other in Pomeſania at Marienwerder, having an abſolute Spirituall juriſdiction, without any empeachment. Touching the Idolatry & manners of the ancient Boruſians, Meletius reporteth ſtrange things of them in his tenth Breviate, dedicated to Georgius Sabinus: namely, that in ſteed of God, they worſhipped the Devill, which ſome of them doe ſecretly yet unto this day. Moreover, they uſed in times paſt to adore Idolatrouſly all kinds of uncleane Beaſts, as Serpents and Adders, as Servants and Meſſengers ſent them from the Gods, which they kept in their houſes, and ſacrificed unto them, as their Oeconomicall Gods, ſaying, that the Gods dwelt in the woods and wilderneſſes, and that they muſt offer there unto them, to appeaſe them, & that from them they muſt obtaine the Sun, & rayne. They were likewiſe of that opinion, that they ought to worſhip all ſorts of wilde beaſts, eſpecially the Alces, or Elands, which kept themſelves in the woods, as Servants to the Gods, and therefore they ought to doe them no harme: they beleeved alſo, that the Sun and the Moone, were the chiefeſt and primarie of all the Gods. They worſhiped the thunder, and lightning, as other Heathens did, and beleeved that by praying unto it, they might hinder or raiſe ſtormes & tempeſts. In their offrings they ſacrificed Goates, in regard of the fruitfulneſſe of this beaſt: and ſaid alſo that the Gods held their habitation in great hollow trees, as in the oaken, and in the alder trees, & others beſide: for which cauſe they would not cut down thoſe trees, but worſhipped them, as the houſes of the Gods. So great was the Idolatrie and Superſtition of theſe Boruſſians in former ages, and ſo Barbarous, that they held it for a thing impoſſible, when it was tould them, that men could expreſſe their mindes by letters.

SEING that the Romiſh Empire, is now amonge the Germans, and politikly divided into diuers members; I haue thought it acceptable to the Reader, to followe that order, and diſpoſition, which I finde written in the Matricule of this Empire, & which at this daye is moſt in uſe, and then will proceed to the particular members of the Empire, in their ſeuerall Mapps, that with the more eaſe, the Diligent Reader maye finde the place, and ſite, where every Countrie lieth. To that end, I haue found two coppies of this Matricule, the one in writing, the other printed at Venice in the Italian tongue, both which are much corrupted: likewiſe, I underſtand, that now there is an other forme of Matricule, in this Empire. As for me, I deſire to be excuſed, if there be found any thing in the deſcription of this Empire, either too much, or too litle: for my drift and intention is not to particularize preciſely upon euery matter and point, which indeed is not poſſible for me to doe upon ſuch corrupted coppies: the more when I conſider that there are many Countries, which heretofore belonged to the Empire, which appertaine now unto ſome particular princes, either by exchange, engagement, ſaile, or by donation, in recognition of their great ſervice, and deſerts done to the Empire, either by redeeming, or for ſome other occaſions: conſidering alſo, that it beſeemeth not a Geographer, to handle the affaires of a ſtate, but onely my ſcope is, to make knowne, what this Matricule is, & to ſhewe the faire diſpoſition of the Empire, and the diſtribution thereof throughout Germanie: by which meanes, both Geographie, and Policie, may be illuſtrated, and giue helpe the one to the other. Behold then this is the order, and the forme of the Eſtabliſhment of the Empire following.

The Emperour is the Head of the Empire.

THe Romane Empire hath three members, (at whoſe meetings all cauſes concerning the Empire are conſulted off & reſolued) to wit, 7 Electours, which were ordayned by Pope Gregorie the X. in the yeere of Chriſt 1273 and were confirmed by Charles the fourth, as Onuphrius witneſſeth in the Comices of the Empire, and alſo Ioannes Aventinus lib. 5. in his Hiſtorie of Bavaria. Vnto them it belongeth to chooſe an Emperour. The ſecond member is the Spirituall, and Temporall Princes, and the third are the free imperiall Townes.

The firſt member then of the Empire are ſeuen Electours, namely

For the Temporallity.

The King of Bohemia, the great Cup-bearer of the Empire.

The Count-Palatine of the Rhyne, great Carver, or rather high Stuard of the Empire.

The Duke of Saxony, Lord high Mariſhall of the Empire.

The Marqueſſe of Brandenburg, Lord high Chamberlaine of the Empire.

The ſecond member are the Princes, Earles, Knights, and other of the Nobility and Centrie, whoſe names are hereunto annexed, and are noted in the Mapps by their ſeuerall ciffers in the Kreytz or circles, that they maye more eaſely be found.

Beſide the orders of theſe 3. members of the Empire for the avoyding and preventing of all diſſentions in the Empire, to the end that the Common peace of Germanie may be kept and mainteyned, and that the Princes thereof might liue in peace & unitie one with an other, they haue devided ſome Provinces of the Empire into ſeverall Iuriſdictions or parts, which they call Kreitzen or Circles, in which they eſtabliſhed certaine ſpeciall Imperiall Counſellours, namely, of the Circles. Firſt of all Anno 1500. ſixe at Ausburgh: Afterward in the yeere 1522. ten at Nurnbergh, & euery Circle chooſe out of them a temporall Gouvernour, either a Prince and Earle, or a Baron from among the Chiefeſt of the Nobilitie: unto whome out of the ſame body were added foure wiſe, and honorable Counſellours, being of the temporality. Wee will now then ſhewe the number, and the difference of the Circles, but will reſerue the principalities & members thereof to their particular Mapps.

The firſt Circle or Kreyts is the Franconian, which ſhall be diſcribed in the Map of Frankenland.

The ſecond is the Bavarian, which is deſcribed in the Map of Bavaria.

The third is the Auſtrian, ſpecified in the Map of Auſtria.

The fourth is the Schvvavish, deſcribed in the Map of VVirtenbergh.

The 5. is the Rhynish, and is declared in the Map of Nether-Elſas.

The 6. is of the Primo-Electour on the Rhyne, deſcribed in the Map of the Palatinate.

The 7. is the Netherlandish, or VVeſtphalian, conteyned in the firſt Map of Weſtphalia.

The 8. is the Vpper-Saxen which is deſcribed in the ſame Mapp.

The 9. is the Nether Saxon, and is deſcribed in the ſame Mapp.

The 10. is the Borgonian, deſcribed in the Map of High-Bourgonie.

The Romish Imperial Chamber.

Beſide this Councill of the Circles, there is an Imperiall Chāber, erected at Spier, in which all difficult cauſes that happen within the Empire are decided & ended, wherein commonly a temporall Prince, or at leaſt an Earle, or a Baron, is ordayned to ſitt as Iudge, or Preſident, if he be qualified to beare ſuch a place: unto him his imperiall Majeſtie, as Aſſeſſors, and fellovv Iudges and tvvo others from among the Earles, and Barons degree; tvvo Lavvyers, and tvvo more choſen out of the Knights, in regard of their Landt, vvhich they hold by inheritance in the Empire or from the Empire, being 6. in number. To theſe alſo euerie Prince-Electour added one, and euerie of the Circles tvvo, vvhereof the one halfe are taken out of the Nobilitie and Knighthood, and the other from among the Lavvyers.

THE

GERMANIE.

WE come now to the deſcription of High-Dutchland, or Germanie, called by Ptolomie Great, being the moſt ſpacious Coũtrie of all Europe, and the onely ornament of the Romiſh Empire, which we will firſt paſſe ouer in Generall, & then come to the particularities.

The originall of the name Germania.

And firſt of all wee will begin with the name, becauſe that about the derivatiõ of the name Germania there are diverſe writters haue their ſeverall opinions; for ſome of them doe mainteyne, that German is a Dutch word, & is as much to ſay as a Gaer-man, which ſignifieth all, or a compleate man, in regard of their Martiall, and virill proweſſe. Others, take this name from the ſteadfaſt and conſtant fidelitie, and faithfulneſſe, which this Dutch nation beare the one to the other; whereby they ſeeke to eternize their name. Some againe miſſe not much the marke, which fetch it from their militarie honour, whereof they make profeſſion, and in ſtead of VVarr-men call them Germans. Others againe are of the opinion, that it commeth from the Latine word Germani, as having this name genuini given them, becauſe this nation ſhould ſurpaſſe all other people in retayning of their ancient Countrie manners, and ſimplicity: but it ſeemeth the Authour of this dreame ſought hereby to flatter his owne nation, ad followed herein Strabo, and Livius, who fell into the like errour, in ſaying, that this nation were truely, and rightly called Germani by the Romans, becauſe they reſembled the Celtians, as their bretheren in their manners of living, and in the ſtature and talneſſe of their bodies, having red and yellowiſh haire. Ioannes Goropius Becanus doth not improperly deriue their name, from the word Geren, which ſignifieth to compell or to drawe unto them: of which opinion Tacitus ſeemeth alſo to be, ſaying in his treatie de Moribus Germanorum, that the word Germania is novell and lately come up, ſeing that thoſe who firſt paſſed the Rhyne, and whom the Gauls had chaſed awaye, were ſometimes called Tungri, and at other times Germani: ſo that the name of this nation, and not of the people, came at the firſt litle by litle in uſe, out of feare of the Conquerour, and a while after this name (as from themſelues) was impoſed upon them. There are ſome againe, which call them Germans from the verbe Geren, which betokeneth to aſſemble, becauſe they were Forrainers, and a people gathered up together. Moreouer, ſome thinke, that this name is derived from Garra or Guerra, giving thereby to underſtand, that they are a militarie, and a warrlike nation. Alſo a very learned man in Saxonie giveth out, that the Germani, were ſo named from Garmanis a people of Aſia, which Lucan alſo ſuppoſeth, even as the Saxons are ſo called from Sacis. In an other place, he fetcheth it from the Hebrevv word Gerimani, which ſignifieth in this language, ſtrangers, poore and neceſſitous. Peucerus goeth further in ſhewing his affection to his native Countrie, naming the Germans Hermanner, that is, men ſkillfull in warre.

But Learned Iunius fetcheth this name fartheſt of all, and ſaith, that they haue their deſcent ſince Noahs floud, and that when Noah divided the whole world among his three Sonns, Iaphet had Europe for his lott, whoſe Sonne was called Gomer, as appeareth in the, writ of Moſes. He had alſo three Sonns, namely Aſhkenaz, Riphath, and Togarmah. From this Togarmah ſaith Iunius, the Dutches are deſcended, though the Rabbins will haue it to be Aſhkenaz: for in this word Thogarmah or rather The-germah, is in all appearance the originall of the name German, as if one would ſay, The Germans, the Dutches.

Iaphet the Son of Noah inhabited Dutchland.

Some name alſo this part of Europe Almagnie, and the Inhabitans thereof Almanes, which name they had giuen them, when as the Romaine Empire began to decline, and decay. Beroſus ſaith, that they tooke this name from Hercules Alemannus, who ruled ouer this people. Others againe fetch this name from Manno, their Idoll, Sonne of Tuiſcone. Aſinius Quadratus a credible Hiſtorian, will haue theſe people to be called Almanes, becauſe they were men gathered together in one, and as it were a hotchpot, or mixture of all kinds of men. Thoſe that pretend that Almanie beareth the name from the Lake Lemanie, I cannot ſee with what probability of truth they ſhould call High-Dutchland ſo, from a Lake, or a Meere, which lieth without their frountiers in Savoye: except ſome would mainteyne, that the Lacus Acronius or the Boden-Sea, ſhould be the ſame Lacus Lemanus, upon both whoſe ſhoars the Almanes inhabited, according to the teſtimonie of Ammianus in his 15. booke. And albeit that ſome doe mingle the Germans and Almanes together, yet it is manifeſt enough, that they were diſtinguiſhed the one from the other. As Spartianus in the life of Mario writeth thereof in this wiſe. All Almanie, and all Germanie, vvith the other adiacent people &c. And Flavius Vopius in the life of Probus, vvhereof the Francks are vvitneſſes, vvhoſe habitations are neere the unpaſſable marſches, and moores. Alſo the Germans and Almanes are vvitneſſes, vvhich are farre remote from the Rhyne: Other teſtimonies wee will paſſe ouer for brevitie ſake.

The originall of the name Almagnie.

We finde alſo, that this Countrie was named by ſome Teutonia, and that from their Generall Teuton: others are of opinion, that this Teutonia (which is called in Dutch, Teutſche, of the Italians Tedeſchi, or that thoſe whome they call Teutonici, & their Countrie Teutſch land) is ſo named from Thuiſton, which ſome alſo name Tuiſcon, and verely thinke that he was one of the Sonns of Noach, wereof Tacitus maketh mention tion in these words. They praise and commend (saith he) in their ancient Verses and Tunes (vvhich are in stead of their Annalls) their God Thuiston, sprung out of the Earth, and his Sonne Mannum, as the founders and offspring of their nation. Strabo placeth the same in Nerico, or Bavaria, some againe are of the opinion, that this Tuisco should haue held his residencie at Collen; therefore the place lying right ouer against it, beareth still the name of Dutch. The inhabitants call this Countrie Teusilland. yet to this day Teutch-land, the Forrainers Alemaigne, the Slavonians Niemecha, the Greekes Elamags, and the Turcks Alaman, and thus much for the name of Dutch-land.

Touching the Frontiers and Limits of Germanie, all Writers doe not agree therein: for the most ancient Historiographers confine Dutch-land to lye betweene the Rhyne, the Donavv, the maine Sea, the riuer Tanais, & Pontus Euxinus. The others following, The bounds & limits. among which are reckoned Strabo, Ptolomie, Mela, Plinius, and some other Grecian, and Latine Writers, make the Rhyne, and the Vistula to be the bounds of high Dutch-land. Tacitus writeth that not so much the Vistula, as the terrour, feare & mountaines, part the Dutches from the Daceans, and Sarmatans. At this daye under the name of Germanie are counted all these Countries which speake Dutch, and therefore passing the bounds of Ptolomie, Germanie contayneth in it Rhetica, Vindelicia, Austria, and part of Illyricum, unto the Edges of the Mountaines of Trent. Likewise, on the other side of the Rhyne the Dutches possessed the Romaine Garnisons, and Colonies, to wit, Constance, Basill, Straesburg, Spier, VVorms, Cobelentz, Bon, Collen, and other places, euen to the Seaside. For as Ambrosius witnesseth in his second Hexaméron, that the Rhyne heretofore was the bounds of the Romish Empire; where, upon the left side towards Gaule, the Romane Presidents, and Gouvernours warred continually upon the Dutches, partly to hinder their inroads & incursions, and partly, that they themselues might fall upon the Dutches, and that they might the better defend those Dutches, which came under their protection. And this was the onely cause that so manie ancient Townes where built upon the Gaulish side of the Rhyne, and scarcly none on the other side, as the same likewise is seene along the Donavv. At this day also the Helvetians or Svvitsers are reckonned among the Dutches, & also whole Prussia beyond the Vistula or VVeixsel, so that the Confines of Germanie at this time, extend themselues farther, than they did in the dayes of Ptolomie. For Westward they passe the Rhyne, as farre as Picardie and Burgundie, which are parts of France, & Southward they reache beyond the Donaw unto the Alpes, & Eastward farre beyond the Vistula, and Northward it is bounded with the Ocean Sea.

The devision. The chiefest parts, and Countries of Germanie, as well great as small, are these following: Namely the The Kingdomes. Kingdome of Bohemia being a Prince-Electorate. The Kingdome of Poland, though they speake an other language then the Dutch, and though it be not contayned in the Imperiall Matricule, which nevertheless, becaus it is within the Limits of the Vistula, & lyeth in old Germanie, we will comprehend it among the Mapps of Germanie. Likewise the Kingdome of Hungarie, though it lyeth beyond the bounds of old Germanie, neuertheless, becaus many excellent Emperours haue bene made out of it, and in regard it ruleth ouer many Countries belonging to the Empire, wee will ioyne it with Germanie. Now the Dukedomes The Dukedomes. follow, to wit, Vpper Saxonie, the Arch-Dukedome of Austria, the Dukedomes of Holsteyn, Mecklenburg, Pomeren, Lunenburgh, Lauvvenburgh, Brunsvvyck, The Princedomes. Meissen, Slesia, Moravia, Cleve, Berge, Gulick, Franconia, Bavaria, VVirtenberg, Svvavia. The Prince-Electorate of the Rhyne, the Palatinate of Bavaria. The Lant- The Earledomes. grave of Hessen, of Duringen, the Vpper & Nether Elsatia, the Prince-Electorate, and Marquisates of Brandenburgh, and of Baden. The Earledomes of Embden, of Oldenburg, Benthem, Lip, Diepholt, Huy, Mansfelt, Anholt, Stolbergh, Tirol, &c. and seing that Livonia or Liefland, is under the subjection of the Dutches, wee haue rekonned it also in Germanie.

Having declared the situation, and bounds of Ger- The temperature. manie, now followeth the qualitie, temperature, and fertilitie thereof; caused by the Climates, and the aspect of the heauens. Germanie then lyeth in the Northerne temperate Zone, under the 6. 7. and 8. Climates, betweene the degrees of latitude 47. and 55. and of longitude 24. and 46. The longest day in Summer in the Southerne paralell is 15. houres and a halfe. and in the Northerne paralell is 17. houres and a quarter: The circumference of this large Countrie is 2600. English miles: the figure is almost an exact square, each side being in length 650. miles. And though Cornelius Tacitus writeth, that Germanie is of a sharpe, and a rough Aire, as likewise Seneca maketh mention, that they haue as it were a continuall The Soile. Winter: yet it appeareth at this present to be of an other countenance, as having the Aire sweete and pleasant, though somewhat coldish, which maketh healthfull & able bodied men. The soile is very fruitfull for the bearing of Barlie-wheate, Rye, Beanes, & Pease, Buck-wheate, & such graine. They haue manie faire, and goodly pasture grounds, and very good Mines of Silver, Copper, Yron, Lead, and other Metalls, and in some places they finde some Gould. It exceedeth farre all other Countries in all kinde of Mineralls, and Metalls. There are also manie quarries of Salt. Plinie also writeth, that Germanie produceth diuerse precious stones, as, the Cadmia, the Bloudstone, the Christall, the Onix, the Allebaster, the Topaze, the Diamant, and the Ceramite or Sweating-stone, as also manie excellent simples & herbes, especially Sparages, and the Brittish Herbe. It hath in it at this day a thousand sorts of pleasant Orchards, & Gardens, having many fruitfull trees, herbes, and flowers in them, and also abundance of excellent wines, likewise great store of Cattaile & wilde beasts, which would be too longe for mee here to reckon up. Cæsar writeth, that many kind of wild Beasts are bred in the Hyrcinian VVoods, which are found no where else, whereof one differeth from the other, especially an Oxe, being of the shape and likenesse of a stagge, having in the midst of his Fore-head, betweene his eares a long horne shooting out upright, & at the very topp braunchet it selfe out. The Male and Femall are of a like forme and bignesse, and their horne of a like greatnesse. There are likewise Beasts called Akes, or Elants, which haue long shag-haire hanging downe like Goates, but farre greater, having neither hornes, nor any joints in their leggs, and when they sleepe or rest, they stand & leane against trees & lye not downe, and coming to stumble or fall, they cann hardly gett up againe. When the Huntsmen find their traces, and the tree where they haunt, they digg the roote loose, or saw the bodie of the tree almost through, so that this beast coming to leane & rest against it, as their manner is, both tree and beast fall downe together, & so are take. The third sort of wild beast found in this woods, are those which they terme Vros, or wild Beares, somewhat lesser then the Elyphant, not much deffering in forme and shape from a Bull, they are exceeding strong, and swiftfooted, man nor beast can escape them, if once they perceiue them. The Huntsme digg great pitfalls for them, whereinto they fall, and being falne into the take a great delight in killing the of the Sacred Romiſh Empire, being devided into the Weſterne, and Eaſterne Empire through many incurſious, & invaſions of diverſe nations, was weakned, and rent by inteſtine warrs & broyles, which threatned the utter ſubverſion and ouerthrow thereof, forſaking Italie, ſought to haue its onely refuge, comfort, ſtrength and power in Germanie, and to that end, chooſe Charlemaigne King of France for their Emperour, borne at Ingelheym, two miles from Mentz, as many Hiſtorians withneſſe, where he built a ſtately pallace, whoſe old walls & ruines are ſeene there yet to this daye. The Empire cõtinueth in the race & ſucceſſion of the Charoloiſes for more thẽ a 100 yeares. Afterward, that progenie failling, it was transferred to Conrade Duke of Franconia, to whõ Henricus Auceps, or the fowler, ſucceeded. And after him three Othos one after an other, of which the laſt perceving, that the Romans affecting the Empire againe, and deſirous to make their Conſul Creſcentius Emperour, having levyed an Armie, tooke the Citie of Rome and obtayned from Pope Gregorie, that the right of electing of a Romiſh Emperour might continually remaine among the Germans, upon this condition, that the new Elected firſt Cæſar, or King of the Romans, having receiued his Crowne from the Pope, ſhould be entyteled Imperator Auguſtus: ſo that in that time ſeuen Princes-Electours, namely, three Arch-Biſhops, and foure temporall Princes were ordayned for the chooſing of an Emperour. After the death of this Otho, the next Elected Emperour was Henricus Sanctus. This manner of Election Charles the fifth Emperour, afterward eſtabliſhed by a golden Bull; which is extant to this daye. In ſucceeding times, there were more ſtates, and dignities erected in Germanie for the encreaſing of the Empire. Of the Germans valour, and ſufficiencie in militarie Actions Tacitus witneſſeth, who was a preſident in the Netherlands, under the Emperour Veſpaſianus, when he ſaith, no man euer warred againſt Dutches, but had the worſt: which the three Conquered Legions of the Emperour Auguſtus tryed. The ſame alſo felt Carbo, Caſſius, Scaurus, Aurelius, Servilius, Cæpio and Manlius, all braue Chiefs and Generalls, which were defeated and routed by the Germans, and as this old verſe mentioneth:

VVelcher im Krieg vvil ungluck han,
Der fang es mit den Teutſchen an.

That is in effect:

None euer yet vvith Germans vvarred durſt,
But commonly they euer had the vvorſt.

Ioſephus nameth this people Fortes, or ſtrong men, Dionyſius calleth them Martialiſts, and Arrianus Valourous, Seneca de ira ſaith, that no man is more couragious, then a Dutch man, none more egar at a charge, nor none more deſirous to beare armes.

For the reſt, we finde that Germanie at this daye is ſo faire and pleaſant a Countrie, adorned and inhabited with ſo manie faire Cities, Townes, Caſtles, Bourroughs, and Villages, that it will giue no place to Italie, France, or Spaigne.

Imperiall Townes.

There are reckoned in it 84 free Imperiall Townes, among which there are; Collen, Lubeck, Lunenburgh, Franckford, Breme, Spier, Straeſburgh, Augsburgh, Regenſpurgh, Heidleburgh, VVien or Viana, Praegh, and others, whereof wee will ſpeake in their due places.

The Riuers.

This Countrie is alſo watered with ſo manie great and pleaſant rivers, that it exceedeth the notableſt Countries of Europe. I will ſpeake nothing of the Lakes, Meeres, and Marſhes, whereof the ancients make mention, and of which number of rivers Seneca ſheweth the cauſe in his third booke Naturalium quæſtionum, where he ſaith; It is well knowne, that in Germanie, France and Italie there are ſo many rivers, & brookes, becauſe of the moiſtneſſe of the aire, and that in Sommer time the land is watered by the often rayne which falleth. The chiefe rivers of Germanie are the Donavv, the Rhyne, the Ems, the Maine, the Necker, the Elue, the Sprey, the VVeſer, and the VVeixſel.

The Donavv.

The Donaw is called by Ptolomie, and ſome others Danubius, by Plinie and Strabo Iſter: and Strabo placeth this alteration of name about the Cataractus or fall of the ſame river, but Plinie about that place, where it falleth into the Illyricũ. Ptolomie by the Citie Axipolim, & Appianus at the meeting of the Donaw, & the Saw: ſo that the vpper part ſhould be called Danubius, & the nether part the Iſter. By Stephanus it was named in former times Ματόας, alſo Danubis, & Danuſis, and by Feſtus Aduhanus. And in ſome old coppies they reade Dannuius: But at this daye it is called the Done, or Donavv, and that for the ruſhing noiſe of the waues thereof, as Althamerus witneſſeth. Salluſtius writeth, that this river, next the Nil, is the greateſt, which runneth into the Mediterranean Sea. Arrianus in his firſt booke of the memorable acts of Alexander the Great, called this the greateſt of all other ſtreames. This river hath his ſpring-head in the Schvvartzvvalt by a Village called Doneſching, where he ſpringeth, and guſheth out abundance of water from out of the boweles of the Earth. The ancients named this hill out of which it ſpringeth Abnobam, though round about it there is not a hill within a Dutch mile of the Fountaine of it, as Munſter himſelf writeth who hath ſeene it, but ſaith that he did obſerue diligently, that the waters vnceaſantly guſhed and ſprang up in abundance out of a ſmall hill, not paſſing 15 or 16 ells high. This Fountaine and ſpring-head the Emperour Tiberius, being neere unto theſe confines, was deſirous to ſee in his owne perſon. Herodotus thought that this river ſprang out of the Pyrænean Mountaines, upon whoſe authority Ariſtotle relying, was deceived in his ſecond Booke de Meteoris. Maginus to excuſe the groſe errours of theſe famous writers, would therefore haue placed the Pyrænean Mountaines in Germanie. This river then as ſone as it floweth from his head, runneth preſentlie through ſome mooriſh places, and ſpreading him ſelfe into divers braunches at laſt haſteth to meete altogether in one channell, and encreaſing by other ſmall brookes and rivers, to the number of ſome ſixtie (whereof the one halfe of them are navigable) runneth with his courſe through manie Countries directly Eaſtward, and againſt the Sunne as through Suavia, Bavaria, Auſtria, Hungarie, Walachia, and Bulgaria, and at length falleth into Pontus Euxinus, with fiue mouths or outletts, as Dyoniſius, Strabo, and Herodotus make mention, and as Plinie ſaith with ſixe, and according to the opinion of Ammianus and Solinus with ſeauen, and that with ſuch a foaming, roaring and ruſhing noiſe, becauſe of the abundance of waters, that he retayneth his freſh water among the ſalt, ſome 40 thouſand paces within the Sea. And it is well knowne ſaith Ammianus, that the Fiſhe in great Shoales, come hether into this freſh water from the furtheſt parts of the Sea, to ſhoote their roanes and ſpawnes, that with the more eaſe they might feede, and nouriſh their yonge ones with the wholeſomeneſſe, and ſweetneſſe of theſe waters. The Emperour Traianus Nerva, made a bridge ouer this river in Mæſia with great art and cunning, which Adrianus brake off againe, as Dio Caſſius witneſſeth. Touching the Donaw Georgius Fabritius in his Itinerarium writeth in this wiſe:

——Iſter,
Qui centum populos, & magnas alluit urbes,
Euxinum irrumpit bis terno flumine Pontum.

That

That is:

The famous Iſter vvatring a hundred people, tovvnes, and places.
In Pont Euxin diſcharged his many mouths and vvinding traces.

And an other:

Cedere Danubius ſi tibi, Nile, negat.

That is:

O ſeuen mouth'd Nile, I plainely ſee,
Donavv vvill ſcarce giue vvay to thee.

For all the famous rivers of the world at laſt diſcharge them ſelues into the Sea, as Ovid witneſſeth in his third booke of his Metamorph. in this verſe.

In quo diſinimus, ſacri in quo currimus omnes.

The ſecond place I aſcribe to the Rhyne, which was famous in Cæſars time, and is at this daye called the Rhyne. He taketh his ſpring-head (as Cæſar witneſſeth in Swiſſerland, neere the Lepontine Mountaines) out of the Mount Adula, being an arme of one of the higheſt Alpes, commonly called the Etzel, as Strabo, & Ptolomie mention. Claudianus will haue him to ſpring out of Rhetia. The Rhyne then having his head, according to the opinion of Strabo, and of Ptolomie in the Eaſterne part of the Alpes, where the ſaid Alpes ioyne to this Mount Adula, and where the Lepontins inhabite, it is ſo that it ſpringeth up there with two heads, at leaſt a dayes journey the one from the other; by reaſon of the highneſſe of the Alpes, whereof the one head lyeth more Weſtward, and Northward, and is commonly called the Fore-Rhyne; the other more Eaſtward and Southward, & is named by the Inhabitants the Back-Rhyne. Theſe at length coming one into an other make the Rhyne, which running not farre together make alſo two Lakes, or Meeres, the one called Acronius, or Conſtantius from the Citie of Conſtance, neere unto which it lyeth, whereof wee will ſpeake in the deſcription of Swiſſerland: The other Cella, or as the Latins ſay Lacum Venetum, or Cellenſem, which aboundeth in fiſhe. Afterward, he taketh his Courſe Weſtward, and watereth the Towne of Rhynſvelden, and ſo runneth with a right ſtreame to Baſill, where winding towards the North, enricheth Straeſburgh paſſing through many Countries and Townes, and carrying along with him manie brooks, & riuers, which fall into him, ſwelleth & paſſeth proudly by Spier, VVormes & Mentz, & afterward turning againe Weſtward runneth by Bingen, and then taking his courſe North-Eaſt, leaving behinde him the Townes of Coblentz, Bon, & Collen, & at Schenkeſchance divideth himſelf into two parts about the beginning of Agri Batavici, now called the Betuvve, the one arme running by an ancient Caſtle called Lobeth now the Tolehouſe, & retayning ſtill the name of the Rhyne runneth directly downe to Arnhem, one of the chiefe Cities of Gelderland, whence taking his Courſe, and making haſt with many windings and turnings paſſeth by VVagening, and ſo downeward to the towne of Rhyne, which Tacitus calleth Rinnes, and then runneth by VVyck te Duerſtadt, where the Rhyne looſeth his name, and is called the Leck, which heretofore was but a brooke, and now is become a faire riuer: then paſſing by Culenburch, Viana, and Schoonhoven, falleth into the Mervvey, before he taketh the name of the Maze. The other part of the Rhyne, turning on the left hand upon the point of Schenckeſchanſe rũneth with a ſwift ſtreame downe to the ancient Citie of Niemegen, where he receiueth the name of the VVael, and paſſing downeward with a long reach towards Tiel, maketh crooked windings to Bommel, & leaving it on the left hand falleth downe to Loveſteyn, and VVorcum, where he receiueth the Maze into him, and then at Gorcum receiueth into him alſo the ſtill and ſoft-fleeting riuer of the Linghe, getteth there the name of Mervvey from the ancient Caſtle of the Merovæorum, which ſtandeth in the water, and paſſing by it taketh his courſe by the famous Maiden-Towne of Dort, and after he hath receiued into him two armes of the Rhyne, the one called the Leck, the other the Yſel, paſſing by Yſelmont, and falling downe to Rotterdam, taketh the name of the Maze, and enlarged himſelfe, leaving Schiedam, and Vlaerding on the right hand, running with a large mouth and outlett downe to Geerfliet, and the Briell, leaving them on the left hand diſchargeth himſelf into the manie Sea.

The Rhyne.

The Leck.

The Eems called by Ptolomie Amaſius, by Strabo Amaſias, and by Tacitus Amiſia, as alſo by Plinie, & Pomponius Amiſius, ſpringeth out of VVeſtphalia a litle beneath Paderborn, and turning towards the North Eaſt, runneth by VVarendorp, Grefen, Rhenen, and Lingen, afterward by Meppen and Nebuiſum, & ſo diſchargeth himſelfe into the Northerne Sea at Embden, a Towne of the Chauci Minores. The Eems.

The fourth river of Germanie is called the Meyne, by Pliny Mænus, by Pomponius Mænis, and Menus by Ammianus. The Hiſtoriographer Reginus, and ſome other writers of his time, name this river Mogonum. Whether this be not the river Iulia mentioned by Velleius Paterculus it is conſiderable, except in ſtead of Iulia it ſhould be Lupia, as ſome Learned men imagine. This river taketh is head out of the Fichelmount, runneth by VVirtzburgh, Padebergh, and Franckford, which Citie for that reſpect is called Frankford on the Meyne, and at Mentz falleth into the Rhyne ſeparating the Nether Dutches, from the Higher Dutches on this ſide of the Rhyne. The Greekiſh Letters of the name of this river make in number as many ciphers, as there be dayes in the yeare, namely 365. The Meyne.

The fifth river is the Neccar, ſo called from the curious grapes, and wines, which that country yeeldeth, through which it paſſeth, according to the teſtimonie of Rhenanus. This river by the Ancients was called the Nicer: the ſpring-head thereof lyeth ſome two houres going from the Donavv, and running through VVirtembergerland, at Heydelbergh falleth into the Rhyne.

Now followeth the Albis or the Elue a very great ſtreame, which parted the Suevos from the Cheruſcis, Velleius witneſſeth, that he runneth by the limits of the Semnons and Hermundurians. Tacitus writeth, that this famous river of the Elue, ſpringeth out of the Hermunduris, but Conrade Celtes maintaineth, that he taketh his head in Bohemia out of the Schvvartzvvalt, and after he hath watered many territoires, & paſſing by many famous Townes, betweene the Chaucos minores, and the Cimbrians of Holſteyn, diſchargeth himſelfe into the maine Sea. This is the ſame river, upon whoſe ſhoare appeared to Druſius the likeneſſe of a woman, but of a greater ſhape, forbidding him to march any further, of which apparition Dio & Tranquillus write. The Latine writers, who liued in the Barbarous, and unlearned times, call this river Albia, and the Dutches Elbe. The Bohemians from whence he ſpringeth, calleth him Labe. Fabritius in his Miſian Hiſtorie, will haue him retaine his name from the number of the Spring-heads out of which he floweth, which are Eleuen, or as the Bohemians and Saxons ſay, from eleuen brookes, and rivers that run into him. For as Fabritius relateth, this river hath his head in that part of the Schvvartzvvalt, which beareth the name of the Giants, commonly called Riſenbergh, from eleuen Fountaines or ſprings, which he deſcribeth by name, the which meete altogether, & make the Elue ſtreame, for elue or elbe in Duytch ſignifieth eleuen.

The Oder. In the ſeuenth place we come to the river Suevus, which by ſome is called Viadrus, and now in theſe times by changing of ſome letters, Odera. The Oder taketh his courſe through Moravia, ād by many waters running into him is encreaſed, paſſeth by Franckford on the Oder, ſo named from this river, and ſo downeward unto Stetin a Sea and marchant-Towne, and by the Epiſcopall Towne of Camin, where he ſpreadeth out into a Lake, and at laſt diſchargeth him ſelfe into the Sea. Therefore thoſe erre greatly, who thinke that the Spree (which likewiſe is a notable riuer, running by the Towne of Brandenburgh, and falling into the Elue at Havelburgh) ſhould be the river Suevus, or the Oder, of which number Bilibaldus is one, when he writeth, that the Sprea runneth into the maine Sea, by the Haven Towne Sunda.

The VVeſer. Next followeth the Viſurgus, vulgarly called the VVeſer, being famous becauſe of the defeate of Varus, as Paterculus ſheweth, by Dio he is named lib 55. ὐσίζεγος, and by Ovid Iturgus, by Ptolomie Viſurgis, by Strabo Biſurgius, & by Sydonius Veſatis. This river ſpringeth out of Heſſia, runneth by Minden, Gottingen, Bremen, and at laſt diſchargeth himſelfe into the maine Sea.

The Viſtula The laſt place ſhal be giuen to the Viſtula, or Iſtula, which river Bibaldus nameth alſo Vandalum, running through the Frontiers of Germanie, becauſe that on the otherſide Ptolomie placeth the Europæam Sarmatiam, and Iornandes the Scythian. This river hath his head out of the Sarmatian Mountaines, watereth Cracauvv the Capitall Citie of the Kingdome of Poland, and afterward growing greater by many riuelets and brookes, which run into him, ſpreadeth himſelfe into three outlets, whereof the one runneth by the famous Citie of Dantzick, the other by Elbing, and the third by Gluckſtadt: and at length this river with his three outletts, looſeth himſelfe in the Vendalian lake or the Pruſſian Sea.

Beſides theſe rivers aboue mentioned, there are divers other rivers and ſtreames in Germanie, which runne either into the Sea, or into ſome of theſe great Rivers, which for brevitie ſake wee will omit, and come unto the deſcription of the Sea, which after the name of Germanie is called the German Sea; for ſeing that we repreſent unto you a Generall diſcription of all Germanie, it will not be amiſſe to ſpeake ſomething of the Coaſts, Shoares, and the Sea beating upon it. It is manifeſt then, that the Moone is the cauſe of the Ebbing and flowing thereof: for according to the courſe of the Moone the ſea either encreaſeth or decreaſeth the tides of it, which makes it come to paſſe, that twiſe in 24 houres ſhee floweth and ebbeth, & the Sea beginneth to ſwell and come in, when the Moone riſeth in the Horizon: & whē the Moone toucheth the Meridian Line, & declineth Weſtward, the ſea by degrees returneth againe into her limits. Againe when the Moone ſetts, and goeth downe, to viſite our Antipodes, then the Sea beginneth to flowe and ſwell againe ſo longe, till ſhee toucheth the Midneight line, and when the Moone ariſeth in our Hemiſphere, then the Sea ebbeth againe into her bounds. And as the Moone doth not alwaies riſe at one time, nor in one place, but continually changeth her order, as yeſterday, and to daye: ſo alſo the motion of the tides are not alwaies a like at a ſett houre, but onely at that time, when the Moone paſſeth Cæli Cardines. It is alſo to be conſidered, that the Moone mouveth, and troubleth the Sea more, when ſhee is in the Full, than when ſhee is either in her Quarters or in the waine: for the power of her influence is more, when ſhee giueth the greateſt light, than when ſhee is a decreaſing, or in her waine. Ye muſt alſo conſider, that when the Moone is full the tides flowe higher then ordinarie, which wee call Springtides. Therefore Agellus in his 14 booke, doth not improperlie affirme, that the Sea is the Companion of the Moone, in growing old, and jonge vvith her. The Moone alſo and the flowing and ebbing of the Sea, through her aſpects, and Conionction with the Sonne and other Planets are either more or leſſe. As for exemple, when the Moone beholdeth Venus in a convenient aſpect, and paſſeth through her moiſt houſe, then the Sea floweth higher than ordinarily, and if ſhee looketh upon Mars and walketh through his dry-habitation, then they decreaſe againe. Moreouer, ye muſt obſerue the elevation of the ſignes, for when the Moone is in the ſignes rectarum aſcenſionum, then the tides laſt longer than when ſhee aſſendeth obliquely. Many excellent, and learned men haue marked this, that the encreaſe or flowing of the Sea, never falls out with the ebbing of the ſame juſt at one time, except the Moone be then in Signis Æquinoctialibus ſine latitudine. Wee muſt not paſſe ouer alſo, that ſome parts of the Sea ſuffer and endure the influence of the light, and the beames of the Moone, more then ſome others; and that either through rectitudinem radiorum, or in regard of ſome other ſecret propertie. For when the Moone is Northerne, ſhe ſendeth downe upon the waters a more powerfull influence and operation with her beames, than when ſhee is in her Southerne courſe: for the one cauſeth the Sea to waxe, and encreaſe in the Southerne Coaſts, and the other in the Northerne. The tides, and flowings ſhowe themſelues more in ſome Coaſts, than in others, for in ſome places they are ſcarcely perceiued, and in other places not at all.

Now that we may ſpeake ſome thing of our Germane Sea, it is certaine, and moſt true, that in ſome parts one can hardly marke the motion, and flowing, unleſſe it be mouved, and driuen by the winds: eſpecially, when the winde bloweth North-Eaſt, for then it riſeth amaine, raging farre and neere, with mightie billowes and waues, ſo that ſome times the ſhoars and Banks cannot keepe her within her bounds, but many times breaketh and overfloweth them. And though the Spaniſh and the Atlantick Sea is almoſt bottomeleſſe, ſo that it can ſcarcely be ſounded under three or foure hundred fadome, yet wee finde that the German Sea in ſome places is not paſſing 60 fadome deepe, and in the verie deepeſt not aboue hundred fadome, unleſſe upon ſome Coaſts of Norway where they cann finde no bottome becauſe of the exceeding depth thereof.

Freſh vvater in the Sea And which is more remarkeable that whereas all other Seas, are brackiſh, and haue their waters ſaltiſh, this Sea hath freſhe water, good to drinke, by reaſon of the many freſh water, rivers, which run into it out of the Sarmatian Mountaines, as alſo becauſe the Sunne iñ thoſe places, is not ſo powerfull, to exhale out of them the cleareſt, the lighteſt, and the ſubtileſt water, which is the cauſe of the ſweetneſſe and freſhneſſe in that Sea, as ſome doe diſpute: but ſurely, if this were a ſufficient reaſon, why then ſhould not the Amalchium, and Chronium Sea have freſh water in them, which notwithſtanding is found to the contrarie. Therefore it is verely thought, that the melted ſnow, and the abun-abundance of riuers falling out of the Sarmatian Mountaines, is the onely cauſe of the freſhneſſe of theſe waters.

Whence ariſed alſo this queſtion, wherefore other Seas doe more eaſily beare heavie laden ſhips, than this Sea? the reaſon is (ſay they,) that the water of the Saltiſh Seas, is of a more thicker ſubſtance, and therefore doth carrie heavier burdens, then the other, whereas contrarie wiſe the thinneſſe and ſubtilitie of theſe waters vſe to ſinke under their burden. Hence it commeth to paſſe alſo, that the water in this Sea is lighter, and better to ſwime in, then in other Seas. Notwithſtanding (by reaſon of the loftie motion thereof the ſhips ſeeme thereby as it were to mount up unto the ſky, & preſētly to fall downe againe as it were unto the botome) it cauſeth more Sea-ſickneſſe and vomiting than others. This Sea alſo according to the ſeuerall parts and Countries hath ſundry and ſeuerall names, for it is called the German Ocean, becauſe it beateth upon the Germane Coaſt, and reaching further Weſtward: is named the French and Britiſh Sea, and Eaſtward the Sarmatian; it is called alſo the North-Sea, Arctoum Mare, Cimbricum, Balthicum, Codanum, Suevicum, Vandalicum, Scyticum, and Sarmaticum, and thus much for the Sea, as the ſmallneſſe of this place will permit vs.

The chiefeſt mountaines in Germanie are theſe, the Rolbergh, the Mount Iſidū, Melibocus, Fichtelberg, Senus, Suevus, Pfauvvenbergh, Reticus, Sprulius, Voſetius, and Voſagus.

The vvoods and Foreſts.

There are in Germanie alſo great ſtore of woods, and Foreſts, whereof the Hercinian Foreſt exceedeth all others in greatneſſe, and by all ancient Writers, as well Grecians as Latins is famous, as namely in Pomponius Mela, who writteth thereof in the ſame manner, as Cæſar doth. Alſo Strabo in his 7. booke, and Plinie in diuers places. And notwithſtanding this wood ſpreadeth it ſelfe with his corners, and wings farre and wide: yet it conteineth it ſelfe in Germanie, as well reaching Weſtward as Southward. Therefore Glareanus will not acknowledge the Ardennean Foreſt to be any part thereof; which nevertheleſſe ſome in our times haue done. Cæſar writeth in his ſixth booke de bello Gallico, that this Foreſt extendeth it ſelfe in length, 60. dayes journey, and 9. in breath. In our times this Wood hath gotten manie names, for in ſome places it is called Nigra Silva, or the Svvarzt-vvood, by reaſon of the abundance of his Pine-trees which growe in it, in other places the Otto-vvood, called after the name of Otto the Emperour, who uſed to hunt much in it. It taketh alſo the name from the people that inhabite by it, and for that reaſon is alſo called the Thuringer and Beemer-vvood. Among the Cheruſcos it keepeth the ancient name of Hercynia Silva, or the Hartzvvold, or the Roſin-vvood, by reaſon of the great ſtore of Roſine which is found in it. Theſe woods alſo Pandulphus Collenutius Piſauriencis remembreth in his deſcription of Germanie with theſe words: The Sylva Hercynia for his great length, reaching unto VVallachia, & Sevenbergen, hath manie, & ſundry names, till that it hath accoſted the utmoſt ends of Tartaria, where he taketh the name of the Svvart-vvood: the end whereof is unknowne and unpaſſable, becauſe of the abundance of fierce and wild beaſts that are in it, and can in no wiſe be travelled through, becauſe of the ſtrange ſights and apparations that are ſeene in it.

The Publike buildings & vvorks.

Now followe the publick, and particular edifices & buildings of Germanie, of which (for brevity ſake, wee will mention ſome, and paſſe by others) the Minſter or great Church of Straesburgh with his goodly and loftie ſteeple carryeth away the bell from all others, and for the ſumptuous worke thereof may be truely accounted the eight wonder of the world. The beautifull foundation of this Church was begann to be layd in the yeere of our Lord 1015, and anno 1277. under the Gouvernment of the Biſhop Conrade of Lichtenbergh, Eruinus of Steinbach, a moſt ſkilfull Architect and workmaſter, began to built the ſteeple, being indeed an admirable worke, that the like is not ſeene in Germanie, Italie, or France: for the finiſhing whereof it tooke up 27. yeeres. It is from the very foundation to the top of the apple wrought up with fine foure ſquare hewen ſtones, being all lucent and lightſome: the aſſent unto the middle breath conſiſteth of foure winding ſtares, and from thence to the topp of eight. The higheſt apple or knott ſtanding upon the ground ſeemeth to be no greater than a buſtell, but being upon it is ſo great and large that fiue or ſix men may eaſely ſtand upright in it. The ſteeple is 574. Geometricall foote high, whereof a Poet in Adrianus his Theater verſifieth thus:

Vrbs Præclara ſitu, ripis contermina Rheni,
Maxima cui celſa metiuntur mœnia turri.

That is:

Straesburg on Rhenes inamelld bankes doth lye
VVhoſe Tovvre euen biddes defiance to the ſkye.

There is alſo a moſt artificiall & wonderful Clocke in it.

The Archbishoprick, & Bishoprick.

And touching the Spirituall State of Germanie, they haue in it ſeuen Archbiſhopricks, whoſe Provinces (onely Livonia excepted) ſhalbe here deſcribed unto you. The firſt, which repreſenteth it ſelfe, is the Arch-bishop of Mentz, who hath under him 12. Suffragans, or other Biſhops, as namely, thoſe of Chur, Conſtance, Straesburgh, Spier, VVormes, VVurtzburgh, Augſpurgh, Aychſtadt, Hildesheym, Paterborne, Halberſtadt and Ferden. The Arch-biſhop of Collen hath foure Biſhops under him, to wit, of Munſter, Luyck, Minden, & Oſenbrugh; The Arch-biſhop of Trier hath three Biſhops ſtanding under him, as of Metz, Toul in Lorraine, and Verdun. Vnder the Arch-biſhop of Magdenburg, as being the ancienteſt, and chiefeſt of Germanie; there are foure Biſhops, to wit; of Morſpurgh, Naumburgh, Brandenburgh, and Havelbergh. There are 9. Biſhops ſubject to the Arch-biſhop of Saltzburgh, namely, of Trent, Brixen, Paſſavv, Friſingen, VVien, or Vianna, Seckavv, Gortz, Lavemnunt, and Chiemſe. The Arch-biſhop of Bremen hath ſixe Biſhops, belonging to him, as of Lubeck, Suerin, Lebus, Schleſvvick, Ratzenburgh, and Hamburgh. Vnder the Arch-biſhop of Riga, there are foure Biſhops, namely, of Revel; Cur, Oeſel, and Derpt. The free Biſhops, which are ſubject to no Arch-biſhops, are theſe of Meyſſen, Bambergh, and Regenſpurgh.

The Academies, or Vniverſities are theſe following, as that of Baſill, Collen, Dillingen, Mentz, Marpurgh, Leypzigh, Ingolſtadt, Heydelbergh, Gripſvvaldt, Friburgh in Brieſgaw, Franckford on the Oder, Erffort, Prag, Roſtock, Coningsbergen, Trier, Tubingen, Vianna, Breſlavv, VVittenberg, and VVurtzburgh, out of which as out of ſo many Troian Horſes an infinite number of learned men are come, as hath beene euidently prouved, by ſuch as haue bene moſt ſkillfull & learned in all Arts, & languages, as in Latine, Greeke, and Hebrew. For here are found the Eloquent Orators, the acute Diſputers, the perfect Arithmeticians, and the moſt ſkillfull Aſtronomers, the abſolute Geometricians and Surveyours of Lands. I will conceale their excellent knowledge in Phyſick, & many other liberall Arts, and Sciences beſides.

Now I come to the cuſtomes, and manners of the High-Dutches, which all writers for the moſt part agree in: Touching the conſtitution of the Germans they they haue ſtronge, & able bodies & members, having graye dyed, reddiſh haire, tall and great bodies, able to withſtand a ſhock, as Tacitus writeth: Hegeſippus and Plinius in time paſt called them horrid, and full of indignation. Sydonius cruell, and Savage. Pauſanias, and Caſſiodorus ſuperbe or proud. Appianus mercileſſe: Cæſar perfidious, and diſſemblers, and Paterculus that they were in their Barbariſh Savageneſſe ſlie, & craftie & giuen to lying. But Tacitus in thoſe daies having converſed, and dwelt amonge them, ſpeaketh more favorably and truely of them, in ſaying, that they were braue Souldiers, couragious in warre, neither ſubtill, nor craftie, but ſimple and very open-hearted, not lightly revealing any ſecret, wherewith they were entruſted. The like teſtimonie alſo the Emperour Iulian in his Miſopogona giueth of them, ſaying, that he himſelfe found indeed, that the Dutches could not diſſemble and flatter, but lived with all men in ſimplicitie, and openheartedneſſe. Ptolomie 2 Quadrip. ſaith, they are temperate, and mannerlie by nature, proceeding from the propertie of the Countrie, wherein they liued.

Their pagan Religion.

Touching their religion, which is that which knitteth, and bindeth the hearts & minds of men together. The Germans (as Cæſar writeth) when they were Heathens, offred no manner of Sacrifices, holding onely thoſe for their Gods which they could ſee and perceiue, & by whoſe meanes in appearance they might be holpen, as the Sunne, the Moone, and the Fire: but afterward in ſucceeding ages, as it appeareth by Tacitus (who liued under the Gouvernment of the Emperour Nerva) they had ſome other Gods, as Mercurius, Hercules, Mars, Iſidus, and the Mother of the Gods. Alſo a certaine one called Alcim and Velleda & Aurinia. The ſame Tacitus maketh mention alſo, of the temple of Tanfana, and ſaith moreover, that the Svvavians worſhipped the Earth as their Mother, whom they called Aerrham, as Lipſius readeth it. Plutarck ſheweth alſo, that they had ſome holy women among them, which Tacitus nameth, Fatidicas, Agatnias, and Polyænus Vates, which is as much to ſay, as Soothſayers, which could divine, or fore tell ſome future things, from the noiſe of the waters, and by their whirlings, and turnings about. Ælianus relateth that they could foretell ſome things out of the Entrailes and by the ſignes of fowles. Aboue all they honored Mercurius, or Teutalus, not forbearing to Sacrifice men as Tacitus witneſſeth.

The manner of their living in thoſe ages.

In the times of peace they had no publick Magiſtrate, but uſed to chooſe one when they went to warre. They tooke their moſt pleaſure and delight in the warrs. Robbing and ſtealing was accounted no ſhame among them as wee reade in Cæſar. And as Seneca writeth, there was nothing in the world, which liked them better then armes, for they were borne, and bred up in them. Tacitus ſaith alſo, that when they had ſatt long in peace at home, they went to helpe other nations, which waged warre, carrying along with them their mothers, wiues, and children, which carryed their victualls after them, which putt courage into them and ſtirred them up to fight, and did not forbeare to ſuck their wounds. They begann their fight with ſinging and leaping for ioye, and with a great noiſe and clattering of armes. He that loſt his ſhield in the Battaile, it was accounted a great ſhame for him, and that many of them for this cauſe leaving the warres, through deſperation and ſhame hanged themſelues. Dio and Herodotus write, that they ſwame ouer rivers, to which their light armes and tall bodies gaue much helpe, as Tacitus teſtifieth. We read in Appianus, that they did not feare death, imagining in themſelues that they ſhould liue againe. They were verie ſtrickt in keeping the band of Matrimonie, and contented themſelues with one wife, ſaving ſome fewe, who not ſo much out of luſt, as by reaſon of their nobility tooke more wiues. The women that committed adulterie (which nevertheleſſe hapned ſeldome) had this puniſhiment layd upon them, that her huſband, in the preſence of her neereſt kindred, turnd her out of the doores, after he had ſhorne of her haire, beating her away before him with ſtripes, through euery way and Corner. Everie Mother gaue ſuck to her owne child, and never uſed any Nurſes, or Foſter mothers for them. Cæſar writeth, that they held it vnreaſonable to offer wrõge or violence to the Geſts that came unto them for what cauſe ſoeuer, but rather did defend them from all iniurie, and violence, which they held as ſacred, and kept openhouſes and their tables furniſhed for all Commerce. Tacitus witneſſeth alſo, that among the Dutches, no man complained of an other mans fault, and that good manners were in greater requeſt among them, then good lawes in other places.

Their Diet and victualls, (ſaith Cæſar) conſiſted moſt in Milke, Cheeſe, & Fleſhe. Plinius relateth that they eat no other bread, but Oaten-cakes, and Appianus ſaith, that in the times of want and ſcarcitie they contented themſelues with raw meats, and as Mela writeth they eat raw fleſhe. Athenæus affirmeth that they made their dinner of ſmall peeces of meate roſted, and dranke Milke, and Wine upon it. Tacitus ſaith moreouer, that they eat homely victualls, and ſome times a peece of Venaiſon, Crabbs & Creame, & their Beare brued with barly or ſome other graine. In their bankets, & feaſts they were gluttonous, and exceſſiue, and held it no ſhame to ſitt night and day by it. Their cloathing ſaith Tacitus was a Souldier Caſſack or Iackett, which they claſped too about their ſhoulder, and they wore very ſtraight cloaths, as cloſſe to their bodies as poſſibly they could. Such a manner of apparell writeth Sidonius the Francks uſed to weare. There women were cloathed in the ſame faſhion as their men, and their Coats full of foulds, they wore alſo furrs and the ſkinne of wild beaſts. In former times they were blockiſh and vnfit for any ſciences, but now are growne moſt expert and ſkilfull in all manner of knowledg, and manufacture to their great praiſe, and commendation, paſſing by all crafts. The Germans excell all other nations in the ſkill and knowledge of caſting, & of forging of Copper, as alſo to handle and temper all ſorts of Mettall and Mineralls. The Art of printing was firſt invented there, & the knowledge of making of Ordinance, of Clocks & Watches came firſt from thence. To conclude, Germanie is become the ſeate, and habitation for all manner of crafts and arts, and there is no cunning invented, which they haue not with induſtrie, carefull diligence and knowledge augmented, adorned and enriched, beſides thoſe which firſt were invented there.

Finally, Germanie is not onely provided with all manner of coſtly wares, and commodities, but diſtributeth them in abundance to their Neighbours, yea to manie forraine nations farre remote, to wit, moſt excellent Wines, Money, Silver, Copper, Tinne, Lead, Quick-ſilver, Vitriol, Allom, diuers Dyes and Colours, Lettanie, Corne, many Inſtruments of Iron and Braſſe, and many ſort of other wares beſides: and thus much of Germanie in Generall, now the particular deſcriptions followe.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ELVE-STREAME,

Together with the Provinces, and Ilelands lying about

HAMBVRGH.

AMonge the Rivers & Streames of Germanie, the Elue is not accounted the leaſt, which in ancient times was famous, for ſome memorable acts hapned neere unto it, as Hiſtories ſufficiently declare. It runneth farre & wide through Germanie, but our Geographer, deſcribeth no more of it in this Mapp than that part thereof, which diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Northerne Sea. The Elue parteth Saxonie from Suavia, and hath his head as Tacitus relateth in Bohemia. It is that river upon whoſe ſhoare there appeared a woman who ſpeake to the great Druſius, and forbad him to goe any further, as Dio, & Tranquillus mention. The Heathen writers in former times called this river Albia, and the Germans at this day the Elbe, & the Bohemians out of whoſe Countrie he ſpringeth Labe. It taketh his name from the number Eleuen, as Fabricius in his Deſcription, and memories of Miſſia relateth, for he taketh his head from Eleuen ſprings, or Fountaines, as thoſe of Bohemia witneſſe, or as the Saxons will haue it from Eleuen rivers that run into it. For they haue their head-ſprings (as Fabricius reporteth) in the Svvartvvood from a place called Riſenbergh ſo named from the Giants, that inhabited there, where it iſſueth out of Eleuen ſprings, which he nominateth every one by their name, and meeting all together make this river. Neere unto theſe Spring-heads, they are ſmall & narrowe, but running further growe larger and broader, making many crooked windings, by the Hamlet of Melinck into the Moldauw, which river divideth Pragh the Capitall Citie of Bohemia into two parts: from Melinck it runneth into the Eger, and from thence with manie turnings paſſeth through Miſſia, Saxonie, and VVirtenbergh, and ſo by Maegdenburgh, watering many places to Hamburgh, Stoad, Geluckſtadt, and at laſt with a large mouth diſcharged himſelfe into the Northerne Sea, of this river Lucanus writeth thus:

The Elue, and ſvvift Rhyne, haſt to the cold-Northerne Sea amaine, Traverſing Germanie, throng many a pleaſant Mead, and Plaine.

The Elue is famous for the great trading that is in Hamburgh. Hamburgh the chiefe citie of Stormarck, and the great commerce, which the Germans, the Netherlanders, the Engliſh, the Spagnards, & other Nations haue in it. This Citie lieth 18. Duytch-miles from the Sea, as this Mapp demonſtrateth. Touching the Originall of the name of this Citie, wee will ſpeake more at large, becauſe manie Writers doe not agree therein. The moſt opinion is, and that which is moſt probable, that the name thereof came from the Wood called Ham, lying betweene Alſter, and Bellem, where the old Saxons before the time of Charlemaigne built a Caſtle in the aforeſaid Wood, & called it Hammeburgh, & not Haneburgh as ſome would haue it, which to this day the broad Seale of this Citie, and the ancient charters, immunities and priviledges, in which it is written Hammeburgh, doe witneſſe. For among the reſt ſuch is the content of the letters written from Lodevvick the Firſt at Akon, which import thus much: VVe ordaine vvith the unanimous conſent of the Clergie, that upon the furtheſt Confines of Saxonie over the Elue, at a place called Hamburgh and the vvhole people of North-Albing, a Iudgment Seate, having their ovvne rights, be erected.

The Bull of Pope Nicolas, giuen in the daies of Lodvvick the Second, maketh mention of the Caſtle of Hammeburgh, and calleth it the habitation of the North-Albingers.

When as this Towne firſt receiued the Chriſtian faith, Charlemaigne built there a Caſtle, and appointed Vtho Gouvernour over that Garniſon. Nevertheleſſe the iſſue and Succeſſours of Sigard Duke of VVeſtphalia, and chiefly Albion the Coſin-german of Sigard, Succeſſour of VVitikind, who went and warred with Charlemaigne in Saxonie, ruled and domineerd ouer Holſteyn, & the neighbouring places, about Hamburgh, and that the iſſue of Charlemaigne, after manie diſcord and diſſention, being reconciled they gott this Citie againe into their power, in which time the Dukes, and the Biſhop held their Court in it. Which continued ſo long, till that the Emperour Otho who had marryed the Daughter of Magnus the laſt Duke of Saxon tranſported over unto Adolph Earle of Schauwenbergh the Dukedome of Holſteyn, from which time forward the Dukes of Holſteyn gouverned over Hamburgh, and adorned it with manie ſumptuous building, and in the Cathedrall Church ordained their Sepulchres. But how & in what manner they got their libertie at laſt, divers Hiſtorians ſufficiently ſhewe the ſame. For after that the Duke of Sleſvvick, through the help of Adolph, the King of Denmarks Brother was expulſed, and Hamburgh brought under his Commaund, then the Inhabitants thereof begann to thinke upon their libertie and prepared a way by giving of 150. markes of Gold unto the Earle of Orlamund.

This Freedome was afterward confirmed by Adolph the Fourth, and many other priviledges giuen them beſides. To this Citie there was a great recourſe and reſort in the yeere of the Natiuity of our Lord 1510. when as thoſe of Lubec made warre againſt the Danes, where into many forraine Marchants had their refuge.

In the dayes of the Emperour Otho, Pope Benedictus tranſported himſelf unto Hamburgh, whoſe Epitath written upon his ſepulchre was this, Benedictus Pope of Rome, being by violence driuen from the Apoſtolike Seate, after he vvas called unto it againe, dyed at Hamburgh the ſixth of July, and vvas buried here, whoſe Sepulchre The Epitath of Pope Benedictus at Hamburgh.

pulchre is yet to be ſeene unto this daye. In proceſſe of time the Court, and the Arch-Biſhops Seate was removed from Hamburgh to Breme, whereupon manie diſcords aroſe betweene the people of Hamburgh and thoſe of Breme, touching the Supremacie, and for the ſending of Deputies unto the Provinciall members.

The laſt diſpatch of the Deputies of the Arch-Biſhop of Hamburgh ſent unto the farre remote Northerne Provinces, as into Denmarke, Sweden, and Norway, into the Orcades Iſland & Groenland conſiſteth of twentie Biſhops, which was the cauſe, that this people were ſo often aſſaulted: for aſſoone as there aroſe any diſſention among the Chriſtians touching Religiõ, they had their recourſe to Hamburgh, who ſometimes were ſurpriſed by the Danes, and at other times by the Vandals, and other Nations, and that becauſe they knewe, that from thence was ſent unto then the firſt maintainers of their Religion. Among the Hans-Townes, and their league Hamburgh taketh place next after Lubec, ſitting before Roſtock, VViſmar, Straelſund and Luneburgh, which ſix townes haue power to convocate and aſſemble all the Hans-Townes, or ſome of them when neceſſitie requireth.

In this Citie liued that famous man Albertus Cranzius, who in honour of the memorable deeds and Acts of the Vandales, Sweeds and Norwegians renewed them, and brought in the light againe the Eccleſiaſticall and Metropolitan citie, which the tract of time had obſcured, and almoſt worne out. Right ouer againſt this citie, lie divers Ilands upon the Elue, everie one having their Severall name, about which the Elue paſſing it runneth divers waies, ſo that they are devideth into the South-Elue and North-Elue.

Ilands upon the Elue.

Not farre from the Elue ſhoare upon the river Svvinge ſtandeth the towne of Stoad, diſtant from Hamburgh ſixe miles. This is the ancienteſt towne of all Saxonie, which they ſay was built 320. yeeres before the birth of Chriſt. This towne was firſt deſtroyed by the Danes, and reedified by the Normans. The Marqueſſe, and Earles of Stoad, among which Sigfrid, Sonne unto Henry ſurnamed the Good, was accounted one of the chiefeſt, and liued about the yeere of our redemption 1000. built a Caſtle in that place where now the Theater ſtandeth.

Stoad.

In this towne there was found an ancient Hiſtorie, written by Saxo Grammaticus, who maketh mention, that Roëus King of Denmarke with his Brother Helgo, Admirall of the Sea, ran into the Elue, and came with his ſhipping almoſt to Stoad, to make warre upon Hendigus Prince of Saxonie, who had taken in a great part of Iutland. Whereupon it followed, that they for the avoyding of the leaſt bloud-ſhed, entred into a combate in their owne perſons, in the ſight of both their armies, to decide their quarrell, and Helgo hauing got the upperhand of him, the Saxons retyred out of Iutland againe. Now this ſame Helgo, liued 600. yeers after the birth of Chriſt, and he that will neerely conſider all things, ſhall finde that this is the towne which Ptolomie calleth Seatutanda, which differeth not much from this name of Stoad, as alſo the ſituation of the ſame, for he placeth it in the longitude of 29. and in the latitude of 56. degrees, which agreeth with the ſite thereof.

This towne hath alwaies beene a harbour, and a refuge for fugitiues, & hath manie great priviledges, & immunities, for the Inhabitants thereof may coine money, and ſett their ſtamp upon it, and haue free hunting and hawking. All ſhips which ſaile up the Elue unto Hamburgh, when they come to the mouth of the Swing, they muſt ſtrick their ſailes, & caſt their ankors, to paye cuſtome and toll to the Arch-Biſhop of Breme, and the Magiſtrates of Stoad. There is not a ſhip laden with Wine coming out of the Sea, and faring upward to Hamburgh, that can paſſe, unleſſe they pay toll to the Cuſtome-maſters of the Wine-ſellar of Stoad, upon a great penaltie and a fine of money. This towne in times paſt was the Staple of Engliſh Cloathes, which afterward removed from thence to Middleburgh in Zealand, and ſince to Delphe in Holland. The Market place and the Exchange of this citie is very large and ſpacious. There are in it divers Churches, as that of S. Nicolas, S. Coſmus, S. Iohns, S. Gregorius and others. The Towne-houſe is of a large building, and the Wine-houſe or Sellar joyneth to it. There is alſo an ancient Abbey ſtanding in it, they haue an able, and a wiſe Councill, and the Burgers are very kinde loving and curteous, eſpecially to ſtrangers, which the Engliſh and Low-Country Marchants, who dwelt there and had commerce with them can witneſſe.

Touching the fortification, and ſtrength of this towne, the Walls, Moats, Bulwarks, and Turrets which girt it about, are ſo ſtrong that they are able to hold out a long ſiege: All theſe appartenances are beſides enriched with faire and pleaſant meddowes, a wholeſome aire, a large Suburbe, and a fruitfull ſoile lying round about it. They adminiſter juſtice abſolutely, & haue a moſt famous Schoole, in which there are taught the Latine, Greeke and Hebrew tongues, yea the liberall Arts and Sciences, and their youth are inſtructed publickly in the principles of Divinitie.

A fewe yeeres ſince, it was taken in by the Earle of Tilly in the name of Ferdinand the Emperour, who abbridged them of their priviledges, which afterward the King of Sweden Guſtavus Adolphus of immortall memorie tooke in againe, and reſtored them to their former liberties and freedomes.

Right over againſt Stoad a mile and a halfe from it, on the other ſide of the river lyeth Gluckſtadt, which is ſo ſtrongly fortifyed with all manner of fortifications that it may truely be called invincible. This towne alone oppoſed it ſelfe againſt the power, and might of the Emperour in the laſt warrs betweene him, and the King of Denemarke, ſtopped and withſtood his armie euen after they had taken in Crempen. Next that upon the mouth of the Elue lyeth the Fort of Brunſbuttel, and then the Elue after ſome ſands and bankes, which appeare here and there, diſchargeth himſelfe into the North-Sea. That part of the Elue, which is repreſented in this Map, is 22. miles in lenght, and beginneth at the village of Marſenach. On both ſides of it, there lye many Villages, Cloiſters, Farmes, arrable lands, and pleaſant Paſtures. Afterward is ſhowne unto yow a part of Luneburgh, Breme, and Holſteyn, where the Elue floweth here and there betweene them both.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF MECKLENBVRGH.

WHOLE Saxonie is devided into two parts, namely, the Vpper, & Nether Saxonie: unto theſe belong the Dukedomes of Lunenburgh, Brunſvvick, Lauvvenburgh, and the Duchie of Meklenburgh, which ſome name according to the Greeke Word Megapolenſem, for what reaſon the Learned themſelues knowe not, ſeing it hath no congruitie with the Grecian tongue.

The Limits. It was in ancient times a part of the Kingdome of the Vandales, and runneth Northward along the Coaſt of the Eaſterne Sea, and Eaſtward boundeth upon Pomeren, Weſtward the Elue ſhutteth it in, and Southward the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh fronteth upon it.

The firſt Inhabitants of this Countrie are called in Hiſtories Hervei, Obotritæ, and Vandals. This Countrie is adorned with many faire, wel-built, and populous Townes. In ancient times the Towne of Svverim layd upon the Sea Coaſt, and was founded before the Cities of Lubeck, Roſtock or VVismar. Fiue miles from the Sea lieth the village of Fichtel, where the Ancients, in regard of the neereneſſe thereof, laboured much to bring that Sea or lake into the Balticke Sea, by cutting of a ditch; but all in vaine, and they fared no better, then thoſe that offred to cutt through the Iſthmus by Corinth, in the times of the Emperours.

It is an exceeding fruitfull Countrie, and a rich ſoile for Corne, fruit trees, timber, fiſhe, as alſo for Cattaile, and Venaiſon. The Latins commonly call it Ducatus Megapolitanus.

The principall Townes thereof are Lubeck, Roſtock, and Wiſmar, and though Lubeck doth not belong unto this Dukedome, nor doth acknowledge the Dukes of Mecklenburgh for their Souveraigne Lords: yet wee will deſcribe it in this map, as a neighbouring Towne, which lyeth upon the frountiers thereof.

Lubeck then is a faire, and a large Citie, ſeated verie well, adorned with faire walls, and a fine hauen, which for the traficke, and ſumptuous buildings in it, is much commended, & which is truely held for one of the chiefeſt Cities lying upon the Balticke Sea, As Lindebergius in his Latin verſe extolleth the praiſe thereof very highly, which in effect is this:

Thy kind and loving people, their upright converſation,
Their Hauen fair, fitt for trafick and negotiation.
Thy pleaſant ſituation, thy men of courage & of Sprit
VViſe in time of peace, hardned in vvarr, fleſht in many a fght
Abounding in vvealth, vvhich God hath giuen thee, extolls thy name
O Lubeck! 'mongſt the Hanſtovvnes to be reſpected of moſt fame.
And for thy other vertues vvherein thou doſt ſo farr excell
From all others by right, thou oughteſt to beare avvay the bell.

Lubeck, is as much to ſay as Lobeck, or a Corner full of praiſe and commendations, & is ſeated upon that place, where the rivers Dravenna and Svvarda meete together. It is verely thought, that it was firſt inhabited partly by the Cimbrians, and partly by thoſe of the village of Svvartovv, which lyeth next the Sea. It had endured in the time of the growth thereof, many a ſhrod brunt. For Anno 1158. the Vandales pillaged, and burnt it, when as they could not be ſufficiently defended by Adolph Earle of Holſteyn, and ſo fell into the hands of Henricus Leo Duke of Saxonie, and Bavaria, who complayned that through the ſtartingh up of this Towne, trading begann to decaye at Bart, and that alſo thoſe of Lunenburgh, did ſuſtaine loſſe by their trading in ſalt, which was tranſported into euery place from Oldeſloo.

Now after they had gott them an other Lord, and tooke much upon them, by reaſon of their wiſe Councill, eſpecially, through the interceſſion of the Duke of Saxonie, unto King Valdemarus, they were permitted to haue trading with Denmarke. But after that Leo was put into exile by the imperiall mandate, the Emperour Fredricke the firſt tooke it in, and annexed it to the Empire, yet after his deceaſe, it was reſtored againe to Leo.

Now when he dyed, Valdemarus Duke of Sleſwick, baſe brother to the King, gott it into his power, and being ill entreated & uſed by the Danes, at laſt they putt themſelues into the protection of the Emperour Fredrick the ſecond to defend them, and through his aſſiſtance, regayned their former libertie. In the time of 40. yeeres, manie ſtrange accidents hapned to it: ſo that by their happineſſe and proſperity, no man ought to diſpaire, or to be diſcouraged, that doth aſpire unto ſome great matter, but with a provident care, labour by all meanes ſo longe as hee ſees any hope. Since which time it hath bin very faithfull unto the Romiſh Empire, and therefore brauely rewarded by the Emperours.

Anno 1238. it endured a great loſſe by reaſon of a terrible fire, which tooke among the thatcht houſes, which ſince that time, they thatched their houſes no more with ſtrawe, but couvered them with Slates and Tiles. In the yeere 1308. there was a great tumult, and uprore in this Citie, many ſeditious Burgers, having chaſed away their Ancient Councill, and chooſe and putt in a newe: though they could wel be ignorant, how much it doth concerne the ſafetie of a ſhip, to haue a good pilot or Steereman. But ſeuen yeeres after the old Councill was reſtabliſhed by Sigiſmond the Emperour, to the great joye, and rejoycing of all the Citizens. The Magiſtrates of this Citie are much reſpected, and haue great authoritie, and the men of moſt wiſedome, learning, and diſcretion are choſen into the Magiſtracie. There are twelue Burrow-maſters elected out of the Patritiis, and out of the nobilitie, and Gentrie. From theſe there is no appeale unto the imperiall Throne.

Citie by Mr. Andrevv VVilliams and Mr. Iohn VValhoff called thereunto by the Magiſtrates. It is ſeated excellent well, and by nature is ſtrong, provided with exceeding ſtrong workes, built upon Piles and Beames driuen deepe into the water. There are two Streets in it, which goe out right, from whence the ſmaller Streets and Lanes lye upon the ſides of them, which makes the Citie to be kept very neate and cleane. The chiefe Churches are theſe, The Cathedrall Church of S. Iohn, Our ladies, S. Ieames and S. Peters and others, which are partly couered with lettanie and plates of Copper, and a fine gliſtering golden Knot upon the ſteeple. This Citie is reckoned to be 2150. paces in lentgh; and 130. in breath.

After Lubeck Wiſmar followeth, which in the Saxons ſpeech ſignifieth a Safe-Sea; and it is ſo called, becauſe the Haven of it, is accounted ſafe and without daunger for ſhipping. Some are of opinion, that it tooke the name from VViſmarus, a King of the Vandals, which is moſt falſe and fained. The foundation thereof they reckon to be from the yeere 1240, in which time this towne out of the ruinous walls of the Citie of Mecklenburgh the capitall Citie of the Vandals, was built by Guncelinus, who ſucceeded Henricus Leonius in the Gouvernment. It is of late mightely encreaſed, and enlarged by reaſon of their Commerce with other Nations, becauſe they haue a moſt ſafe and a commodious haven for ſhipping to come in and to goe out. Beſide this, there lye many Hamlets, and Villages about it, which furniſheth them with all neceſſarie proviſions. And it hath much land lying without it, ſo that 500. Burgers, which dwell within the Citie, each of them may manure, and till a certaine number of ackers of ground for ſeven yeeres together, according to their ancient cuſtome. There are three faire Churches in it, to wit, S. Maries, which ſtandeth in the midſt of the Towne, S. Nicolas, in the North, and S. Georges in the South part thereof. The Towne-houſe is a faire building, and ſo is alſo the Dukes Palace. From thence unto Svverin, it is accounted foure miles, to Roſtock ſeven, and to Lubeck eight. Among which Townes the Inhabitants, becauſe of their civilitie and kindneſſe, haue no ſmall honour giuen them: as alſo their wiſe Magiſtrates, in regard of their wholeſome lawes, and ſtatuts, which are much reſpected; & likewiſe for the great diligence of their marchants, they are exceedingly commended among the Hanſe-Townes. Whereof Crantius in his Vandalia witneſſeth with theſe words following.

Guncelinus, ſaith he, ſucceedeth his Father in the Gouvernment & poſſeſſed the Earledome of Svverin, which his Father had received from Henricus Leon, as a reward for his faithfull ſervice. He perceiving that Mecklenburgh was an open place, and in lenght & breath very large, and that it could not well be fortifyed, begann to built a Towne upon the next Sea Coaſts, which he named VViſmar, but after whoſe name, it is not knowne. Moreouer he ſaith, that if the Latins had been there, then it might happely haue bin called rightly Ciſmaria. But ſeing it was firſt founded by the Saxons, it is uncertaine whence it tooke the name. Otherwiſe VViſmoria is a Vandalian word, where many famous and notable Men dwelt: ſo that from Wiſmarus, the Towne of VViſmar might be named.

Wee muſt not forget Roſtock, which is alſo a Vandalian, & a Hanſe Towne. It is not ſo called from Roſa, or Roſeto, as ſome imagine, or from a Red-ſtaff, though the Dutch Noune importeth ſo much, but from the humide and moiſt grond, which the Sclavi, who in former ages inhabited in this place, named in their ſpeech Roſtock, which is engraven in the Towne ſeale, and agreeth with the Poliſh Hiſtorie.

It is reported, that about the yeare of our Lord 229. the Fiſhers, ſeing the commodious ſituation of this place, were allured to come hither, and their made firſt their Hutts, and Cabins, and afterward Godſcalcus King of the Obotritans, built a towne upon this place. But this is moſt certaine and true, that Pribiſlaus the Second, the Sonne of Nicolas the Fortith and laſt King of the Heruli, out of the decayed walls of the Neighbouring Towne Keſſin, which was deſtroyed by Leo their owne Duke, built up the Towne of Roſtock and encompaſſing it about with walls, made it a Towne. It is 1166. paces in length, and 825. in breath, the whole circuit in all being 5500. paces. It is not much leſſer then Lubeck, and is devided into the Old and New, and the Middle part. In the Old there are three Churches, the one called S. Peters, the ſecond S. Nicolas, and the third S. Catharins, with the Colledge of Students in the lawe. The Middle part which by an arme of the VVarnovv is devided from the Old Towne, hath two Churches in it, one named the Holie-Martyrs, & S. Iohns, with the Towne-houſe, & very ſtately Burgers houſes ſtanding round about it. The New Towne hath in it S. Ieames Church, that of the Holy Ghoſt, S. Michels, the Holy Croſſe, and eight Colledges, or Schooles in it. There are three Marcket places in it: The Old, where the Huſbandmen and Peſants ſell their Wood, Coles, & Barlie: The Midle Mercate, where there ſtandeth many ſhops with divers wares: and the third, which is called the Hop-mercate, where they ſell great ſtore of hoppes, and then the Horſe and the Latine-mercate, as they call, becauſe it ſtandeth neere unto the Colledges. There are in it 140. Streets, and Lanes, whereof ſome are called by the name of the people that dwell in them, others according to the place, where they are. There are ſeven great Gates, where the waggons goe out and in: As S. Peters Gate which looketh towards Pomeren, the Mill-gate, as ye goe into the Marck, the Stone-gate, &c. but two of them are damd up: there are alſo 14. ſmall Gates, or Portals, which goe unto the VVarnovv. There are ſeven bridges, whereof one of them is decayd through oldneſſe. Their are manie antiquities in this Citie, which all of them are found to be ſeven in number, which this Dutch verſe following doth elegantly expreſſe.

Seven Doren tho S. Marien Karke,
Seven Straten van den grooten Marcke,
Seven Dhore ſoo daer gaen tho Lande,
Seven Koopmans bruggen by den Strande,
Seven Torne ſo op den Raedhuß ſtaen,
Seven Clocken die da dalychen ſlaen,
Seven Linden op den Roſen garten,
Das ſint die Roſtocher Kenneyvarten.

The chiefeſt of Gentlemens houſes, are the Monckes, the Coſfelders, the VVohrents, the Freſes, the Natravens, the Lovvens, the VViſemen, the Kruſſes, the Rodes, thoſe of Zelovve, of Otbergen, of Zeynen, of Aa, VVitvven, of Krone, Kropeln, Kerckhoven, of Baggen, Buke, Katzovv, Macken, & the Grentzens. The Roſtockers haue povver to coine Gold and Silver. Their Magiſtracie conſiſteth of 24. Counſeillours, out of vvhome their are elected 4. Borrougmaſters, the Recorder, the Maſters of the Gilds, the Shriefs and Iudges.

The Leſſer Tovvnes of the Dukedome of Mecklenburgh, are theſe: Suerin, Parchim, Lubitz, Plavve, Guſtrovv, Butzovv, Croplin, Bruel, VVaren, Ribnitz, Teßin, Malohin, and ſome others beſide.

There are very manie rivers, vvhereof the principaleſt is the Elve, and the Rehenitz.

Alſo this Countrie is full of Meers, aud ſmall Seas, namely the Svverinſh Sea, the Krakovver Sea, the Plauvver Sea, the Calpiner Sea, the Malchiuſch Sea, the Commerouſche Sea, the Muritzer Sea, the Paſſovver Sea, and an infinite number of other ſmall Lakes, & Meers, vvhich make this Countrie abound exceedingly in fiſhe.

Woods & Groues there are not a fevve, by vvhich they receiue great benefite and haue in them great Store of all kinde of Venaiſon, and Deere. And thus much for the Dukedome of Mecklenburgh.

The deſcription of the Dukedome OF POMERANIA.

THE Dukedome of Pomeren, lyeth a long the Eaſterne Sea, & was called by their firſt Inhabitants Pamorri, which dwelt alwaies in this Countrie. It is a plaine & a levell Countrie, having fewe hills in it, but is very fruitfull, and full of Fountaines, and Springs. There are pleaſant Meddowes, good paſture grounds, Thick woods, and Groves, wherein there are all ſorts of Deere and Veneiſon, & very good errable Lands. For beſide the tame Cattaile which are there in abundance, this Countrie yeeldeth honey, butter, flaxe, hemps, and other wares, which are tranſported out of all parts of it, and enricheth much the Inhabitants. The Sea-bankes and Downes are there ſo ſtrong and firme, that they neede not to feare any inundation.

The fruitfulneſſe.

The parts.

Pomeren is divided into the upper and nether Pomeren, betweene which the Oder runneth. Nether Pomerania ſhooteth out Eaſtward, and containeth in it the Countrie of the Vandals & Caſſubians. Upper-Pomerania comprehendeth in it the Dukedome of Stetin and Wolgaſt. In both theſe parts there lye manie fine Townes, a monge which Bard is not accounted the leaſt. Some affirme, that this Towne tooke its name from the Longobards, others from the river Bartze, which lyeth neere unto it, and runneth into the ſea. But it maye well be, that the Longobards, which inhabited a long the River Bartze, gave the name of this river unto it. The Countrie lying round about it, is very pleaſant and fruitfull, for they haue many waters and riverets, through which they may bring their commodities by boats. They have fine greene paſtures, great Orchards, thicke woods, excellent ſeed and Cornelands, many Cataile, great ſtore of wood, fruits, wheate, fiſh, fowle, alſo honey, waxe, wool, furrs, leather, and ſuch like cõmodities in abundance, ſo that the Duke of Pomeren in regard of ſo many ſeverall commodities had good reaſon to make choiſe of this place, for his Court & reſidence. It lieth three dutch leagues from Straelſund, ſeven from Roſtock, and as many from Gripſwaldt. From thence one may, travell very Commodiouſly into the Iſle of Rugen, and into ſome other Iſles of Denmarke. The meanes of Bard conſiſteth in trading, which with good proſperitie, they drive in Denmarke, Norway, Sweden and other places. They trade alſo into farre Countries, & brue good beare, which with good profite they ſell in other Townes.

Bard.

Stetin.

The chiefe Citie of Pomer is Stetin, lying very pleaſantly upon the Oder, and is ſo famous and notable, that the Dukes of Pomer take their name from it, and entitle themſelves Dukes of Stetin. It is moſt certaine that the Vandals, a wild and ſavage people, inhabited this Countrie in former ages, whereof in divers villages there are yet ſome reliques to be ſeene, but for their ancient glorie they have nothing remayning but the bare name onely. Some derive the name Stetin from a certaine people of Germanie called Sideni, whereof Ptolomie maketh mention. They received the Chriſtian faith anno 1115. by the meanes & helpe of Otho Biſhop of Bambergh, whẽ as Wartiſlaus the Duke and his two Sonnes, ordayned a Biſhoprick at Wollin, and founded S. Ieames Church in Stetin. This citie is furniſhed with all things needfull for mans life; For there is corn, wood for brick-ovens, & for ſhip-wrights great ſtore, and the rivers abounding in all kind of fiſhe. The Oder there hath in divers places many bridges made over it, whereof the greateſt and firmeſt is as you goe into the Suburbs. Neere unto which there are many Garners of corne and graine, and divers wharfs, where they build ſchipping for the ſea, & boats for their freſh Rivers. But the greateſt bridge of all, lyeth over the Oder upõ the way towards Dãtzick, but to Frankford on the Oder, yee muſt ſaile, or be drawne up againſt the ſtreame. This citie is fortified round about, with walls Turrets, Moats and Gates, and lieth foure-ſquare. The principall Churches are S. Maries, S. Nicolas, S. Ieames and others. There are divers market places in it, as the Herbe-market, the Horſe-market and the fiſh-market. The Towne-houſe ſtandeth hard by S. Nicolas Church in the new Market, from whence there goe ſtreetes ſtreight outright through the whole Citie. The greateſt bewtie thereof is the Pallace or Princes Court, which is built with ſuch art and magnificency, that none of the Italian Courts can put it downe. Philippus and Barnimus, Dukes of Pomeren, erected there an Illuſtrious Schoole, and beſtowed upon it the revenue of S. Othos and S. Maries Churches, ordayning foure Curates, and three Deans over it. The firſt Duke of Stetin was called Bugſlavus the II, who died in the yeere of our Lord 1222. He was the firſt that conquered the Slaves and Vandals, and rooted out their language, Manners, Laws and Cuſtoms, & brought in their places thoſe of Saxonie. Stetin, alſo is accounted one of the chiefeſt Hãs-townes, and though the Prince holds his Court within the citie; yet they have not the leſſe freedomes. The reformation of the religion was firſt brought in by one Paulus à Rhoda, ſent thither by Martin Luther, when Bugſlavus was Duke. Guſtavus Adolphus Magnus King of Sweden, landing in Germanie with his Armie, after he had taken in Straelſund, made himſelf ſure of this citie.

The ſoile & cõmodities.

The Dukes of Stetin.

In the Dukedome of Wolgaſt, or Barden, lyeth a famous Towne adorned with all manner of Learning, and Civilitie called Gripſwald, which was built in the yeere of our Lord 1546. Alſo an other ancient Towne named Wollin, which in former times belonged to the Vandals, & was one of the greateſt merchant townes in Europe. For all the Ruſſians, Danes, Saxons, Sarmatians, Sweds & other nations, had continuall cõmerce there, and traded too and fro. But the Inhabitants ſeing this great proſperity, aroſe unto them from forraine nations, as alſo by reaſon of the Chriſtian Religion, which did much encreaſe, they ſtrictly prohibited, that noe Straingers ſhould make any mention of the new religion, and this was the onely cauſe, that at laſt by the concourſe of ſtraingers they received the Chriſtian faith. For being compelled to it in the yeare 980 it was preached amoug them, but they proving Appoſtates in the yeere 1066, murthering all the Chriſtians, returned to their old Idolatrie. But at laſt Otho Biſhop of Bambergh, at the erneſt requeſt of Boleſlaus King of Poland, and of Denmarke, effected ſo much, that the Ghoſpell was Preached throughout all Pomer, which tooke good ſucceſſe, that the three Princes & brothers namely Ratisborus, Bugiſlaus & Suartepolcus, were baptized and received the Chriſtian Religion. The firſt Biſhop of Wollin was Adelbert: but this towne being ſore afflicted with the continuall warrs of the Danes, and much decayed, it was thought good, to transferre the Biſhops ſea to Canini: & this was the deſolation of that ancient, & famous towne of marchandize which laye not farre from the great meere of Pomeren, out of which theſe three rivers flowed to wit the Panou, the Zuin and the Dirbinouw.

Stralſund. Straelſund is alſo a verie famous ſtrong towne, lying upon the Coaſt of the Eaſterne ſea: heretofore it had a Duke of its owne, whome they called Duke Barne, but afterward the Duke of Pomer ruled over it, and ſince is a cawtronary Towne of the King of Sweden. It was in former ages deſtroyed by Simon Duke of Franconia, the ſonne of Cleodemirus, and afterward in the yeere 1209 regained, and reedifyed by Waldemarus King of Denmarke. Not long ſince it was ſtrongly beſeiged in the name of the Emperour, by his generall Walſteyn, and for a lõg time much diſtreſſed, but without taking of it, he was forced at laſt to raiſe his ſeige from it. Shortly after, the King of Sweden Guſtavus Adolphus Magnus made a firme aliance with the Duke of Pomer, whoſe Countrie was miſerably ſpoyled by the Emperours men, ſo that they received a Swethiſh garniſon into it.

Wineta. Wineta in former times was the richeſt, & mightieſt of all the ſea-townes ſituated betwene the Suin, and the Iland of Rugen: but in the yeere 1030 was deſtroyed by Conrade King of Denmarke. There are divers other Townes, which lye in theſe parts, as Neugard, Lemburgh, Stargard, Bergard, Caminer, Publin, Grifenburgh, and by the ſea coaſt Colbergh, Camin, Collin, Sund, Pucx, Revecol, Lorensburgh and Heckel.

The Ile of Rugẽ. Before Pomer lieth the Iland of Rugen right over againſt Bard, Straelſund, Gripſwaldt and Wolgaſt. This Ile in former times hath ben greater then it is now; for heretofore it joyned ſo neere unto the firme land, that there was but a ſmall river run betwixt them, afterward by the eating of the ſea, and ſtormes, there was much of the land waſhed awaye, that now at this day, it is a dutch mile and a halfe over. It is in length nine and in breadth ſeven dutch miles, having many petty Ilands in it, there groweth abundance of Corne in it, which maketh it as it were a garner for Straelſund. There are alſo many Geeſe in it, exceeding great, but for Horſe, Oxen and Sheepe verie fewe. For Wolves, Rats and Mice, there are none at all, but onely ſom few in Wittouw, which men ſuppoſe came firſt out of the ſhipping, that lay in the havẽ, or by reaſon of ſome ſhipwrack, becauſe there was none before. The Inhabitants are called by the name of the Ileland Rugens. Their might and power may be marked by their expedition and invaſion of Italie, under the conduct of Odarcus. Some of them dwelt in the Iles of the North-ſea, others in the ſea-havens of Pomer, about the Vandalian Gulph or ſea. The Hiſtories make mention of one Critus, who was a mightie Prince of Rugen, in the daies of Swantidorus Duke of Pomer, whoſe daughter called Slavina he marryed about the yeere of our Lord 1100. It is reported alſo, that he ruled over Holſteyn & Ditmars, & built Lubeck, but he had a miſerable death; for as he paſſed and ſtooped to goe through a low doore a Dane ſtroak of his head. His onely ſonne ſucceeded him, and his heire males after him, till Warteſlaus with whom that iſſue failed in the yeere 1225. After whoſe death it fell under the Command of the Duke of Pomer, yet upon this condition, that if either the Duke of Poland or the Prince of Rugen ſhould dye without iſſue, they ſhould withall looſe their command over it, and that it ſhould be tranſported to the longeſt liver, and their heires lawfully begotten. For theſe Princes governed not onely over this Iland, but had alſo command over the Townes of Bard, Grinim and Tribber, which lay upon the firme laud, and durſt couragiouſly, not onely wage warre, againſt the King of Denmarke; but alſo againſt the Duke of Pomer, & thoſe of Lubeck in ancient times, there was in this Ilãd manie ſtrõg & populous townes among which Arcon, which lay upon the Weſt-ſide of Wittou was reckoned one of the chiefeſt. The principall towne of this Iland at this day is Bergen, lying almoſt in the very midſt of the Iland. The others are Sagart, Wick & Bingſt, which are in leſſe eſteeme. It is ſo populous, that they are able to bring 70000 men into the field. Upon Iaſmund not farre from the fort of Borghwall, lyeth a black meere, which hath verie many fiſh in it, of which they write ſtrange things, as ye maye ſee in Philippi, Cluverij, Germania Antiqua. Here they have wood for fyring enough, which the Inhabitants fetch out of a wood called Subbenitza. Subbenitza ſignifieth in their ſpeech a huge heape of wood, and trees hewen downe. There are in this Iland manie Gentlemen: but of divers meanes, ſome travell into forraine countries to ſtudie, others to followe the warrs, that returning home by their learning, and militaire experience, they may attaine unto ſome office in the government. It goeth well with the husbandmen heere though they have ſome ſmale impoſitions, & taxations layd upon them, yet they are free-men in former ages they uſed to ſpeake the Vandalian, and Slavonian tongue, like as thoſe of Pomer did. Their Idolatrie was ſo groſe, and they continued in it ſo long, that they were the laſt of all, which received the Chriſtian Religion, and that in the time of Ludovicus Pius, the ſonne of Charlemagne but afterward fell away againe, and worſhiped as their God S. Vit, the patron of the Corſeianſche Cloiſter in Weſtphalia, and changing his name a litle, called him Swantovit. In honour of him they made an Image in their Church, and from it as they did from Apollo at Delphos, received their oracles and anſwers. And the forraine Merchants, which frequented thether, they compelled to offer unto this Idoll ſome of their coſtlieſt wares. In his honour alſo they kept 300 horſes, among which there was a white one, where upon noe man muſt ride, but his high-prieſt, as if it betokened ſome divine matter. This horſe betimes in the morning was dreſſed and made fine, and was ſtrowed with powder, and brought prauncing to be ſhowne to the ſpectatours: for they verely beleeved, that Swantovit had rood upon this horſe againſt the Ennemies of the Rugens.

There lye two other Ilands by Pomer, whereof the neereſt to Pomer is called Vſedom, upon which the ancient Towne ſo called ſtood, and whereof there is nothing now to beſeene, but the ruines. The other was called Wollin or Iulin, where the citie of Wollin or Iulin lay, which wee have mentioned before. In this mapp ye can hardly diſcerne that theſe be Iles, becauſe they lye ſo cloſſe to the firme-Land, yet if ye marke them well, ye may eaſely perceive the water running betweene them and about them.

Vſedom & Wollin.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE MARQVISATE OF BRANDENBVRGH.

The name & ancient people.

THE Marquisate of Brandenburgh, which this Map describes unto you, was heretofore inhabited by the Vandales, and extended from the Elue, Eastward unto the Dominions, & Countries, which are now inhabited by these of Meklenburgh, Brandenburgh, Pomer, Bohemia and Poland.

This Countrie tooke the name from the Capitall Citie thereof, which (as some saye) was first named Brenneburgum. Hereupon Georgius Sabinus had his eye in the descriptions of his travells, when he saith:

Italiam quando digressus ab urbe petebam,
A Duce quæ Brenno condita nomen habet.

Carolus Magnus fought a long time with this Nation, but Henricus Auceps overcame them in Winter time, by quartering his Armie upon the yce: and afterward besett this Towne with Saxons.

The site.

Westward this Countrie boundeth upon Saxonie, Mysia, and Mecklenburgh: Northward upon Stetin, Pomer, and Cassubia: Eastward, upon Poland and Silesia: and Southward upon Bohemia, Lausnitz, and Moravia.

The fertility.

This Countrie is very fruitfull, especially in Corne, and yeeldeth abundance of Wine. It produceth Corall, Ætites, or the Blood-stone, Scistus and other precious stones.

Prince Electour.

The Marqueese of Brandenburgh is one of the Prince-Electours, & is accounted one of the richest, and mightiest Princes of Germanie, hauing besides the old, and newe Marcks, many townes in his possession in the Countries of Lusatia, Silesia, Cleue, &c.

The seuerall gouvernments.

The Succession of the Princes of this Countrie hath bin gouverned by divers: for the stemme of the Marquesses failing, Lodvvick of Bavaria Anno 1119. gaue this principalitie to his sonne Lodvvick.

The Bavarians afterward Anno 1363. sould it unto the Emperour Charles, being likewise King of Bohemia. From Iohn the Sonne of Charles, this Marquisate came into the hands of Iodocus and Procopius Princes of Moravia. Iodocus being graetly in debt, morgaged it to William Marqueese of Mysia. At last King Sigismund in the yeere 1417. at the Councill of Constance, gaue the same unto Fredericke Burgraue of Nurenbergh, at this day it is gouverned by the singular carefulnesse, mildnesse and gentlenesse, of the Illustrious Iohannes Georgius Marqueese of Brandenburgh.

The devision.

This whole Marquisate is devided into three parts, namely, into the Old, the Middle, and the Newe Marck.

The Old-Marck.

The Old-Marck beginneth, from the Lunenburgish Heath, or Wilderneese, and reacheth unto the Elue, and confineth also upon the Bishopricks of Magdenburgh, and Halberstadt, and upon Mecklenburgh. The Inhabitants thereof were in ancient times the Senones, Suevi, and in some places also the Angrivarii, and Teutones.

In these quarters lie seven good Townes, as Tangeramunda upon the Elue, where the Angra or Tonagra looseth his water, being heretofore the residencie of the Emperour Charles the Fourth. Also Stendalium the Capitall Citie of this Marck: Soltvvedel being devided into two Townes: the Olde, and the Newe. Gardleben with the Castle called Eischinppa, also Osterburgh, VVerb, and Senohusen doubtlesse so called from the Senones. The slighter are Arnburgh with the Castle lying upon the Elue, Bisemarch, Bostera, and Bucha, built not farre from the Elue, Kalba, and Meslinga, which is called also Letzolinga: besides this they count also 465. faire Villages in it.

The Middlemarck.

The Middle-Marck beginneth on the oder side of the Elue, and reacheth unto the Oder, and unto the river Suevus or the Spree, and in ancient times was inhabited by the Suevi. The Metropolitan hereof is Brandenburgh, whereof wee haue made mention before. It is famous, and is situated upon the river of Havel, some affirme that it tooke the name from Brennes, General of the Gauls, who first built it: other againe maintaine the contrarie, that it was founded by Brandon Prince of the Francks, and sonne unto Marcomirus, who about the yeere of Christ 140. subdued this Countrie. In former ages here was the Pantheon, or Common Temple for al the Idols of the Vandales, whereof some of them were called Zornebock, and Svvandevvitz, as the Mersburgish Chronicle doth shewe.

Brandenburgh.

At this daye here is held the Sessions, and Iudgment seate for the whole Land.

This Towne hath many priviledges, and Freedomes, graunted unto them in former times by Emperours, Kings, & Princes, as appeareth by the Statue, which standeth in the Towne, houlding a bloodie Sword in his right hand, which the Burgesses call the Rolant.

Berlin.

Next after Brandenburgh falloweth Rathenau upon the Havel, also Spondavv with a fort built upon the river of Spree. After them Coln & Berlin: two Townes separated one from the other by the River Spree, where at this day the Prince keepeth his Court.

Franckfort.

Franckfort is also one of the chiefest Townes, and lyeth verie pleasantly upon the Oder, which aboundeth in fishe. This river runneth upon the East side of it, and upon the other sids of it, stand pleasant hills and Vineyards, whereof they make Wines, which they send downe the streame into Pomer, Denmarck, Prussia, and some other adjacent places. This Citie was first built Anno 1253. by Gedine of Herzbergh, by the Commaund, and meanes of Iohn the first Marqueese of Brandenburgh: It is a famous Marchant-Towne, where they held yeerly three Marts. There is in it also a Vniversitie, for the liberall Sciences, Provinces, as Alde-Marck, Middle-Marck, Neu-Marck, Vber-Marck, Pregnitz and Croſſen, all of them Dukedomes beſides the Lordſhip of Sternebergh and Cotbus, alſo a part of Lauſnitz. There are alſo Leſſer, and inferiour Countries in theſe Provinces: as Rapin, Vierraden, with the Marquiſate of Cuſtrin. In briefe, they count there are in the whole Marquiſate of Brandenburgh, with the territories belonging to it 55. great townes, 64. ſmall, 16. Market Hamlets, 38. Caſtles or Forts, 10. Parkes, and 17. Cloiſters.

The Rivers.

The Chiefeſt Rivers which water this Countrie are the Oder, the Spree, the Elue, the Havel, the VVarta, and ſome others.

Neere unto the Carthuſian Cloiſter by Franckfort, there is a ſpring which floweth out of the ridge of a Vineyard, where all whatſoever falleth into it, is hardned into a ſtone, as the experience thereof ſheweth. And this may ſuffice for the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF BRVNSWYCK.

The name, and from vvhome.

THe Dukedome of Brunſvvyck, taketh the name from the Capitall City of Brunſvvyck, even as the City it ſelfe deriueth the name from Brunon Sonne unto Ludolph Duke of Saxonie: for he gaue his owne name to Vicum, or the village, which he begann to build, calling the ſame Brunonis Vicũ, or a Gulfe, which ſignifyeth in the Saxons tongue a VVyck: ſo that at this time this City is called Brunſvicum, or Braunſvvyck.

The largneſſe.

This Countrie is of a larg extent, and reacheth from the Maegdenburgish and Halberſtatish commaund, and alſo from the Hartz, or Svvartſvvald unto the Elve. About the yeere of Chriſt 1230. the Emperour Fredrick made this Countrie a Dutchie, making Otho Lord of Brunſvvyck, and Lunenburch Duke thereof: which Otho was the Succeſſour of Henricus Leo, who had the generall Commaund over all Saxonie. Frederick the II. made Otho the Nephew of Leo Duke of Brunſwyck and Lunenburg, giving him the Armes, which he had brought out of England, being two Lyons Or, for the Dukedome of Brunſwyck, and a Lyon Azure with a ſpot for Lunenburgh, which Duke Herman, and his Succeſſours had in times paſt given, with the title of Duke of Saxonie. Of the other Dukes ye maye reade more at large in Munſter in his 3. Booke of the deſcription of the World.

The Princes & Gouvernment.

The Capitall Citie.

Brunſvvyck at this day is the chiefe Towne, not onely of this Dukedome; but alſo of all Saxonie. In former ages it was called by the name of her Founder Brunepolis, and by Ptolomie Tubiſurgius, according to the opinion of Franciſcus Irenicus. This City hath a large Circuit, is foure-ſquare, populous, & adorned with many faire houſes, fortifyed with walls, and a double moate, and in ſome places a treble full af Water. Betweene theſe moates, it is girt in round about with a very thick wall, and is beſett with diverſe trees upon it. There are fiue Mercate places, fiue Towne-houſes, and likewiſe as many Magiſtrates. It was built according to the teſtimonie of Herman their owne Hiſtoriographer, in the yeere 861. by two bretheren, Brunon and Theodorus (who alſo was called by ſome Theomarus) Sonns unto Ludolph Duke of Saxonie. There runneth through the midſt of the City, the river Onacra, or the Oocker, whoſe ſpringhead beginneth in the Hartomer-boſch, and divideth the Towne into two parts, carrying away all filth along with it, & hath divers bridges ouer it, and at laſt falleth into the VVeſer. In this City the water is not good to drinke, and therefore the Inhabitants for the moſt part drinke Beere, for there is no great ſtore of Wine, and that which is there, is very deare. This City at the firſt was raiſed by ſmall meanes, but in proceſſe of time grew bigger and bigger, and at laſt was ſo enlarged, that in regard of the might and riches which it attayned unto, the Prince thought it no diſgrace to him, to entitle himſelfe Duke of Brunſvvyck. Before one of the Towne houſes of this City, theſe words are to be read, which I will inſert here, in regard of the manifould Strifes, and Contentions, which beare ſuch ſway among men at this daye. Through ſtrife ariſe deadly ennemities, men ſpend money in vaine, & vvearie out their bodies daylie, the minde is exerciſed in vvearieſomeneſſe and labour: vvhence ariſe and followve diſhoneſt facts, & lamentations; and all vvholeſome Actions are layd a ſide, & thoſe vvhich imagine to be gayners, looſe thereby oftentimes; and ſuppoſe they be gayners, yet they haue not gott much, vvhen they haue counted their labour, and expences.

Goſlar.

Among the reſt of the Townes in this Countrie, Goſlar is not accounted the meaneſt, being an Imperiall Towne, walled by Henry the firſt, father unto Otho the great. In the yeere 1051. Henry the third, being a rich and mightie Emperour, enlarged and adorned much this Towne, which before was but a mill-wharfe, and a Hunters-lodge, and was by both the Henries, and afterward by the third, exalted & raiſed to this dignitie, which now it doth enioye, and the aforeſaid Henry the third, built a royall Palace in it with two faire Churches.

Helmſtadt lyeth halfe-way betweene Brunſvvyck & Magdenburgh. This towne William Duke of Brunſvvyck bought of the Abbot of VVerden for a peece of money, and brought it under his obedience, when the Burgeſſes thereof would not obey the Abbot, Carolus the Sonne of Carolus Magnus fighting againſt the Sorabos and Vilſos, firſt begann to encompaſſe this towne with a Wall, and delivered it ouer into the hands of S. Ludgerus the firſt Biſhop of Munſter, that he might dwell there in ſafetie and Libertie, when he brought the conquered unto the Chriſtian faith. Helmſtadt.

Halberſtadt

Through the Epiſcopall Citie of Halberſtadt runneth the river of Oltemia. In the midſt of the Towne riſeth a hill ſome two forlongs long upon the top of it, there is a broad, and a large plaine, at both ends whereof there ſtand two Churches: and in the midſt a faire Mercate-place, which is encompaſſed round about with faire houſes belonging to the Dom-Heers or Canons of the Minſter, and from that part which ſtandeth upon the hill, the Towne is commonly called, and that part which lyeth under the hill is named the Suburbs. About this Towne there is a very fruitfull ſoile, where there groweth much wheate, ſo that when the Corne is ripe, the Eares are ſo long and high, that one can ſcarcly ſee a horſeman rydingh through it.

Quedlingburgh is an ancient Towne, and the firſt ornament of the Saxon Princes, lying not farre from Magdenburgh, having bene founded by Henricus Auceps. Quedlingburgh.

Hannover.

The towne of Hannover lyeth upon the river Leine, right over againſt the ancient Caſtle of the Earles of Lauvvenrod, in the time of Henricus Leo, and about the yeere of our Lord 1156. it did belong unto this Caſtle, and becauſe it layd on the other ſide of the riuer, it was called Hannover. Among other Soxon Townes, this towne flouriſheth much at this preſent, being well fortifyed with walls and moates, being well built and peopled.

Hildesheym — Hildesheym, or Hildeſium is according to Irenicus his opinion the ſame which Ptolomie calleth Aſcalingius, it is an ancient towne; which heretofore was ſeparated into two parts, but now are ioyned both together, and make but one Towne. The Cathedrall Church is very beautifull, having a ſteeple, whereof the top is gilt. It is a very pleaſant towne, and the towne, where Ludolph of Collen was borne, that famous Mathematician, who afterward was Profeſſour in the Vniverſity of Leyden in Hollant. It is an Epiſcopall Seate, and if any man be deſirous to knowe the number, and names of the Biſhops thereof, he may reade Irenicus, Crantius in his Metropolis, and Anthonius Monchiacinus in his Booke of the firſt beginning of the Chriſtian religion. This Biſhoprick was firſt founded by Carolus Magnus.

Northauſen — Northauſen is an Imperiall Towne. This Map conteyneth alſo the Dukedome of Grubenhagen, as a member of the Empire. Alſo the principate of Anhalt, and Mansfelt, an Earledome belonging to old Saxonie: lying upon the river Sala, being a very ancient Earledome, ſeing that Hegenus (who Anno 542 in the time when King Arthur of Britaine flouriſhed) was called Earle of Mansfelt. They take this name from Mannus Sonne of Thuiſcus, as the adiacent place Aſcanian, is called ſo from Aſcenes. The chiefeſt townes in this Countie are Mansfelt upon the river Wyper, Eyſleben, and VVypra. Eyſleben is the chiefe towne, and lieth betweene the Saal, and the VVyper. It is thought it was ſo called by Iſida, whereof Tacitus maketh mention, that ſhee ſhould haue walked through the Countrie of Suavia after her huſband: not farre from thence in the Mountaines Melibocus, there are found Mines of Metall. It is thought, that in former ages the Tubantes inhabited in theſe parts, though that Pyramius is of the opinion, that the Tvventenaers, which lye moſt upon Frize-land ſhould be theſe Tubantes. Verrutius holdeth for certaine, that thoſe of the Earledome of Benthem, which are next adioyning to this place, retayne ſtill that ancient name. Whereof the Inhabitants by Lazius in his 8 booke Migrationum are calleth Tubinger.

Grubenhagen. Anhalt. Mansfelt. Eyſleben,

This Countie containeth in it foure Earledomes, as VVippram, Arnſteyn, VVetin, and Quernfurt.

Other Counties. The other Earledomes in this Countrie are Barbey, Stolbergh, Hohenſtain, Regenſteyn, and Pleſſe, all belonging to the Empire.

The ſpirituall Prelats, & Princes of this Countrie are the Arch-Biſhop of Magdenburch, primate of Germanie, and a member of the Empire. The Biſhops of Hildesheym, and of Halberſtadt, both appertaining to the Empire, and under Mentz. Alſo Quedlingburch, and Gernrode are Dioceſſes in the eight Circle of the Empire.

The Biſhoprick of Magdenburch. It remayneth now to ſpeake ſomwhat in this Map of the Biſhoprick of Magdenburch, or Meyd-burch, which beareth the name from the chiefe Towne. Carolus Magnus, having reformed all Saxonie, he ordayned in the ſame two Biſhopricks: whereof Magdenburch was the chiefeſt. At the firſt erection thereof, the Biſhop held firſt his reſidencie at Styda, afterward at Valerſleve, and thirdly at Vreſe, untill at laſt the Emperour Otho the firſt, Anno 930, altered the ſame, and tranferred it to Magdenburch, as the great Chronicle mentioneth, exalting this aboue all others in Germanie, although he of Saltzburg, and the other Archbiſhops Princes-Electours, would by no meanes, allow of this Primacie and dignitie giuen to him of Magdenburch, as Crantius in his Metropolis declareth.

Burgraves. The ſame Emperour Otho the firſt, ordayned a Burgrave of Magdenburch authorizing him, that he in the Emperours place, ſhould preſide in the publick Seſſions, and Benches of Iuſtice, and ouer the common regiment, not onely within this Biſhoprick, but alſo in all the adiacent Countries; whereof the firſt that adminiſtred this office made by the ordination of the Emperour Otho, was Gero Marqueſſe of Luſatia, whoſe memorie is yet kept in a monument of the Cloiſter of Gerode. After him ſucceeded in order theſe under written, Hermanus Duke of Saxonie, Lotharius Earle of Waldeck, Fredericus Sonne unto Lotharius, Conradus his Nephew, Manfredus the halfe Brother of Conradus, who being ſlaine in the warres, Distericus Earle of Plocenſer, whoſe daughter, when Vdo Marqueſſe of Brandenburch had marryed, and had executed alſo the Burgraueſhip, he left his Sonne Henricus his ſucceſſour: he alſo being deceaſed, Lotharius Saxo gaue the ſame office to one Burchardus, being diſcended of the Lords of Quetfort, from whom the Earles of Mansfelt deriue their pedegree: after this wee finde, that the Lords of Schrapela adminiſtred this office, from whome by the authority of the Emperour Rodolphe, it was transferred unto the Princes Electours of Saxonie.

The Chiefe Citie. The Capitall Citie of this Countrie is Magdenburch, lying upon the Elue. It was called heretofore Partenopolis; becauſe that Venus Parthenia was honored here. Iohannes Capinio nameth it Dinoadus, Pergus, with a Greekiſh name, which ſignifyeth a Maid-Burrough. Æneas Sylvius calleth it Virginopolis: Ligurinus, Virginis Vrbs, or the habitation of Maides, and Ptolomie μεσσίον. The Emperour Otho (as Lupold writeth) firſt built this city, afterward enlarged it, where he lyeth buryed. This beautifull Citie, & Imperiall reſidencie, is devided into three parts, & is fortifyed with Walls, Bulwarks, Turrets, and Moates, alſo adorned with faire houſes, ſtreets, and lanes, & with fine Churches, eſpecially that braue Church of S. Maurice is worth the ſight, all built with foure-ſquare blew ſtones, being a ſumptuous and a magnificent worke of the Emperour Otho. The Magiſtrates of this City haue in their keeping (which they hold in great reverence) the Romane law, written in the Saxons tongue, and as it is reported, was confirmed and eſtabliſhed by the Authority of Carolus Magnus, divers people haue their next addreſſe thereunto, for the deciding of their ſuits and Controverſies; for they hold theſe lawes here in great worth and eſteeme. This large braue and ancient Citie, was lately with the moſt part of the citizens through the moſt cruell, and unheardof rage and tyrannie of the Emperours men, ſacked, burnt, and conſumed, with ſuch inhumanitie, as the like hath not bene heard off in a thowſand yeeres. Maidenburch.

The Rivers in theſe Countries are the Elue, the Oocker, Sala, VViper, Inderſt, Struma, Reyde, Vker, Fues & ſome others. Among the Mountaines the Ramelbergh, and the Melibocus are accounted the chiefe. And the principall Woods are the Hartzvvalt, Solnigervvalt and others deſcribed in this Mapp.

THE DESCRIPTION OF NETHER SAXONIE.

The Originall of their name.

THis Countrie hath taken the name from the Saxon people, whoſe offſpring & denomination (as alſo ſome other Nations) haue not onely beene feigned by ſome ignorant Moncks, but alſo forged, and defended by ſome Curious men of our times.

For ſome of them affirme, that the Saxons were ſo called from the Sonne of Saxon Negnon, brother to the Vandales: others becauſe of their ſtonie nature: others againe from the Remnants of the Macedonian hoaſts, and ſome in regard they wore Cutlaſſes, and ſhort Swords, whereof in Engelhuſius theſe verſes are read.

Quippe brevis gladius apud illos Saxa vocatur,
Unde ſibi Saxo nomen traxiſſe putatur.

But Crantzius deriveth their Originall from the Catti, a people of Germanie, as alſo Learned Caprius taketh their offſpring from the Phrygians, euerie man may beleeue hereof, what it pleaſeth him: as for me, I will not undertake here to refute theſe Fables: but rather embrace the opinion of ſome Learned Germans, which affirme, that the Saxons are deſcended of the Sacæ, a famous people in Aſia, and were ſo called, as if one would ſay Sacaſones, of the Sonnes Sacarum, which nation they think came firſt out of Scythia, or Sarmatia Aſiatica, with the Goths, Suevians and Dacians, and other people, and by litle and litle ſpread themſelues through Europe: And this opinion is not without ſome ground, which the Saxons fetch out of Aſia, where mankind firſt had their beginning, and encreaſe: for beſide that which Strabo writeth, that the Sacæ, as before the Cimmerij, made great invaſions, and called alſo a part of Armenia after their owne name Sacacena: ſo Ptolomie placeth alſo in that part of Scythia the Saſſoni, Suevi, Maſſagetæ, and Daci. Ciſnerus alſo obſerueth further that theſe nations retayne the ſame neighbourhood in Europe, which they heretofore had with on another in Aſia.

Nota.

Nota.

The bounds. And though that Saxonie hath as great a reach, as any Countrie in Germanie; yet is it not ſo large at this day, as it hath bene in former times.

For old Saxonie reached betweene the Elue, the Rhyne, the German Sea, and the Eyder, as farre as the Confines of Haſſia, and Thuring, ſo that Brunſwyck lay in the very midſt of it. Whence it came to paſſe, that VVeſtphalia, the Old Marke, Myſia, Luſatia, Manſfelt, and other Territories were called by the name of Saxonie.

At this day this Countrie is devided according to the Dominions and Iuriſdictions of the Princes, and Lords, which gouverne them, and not according to the ancient limits, which were made by Rivers, and Mountaines.

The Temperature. The aire in this Countrie is very colde, but pure, and healthfull, ſaving in thoſe places where there are mooriſh grounds.

The fertility Alſo there is in this Countrie abundance of all things. The ſoile beareth great ſtoore of barly, and wheate, whereof they doe not onely make white bread, but alſo brew beare.

Diuers ſorts of Mines. They haue alſo in divers places good Mines of all kind of Mettaile, eſpecially, upon the Mountaines of Melibocus, which reach from Haſſia unto Saxonie: Out of this mountaine they digg a kind of a black-ſtone, which they eaſely cleaue aſſunder having much Pitch and Copper in it, and here and there hath many Spotts of Gould and Copper ſhyning in it: This ſtone being digged out is burnt ſo long, till all the Mettaile be molten out of it: In theſe ſtones are ſeene in appearance the figure, and likeneſſe of diverſe creatures, eſpecially ſuch as are found in the adiacent Meere, namely, of Elles, Carpes, Froggs, and ſometimes of Cocks, yea (if men may giue credit unto it) there hath bene found the image of the Pope of Rome with a beard, and a treble Crowne.

Salt-pits. At Goſlar, beſides the Gold, Silver, and Copper mines, there are very rich Salt-pits or ſprings, as likewiſe at Hal & at Lunenburgh. Out of ſome hills they digg a great quantitie of Marble.

In the daies of the Emperour Otho the firſt, the ſilver mines were found at Coſlar, which at the firſt were exceeding rich, but becauſe the abuſe, & wantonneſſe of the Inhabitants, as a puniſhment ſent from God, theſe Mines fell in & ſtifled aboue a thowſand perſons: ſince which time, there hath not bene found in that place neither gould nor ſilver, but a kind of black-lead, which firſt becommeth Vitrioll, & in which they ſeeth their lead, and ſilver. It is reported, that the lead at Coſtar was found firſt in this manner: A Gentleman ryding abroad upon a horſe which he called Ramel, being upon his way, he tyed his horſe to a tree that grew upon a hill, and ſtricking & paving upon the ground with his feete, diſcouvered a veyne of black-lead in the ſame manner as we read in the Poets of Pegaſus, that winged horſe, which ſtriking with his feete againſt a rock, diſcouvered a fountaine, and made the water guſh out of it, which fountaine was named Hippocrene: euen ſo the Saxons called this hill Ramel-bergh, wherein to this day is found abundance of Lead, which yeeldeth great profit.

In this place (I ſay) is found great ſtore of Lead, Oare, and flints out of which they ſeeth black-lead, ſo that it ſeemes all this hill is full of it.

The chiefeſt towne of this Countrie is Hal, and hath the ſame name as Hal hath in Svvaben, and other Townes ſo called, in regard of the abundance of Salt, which by the Greekes is named ἅλς: ſo alſo according to the Opinion of Strabo the River Halis is ſo called from the Greeke Word; Salt, as likewiſe Hal upon the Sala, tooke the name from Salt. Theſe fruitfull and profitable Salt-pits were firſt found by the Vandales, which they called Hermanduros, before the nativitie of Chriſt, the report whereof being ſpread abroad, every man did their beſt endeavour to finde them out with as great eagerneſſe, as if they had bin Mines of Gould. Hal is at this preſent the reſidencie of the Marqueſſe of Brandenburgh, & of the Adminiſtratours of Magdenburch.

Vnder Nether-Saxonie are rekonned the Dukedomes of Lauvvenburg, Lunenburch and Brunſvvyck, together with the Dukedome of Meklenburch.

The Dukedome of Lauvvenburgh boundeth Northward upon Holſteyn & Mecklenburgh, Eaſtward upon the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh, and Southward upon Lunenburgh. The river of Elue runneth along through it. It is in length about twelue Germane miles long, and foure or fiue in breath. The chiefe Towne is Lauvvenburgh, lying upon the Elue, there are alſo leſſer townes: as Thorn, Dam, and others. The other Countries, as Lunenburgh, Brunſvvyck, and Mecklenburgh belong to Nether Saxonie, each of them having there particular Maps and deſcriptions, and therefore wee neede make no mention of them here. Lauwenburch.

The ninth Imperiall Circle, is called the Nether Saxon Circle, and conſiſts of three States, or degres, Whereof the firſt is the Spirituall, the ſecond the Princes, and the third the Hans-or free-townes. Nether Saxonie the ninth Circle of the Romaine Empire.

The firſt State are the Arch-Biſhops of Breme and Magdenburch, the Biſhops of Hildeſheym, Lubec, Suerin, Ratzenburgh, and Schleſvvyck.

Vnto the ſecond State belong theſe temporall Princes, to wit, the King of Denmarke, in regard of the Land, which he holdeth of the Empire, the Dukes of Lauvvenburch, Brunſvvyck, Lunenburch, Mecklenburgh, Holſteyn. The Counts of Reffain, and of Delmenhorſt.

Vnto the third State appertaine the Hanstownes of Lubec, Hamburch, Mulhauſen in Duringhen, Northauſen, Coſtar, and Gottingen.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF LVNEBVRGH

The Bounds.

THE neighbouring Countries unto the Dutchie of Luneburgh, are the Dukedome of Mecklenburgh, the Marquisate of Brandenburgh, the Arch-Bishoprick of Magdenburgh, the Countie of Schauvvenburgh, the Bishoprick of Breme, and the Countie of Oldenburgh, with which Countries, as also with the Elue it is shutt in. It hath the name from the capitall City Luneburgh, as the Dutchie of Brunsvvyck, and the Diocesse of Breme, are so called from the chiefe townes thereof. This Dutchie is under Nether Saxonie, and is a woodie Countrie, as the names of the woods lying in it, doe manifestly shewe, as the Woods called the Raarbroeck, the Recht-kamer, the Grode, Bergervvalt, Im-Ringlouvv, Im-Levven, Im-Dromeling. On the one side of this City there lyeth a great Heath, which the Inhabitants call, the Lunenburgish Heath. The Capitall Citie (as is said) is Luneburgh, lying upon the longitude of 32. degrees, & 18. minuts, and of latitude 53. degrees, and 27. minuts. It standeth six Germane miles from Hamburgh, twelue from Breme, tenn from Lubec, fifteene from Brunsvvyck, fiue from Vltzen, two miles and a halfe from VVinsem, one from Bardevvyck, and sixe from Harborgh.

The Woods.

The Capitall citie.

The name Luneburgh, (as some beleeue) was taken from their Idoll Luna, which stood upon a certaine hill thereabout, or from a brooke, which ran by this Citie, now called Elmena, heretofore named Luno, or Lumenou. This Rivelet (as some dreame) Isis travailling unto her Nephew Gambrivius, which is now Hamburgh, gaue the name Luno unto it, as shee did to diverse other Rivers, and Brooks in the Dukedome of Lunenburgh, and the Marquisate of Brandenburgh, either from her owne shape, or from the new moone which they hadwont to worship there. In all appearance the Image of Luna stood thereabouts upon a hill, and was adored by the Inhabitants, because the Chronicle of Saxonie ascribeth such to Iulius Cæsar.

We read in the yeerly historie of the Bishoprick of Verden, that the aforesaid Image, or Idoll was taken away by Egistus, one of the 70. Disciples: but a while after the Inhabitants fell againe to their former Idolatrie, and was sett up againe; but at length by the Abbot of VVipert, who was an English man, and of the Order of Benedictus, and the first Bishop of Verden, it was wholly abolished, and in the place thereof built S. Maries Chapell Anno 780. It is an ancient Towne, which the historie of Carolus Magnus maketh mention off, and witnesseth that it is ancienter, then the destruction of Bardvvyck, which was ruined by Henricus Leo Duke of Bavaria, and Saxonie: for after that Bardvvyck was destroyed, Medestorp, lying upon the Eastside of the Towne, was so enlarged, that in the yeere 1190. it was made a towne. That the Lombards, and Saxons dwelt here, the words Bardervvyck and Bardengena, where the Congregation of Ramesloo, had their chiefe Church, doe plainely shewe. In this towne there are abundance of Salt-pits, or Springs, giuen to the Inhabitants, through the wonderfull blessing of God: but when they began first of all to spring, is not knowne. Mention is made of them in the historie of Otho the First, and Helmoldus, who wrote the historie of the Slaves, saith, that these said Pits were kept by Henricus Leo Duke of Bavaria, Prince-Electour of Saxonie, Palatine and Prince of Luneburg, in stead of the Salt-pits found in Oldesslo, which he commaunded should be stopped, to the End the Common-weale of Lunenburgh, might sustaine no dammage thereby. In the time of his Nephews sonne Iohn Duke of Lunenburgh, these salt waters begann to spring up in more abundance. This City hath many fine priviledges, every yeere fiue dayes before Shroue-tyde the chiefest of the towne hold a tylting, especially those, which receiue benefit by their Salt-kettles. These gaines were ordayned Anno 1269. The Pickle of these overflowing Springs had wont in former times to be fetcht up in a pale which hung on a beame like a ballance, and was puld up by able and lustie men, which custome they held, untill the yeere 1569. But afterward by the industrie, and invention of Mr. George Tœbing, a pompe was set in the deepest of the pit, and so pumpt the saltwater out, and gathered it into 54. Hutts, whereof euery one of them, had foure dripping panns upon, which (it was straunge, for they were made of Lead) the pickle being powred, sodd day and night, and in the space of two houres became White salt: which was brought into the houses made for that use & from whence it was carryed, and solde. These dripping panns, being molten by the heate of the fire, were cast a new every 14. dayes. It is free for euerie Citizen, and Inhabitant to fetch as much pickle from them for nothing, as will pikle his meate. The revenue of these Salt-pits belong unto the Clergie, and not onely to them; but also to the Counseillours of the Citie: and the Schoole masters liue upon these Salt-kettles, and receiue their stipends from them. These Salt-pits are of two sorts, the Old, and the New. The Old are close by the Towne wal, and the New in the very midst of the Citie: which yeeld such an encrease, that with their sumptuous houses, hansome situation, curteous, and abundance of Burgesses and Inhabitants, as also for their wealth, riches, and all things needfull, they may compare with the cheifest townes of all Germanie.

The aire & Fertilitie.

The aire there is pure and wholesome &c. The soile as pleasant, and fruitfull as any of the Hanstownes are. In former times there was foure Cloisters, the first was S. Michels, built upon a hill by Otho Magnus Duke of Saxon, wo was father unto the Emperour Henricus Auceps. The Moncks of the Order of S. Benedi-

Benedictus dwelt in it: the second was S. Maries for the Franciscan Moncks: the third of the holy valley, or of the Præmonstratenses: the fourth is now Gymnasium, or the Colledge Paulicorum, to which maye be added the præpositura come to S. Iohannes from the cheife Deanships of Maedestorp, and the Colledge Calendes Domini. At this day they haue sixe Lutheran Churches in it, 1. S. Iohns, 2. S. Michels, 3. S. Lamberts, 4. S. Nicolasses, 5. S. Maries, and 6. S. Sanctus. Otho the first made first this Countrie and Earledome: joining a part of Mecklenburgh to it. Fredrick the second made it from an Earledome a Dukedome. Henricus Leo of Bavaria being chased away, and banished, kept still this City, and Brunswyck. The alteration of Religion was effected there with great trouble, and it was almost thirtie yeeres before it began to be preached publickly in S. Nicolas Church by Frederiek Geming, and Henry Otho; but afterward encreased much, as also the other Churches by the Ministrie of M. Eckenbergh and Iohn Lampad. In those dayes there was one of the Councill called Mr. Ierome VVitzendorf, a man of great respect, who advanced the cause greatly, and at last the Citizens them selues, loathing the popish ceremonies, they ceased not to solicite the Magistrates, that they might as well as those of Lubec and Hamburgh, enioy the libertie of their religion, which the Magistrats having graunted they sent for, and called Mr. Stephen Kempe from Hamburgh who reformed the church, and brought into that order where in it is now at this day. After these succeeded Vrbanus Regius, and others.

The Duke of Lunenburgh hath other Townes in it besides, but none in such esteeme, as upon the Elve over against Hamburgh is the towne of Harborgh, VVinsen upon the Luhr, Vltzen which is almost in the midst of the Countrie, Bardvvyck next unto Lunenburgh, Cellacel the Dukes Court, and Dannebergh, which hath the title of an Earledome, lyeth thereabouts.

In this Map ye may see Southward by the Weser side, a small towne called Hamelen lying not farre from the Countie of Schavveburgh, whereof for a conclusion we will rehearse unto you a straung, and memorable storie, written in a letter by that fomous Physician D. Arnoldus Fretagius, unto Ortelius: I tooke of late (saith hee) a historie of Saxonie into my hand, written by a Saxon, who relateth, that aboue 300. yeeres agoe, at Hamelen lying under the Commaund of Duke Erick, it hapned, that this towne was grevously plagued with Mice: a certaine Iugler knowing what harme these creatures did, proferring his helpe to the Burgesses to driue the mice away, they agreed with him, to giue him a peece of money. Which being done, this Iugler beate a drumme, and all the mice followed him out of the towne, and afterward comming to demaund of the Burgers his promised reward, they would not giue it him. Vpon this, after many threatnings, he departed the towne, and about a yeere after came againe, beating his drumme as before, a great number of the Burgers children followed him, and he led them to a hillok neere the towne, and there with all the children vanished. A girle which was among them, whether stee could follow noe longer, or that stee stood still, comming home tould them what shee had seene, namely, that their neighbours children, and the Iugler, were vanished away upon the hillock. Whereupon every one of them ran to looke for their owne; but all in vaine. When I read it I thought it tobe a fable or some spirit, or straung wonder. But having enquired of others, they all witnessed, and affirmed that it was soe, and tould mee with all, the day, month, and yeere when it hapned, and that it is recorded in the Annuall historie of the Coucill of Hamelen, and that to this day they haue a custome, when they signe, and seale any writings, they set under von unser kinder Außgangh. The streete also through which the children went, is called the Bungloſe straß, accounting it an offence to beate a drum in it. If peradventure ye thinck upon this Storie, relate it in my behalfe, and if you haue any thing, which may recreate mee, it may please you when you haue oportunity to impart it unto mee. Farewell, and loue your Fretagius. From Groeninghen in Halberstadt the 8 of November 1580.

A straunge Storie.

THE DESCRIPTION OF WESTPHALIA.

WE find ſundry opinions about the name of VVeſtphalia, ſome are of the opinion, that VVeſtphalia ſhould be named ſoe, from the Godeſſe Veſta, as if one would ſaye, Veſtalia; becauſe this Godeſſe was in ſpeciall heretofore adored in this Province. But others affirme it ought to be called VVeſtphalia, becauſe it lyeth Weſtward, for, ſay they, thoſe which inhabit Eaſtward, on the other ſide of the VVeſer, were called by the Saxons Eaſt-vales, to wit, Eaſt from the Eaſterne winde, for Valen in the Saxons tongue ſignifyeth, a yong horſe, or a Foale; which the Saxons uſed to giue in their Coullours. But in proceſſe of time, this name of Eaſtvalia was loſt, and was changed into the Common name of Saxonie, but thoſe which dwell Weſtward on this ſide of the VVeſer, are yet called VVeſtphalia. This Countrie boundeth Eaſtward upon the VVeſer, Southward upon the Heſſian Mountaines, Weſtward upon the Rhyne, and Northward upon Frizeland, Gelderland, & Over-Yſſell.

The Limits.

The Aire.

The aire there is ſomewhat ſharpe, raw, and colde; but very healtfull, and the ſoile more fruitfull for Cattaile then for men. There are diverſe ſorts of Fruit-trees, as Apples, Nutts, Acorns, wherewith they fatten their Swyne. About Soeſt and Ham it is reaſonable fruitfull, but neere unto Paderborn, and Lip fruitfulleſt of all. About the Ems in ſome places it lyeth waſt. The Dioceſſe of Munſter hath many goodly encloſſure and paſtures, as alſo that tract, which runneth along the VVeſer. Through all Surland and the Countrie of Bergh, there are many woods. In the Biſhoprick of Collen, & the Countrie of Marck, they haue diverſe mines of Mettaile, and alſo in ſome places Salt-quarries. This Countrie breedeth great ſtore of tame Beaſts, eſpecially an incredible number of Hoggs, neither want they Deere, or game for hunting.

The fertility.

Mettails.

The Gouernment.

Carolus Magnus ſubdued firſt the Inhabitants of VVeſtphalia, and brought them to the knowledge of the Chriſtian faith, and there foundeth, and erected the Biſhoprick of Munſter, Oſſenbrugghe, Paderborn & Minden, but who gouverned VVeſtphalia after the death of Carolus Magnus, and whether it was wholly under the obeyiſſance of the Popes is not knowne. In Eaſt Saxonie it is well knowne, that temporall Lords gouverned them, and firſt ſome Kings deſcended from the Stemme of Carolus Magnus, during which time, the Dukes of Saxonie nevertheleſſe being come of the linie of VVidekind by litle and litle grew greater, and impatronized the ſame, untill the time of Henry the Firſt, King of the Romans, of whome were deſcended the three Othos, and from them the Marqueſſes of Saxonie, borne from Henry Duke of Bavaria, brother unto the firſt Otho. But what temporall Princes ruled then with the Biſhops of Weſtphalia, which was called VVeſt Saxonie, wee read nothing thereof. But in ſucceeding times, Duke Henricus Leo ruled over it, and before him his Grandfather Luderus Duke of Saxonie, who was afterward Emperour: for from that time forward, when Duke Henry by the decree of the Emperour Frederick the firſt, was forced to abandon, and leaue this Countrie, the Arch-Biſhop of Collen, aſſumed unto himſelfe the name of Duke of Weſtphalia, even as the Dukes of Nether Saxonie, deſcended of the Anhaltiſh Stemme, uſed the ſame title. The ſaid Biſhop at this day, poſſeſſeth a good part of this Countrie, namely, Angria, to whome then is Weſtphalia ſubject, and obedient but to him and his gentrie, & are kept as Vaſſals, and Slaves, in regard of their greevous ſervitude.

Ancient people.

In theſe parts in ancient times, there inhabited the Teutoni, Buſacteri, Chamani, Angrivarii, Longobardi, Dulgumnii, Angili, Chauci, and the Cheruſci. Theſe Teutoni ſo called by Mela, or by Ptolomee Teutones, whoſe ancienteſt habitation Ptolomee maketh to be by the Shore of the Baltick ſea, from whence with the Cimbrii, they went into France, and it is thought that they gaue the name unto Teutoburgh, which Tacitus placeth in VVeſtphalia. VVillichius writeth, that the Buſacteri Majores, and Minores of Ptolomee, and the Bructeri of Tacitus, ſhould haue dwelt about Munſter. The Chamani of Tacitus, & Camani, of Ptolomee David Chytreus thinketh they gaue the name unto the towne of Cham, in the Countie of Marck. The Angrivarii had their habitation Eaſtward along the VVeſer, where now Hervorden, the Countie of Lip, Ravenſburgh, Diepholt, and the Dioceſſe of Minden lye.

The Longobardi, Ptolomee placeth upon the Frontiers of this Province, in the utmoſt end whereof was Bardevvyck. Likewiſe it is verely ſuppoſed, that the Towne of Dulmen, in the Biſhoprick of Munſter, tooke the name from Ptolomies Dulgumnii, and from Tacitus his Dulgibinii. Beda, and other Hiſtorians mention, that the Angili, about the yeere of our Lord 444. tranſported themſelues into Britaine, and gaue the name of Anglia, or of England, to that Countrie. The Chauci, dwelt in the Confines of Frizeland, as in Bremen, Oldenburgh, and Embden, from the VVeſer unto the Elue. Tacitus placeth the Cheruſci on their ſide.

Three States in the Weſtphalian Circle.

Iee muſt knowe alſo, that the Weſtphalian, or Netherlandiſh Circle, being in order the ſeventh Circle of the Empire, conſiſteth of three States. Whereof the firſt is the Spiritualitie, the ſecond the Temporall Princes, and the third the Free-townes. Vnto the firſt ſtate belong the Archbiſhops of Vtrecht, of Cameryck, the Biſhops of Paderborn, Luyck, Munſter, Oſſenbrugghe, Ferden, Minden, the Abbots of VVerden, Stablon, S. Cornelius Munſter, Echternach, Corbey, Hervorden, with the Abbeſſe of Eſſen. Of the ſecond State are the Princes, Earles, and Lords following: the Duke of Cleaue, and Earle of Marck, the Duke of Gulick and Bergh, the Marqueſſe of Baden, the Earles of Eaſt-Friezeland, or Embden, the Earles of Sem, of Dillenburgh, Vernenberg, Manderſcheid, VVeyda, Ringleberg, of Meurs, Brunckhorſt, Steinfort, Benthem, Dortmund, Oldenburgh, Ridborg, Hoya, Diepholt, Schaumburg, the Lords of Spiegelberg, and Vaenberg, the Earles of Arenberg, Dierenberg, of Lip, and the Lord of Somerhauſen. In the third State are contayned the Free-townes Collen, Aken, under VVeſel, Duren, Cameryck, Dortmund, Soeſt, Duyſburg, Hervorden, Brakel, VVartburg, Lemgovv, and VVerden. But before wee come to the deſcription of the Townes of Weſtphalia, wee will write ſome thing of the Biſhoprick of Breme, which is alſo contayned in this Map.

The Dioceſſe of Breme. The Biſhoprick of Breme, taketh his name from the Citie of Breme, this Countrie is not alike fruitfull in all parts, becauſe the utmoſt ends of this Dioceſſe of Breme, towards the Banckes of the Elue, and VVeſer, is a very fatt ſoile, and rich in Corne, but the middle tract, lying betweene Stoad and Breme, trough which Merchants travell, is very barren, unmanured, here and there full of Sand, Mooriſh, and Heathie. The Metropolitan of this Biſhoprick is Breme, heretofore called Phabiranum, it is a very fine City lying upon the VVeſer, being in the aliance of the Hans-Townes. It is very rich in regard, as well, for the ſituation thereof, as made ſoe by art, having very faire Streets. It is populous, and aboundeth in Marchandize. There is a faire, and a large Mercate-place, where great Store of Wares are bought everie Weeke. On the one ſide of the Mercate ſtandeth the Cathedrall Church, and on the other ſide it is adorned with the Towne-houſe, having under it a coſtly, and an acceptable foundation, namely, the Townes Cellar. Breme heretofore was but a poore Village, but by the growth of the Chriſtian Religion, it hath encreaſed much, and Chiefly, by the helpe of her Biſhops, from which it was made an Arch-Biſhoprick and made the Mother of all the Northerne Churches.

Stoad. Stoad belongeth alſo to the Biſhoprick of Breme, being ſituated upon the river of Zvvinga, on the South ſide of the Elue. It is accounted to be the ancienteſt towne of all Nether Saxonie. It is at this daye very ſtrong, and of late was for a long time ſtrongly beſieged & wonn by the Earle of Tilly, and brauely defended by the Gouverneur my Lord Morgan. Moreouer, there lye in this Dioceſſe Boxtehude, Ackſtede, Nieuhuys, Bremerfurde, & Stotel. The rivers which water this Countrie are the VVeſer, the Elue, and the Eſta. The Inhabitants of this Biſhoprick are by nature inclyned to the warrs, to trading, handicrafts, and Navigation. Touching the Biſhopricks of Munſter, Paterborn, Oſenbrug, Collen, the Counties of Embden, and Oldenburgh, together with Gulick, Cleue, and Berg, wee will make noe mention here, but they ſhalbe deſcribed in their particular Maps. Next unto Munſter, Soeſt is accounted the richeſt towne of Weſtphalia. It hath ten pariſhes in it, and under the reſort thereof many Villages, and Hamlets. At this day it is under the protection of the Duke of Gulick, Cleue, and Berge. Minden is a very pleaſant, and a ſtrong Towne, receiving much benefit by the Weſer, it is honoured with a Biſhoprick. Arnſperg is the Chiefe towne of the ſame Countie, and lyeth upon the Roer. VVarburg is alſo a fine towne through which the Dimmel runneth. Dortmund lying in the midſt of this Countie, will acknowledge none for their Lord, but the Emperour. Beſides theſe there are Hervorden, VVindebrugg, Redbergh, Coesfelt, Lemgovv, Lingen, Tecklenborgh, Diepholt, Schouvvenbergh, Raveſpurg, Sporenborg, Ravenſperg, Vlothem, Lymberg, and the famous Towne of Lippe, lying upon the Lippe, Meſchede, Brilon, Stadtberg, VVerle, Balue, Attendorn, Olepe, Prolſhaghe, VVinterberg, &c. The Earledome of Benthem, lying upon the Eaſt ſide of Over-Yſſell hath alſo diverſe townes belonging to it, as Benthem, Schuttorp, Nienhuys, Northorn. In Weſtphalia, there are many Meeres, Brookes, ſtanding Pooles, and Rivers. The Chiefeſt Rivers are theſe: the VVeſer, the Ems, Gla, Neth, Haſe, Honte, Sala, Lippe, Stover, Aa, and Vidrus. To the Eems belong the Dever, Depta, Glaa, and Berkel. In this Countrie alſo there are Mountaines, and hills. Neither haue they any want of Woods, whereof the Cheifeſt are the Henſterholt, the Avert, the Holt-marckten, and the Teutoburgervvood.

Soeſt.

In Weſtphalia Carolus Magnus foundeth, and built many faire Churches. In Weſtphalia was borne that Learned men Ioannes Leunclavius, who tranſlated many Greekiſh bookes into Latine. The Inhabitants of Weſtphalia are able men, faire of Complexion, and haue for the moſt part long viſages, ſtrong bodied and couragious, and delight much in Armes. Their Ordinairy dyet is browne Bread and Cheeſe, Beefe, but chiefly Bacon, which they hang up in their Chimnies: eſpecially the Gammons of Weſtphalia, are in great requeſt, for their moſt trading conſiſteth in Stones, Gammons, and Flitelids of Bacon. Of this Country there is an old lame verſe, which is in every travellers mouth & which in effect is this,

Hoſpitium vile,
Courſe bread, ſmall beare, & long miles
Sunt in VVeſtphalia,
Qui non vult credere,
Let him goe thether.

THE DESCRIPTION OF EAST-FRIEZLAND, OR OF THE EARLEDOME OF EMBDEN.

The Bounds.

THE next Countrie, that with the Dullard, and the Eems runneth to the VVeser, and from the Bishoprick of Munster, and the Earledome of Oldenburgh, which boundeth upō it Southward, is called at this daye East-Frizeland, and beareth the title of an Earledome. It containeth then Eleuen severall peoplé: Namely, the Reyders, Anerledingers, Moermers, Lengeners, Eemsers, Broeckmers, Aurickers, Norders, Harlingers, VVangerers, Ostringers, and Rustringers. Reyder-land lyeth betweene the Dullaert, and the Eems, and is a fatt and à fruitfull Soile, having twentie Villages in it with Churches, and as many without Churches, all which saving seuen, or eight lye upon the Eems.

Reyder-land.

Anerledinger-land.

Right ouer against it is Anerledinger-land, which is separed by the river of Lede from Moermer-land. This is a very Mooriſh ground, and not fitt to beare Corne. It hath 17. Villages with Churches under it.

Moermer.

The Moermers dwell on the further side of the river Lede, 8 miles from the Eems Eastward, as farre as Oldenborgh. The river Lede lieth Westward from them, and the Aurickers to the Northward. It taketh the name from the word Moer, for this Land is full of Mooriſh-pooles, and hath very few Sande-hills, which the Inhabitants till with great Labour. Next unto the Moermers are the Lengeners, unto whome one can hardly come, becauſe there are ſo many Moores, & pooles, lying round about them. This Land is narrow, and unfitt for paſture, they haue ten Villages, and but one Church in the midſt of the Land. They are ſauvage and a ruſticall people.

Lengener.

Eems-land.

Eems-land lyeth on the other side of the Moermer-land, which indeed for goodneſſe, and faireneſſe (either in reſpect of the fruitfulneſſe of the Soile, or the number of faire Villages, or the civility and good manners of the Inhabitants) ſurpaſſeth by farre all the other. There are few leſſe then 50 Villages, wherof ſome of them may paſſe for townes, being adorned with Churches, and Gentlemens houſes. It hath many Sea-havens, as the Oldensummer, Embder, Knocker, Greter, and Edels-heymer-haven. This Land taketh the name from the river of Eems, which lyeth to the Southward of it, and is incloſſed with Meeres, and Pooles Northward, and Eastward.

Broeckmer and Auricker-land.

After this followeth the Broeckmer-land, and alſo the Auricker-land, which heretofore belonged to Broeckmer-land. This Land, eſpecially where it butteth upon Eems-land, is reaſonable meete for tillage, and feeding of Cattaile, and therefore hath belonging to it 20 Villages with Churches, beautifully built, which make a faire ſhowe, and ſeemes to bee too good for Peſants. There are ſome alſo without Churches.

Norderland.

Northward lye the North-landers by the Sea ſhore in a fruitfull Soile, good for the feeding of Cattaile, and bearing of Corne. They dwell a great way one from an other in this Land, and haue no more but one towne called Norden, and foure Villages with Churches, through the whole Landt.

Harlingers land.

The Harlingers inhabit Eaſtward reaching ten miles further then Norder-land, they haue 16 Villages with Churches, and two townes. And the neerer the Land lyeth to the Sea ward, the more fruitfull it is, & the further it lyeth to the Landward the leſſe fertill; the Sea upon this Coaſt is raging, and very troubleſome, ſaving upon Funixum, where it is calmer.

Wangerland.

The VVanger-landers poſſeſſe the beſt, and the richeſt fields upon the great and large Gulfe of Iade, which lyeth from the North to the Southward. They haue 16 Parochiall Churches, whereof three of them belong to the Knipherrs, and the others to the Ievers.

Ostringers land.

Next them to the Southward are the Ostringers, which land is nothing ſo good, ſaving that part, which appertayneth to the Gentlemen, which beares the name of the Codens, and is under their ſubiection.

Rustringerland.

The furtheſt people are the Ruſtringers, whoſe land with the Ostringers, reacheth unto the VVeſer, but are ſeparated one from an other by the Iade, the whole Land from the Mouth of the Eems unto the VVeſer is 50 Miles in length, not ſo much in breath.

Embden.

At the entrance into this Land Westward, ye haue the famous City of Embden, which lyeth upon the Eems, the eye of all the Coaſt of Frize-land from Holland unto Denmarke, either in regard of their Riches, or of the Sumptuous buildings, or for the commodious ſite thereof, or for the ſeuerall Marchandize, or for the number and kindneſſe of the people. The faire river of Eems, ſpringeth out of the Biſhoprick of Paterborne, and ſo runneth through the Dioceſſe of Munſter into Eaſt-Frize-land, and then after many windings, & Crooks runneth into the Dullaert, and maketh a very great and a large Gulfe, betweene the Groeningers, and the Embders, which is three miles long, and at laſt with a very wide outlet diſchargeth his waters into the Sea. This City is not very ancient, ſeing ancient hiſtories make no mention thereof. Vdalricus the Lord of it, obtayned firſt the title of an Earle from the Emperour Frederick the third Anno 1465. This citie in regard of the Cōmodious ſituation & the deepneſſe & goodneſſe of the hauen, is very fitt for trading, ſeing that ſhipping with their full lading may come into the towne, & there unlade their goods to their great advantage, without unlading them into leſſer veſſells. It hath bene richer Some yeers ſince, becauſe of the great commerce, which was in it, and in regard of the Netherlanders that fled thether (during the tyrannie of the Duke of Alba) out of Brabant, Holland, Flanders, Zeland and other Neighbouring Countries, which betooke themſelues into Forraine Countries for their refuge: wherefore the Lord did ſo bleſſe that Land and City, & ſo rewarded the goodneſſe, and kindneſſe of this people to ſtraungers, that of a wodden & ſtonie Embden, it became a goulden Embden ſo that there was ſcarce a towne in the Nether-lands, which did exceed them in power, riches, and wealth. For there ye might ſee ariue dayly a great number of ſhips with full ſaile, out of France, England, Sweden, Norway, and from the Neighbouring Nether-lands: they built faire houſes, and made large havens, and channels for ſhipping to lye in: the City was enlarged, and many new ſtreets made in it, that the abundance of people which reſorted thither, might haue roome and pack-houſes. But when as by the beſſing of God the buyſineſſe in the Low-countries began to proſper and to goe wel forward, the Netherlanders returned home againe, into their native Country, whereby trading began to decay, and flouriſheth not ſo much at this day as it did in former times. Vpon the ſide of the Hauen ſtandeth a faire Caſtle well built, and the towne is fortifyed with ſtrong Walls, Turrets, and maoted round about, to defend the Towne, and Haven. Round about the citie there are pleaſant paſture grounds, good for the feeding of Cattaile, ſo that not onely this Land, but alſo the adiacent places are ſufficiently provided with Cattaile. This Citie in the time of our Fore-fathers was the ſtaple of the Engliſh Marchants, for the venting of their Cloaths, which before was at Antwerpe, and afterward romouved to Hamborgh, to Stoad, & other places. There are other townes beſides in this Countie.

Norden. Norden, for the greatneſſe, largneſſe, riches, and faireneſſe, is not much inferiour to Embden, & driues a good trading at Sea, and though it be not encompaſſed with walls; yet is it inhabited by a great number of people. In former times it had foure faire Churches in it, and was for a long time before the Creation of the Earles, gouverned by their owne Burrough-maſters.

Aurick. Aurick lyeth in a fine place, betweene the heath, & woods, and mainteyneth it ſelfe for the moſt part by dealing in Cattaile, and is now the place of the Earles reſidence.

Iever. Iever in Oſtringer-land could ſcarcly mainteyne it ſelf, were it not for their trading in Cattaile.

Ezen. Ezen leyth in Harlinger-land, but is unwalled. All which Townes (except Norden) are not in much eſteeme, where it not for their faire Caſtles. There are alſo fiue Mercate Villages, which are well frequented as VVener, Iemgum, Lera, Olderſum, and Marienhouen. There are alſo many faire Caſtles in it, whereof the cheifeſt are theſe: the Auricker Caſtle, Eſſen, VVitmundt, Iever, and that which is exceeding ſtrong and well ſituated, is the Caſtle of Ort upon the Eems, where the Lede and the Eems run one into an other. Alſo theſe following: Stickhuyſen, Friburgh, Oſtringhen, Berum in Norder-land; Greet in Eemſter-land, and Penſum. Caſtles.

Onelgunne leyth on the other ſide of the Iade. At this day this land is devided into diverſe Iuriſdictions, or Bailywicks ouer which the Earle or other Lords haue their Bailiefs, which are theſe following: The ſecound Bailywick leyth in Reyder-land, and in Eems-land. Northward the Greetiſh Bailywick. The Orther Bailywick containeth a part of Moermer, Vberlodinger, and Lengener-land. The Norder Bailywick leyth in Norder-land, but hath no Caſtle belonging to it. Likewiſe the Verumer lyeth in the ſame land. Brockmer with the adiacēt Villages, belongeth to the Auricker Bailywick. In a part of Oſtringer-land within the Boſome of the Iade, lyeth the Friburger Bailywick, which hath onely foure Villages under it. All theſe with the one and the other, belong unto the Earle of Embden. The others as theſe of Ezens, VVitmundt, Iever, and Onelgunne, whether they were incorporate by the Emperour from the Earledome is not knowe or no, howſoeuer they are ſeparated from the Earledome, & belong unto other Lords. Iuriſdictions and Bailywiks.

Among theſe Bailywicks here and there lie diuerſe Gentlemen Lordſhips and livings. The Cheifeſt are theſe, Olderſum upon the Eems hat ſixe pariſhes: Knipen in Wanger-land with a faire Caſtle, wherein the Baron of Kniphuyſen dwelleth, and hath three pariſhes: Dornum in the furtheſt Noock of Norden-land, neere unto Harlinger-land: Goden in Oſtringer-land, the reſt wee cannot call to minde. There are alſo about ſome 30 Cloiſters in this Land, among which the chiefeſt are, Silo Monnickens, lying in the midſt of Eemſer-land, Alant, Apping, Dijckhuyſen, Blauhuyſen, and Mariental, which they call the old Cloiſter. Alſo the Dominicane Cloiſter at Norden, Thedinghen in Moermer-land, lying upon a Mooriſh place, as alſo that in Auricker-land, betweene the woods. The Cloiſter of Meerhuyſen, and Marien-Camp neere Ezens in Harlinger-land. Finally that of Veldens, not farre from Iever.

The people in this Land doe ſo loue their Lords, that if he carryeth himſelfe in any reaſonable manner towards them, they will preferre his welfare before their owne.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE EARLEDOME OF OLDENBVRGH.

Ancient people.

THe Chauci in ancient times inhabited this Countrie: Plinie maketh mention of them, ſaying, they were devided into two people, and Ptolomie calleth them the Greater, and the Leſſer. The Greater were thoſe which poſſeſſed the Biſhoprick of Breme, lying betweene the rivers of the Elue and the Weſer. The Leſſer Chauci were the Emdeners, and the Oldenburgers, for Ptolomie placeth them betweene the Ems, and the Weſer, His words are theſe: The Leſſer Chauci ſpread themſelues as farre as the Weſer; but the Greater reach to the Elue. Plinie deſcribeth them in this manner: Vvee haue ſeene to the Northvvard the Chauci, named the Greater, and the Leſſer. There the Maine-Sea hath a very large mouth, vvhich tvviſe every day and night, ebbeth and flovveth, covering allv vith vvater, ſo that it is a queſtion vvhether it be ſea or land. Here the poore people dvvell upon ſmall hills, and hillocks, caſt up vvith hands, upon vvhich they built poore cottages, and becauſe the vvhole land is overflovvne, they ſeeme rather like boats, and ſhipvvracks, then houſes: novv vvhen the vvater falleth avvay, then they betake them ſelues to fiſhing. They haue no Cattaile, and therefore no vvhite meats, neither doe they hunt or kill Wilde beaſts, as their neighbours doe, for there they haue neither vvoods, nor buſhes. They make their fiſhers netts & Sailes of flaggs, and reeds, and dry the mudde more vvith the vvinde, then vvith the Sunne, vvherevvith they dreſſe their meate, and vvarme their cold members vvith Earth. They drinke nothing but raine vvater, vvhich they keepe in ſmall pits in their forehouſes.

This was in former times the manners, and living of the ancient Chauci, but how greatly is it altered at this day? Plinie mentioneth neither Corne, nor any fruits, where is there now a more fruit full place? Heretofore this Countrie bore no trees, but now is couvered with all mannerof fruitfull trees. They had neither Cattaile, nor whitemeats, but now it is not onely rich in Cattaile, but milke, and whitemaets is their chiefeſt feeding. And becauſe it is an euen Countrie, it hath very rich paſtures, and is a fatt ſoile, and the paſture grounds ouergrowne with graſſe, ſo that they haue ſuch abundance of Beaſts, that it is almoſt unſpeakable: This is well knowne by their ſweete butter, and their good cheeſe, whereof every yeere, the Inhabitants (to there great gaine) ſell great ſtore of it into other Countries, and Germanie. There are daylie ſeene alſo many huge Oxen feeding in their rich paſture grounds, which with the abundance of graſſe growe ſo fatt, that for the goodneſſe, fatneſſe, and firmeneſſe of their fleſh, they are much deſired by forraine nations. Finally, heretofore they had no game to kill; but now the daylie huntings of the Gentlemen in this Countrie, ſheweth the contrarie, and that this Land is now able to liue of it ſelfe, without the helpe of any other.

The bounds.

Among the Chauci, the Oldenburgers were not the leaſt; for this Earledome boundeth Eaſtward upon the Biſhoprick of Breme, and ſhooteth as farre as the Weſer. On the South ſide lyeth the Biſhoprick of Munſter, on the Weſtpart the Earledome of Embden, and to the Nortward the Marſhes and meeres of Iade, and the outlet of the Weſer into the Sea. This Countrie contayneth theſe Provinces following vid. Stedinghen which lyeth right over againſt Breme, and is ſubject to the Caſtle of Delmenhorſt. Stadtland is divided into fiue, and Butiadiger into ſeven pariſhes, beſides Ievern is a part of Eaſt-Frizeland, and conteyneth 23 pariſhes in it.

In the midſt thereof lyeth the Moerrime. Albertus Crantzius teſtifyeth this to be a very ancient Earledome, among which Earles he reckoneth Eidekind, Duke of Saxonie, v ho liued in the time of Carolus Magnus. Irenicus ſaith, that the Citie of Oldenburgh was built by Carolus Magnus himſelfe, and the Church in it by Adalgargus the Biſhop, who dedicated it to S. Iohn the Baptiſt: but ſurely this writer erreth herein, in ſaying that it lay by the Sea ſide, becauſe this was an other towne, which ſtood in Wagria, and the Land of Holſtein.

Laurentius Michaelis thinketh, that the Ambrones (mentioned by Plutarke) which with the Danes went into Italie, and there were ouerthrowne by Cajus Marius, ſprang out of this Countrie, whoſe name is yet to this day remembred by the Amlanders. He is of the ſame opinion alſo, touching the Alani, a people of Saxonie, of whom he ſpeaketh that they had their habitation by the ſea Alanus in theſe Confines, and on both ſides of the ſame Water until the Caſtle of Oria, which they now call Lengeners, that is, Alani and the Vberlengers, as if one ſhould ſaye, Ultralani.

Other Townes.

There are other ſmaller townes with in this Earledome, as Weſterſted, Nieubourgh, Bockeren, Winelſted, Wardenburgh, Delmenhorſt with the Earledome Onelgunne &c. And on the other ſide of the Weſer Darſdorp. Iever a part of East-Frizeland is alſo deſcribed in the mapp of this Earledome.

The Weſer.

The Weſer watereth this Countrie, and runneth through the Eaſt part of it, and neere Elſflet receiveth into it the ſmall river called the Honta, which ſpringing out of the Biſhoprick of Munſter, running by Wildeſhuſen, and ſo receiueth the Læta into it before it cometh to Oldenburgh, and cloſſe under Oldenburgh the Horne, whoſe ſpringhead beginneth at Manſholt, and there at Oldenburgh parteth the Moerrime, and Stedingerland one from on other. After this ye ſee the Iade, which at the firſt was but a brooke, ſcarcly worthe the naming, and ſprang out of a poole, called the Great-meere, and by the way parting the Fields one from on other, here and there, grew greater by many waters that rann into it, and ſo fell into the Moores, and Meeres. Now through the daylie violence of the Meere, which was toſſed with raging ſtormes, and by the diſcord of the Inhabitants, who regarded not the common Weale, at laſt the Bankes brooke, and drowned all the Lower grounds, firſt in overflowing the one peece, and then the other, which made this great Sea Boſome, when as the violence of the waues, prevailled more than the underſtanding, and power of theſe men. On this ſhoare, ye may ſee ſome Remaynders of the drowned Pariſhes as Ellens, Aine, Oldenbrugghe, Bant, Dangaſt, Iadeler, and Wurdeler.

The Iadeners inhabite on this ſide of the river.

By this river of Iade the Inhabitants were devided, theſe which duell on the further ſide, and beginn by the Brooke of Made, of many pariſhes, which were once rich and lived well, they preſerved but three.

The Iadeners on this ſide of the river, reach Northward with their habitations, where the ſea ſhore, at the outlet of the Weſer crookleth Eaſtward, along which the land ſhooteth out Southward, foure large miles toward the Moerrime. This is devided at this preſent in Stedinger, and Butiadinger land. This is ſome three Germane miles in compaſſe, from the North to the Eaſtward, being a rich countrie with eleuen villages in it. The other keepe the reſt with three villages, and the Caſtle of Onelguna, which was built their by the Oldenburgers in the time of the Saxons warre. Their Neighbours are the Moermen, who dwell from the Weſer upwards to the Honta. Next to the Moermen followe the Stedingers, whoſe principall place is Elſflet, lying not farre from thence, where the Honta falleth into the Weſer. On the otherſide of the Honta ſtandeth Berne, a village well knowne, becauſe it hath a great Church, and a high ſteeple.

Small brooks.

Beſides the Weſer, and the Iade there are other ſmall rivers in this Countrie, namely, the Delme, which runneth by Delmhorſt. The Letæ, or Lede, which falleth into the Honta: neere unto Oldenburgh: The Made, which runneth into the Sea Northward, and ſerveth as a bound to this Earledome. The Ouvva which by the village of Tuſchenaem is ſwallowed up in a Meere.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE BISHOPRICK OF OSNABRVGGHE.

The bounds.

TO the Northwestward of the Dioceſſe of Munſter lyeth the Biſhoprick of Oſnabrugghe, which is alſo counted under Weſtphalia, and butteth upon the Biſhoprick of Minden. That the Bructeri inhabited this Countrie witneſe the termination of the name Oſnabrugghe, as alſo other townes lying round about it. Oſnabrugghe is a fine towne, built by the Earles of Engern, as Hermannus ſheweth. Others, as the Saxoniſh Chronicle, mention that it was firſt founded by Iulius Cæſar. It is reported that it was encompaſſed about with Oxe hydes, and was ſo called from Oxe hydes, as if one ſhould ſay, Oſſenburg, or Oxenbourgh. It is ſituated in a very pleaſant Dale, and the river called the Haſe runneth through it. In the time of Carolus Magnus Widekindus King of the Saxons, dwelt in theſe parts, who being vanquiſhed by the Emperour Charles, he erected here in honour of S. Peter, Criſpinus, and Criſpinianus a Church, with a Greekiſh, and a Latine Schoole, and ordayned Wiſonus Biſhop over it, and endowed this Biſhoprick with rich, and large revenus, which being tranſlated out of Latine into Engliſh is this:

The chiefe towne.

The Empevours Donation.

In the name of the holy, and individuall Trinitie, Charles the Emperour, Enlarger, and Gouvernour of the Romiſh Empire, King of the Francks, and Longobards, and Conquerour of the Saxons: Make knowne to all men, and to euery one of the holy Church, and to all our Loyall Subjects, preſent & to come; that we as an Augmentation of our reward to Wiſonus Arch-Biſhop of Oſnabrugghe, and his Churches, the firſt which wee in all Saxonie haue dedicated to the honour of the holy Apoſtle Peter, the Prince of the Apoſtles, and the holy Martyrs Criſpinus, and Criſpinianus, haue giuen a whole Foreſt or Wood, lying betweene theſe places following, Karnewwinkel, Ruſtenkeym, Angern, Oſnings-nethe, Derſhoſſet, Egeſtervelt, with the unanimous Conſent of the Superiours of the ſaid Land, with all appartenances, and rights ouer Wilde-ſwine, Deere, Foule, and Fiſhe, and the whole chaſe, which is rekoned within the uſuall compaſſe of the aforeſaid Foreſt, in the ſame manner, and forme as wee haue giuen our wood at Akon, and the wood of Oſning for a perpetuall uſe of pietie: in ſuch ſort, that in caſe any man ſhould preſume, to hunt in this our wood, altered by our proſcript, without the leaue of the aforeſaid Biſhop, let him knowe, that he is liable both to Divine, and imperiall puniſhment, and ſhal be bound to pay ſixtie Sous of our weight for the Tranſgreſſing of our Proſcript.

Ban.

Beſides this, wee graunt alſo unto the ſaid Biſhop, and his Succeſſours, a perpetuall licence, permiſſion, freedome, and diſcharge from all Royall taxations: and if it hapned that there ſhould fall out any Contract of marriage, betweene the children of the Romaine Emperour, and the Grecion king: Then the ſaid Eccleſiaſticall Biſhop being furniſhed with neceſſarie expences by the ſaid Emperour, and King, ſhall take upon him the paines and honour of the Ambaſſagie. And therefore we ordayne, that all waies in the ſaid place there be kept Grecian, and Latine Schooles, with affiance there will never be found any unſkillfull Clerici in both theſe languages. Giuen in our Court at Akon.

The leſſer townes.

Here are alſo other ſmall townes, namely. Furſtenaw, Uorde, Witlage, Melle, Iburgh, and Hundeborgh upon the Dommer Lake. The river

Rivers. river Haſe runneth trough the midſt of this Biſhoprick, and through the towne of Oſnabrugghe, and hath his ſpringhead Southward, not farre from the village of Brinck. The pleaſant Hills, and Dales with the large Paſtures, and Heaths, make this Countrie very delightfull, eſpeciall for hawking, neere unto the ſaid Dummer-lake. Heere are likewiſe ſtanding Meeres, and Pooles. On the Weſt-part of this Biſhoprick lyeth the Countrie of Teklenburgh and Linghen, and on the South ſide, the Earledome of Ravenſbergh.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE BISHOPRICK OF MVNSTER.

WESTPHALIA is a very large Countrie, fitter to feede all manner of Cattaile, then men; for it is full of thick woods, filthie Moores, and unhabitable places, as were in Old Germanie heretofore. It is devided into diverſe Earledomes, and Biſhopricks. The Biſhopricks are theſe, Munſter, Paderborn, Minden, Oſnabrugh, & Verden. Munſter lyeth to the Eaſtward of the Dioceſſe of Oſenbrugh, Northward the Earledome of Steinfort & Benthem, on the Weſt ſide of it Cleue-land, Zutphen, & Tvvent, and Southward the Earledome of Marck. The rivers which water this Biſhoprick are the Lip, & the Ems. Carolus Magnus Emperour of the Romans, & Conquerour of the Saxons, ordayned in Nether Saxonie, which now is called Weſtphalia, the Biſhoprick of Minningerode, or as ſome ſay Mirtningerade: afterward he altered the name thereof, and called this Biſhoprick Munſter, after the name of the Cloiſter, or Minſter, which he had built there. This Monaſterie, or Minſter the Biſhop Hermannus built there to the honour of S. Marie, unto which there was ſuch a reſort, and did ſo encreaſe in riches, that it obſcured the ancient name of the Biſhoprick. The Citie is ſituated in a valley, or plaine. It hath in it five great Colledges, and a famous Schoole. Since the furie of the Anabaptiſts, who raiſed a great ſedition there in the time of the Biſhop Francis Earle of VValdeck Anno 1533. it is much ſtrengthened. The firſt Ring-leader of theſe ſtirrs, was one Bernard Rottoman, who without the Towne, began to preach in S. Maurices Church, againſt the Romiſh Religion, where by he gott ſuch a great concurſe of people, that afterward he was called into the Towne. For the Common people, thirſting after Noveltie, did earneſtly deſire it, and were not onely content with his private inſtructions, but would haue the Magiſtrates to graunt him a Church. In the maine time comes into Munſter, Iohn a Taylour of Leyden a light-headed, a bold and a ſtout fellow, who had bin nuzled & brought up in his Countrie in the Anabaptiſts religion, begann firſt to take upon him the function of a preacher, and to maintaine it ſtoutly. After this there came in alſo one Herman Stapreda, who having beene Confrater and brother Teacher with the aforeſaid Rottoman, begann to diſſent from him, and to maintaine the doctrine of the Baptizing of joung Children. So that he by day and in publick, and Iohn of Leyden by night and in private did ſo trouble the minds of the ſimple people, that each of them had his faction. Whereupon the Magiſtrates ſeing this ſtorme of diſſention coming over their heads for the preventing of all miſchiefes, commaunded the Authours to depart the Towne. But they went out at the one Gate, and came inagaine at the other, affirming bouldly, that they were commaunded by God to maintaine and ſtand for the truth. This plot failing, the Magiſtrats found out another, which was this: They called to the Towne-houſe the Euangelicall Miniſters, and the Teachers of Anabaptiſme together, beleeving confidently that the Euangelicall preachers, if they entred into diſpute with them, they would be too hard for them, becauſe they had oftentimes convinced the Papiſts. But when they came together, Rottoman forſooke his people, and joyned himſelue with the Anabaptiſts, curſing the Baptiſme of yong children, although his fellow-Teacher Buſchius oppoſed himſelf againſt him and contradicted him greatly. Theſe things falling contrarie to the expectation of the Magiſtrates, they aſſembled themſelues againe, and forbad the Anabaptiſts the towne, which being done, they provided them a Convoy and victualls to rid the Biſhoprick of them. But they hid & concealed themſelues by thoſe of their Factions, and Confederacie; ſaying that they had rather pleaſe God, then man. So that the number of the Anabaptiſts, who did nothing but raile upon the Magiſtrates of the Towne, without entring into any diſpute about the truth, did greatly encreaſe. The Magiſtrates fearing a greater miſchiefe, commaunded, that all the Churches ſhould be ſhutt; ſaving one, which was needfull; becauſe the faction of the Anabaptiſts were farre ſtronger then the others: ſo that if there hapned any uprore, they night eaſely expulſe the others. And withall beſought the Land-Graue of Heſſen, that he would be pleaſed to ſend them ſome Learned men to helpe to compoſe this difference. Whereupon Theodorus Fabritius and Ioannes Melſingerus were ſent thither, but the one preſently, whether he imagined that the buyſineſſe was gone too farre, or that he durſt not truſt himſelfe, he returned home, and the other ſtayed there ſo long, till they droue him out of the towne. During theſe troubles The Anabaptiſts ſent out one, who as being moued thereunto by God, ran into the villages and wayes, crying out: Repent ye, and ſuffer your ſelues to be re-baptized, othervviſe the vvrath of God vvill fall upon ye, and viſite you. Whereupon many, either fearing the wrath of God, or the loſſe of their goods in ſo turbulent a ſtate, were obedient to him. Finally about the laſt of December the Anabaptiſts, being aſſembled together from all parts, tooke in the Towne-houſe, and the Mercate place, and fetcht the ordinance out of the Magazine, and planted them in the convenienteſt places, crying out with a loud voice, that if they would not ſuffer them ſelues to be rebaptized they would murther them. The other ſide ſeing this, rann to the ſtrongeſt and ſafeſt place of the towne, and from thence fought with the Anabaptiſts, which had taken in the Mercate-place, but this tumult being appeated, it was reſolved, that either partie ſhould haue free exerciſe of their religion. But the Anabaptiſts ſeeking to make all ſure, to ſettle their eſtate, and to gett the upperhand, gaue to underſtand by Rottoman, and Bernard Knipperdoling, to all thoſe which were affected to their religion, and ſent letters to the Anabaptiſts which dwelt in the next Townes, and villages; that they ſhould repaire with all ſpeed to Munſter, forſaking all that they had, and ſo this towne was peſtred with ſtraungers and Anabaptiſts. Which ſome of the beſt ſort perceiving, they left the Towne, to eſcape the preſent troubles. All this hapned in the yeere 1534.

The Anabaptiſts ſeing that their adverſe partie was weakned, and could not prevaile againſt them, they chooſe Magiſtrates among themſelues, whereof Cnipperdolling was one, and burnt S. Maurices Church, pillaged and plundred the Citie, and tooke from their adverſe partie all that they had, and droue them out of the Towne. After this the Biſhop beſieged the Towne, and many of them that would haue fled away he put to the ſword. What hapned during this ſiege by theſe frantick & madd Anabaptiſts, it would be too teadious & needleſſe to relate, ſeing the ſtorie thereof is ſufficiently knowne to all men. Among the reſt nothing was more impious, then that theſe factious and wicked men, durſt giue themſelues out for Gods. But their courage was ſoone coold, for when the greateſt crew of them upon a time ſallyed out, and with great furie fell upon their Beſiegers, they had ſuch a welcome from their Ennemie, and their ordinance, that the greateſt number of them were ſlaine and 500 of them, which were taken priſoners, put to death. In that time Iohn Knipperdolling tooke upon the name of a King, and as much as poſſible was, would be honoured ſoe, and made his wife (for he had many other weemen) being a chiefe mans daughter of the towne, to be called Queene, and would haue made her putt one apparell beſeeming ſuch a perſonage: but ſhee reproving his folly, he putt her to death with his owne hand, by cutting of her head. Finally upon the 27. of Iune Anno 1535. about eleuen of the clock in the night, the Biſhops ſouldiers, thoſe which the Biſhop of Collen, the Duke of Cleues, and the Landgraue of Heſſen had ſent to aſſiſt him, by the helpe of a Runaway, drew neere the Towne, gott over the Moate, and clyming over the Walls, opened the port, and let in their fellowe ſouldiers. Their Counterfeyt King, and his Complices were carryed priſoners to be ſhowne to the neighbouring Princes, and afterward in the yeere 1536. were nipt in peeces with hot burning tonges, & ſo putt to death. This was the event of the troubles, & ſedition of Munſter.

In the yeere 1612. on the eleuenth of Aprill was inſtalled here with great ioye, and the uſuall ceremonies Ferdinandus Duke of Bavaria, Arch-Biſhop, and Prince-Electour of Collen, Biſhop of Luyck, Coadjutour of Paderborne, and Adminiſtratour of Hildeſheym.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE BISHOPRICK OF PADERBORN.

AFter that Carolus Magnus; had conquered and Subdued Weſtphalia, he erected there foure Biſhopricks, to wit, Munſter, Oſenburgh, Minden and Paderborne. There inhabited here in former times, the Buſactores, Chennæ, and Angrivarij, as Bilibaldus Pirckheimerus, Counſellour unto the Emperour Charles the fifth, mentioneth. His wordes are theſe: betweene the Leſſer Chauci, and the Suevi dwelt the Buſactores Majores, and among them the Chennæ, and beyond them the Angrivarij, whoſe reliques are yet to be ſeene: for the Biſhop of Collen entitleth himſelf Duke of Angrivaria or Weſtphalia. In theſe dayes the Eaſt, and Weſtphalians inhabit there. as alſo thoſe of Munſter, the Biſhopricks of Paderborne, and Breme. He ſaith moreover that the townes of Buſactores are Munſter, Paderborne, Oſenbrug, and Brunſvvyck.

Ancient People.

The Bounds. This Countrie boundeth Eaſtward upon the Dukedome of Brunſvvyck and upon the Confines of Haſſia, Southward upon the Earledome of Waldeck, Weſtward upon te Dukedome of Weſtphalia & the land of Reckenbergh, and Northward upon the Earledome of Lip.

The name whence. Paderborne taketh the name from the famous Weſtphalian fountaines or ſprings, which in great abundance ſpring out of the ground, neere unto the Cathedrall Church, and riſing up with a ruſtling noiſe, make divers Ilands. It was firſt founded by Carolus Magnus, who after he had ſubdued Widekind, for the enlarging of the Chriſtian religion, built this Church, and gaue it the armes of a red croſſe, and for the benefice thereof the Iuriſdiction of Dringhenbergh Anno 780. when as Burckardus the Biſhop of Wirtzburgh, left that Iuriſdiction which he had held 15. yeeres, untill te time of Hatumarus the firſt Prelate, in the yeere 1527. The Canons of Paderborne were acuſtomed in Lent to make a feaſt & dancing with the Burgers Wiues & Daughters, capring after a lacivious manner: the Bachelours of the towne rebuking, & flouting them for it, the ſaid Canons went into the Church, and there uſed more lacivious and wanton dauncings then they had done before, and tore the prieſts bookes. Which exceſſe the Biſhope ſeeking to roote out, layd a fine of 2000. Crownes upon the Towne, and made them pay it, and tooke ſome of their priviledges from them, forcing the Burgers to promiſſe him, that they ſhould never ſuffer the Lutheran Religion among them; but when Erick their Biſhop was dead, they brought in the Lutheran Religion, and preached it in two Churches, and called for their Miniſters Iacobus Muſingus and Chriſtophorus Domus. Whereupon theſe Canons thought it was greatly to their hindrance, that this euell might creepe no further, judged that they ought to haue a powerfull Biſhop, and to that end, they chooſe Hermannus Arch-Biſhop of Collen upon this Condition that he ſhould extirpate, and roote out the Lutheran Religion, which begann to gett the upperhand in the Towne. He then accompained with a thouſand Horſemen, with George Duke of Brunſvvyck, Adolph of Schauburgh, Symon of the Lip, Otho of Ritberghen and diverſe other Earles and Lords, came riding upon S. Dennis day into Paderborne, and after that he had taken the Oathe of Allegance from the Burgers, he apprehended three of the newe Preachers, and ſent them with a Convoy to Anſbergh, but the waggin-man going out of the waye by reaſon of the rayne, which fell, they came to a village, under the juriſdiction of the towne of Suſatum, where being knowne by ſome of the Burgers of that towne, they eſcaped, and gott into the towne of Suſatum, and ſo were deliuered from that preſent miſhap. Moreouer, there were 16 Burgers condemned to death, by this new Biſhop, and being brought into the mercate place to be executed: The Hangmans hart miſgiving him, by reaſon of the innocencie of theſe Delinquents, to read their ſentence (as the manner is there, the Hangman muſt doe it) gaue the ſword of Iuſtice againe into the Magiſtrates hands. In the interim, the Women and Maides came with a pitifull cry, wringing their hands and falling downe upon their knees before the Biſhop, who lay looking out at the windowe of the Towne houſe with his traine, to entreate and craue pardon of him for the condemned perſons. Whereupon inſtantly the Magiſtrates alſo made interceſſion for them. At laſt the Biſhop being moved with Compaſſion, commaunded that they ſhould be carryed againe to priſon, afterward gaue them their liues and layd a fine of money upon them, and confined them to keepe their houſes a whole yeere. Withall commaunding ſeverely, that the popiſh Religion ſhould be ſett up againe in all Churches, and none other to be ſuffred or permitted.

This Countrie is not very great, but is exceeding fruitfull in all manner of Graine, Sheepe, and other Cattell, well knowne to the French and Brabantiſh Merchants, and the bordering people which yeerely come thether, to buy ſuch commodities. Beſides theſe, they haue great ſtore of Swyne, and other wilde and tame Beaſts. There are in this land aboue 300 fountaines and ſprings, whereof all of them (ſaving ſome fewe, which are brackiſh, and medicinall, lying neere unto Driburgh and Brakel) whoſe waters are ſweete and pleaſant, and the brookes full of fiſhe. There are in this Countrie (which is marvaillous) divers ſprings, which flowe, and ebbe as the Sea doth, as the ſpring at Bulderborne, lying not farre from the village of Alden Bekem. There are alſo diverſe rivers, as that neere Lechtenovv, which the ground ſwallowing up, after it hath run ſome miles under the Earth, as ſome beleeue, ſpringeth up againe neere Paderborne and other places. There are alſo in many places, Iron, and Lead mines, Stone and Salt quarries, yea and of late they haue found ſome Marble and gould Oare.

Fountaines & Springs.

The deviſion of the Country.

This Countrie is parted in the midſt by a ridge of hills, from the towne of Bergh, to the Hamlet of Horne, & is devided into two parts, the Ciſmountain, and Transmountain. The Ciſmountain, or the land lying on this ſide the Mountaines, is plaine, and very fruitfull, ſaving neere Delburgh where it is barren and heathie. The Transmountain, or that part beyond the Mountaines, is hillie, but nevertheleſſe fruitfull and full of good paſtures. This Ciſmountain is watered with the Eems, the Padus, and the Alme. The Eems ſpringeth here out of a lowe valley, and runneth ſlowely, by reaſon of the abundance of Sand, and running through all Munſter land, falleth by Emden in Eaſtfrizeland into the Meere called the Dullard, and ſo forward by the ſaid Citie with a large mouth diſchargeth himſelfe into the Sea. The Padus and Alme fall into the Lip, which riſeth with a great ſpringhead neere the Towne of Lipſpring, and runneth to Nienhuyſen, and fleeteth through the Biſhoprick of Munſter, and ſo falleth at laſt by Weſell into the Rhyne. The Transmountain are the Emmer, the Neete, and the Dymmel, which runne into the Weſer. The Cheife towne of this Country is Paderborne, having a fruitfull and a pleaſant Countrie round about it, good Beere, and and a Vniverſity in it. This Biſhoprick hath beſides this 20. Townes belonging to it, whereof the cheifeſt lye along the hills, as Salt-kotten, where there are excellent Salt-pits. Lipſprinck, where the river of Lip hath his head. Buren famous for the ancient people, which dwelt there. The Transmountain are Warburg, which heretofore was a Dukedome, alſo Borrentryck, Peckelſheym, Borcholt, Beveringhe, Barkel, and Steinheim, which are very fruitfull places. The furtheſt place is Ludg, which lieth in a fine valley by the ſide of the Emmer, betweene the Paſtures and the Meddovves, where they pluck Browmekappers good for diverſe diſeaſes. Sualenborgh, and Oldenburgh where heretofore particular Earledomes, but now upon certaine conditions, belong unto the Biſhop of Paderborne, and the Earle of Lippe. The neighbours unto Paderborne, are the Duke of Brunſvvyck, Heſſen, Waldeck, Weſtphalia, the Earle of Lippe, Rietperg, Ravenſbergh, and Pyrmont. Some are of the opinion, that in this Countrie the Romane Legions, conducted by Quintilius Varo, was defeated by Arminius, Generall of the Saxons and the Myſians Army.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOMES OF GVLICK, CLEVE, and BERGHE, Together with the EARLEDOMES OF MARCK, and RAVENSPERGH.

The Dutchie of Gulick.

THE Dukedome of Gulick poſſeſſeth at this day, the Countrie of the ancient Menapii, Bructeri, and Eburones, lying betweene the Rhyne and the Maze. The chiefe towne of this Dutchie is Gulick, which hath a very ſtronge Caſtle in it. In the time of the Netherlandiſh Truce, Prince Maurice, of famous memorie, with the aſſiſtance of other Princes, tooke it in, in the right of the Marqueſſe of Brandenburgh, and the Duke of Nieuburgh. But after it was held ſome yeeres; Count Henry of the Bergh, blockt it up, and tooke it in againe, in the name of her Altezze, the Arch-Ducheſſe of Brabant.

Akon. In Gulick-land, lyeth the City of Akon, which is famous, and well knowne, in regard of the warme, healthfull, and naturall Springs and Bathes, which are about it, as alſo by reaſon of the Coronations of Emperours, who were crowned there, under an yron Crowne, which had wont to hange up in the principall Church, and for the Sepulchre, and Court of Carolus Magnus, which was held there.

Duren. Within this Dukedome there lyeth an other Towne called Duren, which was beſieged for a long time by Charles the fifth, and ſome other ſmall townes, as Munſtereiffel, which is ſeated very pleaſantly, upon the foote of a hill, in a valley not farre from the river of Erpe: Alſo Euſkirchem, Berchem, Caſter, Grevenbroeck, Schladback, Dalem and VVaſſenbergh.

Caſtles. There are alſo many Caſtles and Lordſhips, as the Caſtles of Palant, Merode, Reſchenbergh, Neſſelrode & VVachtendonck, which ſome times, hath bene in the hands of the States of the Vnited Provinces, and other times taken in by the Arch-Duke of Brabant, but now is ſlighted.

Rivers. There are diverſe rivers which water this Countrie, as the Roer, which runneth by the Towne of the Vbyts Roeroort, taken in of late by the States of the Vnited Provinces, which falleth into the Rhyne, where the waters are of two different Coulours, as is plainely ſeene: for the Rhyne is greene, and the Roer white. The Roer runneth with a very crooked, and a ſwift Courſe, having many windings, and turnings, & in ſome fields & meddowes waſhing them away, & in others places making land, and covering the ground, which he overfloweth with pibles, and ſtones. Beſides this River, there are alſo the Lippe, which falleth into the Rhyne by VVeſell, the Neers, Anger, Duſel, Erffat, and the Vorne.

The Dukedome of Cleue.

Cleue is ſituated on bothſids of the Rhyne; and taketh the name from the Chiefe Towne of Cleue. Eaſtward, it boundeth upon the Dutchie of Bergh, the Earledome of Marck and VVeſtphalia. Northward, upon the Earledome of Zutphen and Overyſell. VVeſtward, upon Gelderland, and Luyck-land. And Southward, upon the Arch-Biſhoprick of Collen. It is reported that one Ælius Gracilis, being very rich, and mightie, had given him by Pipine & Charles Martell in the Belgick France, that part of Batavia, which in thoſe times was called the Earledome of Teiſterbandia, which afterward was named Cleue, and was the ancient inhabitation of the Menapians. After him ſucceeded theſe: Theodoricus, Reinaldus, Iohannes, Robertus, Balduinus, and others unto Ioannes, who was the ſeven and twintith after Ælius, and then that iſſue failed. But in the Councill of Conſtance the Emperour Sigiſmundus, and the States of this Province, gaue the right of it unto Adolphus, and elected him Duke of Cleueland. And whether we reckon this Countrie under the Netherlands, or under France, ſure it is, that the greateſt part of it, lyeth in Germanie, on the otherſide of the Rhyne. Vpon the Frountiers of France lay Burich and Santen, which in former times were famous townes, and out of the ruines whereof, they digg the Gravell, or Sand-ſtone, likewiſe Cleue, Calcar, Griet, and Griethuyſen. Vpon the Confines of Germany, on the other ſide of the Rhyne, lye VVeſel, Duiſ-burgh, Rees, and Emrick. Aboue Calcar in that place, which is now called Auſt den Baern, ſome beleeve that Cæſar Germanicus, layd their a bridge over the Rhyne, when he paſſed over his legions unto the Marſos, which are now called Tvventers, and where ſtandeth yet the Towne of Otmars.

Weſell. Seing that VVeſel is the greateſt, and the ſtrongeſt Towne that lyeth in theſe parts, wee haue thought good to entreate of it more at large. VVeſel is ſituated upon the Rhyne, and neere unto the river of Lippe, ſtanding very commodious for marchandize, and traffick, & is a rich and populous towne. Eberhardus the ninth Earle of Cleue, and Teiſterbandia (for Teiſterbandia was called heretofore the vvhole Countrie, lying betvveene the Maze, the VVael, and the Rhyne, having large Domaines in it) vvas very liberall, and bountifull unto Eccleſiaſticall perſons, and endovved them vvith great livings. Rudolphus of Habſpurgh gaue VVeſel, and Rhynbergh unto Theodoricus the eight. Theodoricus the Ninth marryed the Daughter of the Emperour Albertus of Auſtria, ruled over VVeſel, and founded there the Convent of the Preaching-Moncks. Adolphus the Firſt Duke of Cleue, built the Tovvne houſe of VVeſel. There haue bene borne in this City, many Learned men, among the reſt, that excellent man Arnoldus of VVeſell, vvho vvrote an expoſition upon the ten Commandements, vvhich vvas publiſhed at Collen, Anno 1542. This Citie in the beginning of the Lovv-Countrie troubles, vvas a refuge, and Harbour for the fugitiue Hollanders, Zeelanders, Brabanters, Flemmings, & thoſe of Artois, as alſo for diverſe Engliſh, by vvhoſe induſtrie, and diligence, it vvas much enriched, and grevv mighty. But becauſe the Spaignard ſavv that there vvas no place left him to fall into the Velovv and Betovv, and ſo to gett into the Vnited Provinces, but through Cleue-land and Gelderland, it hath endured many a ſhroad brunt, and hath bene taken in divers times by thoſe vvich vvere maſters of the field, to paſſe their Armies through it. Francis de Mendoza Admirall of Arragon, Generall of the Spaniſh Armie, Anno 1598. extorted from the Magiſtrates of VVeſel, a great Summe of Money, and the yeere followving, vvould haue forced them to haue altered their Religion, and to haue tolerated the Papiſh religion in all their Churches. After the death of the Duke of Cleue, the Marqueſſe Ambroſe Spinola, came vvith his army before it, and forced the Magiſtrates to yeeld it up; (but Prince Maurice of famous memorie, to ſtop his progreſſe, tooke in Emrick, and Rees) and ſo continued under the Spaniſh yoake, being a fitt place for their garniſon, and to fetch in Contribution out of Gelderland, Overyſſel, and Vtrecht, untill the yeere 1629. in Auguſt, vvhen as Henry Fredrick Prince of Orange, beſieged and tooke in the ſtrong tovvne of the Boſche, vvhile Count Henry of the Bergh, being in the Velovve vvith the Spaniſh Armie, and ſome of the Emperours troupes, it vvas ſurprized and taken in againe under the Conduct of Otho Lord of Gent, novv Gouverneur of it. Through vvhich braue victorie, and unexpected bleſſing the Spaignards and the Imperialiſts, after they had taken in Amersford, vvere conſtrained to leaue it in a confuſion and to quit their forts, and gett them packing out of the Velovv, before the Citie of the Boſche vvas yeelded up unto the Prince of Orange.

Cleue. The Tovvne of Cleue, the Caſtle vvhereof novve lyes ruinated, vvas very large and famous in former times, as is plainely ſeene by the many heapes of ſtone, vvhich lye there, and the Compaſſe of the vvalls. It hath the name of Cleue, from the Clifts, Calcar. and Hills among vvhich it is ſituated. Calcar lyeth betvveene the Rhyne, and the Maze, and vvas firſt Griet. built by the Earles of Cleue. Griet ſtandeth on the left ſide of the Rhyne. And Griet-huys, lyeth in the beginning of the Betovv, neere unto the ancient Caſtle Burich. of Labec. Burich lyeth on the other ſide of the Rhyne & VVeſell, and is very vvell fortifyed by our men. It is Emrick. thought the Citie of Emrick, is the ſame vvhich Tacitus calleth Aſciburgium. Thoſe vvhich vvill diligently, reade the hiſtories of the Ancients, and compare the ſituations of ancient places, vvith theſe of our dayes, ſhall finde, that Aſciburgium, vvhich the Ancients dreamed to haue bene built by Vlyſſes, as Tacitus mentioneth in his booke of the manners of the Germans, is Akon, vvich lyeth upon the French ſide, betvveene Nuys, and Vetera.

The Dutchie of Bergen. The Dukedome of Bergh, having taken the name from the towne of Bergh, beginneth from under VVeſell, and ſo runneth upward along the Rhyne with a large extention. It was at the firſt but an Earledome, whereof Adolphus was the firſt Earle, from whome theſe Earles were deſcended, to wit, Engelbertus, Adolphus, Engelbrechtus, and Adolpus, he dying without iſſue, this Earledome fell unto his ſiſters Sonne, namely to Gerard Earle of Gulick. After him ſucceeded his Sonne, VVilhelmus, next him Gerardus, then VVilhelmus, and after him his Sonne VVilhelmus, who was the firſt Duke of Gulick, Bergen and Gelders. Next him ſucceeded in the Gouvernment of theſe three Dukedomes, his brother Regnold, who dyed in the yeere 1423. and from that time forward, the Dukedomes of Bergen and Gulick, were annexed together. Vnder the protection of Bergen lyeth a ſmall imperiall Towne, where there is a Nunns-Cloiſter Eſſen. of 52. Gentle women, under the Commaund, and diſcipline of an Abbeſſe, and alſo 20. Canons under the authoritie of the Deane. Vnto this Abbey there belong ſome Villages lying about it. There is a very faire Church in it, and the Gunmakers haue there great trading in Peeces, Guns and Piſtolls. Not farre from thence lyeth Duſſeldorp, ſo called from the river Duſſeldorpe Duſſel. This is the Dukes Court, it lyeth upon the Rhyne, where the Duke hath a very faire houſe, being the chiefe towne of the whole Dutchie. Syburgh Syburgh. is a ſtrong towne, and the key of the Land. Beſides there are theſe townes: Ratingen, Gerriſheym, Ernervelt, Benſburgh, Raetvorvvald, Hombergh, Steinbach, Blankenborgh, & Molheym, on the Rhyne, which was made a towne by the Dukes of Brandenburgh, and Nieuburgh, and they begann to fortify it with walls, but being an eyeſore to thoſe of Collen, both the houſes and walls, were demoliſhed, and ſlighted by them. The Iuriſdictions of theſe Dukedomes are 20. in Number, to wit that of Blanckenborgh, Leuvvenborgh, Huyckes-vvaghen, Bornfelt, Salingen, Landtſbergh, Duſſeldorpe, Steinbach, Byenbach, Meyſenloo, Medman, VVindeck, Syborgh, Nuvvenborgh, Portz, Luls-ſtorf, Monheim, Angermondt, Erververlt, and Borck. This is a montainous Countrie, and hath many VVoods in it. The Chiefeſt rivers next unto the Rhyne, are the Sieg, Bruyl, Aker, VVopper, and the The rivers. Duſſel, &c.

The Earledome of Ravenſpergh, taketh the name from the Caſtle of Ravenſpergh, and boundeth upon Ravenſ- the Biſhopricks of Munſter, Paderborn, and Minden. bergh.

Marck is alſo an Earledome, lying VVeſtward Marck. along the Lippe, in which there are diverſe fine townes, as Ham, Vnna, Menden, VVerne, Caemen, and others, this Countrie is fruitfull, having in it many hie-hills, and thick woods, it is under the ſubjection of the Dukes of Gulick & Cleue.

How this Dukedome of Cleue, was given firſt by the Emperour Charles the Fourth, unto Adolf of March, Arch-Biſhop of Collen, wee haue made mention thereof heretofore.

This Map contayneth alſo the Earledome of Meurs, and Alpen, at this preſent belonging to the Illuſtrious Henry Fredrick Prince of Orange. This Earledome of Meurs Eaſtward and Northward boundeth upon Cleue-land. Southward upon the Dioceſſe of Collen. And VVeſtward upon Gelderland. The land thereof is good and fruitfull, as alſo the paſtures. The Towne is well fortifyed, with a very ſtronge Caſtle in it.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ARCH-BISHOPRICK OF COLEGNE.

THE Vbians, which dwelt in the time of Iulius Cæsar over the Rhyne, by the side of a swift running river in Germanie, in those times possessed a great and flourishing Citie, against whom the Suevians or Suabens oftentimes made warre. And though they could not keepe and driue them from their borders; yet nevertheleſse they made them become tributaire: but being sore against their Wills, they sent Legates unto Cæsar, and made a confederacie with him, and putting Hostages into his power, obtayned ayde from him against their Ennemies, and so chased them away. Afterward, they were assaulted againe by the Suevians: Wherefore the Sonne in lawe of the Emperour Augustus, affecting the Vbians, as Strabo witnesseth, that they might liue at more quietnesse, transported them from thence, and brought them to a place, where Vpen, or Vben now standeth. There Agrippina the daughter of Germanicus, Neece unto Agrippa the wife of Claudius, because shee was borne there, brought her Colonie thither, in the time of Tiberius, the Emperour. Whereof Tacitus writeth thus: Agrippina, to the end shee might also shevve her povver, to the neighbouring nations, commaunded, that they should bring unto the Vbians (vvhere shee vvas borne) the old Souldiers, and plant there a Colonie, vvhich should be called after her ovvne name, seing that her grand father Agrippa, had made an alliance vvith those people, vvhich had passed the Rhyne. Hence it came to passe, that the Vbians, being asshamed to be called High-Dutches, would no longer be named Vbians, but Agrippinenses. Tacitus in an other place writeth this. Albeit, the Vbians, are called a Colonie of the Romans, yet had they rather be named after Agrippa, then after their owne name, whereof they are asshamed. In former times they passed over the Rhyne, that they might the beter resist & withstand the power of their Ennemies, to doe them no harme. Hence then came the name of Colonia Agrippina, Colonia Agrippina Vbiorum, and Colonia, that is Colegne. This Citie being built in these prosperous times, was so enlarged, & encreased, that Zosimus calleth it the greatest, and Marcellinus the strongest, and most famous Citie of Germanie. It is certaine, that this is the Metropolis of the said Empire in the seate, and residencie of the Duke of Colegne, so that Vitellius, as Suetonius reporteth, saith it was the poynard, wherewith Otho the Emperour stabbed himselfe, being sent to no other place but this. Here also Traianus gott the Armes, and Liveries of the Empire, which were sent unto him from Nerva. This Citie by reason of her encreasing, riches, and revolt from the Over-Rhynish nations, was so hated, that they in the times of Civili Tenčteri were required, to demolish, and cast downe their walls, which they termed the Bulvvarks of their slaverie, and to putt to death all the Romans; which were within their Confines, and to restore againe all the goods of those, whom they had murthered. But this Colonie of the Romans by their dexterity, and foresight avoyded and shunned this Gust, and tempest: till that in the yeere 462. their might being diminished, and weakned, the French by force tooke in this Citie, under the Conduct of their Generall Childerick, to whom it was in subjection, till the time of Otho the first. For he recouvring it, by his power from the French, brought it againe under the Romane Empire, and in the yeere 949. restored them to their ancient libertie. This Citie heretofore was built foures-quare, as is yet to be seene, by the ruines of the ancient walls. Anno 1180. it was much enlarged by her Prelate Philippus, and brougt into a round figure, so that there was made many Orchards, in which there were built very fine Cloisters, and other Structures, and all of them brought within the circuit of the walls. At this daye it is encompassed with a wall having 38. turrets upon it, and double moated, having trees planted round about the wall within and without, under which there is a pleasant walke, by reason of the shade and greenenesse thereof. It hath some things in common with the Citie of Rome: for in the Magistracie there are Consulls, or Bourge-masters, Gouverneurs, Prætours, Sherifes, Maiours, Fabrickers, Architectours, Providers of all manner of Provisions, and others. Among the Consecrated Edifices, there are many faire Churches; & for the Citizens, and Civill-men, a very great Senate house, a large Mercate place, and very stately buildings, and houses: so that Colegne, in regard of the pleasant site, their graue Magistrates, and Superiours, their riches, and power, the sumptuousnesse of the Churches, and Structures, the handsomnesse of their manifactures, and for their wisedome, and knowledge may truely be called the Germane Rome.

The Foundresse of Colegne.

The Name & whence.

That this Citie in former ages was under the Italian Iurisdiction, appareth plainely in Vlpianus his booke. §. De Cens. It is in circuit 38. furlongs about, and hath 34. Gates, many sumptuous houses, Nine Great churges, 10. Colledges, 15. Convents, or mens Cloisters, 22. Virgins houses, 59. Nunns Cloisters, 30. Chappelles, 2. Gest-houses, 2. Sick-houses, and 8. Hospitalls for old-men. Among the Churches, the cheifest, the greatest, and the strongest built, is the Cathedrall church of S. Peters-chaire, which if it had beene finished by their Architectours, it would haue surpassed all the Curches in whole Germanie, in greatnesse, in magnificence, and in Architecture. There are in it many Statuts of Princes, Dukes, and Bishops, cut out in Brasse, Stone, and Alabaster. The church of the Machabees, and that of the Eleuen thowsand Virgins are very beautifull & sumptuous. up with goodly Images. And opposite to that a small Chappel, where the Iewes heretofore held their Synagogue, and which is now called Ierusalem, where in there is to be seene a most curious picture.

They haue in it besides, three great Mercate dayes in the weeke, which are rather like faires, then otherwise, and round about the Mercate place, there stand many stately and magnificent houses, and dwellings. The Rhyne runneth closse under the Citie, which is not onely very commodious for commerce, and trading, and the transporting of goods up and downe the River, but also is delightfull, and healthfull. Right over against Colegne, by the Rhyne side in former times there lay a fort called the Duits or Teusch, which was made there heretofore by Constantinus Maximus, the sonne of Constantinus, to defend them from the French, having had a very strong bridge into it, but afterward was destroyed & ruined, by Bishop Brunus, who tooke the stones thereof, and built an Abbey, over which the Learned Abbot Robertus Gouverned Anno 1124.

The Schoole. The Schoole of Colegne, is the ancientest in all Germanie, where the Latine tongue, and all Learning flourished by reason the Romans dwelt there, and that the Christians had their cheife church in this city. After the time of Carolus Magnus and the helpe of their Bishops, it grew every day more famous, and encreased greatly, till at last in the yeere 1388 it was made a publick Vniversitie, and had given unto it by Pope Vrbanus the sixth, the same priviledges, and immunities as the Vniversitie of Paris hath.

The site. The Arch-bishop of Colegne, hath for his Neighbours Northward a part of the Earledome of Marck, and the Dukedome of Cleve, Eastward the Land of Bergh, Southward the Bishoprick of Trier, and Westward the Dukedome of Gulick, & a part of Gelderland.

Vnder the jurisdiction of Colegne; there are diverse Bailyvvikes, namely Arnspergh, Fredeborgh, Bylsteyn, Fredehardeskirchen, Hoove-stadt, VVerle, Nehem, Balve. The Domaines are VVildenborgh, Homberchen, Hackenbergh & Hardenbergh. Within the Confines of the Vbians, layd also that place, which Tacitus in the fourth booke of his historie calleth Talliacum. It is probable, that the ancient Vbians inhabited also a part of the Earledome of Marck, and of the Dukedome of Bergh. Besides Colegne there is in this Arch-Bishoprick two other faire townes, to wit, Bon and Nuys.

Bon. Touching the towne of Bon, there is often mention made thereof in the Romane histories: Tacitus nameth it Castra Bonensia, which was built by Drusus in the daies of Augustus, who for the guarding of the Rhyneside built aboue 50 Castles, and made Bon, and Genosia sure by making a bridge over the Rhyne to them. Which Florus in his fourth booke witnesseth evidently with these words: Along the Rhyneside he built more then 50 Castles, and made Bon and Genosia sure vvith a bridge and ships. It is a pleasant towne, environned with a wall, & a moate, and adorned within with faire houses. It lyeth in a plaine on that side, where the hills descending downeward from Bingh towards the Rhyne make a valley. The Countrie hereabouts is very fruitfull, and besides the bearing of much graine, it yeeldeth excellent Rhynish wine. Closse by the said Towne, there are some small hills, which beare abundance of Costly fruits every Summer. They haue there great store of Venaison, and excellent hunting. Besides all these delights, there are many pleasant Orchards, and stately houses, belonging to gentlemen, with fine gardens to them, so that for pleasure the Bishop of Colegne doth ordinarily keepe his Court here. Bon in our times was taken in, and kept by Carolus Trencheſius, brother unto the Prelate Gebhardus. But afterward was recouvered by Erneſt Duke of Bavaria, who corrupted the granison that layd in it, and bought of them for foure thowsand Ricxdallars, and so turned Gebhardus out, anb droue him away.

About sixe miles beneath Colegne, upon the river of Erpe lyeth Nuys, which is a common throughfare to Coleyne. The North part of this towne is broade, buth the Westpart thereof, narrow & longe. It is double walled, having many turrets upon it. And within standeth the church of the Colledge of the Canons of S. Quirini, which Count Everhardus built. In the yeere 881 Nuys, Bon, and Colegne were sett a fire by the Normans. The Burgher of Nuys, for their honestie, obtayned great freedomes, and immunities from the Emperour Frederick: for they haue a Tole-howse, A free Mint, Authoritie te seale their publick letters with red waxe, and to giue a gulden Eagle in a blacke shield. The Emperour Maximilian marryed within Nuys his wife Mary, the daughter of Charles Duke of Burgundie. In the yeere 1585 the Earle of Nieuvvenaer upon the tenth of May in the night surprised this towne, & tooke it in. Anno 1586 Alexander Farneze Duke of Parma, after he had besieged it a fewe daies tooke it in againe, and burnt it pitifully. Nuys.

In this Bishoprick lyeth also the towne of Andernach, whereof Ammianus (who served the Emperour Iulian) maketh mention. This towne is very wel seated upon the Rhyne, betweene two rivers, upon the French side some two miles from the water, and is a very pleasant, and a delightfull place to dwell in. Andernach.

The Dioceſſe of LIEGE.

The Name THE Dioceſſe of Liege, taketh the name from the chiefe towne thereof Liege, called in Latin Leodium, in Dutch, Luyck, which had this name from a Romanie Legion, which was defeated there, in that very place, where this Citie ſtandeth, and was called Liege from Legio, as ſome will have it. Others againe are of the opinion, that it is ſo named from a brooke called Legia, which ſpringeth out of a hill about three miles from this City, and within this City falleth into the Maze. The ſituation. This Couutrie is bounded Northward, & Weſtward upon Brabant, Eaſtward partly with the Maze, and partly upon the Dutchie of Limburgh, and Southward upon the Countie of Namurce, and the Dutchie of Luxenburg. It is 31 legois miles in length, and 15 in breadth. The fertilitie of the Soile. It hath a moſt temperate and a wholeſome aire, and a moſt pleaſant, & a fertill Soile, eſpecially Northward, where it confineth upon Brabant, for there abouts it is rich in Corne, & all manner of fruits, and in ſome places upon the hills, yeeldeth grapes for Wines; but in the South part, which lyeth towards Luxenburgh, and France, it is for the moſt part barren, having craggie hills, and wilde, and vaſt woods, which are the remainders of that huge Foreſt of Ardenne, which Cæſar writeth was the greateſt in all France. Now we have ſpoken of the out face, and exteriour parts, let us come to the bowells and entrailes thereof, which are full of mines of yron, and lead, yea and of Brimſtone, having alſo pure gould in them, though litle and ſcarce. In the Mountaines there are alſo found qnarries of white Marble with black veines, good for the Tombes and Sepulchres of Princes deceaſed and alſo Alabaſter ſtones intermixed with divers collours. Moreover, there are a great number of Mines and Caves, which are digged deepe under the earth through high hills, clifts and rocks, by the infinite labour, and travell of the Inhabitants, yea ſometimes not without daunger of their lives: which runne two or three Engliſh miles under the earth, & in ſome places croſſe, and run under the Maze, having roomes and Chambers in them for themſelves, and their Cattaile to retire into in the time of need. They have alſo great ſtore of Cole pits, out of which they digge abundance of Cole, which they call Charbon de Liege, or Luycks Cole, which yeeldeth them more profit, then a hundred thouſand Ducates yeerely, which being kindled ſendeth forth an extraordinarie heate, which encreaſeth by water, & diminiſheth with oyle: for which cauſe the Liegois boaſt, that their Countrie is proviſden with three things above all others, to wit, with bread better then bread, with yron harder then yron, and with fire hotter than fire. Beſides, this Countrie aboundeth in Cattaile, eſpecially in muttons, which are large & very fatt, and theire Countrie and Woods for hunting & hauking, are full of Veneiſon, wilde Boares, Hares, Foule, and Birds. Briefly, this Countrie is ſo happie and admirable, that they have a common Proverbe in calling it, the Paradice of Prieſts.

It is reported that this people were firſt converted to the Chriſtian faith by Maternus borne at Pavia, firſt Biſhop of Tongre, about the yeere of our Lord 101: for the Epiſcopall Sea, which at this day is at Liege was then at Tongre, and remained there, untill the yeere 498, about which time the Hunns, having entred Germanie, under the commaund of Atilla, ſacked this town and deſtroyed many others: It was afterward transferred by S. Servais to Maſtricht, and remained there unto the time of the Biſhop S. Hubert, who in the yeere 713 removed this Sea to Luyck, where it continueth to this day. Guiccardin reckoneth up 57 Biſhops, which have beene there, ſince S. Hubert the firſt Biſhop to this time, in whoſe booke ye may read more at large of this ſubject. This Prelate is not onely a Biſhop, but alſo a Prince of the Empire. Duke of Boüillon, Marqueſſe of Franchimont, Count of Lotz, and Haſbaine.

The ancient Inhabitants of this Biſhopricke, were the Eburons, Tongres, Centrons, and Cereſes. It containeth in it at this time a great part of ancient Lorraine, to wit, the Dukedome of Boüillon, the Marquiſate of Franchimont, the Countie of Hasbaine of Los, & alſo divers other Baronies, in his tract of Land, beſides Maſtricht (whereof the one halfe belongeth to the Duke of Brabant) there are 24 walled townes within it, and 1700 Villages with ſteeples and Bells, beſides many Abbeys and Lordſhips. The Metrapolitan of this Countrie is Leodium; by the Inhabitants it is called Liege. It is a very ancient City, and as Albertus Thomas Leodius ſaith: it was firſt founded & built by the Magnanimous and valliant Ambiorix King of the Eburones, through whoſe wiſe conduct the Inhabitants got by their wiles into an Ambuſcade, Cotta and Sabinus Lieutenants unto Cæſar, cutting a Romaine Legion with 5 cohorts or Companies in peeces, as Cæſar himſelfe witneſſeth at large in his fifth booke of his Gallican warre. Beſides the Maze and Legia, there runneth through this Citie three other brookes, to wit, the Vre, the Veſe, and the Ambluar, ſmall Rivers ſpringing out of the Foreſt of Ardenna. Moreover, there are ſo many cleare ſprings, and Fountaines in it, that in ſome houſes they have two or three conduct pipes. It is a very large and a ſpacious Citie moſt pleaſantly ſeated, having many hills and dales within it: the circuit whereof is foure Italian miles. There is in it very fair and ſumptuous building, among the others, the bewtifull and magnificent Palace of the Biſhop, founded by the Cardinall Erardus, heretofore Biſhop of Luyck. And one may truely ſay, that Luyck puts down many townes, not onely in France, but alſo in high and Nether-Dutchland, aſwell for the number of Churches, as alſo for the bewtifullneſſe & riches of them. For here are eight Collegiall Churches of Canons, very rich & magnificent, but above all that S. Lambert excelleth, who is their Patron, and his Church the Cathedrall, whereof the Biſhop is Prince of the Dioceſſe, and of the whole Seignorie. the Canons being his Councellours, but noe man can be made a Canon thereof, unleſſe he be a Gentleman borne, a Doctour, or a Licenciate. And being a Canon, he is permitted to leave it and may marrie, or betake himſelfe to any other vocation. There are foure rich Abbeys, adorned with foure faire Libraries. There are alſo within this city 34 Pariſh Churches, beſides diverſe other Churches, Cloiſters, & Monaſteries to the number of a hundred ſtanding within, & without this city. The Citizens ſpeake a kinde of broken French, and becauſe they dwell betweene France, Germanie, and the Low Couutries, their language is much corrupted. It is an imperiall city, and yet are not bound to pay any tribute to the Emperour, unleſſe whenſoever he hath any warrs againſt the Turck, they are then to furniſh him with a ſmall nomber of Souldies, and to pay them. It is true, that this citie is ſubject to the Biſhop, aſwell in Spirituall, as Temporall cauſes, yet with ſuch limitation, that it ſeemeth, their Priviledges, Liberties, and Gouvernment, is as it were a free Republique, for they chooſe their owne Bourgemaſters, Aldermen, and Ma-

Magiſtrats. All manner of ſtudies, arts and ſciences have beene here in former times in great eſteeme and requeſt: ſo that at once there hath bene found here to ſtuddie 9 Kings Sonnes, 24 Dukes Sonnes, 29 Earles Sonnes, beſides many other Barons Sonnes & Lords, who were for the moſt part Canones of the Cathedrall Church of S. Lambert. Boüillon is a faire Caſtle, girt about with a wall, lying foure miles from Ivoy, and 16 from Luyck, ſtraingly built, & ſtanding upon the top of a high hill, having a great Burrough towne at the foote of it, which hath beene in more requeſt heretofore. This Caſtle retaineth ſtill the of the Dutchie, and was the reſidencie of the Duke of Boüillon, & had a great territorie under the juriſdiction and Seignorie thereof. From which that moſt famous Prince Godfrey Duke of Boüillon tooke his name, who in the Councill of Clermont in Auvergne, reſolved with his bretheren Euſtachius and Balduinus anno 1096, to make an expedition with the other Princes of Chriſtendom, to regaine and conquer the Holy-land. In which this truely Illuſtrious and generous Prince, for the better diſcharging of his dutie, ſold this Dutchie unto Spert, Biſhop of Liege, more of the Seller, then the Buyer. By his Magnanimity and Valour the Chriſtians recouvered Jeruſalem from the Infidels.

Franchimont hath bene heretofore a walled towne, but is now diſmantelled here the Cardinall Erardus of Marca built a ſtrong Caſtle: this place lyeth 4 miles from Luyck, and retaineth yet the dignitie of Marquiſate. Neere unto Franchimont lyeth a Village called Thovin, about which there are found divers mines of good lead, and in the adjacent hills, there are many quarries of Marble. Tongre is three miles from Maſtricht, and as farre from Luyck, lying upon the River called the Iecker. This towne tooke the name thereof from the Tongres of Germanie, who forſaking their native countrie, came and ſeated themſelves on this ſide the Rhyne, and chooſe this towne for their habitation. It is the ancienteſt towne in all Brabant. From hence to Paris, which is counted 200 Italian miles, there was a Cauſey, or way paved with ſtones, whereof ſome remainders are to be ſeene yet to this day. As a monument of the great antiquity thereof, there is to be ſeene at Tongre a very ancient Temple, which was dedicated to Herculus, whoſe Stature ſtanding upon the Gate, is yet to be ſeene. Hoy is ſo named from the ſwift running River, which through this towne falleth into the Maze: this town lyeth five miles from Luyck. The Hamlet Bilſen lyeth upon the Demmer, foure miles from Luyck, and without it is the Village of Munſterbilſen. S. Truyen is three miles from Tongre, which in ſome mens opinion, was heretofore the habitation of the Centrones, whereof Cæſar maketh mentiõ ſo often in his Commentaires. A mile from Luyck, there is an other Village called Ebure, which was in former times (as ſome thinke) the chiefe citie of the Eburons. The one halfe of the citie of Maſtricht (as Placentius writeth) was given by the Earle of Lovane, named Porus to the Biſhopricke of Luyck. The other ſmaller townes for brevitie ſake I will paſſe by.

This Countrie is watered with many Rivers, whereof the moſt part of them runne into the Maze, namely, Legia, Vtes, Veſes, Ambluarus, Ieckel, Hoy, Veſera, Vl, Voer, and Vt. The others, fall into the Demmer, tot wit, Ratbeck, Stimmer, Hereck, Heſp, being very cleare Rivers, and full of fiſhe.

Here hath bene in former times a ſpring, or Fountaine, but in what place the learned have held a great piſpute: for ſome will maintaine, that it is yet in the towne of Tongre, others againe (with whome alſo Ludovicus Guicciardinus a famous writer agreeth, who to ſearch out the truth of it, was an eye witneſſe, that it is not in this towne, but is a mile and a halfe from Limburgh, 5 miles from Luyck, and 8 miles from Tongre, neere unto the Village of Spa, which at this day is commonly called Spa-waters, ſpringing up in a moſt pleaſant. and a delightfull wood, being a part of the Foreſt of Ardenna. The vertue, and force of this Fountaine is admirable, for the curing of deſperate deſeaſes, as Conſumptions, the Dropſies, Feavers, the ſtone and Gravell, &c. This Countrie riſeth here and there with hills and Mountaines, in the bowells whereof (as is ſaid) there are rich mines, and quarries: it is couvered and ſhaded in divers places with ſome parcells of the Ardennian Foreſt, whereof Iulius Ceſar ſpeaketh ſo much. The leſſer part joyneth to the Countie of Namurce, called Bruſſon Marligni.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE EARLEDOME OF NASSAV.

HEre is repreſented the famous Earledome of Naſſau, the native Countrie of the renowned Naſſoviſch VVorthies, whoſe fame is well knowne and ſpread through the whole world, & to whome, next under God, may be aſcribed the freedome, and libertie of the Netherlandiſh Lyon.

The Originall of the name.

The word Naſſau is as much to ſaye, as Naſgovv, a wateriſh and a moiſt ground, ſeing the towne, from whence this Earledome taketh the name, is encompaſſed with wet and moiſt fieldes.

For in the Highdutch tongue Naſs, ſignified vvet and wateriſh, & Gavv, or Au, betokened a Land. As the name of Betavv ſignified the Land of the Betouvvers, or Batavians, Durgavv, a dry-land, Rhiengavv the Rhijnland, Briſgavv, a Land worthy of praiſe, Oſtergavv, the Eaſterland, & VVeſtergavv the Weſterneland.

This Earledome hath other Earledomes under it, and which belong unto it, as VVeilburg, Idtſtein, VViſbaden, Dietz, Catzenellenbogen and Bilſteyn.

The Site.

The Earledomes of Naſſavv and Dillenburg lye Southward, the Earledomes of VViſbaden and Idtſtein Eaſtward, as alſo the Earledomes of Iſenburg, and of Solms, and bordereth upon the Landgraviate of Heſſen. Vpon the Northſide lyeth VVeſtphalia, and the Earledome of VVirgenſtein, and on the Weſt part the Dukedome of Bergh, and the Earledomes of VVida and Seine.

This Earledome hath many Lordſhips, & Barlywikes in it, as Freudenberg, Sigen, Niph, Ferndorff, Hilchenbach, Hager, Eberſbach, Dillenburgh, Dringenſtein, Drydorff, Libenſchidern, Beylſteur, Longerſheim, Kurichenheim, Barbach, Marenburgh, Rotzenhaim, Renneroden, Heenen, Dernertzithaim, Hohnſtetten, Flachten, Dietz, Frichonien, Zentzheim, and others.

Theſe Earledomes are accounted among the free Earledomes of the Romane Empire, ſeing that the Lords of them are ſubject to no man, but onely the Emperour, and haue the ſame Regalities and Prerogatives, as the other Princes of the Empire uſe to enioye.

They haue the right, that they may coine money, either of gould, ſilver or kopper, which is to be ſeene at this preſent in the Coine of Sigen, about the ring, whereof ſtandeth upon the one ſide, Moneta Sigen, and on the other ſide, Iohannes Comes de Naſſavv, which the diſceaſed Count Iohn of Naſſau hath coyned.

The Land-Grave of Heſſen, who beareth likewiſe the title of Earle of Catzenellenbogen, receiveth the revenues of this Earledome, ſince the time that the Land-Grave Philip, bought it of the Earle of Naſſavv Anno 1557, for ſix hundred thowſand Crownes, and did alſo ſurrendre over unto him, the Earledome of Dietz, upon that condition, that both of them ſhould beare the title in common.

The nature of the Land.

The one part of the Earledome of Naſſau is full of Hills, which make it to be very rough and barren and full of woods.

The other tract ſhooteth out in a faire plaine, which produced good Vineyards, eſpecially in the Countie of Dietz neere unto the river of Lane, as alſo very good paſture grounds, al ſorts of herbes, beanes, peaſe, roots and ſuch like, as alſo fruitfull fields, where al kind of Corne and ſeed groweth.

Mines.

There are alſo divers mines in this Earledome: For neere unto Sigen there is found a faire yronſtone, out of which they melt yron, and caſt all things out of it, as Iron ſtoues, Anvils, Yron Bullets and other things, and within & without the towne they make al manner of yron inſtruments.

At Freudenbergh they make very good ſteele, which is tranſported farre and neere. The like mines and worke-houſes are about Dillenburgh, Hager and Burbach, wherein they make al Iron workes. In theſe quarters alſo they finde Copper, and lettanie, and at Eberſbach they make glaſſes.

Woods. The cheifeſt wood is called the Weſterwalt, which is a part of Sylva Hercynia, the leſſer, and as it were peeces of this, are Kalteich, Heygerſtruch, Scheldewalt, the Howre, and the Camberg, in which there are great ſtore of Deare, and fine hunting.

Rivers. The Rivers, which water this Earledome, are the Laen, Sigen and Dillen, by the ſide of every one of them, there lyeth divers fine townes. On the Sigen lyeth the towne of Sigen. On the Dille lyeth Hager, Dillenburg and Herborn. Vpon the Laen, Dietz, Naſſaw, Laenſteyn, or Lohnſteyn, juſt in that place, where the Laen falled into the Rhyne.

Bathes. The Bathes of Embs, belong in general to the Earles of Naſſau, Dillenburgh, and the Land-Graves of Heſſen, and for their marvelous and ſecret vertue is ſought to farre and neere.

Medicinall waters. At Kodineng and Camberg there is a Brackiſh water, which being drunke is good for the ſtone, whereunto many ſtraungers reſort every yeere, and come from divers parts.

The Vniverſitie. The towne of Herborn is alſo a Vniverſitie, unto which every yeere many Students come in great numbers, out of Germanie, Poland, Liefland, Denmarck, and other Countries.

The nature of the Inhabitants. The Inhabitants of this Earledome are much commended for their vertues, conſtancie, dexteritie, frugalitie, juſtice and equitie, and their honeſty is well knowne to every man, that hath to deale with them.

From their youth they are nurtered, and brought up in Godlineſſe, & given to all manner of honeſt, and neceſſarie labour and exerciſes. To lie, and not to keepe ones word, is accounted amongſt them a horrible ſinne; hence it comes, that a man may relye upon their word and promiſſe.

The houſe of Naſſau haue beene great Lovers, and ſevere Maintayners of libertie, ſo that they did not onely procure their owne, but haue alſo defended & maintayned other mens freedomes and liberties.

This Countrie in former times had an unfortunate Lord, the Emperour Adolphus of Naſſau, who was ſlaine in the warres: but now is accounted more happie, in regard of thoſe braue Naſſoviſh worthies, who through their magnanimous and heroick actions, haue delivered the united Netherlands from the tyrannie and yoak of the Spagnards, & haue ſpread their honour and fame through the whole world. Vnder that excellent Heros William of Naſſau Prince of Orange: the Netherlanders begann to gett their libertie, unto what ſtrength and power they grewe, unter the militaire gouvernment of Prince Maurice of Naſſau, of famous memorie, ſonne unto William the united Provinces knowe well, unto what a height they are come, under the happie gouvernment of his brother Henry Fredrick Prince of Orange: witneſſe the great & ſtrong townes, which of late, they haue brought under their power, with the great riches which they haue taken at ſea from their ennemies.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ARCH-BISHOPRICK OF TRIER.

The name.

HE Arch-bishoprick of Trier, or the ancient Trierish Provinces, tooke first their name from that old towne of Trier, which was the chiefe towne, inhabited heretofore by the Treviri, whose Countrie, as we perceiue by Tacitus, and Cæsar, had a large extention; for besides the Bishoprick, which is described in this Map, they had many other adiacent Countries, and Townes under their Iurisdiction, as a great part of the Diocesse of Mentz, and also Binghen, Sarbruck, and others. The Vbians, Mediomatrices, and Nemeti, bordered upon them. At this day this Arch-bishoprick, boundeth upon a part of the Trevirorum. Northward upon the Earledomes of Nassavv, Bergh, and the Bishoprick of Colegne. Eastward upon the Rhyne-gavv, and Hessen. Southward upon VVesterreich, and the Dukedome of Zvveibrucken, and Westward upon the Dukedome of Lutzenburgh.

The Bounds.

The Temperature.

The Aire in this Countrie for the most part is thick, lowring, and moist, by reason of the abundance of Rayne, that falleth there, which almost continually moistneth this Countrie, so that it is called Cloaca Planetarum, that is, the Sinke or Gutter of the Planets, the cause whereof is thought to be, the high Mountaines, and the lowe Dales upon which the cloudes comonly hange: for this Countrie is very uneuen, and riseth here and there with barren hills, and in many places is like a Wilderneſse, and ouerrun with woods, so that in diuers parts, it beareth nothing but Oates. But in that part, which lyeth upon the Mosell, they haue abundance of all things, as also in those grounds, which shoote towards the Rhyne. And being so full of Hills, and woods, they haue no want of any kinde of Deere, or game, wherof they haue great store, and likewise no small number of fowle, which are there in abundance in the Dales, between the Mountaines.

Deere and game.

Metals.

Out of these Mountaines they digg all kind of Mettalls, so that this land by the blessing of God, hath Mines in it of Silver, Copper, Iron, & Letanie.

See the card of Luyck.

The Inhabitants were heretofore so trained up in Armes, that under the Commaund of their Captaine Generall Amborige, they strangled Cotta, and Sabina by Luyck, both Cæsars Legates, and ouerthrew, and defeated their whole Armie, yet nevertheleſse afterward they were subdued by Labienus. And as Cæsar himselfe acknowledgeth, that becaus of their neighbourhood to the Dutches, which daylie exercised themselues in the use of Armes they were like them in valiantneſse and stoutneſse, who would neuer suffer themselues to be ouermastered, so great was the libertie alwaies of the Netherlanders. At this day the Inhabitants are giuen much to labour, seing the nature, & soile of the Countrie requireth it, they ought to labour and to take paynes, for their trading, and maintenance: and therefore are so used to labour, that it is a wonder, to see them hange upon the Mountaines like Goates. They are of a sad, and Melancholy Complexion, by reason of the rawneſse, and grosseneſse of the Aire and the people are of a dull, and clowniſh disposition. But now conversing with other nations, they beginn to laye a side that clowniſhneſse, and become more civill. There are (as is said) many woods, all peeces of the Forest of Ardene, which haue divers names. as the VVestervvalt, the Eydervvalt, and the Ebersvvalt, and the like, which are very full of all kind of Deere, and game. There are but two Meeres in all this Countrie, and both of them exceeding deepe, the one is called the Vlmer-meere, and the other the Laicher-meere, in the last they finde all sorts of greene, yellow, and redd-stones, which shyne like Emeraldes, and Iacinths. The most part of this Countrie is watered with many running rivers, which all falling into the Mosell, at last it discharged it selfe into the Rhyne, and furnished the Countrie with great store of fishe. The Mosell springeth out of the Mountaine Vogesus in Lorraine, not farre from the head of the Soasne, a litle aboue the village of Bussan, and taketh his Course from the Southeast, towards the Northwest, and runneth through the townes of Leistraic, Remiremont, Espinal, Charmes, and Baton, in a right course unto the Episcopall Towne of Toul, and from thence to Metz, and so passing Trier, at Confluents falleth into the Rhyne. Touching this river, whether it bee the old Obrincus or no, there haue beene differing disputes and opinions held by diuerse Authours; becaus in Ptolomies writtings, he maketh it to be about Mentz, others think it to be the Nava, which runneth into the Rhyne by Binghen, others make it to be ouer the Rhyne, and say that the Meyn is the old Obrincus. But without all question, it was the Mossell, or Musell as the Inhabitants call it, though Ptolomie was of a contrarie opinion: seing that he, having gouverned himselfe according to other mens relations, and informations might easely erre. For, if it were the Naua, which he meant, then Ptolomie must haue cleane forgotten the Mosell, which is not probable that Ptolomie in his description, should haue left out so notable a river, & in stead thereof haue sett downe a slighter, whereof no great acount was made, Especially, when one cõsiders, that the Nava, not aboue Moguntiacum that is, Mentz, but beneath the said City falleth into the Rhyne: for Ptolomie placeth the Obrincum aboue Ments, so that one may easely perceiue, that Ptolomie must haue erred both in the site, and place.

The nature of the inhabitants.

The wvoods.

Two Meeres.

The Rivers.

Touching the opinion of Ioannes Heroldus, who thinketh, that the Obrincus, mentioned in Ptolomie, was not a river, or a running water, but a small land, lying by the side of the Rhyne, which at this daye is called the Ober Rhingavv, that is, the Vpper Rhyne-tract: I can in no wise see, by what reason he can maintaine this his opinion. Beside this, that it should be theMeyn is moſt abſurd, when men in the diſcription of Nether-Duthland and Gallia, ſhould ſkip from Ripa Gallica, that is, from the French ſide or ſhore, over the Rhyne into Germanie, and to carrie the Meyn as it were upon ones ſhoulders out of Germanie and to tranſport it over into Gallia. This River is full of fiſhe, eſpecially in the Province of Trier as Carpes, Barbles, Saulmons, Pearches, Pickrills, Dace, Roches, Bleaks & Creviſes.

The famous Poet Auſonius hath wrote excellent verſes of this river, which he entituleth his Moſella. The other rivers are the Kil, which is alſo called Gelbis, likewiſe the Pruin, Vhr, Sara, Ahra, Sura, and other ſmall brookes, and rivers. The Sara alſo Auſonius mentioneth, upon which lyeth Sarbruca, Pons Saravi, ſpoken of by Anthonine in his Itinerarium. An old Manuſcript maketh mention thereof calling it, Caſtra Sarræ.

The Abbeys The Abbeys of this Province are Prumienſis S. Maximini, Medloch, Himmelrodt & Toley. The Earledomes under the Frieriſh juriſdiction are Manderſcheyd, Keyhel, VVirnenburgh, Gerreſtein, and Veldents. The Lordships VVinnenbergh, Brylſtein, Paſſenheim, Saffich, Ter Leyen, Eltz, Purmont, VVildenburg, Ehrenburg, VValdec, Hertelſtein, & VVilpen. The Iuriſdictions or Bayliwicks Schonberg, Schoneck, Hildesheim, Daune or Manderſcheyd, Kilburg, Vlmen, Cocheim, Kempenach, Meyen, Moureal, Keyſers-Eſch, Munſter, Meyfeld, Ober-Hammerſtin, VVelch, Billig, Broich, Pfalts, VVitlich, Sarburg, Grimburg, S. VVendel, Bleis, Caſſel, Himmelſtein, Baldenavv, Bern, Caſtel, Cell, Baldeneck, Coblents, Boppart, Obervveſel, Montabour, Vilmar, Brechen, and Caemburg.

The Earledomes & Lordships.

The Eiffel. The territoire of Eiffel belongeth partly to this province, but the other part and that the greateſt, is under Lutzenburg, it hath a hard ground, and beareth moſt of all Oates, the Inhabitants deale moſt in Cattaile, Honey, & Waxe. Richvvinus writeth of this Countrie to Munſterus in this manner: This land is by nature (ſaith he) uneven, rough, with hills and dales, colde, and ſubject unto tempeſtuous ſhouers; but for water, and fountaines very pleaſant. The Inhabitants are laborious, haue good pates for invention, if they were exerciſed therein, but they betake themſelves to the manuring of their lands, and the keeping of their Cattaile.

Cattaile. In this Countrie, there are many white Cattaile, & much Milke, and they haue more fiſhe then veniſon, it yeeldeth much fruit, and Corne, ſaving where it is ſo rough, there it beareth ſome Oates, but litle other graine.

A Bathe. At Bortrich a mile, and a halfe from the Moſell, there is a healthfull warme Bathe; About the towne of Meyne they find good ſilver, but by the follie of the Peſants it is ſpoyled, and waſted. In the Lordſhips of Keyla, Cronenbergh, and Sleyda im Hellenthall, they make very good Anvils, and caſt Yron ſtones, which are ſent and carryed into the high Countries, as Suevia, Franconia, and many other lands, where a great number of them are ſould. About Manderſcheid, and Gerardſtein, in Somer time this Countrie may be compared to Italie, becauſe of the Cucumbers, Pompions, Lettice, and ſuch like fruicts, which it yeeldeth.

The Townes Nowe we will come to the Townes, belonging to this Biſhoprick, eſpecially Trier, and Confluents, which Trier. are the chiefeſt. The moſt ancient City of Trier, was called by the Latins Auguſta Trevirorum, whence it tooke this name, it is not certainely knowne; but that which is ſaid of Trebota the Step-ſonne of Semiramis that he was defeated before it, ſeemeth rather to be a fable, then the truth. But not withſtanding it is ſo old, that it is verely thought, that for antiquitie it will giue place to no towne in Europe. Æneas Silvius writeth, that it is more ancient then Rome by 1300. yeeres, & was founded more then two thouſand yeeres before the nativity of Chriſt.

Vpon an old peece of coine of the Emperour Veſpaſian, there was this inſcription COL. AVG. TREVIVOR. Mela calleth it ſimply Auguſta Lib. 3. Cap. 2. Belgarum clariſſimi ſunt Treviri, Vrbeſque opulentiſſimæ in Treviris, Auguſta; in Heduis, Auguſtodunum, that is, the chiefeſt and moſt famous people of the Belgians are the Treviri, and the richeſt City in the Trierish Province the Citie Auguſta, that is, Trier; and in Heduis Auguſtodunum. The Romane Hiſtoriagrapher Tacitus, maketh often mention of this City in his Hiſtorie, which in the laſt times of the Romans, when they made warre with the Germans, was the reſidencie of their Generalls, as alſo the Emperours, where there dwelt alſo the Romane Treaſurer, which payd the ſouldiers their wages. Likewiſe, their Procurator Cynegii, and Præpoſitus Brantaricariorum. There was alſo the Romans Magazine, and Amunition-houſe, and a worke-houſe, wherein they made all manner of Armes. There is yet to be ſeene unto this daye the decayed Walls of the Palace, which Conſtantine the Emperour built and other Antiquaries of an incredibile antiquitie, whereof ſome of them were hidden in holes in the ground, and are daylie found, and digged out. Athanaſius when he was in exile, liued there, and Hieronymus withneſſeth, that there he wrot out the Comentaries of Hilarie. Priſcillianus that Arch-Heretick was by the Commaund of the Emperour Maximus put there to death. Valentinianus Auguſtus held there is Winter Leger. The moſt part of the edifices, were al built after the Romane manner & Fabrick: As the Palatium, the Caſtles, the Theaters, the Campus Martius, the Capitolium, and the Circus. All which the Goths ruinated, and demoliſhed: of whoſe overthrow Salvianus a Biſhop of Marſilia writeth in his ſixth booke, that it was a juſt Iudgment of God upon them, for their abominable ſinnes, which is worthy the reading.

Symon Richvvein writeth thus of the Towne of Munſter. This place by nature is created for delight, the hills and dales with the Paſtures and Brookes ſerue greatly thereunto: for the hills are loden with greene grapes, and the fields fruitfull in Corne, where all fiſhe and foule abound, and what is needfull, either for mans ſuſtenance, or delight. Of the Inhabitants Auſonius verſifyeth thus:

Ingenium natura ſuis conceſſit alumnis.

Coblents, Confluentes, or Fluentes in Latine, ſo called, Coblents. becauſe of the two Riuers the Rhyne, and the Moſell, which run one into an other, and between which the Towne lieth. For the Ancients commonly built their Townes in thoſe places, where there was a Confluence of two riuers, as is ſeene at Mentz, Baſill, Straſburgh, Vlm, and other townes. It is full of Burgers, who haue faire, and well-built houſes, fine proſpects, fruitfull fields, and Vineyards, ſo that this ought not to be accounted among the leaſt townes of Germanie. The houſes ſtand a long the waterſide in good order, unto a ſtone bridge, which is made over the Moſell. Right over againſt it lyeth the ſtrong Fort, and Caſtle of Eerenbredſtein upon a high hill, which Eerenbredſtein. commaundeth the Towne, and the Countrie lying neere it. The towne of Boppart, and Vpper VVeſell, are two imperiall townes, and were morgaged by Boppart. the Emperour Henry the ſeventh, for a ſomme of Money, unto the Archbiſhop of Trier. It is reported that Eucharius a Grecian, one of the 72. diſciples of Chriſt, was the firſt Biſhop of Trier, from his time till Ludolph of Saxon, there were 73. Biſhops. Lodvvick of Saxon was the firſt Prince-Electour of Trier. And from him till the time of Lotharius, there were 36. Prince-Electours, ſo that in all there were 109. Biſhops which haue gouverned this Biſhoprick.

THE DESCRIPTION OF HASSIA.

The name. HENCE the Lantgraviate of Heſſen tooke the name, it is doubtfull, ſome deriue it from the hill Heſus, though there is no ſuch hill found in all Heſſen, unleſſe it be by Nimeghen in Gelderlant, which peradventure is not farre from the truth: for ſome Writters mention, that one Bato Sonne unto the King of the Chatties (who enlarged, reſtored, and encompaſſed Nimeghen with Walls) had a Sonne called Heſus, who for the loue, which he bare to his natiue Countrie, named this place after his owne name, whereof alſo the hill Heſſus retayneth te name yet to this daye. Others will ſaye, that this Countrie beareth the name of the Chatties, who in old time inhabited the ſame, whereof the Catzen-Elnboghen retayneth the ancient name. Beatus Rhenanus Lib. 1. Rerum Germanicarum writeth, that the Heſſians, coming out of high Germanie, chaſed away the Chatties, and taking this Countrie from them, called it after their owne name.

The Chriſtian faith was firſt preached here by Boniface, or VVimfride an Engliſh man Anno 730.

The Site. Eaſtward this Countrie Boundeth upon Thuringia, Southward upon Franconia, Weſtward upon VVeſtphalia, and Northward upon the Dutchie of Brunſvvick, the Biſhoprick of Minden, and ſome other neighbouring Lords.

The temperature. It hath a wholeſome Aire, and the ſoile affordeth abundance of Corne, peaſe, beanes, and other graine, and beareth many fruict-trees: It yeeldeth no Wines, bat by the Rhyne ſide there are very pleaſant, and rich paſture and Meddowe grounds, which feed great ſtore of Cattaile, with abundance of graſſe, which groweth there. It breedeth in the woods divers ſorts of game for Gentleman to take their delight in Hutting, as Red-deere, Fallow-deere, Roe-deere, Hares and Faxes.

Mines. In ſome places there are found divers Mines of Copper, and black-lead. There is no ſalt found in the hills, but in the Salt fountaines, and pitts.

Chatti ancient people. This Countrie (heretofore it had but the title of an Earledome, but now is honoured with the name of a Landgravedome) was in old time inhabitet by the Chatties, according to the teſtimonie of all Writers, though Cranzius gaineſaies it, making the Saxons to ſpring from the Chatties, howſoever, they are called Chatthæ by Ptolomie. Theſe, as Tacitus withneſſeth, were afterward tranſported by Shipping into the Iland Batavorum, or of the Batavians, where there are yet ſome reliques and traces of their names remayning, Eſpecially two Villages ſo called: to with Catvvick upon the Sea, and Catvvick upon the Rhyne. Of the Source and Originall why they were called Chatties learned Iunius writteth in this manner. The Catti vvhich our and former ages haue named Heſſi, ſeemeth to haue taken à common Name vvith the Chatties, becauſe of their fierceneſſe, vvherevvith they aſſaulted their Ennemies, for vve knovv vvell, hovv fell and fierce that Domeſticall creature is, that vvill fly in ones face & catch one by the throate, if they shut or keepe her in? or from their ſubtill Ambushments, and vvillie deceits, vvhereby they entrapped their Ennemies, even as a Cat lyeth in vvaite on a ſuddē to cath a Ratt or a Mouſe. Such vvas then the nature of the Chatties, tot vvit, a furious and cruell nation. They uſe yet the ſame vvord at Heuſden in Holland, for they call a Cat, Hes: and denoteth there by, that this houshold animale is an ennemie to Mice, by naming her Hes. It may vvell be, that the Ancients, vvho heretofore vvere renovvned for their vertues, vvere called by this name of Chatties, vvhich the Hollanders yet to this day name ſo, for one cannot knovve better the vertue and excellencie of this people, then by Tacitus, vvho attributeth more honour and Martiall diſcipline to this people, then to all others of Germanie. And therefore the nature of the people is expreſſed by a terme moſt proper to their merit, vvhether you haue regard to their courage, & braue attempts, or to their excellentie. Thus much Iunius ſpeaketh of them.

Heſſen was in old time but a Countie, ſubject to the Lord of Thuring, which appeareth in the booke of Tourneys: Wherein we reade, that Anno 1042. Lodvvick Count of Heſſen was at Hal, at a Tilting or Journey held there, but afterward was advanced to the dignitie of a Land-Grave, ſo that the daughter was exalted aboue the mother. At lenght alſo the Earledome of Catzenellenbogen fell unto him, & that by the daughter of the laſt Earle, which Henry the Land-Grave married. Munſter reciteth the genealogie of theſe Land-Graves of Heſſen. Among the ſmall Townes in Heſſen, The Townes. there are two of chiefe note: namely Marpurg, and Caſſel. Marpurg was called by Ptolomie Amaſia, and Amiſia, like as Irenicus, and Appianus teſtifie, is commonly named Martpurg, which is the Capitall Towne of Heſſen, and ſome ſay it was named ſo after Mars Martisburgh, or after Marcomirus Prince of the Francks. Hiſtorie maketh mention that in former ages it was but a Farme and had ſome ſcattering houſes about it. The river Lona runneth through it, & ſome times the Prince holdeth his Court in this Citie. It is adorned with a Vniverſitie, which Lodvvicke Biſhop of Munſter erected there, in the yeere 1526. Which Vniverſitie was adorned with three Learned Men: Ioannes Oldendorpius a Iuris conſult, and theſe two famous Divines Iohannes Draconites, and Andreas Hyperius.

Marpurg.

Among the other principall Townes of Heſſen, Caſſell. Caſſell is the ſecond, named as it were Caſtellum from Caſtle, and according to ſome mens opinion by Ptolomie Stereontium. It was heretofore but a bare Caſtle, but now is become a faire Citie, where the Landgraves haue a ſtrong Caſtle, environned with Bulwarkes, and is well moated. Having a moſt pleaſant Garden adorned with curious workes, ſhades, and greenneſſe, after the Italian manner. This Citie is watered with theſe three rivers; Fulda, Ana, and Fruſula. It hath a very fer- Fulda. till Soile, good paſture groundes, and pleaſant meddowes lying round about it: ſo that the Burgers moſt trading, is in wools and ſheep-ſkines. Not farre from Marpurg upon the river Edera, lieth Franckenbergh, or Francobergh, a very fine towne, much commended in Franckenberg. regard of the pleaſant ſituation, & antiquity thereof. It tooke the name from the Francks, who encamped their armie there, whē they warred againſt the Saxons. It was firſt founded by King Theodoricke Anno 520, and much enlarged by Charlemagne Anno 840. The Citizens after the custome of their Ancestours, are warlike, if neede require, otherwise they are giuen much to hunting and manuring of Lands, which indeed is in generall the nature of the Hessians.

Eschvvegen. The towne of Eschvvegen standeth upon a hill, having rich and fruitfull Lands, lying round about it, and is watered with the river VVeira. By the conveniencie of this river, the herbe Isatis called by Plinie Glastum groweth there in abundance, and also great store of it is found in the territoire of Thuring, whereof they make an excellent Dye, which within a mile of the Towne is laden in boates, and carryed to Minden, where the VVeira falleth into the VVeser, and from thence is brought to Breme, & so is transported into the East Countries. Of the original of this Towne, no mention is made thereof in histories, because it was thrice sacked & burnt, during the time of the Hungarian Warres. Notwithstanding, it is related in the Franconian Chronicle, that Charlemagne, about the yeere 769 founded and erected many Bishopricks, Cloisters, and Churches in many townes: and that in the same time also Kauffingen, and Eschvvegen not farre from Cassell were founded and built. It is recorded also that the Emperour Henry the second, built it up againe, after it was miserably destroyed and spoyled by the incursions of the Hungarians, and did enrich it with many priviledges anno 1387. In the Warres between Adolph the Archbishop of Mentz, and the Landgrave of Hessen, this towne endured great losses, at which time it came under the Commaund of the Landgraves.

Fritzlar. Fritzlar is also one of the chiefe townes of Hessen, which may rightly be called in Latin Doctrina Pacis, or Peace-Doctrine, because then was first taught the eternal Doctrine of Peace by the helpe of Boniface, which spread it selfe through all Hessen, Thuring, and Frize-land. This Towne is seated very pleasantly upon the river Egra. It is encompassed with a wall, upon which many turrets stand, and though the situation thereof be univen, and hillie (as indeed the nature of that countrie is) yet notwithstanding there is a fruitfull soile round about it, for Corne, and Trees, yea and yeeldeth some Wine, though the whole Countrie besides affordeth none. And albeit that this towne of Fritzlar lyeth in the Land of Hessen; yet it is subiect to the Archbishop of Mentz, which is the cause, that it hath sustayned great harmes, aswell by the Princes of Hessen, as by the Saxons, by whome also it was destroyed and burnt.

The Rivers. The other Townes belonging to the Landgraue-dome, which are many, wee will passe by for brevitie sake. There are divers rivers, which run through this Countrie, whereof the chiefest is the Rhyne, that watereth the South and Westerne part thereof, the VVeser, whose Fountaine or Spring is the VVeira, coming out of the Forest of Turinga. Lupia runneth through VVestphalia. Adrana in Tacitus is called by the historians Aderna, and is at this day named the Eder, according to the testimonie of Althamer, or possible the Rhoer, as Rithemer saith. Iunius in his Nomenclator, maketh the Eder to flow out of the Adriana, and affirmeth it to be a river in Hassia, which runneth into the Ada: and writeth in his Batavia, that it falleth into the Fulda, which is found to be true by the Landmaps. The smaller & lesser rivelets in this countrie with some othere are the Lanus or Lona in the Countie of VVirgenshen, which springeth out of the Horberg, and ran heretofore by the Castle of VVidekind Prince of the Englisli, and now watereth Lasphe a towne in the same Countie. Also the Fulda, &c.

The Hills. The whole Countrie is full of hills, where the Meliboces and the Abnobes are the chiefest: there are others besides that haue divers names, as the Kesselbergh, Geyne, &c.

The Woods. The Woods for the most part, are peeces of the Forest of Ardenna, and thus much for the description of Hassia. Onely for a conclusion, wee will not omitt to relate unto you, what Ælius Eobanus Hessus writeth in his Latin verses in congratulating all hapinesse to Philip Landgraue of Hessen for the victorie he obtained, describing elegantly the nature, and site of this Countrie, with the manners of the Inhabitants thereof, which are these following:

Qualis Hyperboreum prospectans Thraca Booten,
Gradivi domus ad Rhodopen, Hemumque nivalem
Circumfusa iacet, gelidis assueta pruinis,
Gignit in arma viros duratos frigore, quique
Aut Hebrum Nessumque bibunt, aut Strymonis undas:
Talis & ipsa situ, talis regione locorum
Et Fluviis, Silvisque frequens, & montibus altis
Hassia: naturæ similes creat alma locorum
Ceu natos in bella viros, quibus omnis in armis
Vita placet: non nulla iuvat sine Marte nec ullam
Esse putant vitam, quæ non assueverit armis.
Quod si tranquillæ vertantur ad ocia pacis,
Ocia nulla terunt sine magno vana labore:
Aut duro patrios exercent vomere colles,
Æquatosque Solo Campos rimantur aratris
(Namque & planities segetum fœcunda patentes Explicat innumeras, & plena Messe colonos Ditat, & ipsa sibi satis est) aut ardua Sylvæ
Lustra petunt, Canibusque feras sectantur odoris.
Venatu genus assuetum, genus acre virorum:
Aut leges aut Iura ferunt, aut oppida condunt
Fortia, non solum bello munimina: Verum
Quæ deceant in pace etiam, oblectentque quietos.
Quid sacros memorem fontes? quid amœna Vireta?
Quid valles ipsis certantes frugiferacis
Vallibus Æmoniæ? dulces quid ubique recessus, Musarum Loca, consessu loca digna Dearum?
O patriæ gelidi fontes! ô Flumina nota!
O Valles! ô antra meis gratissima Musis!

THE DESCRIPTION OF FRANCONIA.

The name.

FRANCONIA, or East-Francken Land, taketh the name from the Francks. Some fetch this name from one Francus, which others call Francion, the counterfeit ſonne of Hector, whome they make to be the offſpring of this nation, touching the derivation of whoſe name, Peter Ronſard a French Poet ſaith merrily, that he was called by the Auncients Aſtyanax Francus, which ſignifyeth Haſtiger, a Lance-bearer. Others (among which Gaguinus, and Æneas Pius) were of opinion, that the Emperour Valentinian, gaue this name to the Francks; becauſe that in the Attick tongue, thoſe were called Francks, which were noble, and couragious men, out of what Author, it is not knowne: but it maye be; in regard they were free, and franck from paying of any tribute unto him: which laſt opinion in my iudgement is the likelieſt, unleſſe ye will curiouſly ſearch out the Etymologie of this name, and ſay, that they are called Franci, as it were, Fry on cy, to wit, from paying of Cenſus, or tenths, which the ſignification of this word cy importeth. Peradventure alſo, they were called Fryanſi, or Franci, after the Gotiſh word Anſi, which betokeneth ſuch mẽ, as excell all others in hapineſſe, and riches, and were held as Heroicks, yea as Demy Gods for which cauſe, being more fortunate, and mightie, than the common ſort, theſe Great Lords and ſeignours were uſed to be called Anſos or Hanſos.

Howſoever, to returne to our firſt diſcourſe, it is moſt certaine, that after the Franci or Francks had greatly encreaſed in riches, and power; and that their affaires went well with them, then they begann to growe wearie of the Romiſh yoake, and ſeruitude: and being tickled with a deſire of commaunding, caſt of the common name of Germans, and thinking upon their libertie, called them ſelues Francks or Freemen.

The ſite.

Francken-land boundeth Southward upon Suevia, and Bavaria, Weſtward with the Rhyne, Eaſtward upon Bohemia, and Northward upon Haſſia and Thuringia.

The Temprature.

The aire of this Countrie is pure, and healthfull. And the ſoill of it ſelfe is not ſo ſandie, and ſtonie, as Æneas Sylvius maketh it to be; ſaving in that part of it, which is called at this daye Norica, and lieth next the river ſide: otherwiſe the ſoile is very fruitfull, and beareth great ſtore of Barley wheate, and all other ſorts of graine. There is no countrie in Germanie that affordeth greater, or better Turnips, & Onions. Here and there are alſo Vineyards, which yeeld excellent wines, & which are tranſported into farre Countries. About Bambergh groweth Liquoriſh in ſuch abundance that they load whole waggons with id, & carry it through all Germanie. Likewiſe this Countrie is couvered ouer in divers places with fruitfull trees, pleaſant meddowes, and paſtures which feed great ſtore of all kind of Cattaile.

There are alſo all ſorts of Deere, belonging to princes and Lords, fed and kept in woods, and parks, having lodges and cribbs made, in which they laye hay for them in the winter, and giue them ſalt, to preſerve them the better againſt the violence of cold and hunger: and no private men are ſuffred either to hunt or to kill them.

The Francks Originally Germans Governed by theſe Princes.

That the Francks are Originally Germans, and were ſo called, it is manifeſt out of divers Hyſtoriographers, but aboue all by Procopius Cæſarienſis, who writeth that which he ſaw with his owne eyes. The firſt Prince of the Franks was Genebald, who reigned 30 yeeres. There ſucceeded him in the Gouverment, Marcomir, Dagobert, Lodvvick the firſt, Marcomir the II. VVaramund or Pheramund who being exalted to the French Crowne, left this Dukedome to his brother Marcomir, Prumeſſer, Genebald the II. Suno, Luitemar Hughbald, Helmerick, Godfrey, Genebald the third. Lodvvick the III. after whome ſucceeded, Erebert, Lodvvick the IV. Golbert the II. and Iſetan the laſt of theſe Duks, who dying without iſſue, left his Dutchie in the keeping of VViturim King of France, who was alſo called Pepin, which Dutchie his Sonne Charlemagne gaue to Benedict Burchard the firſt inveſted Biſhop of VVurtzburgh, and to his ſucceſſours, and alſo honoured him & gaue as his Inheritance to him the Church of VVurtzburgh.

VVurtzburgh.

This province beareth to this day the title of a Dukedome, which dignitie the Biſhop of VVurzburgh appropriateth to himſelf, though whole Franconia doth not properlie belong unto him: for Kitzingen, & Briſtadt appartaine unto the Marqueſſe of Brandenburgh: Graglingen to the Biſhop of Bambergh: there are ſubiect to thoſe of Wurtzburgh, Chronack, Forcheym, Staphelſteyn, Hochſtaet: unto the Electour of Mentz belong Koningſpergh, Oxenfurt, Carlſtadt, Halfurt, Biſchopfs-heym, Alderburgh, Mildenburgh with ſome other Townes. VVirceburgum is called by Conrade Celtes, Erebipolim, Ligurinus Herbipolim, Spanheimius Marcopolim, Ptolemæus Artaunum, and the Inhabitants VVurtzburgh, by reaſon of the ſweete muſt, that groweth there. This is the chiefe citie, and the Metropolitan of all Eaſt Francken-land. It is a very faire towne, where Boniface Archbiſhop of Mentz erected a Biſhoprick anno 751. It lyeth in a plaine valley, having ſmall hills, faire Orchards, & Paſtures roud about it, & is fortified with a moate, walls, turrets, & ſtrong Bulwarks, & within is very populous, & hath ſumptuous houſes. On the Weſt ſide it is watered with the river of Meyn, convenient for the bringing of all commodites unto it. It hath a ſtrong ſtone-bridge over the Meyn, & on the other ſide of the Meyn, upon the hill lying next unto the citie, there ſtandeth a Caſtle, which heitherto hath beene accounted invincible, becauſe it hath oftentimes beene beſieged, and aſſaulted, aſwell by the citizens, as by the peſants, but could never be taken in: At the foote of this Hill lyeth a monaſterie, built by Burchardus upon the charges of Cunibert King of France, in honour of S. Magnus Confeſſor.

For the reſt, it will not be amiſſe, to knowe the manner of the obſequies, and conſecration of the Biſhops, and Dukes of VVurtzburgh. The firſt being dead, the Biſhop, which is to ſucceed him, cõmeth ryding into the Citie, with a great traine of braue horſemen, and being light from his horſe, & having putt of his princly robes, he is led by foure officiall Counts bare footed and bare headed into S. Salvators Church, cloded in poore rayment and girt about him with a Cord. Theſe officiall Counties are thoſe of Hennebergh, Caſtel, VVertheym, and Reineck. The Deane, and the Clergie comming to meete him, aſke him vvhat he vvould haue: he anſweareth in moſt humble wiſe, that he is vnworthy, to take upon him, that preſent dignitie & function, wherunto he is choſen, & to adminiſter, & execute his office faithfully. Here upon the Deane ſaith unto him. I charge thee in the name of all this Chapiter to take into they protection the houſe of the Saviour of the world, and the Dutchie here unto annexed, in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and of the holy Ghoſt. This done, he followeth the clergie into S. Saviours Church, and after they haue inveſted him in his pontificall robes (as the manner is) he heareth a Maſſe, and from thence he goeth to a great feaſt made for him in the Caſtle. But the deceaſed Biſhops bodie being unbowelled, and his hart taken out and putt into a glaſſe muſt firſt be brought into the chappell of the Caſtle, and layd there. On the morrow they carrie him from the Caſtle to S. Ioannes his Cloiſter, holding a Croſſier ſtaff in his right hand, and a ſword in his left. The third day they carrie him to S. Saviours Church, where they ſing, pray, and make vowes, and then with his ſword and his ſtaff they burie him.

Bambergh. Bamberga is called by Ptolomie Granionarum, but was firſt named Babenbergh, which is as much to ſaye, as the Hill of Baba, called ſo after the name of Baba daughter unto Otho the Duke of Saxon, and wife unto Albert Count of Babembergh. Others call this Towne Pavonis Montem, or Peacocks-hill. It is à very pleaſant Citie, lying upon the river Regnitz. Round about it there are many hills, very faire Orchards, and Gardins, a very fertill Soile, where Pompions, and Liquoriſh growe in abundance, as is mentioned aboue. It is an Epiſcopale ſeate, & a nurcing mother of manie Learned men, witneſſe the famous writings of Ioachim Camerarius, who was borne there.

Franckford. Francofurtum, or Francofurdia ad Mœnum, commonly called Franckford on the Meyn, to diſtinguiſh it from Franckford, lying upon the Oder. Munſter is of the opinion, that heretofore, it was called Helenopolis, but whē, & from whom it tooke this name, he maketh no mention. Henricus Stephanus in his verſes made to the honour, and praiſe of this Citie, giueth it this laudable name, by calling it an Academie for all ſorts of Merchants, Francofortenſis Athenas, Muſarum Nundinas, Mercurialis, the recourſe, and reſort of all the Merchant townes in the world. The Meyn divideth this citie into two parts by a Stone-bridge, which ioyneth them both together. It is an Imperiall Citie, famous through the whole world, becauſe of the two yearely Marts, or Miſſes, which are kept in it. It is a cuſtome, that here the King of the Romans is choſen by the Princes Electours, and if there ſhould be two Competitours, they muſt bring both their Armies into the field before Franckford, and there in a battail, decide & trie who ſhall carrie the kingdome.

Mentz. Moguntia, commonly called Mentz, is by ſome named Moguntiacum, and by Ptolomie l. 2. c. 8. tab. 3. Neomagum: others affirme, that it hath this name from the river Mœno or Mayn, which ſome call Moganum, or Mogum. It is a Metropolitan Citie, and the Epiſcopall Seate. The ground about it, eſpecially on both ſides of the Rhyne, is very fruitfull, and yeeldeth excellent wine. It is large, fortifyed, populous, and well compact, eſpecially on that ſide, which lieth next unto the Rhyne: For on the other ſide, it is nothing neere ſo well inhabited. It is very long, but ſmall & narrow. There are in it faire great houſes, built after the Romiſh manner, and very faire Churches, with the Biſhops Caſtle. It is alſo a univerſity, which the Biſhop Theodorick erected. It is reported that the art of printing was firſt found out in this Towne. This Citie is under the ſubiection of her owne Archbiſhop, Prince-Electour, and imperiall Chancellour.

Konings-bergh. Mons Regius, or Konigsbergh, is the towne, where that excellent and famous Mathematician Iohannes de Monte Regio was borne.

Sweinfurt. Schweynfurt, lyeth upon the Meine in the very hart of Francken-land. The other Townes in this Countrie are Kitzingen, Fridbergh an imperiall Towne, and ſome others.

1. Imperiall Circle. The firſt Imperiall Circle is that of Franconia, unto which are called and appeare theſe States following, to wit, for the Spiritualitie the Biſhops of Bambergh, the Biſhop of VVurtzburgh, and Duke of Francken-land, the Biſhop of Eichſtadt, the Maſter of the Dutch-order; The Priour of Cambergh, & the Abbot of S. Gilgen at Nurnbergh.

For the Temporalitie, theſe Princes and Lords following, the Marqueſſe of Brandenburch, & Burghgraue of Nurenburgh. The Earles of Henneberch, Caſtel, VVertheim, Rheinech, Hohenloe, Erpach, and Schwartzenburch. The Lords of Reichelſpergh, and Limpurg: the Free imperiall townes are theſe: Nurnbergh, Rotenburch, VVinſhaim, and Swveinfurt.

The Rivers. There runne through this Countrie many rivers full of fiſhe, whereof the Mayn, and the Sala are the chiefeſt: the ſmaller are the Sinna, Radiantia, Æſtus, Tarber and ſome others.

The Woods. The woods in this Countrie are the Spiſhart, the Ottenvvalt &c. being parts of Svvartzvvalt, with which, as alſo with the Sigebergh, this Countrie is encompaſſed round about, as it were with a naturall wall.

The Manner of the Inhabitants. The Inhabitants of this Countrie are mightie, and valliant, rich in nobilitie, and Gentrie, ſharp witted, and giuen to much labour, in planting and dreſſing of Vines, by the diligence, aswel of men, as of Weemen. They are ſo given to worke, that they cannot endure any Idle perſons.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE LANDGRAVIATE OF THVRINGIA, or DVRING.

The Site & bounds.

THVRINGIA, or Duringen, lieth betweene the two rivers of Sala, and the VVerra. It boundeth Weſtward upon the VVerra, and Eaſtward upon the Sala, Northward upon the Svvart, or Harts vvood, and Southward upon Duringervvood. The length of this Countrie is anſwerable to the breath, and reacheth ſome 12. Germane miles. This land is very fruitfull in all kinde of Encreaſe, and fruits, eſpecially, in Corn; ſo that Georgius Agricola ſticks not to name it, the marrovve, and fatt of Germanie. The hearb Iſatis, or Woad (which Plinie calleth Glaſtum, & at this day Gaudum, or Paſtillum) wherewith they die all ſortes of blew Colours, groweth there in abundance, and is by the Inhabitants, who make great profit and gaine thereof, tranſported into forrine Countries, upon which a certaine Poet hath made theſe verſes:

Herba Thuringorum Celeberrima creſcit in agris;
Hanc Iſatim Græcus ſermo vocare ſolet.
Ponderis hæc magni eſt, & multo venditur ære:
Hac etenim tingi lana parata ſolet.

The hearb Iſatis or Woad.

This hearb, Plinie ſaith, is not much unlike the Plantine leaues, and is called in French Glaſtu, which heeretofore was much uſed by the Brittiſh weemen in ſmearing, and collouring of their bodies, to make them looke like Moores.

Though this land yeeldeth no wine but ſuch as is brought unto them out of other Countries: yet are there found in it ſome gould and ſilver mines, eſpecially very rich Salt-pits.

Gould & ſilver mines.

The ancient Gouvernment.

Heretofore this Countrie was a Kingdome, but at this daye beareth the title of a Land-Graviate. Duringen, and Heſſen, were heretofore about 366. yeeres agoe, as one Countrie, annexed together, under the Gouvernment of the French kings, till the time of Carolus Magnus, and Henricus Auceps: but the Emperour Carolus Craſſus, at laſt made Ludovicus Duke of Thuringia, whoſe nephew Burchardus beingdefeated by the Hungarians, and leaving no iſſue behinde him, Henricus Auceps the Emperour poſſeſſed this Countrie, unto whoſe iſſue, namely, unto the princes of Saxonie, euen to this daye, it hath beene ſubject. For albeit, after the deceaſe of VVilhelmus, ſonne unto the Emperour Otho the firſt (who was Arch-Biſhop of Ments, and had Commaund over Duringen, by the permiſſion of his father) his Succeſſours Arch-Biſhops of Mentz, had full commaund over the city of Erffurt, which yet they haue, yea and for a time had appropriated all Duringhen to them ſelues, whoſe Deputie, or Gouvernour (under the Gouverment of the Emperour Conradus Salicus) for a certaine time was Ludovicus Barbatus; it was ſo that after him the title of Land-Graues appropriated the whole land to their ſelues as their owne inheritance, from whome at laſt about the yeere of our Lord 1250. it came to Henricus the Illuſtrious, Marqueſſe of Myſia, deſcended from VVidekindus, and ſonne unto Theodorius, the nephew of Harmannus, Landgraues of Thuringen, in the behalfe of his daughter Iuditha, after whome his ſonne Albertus Degener ſucceeded, and after him his Sonnes Fredericus Admorſius, and Theodoricus, who in the right of their fathers brother, the Marqueſſe of Myſia, were declared Heires.

The whole tract of this land (as ſome will ſaye) was in time paſt inhabited by the Sorabi, whereof Eginhartus, and Aimonius make mention: Peucerus ſaith, the remaynders of them at this day is Sorbec, and Severſteyn, which lie betweene the Elue and the Sala. Reynerus Reyneccius in his booke touching the Offspring of the Myſians, calleth the Inhabitants of this land Tyringetas, as if one would ſay Tyringotas, from whome the towne of Gotha tooke the name: and though it be nowe but a ſmall territoire, yet Ortelius writeth that in ancient times, it contayned 12. Earledomes, 12. Princely Abbeys, 144. walled Townes, and as many mercate hamletts, 2000. villages, and 150. Caſtles.

An Ancient people.

The cheife towne of all Duringen is Erdfurdia, or Erdfordia, called by the ancients Erpheſſordia, and Erfeſſurt, as it is thought ſo called from one Erft the firſt founder thereof, who ſetting his Milles by the river Gera, built there the firſt houſes of this Towne, about the beginning of the gouvernment of Arcadius, and Honorius. Afterward in the yeere of ouer Lord 438. it was much enlarged, and bettered by Clodovæus King of France, and at laſt Anno 1066. was encompaſſed with a wall, and made a great deale bigger, that now it is held to be one of the greateſt townes in all Germanie; ſo that the Duringiſh huſband men, haue a proverbe ſaying, that Erfurt iſt nicht ein ſtadt ſondern ein gantzes land. that is, Erfurt is not onely a towne, but rather a vvvhole Countrie. The river Gera runneth through this Citie, and ſcowreth awaye the filth. It was heretofore an Epiſcopall reſidencie, ordayned by Boniface the Apoſtle of the Germans, but this dignitie was afterward transferred to Mentz. It is alſo a Vniverſitie flouriſhing in all learning, which Anno 1392. was by Pope Boniface the ninth endued with many priviledges. There is round about this Citie a fertill ſoile, good paſture grounds, and great ſtore of VVoad which groweth there.

Erdfurt.

It is a Vniverſitie.

This towne was heretofore much plagued by the Emperour Henricus the Fourth, who would haue forced them to paye tenths, from which before they had euer beene free: and therefore when the Saxons warres begann, they rather chooſe to defend their libertie by armes, then to haue that unaccuſtomed burthen layd upon them, and did perſevere therein with ſuch courage, and zeale, that the Emperour was almoſt in daunger of his life. This Citie hath ſuſtained great loſſes by fire: ſo that there is ſcarce a towne in Germanie, which hath beene ſo often burnt, and conſumed with fire. Eſpecially by the laſt great fire, which hapned Anno 1472. it endured an exceeding great loſſe, when as S. Maries, and S. Severus Churches were burnt, and well nigh a third part of the towne. This fearefull fire hapned by ſome Incendiaries hyred thereunto, among whom a Dominican fryer was accounted the cheife ringleader. Alſo Anno 1509. there hapned a great tumult in this city, betweene the Towne Councill, and the Burgers; and that by reaſon of ſome heavie taxationes and contributions, which they had impoſed upon the Burgers. For the whole Communaltie gathering a head together in a certaine place appointed, they would know what debts the towne owed, what charges it was at, and what became of their money. The Councill perceiving this uprore, and what a rage the people weré in, had thought to haue pacifyed them with mild and gentle words, telling them that when time ſerved, they would giue them an account of their receits, and diſburſements. This ſtilled, and pacifyed them for this time: but meeting together againe upon a certaine day prefixed, they admoniſhed the Councill, to giue them this Account: but one of the Councill ſtomacking this more then the others, burſt out into harſhe and boiſterous termes againſt the Burgers; becauſe they required ſuch things from them: whereupon the Burgers ſeing they could not prevaile, but that the Councill would haue ſhifted them of: they in a great rage, depoſe the Councill, and chooſe newe Magiſtrates in their places: upon this there followed a great ſedition, which at laſt came to a warre, in ſo much that the Emperour Maximilian, and the Biſhop of VVurtzburgh, taking this to heart, were driven to reconcile and pacifie both parties.

Weymar. VVeymar is a faire towne, and heretofore gaue the name to the Earledome, at this preſent it is the reſidence of the Dukes of Saxonie, who made there a ſtately Palace, built all of foureſquared blewe ſtones, with a very fine garden & Orchard about it, planted with all kind of fruits, and is watered by the river Ilma, which runneth from thence into the Sala.

Iena. Some maintaine that Iena tooke the name from Ianus: yet wee doe not read, that Ianus had euer any adoration given him in Germanie; but that hath more likelyhood of truth, which Stigelius relateth in theſe verſes:

Hinc placet Hebræo nobis hanc nomine dici,
Vt vetus a Iayn nomen Iena tenet.
Cur ita crediderim, niſi mentem vocula fallit,
Certe hujus ratio minus eſſe poteſt.
Quippe vocat Iayn Solyma pius incola terræ
Hoc quod nos Latio dicimus ore merum.
Quæ caput in mediis urbs fertilis erigit vvis,
Hanc quiſquam à vino nomen habere neget?

Hereby giving us to underſtand, that the name Iena is rather derived from Iayn, which ſignifyeth in our tongue VVine. This towne hath a famous Vniverſitie in it, erected in the yeere 1558.

Gota is named after the Gothes, and therefore Rithaimerus in his deſcription of the world, maintayneth that the Thuringers are deſcended from the Gothes, and that the Gothes built this towne Gota, and called it after their owne name, and people, about the yeere 923. as Lobſtenius witneſſeth. There was heretofore in it an exceeding ſtrong hold, called Grimmenſteyn Caſtle, which becauſe of the mutinie of VVilhelmus Grimbach, being of a more noble deſcent then of condition, for his groſſe and foule faults, it was ſlighted, and demanteled, he being put into the Ban and preſcription of the Emperours Ferdinando and Maximilian, for preſuming to conſtraine the Princes, to haue depoſed the Emperour, and to haue brought in a new forme of Gouvernment into the Empire: for the execution of which proſcription, the prince Electour of Saxonie, being elected by the Emperour and the States of the Empire. He ſlighting the Emperours proſcription, truſted to the ſtrength of this Caſtle, and gaue him ſelfe under the protection of Ioannes Fredericus the ſecond Duke of Saxonie, which Prince, giving no eare to the faithfull admonitions of the other princes, to quite himſelfe of theſe Mutineers, Auguſtus Prince Electour of Saxonie, was forced to beſiege and take in this towne and Caſtle, and after that this Grimbach and foure of his Companions were executed, this Caſtle was wholly demoliſhed and razed, and Ioannes Fredericus Duke of Saxonie, carryed priſoner to Vienna. Gota.

The rivers which water this Countrie are the Sala, or Saltza, the VVerra, Vnſtrut, Ilma, Gera, Or, Apfelſtelt, Helbe, & the Cling. The Rivers.

Here and there among the hills are found alſo ſome profitable mines of gould, and ſilver, eſpecially by Braitenborne, & Svvartzenburgh. Metalls.

This Countrie is full of woods, which are all parts of the Svvartvvood, but among the reſt the Turingervvood is the cheifeſt, and beſt knowne, called by Cæſar Bacenes, which parted the Cheruſci from the Suevi. The others are the Haynich, Hainſett, and the Finnvvoods, all full of Deere & game. Woods.

There are alſo in this Countrie many fine Churches, and Cloiſters, among the which our Ladies Church in Erffurt excelleth the others in faireneſſe, and was founded, and built by Bonifacius Biſhop of Mentz. There hangs in the ſteeple a huge bell, the greatneſſe whereof, is well knowne throughout all Germanie.

The inhabitants of this land, are by nature cruell, and hard, very haughtie before ther Ennemies, they are tall bodied, and of a ſtrong, and faire complexion.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF VPPER SAXONY,

Together with

MISNIE & LAVSNITZ.

The names. WEE are now come unto Vpper Saxony, making the eight Circle of the Empire; For Saxony is devided into the Vpper, and Nether Saxonie. This mapp then represents unto you, the Vpper Saxonie, adorned with the title of a Dukedome, whose Duke is one of the seuen Princes Electours.

The site. This Countrie boundeth Eastward upon the Marck, Westward upon Hassia, Southward upon Thuringa and Misnia, & Northward upon the Dukedome of Brunsvvick.

VVittenbergh. The principall Citie thereof is VVittenberg, lying upon the river of Elue. It was first built by VVidekind, or as some thinke by his Sonne VVidechindus. So that this Citie VVittenbergh beareth the name of VVidechindus, either from the Father, or from te Sonne.

Academie. Duke Frederick anno 1502, erected in it a Vniversity, which the second Frederick augmented and enriched much, so that according to the testimonie of Erasmus from a meane, & a simple Schoole, it became a famous Vniversity, and was adorned with Masters of the chaire, or Professours, skillfull in the three languages, and the liberall sciences. In which flourished these two famous Iuris consults of Germany: Henningius, and Oldendorpius. This is remarkable, which Albertus Cranzius related in the 8B booke & 30 C. of his Vandalia, purging & clearingone that is accused of some crime by a hott burning Iron. In this Citie upon a certaine time, there was an innocēt man, accused falsly, that he secretly had sett a house on fire: now being charged therewith he swore, that he was not giltie of it, offering to cleare him selfe by a hott borning Irō, which the Iudges refused, as forbidden by the Civill Lawe: notwithstanding he tooke a glowing Iron in his hand, carryed it a good waye: and at last casting it from him, he was neither burnt, nor seared: the yron vanished away to the great admiration of the Beholders. It hapned about a yeere after, that a man, which was a paving of the streete, and stirring the sand with his hand to lay in his stone, vnexpected found this hott Iron, which was glowing still, and burnt him on his right hand. The Standers by wondering much hereat, gaue the Magistrates notice thereof, who suspected presently, that this was the male-factour, which was gultie of this crime; whereof the other before had beene accused. Where upon they instantly racked him, and he confessing this offence was tortured upon a wheele. And so this fact by the iust iudgment of God was discouvered, & the innocent man cleared. There is a like storie also of Gemlde, wife unto the Emperour Henry the Third, who by an Ill-willer of hers, being taxed with adulterie, purged herselfe by a hott glowing Iron, and so saued her honour. Such a kind of Tryall, and purgation those were putt unto (as ye may read in the booke of Georgius Cedrenus) who had defiled Maids of their virginitie, or Maids themselues, who was suspected to haue lost it, for the clearing of themselues, and for making of their innocencie knowne. Some will place Torgau in Vpper Saxonie, which notwithstanding by others is accounted among the Townes of Misnie.

OF MISNIA.

Misnie or Meyssen, is a territoire in Vpper Saxonie, which lieth betweene the Sala and the Elue, two rivers, and taketh this name from the Lake Mesia, where perhaps this people dwelt in former times; or from the Towne of Misna, to which Rithaimer rather inclyneth in his description of the world. But this name hath not long beene imposed upon it, seing that Tacitus affirmeth, that the Harmundures inhabited here in former times, because saith he that the Elue had his spring-head out of the Countrie of the Harmundures.

The site. This province boundeth Northward upō the Marquisate of Brandenburch, and Vpper Saxonie, Eastward upon Lausnitz and Slesia, Southward upon Bohemia and the Mounts Sudetos, and Westward upon Thuringa.

The temperature. It was reported, that heretofore it had a very unhealthfull aire, which could hardly be endured; by reason of the Foggs and Damps, which rise in the woods, and upon the hills, but that afterward it became more healtfull, when these woods were hewen & cut downe, these Foggs and Dampes begann to cease.

The fertility This Countrie is fruitfull in bearing all sorts of graine, so that it can furnish the neighbouring Countries therewith. There is also great abundāce of wine, honey & Cattle: saving Ioachimsdale, where the soile is more barren, harder, and not so fruitfull: but what nature hath denied her upon the upper part, shee hath richly recompensed the same in the inner part.

Mines. For there are found divers rich silver mines, and also many other mines of Metall, as Copper, Tin, Iron, Lead, and also some Gould.

In the time of the Emperour Otho the great, this Countrie with Thuringa and Vpper Saxonie, was called the Marquisate of Saxony, to wit, before the

The Gouernment. Dukedome of the upper Saxony was erected. A while after, theſe Countries litle by litle were devided into many Lordſhips, and afterward came againe under the commaund of one man onely: for it hapned in the yeere 1241, when the Landgrave of Thuring came to deceaſe without heire-males, this Countrie by a woman fell unto the Lords of Miſnie, who euer ſince bare the title of them both, and ſo were called Marquiſſes of Miſnie, and Landgraves of Thuringa: Alſo Anno 1423, when the Prince Elector of Saxonie left no more heire-males behinde him, Sigiſmund the Emperour gaue this Dukedome of Saxony to the Princes of Miſnie, which enioy it to this daye, and thus they begann to haue a treble title, as Munſter declareth.

Miſena. In Miſnie there are many Townes: the chiefe towne is Miſena or Meyſſen, lying upon the left ſide of the Elue, built by the Emperour Otho the firſt.

Dreſden. Next unto it is Dreſden, moſt pleaſantly ſeated, and well provided againſt the incurſion of an Ennemie. This is the Magazin of Armes, belonging to the Duke of Saxony, and hath a very ſumptuous Palace and Court & a ſtonebridge moſt curiously made.

Leypzich. Lipſia, or Leypzich is a famous towne of Merchandize, lying upon the river of Pleyſz. it ſurpaſſeth in richeſſe, and beautie all the other townes of Miſnie. It hath an excellent Vniverſitie, for when there was ſome Confuſion in Praegh Anno 1408. it was tranſferred heither. In this tract lie alſo Ilenburgh, Altenzel, Lauterbergh, and ſome other Townes.

Rivers. The Rivers which water this Countrie, are the Elve, Sala & Mulda with others. Here & their alſo this Countrie is couvered with woods, being parcells of the Hyrcinian Foreſt or Svvartvvood. The inhabitants thereof are at this daye ſtrong, and of a faire Complexion, frolick, merrie, frendly and mannerley, very peaceable, and in no wiſe given to that inbred cruelty & ſowreneſſe of the Germans.

VVoods.

OF LVSATIA.

LVſatia, or Lauſnitz according to the teſtimonie of Rithaimer, ought to be under Saxony, and lieth betweene the Elve, the Oder, and the Bohemian Mountains. The name of the Luſatians agreeth well with the words Elyſing and Lygins, who heretofore inhabited theſe quarters, as Ioachim Cure writeth. This Countrie is very fruitfull in Corne, and in all ſorts of fruits. In former times it was under Miſnie; but the Bohemians aſpiring to enlarge their territoire by force brought it under their commaund. Lauſnitz is divided into two parts, the Vpper, & the Nether Lauſnitz. In the Vpper Lauſnitz lye theſe Townes, Sprembergh, Prybus and Cotbus: in the Nether, Gorlitz & Zitauvv. Gorlitz is the chiefeſt and braveſt Towne in all the Vpper Lauſnitz, famous for the faire buildings in it, and the number of the Inhabitants, it is alſo fortified with a ſtrong wall, & a moate, and is ſituated upon a hill, neere unto the river Niſſa, which lyeth verie commodious for the Millers, Bruers and Dyers, who receiue great benefit thereby, over this river there goeth a wodden-bridg couvered over. Among all the Edifices S. Peters Church is the chiefeſt, and likewiſe the Towne-houſe hath a ſtately pinacle upon it. The foundation of this Towne was layd in the yeere 1131. as the Annales thereof doe ſhowe. And afterward Anno 1301. it was lamentably burnt and deſtroyed by fire, ſo that there was ſcarce a houſe left ſtanding: but within eight yeeres after, (as a Phœnix, which reviveth out of her owne aſhes) it was reedifyed, and built more ſumptuous and magnificent then before. It belongeth to Bohemia, aſwel as Lauſnitz. How it came to the Bohemian Crowne, Iohannes Dubravius lib. 11. declareth in his hiſtorie of Bohemia.

Rivers. The river Niſſa runneth through all Lauſnitz; by which this Countrie reapeth a great benefit. And thus much for Luſatia: Now wee will returne againe unto Saxony, which is watered, and moyſtened by manie excellent rivers, to wit, the Elve, Sala, the VVeſer, Luſimicius, Multavia, Miſa, Fulda, Leyna, Allenis, the Oder, Ola, Niſa, and ſome others.

VVoods. There are alſo many woods in it, being all parcells of the Svvart-vvood, whereof the Chiefeſt are theſe, The Lunenburgerheyde, Spondauvverheyde, Rottenauverheid, Galberheid, and Pomeriſcheid. There were in old times in Saxonie foure ſtates, or Conditions of men. to wit: Noble men, Freed-men and Slaves, and the Lawe did import, that everie man muſt abide in that State wherein he was, and not to marrie with any of an other degree. but the Noble with the Noble, the Free with the Free, the Freed with the Freed, & the Slaves with the women Slaves. & if any man did the Contrarie, he was to be puniſhed with death. They had alſo good Lawes againſt all Delinquents and offenders.

This Vpper Saxony maketh the eight Circle of the Empire, and conſiſteth in three degrees of States, whereof the Biſhops and Prelates are the firſt. Namely the Biſhops of Miſnie, Marſpurgh, Naumburgh, Brandenburgh, Havelburgh, Lubeck, Camin. The Abbots of Saltvelt, Rottershauſen, Falkenrieten: The Abbeſſes of Quedlingburgh, and Genrode. The ſecond degree of the temporall Princes and Lords, are the Duke of Saxonie, Elector. The Marqueſſe of Brandenburgh, Elector. The other Marqueſſe of Brandenburgh. The Duke of Pomer. The Princes of Anhalt: The Earle of Svvartzenburgh. The Earle of Mansfelt of Stolbergh, Hohenſteyn, Buchlingen, Rappin, Gleichen, Leiſneck, VVideresfelt, Regenſtien, The Free Lords of Tautenbergh, Reuſſen, of Plau. The Lords of Bernavv, Gratz, and Schonbergh. The Imperiall Townes belonging to the third State, are Dantzick and Elbingen.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE VPPER PALATINATE, OR VPPER BAVARIA.

The name.

WE come now to the Deſcription of Nortgovia, Nortgovv, or the Vpper Palatinate. Nortgovv taketh the name from the Northerne tract, and ſignifyeth the Northerne Region. It is alſo called the Vpper Palatinate, to diſtinguiſh it from the Nether Palatinate, lying along the Rhyne. Heretofore this part of Bavaria, was called Noricum, which Ptolemee placeth and contendeth to lie betweene the River Ihn, and a part of the Donavv, (which reacheth from the Ihn, unto the mountaine Cetium) the mount Cetium being a part of the Countrie of Auſtria, and the mount Carranca. But when the Boii chaſed the Romans out of that part of Vindelicia (which lieth betweene the rivers Ihn, and the Lech) and had taken it in for themſelues, this tract of land gott the name of the Norici, and Boiaria, or Bavaria. In which intent and meaning Diaconus lib. 3. Hiſt. Longobard, deſcribeth the ſame unto us in theſe words:

The Bounds.

The Province Noricum, in which the Boiarii inhabited, boundeth Eaſtward upon Auſtria, Weſtward upon Suevia, Southward upon Italie, and Nortward upon the Donavv. Sextus Rufus, and Liber Notitiarum devide the Countrie Noricum into two Provinces, namely, the Mediterranean, and that which ſhooteth out along the Donaw-ſide.

The Countrie of Vpper Bavaria, butteth Northward upon Voitland. Eaſtward upon Bohemia, Southward it is ſeparated by the Donavv from the other part of Bavaria, and Weſtward boundeth upon the Hanekamp, and upon a part of Suevia, and Franconia.

The temperature.

This Countrie hath a wholeſome, and a good aire, but hath ſomewhat a hard and barren ſoile, though in ſome places, it is reaſonable fruitfull in Corne, & paſture-grounds. About Kelheim, along the Donavv, there are many Vineyards; but the wine thereof is very ſowre, ſo that they haue a common proverbe in ſaying, that upon the ſame hills, there grovveth nothing but vineger. This Countrie alſoo yeeldeth diverſe-mettals, eſpecially great ſtore of yron, which brings in great gaine, and profit every yeere to the Inhabitants. From thence commeth alſo your beſt Azure or Sky-coloured blewe.

Mettalls.

The 'ancient government.

This Northgovv, or as it is called at this day the Vpper Palatinate was in former ages a kingdome, and had their owne kings to governe them, the reſt of Bavaria, being made a Province by the Romans, till the yeere of our Lord 500. Hence it came, that Iulius Cæſar maketh mention, that Arioviſtus king of the Germans, had to his wife the ſiſter of the king of the Noriſci. but what princes the Norici, or Nortgouvvers had in ſucceeding ages, is unknowne, untill they received the Chriſtian faith. In the yeere 511. by the help of Theodo the Second, Bavaria was made a kingdome, who driving the Romans out of it, and giving them a great overthrowe, it was afterward divided by the three Sonnes of the abouesaid Theodo, into three Dukedomes, whereof Theodo the third at Regenſpurck, Otho at Ottingen, and Theobald at Tyroll held their reſidence: It would be too long to reckon up all the others: onely I wil adde this hereunto, Namely, that the Emperour Ludovicus Bavarus in the yeere of Chriſt 1339. made ſuch a partition, that all Bavaria, Norica, or Nortgovv, ſhould belong the Palatines, ſaving ſome imperiall townes, and that part which before was under the Romiſh Empire.

Nurenbergh.

The Chiefe Citie of Bavaria is Nurenbergh, lying upon the river Pignitz, which runneth trough the towne, ſituated in a very pleaſant place, is of a large circuit, and hath a faire aſpect, adorned with fine churches, and many ſumptuous houſes, with large ſtreets, with ſtrong walls, and turrets, and fortifyed with Bulwarcks, and Ramparts. It is very populous, and by reaſon of the rich trading in it, and all ſorts of cunning manufactures, is famous throughout the whole world. Moreover, this Citie is not onely ſited in the midſt of Germanie, as Bilibaldus Birckhaimerus witneſſeth, but alſo is the very hart, and navell of Europe. From Ieruſalem (which citie is ſited in the midſt of the world, as is knowne by the longitude, and latitude of the degrees) Nurenbergh lyeth about 500. Germane miles. And though it be no ancient towne; yet the Caſtle (which ſtood upon a high-hill, in time paſt called Caſtrum Noricum) was very ancient, built by the Emperour Claudius Tiberius, and therefore was it alſo named Neronis Caſtrum. Heretofore this Citie was ſubject to Albertus Duke of Franconia, after whoſe deceaſe, it came to be under the Empire, in the reigne of the Emperour Ludovicus the Third, and from that time forward, it encreaſed greatly in riches, and the number of Inhabitants. In the time of Carolus the Fourth, it was encompaſſed about with walls, and in the yeere 1530. it was more enlarged, and much fortifyed. And is at this day one of the greateſt Cities of Germanie, ſo that there are in it 528 Streets and Lanes, 11. ſtone-bridges, which ioyne both parts of the towne together. The river, which runneth through the Citie, driues 68. water milles, They haue alſoo 116. Wells, 12. Fountaines, 6. great Gates, and 13. common Bathing-ſtoues: of this City Fabritius ſpeaketh on thiswiſe,

Qua non Germanis eſt ulla celebrior oris.
Seu leges ſpectes, & Sancti Iura Senatus,
Et ſic unanimi viventes fœdere cives;
Sive tot artifices claros aquandaque priſcis
Ingenia, & varios Iuvenumque Senumque Labores.

The Vniverſitie.

In the yeere 1575. thoſe of Nurenbergh erected at Altorf a Vniverſitie, and gott them Profeſſours, or Maſtres of the chaire in divers languages, of Philoſophie, and other faculties, and gaue them yeerely great maintenance. This witneſſeth an inſcription at Altorf, which is this:

For the teaching and inſtruction of youth in Chriſtian Religion, both in the Greeke, and Latine tongues, and in every good art, and ſcience, the Magiſtrates of Nurenbergh haue founded this noble Schoole. and celebrated it vvith ſolemnitie in the yeere of our Lord 1579. upon S. Peter and

S. Pauls day, being then as Curatours, and Overſeers thereof, Georgius Volkamfrus, Philippus Genderus, Hieronymus Baumgardnerus, and as the Cities Superintendent Balthazar Baumgartnerus.

Beſides this Metropolitan Citie, this Province hath in it many more townes, and Cloiſtres, namely Ambergh, walled Anno 1300, Auvverbach, Sultzbach, the Cloiſter of Caſtel, where in former times the Nortgovian Princes kept their Court, Eger, Beyerut, Eyſter, Napurgh, Neuvvenſtadt, Ruvvenhelm, Kemnat, Kruſen, Greuvvervvert, the Caſtle of Gaynum, which taketh the name from howling and crying, becauſe it is accounted a moſt dangerous paſſage along the Donauw, which place they alſo call Strudel, where all paſſagers, which come downe the Donaw, muſt paſſe by. Alſo Eyſchenbach, VVeiden, Pernavv, Reiſteyn, Herſpruch, Rurbach, Neumarckt, Turſenrut, Elbogen, Cham, Schonſee, Kunſpergh, Stauff, and others almoſt all of them belonging to the Palatines. One of the foure Landgraues heretefore created by the Emperours, hath alſo his Lordſhip and commaund in the Northgow, to wit, the Landgraue of Luchtenbergh, ſo called from the Caſtle of Luchtenberch, though the ſame Princes hold their reſidence in the towne of Pfreimt, and ſometimes at Grunsfeld. This Landgraviate is not riſen to that power and ſtate, as the other three Landgraviates, which in proceſſe of time are groune mightie, eſpecially, the Landgraviate of Heſſen, as Munſter writheth.

Ambergh.

The Rivers. The Rivers which water this Countrie are the Egra, Nabus, Vilſus, Regus, Pegnitz, Schvvartzach, Sultza, Altimalis, Laberus, Lautra, and ſome others. Touching the Regnitz, Rednitz, or Rego hiſtories make mention, while Carolus Magnus kept his Court at Regenſpurch, there were ſome, which gaue him to underſtand, that they might fare with Ships out of the Donavv into the Rhyne, by cutting a paſſage through the Land, which lieth betweene the rivers of Regnitz and Altmul (whereof the one runneth into the Donavv and the other into the Rhyne.) This was put in practiſe by Carolus Magnus, & a great many Diggers appointed for this worke, which laboured the whole harveſt upon it. The ditch was drawne out, and ſhould haue beene 2000. paces long, and 300. foote broad; but this worke was given over, becauſe of the continuall raine, and alſo the mooriſh grounds thereabouts hindered it, for all that the caſt up by day, fell in againe by night. Neere unto the towne of VVeiſſenbergh, there are yet to be ſeene ſome remainders of this loſt labour. I cannot conceale alſo, that almoſt upon all the rivers, and waters there are many watermilles, in which Yron is forged, turning about great Bellowes, and Hammers, ſo that the ſmiths haue nothing to doe, but onely to laye the yron upon the Anvills.

In this Countrie lyeth the mount Fichtelbergh, being 6. Germane miles about, out of it there ſprings foure braue rivers, namely, the Mayn, the Nabus, the Sala, and the Egra, which croſſe wiſe part one from an other, and run towards the foure Corners of the world. Out of this mountaine there are digged diverſe mettals, and alſo Azure, or the beſt Sky-coloured blewe: upon the top of this mountaine they find tinne, and many holes, and pitts out of which mettall in former times hath beene digged. Fichtelbergh.

This Countrie hath here and there beene almoſt couvered with parcells of the Svvart-vvood, whereof the chiefeſt are called the VVeyſſenburger-vvood, the Bohemer-vvood, and others repreſented in this map. Foreſts & woods.

Aſſoone as this Countrie had receiveth the Chriſtian faith, there were preſcribed unto them ſome lawes, and manners of living, as touching the freedome of the churches, for burning of churches, for ſuch as tooke ſainctuaire in the churches, for thoſe that murthered any of the clergie, for paying of tenths, for puniſhing of ſeditious perſons, for Marſhall lawes, for divorcements, for marriages, for weemens affaires, for theeverie, for field-rights, for borrowing and lending, for inheritance, for ſelling and buying: The Bavarians for ſome hundred yeeres were bound by theſe lawes, whereof ſome of them are yet to this daye in vigour. As a ſurplus, I will here cite ſome of theſe lawes:

Namely to the end a iudge might iudge vvith equitie, the booke of the lavves vvas laid before him, by vvhich all cauſes might be decided.

A iudge ſhall reſpect no perſon, nor receiue any bribes, but having pronounced a juſt ſentence, he may take the ninth part of the agreement: if he doth to the contrarie, he ſhall reſtore tvvo fould, that vvich he had received after ſentence vvas pronounced, and beſides that, to paye fortie ſhillings as a fine.

VVhoſoever ſhall haue ſould any thing, vvhen he is payd, he ſhall ratifie the ſaile thereof by letters, and vvith tvvo, three, or more vvitneſſes.

A bargaine vvhich is not made vvith, a free conſent, ſhall be of none effect.

He that deſireth to knowe more of theſe lawes, let him read Iohannes Bohemus Aubanus, in his booke of the lawes and manners of all nations.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE LOWER PALATINATE.

The name & vvhence it is derived.

SOME thinke this noble part of Germanie, called Palatinatus Rheni, the Paltz, or the Palatinate, was so named from a Palace in the Rhene, from an institution of Charles the Great, or from the Palatium of Trier. But Beatus Rhenanus seeketh to proue out of Ammianus Marcellinus, that it was so called from the Country of Palas; because (saith he) Ammianus vvriteth, that a bridg being made over the Rhene by Mentz, the Romane legions passing over it, came, and quartered in the Countrie of Capellatiana, vvhich tooke the name from Palas. In an other place he saith, vvhen the Romans vvere come into the Countrie of Capellatium, or Palas, they encamped there vvhere the Marke-stones part the frontiers of the Romans, from the Burgonians. And therefore Rhenanus addeth further, that hence one may gather, that the Count Palatines tooke not their name from the Emperours Palatium, or the Palace in the Rhene; but rather from the ancient denominatiō of their Countrie. Howsoeuer, most men agree in this, that it came from Palatium, or from an office of dignity and State, especially in the Emperours courts, called in Latine heretofore Palatinorum Præfecti, Rulers of Princes Palaces, which the French termed Majores Domus, vel palatii, Majours, or high-stuards of the house, who allwaies accompained the Princes person.

Ancient Inhabitants.

The ancient Inhabitants of the Palatinate, were formerly the Intueri, Nemetes, and Vangiones. The Intueri Peucerus placeth in the Palatinate about Heydelbergh, which Countrie (as Marcellinus saith before) was called Capellatium, or Palas. Ptolomies Nemetes were those, which inhabited along the Rhene by Mentz, Straesburch, VVormes, and Spier, which towne was called by Æthicus Augusta Nemetum. The Vangiones dwelt in that part, which is now the Bishoprick of VVormes, as Rhenanus and Lichtenauus witnesse. But Birchamerus saith the contrarie, that the Vangiones were those of Spier, and the Nemetes those of VVormes. Irenicus for the confirmation thereof, addeth this reason, that it was Ptolomies manner in his description of countries, alwaies to beg inne from the South, & so to goe to the Northward: yet for all this, Sigibertus Gemblacensis (who wrote 500. yeeres agoe) called VVormes a towne of the Vangiones: and Iohannes Heroldus prouveth out of an ancient inscription, that VVormes was named Vangionum Speculum, which words Lazius interpreteth to be Vaingen.

Bavaria & the Palatinate once a Kingdome.

The Palatinate, and Bavaria (as Munster witnesseth) was once a Kingdome; and continued so from the time of Aldigerius Anno 459. unto Tacilo Anno 789. who was then subdued by Charles the Great.

Bounds.

The Palatinate is bounded on the West with Zvveibrucken: on the East with Franconia, and the Dutchie of VVirtembergh: on the North partly with the Meyn, and partly with the Otho-VVood, and on the South with Alsatia It contayneth in length from Coub to Germersheim North and South 72. miles in breath, and from Svveibrucken to Lauden, East & West 96. miles.

Greatnesse.

This goodly Countrie for delight, sweetnesse of aire, fertility of Soile, and the abundance of all things necessarie for the use of man, will giue place to no part of Germanie. For the Hills, and pleasant bankes of the Rhene, about VVormes, Heydelbergh, Nieuvvstadt, Crutzenach, Openheim, and Pfettersheym, are full of Vineyardes, loaden with Wines & Clusters of Grapes, which make such excellent Rhenish wine, that for the cooleneſse and delicateneſse thereof, may be compared to the Greekish wines. The Fields also in Summer are couered with goodly crops of Wheat, Barlie, Rhye, and other graine. Their Orchards beare all kind of Fruit. The Countrie is full of Gentlemens houses, and pleasant farmes. The VVoods and Mountaines are stored with Fallow, Roe, and Red-Deere, which are taken in toiles & a hunting: that Venaison was very plentifull in the Prince-Electours Court. In the woods also are many Goates, which by feeding and chawing vpon mast are rightly called Capra à Carpendo, & grow fatter there, thē in pastures. About Heydelbergh are many Herons, and Heronies, which choose the higheſt trees to build upon, besides Phesants, Partridges, Quales, and other birds for hawking.

Temperature, pleasantneſse & fertilnes.

Heronies.

In the Palatinate there are 48. townes, whereof Heidelbergh is the Metropolis, and chiefe seate, where the Count Palatines keepe their Court, in a strong and fine Castle seated upon a hill. Some are of the opinion, that the name of this Citie came from the Germane word Heyden, and so should be called Heathenborrough. Others deriue it from Heydelbeer, a Heathberrie. Melissus calleth it Myrtilletum that is Myrtilberrie, others againe affirme it ought not to be called Heidelbergh, but rather Edelbergh, or Mount-noble.

Townes. Heidelbergh.

This Citie lieth upon the ridge, and opening of the hills, having the Neccar running under it. Rupertus the second Count Palatine, Father to Rupert the Emperour, Anno 1346. erected here an Vniversity; and that it might be adorned with famous and learned men, sent to Paris for Marsilius of Vtrecht, and divers others: so that this Vniversitie grew in processe of time so famous, that it bred many excellent Schollars, and Devines. Among the rest Rodolphus Agricola, Iohannes Dalburgius, Iohannes Verdungus, Guilielmus Xylander, Thomas Erastus, and Zacharias Vrsinus, that rare Devine. There was also before the last troubles a famous Librarie.

Famous Men.

VViecks.

The whole Palatinate is devided into foure great hundreds, or VViecks, as Heydelberke-vvieck, Alseyvvieck, Nevvstad-vvieck, and Moszbach-vvieck, so called after the names of these townes. Baccharach, quasi Bacchi ara (some say tooke the name from Bacchus, the Heathens God of VVines) where groweth most courious wines. Some yeares in a drv Summer, when the river is low, there is seene a great stone in the Rhene, which the Inhabitants say is a signe of a good Vintage. Frankendale was first built, & peopled (as they say) by the Netherlanders, which fled thither in the time of the bloodie persecution of Duke D'Alba, & to whome the Prince-Electour gaue this towne for a refuge; which is now well fortified. Crutznach is likewise strong. Bretten is also a prettie towne, lying upon the river Saltza, where that famous Devine Philip Melanthon was borne. Laudenbergh, called by Peucerus Castra Latina, the one halfe of it was morgaged to the Emperour Rupert, and the other halfe belongeth to the Bishop of VVormes. Also Anno 1347. this Prince purchaſed of Sigifridus of Stralnbergh, the towne and Caſtle of Stralnbergh. And in the yeere 1344, VVeinſheim alſo was giuen him by Arbitratours, which before was in the poſſeſſion of the Biſhop of Mentz. The other townes are Caub, Gelhuſen, Sintzen, Luden upon the Tauber, Oppenheim, Keyſerſ-Lauterne, Ingelheim, Lovveſtein, Bruſſels in Brurien, alſo Vdenheim, which is now made a ſtronge towne, and invincible.

Riveri. The principale rivers, which water the Palatinate are the ſwift Rhene, the Neccar, that runneth throw the midſt of it, and at Manheym, falleth into the Rhene. This river was anciently called the Nicer. It abounds in delicate fiſhe, eſpecially Barbles. They bring downe the Neccar ſtreame great floates of timber into the Rhene, and from thence by floats and ſhipping fall downe the ſtreame into the Low countries. The leſſer rivers are the Tauber, the Luther, and the Iaxtus.

VVoods. The chiefe Wood (though there be many) is the Ottenvvood, where there is excellent hunting, which is a part of the Hyrcinia Sylva, or Svvartvvood, the bredth of it reacheth from the Neccar to the Meyne, and the length from the Bergh-ſtrate to the river Tauber.

There are in the Palatinate many fine Churches, and heretofore divers braue Cloiſters, whereof Lauriſſenſe Monaſterium, now called the Lorſch, was the chiefeſt. Some ſay this Cloiſter was founded by Charles the Great, others by King Pipin of France. There was heretofore a famous Bibliotheca in it, whereof Munſter ſpeaketh thus: In all Germanie (ſaith he) there is not a more ancient Librarie, then in this Monaſterie; for I haue ſeene a booke in it, vvhich vvas vvritten vvith Virgills ovvne hand. Alſo the laſt bookes of Ammianus were found here, which of late are come to the preſſe, and printed in a faire letter. But the beſt bookes Iohannes Dalburgius tooke out of it, and carryed them from thence to Ladenburgh.

An ancient Librarie.

Having novv deſcribed this Countrie, it reſteth that ſomevvhat be ſpoken of the Princes thereof. Sure it is, that the Palatines are come of a moſt ancient, noble, and high deſcent, and are alied to the greateſt families, and Royall Stemms of Chriſtendome. For Henry the Firſt Count Palatine, vvas deſcended from Charlemaigne, and alſo from the Lady Sophia ſiſter to Ladiſlaus the Second King of Poland, and Bohemia; from vvhoſe progenie alſo ſprang the Emperour Lodovicus Bavarus, and Rupertus Count Palatine, being of one houſe. For vvhich cauſe, the Palſgrave in the vacancie of the Emperour, is Gouvernour of the VVeſterne parts of Germanie, hath povver to alienate, and diſpoſe of Offices, to take fealtie, and homage of the ſubjects: yea, vvhich is more, to ſit in the Imperiall Courts, and to giue judgment as the Emperour himſelf, and looke vvhatſoeuer the Count Palatines ſhall enact, during the Interregnum of the Empire, the nevv elected Emperour is bound to confirme it. By office & dignity, he is the firſt temporall Prince Elector, and therefore taketh place of the Duke of Saxonie, and the Marqueſſe of Brandenburgh, the other tvvo temporal Electours. He is alſo Lord Sevver of the Empire.

Frederick the Fifth of famous memorie, Count Palatine, Prince Electour, and after vvard for his manifold vertues and religious life vvas crovvned King of Bohemia 1619. and (Anno 1613.) eſpouſed the Lady Elizabeth, vvho vvas alſo crovvned Queene of Bohemia, the onely daughter of King Ieames of bleſſed memorie, and Royall ſiſter to his ſacred Majeſtie our dread Souveraigne, Charles King of Great Britanie, France, and Ireland, and Niece to Chriſtian the fourth King of Denmarke, Norvvay, &c. from vvhome is iſſued, the moſt noble, and illuſtrious, Charles the young Count Palatinate, & Prince Electour that novv is, vvhome all true-hearted Britans vviſh to ſee reſtored to, and ſetled in his patrimoniall and ancient inheritance.

Beſides, vvhat braue Captaines they haue bene, and vvhat honour they haue gained in the vvarrs, I vvill onely inſtance one exemple, out of Sleydans Chronicles and the Turkiſh hiſtorie. For vvhen Solyman the Magnificent, the Turkiſh Emperour (in the beginning of September 1529.) had beſieged Vienna in Auſtria, the Bulvvarke of Chriſtendome, & had overſpread the earth round about it, vvith the multitude of his Turks, and Ianizaries, his great ordinance for batterie failing him, vvhich by the valour, and happie exploit of Wolfganck Hord, comming up in his ſhipping, vvere ſunck in the Danubius, he vvas then driven to goe an other vvay to vvorke, vvhich vvas by undermining, to blovve up the vvalls of the Citie, and ſo vvith the violence of povvder, to make his breaches, vvhich coſt him full deare, & the loſſe of eight thouſand men before he could compaſſe it. vvith vvhat courage, magnanimity, and reſolution, did Philip the Palſgraue, and the reſt of the noble and vvarrlike Germans, defend the breaches, and repulſe the furie of the Turkes, ſtriving to enter, appeared herein to his and their eternall fame, that they ſtopped the breaches, filled the ditches, and couvred the ground round about the vvalls, vvith the dead Karkeiſes of Infidells, in ſo much, that Solyman, after many fearefull attempts, and three deſperate aſſaults, loſt in the ſpace of a month aboue eighty thouſand men, and diſpairing to take this City, hearing that King Ferdinand, and Duke Fredericke of Bavaria, and Count Palatine, vvho vvas Generall of the Chriſtian armie, vvere a coming to relieue it, and to giue him battaile, for a fare vvell maſſacring a number of innocent Chriſtian captiues, men, vvomen, and children, vvhich vvere found the next day to lye vveltring in their ovvne bloud, fearing a ſecond blovve, made ſuch haſt to pack avvaye, that in fiue dayes he marched vvith his vvhole army to Buda, vvhich is aboue a hundred Engliſh miles from Vienna.

This Philip vvas the nephevv of Fredericke Duke of Bavaria & Count Palatine, then Generall of the Chriſtian armie, and chiefe Commandour in Vienna.

The ſixth circle of the Romiſh Empire conſiſteth in the territories of theſe foure Prince-Electours. Namely, the Count Palatines. And theſe three Spirituall Lords, the Arch-Biſhop of Mentz, Collen, Trier, and Gelenhauſen. The Princes, and Lords temporall are, firſt the Count Palatine and his Seigneuries. The Earles of Naſſavv, and Beilſtain. The Lords of Rifferſcheyde & Rheineck. The Lord of Coblents, of the Teutch order. The Abbot of S. Maximie by Trier. The Priour of Sleſx, and the Lord of Nether Eiſenburgh. And thus much for the Lower Palatinate, & the Prince thereof

The ſixth circle of the Empire.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE RHENE-STREAME.

The Rhenes Head-springs.

THe Rhene next unto the Danubius, is not onely accounted one of the moſt famous rivers of Almanie; but alſo of all Europe. It ariſes out of two fountaines, or ſprings in the high Mountaine of Adula in Helvetia, as Ptolomie, & ſome other ancient Authors relate, which now the Moderne writers call Voghel. Though indeed it is more properly named S. Godarts Mount; in regard of a ſmall Chappell, built upon the top of this Mountaine, and conſecrated to this Saint, & running a long Courſe, through Germanie & Belgium ſome 800. miles; at laſt ſaluteth the Germaine Ocean. Out of this mountaine alſo ariſes the headſprings of the Rhoane, the Teſin, & the Rus, ſo that within the ſpace of foure, or fiue Germane miles, which is admirable, foure famous rivers runne croſwiſe, ſeparating one from an other, as the foure principall winds of the world doe.

The Rhene beginnes to be navigable at Chur.

Its Courſe.

The Rhene guſhing out of theſe two fountaines, or ſprings, runneth Eaſtward, which joyning their two armes together, make one river and haue one name. About foure miles aboue the Epiſcopall City of Chur, there it beginneth to be navigable. Then runne together with a rapid ſtreame towards the left hand, winding as a Bowe, or in the forme of a halfe Moone, & ſo falling downe from the high Mountaines into the midſt of a large plaine towards the North, by the lake of Conſtance and Celeſe, and from thence turning to the Weſt, cometh to Rinfelden, & ſo paſſing through Baſill taking his courſe againe towards the North ſaluteth Briſack, and runs forward on in his courſe til he comes within an arrow-ſhott of Strasbourg. Then having traverſed through many Countries, Townes, and Bourroughs, receiving by the way in diverſe places, many great and ſmall rivers coming out of France, and Germanie, takes his courſe with a ſwift & a violent current to Spier, VVormes, and Mentz: where returning againe to the weſtward, runneth to Bingen, & then winding towards the Northweſt paſſing by Coblentz, Bon, & Collen fals downe to Lobick in Gelderland, whither it ſtreameth downeward without any ſeparation. At Lobick it divideth it ſelf into two braunches, the larger on the left hand falling downe Weſtward at Scenckſconce, taketh there the name of the Whaell running downe to Nieumegen, Thiel, the Vorne, & Saint Andreas Sconce, where it ſaluteth the Maze, and forward to Bommel, and to Hervverden ſtill retayning this name, the one branch being a great diſtant from the other, at the Fort and Caſtle of Lovenſteine meeting with the Maze, looſeth there the name of the Whaell.

Druſus Nero makes a Channell or a ditch to tranſport the Romane Army out of the Rhene into the Iſel.

The Leſſer branch runneth right out to the Northweſt from Schenck-ſconce to Arnhem, where Druſus Nero in the time of the Emperour Auguſtus (ſeing that from this place to the river Iſel, it was but two Germaine miles) digged a wonderful large & deepe ditch throug this ground, which he called Foſſa Druſiana, that is, Druſus his ditch, which he brought into the Iſel, to the end, that by this meanes, and the helpe of the Channell, he might with the more facility and ſafety tranſport the Romane Army, out of the Rhene into the Southerne Sea, otherwiſe called the VVilde Sea, againſt the Saxons, Friſes, Durings, and other nations of Northerne Germanie. Therefore Sueton ſaith, that Druſus was the firſt Romane Captaine, that euer ſailed upon the tempeſtuous Northerne Seas. Since which time this Channell, becauſe the waters grew dry, and diminiſhed, this right arme tooke its courſe Weſtward to Arnhem, and ſo glyding downe to VVageninghen and Rhenen, and from Rhene VVyck fell into the Sea, which continued ſo longe till by ſtormes and tempeſts of the Sea its entrance into it was ſtopt, by the great heapes of Sand, which was caſt up, and ſo was reduced to the litle river the Leck: this hapned in the yeare of Chriſt, as this Dutch verſe reciteth.

Druſus vvas the firſt Captaine that paſſed that vvay into the Northern ſeas.

De Mont des RhIIns VerſtopT door't Sant,
VIngh aen doen hII de Leck eerſt Vant.

It changeth his courſe & name.

As it is reported by reaſon of theſe Sand-bankes, the courſe of the Rhene being dam'd up changed its current and fell downe by Vtrecht, VVoerden, and Leyden unto the Sea, and looſing withall the name was called the Leck, and ſo with this new name runnes downe to VVyck, to Culenburg, Viana, Nevvport and Schoonhoven, falling at laſt into the Mervve, neere unto the village of Crimpen. Ancient writers agree all in this, that the Meuſe, having receiued the greateſt part of the Rhene into it, retayning its owne name at the Brill in Holland with a large mouth falleth into the Sea, which opinion is held the moſt certaine almoſt of al our Moderne Authours, as one maye plainely ſee in their Geographike deſcription of this Countrie, and is ſo held by the inhabitants of theſe places: in ſo much that that part which is neereſt unto Holland is ordinarily called into the language of the Countrie Maeſland.

The Meuſe or Maze taketh avvay part of the Rhene.

Bridges ouer the Rhene.

The Rhene hath alwaies had till nowe, twelue bridges made ouer it, to paſſe out of one Countrie into an other. The firſt was at Reynneck, & the laſt at Strasbourg. Iulius Cæſar at two ſeverall times, cauſed a very great bridge to be made ouer this broade, deepe, and ſwift ſtreame. The firſt was in the Countrie, & Archbiſhopricke of Trier, where the Rhene and the Moſell (with the Meuſe) meete together as we will ſhew hereafter. For without all queſtion, the battaile of the Romans was fought in this place againſt that great multitude of foure hundred thouſant Almaines on that ſide of the Rhene which Cleve lies on, where the Romans in perſueing their victorie, an infinite number of the Almaines were drownd in this river, but not in that place, where the Rhene & the Meuſe meete together, which is much lower beingin Gelderland, as Cæſar relateth: but I beleeue verely that it was rather a fault eſcaped by the Printer. For it is well knowne, and one maye eaſely perceiue by the Authours text, and by the Maps of this Countrie, that the ſaid Almaines ſome months before had paſſed ouer the Rhene, not farre from the ſea-ſide, and having taken in a great part of the Countrie, marched higher, and being at laſt met withall by Cæſar he gaue them battle, within the Countrie of Trier, by the Rhene ſide ouer againſt the Vbians, who dwelt as euery one knowes, not farre from Collen, whoſe Countrie lay on both ſides of the riuer, farre diſtant from the cõjonction of the Rhene & the Meuſe, whereas the Rhene now is ſeparated into many branches. Cæſar cauſed his ſecond bridge to be made ouer the Rhene a litle higher then his firſt: ſo that theſe bridges were made

The Moſell, or the Meuſe haue their confluence one into an other.

Almaines drovvnd in the Rhene.

A Bridg built by I. Cæsar where the Mosell fals into the Rhene.

ouer the Rhene, neere unto that place, where the Mosell falleth into the Rhene, which was, where now the towne of Coblens lieth, called in Latin Confluentia: whereby one may easely beleeue with good reason, that there was a fault escaped in the impression by mistaking a sillable in the text of Mosa and Mosella, then to thinke that so good an Authour as Cæsar was, should twise committ an errour in one and the same discourse.

Two Entrance or out lets of the Rhene into the Sea, some say three.

Among ancient Autheurs aswell Poets, as Historiographers, is not showne unto us, that the Rhene had but two outlets (as some say) into the Sea, by which it discharged it selfe: but touching this dispute, we referre our selues to that which Ptolomie saith, who lived in that time, when the Rhene had three outlets, to wit, one Westward, an other in the midst, and the third Eastward. Likewise Cæsar sheweth us, that the same approching towards the Sea, it made many small Iles, & fell into the Sea by many branches. The Rhene then falling by the side of Emmerick downe to the Tolehouse separateth it self into two branches at Schenckschonse, as is said, and than on the right hand runneth downe to Arnhem, from thence to Rhene: then to VVyck te Deurstadt, where the Rhene looseth his name, & is called the Leck, because it distilleth as a veine out of the river, which in time encreaseth greater & strõger, after it hath almost made dry the place frõ whẽce it tooke its birth, when as it was Anno 860. by the violence of Tempests of the Sea, forced to retyre it selfe by Culenbourg, Viana, and Schoonhoven, & through the Mervve (as is said) into the Meuse: so the course of the Rhene being accustomed to this way (which happned in the time of Hunger the eleuenth Bishop of Vtrecht from Willebrood the first, till then it tooke its course by Vtrecht) which constrained those of Vtrecht to drawe a braunch out of the Leck for the bringing home of their commodities from aboue out of the Rhene, & tooke its originall in the Hollandish Isel, whence Iselsteyn beareth the name. The Rhene then running through the Leck into the said Isel, passing by Montfort, Oudevvater, and Der Goude, one part of it fals into the Meuse at Iselmont. And though the ancient course of the Rhene runs not now by Vtrecht, yet the place remaineth, where it had wont to passe, retayning still its ancient name, which being not able to keepe its course any longer by Vtrecht; by reason of the sandie banks which choaked the passage of it into the Sea, and being not able to force his passage was driven to finde out some other way, to disgorge it selfe; and trying also at Vtrecht percing his course by VVesep and Muyde in the Countrie of Goyland at last gott into the Southerne Sea; though it doe not communicate its name unto it, but kept it to VVoerden, by which heretofore it tooke his course; having left water enough to passe from thence to Leyden, where neere thereabouts it separateth it self into three small branches, to disburden it selfe into Leyden Meere, which is a very large, a great and a dammageable Meere because in stormes it beats, and eats into the Land euery day. In the midst whereof there was heretofore an Iland, which was so great about 150. yeares agoe, that many householders dwelt in it, but now there are not aboue two households in it, who had wont to goe to Church in Wagons to Hillegom, hauing had in former times but a litle Ditch, ouer which they layd à planke, which now is become a great Meere, which the parts of the Rhene hath made greater called the Marne, Zyll, & Douft, from which also the citty of Leyden named heretofore Lugdunum, hath bene accommodated with many Veines and Riverets, and Catvvyck up the Rhene ones famous by the same river, which is yet to be seene, and the passage in the midst remaines still stopt (not with standing there haue ben many trials made to opẽ it, but could never effect it) goes no farther shewing onely the antiquity of it, that it cãnot finde its old passage, which is stopt by the Downes which had wont to grace the Ile of Canivate falling by Rhynsburg towards Voorhout into a great Meere: from thence by the Earles house of pleasure to Vogelsanck, Bervverlt, & Aelbrechsberg, where the Earle had wont to keepe his Court (till that VVilliam King of the Romans removed it to an other place) having many Castles, and Gentlemens houses about it, as Beverwyck, Hemerce, Suthdorp, Castricum, and Limbes, which being ruined the Villages retaine yet their names. Thẽ Poelenburg, Pelanen, Velsẽ, Bredenroede where the traces of the Rhene are seene yet in a Poole, and are called the Rhyne ditches: being propable that they were made for the bringing of abundance of materials to those buildings, which was built upon the arme of the Rhene, where a house was erected & where the King of Denemarke receiued his tribute, when the Frizons were subject to him, whereof Saxo Grammaticus speaketh, and tooke its course into the great Meere by Reyneckum, lying within the Lordship of Egmont, and then passing through Veronne fell into the Sea; where there was a good hauen in the daies of Iustinian the Emperour Anno 698. When as Bishope VVilride arrived in this place, with VVillibrood, & Alderine, and eight others to accompanie them, sent thither out of England from Egbard Archbishop of Yorke for to preach the Gospell unto them in the time of the raigne of Alfrid the Catholique King of England: unto the same place also came S. Vrsula with eleuen thousand Virgins, as the Chronicles and Annals of Collen relate, and at this port the Normans landed upon this Coast to the ruine of the Countrie. Those which are desirous to informe themselues further herein, as also of the other townes, which are, and haue bin built upon this riuer, may see those Annals, which make mention thereof.

THE DESCRIPTION OF NETHER ALSATIA.

The originall of the name.

ALSASIA, Elſaſz or Alſace, in Engliſh, is ſo called, becauſe it is an Edel ſaſz, that is, a noble ſite, or habitation: but others ſay, that it taketh the name from the river Illa, as if one ſhould ſaye, Il-ſaſz, or Alſaſz. Indeed it is a very fine Countrie, ſo that there is no happier, or better land, can be found, along the whole tract of the Rhyne. This Nether Alſace is ſeparated Eaſtward by the Rhyne from Svviſſerland, on the Weſtſide lyeth Loraine, where the mount Voſagus, parteth Loraine from Germanie: Southward, it boundeth upon a part of Svviſſerland and Burgundie, and Northward upon the Dukedome of VVirtembergh.

The bounds.

The greatnes of the Country.

It is nine Germane miles long, and from the Rhyne to the Alpes, it is three dutch miles broad, ſauing about Hagenavv, where there is more plaine & where the mountaines litle by litle leaue the Rhyne.

The fruitfullneſſe.

The fertilitie of this ſmall nooke of land, eſpecially in Wine and Corne, is ſo great, that it is not onely able, and ſufficient to feede the multitude of the Inhabitants in it; but alſo their Neighbours, and ſome Countries of Germanie, which lie a farre of from it: which made Iacobus VVimphelingius, in his Epitome rerũ Germanicarum, not without cauſe, to call it the Storehouſe, and Nouriſher of Germanie: for the noble Wine, which it yeeldeth, is tranſported from thence by Waggons, and Schipping into Suevia, Svviſſerland, Bavaria, Loraine, yea ſometimes into the Lovv Countries, and England. In the Suntgovv there groweth great ſtore of Corne, yea throughout all the Vale of Alſace, as farre as Straesburgh, there is ſuch abundance of graine, that it feedeth thoſe that dwell upon the Mountaines of Loraine, the Burgonians, and a good part of Svviſſerland. Vpon the hills, and mountaines there groweth noble, and rich grapes, which make moſt curious Wines, and in the plaines not onely Corne, but alſo all kind of fruitfull trees. The hills alſo are couvered with whole woods of Cheſtnut-trees, in the bowells whereof likewiſe, there are rich Silver, Copper, and Lead-mines, chiefly about Leberthal, alſo the fatt and well taſted cheeſe made in Munſterhal, witneſſe ſufficiently the goodneſſe of the paſtures, which are there.

Mines.

Abundance of Cattaille.

Beſides the great number of Oxen, and Cowes, there are alſo many Wilde Horſes, Lynces, Beares, Martins, Red-and fallow Deere, Roe-deere, with abundance of other game.

This Countrie in ancient time was under the King of France, and a part of the Kingdome of Auſtratia; but as hiſtorie ſheweth, it was 500. yeeres before under the power of the Romans. At firſt it was a Dukedome and in the yeere 684. it was given by King Hildericus, to his ſonne in lawe Etticon with the ſame title, he hauing before beene Gouverneur of it. After Etticon, ſucceedeth his ſonne Adelprechtus, who being ſlaine with an arrowe, left two ſonnes behinde him Linfridus, and Eberhardus, who ruled over Alſace: Afterward their iſſue was chaſed out of Alſace, by Carolus Martellus, Palatine, and Lord high ſtuard of France. But in the time of the Emperour Otho the firſt: the Earles of Kyburgh being alyed to the Emperour, obtained the poſſeſſion of Alſace: ſome will ſay, that they were then made Land-Graves of Alſace, others maintaine, that Alſace was firſt made two Land-Graviats by the Emperour Otho the third, and that the Vpper Land-Graviate, which conteyneth the towne of Einſheym, and the adiacent places, fell to the Earles Habſburgh, the other was by the Earles of Oetingen (to whome it fell after the deceaſe of Henricus Land-Grave of Nether Alſace, wo dyed without iſſue) ſould to the Biſhop of Straeſburgh, under whome it is to this day.

This ſmall Countrie is ſo fit for mans uſe, that there are in it 46. townes great and ſmall, all of them encompaſſed with walles: 50. Caſtles ſituated upon hills, & in the Vales beſides a great number of Villages, and Farmes.

Townes.

This Land is divided into the Vpper and Nether Alſace, both theſe parts in ancient times were inhabited by the Triboci: in this preſent map the Nether Alſace is deſcribed unto you, and the Vpper Alſace in the map following.

The diviſion.

The Capitall citie of Nether Alſace is Straeſburgh, called by the moderne Writers Argentina, by Marcellinus Sextus Aurelius, and by Ptolomee Argentoratum. Regino, who wrot about 500. yeeres agoe, nameth it Straſburgum. Robertus Conſtantinus thinketh this citie to be the ſame, which by Aurelius Victor and Diaconus in Marcellinus is called Argentaria where 30000 Almaines, ſhould haue bene overtrowne by the Emperour Gratianus. In regard of the number, and breath of the Streets, this Citie at this day is commonly called Straeſburgh. This Citie ſtandeth in a fruitfull ſoile, which yeeldeth great ſtore of Wine, and Corne. Munſter writeth that in this towne there dwell ſome hundreds of Gardeners, which make yeerely great gaine, and profit of Cabidge, Garlick, Radiſhes, Turneps, Navew gentle, garden Poppie and ſuch like, which growe there in abundance. Into this citie commeth an Arme of the Rhyne, beſides three other rivers, whoſe waters runne by channals through the ſtreets, as in Venice. The gouvernment, Schole, and magnificent Church in this citie maketh it at this day very famous.

Straeſburg.

To the Weſtward lye the Forts mentioned much by Antoninus, which he nameth Tabernas: Simlerus calleth them Zabern, and Frodoardus Zabrena: Ortelius holdeth them to be the tres Tabernas, ſpoken of by Ammianus: whereof Auſonius alſo maketh mention, when he ſaith Rigualque perenni fonte Tabernas. Theſe Taberna where heretofore ſome Romaine forts, made to that end, to hinder the incurſions, and inroads of the Almaines in France. This is now the Court and reſidence of the Biſhop of Straeſburgh, theſe Fortreſſes of the Almaines being ſlighted, were made up againe by the Emperour Iulianus according to the teſtimonie of Ammianus.

Zabern.

This Countrie is everie where very fruitfull in Corne, and Wine, yea and all things elſe needefull for the ſuſtentation of man. Not farre from Zabern lieth a ſmall towne and a Cloiſter called Maurſmunſter, and not wide from Brocomagus ſtandeth an other Cloiſter, nameth Steffansfelt or Stechfelt.

Hagenaw. More Nortward ſtandeth the towne of Hagenavv, which in the yeere 1164. was encompaſſed with a wall by Fredericus Barbaroſa, for before, it was but a Village with a Caſtle belonging to it, or a Lodge, where the princes of the countrie lay, when they went a hunting. The ground about the walles is Sandie, but the fruitfull fieldes lying a litle further of from the towne make amends for this barenneſſe. A litle further alſo lieth the towne of VVeiſſenburgh, like a white Caſtle, being a fine, neate towne, ſituated at the foote of the mount Vogaſus. It is ſited in a pleaſant place, with many lowe hills on all ſides, and towards the Weſt, in regard of the fine woods, and the ſundrie ſorts of trees. The ſoile about it, is very fruitfull, and the towne by nature, and by art of man is made very ſtrong round about. The river Lutra runneth through the midſt of it, which river hath his ſpringhead about 7000. paces aboue the towne, and runneth betweene the hills into the towne, and ſo out againe through the Walles with a very ſwift ſtreame, and a narrow channell ſome 2000. paces long, and diſchargeth himſelfe at laſt into the Rhyne: this place is ſo ancient, that no Writters can finde out the Originall of it.

Vpon the river of Breuſch lieth alſo a ſmall towne called Haſla, which Dagobertus, King of France, gaue unto Florentius Scotus with the adiacent lands, becauſe he by his prayers, had holpen the ſaid Kings daughter Rathilda, of her blindeneſſe and deafeneſſe: in which place this Florentinus built afterwards a Cloiſter.

Bennefelt is a very ſtrong Towne both by nature, and fortification, & very famous for the laſt Siege.

The Rivers. The chiefeſt rivers of this Countrie, beſides the Rhyne are the Kintzgus, upon which a great quantitie of floates of timber come downe; alſo the Ill, Breuſch, Sorn, Mater & Lauter: but the Ill is the chiefeſt river in Alſace, which traverſeth through the whole Countrie; he taketh his ſpringhead in the Suntgovv, aboue the towne of Alkirch, & then runneth by the townes of Munhauſen, Emſheym, Colmar, Schletſtadt, & Benfelden, from whence he fleeteth in a right line, without any turnings to Straeſburgh, where he falleth into the Rhyne, taking along with him before he comes thither, all the brookes, and Springs which ſpring out of the mountaine Vogaſus. This river affordeth great ſtore of Saulmons and other fiſhe, as likewiſe the Rhyne. This whole Countrie is partly champion, and ſome what hiltie, and here & there couvered with many woods, in which a great number of cheſt-nuts, almands, and nutts doe growe.

The Inhabitants which till and manure this Land, are for the moſt part poore people, waſting their goods, and ſpending every yeere as much as they gett, taking no care for the Winter, or to provide againſt warre; therefore when an ill yeere commeth, that the earth yeeldeth not her encreaſe, they would ſtarue for hunger, if they were not relieved out of the Common Garniers.

The Inhabitants. The moſt part of the Inhabitants of this Countrie are no Natiues, but Straungers, namely Suevians, Bavarians, Burgonians, Savoyards, and Loraines, which if once they ſet footing in this Countrie, they doe not lightly leaue it; eſpecially, the Svvevians or Svvabens, who are the greateſt part which are rooted in it.

The fifth circle of the Romans Empire. The fifth Circle of the Empire is the Ryniſh Circle, and conſiſteth alſo of three States, namely the Spirituall, the Princes, & the Townes. Vnto the Spirituall ſtate belong the Biſhop of VVormes, Spier, Straeſburgh, Baſill, Beſançon in the Earledome of Burgundie, the VValliſcher Province, whereof Sitten is the chiefe towne, Geneve, Loſanna, Metz, Toul, Verdun. The Abbots of Hiersfelt, Murbach, and S. Gregories Munſter. In the ſecond ſtate are theſe temporal Princes, Earles and Lords, to wit, the Dukes of Loraine, Savoye, the Duke, and Earle of Spanheym, the Marqueſſe of Baden, the Duke of Zvveybrucken, the Earle of Veldentz, the Land-Grave of Heſſen, the Prince of Calmi, the Earle of Naſſavv, in Sarbruck, the Rhyne-Graves, the Lords of Rapoltzkirchem by Rapoltzſteyn, the Earles of Bitſch, Salm, Hanavv, and Lichtenbergh, Leiningen, Falkenſteyn, the Lords of Morſpurgh, Rapolſteyn, Hohen, Rechpergh, Blanckenbergh, & Blammont in Loraine, the Earles of VVeiſbaden, & Itzſteyn, Kuningſtain, the Lord of Eppenſtain, the Earles of Iſenburgh, in Vpper Alſace, of Solms, Naſſavv in VVeilburgh, Seninighen, Havare, the Lord of Muntzenbergh, the Earles of VVeſterburgh, VVitgenſteyn, VValdeck & Pleſſe. In the third ſtate, are theſe Townes, Mulhuyſen, in Suntgovv, in Vpper Alſace, Baſill, Colmar, Kayſerpergh, Turckhaym, S. Gregories Munſter, Vpper Ebenhaym, Straeſburgh, Roſenhaym, Schletſtadt, Hagenavv, VVeiſſenburgh, Landavv, Spier, VVormes, Franckford, Fridbergh in the VVetteravv, VVetzlar, Metz, Toul, Verdun, Kaufmans, Sarbruck, Beſançon, the Caſtles of Fridbergh, and Gleighauſen.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE LANDGRAVIAT OF VPPER ALSASIA, WITH SVNGOVIA & BRISGOVIA.

IN this Mapp, besides the Vpper Alsace, ye haue here described unto you Sungovv and Brisgovv. The chiefe towne of Vpper Alsace is Einsheym, where the high Councill keepe their Court, unto whom all inferiour Benches, and Sessions may appeale, aswell those of Sungovv and Brisgovv, with the foure townes lying upon the Rhyne aboue Basil, as those which are under the house of Austria. This towne Anno 1200. came under the Commaund of Count Albrecht of Habsburgh, father unto King Rudolphus. Einsheym.

Rabeacum, or Ruffacum commonly called Ruffach, is a very ancient towne, built by the Romans. It is reported it had this name first giuen it from a brooke, that heretofore was called Rotbach, because of the reddish colour of the Water, but now Ombach, which springeth up in a valley, not farre from Sutzmath, and taketh his Course trough the fields, and Vineyards unto this towne, which lyeth very commodious upon it. In former ages this towne was adorned with fine buildings, and a double Suburb, where the Romane Nobilitie for a long time frequented, and that in regard of the fruitfulnesse, and the abundance of all things, who statuated there very good Lawes, especially against theeues which were so severely executed, that it is now become a proverbe, used at this day in Germanie in saying, The old gallowes of Ruffach, is made of good oaken wood. Ruffach.

Colmar was built out of the ruines of the ancient Citie of Argentuaria, it is a fine imperiall towne, situated in a fruitfull plaine, about an houres going from the Mountaines, in the midst of Alsace, and is watered with diverse small rivers as the Lousch, Durus, Fechtus, Illa, and others whereof some of them runne through the Maiourie of the towne, and make the lands about it very fruitfull. Colmar.

Seleſtadium, or Schletstadt and Colmar were in the yeere 1216. walled in the reigne of the Emperour Fredericus the second. Some yeeres before, to wit, Anno 1044. under the Gouvernment of Henricus the Fourth, Hildegardis Ducheſſe of Suevia, built there a Temple, after the paterne, and modell of the Temple of Ieruſalem, which afterward her Sonne Otho Bishop of Straesburgh dedicated to our Ladie, calling it after her name, and gaue it to the Moncks to dwell in it: which in a short time grew so rich, and mightie, that this Cloister was advanced to a Prioarie, and the Priour thereof, for a long time had the prerogatiue, to choose the Magistrates: whiche ye may read in Beatus Rhenanus, who was borne here. This towne is very strong upon the one side of the Rhyne, besett with deepe piles, and upon the West side to the hills ward of Loraine, it is a very fruitfull soile, and upon the hills grow abundance of Vines and Chestnutts, and in the plaines great store of Corne. Schletstadt.

Gebvvyler lyeth in the very mouth of the mountaines, and as they say was built Anno 1124. Here are rich Vineyards, this towne belongeth to the Abbot of Murbach, who oftentimes holdeth his residence there. Gebwyler.

The towne of VVatvveil lying-without the mouth of the mountaines, is also under the jurisdiction of the said Abbot. Mercator counteth in Vpper Alsace these Earledomes, namely Horburgh, a very pleasant land, belonging to the Duke of VVirtemberch, unto which the Towne of Reichenvveyer belongeth, which yeeldeth very good Wine: also the Earledome of Egisheym, whereof the succession, as likewise that of Sultz, hath failed for a long time. The Lordships in this Countrie are Bolvveyler, Landtsbergh, Hohen, Hatstadt, Hohenach, and Rapoltstain, unto which belong Rapoltzvvyl, Gemer, Cellenbergh; a towne with a Castle: the Imperiall townes of the fifth Circle are Munster in Gregories-dale, Durckheym, Colmar, Mulhausen; where there are curious Wines, and Keysersberch. Watweil. Horburch. Egisheym.

SVNGOVIA or SVNGOW.

Svngovia or Sunggoia, commonly called Das Sungovv, boundeth Northward upon Alsace, Eastward upon the Rhyne, Westwart upon the outmost Confines of France, and Westward upon Svvisserland. This small Countrie hath here and there fine Vineyards, and euerie where rich in Corne, which is carryed up and downe into the adjacent Countries, to wit, into Svvisserland, into the Svvart-vvood, Loraine, and other places. The bounds.

Within Sungovv lyeth the Earledome of Pfirt whereof the last Earle called Vlricus dyed at Basill in the yeere of our Lord 1024. leaving two daughters behinde him, whereof one of them named Iane Albertus Duke of Austria married, buying of her other sister Vrsula her patrimoniall inheritance, for 8000. markes of silver. The Lordships of Befort, and Morspurch, belong also unto this Countrie. In this Earledome lie these places Altkirgh, Dattenriet, Befort, Rosenfels, Maszmunste, Thanu, Senheym, which places at this day are divided by the Austrian Princes into seuerall Baylle-wikes. In Befort there is a Parochiall Church, which with the Nunns Cloister Veldtpach (where there lie buyried 13. Earles, and as many Countesses) was founded by the Earles of Pfirt. In Maszmunster there is a very faire Gentleweemens Cloister, and some Canons to it which is thought was built by Masonus Duke of the Alemans, after whom the same valley is called Vallis Masonis, which otherwise is named VVast. Than is a fine towne belonging The Gouvernment. Befort. Morspurch. Maszmunster.

alſo to the Earledome of Pfirt. Cloſſe by the towne the Caſtle of Engelburgh ſtandeth upon a hill, and neere unto that lieth alſo the Mountaine called Rang, which yeeldeth precious Wine, called Rangvvine, wel knowne at Baſill. Out of the mouth of theſe mountaines ſpringeth the river Thurus, wich parteth Sungovv from Alſace. The Monaſterie of Morſmunſter in the Earledome of Pfirt, was foundeth by the Earles of Pfirt. S. Amarin with the Caſtle of Fridbergh, lying a mile from Than appertaineth unto the Abbot of Murbach & not farre from thence is the ſpringhead of the Moſell. The Imperiall Citie of Mulhauſen lyeth alſo in Sungovv, of which (as alſo of the townes of Colmar, and Keyſersbergh) Anno 1261. the Biſhop of Straeſburgh was made Protector: but not long after, when as Rudolph Earle of Habſburgh with the conſent of ſome of the Burgers became Maſter of Colmar, he gott with all the City of Mulhauſen into his power, and by the helpe of the Burgers demoliſhed the Caſtle, and tooke priſonners all them that were in it. But when this Rudolph was choſen King of the Romans, then this towne came againe under the Romiſh Empire.

Morſmunſter.

The Inhabitans manner of living.

The Inhabitants of theſe townes are very diligent in planting of Vine-poles and manuring of Lands, & therefore the wines, which come from thence, are much commended. In the towne of Otmarſen, there is a Nunns Cloiſter that was built by Rudolp of Habſburgh in the time of the Emperour Henricus the Fourth, whoſe brother VVernherus was Biſhop of Straeſburgh, and dyed at Conſtantinople upon a certaine Iland.

Mumpelgrat.

In the Weſtpart of Sungovv, lyeth the Earledome of Mumpelgart, having a fine towne in it called alſo Mumpelgart, with a royall fort belonging to it: this Earledome hath likewiſe many other townes, and Caſtles, to with, the towne and Caſtle of Grans, Klarvvangh, which is alſo a towne and Caſtle, & Paſſevvangh a towne with Caſtle, all belonging to the Dukes of VVirtemburgh. The Inhabitants ſpeake here the Burgonian tongue. Next unto this Earledome of Mumpelgart, lyeth the towne of Bruntraut, where te Biſhop of Baſill in a royall Caſtle holdeth his reſidencie.

BRISGOIA or BRISGOW.

The Originall of the name.

Briſgovia or Briſgoia, commonly called Briſgovv, is as much to ſay in high Dutch, as a place Praiſevvorthie, and indeed this Countrie meriteth no leſſe, becauſe of the great fruitfulneſſe thereof; for it is as fertill as Alſatia it ſelfe: yet if one will ſearch into ancient writings, he may eaſely perceiue and finde, that this countrie beareth the name of the chiefe towne of Briſach. The length of this territoire is ten German miles, and two in breath: for the beginning of it, is at Mortnavv, and reacheth along the Rhyne as farre as Baſill.

The ſcitu-ation.

It is a verry fruitfull Countrie for Corne, and Wine, and aboundeth in all things neceſſarie for the ſuſtentation of man. The Arch-Dukes of Auſtria, and the Marqueſſes of Baden are Lords over this Countrie. In ancient times Briſach was the Capitall city of Briſgow, from whence the Countrie is named. Anthoninus in his Itinerarium maketh mention of Mons Briſacus: though he ſpeaketh of no other townes lying over the Rhyne, but onely of the provinciall townes, ſituated about the Rhyne; therefore ſome are of the opinion, that the Rhyne here altered his courſe, which before ran upon the other ſide by the towne, to wit, when it ſtood upon the French ſide. Luitprandus Ticinenſis, who liued in the time of the government of the Emperour Otho the firſt, ſaith, that Mons Briſacus belonged to Alſace, and writeth it was an Iland in the Rhyne. This towne ſtandeth upon a round hill like a Caſtle, and the Rhyne runneth upon the Weſtſide of it. It is a fine, ſtrong, and a populous towne, but in proceſſe of time, the towne Fryburgh hath put itdowne for magnificencie and riches. Though it be but a new towne, yet is it mightely encreaſed, and growne exceeding wealthie, by reaſon of the many mines about it. At Briſach there is an ancient Caſtle, which for a long time lay ruinous, but afterward was built. There is a ſtrong, and a ſafe tower, built by Bartholdus the third Duke of Zeringhen, as theſe verſes following cut in ſtone doe ſhewe.

The ſcitu-ation.

Briſach.

Hanc Dux Bartholdus portam ſtruxiſſe notatur,
A quo per fraudem Burgundia gens populatur.

A ſtrange well.

This towne hath but one Well over which there is a roofe built, and a great Wheele in it which is turned about with mens feete, and the Water is drawne up a great depth under the Earth; for which the townſmen muſt giue ſomething euery yeere: for albeit there is in diverſe places a great deſcent to the Rhyne, and plaines, where there is a great deale of Water, yet they can hardly bring it up becauſe of the ſteepneſſe of the hill. Halfe a mile beneath Friburgh there lyeth upon a high hill, a ruinous Caſtle called Zaringhen, from whence the Dukes of Zeringhen tooke their title, and name in former times.

Friburgh.

Friburgh is a very braue towne in Briſgovv, and now is accounted the Metropolis of this Countrie, being founded by Duke Bartholdus the fourth, ſonne unto Conradus the firſt of Zeringhen. Vnder the government of the Emperour Henricus the fifth, being before but a village. It is ſeated very pleaſantly betweene hills, and adorned with faire buildings, Churches, and Cloiſters. In the yeere 1459. there was a univerſitie erected in it. In which time there liued in it, that excellent Lawyer, Vdalricus Zaſius. Within a mile of this towne, there was heretofore a rich ſilver mine. In this territoire of Briſgovv lay the ancient Dukedome of Friburgh, the Marquiſate of Hochbergh, and the Lordſhips of Badenvvyler, Stauffen and Burcken.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF VVIRTEMBERGH.

The name. HE Dutchie of VVirtembergh, or VVurtembergerland, taketh the name from the ancient Caſtle of VVirtembergh, which ſtandeth upon a high hill, almoſt in the midſt of the Countrie, not farre from the Imperial Tovvne of Eſlingen. Some vvould fetch this name from elſwhere, namely, Aegidius Tſchudus by a Conjecture, vvhich carryeth ſome likelihood from the Intuergian people, vvho in old time inhabited here. This Countrie lyeth in upper Germanie, and taketh vp almoſt The ſite. the vvhole tract of Svvevia, or Svvabenland, lying upon the Neccar. It boundeth Eaſtvvard upon the upper part of Svvabenland, Algovv, and Bavaria, Weſtvvard upon the Palatinate, and the Marquiſate of Baden, contayning vvithin it alſo, the high mountaines ofte Svvart-vvood. Southvvard upon the mountaines of Arbona, and the Svvabiſh Alpes, (for ſo the Inhabitants name thoſe high-mountaines) Nort-vvard of it, lyeth Franconia, and alſo not farre from it the Ottenvvaldt.

The Temperature & fertility. The aire in this Countrie is very healthfull, the Summers kinde, and the Winters temperate. And as for the fertilitie thereof, there is no Countrie in Germanie can bee compared to it, for it is exceeding fruitfull in Corne, Vines, and all manner of Fruits: yet it is not alike fruitfull in all places, for that part, from vvhence the Neccar ſpringeth, and vvhich confineth upon the Svvart-vvood, and the Svvabiſh Alpes, lying betvveene the Neccar and the Danubius is a rough ground, vvhich vvill beare no Vines, but is rather fitter for paſturage. The land vvhich lyeth betvveene the Alpes, though it be ſomevvhat ſtonie; Yet it beareth good ſtore of Corne, and albeit the ground, vvhich is upon the higheſt hills of the Svvart-vvood, is very reddiſh and Sandie, notvvithſtanding it is reaſonable good, and fruitfull. But vvhere the Neccar overflovveth the plaine fieldes, it doth enrich and bleſſe this ſoile greatly, and maket it fruitfull in every place, being adorned vvith faire Vineyards, greene Meddovves, rich Corne fields, and pleaſant Orchards.

Mines of Silver and Copper. In this Dutchie alſo, there are found ſilver Mines, not farre from VViltburgh, and it is reported, that the vvhole tovvne of Bulach is built upon Copper Mines. This Countrie affordeth abundance of Iron, and Copper, and manie faire Stones of divers Coulours, eſpecialy, Azured blew. It ſeemeth that nature ſtriveth here in this place, tho bring forth precious ſtones.

Cattaile. In this Countrie there are divers ſorts of Cattaile, and gread Store of Deere, and vvilde beaſts in the vvoods.

The Princes and Government. This Countrie in the yeare 1495. was made a Dukedome by the Emperour Maximilian, at the Impe-riall day held at VVormes, vvhere Eberhard, Earle of VVittembergh, vvas advanced tho the dignitie of a Duke. Eberhard, the ſecond Duke continued ſcarce tvvo yeeres in his Dutchie, but he fled avvay vvith his Silver, Gold, and Ievvels, firſt to Vlme, and aftervvard unto the Count Palatine, vvhere he dyed in a forraine Countrie without Iſſue. After him Vlrick nephevv unto Eberhard vvas choſen Duke by the Emperour Maximilian. Anno 1519. by the Svvabiſh league he vvas chaſed and driven out of his Countrie, becauſe he had taken in the Imperiall Tovvne Reutlingen, vvhich vvas included in the ſaid League. After this Vlrick ſucceeded Chriſtopher, and after Chriſtopher his Sonne Lodvvick ſucceeded him in the gouvernment, vvho left behinde him as an Heire and Succeſſour Fredrick, Sonne unto George Earle of Montpelgard.

In this Countrie inhabited in ancient times the Intuergi, vvhich people Tſchudus, and Rhenanus, called VVittungos, alſo Tectoſages. An Ancient people.

The ſituation of this Dukedome lieth almoſt round like a Circle, having many townes in it, where of Tubingen, and Stutgard are the chiefeſt. Tubingen, is a very faire tovvne, lying upon the Neccar, and hath a very fertill Soill round a bout it, and aboundeth in Corne, and all manner of encreaſe; vvhich furniſh the neighbouringh parts. It hath a ſtone-bridge over the Neccar, and a Caſtle in it; alſo it is a famous Vniverſitie, vvhere in formerly theſe tvvo learned men Iohannes Stoſlerus, and Leonardus Fuckſius lived. Where in theſe daies alſo liveth that famous man, Martinus Cruſius moſt learned and ſkillfull in all languages. This Vniverſitie vvas erected Anno 1477. by Eberhard Count of VVirtembergh. Iohannes Heroldus doth ſhevve in his treatie de Germaniæ primæ antiquitatibus, out of a certaine old inſcription, vvhich vvas found here, that Caracalla the Emperour held his Court at Tubingen, vvhich alſo Peter Appian in his booke of Antiquities ſhevveth as follovveth:

MAX. IN.
AVG. EM. GER. MAX.
DAC. MAX. ARM.
MAX. TRIB. P.
COS. ET.

But Heroldus read this inſcription at length, as it vvas recorded at Rome in the honour of this ſame Emperour, vvhich is this:

Stutgard. Stutgard in the Metrapolitan Citie, and the Princes Court, lying not farre from the Neccar. From this Citie the Countie of Stutgard taketh the name. It vvas firſt foundeth by the Vandales, and vvas finiſhed by the Marqueſſe Iohn Albert the firſt, Electour of Brandenbourg, and by Otho the Third. Anno 1290. Albert the Fourt Marqueſſe of Brandenburgh, and Prince of Anhalt, a Sonne of Otho the Fourth, gaue this tovvne as a Dourie unto his Daughter Beatrix vvho then married vvith Duke Henricus Leo. This Tovvne is ſituated in a very fruitfull ſoile. It is ſcarcely to be expreſſed vvhat abundance of vvine this Countrie affordeth yeerely. This place vvas famous, in regard of Iohannes Capnion, called Commonly Reuchlin an excellent Juris Conſult, and very learned in languages, vvho vvas alſo one of the firſt, that taught the Hebrevv Tongue in Chriſtedome.

Reutlingen. The Tovvne of Reutlingen, lieth alſo in this Dutchie upon the Neccar, and in the yeere 1240. vvas made a vvalled Tovvne by the Emperour Fredrick the Second: Others are of opinion, that it hapned Anno 1282. This Tovvne is famous in regard of the number of paper-milles, vvhich are in it.

Leſſer Townes. The other Tovvnes in this Countrie ſtand pleaſantlie, and ſome of them are fortified vvith Caſtles, and Forts, namely, Vrach lying upon the river Amer, Nirting, Kirchena, Heilbron, Lauffen, Pinigkhem. The Caſtle of Aſpergh, Greiningen, Marbach, Canſtat, VVaiblingh, Schorendorff, Geppingen, Fieſſen formerly called Abudiacum, Heydenheym, VVilbergh, the place vvhere that excellent Coſmographer Daniel Cellar vvas borne ſituated upon the River Nagolt: Herrenbergh, Rottenburgh, Hechingen, Balingen, is a free Towne for the Ievves: and many more vvhoſe names and ſituations are deſcribed in this Mapp.

Rivers. This Countrie is vvatered alſo vvith pleaſant rivers, lakes, and pooles abounding in fiſhe, the chiefeſt is the Brent, vvhich never is frozen in the hardeſt Winter that is. The Neccar runneth through the midſt of this Countrie, and carrieth many other rivers vvith him into the Rhine, as namely, the Nagolt, Entz, Remſz, Rocher, Iagſt, and Filtz: the Brentz runneth into the Donavv.

Mountaines. The Mountaines in this Countrie, in regard of their whiteneſſe are called Alpes, & by reaſon of the white flints, and ſtones, that grovv upon them, they are diſcouered a farre of. Here and there alſo they gett nevv names, as the Schera, Albuchus, Hanekamp and Hertsfelt, &c.

Foreſts and woods. The Svvart-vvood, or Sylva Hercynia, and Martiana, ſpreadeth it ſelfe through divers parts of this Dutchie, and hath ſundry names accordingh to the place and ſituation vvhere they ſtand. As the Albuchervvaldt: the Stubenthalervvalt: the Svvartzvvaldt, the Odenvvaldt, &c.

The manners of this people. The inhabitants of this Dukedome are much commended for the uſe of their Armes, their curteſie, and conſtancie in religion.

THE DESCRIPTION OF SVEVIA, OR SVVABENLAND.

HISTORIES teſtifie that this Countrie of Suevia, which is now but a Dukedome, was heretofore a Kingdom, though there be no Prince of the Romane Empire, which beareth the title of Duke of Svvaben; ſeing the whole land is devided among diverſe Lords. A part of it belongeth to the Houſe of Auſtria by inheritance: but the greateſt part thereof, is in the poſſeſſion of the Duke of VVirtenberg. There are alſo diverſe Imperiall Townes in this Countrie, which lie here and there, being under their owne Iuriſdictions: the others are ſubject to the Duke of Bavaria.

This ancient and famous people, is much mentioned in old Hiſtories, they had (as we may read in Ptolomie, and in Strabo, and ſome others) their habitation upon the Elue, and the river Suevus. At this day, this Countrie is not of ſo large an extent, as in former times, and becauſe it is a part of high Dutchland, it is bounded thus: Northward it bordereth upon the Vpper Palatinate, Eaſtward upon Bavaria, Southward upon Svviſſerland, and Weſtward upon Alſatia. It is a territoire as Ioannes Aubanus deſcribeth in his booke of the Cuſtomes, and Manners of Nation partly plaine, and partly Montainous.

The Bounds.

Fertility.

The ſoile thereof is ſo fruitfull, that there is no place of it, but is inhabited. It is full of woods, and trees, ſo that the Inhabitans delight much in hunting and hawking. All kind of Graine, and Cattaile are there in abundance, and the whole Countrie hath a pleaſant and healthfull aire, is full of fine Townes, Caſtles, and Villages. Out of the hills they digg Silver, and other Mettals. The Inhabitants are ſtout, & valliant, which Plutarche commendeth aboue all other people, that they by their might, valour and armes aſpired to that pitch of honour, that they attained to the Government of the whole Romane Empire, and kept it for a long time.

Allemannia.

The Vpper Svvaben, which is called Allemannia, and as ſome ſay, tooke the name from the Lake Leman, containeth for the moſt part all that, which the Rhati, and the Vindelici had in their poſſeſſion, and is ſhutt in Northward with the Danubius, and Eaſtward with the river Lycus, or the Lech: Southward it butteth upon the ſnowie mountaines, and Weſtward upon the Bodenzee, or Lake.

Algovv.

The territoire of Algovv bordereth Eaſtward upon Gelach, Northward upon the Danubius, Weſtward upon the Bodenzee, and Southward upon the Snow-mountaines. It is a very rough and a coldiſh Countrie, but hath faire and able men in it: both men, and weemen are giuen much to ſpinning, and it is accounted no ſhame for their men to ſpinne in Villages.

They haue great ſtore of Cattaile, as Cowes, Horſe, and Mares, which breede very faire foales. Beſides this Countrie yeeldeth very good Wheate, & Barlie and hath many Groues, and Woods in it: alſo many ſprings, brooks, and Meeres, wherewith it is watered.

On this ſide of the Danubius, there are divers territoires as is to be ſeene in this Mapp, namely the Alb, a hillie, ſtonie, and a craggie Countrie: the ground, and Fields whereof are ſo hard, that they are faine to plough it up with a teeme of 12, or 14 Oxen, and two Horſes: Here groweth much Corne, Oats, & Barlie, neither is there any Cattaile wanting, as Oxen, Cowes, Sheepe, and all kind of Venaiſon. Alb.

Vpon this Countrie bordereth the ſmall Countrie of Albuch, which is likewiſe a hillie, and a rough land, having manie heaths, and woods in it: alſo Cattaile, Sheepe, Fowle, and Deere, but litle Corne, and Oates. Albuch.

The river of Brants ſepareth it from Herdvelt, which is euen ſuch an other Land, and of the ſame nature, as the former is. Herdvelt.

The Donauvviſh Dale, reacheth frō the head of the Danubius, beneath the Lech, and is very well inhabited with Townes, Villages, and Caſtles, which lyeth upon both ſides of the Danubius, and haue abundance of Corne, Oates, Fiſhe, Fowle, Venaiſon, Fruits, and Paſtures, Cattaile, arrable Lands, Trees, and Fields, yea all things (ſaving Vineyards:) but that want is ſupplyed with their owne commodities, for by exchang of them, they gett wine enough from other places.

Moreover here are alſo the Earledomes of Zollem, Nollenburgh and Baar. On this ſide of the Danubius lyeth alſo the Dioceſſe of Elvvang, the Countie of Helfenſtain, and others which for brevities ſake we will paſſe ouer. Elvvang.

The Bodenzee, or Lake, which the Benevolent Reader ſeeth Weſtward in this Mapp, is called in Latine Lacus Acronius, Lacus Brigantinus, or Bodamicus: it is a large lake, which ſeuereth Svvabenland from Svviſſerland, and is ſome 6, or 7 Germane miles in length, and about two in breath. Betweene Roſchach, and Buchorn it is three miles ouer, and by Mersburg (at it is reported to be 300 fadome deep). It is devided into the Vpper, and Nether part. The vppermoſt beginneth at Lindavv, and reacheth to the Caſtle of Podmen, from whence it taketh the name of Podamicus, as if one ſhould ſay, the Podem-Lake, which name afterward, was corrupted, ſo that of Podem-Zea, it is now made the Boden-zee. Others affirme, that it is ſo called from the exceeding depth thereof. The Nether Lake beginneth at Coſtnits, and is very narrowe, and is called from Cell, a ſmall towne lying upon it, the Cellarzee, or Lake. The Boden-Zee.

The Rhyne runneth through both theſe Lakes, and divers other rivers fall into Boden-zee, as the Bregentz which ſpringeth out of the Bregentiſh vvood or Foreſt:

likewise the Arg, Liblach, Roschach, Steinach, and other small riuers and brookes, by which and other running waters, this lake in Summer time is higher by two fadomes, and yet remaines alwayes very cleare; and becauſe of the great depth thereof, it is not troubleſome. The whole land lying round about the Baden-zee, is ſo exceeding fruitfull, that it is full of fine Townes, Caſtles, and Villages, and beſides hath foure Imperiall townes ſeated upon it, namely Conſtance, Vberlingen, Lindavv, and Burchorn: Alſo the Towne and Countie of Bregentz, from whence it is called Lacus Brigantinus.

Alſo there are ſome other Meeres, and Lakes, as the Federzee, the Albzee, the VVeiſſenzee, and others.

Rivers. Here are alſo many excellent & great riuers, whereof the greateſt, the moſt famous and faireſt of Europa is the Donaw, or Danubius: which hath his head-ſpring in this Countrie neere unto a Fountaine ſpringing out upon the Mount Abnavv.

Beatus Rhenanus is of the opinion, that the name Donavv is as much to ſay as the Abnavv, others ſay, that it is a name compounded of Thon & Avv, which is called water, and that the word Donavv betokeneth ſo much as the water of Thon: In former times the Donavv, or Danubius, was the utmoſt confines of Germanie. This riuer of Donavv from the head ſpring thereof, runneth Eaſtward, and paſſeth by the townes of Neyding, Mering, Dutling, Mylen, Beyrn, Friding, Sigmeringen, Riedling, Marchtal, Munderkingen, & Diſching, receiuing by the way many ſmall brookes, and riuers into it, and paſſing by Vlm, the Iller falls into it cloſſe by the ſame Citie, and taking its courſe forwards beyond Elchingen, Leibha, Gunſelfingen, and Laugingen taketh along with him the Guntz, Mindel, Brentz, and the Smutter, and running by Donavvert a litle beyond it, receiueth the Lech into him, and ſo growing greater by theſe riuers, runneth forward with a ruſhing noiſe Eaſtward, through Bavaria, Auſtria, Hungaria, Bulgaria, Valachia, and Moldavia into Pontus Euxinus.

The Iler. The ſecond next this is the Iler ſtreame, which taketh his beginning in the Alpes, and falling through the Iler-dale, paſſeth by Kempten, Buxheim, Kelmutz, and a litle aboue Vlm falleth into the Danubius.

Lech. The Lycus, or Lech is likewiſe a fine riuer, and taketh his head-ſpring in the Alpes, by a village called Elpele, and falling through the Leckdale paſſing by Reute, Fuſſē, Sconga, and Ausburg, a litle beneath Donavvert diſchargeth himſelfe into the Danubius.

Bregentz, &c. The leſſer riuers are theſe: the Bregentz, the Vpper, and Nether Arg, Schus, Ablach, Riſn, Rott, Eſchbach, Guntz, Mindel, Smutter, VVertach, Sinckel, and on this ſide of the Danubius, the Ruchart, Blaur, Lon, Brent, Egvveid, Kochern, and an infinite number of other brooks, and ſprings. Likewiſe the Necker hath his beginning in Svvabenland, whoſe headſpring is a mile aboue Rotvveil, and running through VVirtenbergerland, and the Nether Palatinate then falleth into the Mountaines Rhyne beneath Heydelbergh. This Countrie alſo hath many hills, eſpecially Southward, where the high Alpes begin to riſe, which both in Summer and Winter are couvered with ſnovv, for which cauſe they are alſo called the Snovvie Mountaines. Moreouer, there are the Ruckſteig, Thenheim im Loch, the Grenten, the Gach, the Pyler, &c. likewiſe, on this ſide of the Danubius in the Dioceſſe of Elvvang, it is full of hills, as alſo in the Hyrcyniam, or Svvartz-vvood.

Ausburg. This Countrie is exceeding full of Townes, Hamlets, Villages & Caſtles, whereof the principaleſt Citie is Ausburg, which was not in vaine called Auguſta Vindelicorum, and Auguſta Rhætorum, ſeing Rhætia containeth in it Rhætia ſingularis, and Vindelicia, which the Leth ſeuereth the one from the other. Tacitus nameth Ausburg, the famous Colonie, and Rhætian Province. For it ſeemeth very probable, that the Vindelici had but litle land on the further ſide of this riuer, and it is no marvell, though this towne belonged to the Rhæti, and that they alſo ſhould be called Vindelicorum Auguſta, ſeing the others, which dwelt on the other ſide of the riuer, retained no leſſe the name of Vindelici. For the Vindus in Rhætia diſchargeth himſelfe into the Lycus, and ſieng both theſe rivers meete by Ausburg, therefore is this Citie named Auguſta Vindelicorum. This is a very ancient City, founded before the Romaine Empire begann, and was famous in the times of the Rhæti, and the Germani. It tooke the name Auguſta, from the Emperour Auguſtus, who ſent thither a colonie, like as many other townes alſo bore the name of the ſame Emperour, as Auguſta Aciſia upon the Danubius, Auguſta Auſciorum in France, Auguſta Bracarum in Spaigne, Auguſta Emerita in Portugall, Auguſta Euphrateſia in Comagena, Auguſta Rauracorum upon the Rhyne, &c. And it is apparant, that they ſent people to inhabite in this Citie in the times of both the Nerones to wit, of Tiberius, & Druſus, who brought Rhætia, & Vindelicia under the Romaine Empire. From this word Auguſta is come the name of Auſpurg, by adding thereunto the word πύργον, or Burgus: as if one ſhould ſay Ausburgus, that is, the Bourrough, or Towne of Auguſtus. It is counted now under Suevia or Swabenland, ſince the time that the valliant Svvabens paſſed ouer the Danubius, and tooke in the places lying round about it. After the terrible expedition of Attila, this Citie begann to creepe up againe, and under the Gouvernment of Theodoricus, King of the Oſtro-Gotes, begann to flouriſh againe. Afterward the Svvabens, paſſing ouer the Danubius, fell into the Romane Confines, and chaſed the Romans out of this Countrie, and became Maſters of all Rhætia, and at laſt made an alliance with the Almans againſt the Francks, by whome neere unto Tolbiacus, they were defeated and overthrowne. After which time the Auſburgers were ſubject to the Auſtrian Kings, till Carolus Martellus. In the yeere 1051. Henricus Niger held in Februarie an Imperiall day in this Citie. The like alſo did Rudolphus Duke of Svvaben, who through the inſtigatiō of Pope Hildebrant againſt Henricus the fourth, was called Romane Emperour, which Imperiall day at Ausburg in the yeere 1077. was aſſiſted by the Popes Legate. Vnder the Emperour Sigiſmundus, this Citie obtained manie great immunities, and priviledges. In the yeere 1496. Maximilianus of Auſtria with his Sonne Philippus the Arch-Duke, ſolemnized here in this Citie his Feſtivall dayes, and the ſaid Maximilianus held alſo in this towne many Imperiall dayes. Anno 1518. Martin Luther was cited by the Emperour Carolus Quintus to appeare in an Imperiall-day held in this Citie, where he gaue an account of his faith. The Imperiall-States alſo upon the Imperiall day, held anno 1530, deliuered ouer a Confeſſion of their faith to the Emperour, which after the name of this Citie, is called the Ausburgish Confeſſion. Fifteene yeeres after was forged in this Citie by Iulius Pflug, Michael Heldus, and Iohannes Iſlibius the Interim; which after it had laſted two yeeres, the Emperour preſſed hard for a Councill, and ſo procured the Councill of Trent: under the Gouvernment of Ferdinandus, the Ausburgiſh peace was confirmed.

And to the end the ancient Eccleſiaſticall hiſtories be not buried in oblivio, It is reported, that one called Lucius, about the yeere of Chriſt 190. preached the Goſpell at Ausburg, & converted a Generall unto the Chriſtian faith. Which we will let reſt; ſieng it cannot be proued out of any authentique Authour. But this ſeemes to come neerer the truth, that under the Emperour perour Diocletianus, Narciſſus, Gerundenſis liued there, and Dionyſius Cretenſis who (together with Afra, Digna, Eunomia, Euprepia, and other holy martyrs were put to death) by Caius, Diocletians Generall, was inſtituted the firſt Biſhop. Anno 400 Ambroſius Biſhop of Milan ſent Albanus, & Theomneſtus unto Auſpurg to purge the Church there frō the Arrian hereſie. Anno 615 Sozymus was propoſed to the Churchof Auſburg, and was accounted the firſt Biſhop thereof. There are in this City two exceeding faire Arſenalls, a Stately Palace, diverſe publick water-workes, & Fountaines, a braue Senate-houſe, which is ſuppoſed to haue bene heretofore the temple of the Cibells, a famous Librarie, and many faire and beautifull Churches. It is ſeated in a very pleaſant, and a fruitfull plaine, is very populous, and ſufficiently provided with all things neceſſarie for the uſe of man, and is famous for the many Imperiall Dayes, which haue bene held in it. Of late yeeres Guſtavus Adolphus King of Svveden of immortall memorie, enlarged the walls and made them almoſt as great againe as they were before, and it was ſo fortifyed by him, that now it is reputed to be one of the ſtrong eſt Cities in Germanie.

Kauf Beyern Kauf Beyern is alſo an Imperiall Towne, and is as much to ſay as a purchaſed Village: for in the time of the Emperour Conradus the ſecond, they bought their libertie and freedome for fiftie thouſand gold gilders, whereas before it was ſubiect to the Barons of Hoff.

Vlm. Vlm is likewiſe an Imperiall Citie, ſituated upon the Danubius, betweene the two rivers Iler in Algovv, and the Blau, which ſprings up in VVirtenbergerland, & runs into the Danubius. This City taketh the name from the Elme-trees, which growe there in abundance. In ancient times it was but a Village, till the yeere 1300, when it was made a towne, and girt about with Walls, and Moates. At this day it is a mightie, a ſtrong and a wealthie Citie, furniſhed richly with all thing neceſſarie for humane life. It hath many braue Churches, eſpecially one, which in regard of the faire Pillars, the curious Structure, the magnificent Architecture, no Church in Germanie (ſaving Straeſburg) can be compared to it. The Church-towre is exceeding high. The Emperour Maximilian before it was made higher with Spire vvēt op to the top thereof, to vew the pleaſant ſite and proſpect round about it: and it is reported, that with halfe his foote, he ſtood upon the outtermoſt ſtone, and lifted up his other foote, which place is yet to be ſeene to this daye, and his name engraven upon it. There are two very large Mercate places, and two faire ſtore houſes, furniſhed with all manner of Proviſions and Amunition. The Danubius runneth cloſſe by it, and there it is navigable, having good ſtore of ſhipping. There are no hills about this Citie, but one called S. Michels-hill, lying Northward. Their Gouvernment is Ariſtocraticall, and is choſen out of the chiefeſt, and Nobleſt Citizens: they haue 72 Counſellours, which are elected out of the Aldermen and Common Burgers, who by their provident care, gouverne all things aſwell within as without the City, euery man knowing his owne office. The foundation of the Cathedrall Church was layd in the yeere 1464, and being built and finiſhed Anno 1488, was dedicated to the Virgine Marie. It is held to be the greateſt, the higheſt, and the largeſt Church in Germanie.

Memmingen. Memmingen is alſo an Imperiall Citie, fairely built, and ſtrong, which was called in former times Zum Grienenvverd, in which many ſubſtantiall Burgeſſes inhabit, and through it there runns a cleare ſpring-water, which never freezeth. It lyeth betweene Auſburgh, and Kempten, and is ſo ancient, that it is verely thought, it was founded in the yeere of our Lord 350. This Towne hath many pleaſant walkes round about it, and upon the one ſide of it, there lyeth a Moore full of Reeds. Here they driue a great trading in Linnen, and Hempe. Round about this towne within a mile or two there are divers Caſtles, and Cloiſters, as, Ottenbeuren, Munchrott, Ochſenhauſen, VVyblingen, Buchsheim. Alſo the Caſtles in Ilerthal, as Kronburgh Marſtetten, Lautrack, Eroltzheim, Kelmutz, Dietenheim, Bellenberg, VVertingen, Zelb, and Kirchberg upon the Iler.

Kempten is a very ancient Imperiall towne, and was called heretofore Campidunum. It lyeth upon the Weſtſide of the Iler, where there is a bridg ouer it: Iſne, and Memmingen ſtand in a triangle. It hath a fine proſpect, and a rich Abbey belonging to it, which Hildegrad, wife unto Carolus Magnus founded, and gaue unto it the Earledome of Millarmond. The Siſter of this Empreſſe called Adelinde, whome Count Otho of Keſſelberg in Blanckenthall neere Biberach married, built after his death the Gentleweemens Cloiſter, called Buchavv, upon the Buchauvver, or Feder-Lake, a mile aboue Biberach. Kempten.

Biberach is held for a very famous Gentleweemens monaſterie, founded by Adelheida Hildebrand, daughter unto the Duke of Svvaben, who after the diceaſe of her huſband and her Sonnes, brought all the meanes ſhee had into it, and was the firſt Abbeſſe, and Matron thereof. Biberach.

Yſne taketh the name from the river Yſne, or from Iron, which in high Dutch is called Yſen, or from Iſis the Ægiptian Idoll, which in former times was wont to be adored in Svvaben, and was once ſubiect to the Eſquire of VValdpurg, of whome they bought & procured their libertie, and ſo became an Imperiall Towne. Their moſt trading is in Linnen-cloth, though it be but a barren Countrie round about it. Henry Gurtel a bare-footed Monk, Biſhop of Baſill, and afterwards Arch-Biſhop of Mentz was borne here. Yſne.

Lindavv lyeth alooft by the ſide, & in the Boden-Sea upon an Iland, and ioyneth to the firme land onely with a walled-bridge ſome 290 paces long. It ſeemeth to take the name from the Linden trees, which had wont to growe there in abundance. It is a very delightfull place, having a wholeſome aire, where all things are very good cheape, and where men may liue for a litle money, and the firme land behinde it, yeeldeth much wine. The Bodē-Sea lyeth very beneficiall for this Citie, for by reaſon of their ſhipping, and boats, they haue good trading in all the neigbouring Townes, and Villages round about it, and it is ſeated as cōmodiouſly, as they themſelues can deſire, for the tranſporting, and ſelling of their wares: for every Saterday, their comes to Lindavv people from 28 Townes, and Villages, partly by boats, and partly by Wagons, to the mercate, & bring thither all kind of commodities. Out of Svvaben, and Bavaria they bring heither all kind of Graine, Copper, Salt, and Iron, which is tranſported from thence into Svviſſerland, and Vpperland. From the Nether Lake out of Turgovv, and Hegovv euery weeke there is tranſported by water beſides Corne and Oates, a notable quantitie of Wines, brought thether, and ſent from thence againe into Algovv, Svvaben land, and Bavaria. Out of the Bergenſer Foreſt, Murenfull, Appezel, Thurtall and Vpperland, comes great ſtore of Cheeſe and Butter. The adiacent places bring thither many fruit trees, and Spunne-webbs to ſell, beſides the great commerce, which the Citie of Lindaw hath with other great Townes in Germanie: in regard whereof, this Citie is not amiſſe called by ſome, the Germane, or Suevian Venice. Lindavv

Vberlingen likewiſe is ſeated upon the Boden zee & Vberlingen.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DANVBIVS,

His Courſe, the Citties and Townes Seated upon it.

DANVBIVS, or the Donavv is one of the Principall, moſt navigable and famous rivers of all Europe, traverſing through, and dividing all Almanie and Hongarie into tvvo parts, and having receiued 60. navigable rivers into him, runneth vvith a violent courſe againſt the Sunne riſing Eaſtvvard, & at laſt diſgorgeth his full ſtomacke vvith a roaring noize, out of his ſeuen mouths into the Euxine Sea, or as the Italians call it Mar Maggior, after it hath ſtreamed along for the ſpace of 1500. miles, vvhereof Cedere Danubius ſe tibi Nile negat.

That is:

O ſeuen mouthed Nile, I plainely ſee,
Danovv vvill ſcarce giue vvay to thee.

The name, & vvhence it tooke its Originall.

This famous river taketh his head out of a ſpring riſing in Nigra Sylva, from a mountaine called Abnovv. Beatus Rhenanus thinketh, that the Originall name of Danubius is as much to ſay as the Abnavv. Bertius is of the opinion, that the derivation of this name, commeth from the Noune Proper Thon, and that avv, vvhich ſignifieth a vvater, or a river, is added to it; and that being compounded of theſe tvvo vvords, it ſignifieth the river of Thon, or Thonavv. This river vvas heretofore a bound to Germanie on the South ſide.

The Rivers of Almanie vvhich fall into the Danubius.

The Chiefe rivers of Almaigne, vvhich fall into the Donavv are the Iler, the VVermitz, and the Lycus, vvhich river ſvvelling vvith many others, diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Danubius at Leſchmund, not farre from Ausbourgh. The Almonus falleth into the Danubius at Kelliaim The Nabus by Regenspurg, as likevviſe the Regnus. But the Iſara vvith his rapid ſtreame, being ſvvolne vvith many other Riverets, disburtheneth it ſelfe into the Donavv neere unto Fitzhoven. The great river of Jhn being encreaſed vvith many brookes falleth neere unto Paßavv vvith ſuch a violence into the Donavv, that it keepeth its courſe a good vvay into that ſtreame, and mixeth not his vvaters vvith thoſe of the Donavv, as appeareth plainely by the colour of the vvater and vvaues. There runs likevviſe into the Danovv theſe leſſer rivers, as the Iltz, the Traun, Ems, Igel, Leyta, March, Rab, the Dra, or Trab, betvveene vvhich and the Danubius at the battaile of Varus, vvhere Amurath the Turchish Emperour (as Mr. Heylin noteth) ouertrevv and ſlevv Ladiſlaus King of Hungarie, and 30000. of his men, and indeed his periury deſerued it: for having made, and ſvvorne a truce vvith the Turke; the Popes Legate upon a ſeeming advantage, abſolued him of his Oath & drevv him into the field. Amarath the ſecond, againſt vvhome they fought, lifting up his eyes to heauen, and deſiring Chriſt to looke upon the perfidious dealing, vvherevvith his followvers had dishonoured him, reencouraged his men vvhen the battaile vvas almoſt loſt, and gott the victorie. Likevviſe the great rivers of Teyß and the Sau, diſburden themſelues into the Donavv at Greekiſh VVeiſſenburg: beſides al theſe there comes into it the Maſchus Rhaboſus, Gabrius, Alutas, & Alt, vvhich perhaps is the Barlalat, & Seretius, and the river Pruth.

Buda or Ofen.

Novv vvee vvill ſpeake ſomevvhat of the principal tovvnes, & citties ſituated upō the Danubius, according to the Order obſerved in the Latine Alphabeth. The firſt then vvhich preſents it ſelfe to our vievv is Buda, or Ofen, in the Kingdome of Hungarie, lying upon the right hand of the Danubius, taken in and ſubdued by the Turckes from the Chriſtians Anno 1519. by the Turkiſh Emperour Solyman the Magnificent, upon the 19. of Auguſt, after he had aſſaulted it eleve times, vvith ſuch violence as if he had threatned not onely the ruine of this citty, but alſo the ſubverſion of Chriſtendome. It is ſeated in Vpper Hungarie, being once the Metropolis of the Countrie, and the Court of the Kings, having a moſt pleaſant proſpect round about it. King Sigiſmund cauſed many faire building to be erected in this citty. He built alſo in the Caſtle a goodly palace, after the modell of the Structures in Rome, and environed the Caſtle onely vvith one Wall, and adorned it vvith moſt pleaſant Walkes, Galeries, and a high Tovvre built of free ſtone, having in the midſt of the Caſtle fine gardens, and Bathes as vvell for healt, as for delight. This city is ſeated partly upon hils, and partly upon a plaine. It is girt about vvith exceeding ſtrong Walls, and Bulvvarkes, having vvithin it many goodly buildings: ſo that there is not a fairer, a pleaſanter, or a ſtronger citty in all Hungarie, being indeed machleſſe, and is furniſhed vvith abundance of all proviſions, neceſſarie for ſuſtentation, pompe, and delight.

Raa

Iaurinum vulgarly called Raab, or Raaff is ſeated upon the confluence of the tvvo rivers of Danubius and Arrabon, or Rab, and vvas the ancient Bulvvarke of the Huns againſt the Gaules: All the Countrie lying round about this citty, hath bene ſpoyled by the Turkes, and all the Monaſteries vvere ſacked and deſtroyed: one part of it is ſituated on the right ſide of the Danubius, and the reſt on the left ſide of the other river, vvhich in regard of the blackneſſe of the vvater, hath got the name of Raab, vvhich ſignifieth in Engliſh a Raven, from vvhich this riuer tooke its name. It is adorned vvith a Biſhops ſeate, hath great trading becauſe of the good ſituation thereof: for this city is very ſtrong by the nature of the place, being environned for the moſt part vvith mooriſh grounds, by the overflovving of theſe tvvo rivers abouesaid. It is a very ancient citty, and vvas in old time the vvintring place, and habitation of the Romane ſouldiers, as appeareth by the reliques, and ſepulchrall pillars vvith engravings, & images vvith longe govvnes layd up vvith the Church veſtrie. The Emperours Ferdinand, and Maximilian did ſo fortifie this tovvne vvith ſtrong Walls, Moates, and large Bulvvarks, that it novv ſeemes impregnable. For vvhich cauſe & for the defence of it, there vvas kept in it tvvo ſtronge garniſons, to vvit. The Hungarian Knights horſemen, and Germaine foote, vvhich held there a continuall gard againſt the Turks incurſions and ambuſcadoes: yet for all this, it vvas taken in by Sinan the Turkiſh Baſha in the yeare 1594. the 13. day of September, vvhen as the Earle of Hardec vvas Governour of it. But aftervvard Anno 1597. vvas recovered and regayned from the Turcks by the Baron of Svvartſenbourg, vvho for his ſeruice and merit vvas created Earle by the Emperour. It vvas defended by 1600. Turkes, vvhereof 1300. of them vvere ſlaine vvithin the citty: he tooke in it 700. horſe, great ſtore of proviſions and Amunition, and found ſeven vaults full of meale, & diverſe ſommes of money, vvhich amounted to aboue three hundred thouſand Ducats, and gott alſo in it a hundred great peeces of Canon, vvhereof 24. of them vvere ſo great, that they cold hardly be uſed, beſides great ſtore of pouder, materials, & armes. For vvhich cauſe this citty is novv moſt ſtrongly garded, being as it vvere, and as indeed it is, the Bulvvarke of Hungarie, Auſtria, Germanie, yea and of all Chriſtendome.

Lintz

Lintz is a pleaſant citty lying in Lovver Auſtria ſeated upon the Donavv, vvhere the Dra diſgorgeth it ſelfe into that great river, ſixe miles aboue Arlapen. There is not a more delight full place in all Auſtria, by reaſon there are round about it, many goodly caſtles, and houſes of pleaſure belonging to Noble men, and Lords, becauſe they ſtand ſo commodious for hunting, havvking, fovvling, and fiſhing. The Countrie about it aboundeth in all ſorts of graine: vvithin this citty there is a great Church vvith a high ſteeple. A very faire ſenate houſe, and a Caſtle ſituated upon a hill vvith a garniſon in it, vvhich commaunds this place, and hath a vvodden bridge over the Donavv, and on both ſides of the river many fine houſes, appertaining to Gentlemen and Farmers, vvhich giues a faire proſpect, eſpecially vvhen one paſſes the river by boate, vvhereof they haue many in that place. In the citty of Lintz a treatie vvas held Anno 1552. betvveene Ferdinand of Auſtria, brother unto Charles the fifth, and Maurice Prince Elector, for the ſetting at liberty out of priſon, Iohn Frederick Duke of Saxon. and Philip Lantgraue of Heſſen.

Paſſavv. Paſſavv is ſeated on the right ſide of the Donavv, lying alſo in lovver Bavaria, upon the mouth of the river Ihn, vvhich runs on the right hand of it. This citty is divided by theſe rivers into three tovvnes. For by reaſon of the accommodation of the ſituation, and the flovving of the rivers it ſeemes as if many tovvnes vvere joyned in one. For the one is called Ihnſtadt from the name of the river, ouer vvhich yovv paſſe into Paſſavv upon a vvodden bridge made over the Ihn. The citty of Paſſavv is built upō the promontoire of a Peninſula, under vvhich the Danubius runneth and ouer vvhich there is a bridge that joyneth the citty to the oppoſite ſide, being adorned vvith ſtately buildings and turrets. Vpon S. Georges mount is Oberhuys, the Caſtle and Biſhops ſeate, under vvhich lyes Ihlſtadt ſeparated from the Biſhops Palace by the river Iltz, vvhich runs under it: ſo that three rivers meets here together, namely, the Donavv, the Ihne & the Iltz. The Donavv in the midſt on the right receiveth the river Ihn coming from the Vendelici: on the left hand the Iltz, vvhich comes from the parts of Almaigne to the other ſide of the river, and falleth into the Donavv by the Biſhops caſtle. Through Ihnſtadt runneth a brooke, betvveene the Gate and Saint Severius Church, called the Boietra, and fals into the Ihn. The buildings of Ihn ſeeme to be more ancient, then thoſe of Paſſavv, vvhence vve maye conclude, that it vvas founded before the other, and vvas called in ancient times Boiodurum. S. Geertruyds Church ſtands yet in Ihnſtadt. In Paſſavv there are many, vvhereof S. Stephens is the Cathedrall, neere unto vvhich is the Biſhops Court, and the Chapiters Court. Likevviſe S. Pauls, S. Michels, and S. Groſſes Churches, and on the Weſtſide of the Citty ſtands S. Nicolas his monaſtery. Paſſavv at this day is an Epiſcopall Tovvne. The Biſhops reſidencie vvas heretofore at Ens, ſeated alſo upon the Donavv, vvhere the Anaſis fals into it, tvvelue miles from Paſſavv. The firſt Archbiſhop of Ens vvas called Laurence, ſent thither by the Apoſtle S. Peter. The ninth vvas made Biſhop of Paſſavv: and in the yeare 634. the Archbiſhoprick of Ens vvas united to the Biſhoprick of Paſſavv. Theodorike the third Duke of Bavaria, vvhen Heraclius vvas Emperour, gaue Paſſavv to the Biſhop: and the Emperour Arnulphus alſo Anno 894. gaue this Citty, and all the revenues of it to the Biſhop. In the yeare 899. Paſſavv vvas made a Cathedrall Citty, after that Laureacum, othervviſe called Ens, vvas demoliſhed by the Huns and Avaris, ſince vvhich time the Biſhops of Paſſavv haue intituled themſelues Archbiſhops of Laureacum.

Preſburch. Preſburg a Citty in Hungarie is ſituated on the left ſide of the Donavv, ten Germane miles aboue Viana. It is a faire Citty, and enioyes a good and a vvholeſome aire. The hils round about it are full of Vineyards: upon vvhich the Sunne ſhines, the other parts are full of vvoods. Along the rivers ſide there are many pleaſant Gardens, Meddovves, Groues, Orchards, and Cornefields, having alſo a faire Caſtle in it.

Regensperg or Ratisbone. Regenſpurg a Citty in Bavaria, lyeth on both ſides of the Donavv, vvithin the juriſdiction of this tovvne there are many large and goodly fields, vvhich yeeld abundance of corne. It is a very great and a faire Citty encompeſſed vvith ſtronge bulvvarks, moates, and ramparts. It is reported, there are as many Churches and Chappels in this Tovvne, as there are dayes in the yeare. That part of the tovvne, vvhich lies tovvards Almanie is the ancienteſt, and taketh from the riuer Regnus the name of Reginopurg, vvhich vvas likevviſe giuen to the Nevv-tovvne, built on the other ſide of the Donavv. In this Citty there are tvvo ſtone bridges; the one made ouer the Regnitz, the other ouer the Donavv, vvhereof the one is the ancienteſt, but the other the moſt magnificent, accounted the greateſt, and largeſt of all the bridges, vvhich haue bene made ouer the Rhene, or the Donavv, being ſomevvhat leſſer, then that at Dreſden made over the Elve, vvhich is 800. paces longe, and this but 470. It is ſaid to be built by Henry Duke of Bavaria and of Saxonie by the helpe of the riches of the Citizens of Regenſpurg, and the Biſhop anno 1135. Marke the fellovv-helper of Saint Paul, vvas the firſt vvhich preached the Chriſtian faith in this place. Albert the Great vvas Biſhop of this Citty. It is an imperiall Citty in vvhich there hath bene held many Dyets and convocations, being famous for the entervievv made here betvveene the Emperour Charles the fifth, and Maurice Duke of Saxonie: vvhere it vvas agreed, that Maurice abandoning his uncle, & cleaving to the Emperour, ſhould be inveſted in the Dukedome, and Electourſhip of Saxonie. Likevviſe memorable for the meeting Anno 1541. vvhere by the Commandment of Charles the fifth, Prince Frederick and Granville being Preſidents, the religion vvas diſputed of betvveene Melanchton & Eckius.

Viana or VVien. Viana, VVien, or Auſtria is the Metropolis of the Archduchie, ſeated on the right ſide of the Donavv. This Citty is famous for a repulſe giuen to the Turke Anno 1526. of vvhome tvvo hundred thouſand under the conduct of Solyman the magnificent beſeiged the Citty: but by the Valour of Frederick the ſecond Electour Palatine, and other Princes they were forced to retire, after many fearefull aſſaults with the loſſe of 80. thouſand ſouldiers, ſo much vvas the Duke of Auſtria beholding to the Count Palatine Electour in thoſe dayes, for helping to ſaue this Citty and this Countrie: ſince vvhich time it hath ben moſt ſtrongly fortifyed vvith high ramparts, bulvvarkes, and moates: in ſo much that novv it is counted one of the ſtronges Cities of Germanie, & the Bulvvarke of Chriſtendome againſt the Turke. It is a very populous Citty, hauing abundance of Marchants, Tradeſmen, and handiecrafts men in it, being adorned vvith many goodly buildings, temples, and churches, vvhereof Saint Stephens is the cathedrall, hauing a ſtately pelfrie, and an exceeding high ſteeple, vvhoſe foundation vvas layd An. 1340, and finiſhed 1400. It is 480. feete high, onely that of Straſburg is higher by 16. feete, or as Munſter ſaith 94. Charlemaigne built a Church in this citty in the honour of Saint Peter, and Henry Duke of Auſtria erected an Abbey in honour of Saint Gregorie, and called it Scotica. Anno 1200. Richard King of Engeland returning from his warres out of Aſia, taking up his lodging in this citty, was taken priſoner by Leopold Duke of Auſtria, vvho at his charges caſt up the Walls of this Citty. An. 1236. it vvas made an Imperiall citty, and had armes giuen it vvhich it keepes to this preſent, namely a ſpred Eagle or, vvith tvvo heads crovvned in a field ſables. This Citty vvas made an Vniverſity by the Emperour Frederick the ſecond, and is much frequented by the Almaines, Italians, Hungarians, Bohemians, Polonians, and Eſclavonians. Without the Citty ſtands S. Severins Cloiſter, in vvhich there are Moncks.

Vlm. Vlm is an Imperial Citty of Suevia, or Svvaben, ſo called from the companie of Elmes, which environ it. It is ſeated upon the confluence of the Ilar, and the Blave, the one riſing in the Countrie of Algeois, the other in VVirtenbergerland, and falleth alſo into the Donavv. It is one of the foure Imperiall Cities. In the yeare 1300. it was firſt girt about with a Wall, & is now a ſtronge, and a rich towne, furniſhed with all things neceſſarie for the ſuſtentation of man. It hath many Churches in it; whereof one ſurpaſſeth in magnificence, pillars, cunning ſtructure, ſumptuouſneſſe and ſtatelineſſe of vvorkemanſhip all others of Almanie, ſaving that of Straeſbourg. It hath an exceeding high ſteeple to the top vvhereof the Emperour Maximilian vvent up to vievv the Countrie round about it. There are in this Citty tvvo great Market places, and tvvo Magazins vvel provided vvith all militarie Amunition, Engins, and Inſtruments. It hath a very large Command and Iuriſdiction, & maye truely be accounted one of the principall Cities of the Empire, being able to maintaine it ſelf, aſvvell in the times of peace as of vvarre. It ſtands in a very pleaſant place, in an ovall forme & is ſomevvhat more in length, then in breadth. The circuit vvhereof is 6400. paces, and lies upō the Donavv, vvhich here beginneth to be navigable. There are no hils vvithin the confines of it, but onely S. Michels, vvhich lies on the Northſide being very fertile, ſo that this Citty can hardly be beſieged; in regard of the ſite, the ſtrength of the Walls, and the deepeneſſe of the Moates. The Donavv runneth on the Southſide of it, having on that ſide a faire Gate. The principall Church is dedicated in honour of Saint Marie, firſt founded anno 464. and fully built 488. having coſt ten hundred thouſand Crounes, beſids that vvhich vvas built & edifyed by liberality, being one of the largeſt and the longeſt Churches of Almanie, for it is in length from the Quire to the furtheſt end of the Church 304. paces.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF BAVARIA.

The Originall of the name.

BAVARIA, taketh the name from the Avares, reliques, and Remnants of the Hunns, which the Norici expulsed, tooke in their Countrie, and in stead of Avares, or Avaros named them selues Bavares; from the Boys, people on this side of the Gallican Alpes, or Lombardies, which in some mens opinion inhabited in these parts; it is also called Boiaria, but commonly Bavaria.

The Site.

This Countrie boundeth Eastward upon Austria, Westward upon Suevia, Southward upon the Svviſſers Alpes, and Northward upon Franconia.

The temperature.

The length thereof is 29 Germane miles, and 25 in breath: for the most part it hath a healthfull aire, and is a very pleasant Countrie, and fruitfull, but not so much in Wine, as in Corne, though in some places it yeeldeth good store of Wine, which hath a sowre tast: for the best Wines are brought into it out of El- satia, France, and Austria: About Regenspurgh, and Landshut there groweth much Corne. This Countrie aboundeth also in Saltpits, in all kind of fruit, trees, yron, Cattaile, and all sorts of Deere; Breifly, in all things needfull for the Sustentation of mans life: they haue abundance of Hogs, that as the Hungarian Oxen, so also the Bavarian Hogs, are sent into divers Countries, and the most part of them are fedd, and fatned with Akorns and Crabbs.

The fertility

Many Deere.

In the woods, besides wild Bores, & Swyne, there are all kind of Deere, especially many heards of Staggs, which no man may kill, or hunt without a Warrant from the Duke. Anno 1562 upon the 22 of August 1562, there was a Stagg kild, which was so great, and heavie that he weighed 625 pounds.

Ancient people.

In this Countrie heretofore the Narisci, Vindelici, or Vandales & Norici haue had their habitation. The Narisci (which at this day are called the Northgouwers, or North-landers, according to the opinion of Aventinus, or Narcavers by Melanchton) were separated from the others by the Danubius, or Donauw. The Vindelici, according to the description of the Ancients dwelt betweene the Rhæti and the Narisci. Rhætia is twofould, whereof the one is larger, and broader, contayning the Vindelici, Norici, and properlie the Rhæti, the other is smaller. If ye will giue credit to Ptolomie, he saith that the river Lycus, or the Lech parted the Vindelici from the Rhæti: but if ye will beleeue Strabo, he saith, that the Rhyne and the Boden-sea separated them one from another. The Vendelici or Vandales, were separated from the Germans by the Donauvv, and from Italie by the Alpes. The Originall of the name of the Vendelici, Marcus Velserus hath truely obserued out of Richardus:

Respicit & late fluvios Vindamque Lycumque
Miscentes vndas, & nomina littoris, vnde
Antiquam gentem, populumque urbemque vocarunt Vindelicam.

What Nationthe Vindelici were, and what townes they haue had, on may gather out of Plinie and Ptolomie. To conquer them Augustus sent Tyberius, Claudius Nero, and Nero Claudius Drusius, both Step sonnes to the Emperour, who assaulted the power, and hoast of these Barbarous, & rude people, routed them out & disperced them, and with a litle Labour ouercame them. Whereof ye may read Paterculus lib. 2. Dion lib. 54. Horatius lib. 4. Odarum. Noricum, or Northgow beginneth from the river Oenus, or the Ihn, and reached Eastward and Southwart as farre as Hungarie, and Italie.

The Northgouwers.

The Northgouvvers were wont to be mightie Warriours, as being trained up in them and fought allwaies with the bordering Romans: this witnesseth the Ensis Noricus, or the Northgouwish sword, which Horatius speaketh much of, as also an inscription, which was found on the other side of the Donauw, which is this: Dis Manibus & Memoriæ Legionum. Et Memoriæ Miserrimorum, Vindelicis Præfectis Mocenianis, & Victori & Aurelio Filiis Vindelicis Surinus infelix Pater. F. C.

Bavaria was wont in former ages to be Gouverned by their owne Kings, till the time of the Emperour Arnulphus; they called him Cacannus, even as the Parthians called theirs Arsaces, and the Egyptians Ptolemæus. After them came up the Dukes, which rule yet unto this day.

The division

This Countrie is devided into the Vpper, & Nether Bavaria: Vpper Bavaria lyeth Southward next the Alpes, & by reason of the many Pooles, Moores, swift rivers, and hideous woods, it cannot be well manured, but is rather fitter to feede Cattaile. Nether Bavaria is better inhabited, and more fruitfull, especially about the Donauvv, the Iser and the Lavarus, where there are many vineyards: and this is the naturall division of Bavaria. But in regard of the politick Government, it is devided according to the Domination of the Princes, that is, into the Earledome of Bavaria, and the Vpper Palatinate. In this map the Earledome is described unto you, and in the former the Palatinate.

The Townes Munchen.

The Townes in Vpper Bavaria are Monachium, or Monacum, commonly called Munchen, lying by the side of the river Yser, and was built in the yeere 972 by Henry Duke of Bavaria, in the time of the Emperour Otho the first. It is one of the fineſt townes in all Germanie, situated betweene the rivers Ihn, and the Lech, betweene the townes of VVasserburgh, Auspurgh, and Frysingen, betweene meeres full of fish, and pleasant woods, hauing on the South side the Tyrollish-hills, and on the VVest side of the Suburbs very fine gardens, which by springs and running waters are separated one from an other. Among which there is the Dukes garden, which surpasseth all the rest, as well in greatnes, as in the abundance of all kind of herbes, and flowers, curious ſhorne hedges, and an excellent Fountaine with a Summer Arbour, having diverſe pictures and Images in it. But that which is moſt remarkeable, every evening there is a heard of Red-Deere, which come to feede almoſt under the windowes of this Arbour. Within the towne there are very faire Churches, Turrets, Libraries, a Senate-houſe, a Mercate place, great reſort of Merchants, and all manner of handie-crafts men, beſides diverſe other things, which are not onely uſefull, but ſerue alſo as ornaments to the admiration of the beholders.

Ingolſtadt. Ingolſtadt lyeth upon the Donauvv, called by the Ancients Ingleſtadt, in Latine Angeloſtadium, after the Angeli Suevi, who tooke this, and other Townes in by force. At the firſt it was a Village, but afterward obtained from the Emperour Lodovicus Bavarus, the right and Priviledge of a towne. In the yeere 1410 there was a Vniverſitie erected in it, which afterward was enriched, & augmented with many Priviledges, and Incomes by Lodovicus Duke of Bavaria, and Pope Pius the ſecond.

Freyſingen. Freyſingen, according to the teſtimonie of Rhenanus, and Munſter, was heretofore called Fruxinum, and is thought that it was built, whē the Romans poſſeſſed thoſe Confines, which reached from the Donavv as farre as the Alpes: The river Moſacus runneth by this towne. Beſides theſe, there are in Vpper Bavaria 32 townes.

Regenſpurch In Nether Bavaria lyeth Ratisbona, commonly called Regenſpurch ſituated upon the Donauvv: It is thought it tooke the name from Rayne, & the Caſtle, or Fort of Claudius Tyberius Nero the third Emperour, built about the time of the paſſion of our Lord, and Saviour Ieſus Chriſt, and after him was called Tyberina, or Auguſta Tiberii. Onuphrius writeth, that there is yet a monument remayning thereof in an old ſtone. Goltzius proueth the ſame alſo by a medaille or Iewell of Tiberius having this inſcription upon it: COL. AVG. TIB. Simlerus is of the opinion, that Regenſpurgh ſhould be Regium Antonini, or Caſtra Regina in libro Notitiarum. Althamerus mentioneth other names, but they are barbarous, as Regniſburgus, Rhatobonna, Rhatopolis, Hyaſpolis, Imbripolis, Regnipolis, Tetrapolis, Quadrata, and Germaniſheym. It ſeemeth it tooke the name of Ratiſbona from the Navigableneſſe of the river. This towne hertofore was the Capitall Citie of Bavaria, and the Court and reſidencie of the Kings and Dukes of the ſaid Countrie. There is a ſtone bridge made ouer the Donauvv Anno 1115 by the Emperour Henricus, with eleuen Arches, being 400 paces long, and 70 broade.

Paſſaw. Patavia, or Paſavium ſo called in Latin, & in Dutch Paſſavv Velſerus thinketh to be called in Libro Notitiarum Batava. Aventinus Pyramius and Lazius are of the opinion, that it ſhould be Ptolomies Boiodurum, a Citie of the Vandales. It is a very fine, and a famous towne which lyeth at the entrance into Nether Bavaria, as ye goe into Auſtria, betweene the Confines of both theſe Countries, ſituated upon the meeting of the two rivers the Donavv and the Ihn, or Oenus, which make there a halfe Iland in a very convenient, and pleaſant place. It is an Epiſcopall Seate, unto whome it belongeth, there is great trading in it, by reaſon of the commodiouſneſſe of the rivers, & the ſituation of the place: and as Lyons in France, and Gant in Flanders flouriſh greatly in commerce by reaſon of the confluence of two rivers: ſo alſo in Germanie this towne of Paſſaw is very famous.

Landſhud. Landſhud is a fine and a braue towne, lying upon the river of Yſer running by it, to the great benefite and commoditie of the Inhabitants. Irenicus will maintayne, and that out of Ptolomies fifth map of Europe, that it ſhould be Inutrium, and yet the ſite thereof agreeth not therewith. Aventinus a diligent writer of the hiſtorie of Bavaria ſaith, & that not abſurdly, that Mittenvvalt, a Village in Bavaria on this ſide of the Alpes, ſhould be Inutrium. This towne was built in the yeere 1208 by Lodovicus Duke of Bavaria. The fieldes lying about the towne, are very fruitfull in all kinde of Corne, Fruits, and Encreaſe, as Wine, and Cattaile. The buildings in this towne are very faire, but chiefly the Cathedrall Church, which is moſt ſkilfully built with blew ſtones, and hath a very high ſteeple: in the lower end of the Citie, there is a very magnificent Palace, made by Duke Albertus, commonly called the Nevv Building.

The rivers. The rivers, which runne through Bavaria are not few, as firſt the Danubius or Donavv, the greateſt and ſwiftes river in all Europe, famous in the writings of many Grecian, and Latine Authours: the others are the Lavarus, and Ihara, which are not onely very pleaſant rivers, but alſo full of fiſhe, having a ſwift currant: alſo the Illicetus, Oenus, Lycus, or the Lech, Alemannus, or Alimula, Nabus, Regus, Ambra, Zoyſa, Vilſus, VVolfaha, Gyſea, and diuerſe others.

Meers or Lakes. Beſides theſe rivers, this Countrie hath alſo in it many great Meers or Lakes, whereof euery one of them hath their ſeveral fiſhe, the chiefeſt of them are theſe, the Ammerſea, Aſea, VVirmſea, and Rorſea, &c.

Mountaines The higheſt & greateſt mountaines in this Countrie are the Pœnine Alpes, and the Mount Caravancas: to name the number of them in particular, it were almoſt impoſſible, as likewiſe all the Woods in this Countrie, which are ſo manie, that they ſeeme as one wood, or foreſt, which indeed they are, being almoſt all parts of the Svvartzvvood, & it is verely thought, that in time paſt, this whole tract of Land, was couered therewith. How beit theſe woods haue ſeverall names, according to the parts, and places where they ſtand, as the Heynerdoch, the Svvartzvvood, Grunvvood, Zellervvood, &c.

VVoods.

The nature of the Inhabitants. The Inhabitants of this Countrie are giuen more to manuring of Lands and feeding of Cattaile, then to followe the warrs: they are no Merchants, their trading is moſt with Bacchus and Venus, for the propagation of Children. They ſeldome travell into other Countries.

The ſecond imperiall Circle. The ſecond Imperiall Circle, is the Bavarian Circle, conſiſting of three States, the firſt are the Lords Spirituall, as the Arch-biſhop of Saltzburch, the Biſhops of Paſſavv, of Friſingen, of Regenſpurch the Priour of Berchtolſgaden, the Abbot of Rempeſeck, of VValt Saxonie, Roden or Rot, Keysheym, S. Emeran of Regensburgh, the Abeſſe of Alt Munſter, and Ober Munſter at Regenſpurch. The ſecond State, or Lords temporall are the Duke of Bavaria, the Palatine of Bavaria, the Land-grave of Luchtenberch, the Earles of Hage, of Ortenburgh, the Free-Lords of Stauffen, or Stauffneck, of Rimfels, or Rhinfelden, of Degenberch, of Vpper Sultzpergh. The third State are the townes of Freiſtet, and Regenſpurch.

The deſcription of the Biſhoprick of SALTZBOVRG, And the Dukedome of CARINTHIA.

Name.

Fertilty.

THE Biſhoprick of Saltz-bourg fetcheth its name from the Metropolis Saltz-burgh. It hath a rich ſoile, affording diverſe kinde of mettals, as golde, ſilver, copper and yron: there is found alſo in it: Vitrioll, Brimſtone, Alum and Antimonia, with marble-ſtones. The fields are good for ſeeds, tillage, and bearing of graine: there are pleaſant Mountaines and Hills, for hauking and hunting of Reddeere, and other Veniſon. The Chriſtian faith was firſt preached here by Rupertus Biſhop of Wormes, iſſued from the Kings of France, who being chaſed from his reſidencie about the yeare of our Lord five hundred & fourtie, after the deceaſe of Childebert, came to Ratisbonne or Regenſperg unto Theodor, Duke of Bavaria; baptized, and inſtructed him in the Chriſtian faith, and paſſing through Norica, under the ſafe conduct of this Duke baptized many. And ſeing the ruines and deſolation of old Iuvavia, and fynding it commodious for an Epiſcopall Sea, buit a Church in it, to the honour of Saint Peter, adding unto it S. Benedicts Monaſtery, of which many Abbots afterwards attained unto this Epiſcopall dignitie: he governed this Epiſcopall Church 40 yeares, and then dyed anno 623. Munſter numbreth up 28 Prelates of Saltzbourg, the laſt whereof was Erneſt, Count Palatine of the Rhene. The Duke of Bavaria is deſcended from Albert, and from Runegunda, daughter unto Frederick the Emperour: this Sea was honored with the title of an Arch-Biſhopricke, by Leo the third, in the dayes of Arnold the tenth Prelate of this Church. There are under it theſe Suffragans, as the Biſhop of Trent, of Paſſaw, of Vianno, of Gurce, of Brixe, of Friſinge, of Seccow, the Valentin and Chemin. Its Metropolis is Saltzbourg or Salisburg, becauſe it takes this name from the River Saltzech, though ſome deriue it from Salt, which is made about it. This towne was heretofore called Iuvantia, Iuvavia, or Iuvavium, from the latine verbe Iuvare to help, & was named in the German tongue Helfenburg: becauſe that in this very place, betweene the narrow hils: Iulius Cæſar built a ſtrong Caſtle, which ſerved as a Fortreſſe, a Retraite, and a place of refuge for his Roman Legions, againſt the Allmans, whome he reſolved to put to flight and defeate: for it is reported, that the Romans overthrew in that place 3400000 Germans, and tooke 1500000 Captives & Slaves: others ſay, that it tooke that name frõ the next river lying by it, called Iuvavius

Townes.

This Citty is ſeated in the midſt of the Alpes, with a large circuit of walls, adorned with Turrets, ramparts, and other publike and particular edifices. Heretofore the Sea and reſidencie of her Lords, when ſhee bore up her head, and the magnificent ſtructure of her Churches, beautifyed within with goodly pillars of marble: as well the commodiouſneſſe of the River, as the fine ſituation of it, ads much unto it. It is now in great eſteeme, becauſe it is the Arch-Biſhops Sea, which was firſt ordained at Lauriack, then at Paſſaw, but for the viciſſitude of humaine things, it was tranſported from thence hither. It hath round about it Marſhes, Valleys, Mountaines & Hills: the lower grounds furniſheth them with paſturage, and fatt feeding for Cattle: the Mountaines delightfull for hunting and hauking. Here is the tombe of Philip Theophraſt the Paracelſus, a moſt famous Doctor of Phyſike, who dyed there the 24 of September 1551, and was entered here, who by his mervaillous cures, healed & chaſſed from humaine bodies, the malignant deceaſes, and incurable ulcers of the Leproſie, Sciatica, Gout, Hydropiſie, and other deſperate maladies, and afterwards gave all his goods to the poore. Many men have aſcribed much to this Theophraſt, and to this ingenious induſtrious ſpirit, who hath not onely reſtored many men to their healths, but alſo by extraction brought imperfect mettals to their perfection, and could turne lead and quick-ſilver into gold, or the Sunne, as it is reported, and which hath bin tryed by example: but wee leave theſe things to the learned judgement of thoſe, which have knowledge in that art. This Countrie is watered with many Rivers, and an infinite number of brookes, ſpringing out of theſe Mountaines and hills. The Anaſus runneth Northward, encreaſed with the Altze, Saltze and Matichy, which fall into it. The Traun iſſuſeth out of the Lakes: in this Countrie, as likewiſe the Mura and the Drave, two famous Rivers: the laſt whereof Plinie ſaith in his third booke and 25 Chapter, to come out of the Countrie of the Noricy: the leſſer diſcharge themſelves into theſe.

Rivers & Brookes.

Mountaines and Alpes.

The whole Countrie is Mountainous and craggie, by reaſon of the ſteepe tops of the hils, which the Inhabitants call Taurn. The chiefeſt whereof are theſe, Radſcatterthaurn, Felbergthaurn, Kornthaurn, Caſteinerthaurn, and divers others, which are ſo ſpime and high, that thoſe which goe up to them in the midſt of Summer, comming up to the tops of them, are much troubled with colde, neither is there any way for waggens or carts to get up, by reaſon of the narrowneſſe of the wayes, and the ſteepe downe falls: that man & horſe which goes up to them, are oftentimes in danger of tumbling down head long, for they can ſcarcely clime up them, eſpecially if their horſes be loaden. But the moſt danger of all is, that ſometimes there comes a ſudden guſt of winde, which is ready to caſt them down head-long, as likewiſe becauſe of the great heaps & hills of ſnow, that are upon them, that ſomewhiles men and beaſts ſinke into them, and lye buried under them. There are others alſo beſides theſe, called Taurn: on the South-ſide of this Countrie, called the Alpes or vulgary Alben, which have diverſe names, as Welacher Alben, Swamberger Alben, &c.

CARINTHIA.

Name.

Carinthia, or in Rithaimers opinion, ought rather to be called Carnithia, which name ſeemes to be taken from the Carny, the ancient Inhabitants of this Countrie, whereof Plinie and others make mention. But touching the antiquitie of this name, ſome men are in doubt, whither they were called Carni from the ancient Citty of Carnunt, whereof the ancients ſpeake often, or whither it tooke this name from them. This place lyeth in Pannonia Ripenſa 7 Germaine miles from Vianna, where the ruines of antiquitie demonſtrate, that there ſtood a very faire and a goodly towne, which was called S. Petronella. Theſe Carniola are called in the Allmaine tongue Karnten, Krain, Karſt. This Countrie is 75 Engliſh miles in length, and 55 in breadth. It is bounded on the Eaſt and on the North with Stiria, on the Weſt and South-ſide with Friuly, Bavaria and the Alpes, and part of Carniolia. The Valleys & hills produce much Corne: the ſoile is colde & barren, but further of being not overſhaded with the tops of the high Alpes is fat & good. Heretofore when as the dignities and offices were given to the Princes of Germanie: the Duke of Carinthia was chiefe Huntſ-man of the Empire, whoſe office was to decide all controverſies ariſing about hunting. In the yeare 1330, the Dutchie of Carinthia fell unto the houſe of Auſtria: for Duke Henry, dying without heire-males, this Dutchie returned to the Empire, & was given in fief by the Emperur Lewes, to Albert Duke of Auſtria, the ſecond of that name, in fief hereditaire. Now, Iohn Sonne unto the King of Bohemia, eſpouſed the Dukes daughter, a widdowe: the Countie of Tyrol, was given him in ſtead of the Dutchie of Carinthia: Iohn then dying without iſſue, the Marqueſſe of Brandenbourgh, having marryed his widdowe, the ſaid Countie fell to the houſe of Brandenbourgh, but the Marqueſſe procreating no children by his wife, the Countie of Tyrol was given to the Dukes of Auſtria. The ſtrange and obſervable ceremonies, with which the Arch-Dukes of Auſtria are acknowledged Dukes of Carinthia, take here out of Munſter. In the Meddowes adjoyning to the towne of S. Viet, a certaine Countrie-man, to whome that office by inheritance belongeth; ſitteth on a marble ſtone there lying, holding in his right hand a Cow, with a blacke Calfe, and in his left hand a Mare, as leane as a rake: then commeth the new Duke, attyred in a plaine ruſticke habite, a peſants cap, and a Shephards hooke in his hand: his Courtiers attending him in richeſt apparell, there with colours flying before them: at whoſe approach the Countrie-man above mentioned, demaundeth in the Slavonian tongue: What he is that ſo Majeſtically commeth thitherward: and the people anſwere, that it is the future Duke. He againe aſketh, whether he be a juſt Iudge, and one that will maintaine the Libertie of the Countrie, and ſincerity of the Religion: the people anſwere, he will: then he aſketh, by what right he will diſplace him from his marble ſeate: to whome the Stuard of the new Dukes houſe replyeth: he ſhall give thee ſixtie pence in ſilver, the Cattell now ſtanding by thee, the cloathes which he hath at this time on, & thy houſe ſhall ever be free from taxe and tribute. The fellow upon this, taketh the Duke by the hand, and biddeth him to be a good Prince, giveth him a gentle cuffe on the Eare, ſetteth him on the marble-ſtone, and taking away the Cattell, departeth: this done, the new Duke goeth to S. Vites Church, and having done his devotions, putteth of his ruſticke weedes, and dreſſeth himſelfe in cloaths befitting a Prince, & feaſteth them, for which after theſe ceremonies he is acknowledged. The Metropolis of this Countrie is S. Viet, ſituated upon the River Glan: It hath a very ſpatious Market-place, with a cleare Fountaine, ſtanding in it perpetually running. There are beſides theſe townes, 1 Villack, faire for the ſumptuouſneſſe of the outſide of their houſes, being adorned with variety of pictures, and pleaſant ſtories. It ſtandeth in a plaine girt about with Mountaines, the River of Draw running through, with a ſtone bridge over it, from the one ſide to the other. 2. Clagenfurt, heretofore (as Lazius relateth) was called Claudia, is well fortifyed. Some write that the Inhabitants of this towne are ſo paſſionate & ſevere againſt theeves, that if they have the leaſt ſuſpition of a man, that hath committed theft, they either hang or ſtrangle him on a ſudden, without being heard what he can ſay for himſelfe: then the third day after he is executed, they examine his fact, & forme his proceſſe. If they finde him giltleſſe, they take him downe from the gallowes, and burie him honorably at the common charge of the towne: but if he be found giltie, then he hangs till his bones fals downe from the gibit in peeces. But Rithaimer ſaith, this is a falſe report invented againſt them. 3. Friſach famous for the antiquity thereof. 4. Wolfperg for lying upon the River of Lavanda. 5. S. Leonard. 6. Spittall. 7. Gurah. There are in this Country a great many Lakes and Rivers. The Lakes are Mulſetter-zee, Oßiacher-zee, Werd-zee, Lavandt-zee, Iudemberger-zee, Wey-zee. The chiefe Rivers are Dravus, or the Drave, which traverſeth through Styria and Pannonia, and diſchargeth himſelfe into the Danubius. The leſſer are the Save, Glan, Schleinicza, & the Lavanda, which looſe themſelves all in the Drave: the Mura falleth likewiſe into it: the moſt part of theſe Rivers have aſwell their heads in this Countrie, as their mouths; which diſburdens themſelves as aforeſaid. This Countrie is full of Mountaines and hills: for their loftie tops (as Strabo ſaith) riſe like ſhoomakers laſts, joyned one to an other, repreſenting a continuall face, & ridge of Mountaines: ſometimes falling, and ſomewhiles riſing with ſpinie and hornie tops. All of them as is thought parcels of Mount Taurus, whence it ſeemes the vulgar have giv̄ them this diverſitie of names, as thoſe which lye weſtward Gultain Taurn, Villacher Taurn, Raſtatter-taurn, Karnen taurn. Nevertheleſſe ſome of them retaine the name of Alpes, as Medring-alben, Serbis-alben, San-alben, &c. Dietzberg hangs as it were over the Drave, and upon that is the ſilver Mount, which the Natives call Silberberg. Out of the Mount Haſberg ſprings the Mura and the Iſara: the one taking his courſe Southward, the other Eaſtward. Now among the exceeding high Mountaines, called the Taurn & Alpes, there are hanging Foreſts and Woods, all parcells of the Hyrcinian Foreſt, as Hirſchpuhl, Priewald, the Hermitage, commonly called the Foreſt of In der Eynod. In the bouwels of theſe Mountaines & Alpes, there are Mines of ſilver, gold, yron and quick-ſilver. For the Clergie and Eccleſiaſticke juriſdiction, it is divided betweene the Biſhop of Saltz-bourg, and the Patriarck of Aquila, called Paracelſus.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE KINGDOME And Prince-Electoriate OF BOHEMIA.

The originall of the name of this Countrie.

SOme say that Bohemia, Bœmia, or Boiemia, taketh the name from the Schvvartzvvaldt, because Baum in high dutch signifieth a tree. This Countrie is called in Greeke Bœmia, and by Ptol. the Inhabitants thereof Bœmi. Strabo in his 7. booke nameth them Kolduli: others affirme they had this name from the Boii, who came and setled themselues here, and seemeth to haue taken their name from Bois, which is as much to say as VVood, or Wood-landers. Ptolomee in his description of Germany, lib. 2. cap. 11. placeth the Bœmi in the Hircinian wood, or Swartzwood in saying, they were a great people, whose confines reached as farre as the Danubius. Strabo calleth it Bubienium, and so doe Rhenanus, Aventinus, and others; though it be Βοίασμον, in the printed Greekish coppies, which Rhenanus, holdeth to be an errour, for Casaubon noteth that in the ancient coppies they read Βοίαιμον. And Tacitus nameth it Boiemum.

The site. This Countrie boundeth Eastward upon Moravia, and Silesia, Westward upon Noricum, Southward upon Austria, and Nortward upon Saxonie, & Mysia. It is encompassed round about in the forme of an Amphitheater with the Schvvartzvvaldt, and hence it comes, that the length is answerable to the breath, both parts being about two hundred thousand paces.

The temperature. Because of the continuall Northerne windes, which blowe often here, the aire is rewe, and colde, and yet notwithstanding healthfull.

The fertilitie. The Soile is so fruitfull in bearing of Wheate, and Barly, that it sufficiently furnisheth the neighbouring Countries. Wine is somewhat scarce, and that which this Countrie yeeldeth is sowre, and sharpe: but in stead thereof, there groweth as good Saffran, both for iuyce, smell and colour, as is to be found in any place. This Countrie is rich also in many other sorts of spiceries. And though there be no oyle made in Germanie, yet there are rich silver mines, out of which they digg good store of silver. Their Mines. chiefe mines are about Cromelavv, Budevveisz, and Kuttingbergh. In some of them they finde also gould oare, which bein refined they brought once to their king a wedge of gold, which weighed ten pound weight. In the towne of Beraun, there are Iron mines, and in other places there are tinne, lead, & copper mines.

In some parts of the hills they finde also Carbuncles, Amethysts, and some other precious stones.

They haue many woods, wherein there are abun- VVildbeast. dance of wildbeasts, as Beares, all kind of Deere, foxes, and others: but among the rest there is a wilde Bull called in Latine Vrus, which they in their language name Lomi, so that in Bohemia there is excellent hunting. The Huntsmen report, that the Lomi, hath a bladder under one of his cheekes, which hangeth downe his neck, that when he is heated, and hart hunted, he filleth it with foame, and seeing the hounds readie to fasten upon him; then he casts it out upon them as hott as scalding water, which fetcheth both skinne, and flesh from them.

This Countrie was first gouverned by a Duke, The ancient government. whereof the first was one Zechus, which came out of Croatia, and gaue the first fundamentall lawes to this nation. It is said that Crocus succeeded him, and after him his daughter Libussa with her husband Primislaus. Nimislaus, Mnata, his nephew, Vrislaus, the sonne of Mnata, Noctericus, and Borsinous under whose government Bohemia Anno 900. in the time of the reigne of the Emperour Arnulphus, received the Christian faith, and in the yeere 1086. it was made a kingdome, and Vratislaus the first, was by the Emperour Henricus the Fourth at the Councill of Mentz, made king of Bohemia, and to that end Gilbertus Bishop of Trier, was sent to Pragh, to a nnoint and crowne him king before the people, and afterward his Ducheese called Svvatana, was likewise crowned Queene. Notwithstanding all this, till the time of Vratislaus te Fourth, this Countrie was gouverned againe in the forme of a Dukedome. But this Vratislaus having assisted the Emperour Fredericus faithfully in his warres of Milan, he was proclamed, and declared King by him, and as his associate in the Empire, giving him for his armes, a red Lyon with a taile parted, in a field Argent. Some of these Kings of Bohemia were afterward Elected Emperours.

The King of Bohemia is the seventh Prince-Ele- The seventh Prince-Electoriate. ctour. Some townes in Bohemia belong to the king in particular, the others to severall Lords.

Praga is the Metropolitan Citie, and was first en- Pragh. compassed with walls and moates, by Primislaus the Third Duke of Bohemia, and his Ducheese Libussa. The Castle Visegradum, or Hratschni in high dutch, standeth upon a steepe hill: This Citie is divided into foure townes, namely, into the Olde, the Newe, the Litle. The Hratschni or upper towne, and the river Mulda parteth the old, and the new from the litle, the Hratschni or upper towne, where the Castle standeth, and the Cathedrall church of S. Vit, but the bridge ioygne all parts together againe. It is a very faire stone-bridge, having 24. Arches and was first made by King Vladislaus. Carolus the Fourth Emperour, and King of Bohemia, did mightely beautifie, and enlarge this Citie. There is a very steepe hill, as ye goe up to the Castle. In the church of the Castle there is a most sumptuous tombe of Alabaſter, wherein diverſe Princes, and Emperours haue beene buyried. Chriſtophorus Pryamius mainteineth, that this Citie was Ptolomies Caſurgis: but Aventinus affirmeth the contrarie, that it is his Marobudum, and Strabo his Bubienum. Anno 1370. King Carolus erected a Vniverſitie in it, which continued there, till the yeare 1408, but afterward in regard of ſome ſedition, which hapned there, it was removed to Leypzich. Wee cannot omit to rehearſe here the Latine verſes, which Iulius Cæſar Scaliger, wrote in commendation af this Citie, vid.

Septa metallifero circum quæ monte ſuperbis
Hercyniæ medio Marcia Praga ſinu,
Linque aliis populis tanta munimina ſedis,
Qui nequeant armis jura tenere loci.
Namque tuum eſt non præſidio turgere locorum:
Sed loca præſidiis fidere poſſe tuis.

Egra. The towne of Egra, lyeth at the entrance into Bohemia upon the river Eger from whence this towne taketh the name. In ancient times, it was under the Empire; but nowe at this day is ſubject to the crowne of Bohemia. It is a fine, and a cleane towne, having faire, and ſtately buildings in it, and the Inhabitants are kind, curteous, and vertuous. It is adorned without with pleaſant gentlemens houſes, gardens, orchards, and fields, and with the river abounding in fiſhe. In this towne there is made the beſt Methegline that is in Germanie.

The leſſer townes. The other leſſer townes of note in Bohemia lying next unto Moravia are Mutha, Chrudima, Hradecium Regina, Pardulitium, and Litomeſſium. Towards Noricum, Glatovia, Dornaſlicium, Miſa, Tacovia. Towards Auſtria, Budvvitz, Cromlauvv, Trebonia, Hradecium Henrici. Next unto Myſia, Pons, Cadana, Chomotouvv, Auſt. Toward the frontiers of Sileſia, Hiarmirium, Glatz, Curia, and ſome others in the midſt of Bohemia are Cuthna, Colonia, Pilſen, Verona, Zatecium, Launa, Slana, Lytomeritz, and Tabor.

The chiefe rivers. The chiefe rivers are the Elve, which thoſe of this Countrie call the Labe, ſpringing out of a mountaine not farre from Auſt. This river is full of Salmons: the Muſtavia (which is ſuppoſed to be Ptolomies Caſſurgis) called by the Germans the Molea, and by the Inhabitants Vltauva. There is alſo the Eger, the Saſſana, the Gihera, the Miſa, and others. In ſome of theſe rivers, there hath bine found peeces of gould, of the bignes of a peaſe, which was ſo pure, that they needed no refyning: alſo ſome times they haue found ſome ſhells, which haue had pearle in them.

The mountaines. The mountaines of Sudeta compaſſe Bohemia, round about, and ſhoote deepe into this Countrie, and as it were with a ridge, parteth the ſame in the midſt, and in ſome places runne beyond it, to the South, and Weſtward. The Feuchtenbergh, or Pynebergh is ſo called from the abundance of Pinetrees which growe upon this mountaine. It runneth through the Countrie Noricum and beginneth from the hills, lying in the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh, and ſo into Franconia, Voitlandt, and Bohemia, and within the ſpace of two thouſand paces, there guſhet out of it foure famous rivers, which is admirable, and a miracle in nature, to ſee them runne towards the foure Corners of the world, for the Mayn taketh his courſe trough Franconia, the Sala through Thuringia: the Nab through Bavaria, and the Eger through Bohemia. In this Mountaine there are found ſome mines of Gould, of Silver, Quickſilver, Iron, and Brimſtone: yea, and in ſome places they finde precious Stones. Mines.

This Kingdome is encompaſſed about with woods & Foreſts, as if it were with a Wall. That part which runneth from the Weſt to the Eaſtward, was called by Strabo Gabreta Silva, and by Ptolomee Gabrita: But that part which runneth from the South unto the Donavv, or Danubius: is called by Ptolomee Lunæ Silva, and by the inhabitants the Paſſauvverwaldt, and where it turneth Weſtward towards Moravia, the Scheib-vvalt. Foreſts & woods.

The Kingdome of Bohemia in the yeere 1366. was devided by the Emperour, and King Carolus into twelve Provinces, over which were yeerly apponited a Captaine, a Baron, and one of the Knighthood, whoſe office was to take information of ſmall controverſies, and cauſes hapning betweene the ſubjects of ſeverall Lordſhips. Secondly if any miſchiefe were done by theeves, and murderers, then they were to call to the gentlemen under that juriſdiction to helpe to apprehend them. Thirdly, if any warre aroſe, then everie man was to repaire to his Chieftaine. There are in this Kingdome theſe Lordſhips, and States following, namely, the Burgraviate of Carlſteyn, where the royall crowne is kept. The Counties of Sobkovvitz, Haſſenſtain, Litzka, Comethavv, Paſſau, Melnick, Roſenbergh, and Hradets: The Lordſhips of Haſſenburgh, Leip, Perſtain, Dobitſchavv, VValſtain, Roſchateck, Dachavv, Totſnick, VVardenbergh, Schellenbergh, Koſt, Schmiritz, Liſſavv, Kunevvalt, Deſſavv, Schonpeck, Slavva, Groſſen, Bora, Libenſtain, Ioppendorf, Gradetz, Colourat, whereof ſome are Earledomes. Alſo the Barons of Trachenbergh, and Milluſch. The ſeverall Provinces.

The citie of Pragh was by the Emperour, and King Carolus honoured with the title of an Archbiſhoprick, under whome the Biſhop of Litomiſz is Suffragane. Thouching the cuſtomes, and manners of the Bohemians, Iohannes Dubravius writheth thus:

The Bohemians (ſaith he) are in their behaviour, and manners, yea in all their actions, and doings Lyon-like: They are of a tall ſtature, having broad, and ſtrong breaſts, rough-yellow haire, part whereof couvereth their necks, a loude voice, bright eyes, and ſtrong bodies: And as a Lyon is proud, and diſdayneth all other Beaſts, eſpecially when he is ſett upon, will not eaſely be pacifyed, and quietted: ſo alſo herein the Bohemian doth participate of his nature, for he diſpiſeth every man in word, and deede: in his going and ſtanding he is ſtately: in his behaviour, haughtie, highminded, and proud; and when he is provoked, or ill uſed, then is he very cruell, ſtorming, and arrogant, and violent in the execution of his will. He is alſo ambitious, and vaine-glorious, he alſo reſembles the Lyon in greedineſſe, for his pray & meate, and ſpareth no coſt, to ſatisfie his licorouſneſſe withall. The nature of the Inhabitants.

The deſcription of the Dutchie OF SILESIA.

TOuching the name of this Countrie, there are different opinions: the Poliſh writers ſay, that Sileſia is as much to ſay, as Slezaces that is a rabble of people, gathered together out of ſeverall nations, as out of Suevia, Saxonia, Bohemia & Moravia, beſides ſome other Inhabitants. Curæus contradicteth this, and deriveth their name from the Elyſii: others take it from the Eſclavii or Slavonians, which were the firſt Inhabitants of this Conntrie, thinking that this name was ſomewhat altered. Others again, who ſeeme to come neereſt the truth, fetch it from the mount Silens, which the learned call Sabothum, and the common people Zottenbergh.

The ancient people thereof then, were the Quadi, Lygy, and in ſpeciall the Elyſy, Nabarnali, Manimi, together with the Illingy and Luſaty, though at this day Lauſnitz and Sileſia, are two ſeverall Countries. If one obſerve well the ſite thereof, it is ſome 40 Germane miles in length, and ſcarcely 20 in breadth. The bounds Eaſtward touch the head of the River Viſtula, or the Wixell, not farre from the towne of Teſſchen, from whence it runneth along by the Kingdome of Poland, & ſo downeward to the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh, upon which, and Lauſnitz it bordereth Northward, Weſtward upon the Kingdome of Bohemia, & Southward upon the Marquiſate of Moravia. Betweene Bohemia, Moravia and Sileſia lye the Sudetes Montes, which ſeparate theſe Countries one from an other.

After that Boleſlaus the third of that name, Duke of Poland, who dyed in the yeere 1139, according to his will this Countrie being divided among his 3 Sonnes, there hapned a great rent and ſeparation. Vladiſlaus the ſecond, Duke of Poland and Sileſia, who was borne of the aforeſaid Boleſlaus his firſt wife, had in marriage Chriſtina the daughter of the Emperour, Henricus the fifth, through whoſe inſtigation he attempted to put his brother beſides his inheritance, in which he had ſuch ill ſucceſſe, that in the ſeventh yeere of his government, he loſt his own Kingdome, and was forced to flye for refuge to his Coſin the Emperour Conradus the third. Whereupon then there hapned ſuch a confuſion for a long time, that ſometimes it was ſubject to the Bohemians, other times to the Poles, but the greateſt miſchiefe of all was, becauſe it was divided into petty Dukedomes, and ſo loſt the ancient glorie and reſpect, eſpecially when as Boleſlaus the fourth in the yeere 1158 was conſtrained by the Emperour Fredericus Barbaroſſa, not onely to reſtore his expulſed brother, & his three Sonnes, but alſo to ſubject himſelfe to the Saxons Law, which for this cauſe are in uſe yet to this day in Polonia. After their Fathers death, theſe three Sonnes divided all Sileſia into three parts: Boleſlaus had for his poſſeſſion the middle part of the Countrie, which lyeth about Breſlaw: the Dukedome of upper Sileſia, bordering upon Moravia and Cracow, namely, Ratibor, Oppeln, Toſſchen & ſome others, Micelaus had for his ſhare. The loweſt part or nether Sileſia, next unto the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh and great Poland, as Lignitz, Glogaw, Sagan and other places was given to Conradus, who reedified Glogaw, whome his Fathers brother had deſtroyed, and made it his reſidencie, as Micelaus did the like at the towne of Ratibor. The townes in Sileſia proſpered as well in government, as in the ſumptuouſneſſe of their houſes, eſpecially after that they had overthrowne that fearefull incurſion, which the Tartarians had made into their Countrie anno 1241 by Henricus the firſt called Barbatum. His wife was Heduig the daughter of Bartholdus Duke of Iſtria and Merania. His Sonne was Henricus Pius, who alſo had three Sonnes, Henricus the third of Breſlaw, Boleſlaus of Lignitz, and Conrade of Glogaw Dukes. Theſe lived in continuall jarres one with an other, and alſo their Succeſſours, till at length Henricus the IV. Duke of Breſlaw, under the colour of a feaſt an. 1281 invited. Henricus Duke of Lignitz, the Duke of Glogaw of the ſame name, and Primiſlaus of Poſia, who afterward in the yeere 1295 was choſen King of Poland, tooke them priſonders, and would not ſet them at libertie, till they left ſome of their feathers behinde them, although that Lecus the black Duke of Cracow tooke their part. About the yeere 1390 Boleſlaus the brother of Henricus the fifth, was made Duke of Swynitz, who gave this Dukedome of Swynitz to his Sonne Bernardus, and left unto his two other Sonnes to Henricus Iaur, and to Boleſlaus the Dukedome of Munſterbergh. After the deceaſe of Henricus fidelis Duke of Sagan, there hapned an other partion among the ſame Sonnes: ſo that Oeletz, Steinaw and Gur became Dukedomes, whereby the number of Princes, did not onely encreaſe in Sileſia, but alſo great diſſention and diſcord grew more & more, eſpecially among the Poliſh Princes, becauſe of the jealouſie and ill ſuſpition, which they had conceived of the Sileſian Princes, ſeing they were more affected to the Dutches, & tooke in marriage the Germane Princeſſes, and ſo brought the Saxons into this Countrie, whereby they held no otherwiſe of them then as Allies in their Government, ſo that theſe Dukes had in deteſtation the Poliſh government, when they ſaw that by the inſtigation of the Biſhops they had much land taken from them.

At this time Sileſia is divided into 16 Dukedomes or principalities, every of them taking their name from the head-towne. Northward lyeth the principality of Teſſchen, which confineth the furtheſt bounds upon Hungary, and the Mountaines thereof, and alſo a part of it, upon litle Poland, not farre from the head of the Wixell, upon this bordereth the principalities of Ratibor, Troppaw, and Iagerendorp, which on the South part reacheth to the Bohemian Mountaines, & the ſpring-head of the River Oder, not farre from the towne of Gibea. Oppeln lyeth beyond the Oder, next unto litle Poland Northward, & is ſited betweene the principalities of Munſterbergh, Brieg & Ratibor, like as the principalitie of Brieg boundeth upon Poland, part of it lying one this ſide, and part thereof on the other ſide of the Oder. Breſlaw and Neuſs are in the very hart of Sileſia, though the greateſt part of the territoire of Breſlaw lyeth beyond the Oder. The principality of Neuſs is alſo a Biſhoprick. Olſnitz is next unto Breſlaw, and lyeth betweene it and the Poliſh confines. On this ſide of the Oder are Munſterbergh, Swynitz and Iaver, which but upon the Bohemian Mountaines, and with ſome part thereof turne about towards the Earledome of Glotz. The Dukedome of Lignitz boundeth Eaſtward upon Sweinitz, Weſtward upon the principalitie of Iaver, and Northward upon the principality of Glogaw, having for neighbours Poland upon the one ſide, and the Marck on the other ſide. Sagan butteth Weſtward upon Lauſnitz, and Northward upon the Dukedome of Croſſen. To this may be added the principality of Bernſtadt, & under the Neuſſiſh the Grotkiſh territories, but ſeing that Grotka is a Widdowes poſſeſſion, and that the Duke of Lignitz gave the towne of Nuys unto the Biſhop of Breſlaw, there is noe more account made of theſe titles. The Emperour, or rather the King of Bohemia poſſeſſeth by inheritance 9 of theſe principalities, namely: Breſlaw, Sweinitz, Iaver, Munſterbergh, Glogaw, Sagan, Oppeln, Ratibor and Troppow: the other two Iagerendorp & Croſſen, belonged likewiſe to the King, but afterward fell to other Lords, as alſo the Dukedome of Sagan was given ſome yeeres ſince by the Emperour, to this Generall Friedland or Walſtein for the ſervice, which he had done him. Ludovicus King of Hungarie and Bohemia, gave Iagerendorp to the Marquiſſes of Brandenborgh as a reward for their loyaltie, and Croſſen was morgaged to the houſe of Brandenburgh.

Whole Sileſia according to the ancient cuſtome, is divided into two parts, namely the Upper & the Nether Sileſia. The chiefeſt River is the Oder, which runneth from the South-Eaſt along this Countrie, towards the Northweſt, receiving by the way many ſmall Brookes into it, as the Queis, Bober, Poltznitz, Neifz, Steina, Bartſch, Browitz, Kladnitz, Oppa, and many others. It hath in it abundance of faire paſtures, and the whole Countrie is full of fruitfull fields, which maketh the Countrie to be ſo repleniſhed with Inhabitants, & the number of the Townes and Villages ſo great, that there are at this day above 161 great and ſmall towns, whereof none of them lye above three miles one from an other. The Dukedome of Breſlaw hath in it theſe townes following: Breſlaw which Wratiſlaus of Bohemia enlarged in that place, where the Oder and the Olaw meete together, and therefore as a memoriall thereof, they give a W for their armes, the firſt letter of his name. It is a great & populous towne, well compacted with many faire houſes in it, and is the eye and ornament of this Dukedome. This Countrie hath alſo 7 principall Biſhopricks: among which that of Breſlaw excelleth the others by much, & for his riches (from antient times) is called the golden Biſhop. The firſt was Gotfrid ſent into theſe Countries by Pope Iohannes thē xiii, in the yeere 966. He at Smorga under Duke Miezlaus of Poland, erected a Chriſtiā Schoole, which made a way for the building of other Monaſteries, for under the commaund of the Biſhop of Breſlaw, there are 12 Moncks-Cloiſters, and 14 Nunns. After that Sileſia came into the hands of the Kings of Bohemia, the government was much altered, ſo that the King elected a Gubernator out from among the Princes, which they call the Oberampt, & over every of the Principalities appointed a Captaine. Every yeere there is held in the Citie of Breſlaw a generall imperiall daye, or Seſſions. Though the aire be here ſome what colde; yet is it pleaſant and healthfull: for in ſome places the Soile beareth Vines. But they drinke beare commonly here. Under the Bohemian Mountaines upon the brooke Zacka, there are fine hott-bathes, out of which alſo they digg Brimſtone, Saltpeter and Allum. Neere unto the towne of Strigia there is found Terra Sigillata, and by Lignitz Axungia Luna. There are alſo ſome gold mines, and ſome peeces, which come downe the ſpring Katzbach, out of the Mountaines. The great ſtore of yron make the Inhabitants here to have noe ſmall trading: the towns are all full of Tradſmen, by whoſe diligence and skill in weaving, they drive a mightie trade in linnen cloth, and other wares, which yeeldeth them every yeere an incredible ſomme of money. The government of their townes is Ariſtocraticall, and ſo ordered, that the Burgers cannot lightly rebell againſt their Superiours, ſeing they doe not force their Conſciences, but live frendly one with another. The nature of this people is amiable & affable, & this nation for their curteſie, civility & manners, doe farre exceede their Neighbours. And thus much for Sileſia.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE MARQVISATE OF MORAVIA,

Called by the Germans MERHERN.

MORAVIA, or Merhern boundeth Westward upon Bohemia, and taketh the name from the river of Morava, which watereth this Countrie. The ancients called this Province Marcomannie, becauſe it cõfineth & boundeth upon the Frontiers of Germanie, there where men travell from the Donavv into Auſtria, for Marck in high Dutch, is as much to ſaye, as a Frontier, or a Limit, in regard whereof, theſe people that inhabited theſe parts, were called Marcomanni, and ſignifyed Inhabitãts dwelling upõ the utmoſt Confines & Limits: Of this people Arrianus ſpeaketh in this wiſe: The remoteſt & utmoſt of this nation vvere the Quadi, & Marcomanni, afterward the Iaziges people of Sarmatia, thirdly the Getæ, and laſtly a great part of the Sarmatians. That Moravia was the ancient habitation of the Marcomanni is moſt apparant, for the huſbandmen that dwelt about the river of Hama, haue often found in plowing up the ground many Coins and pictures of the Romane Emperours, among the reſt of Marcus Anthoninus, who as divers Hiſtories mention, warred againſt this nation. The money which they gott as a boote from the Ennemie hath this inſcription upon it, DE MARCOMANNIS. Some coniecture upon the Etymologie of this name, that afterward the Marcomans inhabited that part of Germanie, which now they call the Marcke, or the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh, leying on the river of the Elue Westward: for the Inhabitants thereof, were called the Marcker, that is to ſay Marcomans, or Marcomanners. Others ſay, they had this name from a Horſe, as Mareſchal, that is, Mareſchall or Generall of the horſes, or from Marſtaller, which ſignifieth Maſter of the ſtable, or horſe: for Marha and Merrhen in the Germane tongue, is a Horſe and a Mare: ſo that Marrhen-land betokeneth a Countrie of Mares: but the firſt interpretation ſeemeth to be the trueſt. The confines then of Moravia at this preſent, are theſe: It is ſeparated Eaſtward from Hungarie, and Poland, Westward from Bohemia, and Northward from Sileſia: for Southward towards Auſtria, it is very euen, and plaine, and in ſome places it is ſeparated by the River of Thayſa, and ſome other brookes from Auſtria.

The Site.

The temperature and fertility.

The aire of this Countrie is moiſt, and humid, and therefore the more ſubiect to unhealthfulneſſe. And as it is a very populous Countrie: ſo is it alſo very fruitfull in Corne, Wine, & all things neceſſarie for mans uſe. Saffran groweth there in abundance, within the Countrie there are very good arrable lands, & upon the hills there growe goodly vines and grapes, which yeeld very pleaſant Wines. Therefore this Countrie in regard of the goodneſſe and fatneſſe of the ſoile, is ſo inhabited and manured, that there is ſcarcly any paſture for cattell to be found in it, but they are faine to turne them into the woods and Foreſts.

The Mounts Sudetæ, neere unto the Towne Igla, are full of rich Mines of Metall. And which is more to be admired, that in this Countrie of Moravia there is great ſtore of Myrrhe and Frakincenſe found, which diſtilleth or droppeth not from the fatneſſe of ſome trees, as it doth in other places, but is digged out of the Earth onely in one place called Gradiſcus, where not onely Thus Maſculum is digged, repreſenting the ſhape of the privities of a man, but alſo very like unto thoſe of a woman. Not long ſince VVenceſlaus deſcended of the Lords of Eyck, in his Lordſhip of Sterenbergh, being minded there to make a fiſhpond, digged out of it the whole proportion of a mans bodie, which was nothing but Myrrhe. In former ages this Province was a Kingdome, and had their owne Kings, whoſe authoritie extended ouer Bohemia, and Polonia, and was a very great and a large Kingdome. About the yeere of Chriſt 900 Zuantocopius had under his commaund Moravia, Bohemia, Sleſia, and Polonia, which Dukedomes were all ſubiect unto him: whereby he grew ſo mightie and potent, by commanding ouer ſo many people, that he waxed proud, and refuſed to pay unto Lodwick King of Germanie that tribute, which he was bound to pay unto the Romane Empire. For which they made warres upon him, but being aſſaulted he defended him ſelfe ſo well, that they parted one from an other upon equall conditions.

The Princes & Gouvernments.

The Hungarians, a people then newly ſtart up, lay cloſſe upon the borders, and Frontiers of Moravia, and kept the King of the Moravians ſo ſhutt in, that he could by no meanes breake out, and gett a paſſage. The Emperour having undertaken, not to leaue his deſſigne, untill he had gotten the Victorie ouer the Moravians, ſeeking ayde from all parts, opened a paſſage to the Hungarians, who fell upon the Chriſtians, and plagued them grievouſly with many miſeries and cruelties. And ſo the Emperour by theſe Infidels ouercame and deſtroyed the King of Moravia, who being vanquiſhed, and a great number of his men ſlayne, chaſed away, and putt to death: the King himſelfe eſcaped ſecretly this Slaughter and changing of his cloaths, ſaued himſelfe by flight. And being gotten into the Mountaine called Sambri, hauing putt of his Armes and ſent away his horſe, went a foote and liued as a poore Hermite in a ſhadie wood, where he liued upon Apples, Roots, and Herbs, till at laſt he mett with three other Hermites with whome he accompanied himſelfe, and paſſed the reſt of his dayes with them, not making himſelfe knowne, but patiently endured all miſeries. But the time of his departure drawing neere, calling theſe Hermits unto him, toold them, Ye knowe not yet what perſonnage I haue beene, namely, King of the Moravians, who being overthrowne in a Battaile, am retired to you, and now having tryed both the life of a King and of a private man I muſt dye. There is no happineſſe of a Kingdome, to be preferred to a ſolitairie life. This maketh us to ſleepe without care, and maketh roots, herbs, & water ſweete and ſauorous unto us, whereas carefulneſſe and daungers make meate and drinke bitter. This reſidue of my life, which God hath giuen me amõg you, hath beene full of quietneſſe, but theſe dayes which I paſſed during my reigne were rather a death thẽ a life unto mee. Burie me here after my ſoule is departed out of my bodie, thẽ goe ye into Moravia, and tell my Sonne if he be living all theſe things. After this the provinces of Bohemia, Polonia and Sileſia chooſe euery one of them a Duke of their owne, and gaue ſome ſmall tribute to the Empire as a recognition of Souveraignity. About this time, when as the Emperour Michael reigned ouer the Grecians, Cyrillus the Teacher and Apoſtle of the Sclavonians, together with Metodius, came and layd the foundations of the Chriſtian faith in Moravia, and at Vielagrad erecting an Epiſcopall Seate, the Pope of Rome reprouved them for it, and cited them before him, to wit becauſe they had preached, and had adminiſtred the ſacraments in the Sclavonian tonge, but they anſwered him with this ſcripture, Let euerie ſpirit or Tongue praiſe the Lord. Æneas Silvius in his Bohemian Hiſtorie. Chap. 13. relateth this other wiſe: to wit, that this Cyrillus being at Rome, beſought the Pope, that he might uſe the Sclavonian Tongue in the adminiſtration of the Baptiſme to his people, which being much diſputed in the Eccleſiaſticall Synode, and many that did oppugne and gainesay it, there was heard a voice frõ heauen ſpeaking theſe words, Let euerie ſpirit praiſe the Lord, and euery Tongue Confeſſe him. And after this they gaue leaue to Cyrill to doe as he thought good.

Moravia at this day is in a meaner ſtate, then it hath beene heretofore, for after the Kings came Dukes, and at laſt it was gouverned by Marqueſſes, and at this time is much devided, but the greateſt part thereof is obedient unto the Crowne of Bohemia, and the reſt of it belongeth to divers Lords and Barons.

The Townes. The Capitall Citie in the Countrie, and the Marqueſſes reſidencie is Brunna called in Dutch Brin, and in the Bohemian Tongue Bruo. Olmutz or Olomontium is the Epiſcopall Seate, called in former times Velograd. The other Townes are theſe: Znaim, Radish, Iglauvv, Nieuſtadt, Niclasburgh, VVeiſz-kirchen, Cremſer, Boſerlitz where ſometimes the Marqueſſe held his reſidencie, and ſome others demonſtrated in this Mapp.

The Rivers. The chiefeſt rivers in this Countrie is the Morava, or Maravaha, called by Ptolomie Ciabrus, now commonly named the Marhe, which runneth round about the Citie of Olmutz, whence he taketh his Courſe into Auſtria, and many ſmall rivers falling into him, at laſt diſchargeth himſelf into the Donavv. They ſay this riuer gaue the name to this whole Countrie, but it is more credible, that this Countrie gaue him this name. The other riuers are the Theya or Deyns, called by ſome Dudravius, Tharſa, and by others Thyſia. This riuer runneth by Znaim, a place where the Emperour Sigiſmund dyed, and parteth Moravia or Mehren from Auſtria. The riuer Igla, giueth the name to the Towne of Iglau, & runnig through Moravia parteth Bohemia from Moravia. The Oder hath is ſpringhead not farre from Olmutz, & keepeth that name, till it falleth into the Sea. Some are of the opinion, that this river was called Viadrus by Ptolomie. It is called Odera from a place which the Inhabitants name Odern, becauſe it is very fitt to take and catch foule in, for where theſe fowlers ſett their netts and ſnares, it is not farre from the head of the Oder.

Wee muſt not paſſe ouer in ſilence the riuer Hama, for though it be but a ſmall water, yet notwithſtãding it watereth the moſt fruitfull Corne-Lands in all Moravia, & therefore it is reichtly called by the husbandmen, in regard it maketh the ſoile ſo fatt, The very flovvre of Moravia. In it there is often found diuers peeces of coine both gold and ſilver with the pictures of Marcus Antoninus, Commodus and other Romane Emperours upon them: whence it appeareth, that the Romans in this place had heretofore warrs with the Marcomannis: The other riuers are the Svvarte, and Svvitavv.

The vvoods and Mountaines. This Countrie is not ſo montainous, as Bohemia, but in all places is not euen, and plaine. Ptolomie maketh this place to be Orcynium Nemus, and Gabreta Sylva.

The nature of the Inhabitants. The Inhabitants are cruell by nature, and giuen to ſtealing, they ſpeake a mixed language, but the Bohemian tongue is moſt in uſe among them: for they ſpeake Dutch, but onely the Townes, and among the principall men of note and qualitie. For the reſt, as Dubravius relateth, the Moravians are very like the Bohemians in their behaviour, manners, and faſhions.

In the Villages of this Countrie, there dwell many Anabaptiſts, which haue all things in Common.

Within the Confines of Moravia Mercator placeth alſo the Counties of Huckenvvald, and Schombergh, with the Lordſhips of Lomnicz, Dubrantiz, Gemnicz, VValſtayn, Bitnix, Neuvvhauſz, Teleſch, Bozkovvitz, Trebitſch, Dirnovvitz, and Ragetz, and thus much for Moravia.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ARCH-DVTCHIE OF AVSTRIA.

The originall of the name.

AVSTRIA, or Ooſtenrijck, was heretofore called Pannonia Superior: this name Auſtria or Ooſtenrijck according to the teſtimonie of VVolfgangus Lazius is novell, fetcht either from the East-South-Easterne winde, which the Latins call Auſter, and bloweth much in thoſe parts, or from the Germane word Ooſtreich, which ſignifyeth an Easterne Realme, whereby the ancient Francks, named the frontiers of their Kingdomes, as alſo to their confines Weſtward they gaue the name of VVeſtreich. But the Francks Ooſtreich, lying upon the Rhyne, afterward got the name of Auſtraſia, and looſing this name in the proceſſe of time, it ſeemeth the Pannonii tooke this name upon them, as Lazius teſtifyeth *Lib.*1. *cap.*2. Comment. Gent. Auſt. Now the Auſtrians are deſcended from the ancient Francks, & Saxons, and gayned this tract of Land by the ſword, notwithſtanding all the reſiſtance, which the Hungarians were able to make againſt them.

The bounds.

This Countrie boundeth Eaſtward upon Hungary, Southward upon the Mountaines of Stiermarck, which reach from the Alpes, as farre as Hungarie and further, Weſtward upon Bavaria, and Northward upon the river Tejus and Moravia.

The Temperature.

The Aire here by reaſon of the Easterne windes, which blowe often in theſe quarters, is very cleare, temperate, pleaſant, and wholeſome.

The fertilitie.

This Land alſo is exceeding fruitfull in all kind of Graine, and Trees, yea the ſoile is ſo eaſie to be tilled, eſpecially, on the further ſide of the Danubius, that a Huſband-man with one Leane horſe is able to plowe up the ground.

The Auſtrians knowe not what Marle is, to fatten their grounds, as thoſe of Bavaria doe, whoſe lands otherwiſe, would be leane, and barren. This whole tract of land, yeeldeth abundance of good Wine, which is ſtronger then your Germane Wine, but not ſo ſtrong as your Spaniſh. It is tranſported in great abundance into Moravia, Bohemia, Sleſia, and their neighbouring Countrie of Bavaria. This Countrie affordeth very good Saffran, and likewiſe Ginger neere unto Hamburch, lying at the foote of the Mountaine of Cæcius, or Callenbergh. There are alſo in it many ſilver Mines, but fewe of gould. They haue their owne ſalt, and it is alſo brought unto them from other parts.

The ancient Princes & Gouvernment.

The Earles of Babenbergh, for a long time ruled over Auſtria, among whome Lupoldus, the firſt, was by the Empetour Otho the Second, elected Marqueſſe of Auſtria. Afterward Henricus from a Marqueſſe, was created Duke of Auſtria by the Emperour Frederick. His Iſſue failing in proceſſe of time, Rudolphus of Habſburgh (who was choſen Emperour Anno 1280.) ſeized upon it, and appropriated it to himſelfe, and would haue it called a Dukedome. Frederick the Second made it afterward a Kingdome. The armes of this Countrie, were in ancient times fiue goulden Larkes in a field azure. But Marqueſſe Lupold the Fifth of that name, for his valiant acts, obtained from the Romiſh Empire an other Armes, diſtinguiſhed by a red and a white colour, ſeing that he at the taking in of the towne of Tolomira, had his bodie all over beſprinkled with bloud; ſaving onely a white girdle, which he wore, that was diſcerned from his bodie.

The devision.

This whole Countrie is devided into the Vpper and Nether Auſtria. The Nether lyeth on the further ſide of the Donavv, and the Vpper on this ſide. The Dukedome of Styria, or Stiermarck, lying betweene the rivers of Donavv, Muhz, and Mietz was afterward annexed to this Countrie. The Inhabitants thereof ſpeake partly High-dutch, and partly the Sclavonian, and Vandalian Tongue, they are miſſhapen by reaſon of their gorbellies & hanging paunches. Alſo the Dukedome of Carinthia, or Karndten, lying betweene the Muhz an the Drauve: likewiſe Carnia, or Crain lying Southward.

Vienna or Wien.

The Metropolis, or cheefe City of Auſtria is Vienna, or VVien, where before the nativitie of Chriſt, the Sarmatians, and the Vandalls inhabited. After them ſucceeded the Boii, the Senones, and others, whome Tiberius Nero bringing under ſubjection, reduced this Countrie into a Province. In Itinerario Anton. it is called Vindebona, and in Ptolomee Iuliobona: both which Authours, lodge and place here the tenth Germane Legion, & that this is authentick, witneſſe the antiquities which are yet ſeene, and found at this day within, and without this City. This Legion had the name of Alauda or a Larcke, which they gaue in their ſtandard: from whence it ſeemes, the armes of the Marqueſſes of Auſtria, had their originall, namely, the giving of fiue Larkes. In Ancient times, this Citie was called Fabina, as we read in Otto Friſingenſis. lib. 1. of his hiſtorie of the Emperour Fredericus c.32. as alſo in the hiſtorie of Severinus the Biſhop of Vienna: and therefore thoſe which inhabite there abouts, are yet to this daye called Baiana. Lazius ſaith alſo, that Strabo nameth it Vendum, and Iornandes Pannonia Vrbs. It is called in Dutch VVien, in the Sclavonian tongue VVydme, by the Turcks Betz, as Ortelius underſtood, from one Carolus Rinius, who was heretofore Ambaſſadour with Zelim, the Turkiſh Emperour. Leunclavius nameth it VVetſch and Beetz. Howſoeuer, it is a famous Citie, ſituated upon the river Danubius, where at this day the Emperour keepeth his Court. For fortification, it is invincible, becauſe of the exceeding high and thick VValls, deepe

Moates, ſtrong Bulwarkes, large Ramparts, Turrets, & lyeth as a mightie bulwarke againſt the power and violence of the Turck. It hath large, and faire Suburbs, ſumptuous, and loftie houſes, painted on the outſide, braue, and magnificent Churches, built with blew ſtone, lightſome within, and ſupported with mightie pillars. The Citizens VVine-cellars are ſo large, and deepe, that the building under ground is not much leſſe, then that wich is aboue. And the ſtreetes are all paved with ſuch great ſtones, that though waggons heavie loaden goe upon them; yet they will not ſinke under them. There is ſuch great ſtore of all proviſions within this City, eſpecially of VVines, that it is almoſt incredible, and every yeere, when they pluck and gather their grapes, they muſt employ about them 1200. horſes.

This Citie in the yeere of our Lord 464. receiued the Chriſtian faith, by the preaching of Doctour Severinus, who built two Churches in it: ye may read the ſtorie of this City in Lazius and Otto Friſingenſis. Frederick the Second enlarged this Citie greatly, and built it better, and likewiſe the ſucceeding Dukes of Auſtria. Alſo the Emperour Frederick the Second, erected in it a famous Vniverſitie for all Arts, and ſciences, which afterward Anno 1356. was renewed by Albertus Duke of Auſtria, but at laſt through the factions, and diſſentions, of the Schollars, was ruined, and brought to nothing. Heretofore haue flouriſhed in this Citie many excellent & learned men, among the reſt VVolfgang Lazius, Phyſician, and Hiſtoriographer unto the Emperour Ferdinand, Iulius Alexandrinus, Matthias Farinator, and Iohannes Haſelbach, there Profeſſour, and Maſter of the chaire in Divinitie, who was ſo carefull in his expoſitions, that he was 21. yeeres in expounding of the firſt Chapter of the Prophet Iſaiah. This Citie grew famous for the braue defence, and the reſiſtance which the Citizens made, when the Turck beſieged it in the yeere 1529. and as it is reported, loſt eightie thowſand men before it.

Gmunda. In Vpper Auſtria lyeth alſo Gmunda, a towne not very great; but much commended for the hanſomeneſſe, and fineneſſe thereof, ſituated upon a lake, which taketh the name from it, called Gmunder-lake, from which the river Dravus taketh his ſpring-head, and runneth through Auſtria. In this towne they driue a great trading in ſalt, which is exceeding good, & ſharpe, being digged out quarries, in the hills, lying about it, and being brought to Gmunda, is putt into ſmall barrels, which they call Kubelen, and from the Drauve is carryed downe the Danubius to Vienna, and ſo from thence to other townes in Auſtria, Hungarie, Styria, and Carnten, to the great profit of Gmunda.

Beſides theſe there are many other ancient, and fine townes in Auſtria, namely Lintz, Steyr, VVadenhoſen, Melicum, which is a very ancient Caſtle built by Claudius, Crembs, the Caſtle Cetro now called Zeiſſelmaur, S. Hypolitus Cloiſter, Neuburgh and Corn-Neuburgh, Petronella, now a Village, being the ruines of a very great Citie. Alſo Nieuſtadt, Pruck, which lyeth upon the river Leytza and Hamburgh, all the reſt I will paſſe by for brevitie ſake.

Meeres & lakes. This Countrie is full of Meeres or Lakes; the chiefeſt whereof are theſe: S. VVolfgangs, the Vſero, the Filleſea, & the Einſidler-ſea.

The Rivers. There are alſo manie rivers, which water this Countrie, whereof the Danubius is the principaleſt, and was heretofore the bound of this Countrie, but now runneth through the midſt of it. The others are called the Lathoſinus, Genus, or Oſanus, Tranus, Travus, Erlaphus which commeth out of a pleaſant Meere, by Cell, Traſius, Ipſius, Melicus, Marchia Tejus, which ſeparateth Moravia from Auſtria, Cambus abounding in all kind of fiſhe, Leytha, Suegades, wherein they take Luſhious Crabs, and ſome others.

The Mountaines & hills. The principall Mountaines are the Mount Cœcius ſo called in Latine, or Calenbergh in Dutch, which reacheth from the Danubius to the river Dravus: the parcells whereof are the Schne-bergh, Semeringh, Kempergh, Hertbergh, Ceubſperg, Heuſtpergh, Plaitz, Cognamus Mens, commonly called at this day the Haimburgerbergh, which runneth from the Danubius to the Arobus.

Foreſt & woods. This Countrie alſo is here and there couvered with Foreſts, and VVoods, all percells & braunches, of the Hircynian Foreſt, or Svvarivvood, and Lunæ Silvæ, the chiefeſt of them are called the Freytſtretter, and the Konigvviſervvaldt.

The Government. In the Citie of Vienna there are twelve Senatours, or Magiſtrates which adminiſter Iuſtice every day: whereof foure of them are Spirituall, namely, the Officiall to the Biſhop of Paſſavv, the Officiall of the Biſhop of Vienna, the Chapiter of the Cathedrall Church, & the Rectour of the Vniverſitie. Beſides theſe, there are foure Officiers for the Citie, and foure without the Citie, the chiefeſt whereof are thoſe, whom they call Regiment, to whom thoſe of Nether Auſtria muſt adreſſe themſelues for Iuſtice, and whom they call the Fiſcus or Camera, before whom all Accounts of the Provinces are paſſed. The others are inferiour, and ſubordinate to theſe, and from whom they maye appeall to theſe Superiours. As the Provinciall Councill, and their Marſhalls, the Deputies of the Province, the Magiſtracie of the Citie, and their Butrough-maſter. The ordinarie Court of the Pretour of the Citie: the Iudgment of Farming, and Toles, and the Pretour of the Marchants whom they call Handgraviat, whereof Lazius treateth at large in his hiſtorie of Vienna.

The third Imperiall Circle. The third Imperiall circle, is that of Auſtria, which conſiſteth of two States: the firſt are the Lords Spirituall, namely the Biſhop of Trent, Brixen, Goritz, Segovienſis or of Secauvv, Labach, and Vienna, the Maſter of the Dutch Order in Eiſchtal. The ſecond State are theſe Princes, and Lords temporall: As the Arch-Duke of Auſtria, the Earle of Schaumbergh, the Earle of Hardeck, the Lords of Roggendorf, and Senſter, and the Baron of VVolckenſteyn. Beſides theſe ſome of the Princes of the Empire are comprehended under Auſtria, namely, the Earledomes of Thurn, Crentz, Ortenburgh, Perneck. The free Lords of Landtskroon, VVanbergh, Hohen, Oſtervvitz, Neubergh, Guetenhagh, Tieffenbach, Mairhofen, Avverſbergh, Dorneck, Saravv, Hartenſtain, Schartzenavv, Tiernſteyn, VVackhautal, Hofkircken, Eytzingh. likewiſe the Lordſhips of Aichelſbergh, Caltenbrun, Maſſenbergh, Studenbergh, Heggenbergh, Stackrenbergh, Liechtenſtain, Loſenſteyn, Buchaim, Luethurt, Porges, Schonkirchen, Schiftenbergh, Altenſbergh, Hornſtain, and Seiberſdorf.

THE DESCRIPTION OF STYRMARCK.

The name.

STYRMARCK, or Styria without all queſtion, hath this name from a Stier, or a Bull. Ægidius Tſchudus is of the ſame opinion, relating out of Plinie, that Cato held, that among the Tauriſci were counted alſo the Leopontii, and Salaſſi, for thus he ſaith: So were then the Tauriſci alſo Galli, which nation in the ancient Warres of the Gaules, tooke up their habitation beyond the Alpes, whereof alſo Polybius in his XI. booke de bello Gallico writeth thus: In the Alpes on both ſides of the mountaines; in that part which reacheth towards the Rhoane, and the North, dwelt the Gaules, which were named Tranſalpini, but that part, which lay towards the Plaines, were the Tauriſci, Agones: and other barbarous nations, of whome the Tranſalpini not by deſcent, by reaſon of the differẽce of their habitatiõs were diſtinguiſhed one from an other, and therefore were they called Tranſalpini; becauſe they dwelt beyond the Alpes. The Tauriſci afterward leaving theſe parts, ſought out new habitations & came and tooke in that Countrie, which at this day is called the Earledome of Goerts, & from thence went forward, and dwelt in Styria, or Styrmarck, in which countrie they left their name behinde them, for Taurus, is as much to ſaye, as a Steere, or a Bull. They ſpread themſelves alſo in Auſtria and Hungarie, whereof it is needeleſſe to make any mention here. Some will maintaine for a truth, that Styria was heretofore called Valeria and that in honour of Valeria the daughter of Diocletianus, as Marcellinus witneſſeth, as alſo Aurelius Victor in his hiſtorie of the Emperours. Volateranus ſaith that it was called Iapida, writing in the ſeveth booke of his Geographie, in this manner: The next adiacent Countrie is Iapida, which is now called Styria, though Pope Pius thinketh the ſame to be Valeria, but I am rather of the opinion by the deſcription of Rufus, that Valeria ſhould rather be Croatia, which lieth betweene the Danubius & the Dravus: & ſo Volaterranus was deceaved, for if the firſt opinion be true, hence it appeareth then, that the Quady had in former times their habitation here: Seing that Sextus Ruffus writeth, that under Iulius the Marcomanni & Quadi were driuen out of the places Valeria, which lay betweene the Danubius, and the Dravus. This Countrie is a part of the Mediterranean Norici, as likewiſe Carinthia, and were reckoned under the Provinces of Illyricum, or Sclavonie, which afterward was comprehended under Germanie.

The Site.

Styria boundeth Eaſtward upon Hungary, Southward upon Carniola, and Crain, Weſtward upon Carinthia, and Northward upon Auſtria. On the Eaſtſide it hath a large plaine field, but on the other parts, this Countrie is every where mountainous: I cannot ſpeake much of the fertilitie thereof; but in all places there are many Mines, which are litle ſought after, or digged into through the negligence of their Princes. There are ſilver Mines in the Alpes, which they call the Schwvenberger-Alpes, and by the river of Amiſus, there are yron-quarries. Heere alſo they ſeeth great Store of Salt, which is tranſported into other Countries, and whereof they make good proffit.

Metalls & Mines.

Salt.

This Countrie was in ancient times a Marquiſate of Pannonia prima, or Auſtria, and for this cauſe Styria is called a Marck, which is a certaine limit, or tract of land, ruled, and gouverned by a Marqueſſe, as Lazius witneſſeth, hauing afterward obtained the title of a Dukedome from the Emperour Fredericus Barbaroſſa. At laſt it came under the Commaund of the Dukes of Auſtria, unto whome it is ſubject to this day.

The ancient gouernours.

The laſt Marqueſſe was Ottocarus, whoſe daughter Lupoldus Duke of Auſtria marryed, who with the Conſent of the Emperour, was made Duke of Styrmarck.

His houſe & Succeſſion failing, the Inhabitants of the Countrie ſent ſome into Auſtria, and others into Hungarie. The King ſent his Sonne unto them, but ſeing he ruled according to his owne luſt, which the Styrmarckers would by no meanes ſuffer & endure, he was at laſt driuen away, and in ſtead of him they called in Ottocarus the King of Bohemia his ſonne, who before had made himſelfe Maſter of the Dukedome of Auſtria, and Anno 1269. gott alſo Carinthia to it, but he could not keepe it long: for when he was ſo tranſported with arrogancie, that he begann to diſpiſe his imperiall Majeſtie, and would not ſweare fealtie unto the Emperour, Rudolphus of Habsburgh, for his Bohemian Feeſimple, the Emperour preſcribed a day of meeting for the Princes, at Ausburgh, citing thither Ottocarus, to appeare there, upõ a great penaltie, and to giue an account for his contempt againſt his Majeſtie, as likewiſe for the Countries, which he held vnjuſtly.

Ottocarus laughed at this Citation, and ſent no man upon the day appointed to anſwere in his behalfe. In the meane while arriued alſo at Augsburgh Ambaſſadours ſent from the States of Auſtria, and complained greatly to the Emperour, and the Princes about the violence, wronge and crueltie, which Ottocarus had done them, & charged him with theſe points: Namely, that he had made himſelfe Maſter of Auſtria by an unjuſt title, and had devorced himſelfe from his lawefull wife, Margretta, the true Inheritrix of the houſe of Auſtria, and had poyſonned her, & tooke a Concubine in her ſtead. That he had bereft, and diſpoſſeſſed Agneta of Baden, and her daughter Elizabetha, and her brother Henricus, from their lawfull inheritance in Auſtria, and hat moſt cruelly put to death many of the principall Lords in the Citie of Vienna, and had often ſhowne his dogged nature againſt the innocent people. Alſo that he ſecretly had ſhared & devideth with Bela the King of Hungarie, the Land of Auſtria, Styria, Carniola, and the Vandalian Marck, being all Fee-ſimples of the Empire, that he was therefore revolted from the Romiſh Empire, & the Emperour, to the end, that by the helpe of a forraine Nation, he might the better detaine Auſtria, and laye a heavie yoak upon the ſubjects.

Hereupon it was reſolved, with the unanimie conſent of the Princes, to ſend one in legacie to Ottocarus: but in ſtead of a good anſwer they got nothing from him, but ſcornfull and deſdainfull words againſt the Emperour and the Princes, whereupon they all conſented to make warre upon him, and promiſſed his imperiall Majeſtie all needfull aſſiſtance: who then levying a great Armie, marched into Auſtria: Againſt whom alſo Ottocarus came with no ſmall power; but diſparing of the ſucceſſe of that warre, fearing the foreſight and power of the Emperour, through the mediation, and interceſſion of two Biſhops made peace with the Empire, reſtoring Auſtria unto him againe, and tooke the oath of alegance to the Emperour; aſwell for Bohemia, as for his other Lands, and Provinces, and this inauguration hapned in the ſight of the whole Armie, while Ottocarus kneeled downe upon his knees before the Emperour.

When as his Conſort, and other ſeditious people upbrayded him herewith, as having ſhowne himſelf weake, and faint-hearted herein, then he broake the peace, and fell againe into Auſtria with an Armie, whereupon the Emperour preſently encountered him with his Germane Souldiers being ayded alſo by the Hungarians, and gaue battaile one to another not farre from a ſmall towne called Marcheccus, where Ottocarus was defeated, and ſlaine in the battaile: This done the Emperour fell preſently with his furious Armie into Bohemia, putting it to fire, and ſword, and ſo conſtrained VVenceſlaus Sonne of the deceaſed Ottocarus, that he was driuen to begg and intreate for a peace, and to receiue ſuch lawes from him, which might tend to the dignitie and Supremacie of the Empire. This being done, the Emperour eſtabliſhed his Sonne Albertus into the Government of Auſtria, and a while after pronounced, and declared him alſo Duke of Auſtria, and Styrmarck, with the ioynt conſent of all the Princes of the Empire.

The deviſion of the Countrie.

Styria is devided into the Vpper, and the Nether Styr-marck: the river of Muhr runneth through the vppermoſt: the Nethermoſt lyeth, where the Dravus, and the Muhr meete together, which is ſited next unto Pannonia ſecunda, whereof this place is alſo called am Hungarish. The chiefeſt townes of Styria are Brug upon Muhr, Gratz, Viana, or Voytſpergh upō the river Kaynach, VVolſperch upon the river Lavanda, Marchpurgh a principall towne lying on the left ſide of the Dravus: upon the ſame ſide alſo is Petovia, or Colonia Petovia, where the Romane Legions lay: on the other ſide of the river lyeth VVaraſinum, which is called Caſtra Variana: Rackeſpurg lyeth on the left ſide of river of Muhr, where Bavaria beginneth, here lyeth alſo Cilia by the ſide of the river Savo or Sauvv, an ancient towne, as is to be ſeene by the ruines thereof: for there are found yet to this day many Romane inſcriptions. The inhabitants report, that it was built by Sylla, and was called Sullax, but (as Volaterranus ſaith) without any evident proofe: poſſibly it was that, (or built out of the ruines thereof) which Ptol. placeth not farre from hence, and called it Celia.

Townes.

Earledomes.

In Styria there are many Earledomes, among which is VVaraſdin upon the river Dravus, and Lebnau upon the river Muhr.

Rivers.

Theſe rivers runn through Styria: na mely, the Dravus, Lavanda, Sackan, Sulmo, Raynacho, Mura, Martza, Arrabon, Veyſtritza, Lauffnitz, and a great many other brookes and ſpringes, whereof moſt of them all runn, and fall into the Danubius.

Mountaines

The Mountaines in this Province are innumerable, and therefore it is impoſſible to declare them by name, but they are called in Generall Noricæ Alpes, ſome of them bearing the name of the Alpes, as the Rauch Alben, Sub Alben, Savv Alben, Schvvanberger Alben. Vpon the confines of Auſtria, Carinthia and Styria leyth the Mount Taurus. Vpon the river Muhr the Mount Ceſacus, called now the Schockel. Alſo the Mount Sattli, Manſenbergh, VVeinſpergh, by the river Saltzvverinde called Savvruſſel, which is Os porcinum, or the Hoggs-ſnout, Teuffelſteygh, which is as much to ſay as the Devills-ſtares. By the ſide of the Muhr in Gaiſtal are Steinbergh, and Kainacher Alben. A litle lower are the Kreutzbergh, and the Hertzbergh. And Eaſtward the Radel, and the Plaitzbergh. Ouer the Dravus Southward is Mons Cladius, at this preſent called Dracimbergh. Vadianus mentioneth that in former yeeres, there went a credible report at Vienna, that there was a Mountaine in Styria, which begann to burne: which miniſtered occaſion to the Emperour Maximilian, to ſend ſome men thither to enquire of the truth thereof, which indeede they found to be ſo: this miracle I thought worth, to repeate here, having hapned as it is ſuppoſed in the yeere of our Lord 1520. In which time it ſeemeth, that Vadianus wrot this. The aforeſaid Mountaines for the moſt part, are couvred with woods like a Wilderneſſe.

The manners of the Inhabitants.

Touching the behauiour, and the manners of the Styr-marckers, they are comonly clowniſh and blockiſh, and the Inhabitants are much troubled with Throat-cropps, which are huge long Cropps, hanging downe their necks: ſome of them are ſo great, that they hinder their ſpeech, & that woman, which giueth ſuck, may caſt the ſame behinde her back (if the report be true) to the end it might not hinder the ſucking of her child. Ortelius hath obſerued alſo, that Anno 1558, in travelling from Vienna to Venice, he ſaw a man at Friſach not without great admiration, whoſe chinne at his Eares, was almoſt as broad as his ſhoulders, hanging downe to his breaſt. Some aſcribe the cauſe of theſe longe Corps, to the Water, & the Aire. For the reſt, the Styr-marckers are in manners and ſpeech like unto the Germans, ſaving thoſe that inhabite about the river of Dravus, which ſpeake the Sclavonian tongue.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE KINGDOME OF HVNGARIE.

The name.

HVNGARIA, or Hungarie, taketh the name from the Huns, or Hungarians, a Scythian people, which inhabith the ſame to this day, and containeth within it Pannonia, and on the other ſide of the Donavv, Iazigum, and almoſt the whole Countrie of the Dacians, which is now called Valachia.

The ſite.

Southward, this Countrie boundeth upon the river Savv, or Sauvus, where by it is ſeparated from Croatia and Servia, which lie beyond the Adriatick, or Venetian ſea. Northward, upon Poland and Ruſſia, and the mountaine Carpatus. Weſtward, upon Auſtria (heretofore the chiefe Countrie of Vpper Panonia) Moravia, and Styrmarck. Eaſtward, upon Myſia now called Rhetiana.

The temperature and fertility.

This Countrie is much commended, and greatly extolled aboue all others, aſwell for the ſweetneſſe, and temperature of the aire, as for the pleaſantneſſe and ſituation thereof. The Soile is very fruitfull, to beare every kind of thing, and yeeldeth great ſtore of Gould, Silver, Dyes, and Salt, to ſuch as deale in them: in no Countrie is there found ſuch abundance of fodder for Cattalle, Corne, Fruit-trees, and ſuch as men uſe to pluck with the hand, beſides peaſe, and beanes. About the Donavv from Quinque Eccleſia, as farre as Belgrade growe noble Vines, whereof they make ſtrong Wines: but there are fewe, or no Olyf-trees, which being excepted, this Kingdome ſeemeth to be endued with abundance of all the gifts of Nature.

Abounddance of Cattaile.

It breedeth ſundrie kind of Cattaille, which are here in ſuch a multitude, principally Sheepe, and Oxen, that they ſend ſuch a number into other Countries, eſpecially into Italie, and Germanie, that it is almoſt incredible. It aboundeth much alſo in all ſtore of game, as Hares, fallow-Deere, Staggs, Hindes, Goats, Wild-ſwine, Wolues, Beares, and ſuch like: there is alſo moſt excellent hauking, eſpecially, of Partridges, Pheſants, Blackbirds & Thruſhes.

Ancient people.

The Pæones, or Pannonians inhabited firſt this Countrie, afterward the Gothes, whom the Hunns expulſed: and the Hunns were chaſed out of it againe by the Longobards, who dwelt here for the ſpace of 42. yeeres: but afterward the Huns under Attila, came againe into their poſſeſſion, after whoſe death Carolus Magnus tooke this Countrie unto himſelfe. But in the yeere 900. under the gouvernment of the Emperour Arnulphus, the Hungarians came out of Scythia, & tooke up their habitation here, remayning in their paganiſme untill the Coronation of King Stephen, whom they called the holy. So that from that time forward, even unto this day, the Hungarians haue continued in the Chriſtian faith.

Vnder Hungarie is contained the whole territoire of Iazigum Metanaſtarum, which Ptolomee boundeth with the Donavv, and Tibiſcus, and is alſo ſhutt in with the Sarmatian Mountaines, a remnant of this people continue here ſtill, & are called Iaz, they inhabit in that part, where Plinie placeth them, & ſpeake a language much differing from that of Hungarie.

The Gouvernment.

The firſt Chriſtian King of Hungarie was Stephen the Holy, his Nephew Peter ſucceeded him, and Andrevv his kinſman: Bela, Geyſa, Ladiſlaus, Almus, Stephen the II. Bela the Blind. Geyſa the II. Stephen the III. Bela the III. Emerick, Ladiſlaus the II. and Succeſſiuely manie others, till the happie time of Rodolph the II. King and Emperour who reigned 32. yeeres. The King of Hungarie had wont to rule this Kingdome by two ſorts of Magiſtrates, or Councills, whereof the chiefeſt were devided into three other Magiſtrates. The firſt was the Kings Gouvernour, or the Palatine of the Realme, who was next in dignitie to the King, and who was the Kings ordinarie Iudge, if any complaint came againſt him, he was chooſen thereunto by the Common voice, but this ſtate was not held hereditaire. Next under him was Iudex Curiæ, or the Court-Iudge, which was alſo one of the ordinaire Iudges of the Kingdome, and after him the ordinaire, & perpetuall Chancellour of the Realme, which ſtate commonly the Arch-Biſhop of Gran did Adminiſter, who among the Spiritualitie is Primate, and the chiefe Secretary of the Kingdome, and hath this preeminencie before others that he annointeth the Elected King, and alſo confirmeth, and eſtabliſheth all priviledges with the broad ſeale, & when the King pleaſeth he ſigneth and confirmeth letters of leſſe importance, and eſpecially the Royall decrees, and ſuch like cauſes. The Magiſter Curiæ, or Highſtuard is alwaies to followe the Kings traine, and is one of his privie Councill. The Tavernicorum Regalium Magiſter his charge is over the Silver mines, the Salt mines, and over the Townes, Caſtles, and Villages, which belonge unto the Kings Treaſurie, or Exchequer.

Vnto the ſecond degree of Magiſtracie, appertaine firſt theſe three, which are in great reſpect, and pronounce ſentence, to wit, firſt the Vice-Palatine of the Kingdome. Secondly the Iudex perſonalis præſentiæ, which in Iudgment ſupplyeth the Kings place, and is appointed over the other Iudges, thirdly the Vice-Iudex Curiæ. The Inferiour which rather adminiſter the office of a Iudge then of a Magiſtrate, are the two Protonotarii Iudicis perſonalis præſentiæ, namely, the Protonotarius Vice-Palatini, & the Protonotarius Vice-Iudicis Curiæ. Theſe are all called Maſters, and haue for Aſſiſtants and Fellow-helpers theſe perſons following, namely the Secretarie of the Arch-Biſhop of Gran, whome they call the Fiſcall, 12. Aſſeſſours, and ſome ſworne Notaries.

Vnto the third degree of Magiſtrates belong thoſe which attend upon the Kings ſervice, to wit, the Kings Treaſurer, the Chamberlaine, the Carver, Attendants Vſhers, Purſevants, and ſuch inferiour officiers: & theſe are the three degrees of the chiefe, and higheſt Councill. What concernes the meaner, or ſlighter, they are adminiſtred in euery place according to their ſeverall rights, and priviledges. Now ſeing this is a very large Kingdome, throughout every Province they haue their Benches, and ſeſſions appointed: which are called by the Hungarians Comitatus, or Shires, which are theſe that lie along the Donavv, Weſtward from the river Tibiſcus: Poſonienſis Comitatus, Nitrienſis, Cepuſienſis, Gevvinarienſis, Poſthienſis, Semlinienſis, Comarienſis, Liptonienſis, Novigradienſis, Abavivarienſis, Bathienſis, Vngenſis, Traachimenſis, Barſienſis, Hontenſis, Borſodienſis, Bodroghtenſis, Peregrienſis, Turoecenſis, Omuzolis, Tornenſis, Hevvecienſis, Zolnozenſis, Moramarusienſis. About the Donavv Eaſtward of Tibiſcus, Vgogienſis, Bihorienſis, Zatmarienſis, Orodienſis, Zabolcienſis, Chonadienſis, Themeſienſis. Betweene the river Donavv, and the river Dravus, Muſunenſis, Zaladienſis, Tolvenſis, Rhab, or Iaurienſis, Veſprinienſis, Strigonienſis, Siponienſis, Albenſis, Sinigienſis, Caſtriferrenſis, Peliſienſis, VVaranienſis. Betweene the rivers of Dravus and Sauvus, Valkonenſis, Riſienſis, Syrimienſis, VVaraſdienſis, Poſegienſis, Zagrabienſis, &c.

The Spirituall adminiſtration.

The Spirituall adminiſtration of this Kingdome, conſiſteth principally in two Arch-Biſhops, whereof the one is of Strigonium or Gran, who is alſo Legatus or Nuntius Apoſtolicus, and primate of the Kingdome, having under him theſe Biſhops following, to wit, of Agria, Vacia, Nitria, Quinque Eccleſia, & Veſprin, who is alſo Chancellour to the Queene, and crownes her. Alſo that of Rab. The other is the Arch-Biſhop of Coloſenſis or of Colotz, he hath ſubject unto him the Biſhops of Sagabrienſis or Sevenbergen, Voceadrenſis, Suinenſis, Viſemburgenſis, Cenabienſis, or of Chonad, and Boſnenſis.

Vpper & Nether Hungarie.

Whole Hungarie is devided into the Vpper and Nether Hungarie, or in that part which lyeth on this ſide, and the other ſide of the Donavv. Vpper Hungarie contayneth all that tract of land, which lyeth on this ſide of the Donaw, and Nether Hungarie all that Countrie, which lyeth beyond the Donaw, through the midſt whereof the river Tibiſcus, or the Teyſa, runneth.

Buda.

The Capitall Citie of this Countrie, and Kingdome is Buda, according to ſome mens opinion: it was ſo called after the name of her Founder Buda, brother unto King Attila, or as ſome write, from the Budini, a Scythian people, which Herodotus mentioneth. Appianus, Irenicus, and Athamerus ſuppoſe, that it ſhould be Ptolomees Curta, though there be ſome others, which pretend, that it ſhould be Ptolomees and Antonius Aquincum, where the ſecond Legion lodged. The ſituation of this City, is partly upon hills: It is fortifyed with ſtrong Bulwarcks, ſo that there is not a ſtronger, or a more pleaſant ſeate in all Hungarie, and is adorned both with publick, and private houſes, for all the other townes of Hungarie, are not to be compared to it. The ſoile round about it, is very fruitfull. Anno 1526. on the 20. of Auguſt Solyman the Turkiſh Emperour tooke this City from the Chriſtians.

Preſburgh.

Poſonium or Preſburch is a very fine Citie, heere the river of Leyta runneth into the Donavv, and ſeparateth Vpper Pannonia from the Nether. This is a very ancient, and a braue Towne, having a moſt pleaſant ſituation, and a wholeſome and a temperate aire, and excelleth many other townes in Hungarie: the hills lying round about it, are very delightfull, and planted with Vines, and good ſtore of wood growing upon them. In the ſuburbs upon the top of a high hill ſtandeth a ſtrong Caſtle.

Belgrad.

Belgrade is ſituated in that place, where the rivers Sauvus and Danubius meete together. It was commonly called Alba Græca & by the ancient Taurunum, and by the Germans Greeckiſh VVeyſſenburgh. The Turck Solyman tooke it from the Chriſtians in the yeere 1520. having bin before (as it were) the Fortreſſe, and Bulwarke of Chriſtendome againſt that inhumaine Ennemie. A litle further upon the Donaw lieth Singidunum, wonne by the Turck Anno 1439.

Singidunum.

In the midway betweene theſe two Cities aboue mentioned, lyeth the field called Maxons, very famous, by reaſon of the happie battaile, which the Huniades gayned againſt the Turkiſh Emperour Mahomet Anno 1456. He that travells up this river, ſhall meete with many places, which haue bin dyed with Chriſtian blood. The Towne of Valpo was taken in Anno 1543.

Quinque Eccleſia. Zigeth. Strigonium.

Quinque Eccleſia lying upon the river Dravus was loſt in the yeere 1543. Zigeth Anno 1566. Of Buda we haue ſpoken before: Strigonium upon the Donavv, commonly called Gran, having bin heretofore an Arch-Epiſcopall ſeate, is now alſo falne in the Turcks hands.

Alba Regalis, or Stulvveſſenburgh, was a famous City, in regard of the Royall Crowne, and the Kings tombes in it, and was wonne Anno 1543. Neere unto this tract is Stridon, the place where S. Ierome was borne. There lieth alſo Kamorra a very ſtrong towne ſtanding in an Ileland ſo named, which the Turck oftentimes hath attempted to overcome, but all in vaine.

Komorra.

Rab.

Iaurium, commonly called Rab, lyeth upon the Donavv, and ſeemeth to be invincible, and thus much for the Townes.

Rivers.

In Hungarie there are many braue and famous rivers: as Danubius or the Donavv, the Sauvv, Dravus, and Tibiſcus or the Teyſſa. The three firſt paſſe alſo through other Countries, but the Tibiſcus onely watereth Hungarie: this river commeth out of Maramaſia, and ſpringeth out of the higheſt Mountaine of Carpathus, and exceedeth all the rivers of Hungarie in abundance of fiſhe: for at all times it aboundeth with fiſh, but chiefly with Sturgeon, and Pikes; beſides Carpes, and other kind of fiſhe. There are alſo other rivers full of fiſhe, as Gudgins, Roche, Saulmons, Tenches, Lampreyes &c. among which waters there is found ſome gould.

Lakes.

There are alſo Lakes, and Meers, where of Balaton is the chiefeſt, called by the Germans Plaetzee. It is 40. Italian, or eight Hungarian Miles broad.

Mountaines & Woods.

The principal Mountaines, and Woods are on the other ſide of the Donavv beginning from Auſtria and Moravia, called by Lazio Tarchzal, and by the Grecians Carpatus, they reach through the Counties of Turocenſer, Arnenſer, Luprovienſer, Cappuſienſer, Gevvinerienſer, and Sarienſer, which by the Inhabitants being High-Dutches haue gotten theſe ſurnames, as Der Vatter, der Münch, der VVurtzgarten, der Schnebergh: the ſecond is the Matran, which is planted neere Agria with Vine-ſtocks. There are many others, which we for brevitie ſake will omitt, and thus much of Hungarie.

THE DESCRIPTION OF TRANSYLVANIA, OR OF SEVENBERGHEN.

TRANSYLVANIA lyeth in the middle part of old Dacia, which the Romans called Ripenſem, and hath now this name, becauſe it is full of woods, and Mountaines, as the Hercinia Sylva, or the Svvartz-vvaldt, & the mount Carpatus: it is commonly called alſo Septem-Caſtrenſis, which ſignifieth in Dutch Sevenburchten, or Sevenbergen that is, Seven-holds, or Seven-mounts: it is called by the Hungarians Erdeli: this Countrie boundeth Weſtward upon Hungarie, Northward upon Poland, Southward upon Valachia, & Eaſtward upon Moldavia.

Whence it hath this name.

The fertility.

It is a Countrie abounding in all things, eſpecially in Corne, the which, beſides the daylie experience, a peece of money of Trajanus alſo witneſſeth, wherein Dame Ceres, ſtanding upright, holdeth in her right hand the horne of Amalthæa, and in her left hand, a Card with this ſuperſcription Abundantia Daciæ.

This Countrie yeeldeth excellent Wine, as about Alba Iulia, Deva and other townes, as alſo all kind of good fruits, among which there are Damaſt prunes, Quinces, delicate Cherries, and excellent Pompions.

There growe alſo many precious herbes, namely: Rha Ponticum, Centaurium majus, Gentiana maxima with yellow, and purple colloured-flowers, the Roote Rhodia, Pontick VVormvvood, Libanotis prima Theophraſti, Saffran, and innumerable others.

There are many excellent mines alſo of all kind of Mettals. At Soulattin alſo there are Gould mines, which the Hungarians call Zulacna. Alſo neere unto Rimili Dorminurch, which is as much to ſay, as The Lords Springe.

Mines of Gould, Silver & Copper.

Out of theſe places they finde peeces of moſt pure gould, which preſently without, either refyning, or purefying may be uſed. The abundance of gold is knowne ſufficiently, by the manie golde Medalls of the Romans, which are digged out here, having upon the one ſide, the image of a man with a broad brimd hatt, with this inſcription C. Cato, and upon the other ſide the image of Dacia, in the ſhape of a Goddeſſe, holding in her right hand a paire of Scales with this inſcription: Aur. Pur. At Offera and Radna there are Silver mines. Copper is digged out of the ſame mines, where they finde their Gold and Silver.

Salt.

They finde Steele by Cyck: Iron by Thoroſcus and Vaidahuntada: Brimſtone & Antimonie are found alſo in the Copper mines, and they degg out ſuch abundance of Salt, that the neighbouring Provinces are ſufficiently furniſhed therewith.

Abundance of Catle Wild-beaſts & foule.

There are ſuch abundance of Oxen here, that a man maye buy a huge peece of beefe for a gilder, or two ſhillings. What ſhall I ſay of the faire, and ſwift running horſes, which are there? And of foule, which are of ſo many kindes, as Eagles, Hawkes, Pheſants, Wilde-peacocks, Turkies, Woodcocks, Wilde Swanes & Bittours: and that I maye come from the fowle to the beaſts: this Countrie hath huge woods, and wilderniſſes, wherein there are Wilde Bulls, Buffs, Alces, or Eylands, huge Staggs, Ounces, Martins, the Alpine Mouſe, Beares, Badgers, and white Hares.

The ancient Inhabitants & Government.

There inhabited in ancient times in this Countrie diverſe Nations, as the Iazyghes, (the remnants whereof are yet at this day in Hungary, (the Metanaſtæ whereof Plinie maketh mention) the Getæ, Baſtarnæ, Sarmatæ, Grecians, Romans, Scytæ, Saxons, and Hungarians, the Romans conquered it: for the Emperour Trajanus, having triumphed over Decebalus King of Dacia, brought it firſt into the forme of a Province, and called the chife citie Zarmizegetuſa, after his owne name Vlpia Trajana. Galienus two hundred yeeres after loſt the ſame Countrie againe, and from that time the Inhabitants fell againe to their ſavadgneſſe, and licenciouſneſſe (abandoning, and leaving the Romiſh tongue withall good cuſtomes and manners) and received againe the name of Valachians.

After the Romans the Scythians under their Generall Attila became maſters of this Countrie, and built ſeven free habitations, after them in the time of Carolus Magnus followed the Saxons, who forſaking their owne native Countrie tooke in theſe places, building there ſeven townes after the exemple of the Scythians. Finally, the Huugarians following them, joyned themſelues with the Dacians, being partly allured thereunto by the neereneſſe of the place, and partly provoked thereunto for ſome wrongs, tooke in this whole Countrie by force, under the Conduct of Stephanus the holy, King of Hungarie, and built ſome more townes in it.

The Mountainous part of Sevenbergen was but lately conquered by Matthias Huniade, whoſe ſurname was Corvinus, and afterward by Stephanus King of Hungarie. The ſame Mathias tooke aliue into his power one Dracula Vayvoda, who dwelt in the Mountainous Tranſylvania, a man of vnheard off crueltie; and after he had kept him priſonner ten yeeres, reſtored him againe into his former poſſeſſion.

The parts.

At this day Sevenbergen is devided into three ſeverall Nations, whereof everie of them uſe their owne language, and manners, dwell each of them in a Province by themſelues, namely the Saxons, the Ciclers, and the Hungarians. The Sevenbergiſh Saxons, as al the other Germane nations haue their owne Dialectus, and manner of ſpeech, they dwell in faſe townes, and Caſtles, and excell the other Nations by farre.

Their habitations are ſeven, namely, Zarvvaria, Zabſia, Millenbach, Reuſmarck, Segeſburgh, or Scheſburgh, Ollezna, Ollezna, Schenkerſtul, and Reps. Theſe townes haue ſome villages under their juriſdiction.

The Ciculi or Zeclers, which lye next unto the Moldauvv, are deſcended from the Scythians, liue after their owne lawes and manners, and giue out all their offices by lott.

They are likewiſe devided into ſeven territoires, which they call their habitations, the names of them are theſe: Sepſi, Orbai, Kyſdi, Czyck, Gyrgio, Marcuſzeek, Araniazeek.

The Gentrie of Hungarie, and Sevenbergen, joyne part of them with the Saxons, and Ciculers, the moſt of them ſpeake one language, and weare cloaths, and armes alike.

Their Power. All the Tranſylvanians, or Sevenbergers in generall, are able to bring 90. thowſand armed men nto the field.

Townes. The chiefeſt townes in all Tranſylvania, or in Sevenbergen, are ſeven, lying ſomewhat farre from one an other, among the which Cibinium is the Metropolitan citie, which is alſo called Harmanſtadt, ſituated in an even plaine, having but a fewe hills lying about it. It is not much leſſe then Vienna in Auſtria, but is by the art of man, and by nature much ſtronger: for becauſe of the abundance of ponds and moores lying about it, no armie can approch unto it. It hath alſo a cathedrall Church.

Next unto this is Braſſovia, or Corona called by the Germans Croonſtadt, and alſo Stephanopolis, lying betweene pleaſant hills, fortifyed with moates, walls and bulwarkes. There is in it a Vniverſitie, and a famous Librarie. Biſtritia, or Noeſenſtad lieth in the plaine of a verie large valley, and is environned on all ſides with Vines. Segoſvvaria, or Scheſpurgh, lieth part of it upon a hill, and part of it under the ridge. Megies, or Mydvviſch lyeth in the midſt of Sevenbergen, and is exceeding rich in Wine, and is abundantly provided with all things neceſſarie for the uſe of man.

Zabeſus, or Zaas is ſitued in the plaine of a deepe valley, and hath a river abounding in fiſhe neere unto it. They are of the opinion, that this was the chiefeſt habitation of the Saxons.

Coloſvvaria, or Clauſenburgh lieth likewiſe in a pleaſant Plaine, is fortifyed without with walls, and adorned within with faire houſes.

Alba Iulia, is a very ancient towne, being an Epiſcopall Seate, and lyeth upon the ridge of a mountaine & round about it, there is a very fine plaine field which reacheth ſome two thowſand paces. On the Eaſt ſide of it runneth the river of Maruſius, and on the other ſide the Broocke Ompay, which ſpringeth of the Alpes, and was heretofore called Tarmis, and was, in the time of Trajanus, king Decebalus his court and reſidencie.

In Sevenbergen there are 8. parochiall Chapters or Colledges, which they count to be a univerſitie. The Biſtrician Chapter hath under it Biſtricia, and 23. of the Kings villages. The Chapter at Regen hath 30. villages. The Barcenſian Chapter hath Cronenſtadt, with 13. of the Kings villages. Kiſdens Chapter hath Segeſborgh, and 48 villages. Duarum Sedium Chapter hath under it the towne of Midvviſch with 36. villages. The Cibinenſium Chapters are two, whereof the one is Cibinium it ſelfe, having under it 23 villages, the other which is called Surrogativa, hath 22 villages. And the Zabiſienſe Chapter hath Zabeſium it ſelue, and 17. villages belonging to it.

Meeres. This Countrie is full of Meeres, ponds, and moores, which abound in fiſhe. The Navigable rivers are three, namely the Aluta, the Moroſſus, and the Samus: whereof the two firſt haue their ſpring-heads out of the Scythian Mountaines, the Moroſſus runneth into the Tibiſcus, and the Aluta into the Danubius. The third Samus (called by the Germans, and Hungarians Thimes) ſpringeth out of the Alpes Calota, and falleth likewiſe into the Tibiſcus. There are other leſſer rivers as Chicel the great & the ſmal, Sabeſus, Chryſus, Chryſolores, and Strygius, whereof the three laſt yeeld many ſmall peeces of gould-Korall, yea, and there are found in them ſometimes peeces of gould, which weigh a pound & a halfe weight. In theſe & the aforeſaid rivers there are taken many kind of good fiſhes, namely great and ſmall Sturgeons, Corpes of three ſorts, Salmons, Lampreys, Sheathfiſh, Mullets, two kind of Roches, Daces, Pikes, Perches, Tenches and divers others, which are taken there in great abundance. Rivers. Fiſhe.

The Mountaines, which lie about Valachia, Ciſalpina, and Moldavia, aforde much Agaricke, and Terpentine. Mountaines.

There are many woods, and Foreſts, among which there is the Hircynia Sylva, or ſwart wood, in the which beſides the wilde beaſts afore named there are Cowes with great dugges, and Wild mares, whoſe duggs hang downe to the very ground. Woods.

In this Countrie there are many Caſtles, which are very ſtrong, among the which one of the principaleſt is called the Roode toorne, or the Red-tovvre, lying in the Alpes, by a running river, where is a very narrowe paſſage through the mountaines in the Land. This is the Key and Fortreſſe of the whole Land, ſo that on that ſide, there is no entrance into the Countrie, if the Gouverour doe but barre it up. Beneath the towne of Millenbach not farre from the towne of Bros, there lieth an other ſtronge Caſtle by a river ſide, where there is a Way which goeth into Sevenbergen betweene the high Snowie-mountaines, and a deepe Dale. Caſtles.

It remaineth now that wee ſpeake ſome thing of the manners of this people, which are diverſe, becauſe this Countrie was taken in by ſundry nations, and is inhabited by them to this daye. It is ſo then that the Valachians are a very clowniſh, & a rude people, having no learning among them, neither loue it. They followe the Greekiſh in religion, but in their manners rather follow paganiſme: they hold Soothſayers in great eſteem, and ſweare by Iupiter, and Venus (whom they call Sacred) doing many other things, which reliſh of Heatheniſme. They haue neither townes, nor ſtone houſes, but dwell in woods, and make Cabines of reede, to ſhelter them from the winde, and the raine: but the other part of Sevenbergen is better built, and hath reaſonable ſtore of people in it: The manners of the Inhabitants.

The manner of the Scythians ſpeech in Sevenbergen differeth but a litle at this day from the Hungarian pronounciation, though in ancient times there was a great difference, as likewiſe in their writing: for heretofore (even as nowe the Iewes doe) they begann to write from their right hand towards their left.

The Ciculi is a cruell, and a fighting nation, they make noe diſtinction betweene a Gentleman and a Clowne, and make noe more account of the one, then of the other, and obſerue one manner of lawe as the Swiſſers doe. The Hungarians are men of the greateſt reſpect, and authoritie among them all.

THE DESCRIPTION OF VALACHIA, SERVIA, BVLGARIA & ROMANIA.

The name

VALACHIA hath this name from the Flacci, as a people descended from the Quirites, for after the Romanes had subdued, and rooted out the Getæ, they planted a Colonie in this Countrie, vnder the Commaund of their Captaine Flaccus, from whome this Land was first called Flaccia, and afterward Valachia. Moreouer this countrie got the name of Transalpina, and that becauſe it was ſeparated and parted from Hungaria, & Tranſilvania by the hie Alpes, a continued ridge of mountaines, and huge woods. This Countrie reacheth Eaſtward to a Meere abounding in fiſhe, which the riuer Hieraſus, called Pruth by the inhabitants, maketh. Southward, it is ſhut in with the riuer Danubius. Weſtward it bordereth upon the Frontiers of Tranſilvania, and the towne of Severinum, where is yet to beſeene at this day, 34 Straunge Pillars of the bridge, which Traianus made ouer the Danubius. Northward it boundeth upon a river of no great account, called Hoina, and ſo ſtrikes downe through the Countrie to the Danubius, and then turneth with a crooked Elbowe upon the Ile of Paucem, well knowne to the ancient writers, which at this preſent is called Berillana.

The ſite,

Mountaines

And though that Valachia be full of high mountaines: yet is there no want of any thing in it, needfull for the ſuſtentation of mans life. Beſides this, it is exceeding rich in gold, ſiluer, yron mines, and Salt: neither is there any want of Vines, nor any kind of Cattaile.

This Countrie breedeth abundance of faire, and excellent horſes, as well Amblers as others. The Citie Ternovizza is the Vayvodas reſidencie. The other townes are Braila, and Treſcortum, neere unto which towne there is a kind of Sulphurous choache, or Earth digged out of the ground, which is as good to make Candles off as waxe. The other part of this Countrie is inhabited with villages and farmes. The riuer in this Countrie are the Hieraſus, called by the inhabitans Pruth, the Hoina, the Danubius and ſome others.

SERVIA

Servia

Servia is called by Lazius, Maſia Superior, and is a Countrie, which lieth betweene Boſnia, and Bulgaria. Many are of the opinion, that this land was the ancient habitation of the Triballi: for theſe nations after that the power of the Romane, and Grecian Empire began to decline, came out of the North, and ſettled themſelues here. Cuſpinianus, and Volterranus write, that in ancient times the Dardani inhabited Servia and Raſcia.

The Royall and the chiefeſt towne of Servia was Sinderovia called by ſome Sprenderoben, and by others Simandria, or Semandria; by the Turcks Semender, and by the Hungarians Zendreno, which towne lieth not farre from Belgrad, upon the Danubius, and was taken in by the Turckish Emperour Amurath Anno 1438, and then was made a Sangiacat, or a government, under the Baſsa of Buda, or Ofen. There are alſo ſome other townes, to wit: Vidina called by the Turcks Kiratonum, lying upon the hill Argentatus, which is reduced alſo into a government, or a Sangiacat under the Baſsa of Temisvvar. Novogradum lyeth vpon the Frontiers of Servia, which ſome call the New-mount and hath an invincible Caſtle. Neere unto Mount Nigro are excellent ſilver mines: beſides there are theſe townes, namely, Samandria, Priſdena, where the Emperour Juſtinianus was borne, Stonibrigadum, and Belgradum, which before was called Tauranum.

BVLGARIA.

Bulgaria

Bulgaria is ſo named, as if one ſhould ſay Volgaria, becauſe theſe people were deſcended from the Volgæ about the yeere of Chriſt 566, and ſo made themſelues maſters of this Countrie. Some haue thought alſo, that this Countrie ſhould be the ancient Maſia Inferior. It lieth betweene Servia, and Romania, and Danubius, and is every where a rough and a mountainous Countrie, reaching a long the ridge of the mountaine Hæmo, and ſo forward towards the Danubius, and Romania. In the midſt it is moſt rough, & craggie & the higher places are overſpred and couvered with woods like a wilderneſse.

Townes

The chiefe towne is Sophia, which Ptolomie ſuppoſeth to be Niger Tibiſcum. Here the Beglerbeus of Græcia, holdeth his reſidencie, which the Turcks call Rumeli Beyberley, and hath 21 Sangiacats, or governments under him. Sararium is likeviſe a chiefe towne in Bulgaria. Nicopolis is governed by Sangiachen. Not farre from this citie, is ſeene yet the remaynders of that admirable bridge, which Traianus built, and made over the Danubius, when he made warre againſt the Getæ.

ROMANIA.

Romania the name

Romania hath this name from the moſt famous citie of Conſtantinople, which heretofore was called Roma-Nova. In ancient times this Land was alſo named Thracia, either from Thrace the ſonne of Mars, or from the Nymphe Thraca, or rather from the crueltie, ſavaigneſse, and lightneſse of the Inhabitants of this Countrie.

This Countrie is ſeparated from Macedonia, by the riuer Strymon, upon the Northſide of it lyeth the Mount Hæmus, upon all the other part of it the Sea beateth.

The aire thereof is not good, and the Soile very unfruitfull, and colde; ſo that the ſeede, which is caſt into it, will ſcarcly growe & come up: but along the Sea Coaſt, it is very fertil in corne & in all kind of fruits, and encreaſse which they pluck up with their hands, as they doe peaſe, and beanes &c. Of Tree-fruits there are but a few, but abundance of Vines, which notwithſtanding will hardly growe ripe, but onely in thoſe places, which are preſerved from the colde.

Townes

The Townes in this Countrie are Abdera, where Democritus was borne, Nicopolis, Philippolis, Hadrianopolis, Traianopolis, Selimbria, Perinthus, and others. The Metropolitan Citie is Byzantium founded by Pauſanias, and afterward was called Conſtantinople from Conſtantine the Emperour, who made it the imperial Seate. It is called by the Turcks Stampolda, polda, which is as much to say, as a large Citie. It is situated upon an Euripus, or a narrow arme of the Sea, ouer aganiſt Pera, which now is called Galata, an ancient Colonie of the Genuois lying in a Nooke, or Crooke, of Byzantium. Within Conſtantinople there are many antiquaries, and monuments, part of them firſt erected there, and part of them brought from Rome. The principalleſt of them are theſe: The temple of Sophia, built by the Emperour Iuſtinianus: the palace of Conſtantinus, a Columna Serpentina and a Columna Hiſtoriata, S. Lukes Church, the Arcenall, or Ships wharfe, the new Caſtle, the Colloſsus, the Gynæceum, or weemens-houſe, the Hippodromus or Horce-race, and the Obeliſci. This citie is watered with two rivers, namely, with the Cydrus, and the Barbyſsus, the firſt is now called Machleva, and the ſecond Chartaricon. The Circuit of this city containeth 13000 paces, and hath in it aboue ſeven hundred thowſand inhabitants

There are fewe rivers in this Countrie, but thoſe that be, are all of them very famous, to wit, the Hebrus, Melanes, Tearus, Arſus, Bathinia and Neſta. The chiefeſt mountaines there are Hæmus, Rhodope, Orbelus, Pangæus and Moſsapus. At this day this Countrie is under the commaund of the Turckish Emperour, which keeps his imperiall ſeate at Conſtantinople, where he hath a moſt magnificent Palace, of whoſe power, and government wee will here ſpeake ſomething briefly. There are about 200 men, ordayned by the Turck, which every fourth yeere, are to travell through Græcia, Valachia, Boſnia, Anatolia, and other the Turckiſh Provinces, to gather together the Chriſtians children, or Boyes of every famillie, as the tenths, which they are bound to pay, & which they bring unto Conſtantinople, Pera and Adrianopoli, where they are nourriſhed up by the Citizens, the others, which are rude, and blockiſh they place them with the Peſants in Burſia, and Caramania. Theſe are all called, Azamogham, or Iamoglam, that is, ſimple innocent and ignorant children. Theſe being come to de eight yeeres old, they chooſe out the beſt of them, and thoſe which are the ableſt, and apteſt to learne, are brought to the number of 500 of them into the Serraio, being the principaleſt pallace of the Turckiſh Emperour at Conſtantinople, where they are trayned up in diſcipline & ſciences, and inſtructed in the uſe and exerciſe of their armes, till they be twentie yeeres of age, out of theſe they afterward make choiſe of officers, and miniſters belonging to the Court. Alſo the Ianitzares, being ſouldiers ſerving a foote, which the Turckiſh Emperour keeps as his continuall guard, to the number of twelue thowſand of them.

The Turcks gouverment

The chiefeſt of theſe Ianizares being about 3000, are called by them Spachoglani & keepe alwaies at the right ſide of the Emperour, and every one of them hath foure or fiue horſes at his commaund. As alſo againe, there are 3000 other Ianizares, whome they call Silichtar which guard the Emperour on his left ſide, theſe alſo haue foure, or fiue horſes a peece to their ſervice. Next unto theſe two orders of Spachoglan, and Silichtar, there ride on the right hand of the Emperour 5000 Vlofagi, and alſo 5000 upon his left hand, which are all choſen out of the number of Ianizares, or Apoſtate Chriſtians who before haue ſerved under the Beglerbey, or Baſsas. After theſe followe the horſemen, which are named, Charipici, that is, the poore. Theſe without preſsing of themſelues come out of all the Provinces of the Turckiſh Empire, & are of ſundrie nations, As Chriſtians, Perſians, Moores, Syrians, Arabians Barbarians, and, Tartarians aſſembled together, to ſerue the Emperour for page, and out of theſe, there are two thouſand of the ableſt choſen for the Emperours ſervice. Alſo before the Emperour, there ride 200 Muthefarachas with lances, who having beene Sclaves, were made free for ſome notable peece of ſervice, and are held afterward for gentlemen of the Court. After them alſo there rides before the Prince 30 Chauſilier, which is as much to ſay, as Heraulds, theſe are to hinder the preſse, and throng of the people: to make way for the Emperour and to receiue the petitions, which are preſented to him. After them followes, and marches 200 of the Emperours footmen called Solachi with gilt bowes, and Arrowes, and after him alſo 200, and 30 on either ſide. Next them, and neereſt unto the Emperours horſe there are a hundred Peicklers, which are Lackies. Theſe in the time of warre or peace, are ſent up and downe, and runne comonly barefooted. And this is the Turckiſh Emperours daylie guard. But in time of warre, he hath a ſpecial kind of Footmen called Aſaples, and alſo extraordinarie horſemen named, Caripoglan: beſides theſe, they haue in all the provinces of the Turckiſh Empire, an ordinarie garniſon kept for the defence thereof. The Frontiers againſt Chriſtendome are alſo beſett with ten thouſand Ianizares.

In the mideſt of the Turckiſh Provinces they haue aboue 6000 Ianizares, diſperced here, and there, and are immediately under the Turckiſh Emperours Commaund, and not ſubiet to any Beglerbey or Baſsa. They are free from paying of any contribution, or taxation.

There are here and there layd upand downe the Provinces a ſort of yong men, to the number of ſome 10000, where with they furniſh and renforce their frontiers. The reſt of their Souldiers (ſaving theſe aboue mentioned) are under the obedience of the Beglerbeys, which are Governours of Provinces to the number of ſeven, namely of Gracia, Natolia, Caramania. Amaſia, and Cappadocia, Anacidula, Meſopotamia & Egypt, whereof wee will ſpeake in due place.

The Turckiſh Emperour hath three, or foure Counſellours, which they call Viſir Baſsas, or ſimply Baſsas. Theodorus Spanduginus in his booke of the Cuſtomes and manners of the Turckiſh writteth, that the Turckiſh Emperours revenue should be yeerly 68 Barrells of gold, and 58000 Ducats: every barrell being eſteemed at a hundred thouſand Ducats.

The Spirituall ſtate

The Spirituall adminiſtration of this Countrie as it is contayned in Provinciali Romano, is this. Under the Arch-biſhop of Conſtantinople are theſe Biſhops, namely of Colubrienſis, or of Chiorlich, Naturenſis, Spigacenſis, Dortienſis, Panudenſis, now called Pandia, with that of Calcedonia. Unto the Archbiſhop of Heraclea, are ſubiet the Biſhops of Rodeſto, Periſtacienſis, of Gallipoli Darnenſis, or of Dardannello, Curlotenſis, Archadopolis or of Arcus Miſenenſis. Vnder the Archbiſhop Patras ſtand the Lampſaciner Biſhop, and the Dinenſis, de Sellana. Vnder the Squiſicenſis or the Archbiſhop of Sequinus, are the Biſhops of Troianus, Andruniunus, Iacorenſis, of Decandimonia, Lupadienſis, Epigonienſis, Libarienſis. Vnder the Archbiſhop of Veriſienſis are Roſianenſis, Aprenſis, Ripſalenſis, or Cyphela. Unto the Archbiſhop of Madricenſi, or of Mariza no Biſhops are ſubjed, as alſo to the Archbiſhop of Andernopoli. Under the Archbiſhop of Traianopoli is the Biſhop of Avienſis. Vnder the Arch-Biſhop of Malziaco he of Maronia. Vnto the Archbiſhop of Meſsipoli is ſubied the Biſhop of Zanocienſis. Vnto the Archbiſhop of Philippis are obedient the Biſhop of Chriſtipoli, Dragonenſis and Chryſopoſitanus.

THE DESCRIPTION OF SCLAVONIA, CROATIA, BOSNIA with a part of DALMATIA.

The Name. SClavonia taketh the name from a Sclaviſh people, which heretofore dwelt about the Mœoticke Marſhes. It is alſo named by Plinie Illyricum, from Illyrius of Cadmus, or as ſome ſay, from the Sonne of Polyphemus: by Ptolomee it is called Illyris, and by Stephanus Illyria.

The bounds. This Countrie is boundeth by ſome diverſlie. According to Ptolomee his opinion, it ſhould reach from Iſtria, along the Sea-Coaſt to the Frontiers of Macedonia, and through the Land unto Hungarie, Auſtria, and Vpper Maſia. Pomponius Mela, and Dionyſius Alexandrinus giue it much larger limits, for they attribute to Illyricum, the whole Coaſt of the Adriaticke Sea, to wit, from Trieſta to the Ceraunian hills, yea which is more, they place the Illyrians habitation beyond the Danubius, becauſe Mela, counteth the Danubius among the rivers of this Countrie.

Some extend the confines of this Countrie a great deale further. Plinie boundeth it betweene the rivers Arſianus and Ticius: there are others againe, which follow Ptolomee, according to whoſe deſcription, Illyricum ſhould containe in it ſelfe (there it reacheth towards Macedonia) Dalmatia, and Liburnia, which Lazius now nameth Crabaten, and others Croatia: but by Pinetus the Countie of Iadera, or il Contado di Zara.

Sclavonie. The length of Sclavonie, from the river Arſianus to the river Drinus is 380. Italian miles. This Countrie hath in ſome places a cleare, and a wholeſome aire; but where the Pooles and Moores lye, there ariſe filthie foggs, which cauſe unhealtfulneſſe. According to the teſtimonie of Strabo, this is a very pleaſant, and delightfull Countrie, hath good, and ſafe Sea-havens, and a fruitfull Soile. There growe alſo Vines, ſaving in thoſe places, where there are craggie-and Stonie Cliftes, or towards Hungarie, and Auſtria, where the Climate is more colde & ſnowie. Florus writheth of the Illyrians, or Sclavonians, that in the firſt warres of Carthage, they were not ſatisfied with pillaging, but unto this their licentiouſneſſe they added a moſt wicked act: for when the Romane Ambaſſadours, came to treate with them after a lawefull manner, they did not cutt of their heads with a ſword, but butchered them with an axe as Beaſts brought to the ſlaughter, and beſides this burnt the Admirall of their ſhipping with fire. And which was more horrible, this hapned by the commaund of a Woman, which ruled over them, which as Florus ſaith was calleth Teuta. He writeth moreover, that the Sclavonians being hired by the King of Perſia in the Macedonian warre fell upon the Reere of the Romane Souldiers, but hearing that Scorda their chiefe towne was taken in and deſtroyed by Anicius the Romane Pretour, they yeeldeth preſently unto them. Plinie writeth that the Coaſt of Illyricum hath a thowſand Iles, which are inhabited, and contrariewiſe the Italian Coaſt oppoſite againſt it, hath noe commodious Sea-havens. The chiefeſt townes in Sclavonia are Senia, commonly called Segna, lying upon a plaine by the Seaſide, but is grievouſly troubled with tempeſts by the Nottherne winds.

Iadera Colonia is the capitall Citie of the Liburnians, Townes. or Croations, called at this day Zara, and is the chiefeſt, and ſtrongeſt towne in this Countrie. Sebenico called by Ptolomee Sicum, lyeth in the Sardonian gulph under a hill, where it ſeemeth the ſea would faine breake in, upon the hill ſtandeth a Caſtle. Round about this towne there are fruitfull fieldes, but by reaſon they are much troubled with the Turcks, this towne is not much inhabited. Spalatum, and Salena were famous in the times of Ptolomee and Strabo. Salona is the chiefeſt Sea-port of Dalmatia; but is not well inhabited becauſe of their ill neighbours the Turcks. Tragurium called now Tran is ſevered from the firme Land by a ſmall arme of the ſea. Epidaurus was heretofore an ancient towne, with which ruines the towne of Raguſium was built, which now they commonly call Raguſi, and the Turcks Dobrovicha, which towne though it be but of a ſmall compaſſe, hauing a ſtrong Caſtle in it, yet is it famous in regard of the Turkiſh wares, which are brought unto it. This Commonweale is gouverned with juſt lawes, and the Burgeſſes thereof are very rich, and mightie.

This land is watered with two braue rivers, to wit, Rivers. the Dravus and the Sauvv, which run into the Danubius. Beyond the mountaines, there are many ſmall rivers, and Brookes, which runn al into the Adriaticke ſea, as namely, the Edanius, Ticius, Naron, Rhezon, and Drinus. All the Illyrian, or Sclavonian people dwell moſt in wooden-houſen, couvered with reede or ſtrawe, ſauing in ſome port-townes, where they liue more civilly. And thus much of Illyricum, or of Sclavonia in generall: But this Sclavonia contained in this map, is but a part of that Illyricum, except ye hold it for that, whereof Plinie ſpeaketh: it comprehendeth in it, as is ſeene in this map, the VVendiſh-Marck, and the Countie Zagrabrienſis.

CROATIA.

Croatia, is a part of that Illyricum, which we haue begun to deſcribe, reaching towards Hungarie, called by Rufus and Volaterranus, Valeria, and by others Liburnia. This Countrie boundeth Eaſtward upon The Site. Iſtria and Sinus Fanaticus betweene the rivers Culpa, Dravus, and Vpper Mæſia. The chiefe towne thereof is now ſaid to be Bigihon, but Fumium was heretofore. The other townes are Zeng, VVackat, Turnavv, and Townes. Modriſch. This Countrie is well knowne of late yeeres, becauſe of the many incurſions, and beſiegings of the Turcks: for when the Turck had broken his peace with the Chriſtians, he alwaies ſtriued to make himſelfe maſter of this Countrie, as lying ſo well for him, to invade other Countries, as namely Italie and Germanie, to bring them under his power and Commaund. To this end, the Turkiſh Empe- The Turcks rour in the beginning of Summer Anno 1592. gaue invaſion. commaund to his Baſſas, and Chieftanies, that they ſhould fall into this Countrie with his Hoaſt, which cauſed a great feare, and perplexitie among the Souldiers, which lay there in garniſon: for the Baſſa of Boſnia preſently upon it, tooke in the ſtrong Fortreſſe of Hraſtonitza by treacherie; and herewith the rage, and furie of their Souldiers not being content, he presently after besieged the strong towne of VVyhitz, and because there was no hope of reliefe, they were forced to yeed it up into the hands of their ennemies, and the garnison, which lay in it, contrarie to their promisse were most cruelly massacred. After the surrendring whereof, a thowsand other calamities followed, which I will here passe over in silence.

The yeere following Anno 1593 the Turck glorying that he had gott so many townes, and strong holds under his power: had a great desire, and ambition to become master of the strong towne of Sissek, which he besieged with a mightie Armie, but the Germans perceiving what an intolerable losse, and hurt would fallow hereupon, not onely to Germanie, but also to all Europe, if the Turck should haue carryed this towne, gathered al their forces together from all parts, and passed over the river Sauvv with intent to fight with the Ennemie, and to relieue this towne. The Turckish horsemen to the number of some eight, (or as some say) tenn thowsand, came to hinder the comming of the Christians, and passed in all hast the bridge which they had over the river, and standing in battaille on the other side of the river Sauvv, entred into fight with the Christians, which pressed hard upon them, and falling upon the Turcks with great courage, at last the Turcks (seing they were not able to resist any longer) fled to their bridge, which bridge in the meane time, was taken in by the Souldiers of Charles tovvne. The Turcks finding their passage cut of, and seing no waye, to ioyne themselues againe with the rest of their Armie, were al of them defeated, and many of them thinking to escape, were drowned in the Culpa & Savus. The rest of the Turckish Armie, seing the overthrow of their horses, betooke them selves to their heeles, and thus by the appointment of God upon the 22. of Iune An. 1593. this towne was deliuered from a cruel Siege.

BOSNIA.

The Name. THat part of Liburnia, which lyeth Eastward is at this day called Bosnia from the Bessi, a people of Nether Mœsia, who being driuen out of it by the Bulgari, toocke in this upper Mœsia, so then they by changing of the letter e in o, in stead of Bessi, they were called Bossi, and consequently their Countrie Bosna, or Bosnia. What an alteration hath hapnet also in other names, is easely seene in Melita, which is now called Malta, also in Longones, and Lingones, which is now Schandia, and Schondia &c.

The chiefest towne of Bosnia is Iaitza lying upon a high hill, and having two small rivers running about it, which with the steepe clifts, and highe shores, make it exceeding strong: In the botome of this hill these two waters meete together, and then fall into the Savv. This was heretofore the chiefe towne of Bosnia, having an invincible Castle, which is unaprochable. In this countrie there are some other good Townes namely Schvvonica, and VVarbosayne, which is reported now to be the principalest towne in this land, though it be not encompassed with a wall. The river Milliatzka devideth this Countrie into two parts.

DALMATIA.

The Name. AS it is reported, Dalmatia is so called from Delminium the Capital citie of this Countrie. This Countrie in ancient times was very mightie, and the Dalmata very powerfull in armes, and riches. They grewe the prouder, because of the good situation of their Countrie: They lived much in woods and were given greatly to robberie and theverie.

The townes in this land are Salanum, the citie where Diocletian was borne, who therefore loued it dearely, where of there are yet some relicks to be seene. We haue spoken of Raguſa before. Castle Novo lyeth upon the mouth of the Gulfe which the Ancients called Sinus Rizonicus. Catara hath a very commodious haven. Not farre from the frontiers of this Countrie, lyeth the Citie Appolonia, neere vnto which there is a stonie Clift, which vomiteth out flames of fire, and beneath this Clift, there bubbles out of the ground water scalding hott with sulphurous herbs, especially when the Clift burnes.

The Spirituall administration.

The Spirituall administration belonging to this Mapp, Mercator placeth out of Provinciali Romano to be these. As first of al the Archbishop of Iadra or Zara under whom these Bishops are, to wit of Anzara, Vegla, and Arbe. Vnto the Arch Bishop of Spalato belong these Bishops, namely of Traguria, Tina, Sardona, Temensis, Nenensis, Almisa, Sebenico, & Farensis. Vnto the Arch-Bishop of Raguſa (which ye may read in the Map of Grecia, and Macedonia) are subiect these, Stagnensis, Rossonensis or Rosine, Tribuniensis, or Trebina, Cataro, Bacensis, Rosiensis, Bidnanensis, or Budea. Vnder the Arch-Bishop of Antibarensi are the Bishops of Dulcino, Suacinensis, Drinastensis, Polastrensis, Scodriensis, Sardensis, Surtanensis or Acitarensis, Arbensis.

THE DESCRIPTION OF GREECE.

The names and the Originall thereof.

GRÆCIA, or Greece, ſo named from Græcus the ſonne of Cecrops, the firſt Founder of Athens, was once the nobleſt countrie of all Europe, and the nurcing Mother of all Arts and ſciences. It was heretofore called by the Inhabitants Hellas, but by thoſe which dwell in it at this day Romechi, and the Turcks Harmoli. Leunclavius nameth it Rumelia, and the ſeuentie Tranſlatours Phobel and Iavan. All Authours are not of one, and the ſame opinion about the limits of Greece; but properlie it reacheth from the Iſtmus to Theſſaly, and is ſeparated from Epirus by the river Achelius, and is bounded on the Eaſt with the Ægean-ſea now called Archipelagus, and this is properly Hellas or Greece: for Plinie ſaith in one place, that Hellas beginneth from the Streight of the Iſtmus, and in an other that it toucheth Peloponneſus with a narrow neck. Peloponneſus, and Theſſalia are ſometimes compriſed under the name of Greece. When as L. Æmilius Paulus travelled through Greece, he went from Theſſaly to Delphos, from thence to Lebadia, Chalcida, Aulida, and ſo to Athens. The next day, he begann to travell towards Corinthus, Sicyonia, Argos, Epidaurus, Lacedæmon, Megalopolis, and Olympia; and having thus travelled through Greece returned back by Amphipolis. Homer calleth onely Phthiotia Hellenas, and Herodotus maketh a difference betweene Hellenas, and Pelaſgia.

The ſite.

We call Greece at this day all that tract of land, upon which the Ionian Sea Weſtward, The Libian Southward, and the Ægean Eaſtward flowe and beate, & which to the Northward bordereth upon the Mountaines of Thracia, Myſia, and Dalmatia.

The temperature & fertility.

Greece formely excelled all the other Countries of Europe, for power, wholeſomneſſe of aire, abundance of all kind of graine and Fruits, and for the multitude of all ſorts of Cattaile.

The commodities.

They ſend now into other parts of the world Greekiſh-wines, Oyle, Copper, Vitrioll, ſome Gold, and Silver, Veluets, Dammaſks, and Turqueſſe Grograins.

This Countrie was in ancient times very famous, and flouriſhed a long time in honour, learning, & all ſciences, and was renowned for their powerfull Gouvernment, their braue Captaines, and Martiall exploits.

The Gouvernment.

It was heretofore a free-Countrie, but thirſting to domineere over their neighbours, and frends brought them ſelues to ſlaverie. Cyrus was the firſt that moleſted it, and after him Xerxes, and ſome other Kings of Perſia deſtroyed it.

Afterward the Macedonians brought it under their Subjection, and Perſeus being ouerthrowne, it came under the Romane power, whoſe Empire being devided and parted, it came wholly under the Empire of Conſtantinople, till that the Gothers, Bulgarians, and Saracens ſakt and pillaged it, & that at laſt, it was all brought under the miſerable ſervitude of the Turck; ſaving onely Corfu, Cephalonia, Zante, Candia, & ſome ſmall other Iles, belonging to the Seignorie of Venice.

Cities.

There was in this Countrie in former ages many famous and flouriſhing Cities, as Athens, Lacedæmon, Delphos, Argos, Mycæna, Corinth, and divers others, whereof the moſt part of them are either deſtroyed, or lye miſerably ruined, to ſhewe that all things in this world are tranſitoire and momentaine.

Riuers.

The Chiefeſt, and moſt famous rivers of Greece are about ſome 32. in number, namely Strymon, Chabrius, Echedorus, Axius, Erigon, Lydius, Aliacmon, Pharibus, Peneus, Sperchius, Panyaſſus, Apſus, Lous, Celydnus, Thiamus, Acheron, Arachthus, Achelous, Evenus, Iliſſus, Aſopus, Iſmenus, Cephiſus, Boagrius, alſo another Aſopus, Sus, Penegus, Alphejus, Selas, Panyſus, Eurotas and Inachus.

The Seat, & the ſeverall names of them about this Countrie.

The principall Seas, which waſhe and beate upon this Countrie, are theſe following: firſt the Ionian-Sea, which (as Solinus ſaith) taket its name from Ionia, a ſmall territoire, lying upon the utmoſt frontiers of Italy, or as ſome ſay, from Ionius King of the Illyrians: but Archidamus is of opinion, that it was ſo named from ſome Ionians, who paſſing over it were drowned in it. Ancient Writters teſtifie alſo, that this Sea was formerly called in latine Cronium Mare, & Rhea Sinus. Mare Creticum taketh the name from the Ile of Crete, which now is called Mar di Candia. Carpathium Mare, is ſo called from the Ile Carpathus, which lyeth on the Eaſt ſide of the fore-Mountaines of Candia. Mare Ægæum (as Feſtus, and ſome others relate) tooke its name from Ægæus, the father of Theſeus, who (as it is ſaid) ſhould haue bene caſt into it, or as Pherecides mentioneth, it was ſo named from Neptune, who was likewiſe called Ægæus. Valerius Flaccus nameth it Egon and Ægeon. Thucydides calls it Mare Græcum, the Chriſtians at this day Archipelagus, and the Turcks Mare Album, or the White Sea. Plinie relateth, that formerly the Romans gaue two names to this whole Sea: to wit, where it flowed upon the Macedonian and Thracian Coaſt, there it was called The Macedonian Sea, and where it rounded Greece, there The Grecian-Sea. Mare Myrtoum, being an arme of the Ægæan Sea, Ptolomie calleth it Myrtoum Pelagus, which he placeth to lie about Caria, a territoire of Aſia Minor. Caſtaldus calleth it Mar di Mandria. Strabo and Plinie ſay, it lieth betweene Peloponneſus and Attica. This alſo taketh the name from Myttilus the ſonne of Mercurius, who as Solinus and Iſidorus teſtifie, was throwne into it by Oenomous, or according to Plinie his opinion (which is held the trueſt) from a ſmall Ile lying not farre from Cariſtus, a towne in Eubœa. It is called alſo Mare Icarium from the fiction of Icarus, or rather from one of the Cycladian Iles named likewiſe Macris, and Icarus; but is commonly called at this day Mar di Nicaria.

Mountaines.

There are in this region many hills, and Mountaines, whereof the Chiefeſt are Bertiſcus, Athos, Olympus, Oſſa, Peleon, Citarius, Othrys, Oeta, Pindus, Acroceraunij, Stymphe, Calidromus, Corax, Pernaſſus, Helicon, Cytharon, Hymettus, Stymphalus, Pholoe, Cronius, Zarex, Minthe, Taigetus, and divers others. In Greece at Athens was heretofore a moſt famous Vniverſity, which Diodorus calleth The Vniverſall Schoole of Mankind, and Cicero (lib 4. ad Famil.) The nobleſt Academie in the VVorld, whether, not onely the Romans, but alſo diverſe other Nations reſorted, to learne Philoſophie, and the Grecian tongue: and that the Grecians were acute and of a quick apprehenſion, having the knowledge of many ſciences. Greeke is a language full of Elegancie, excellent for the learning of Philoſophie, and the liberall Arts: but more excellent, (as Mr. Heyllen ſaith) for ſo great a part of the meanes of our Salvation deliuered therein, for the lofty ſound, ſignificant expreſſions of the minde, genuine ſuavitie, the happie compoſition of diverſe words in one; yea ſo ſurpaſſing others, that euen in the flouriſhingh times of the Romans Common-wealth it over-topped the Latine, and was the language, whereby the Romans learned their Philoſophie, and all other arts and ſciences, which made Flaccus commend it in this Verſe:

Grajis ingenium, Grajis dedit Ore rotundo
Muſa loqui.

Captaine & Learned Men.

This Countrie hath in ancient times bred many valiant Captaines and famous Schollars. Miltiades, Epaminondes, Ariſtides, Pyrrhus, and Alexander the Conquerour & Subverter of the Perſian Monarchie, and divers others. For divine Philoſophers Plato, Socrates, Ariſtotle, and Theophraſtus: for exquiſite Poets Heſiodus, Homerus, Sophocles and Ariſtophanes. For moſt faithfull Hiſtoriographers Xenophon the Condiſciple of Plato, Thucydides, Plutarch, and Herodotus: and moſt excellent Oratours as Æſchines, Demoſthenes, and Iſocrates.

Their ancient and modern religion.

Touching the religion of the ancient Greekes, they were great Idolaters: for the number of their Gods and Goddeſſes was infinite: in ſo much that S. Auſtin (in his booke De Civit. Dei) relateth out of Varro, that the Grecians, and Romans had aboue 3000. Gods, among which 300. of them, bore the name of Iupiter, each of them had their Domicill-God, they had a God for every affection, good or euil. And for every daunger they had their ſpeciall and tutelar God, and every one of their Gods, had his owne Ceremonies, Prayers, Prieſts, Sacrifices, and Superſtitions.

The Chriſtian faith was receiued in Greece preſently after the paſſion of Chriſt, preached, and eſtabliſhed there by Timothy, to whome the Apoſtle Paul wrote two Epiſtles. The Fathers whome they moſt adhere unto and reverence in this Church, are Chryſoſtome, Baſil, and the two Gregories, the one ſurnamed Niſſene, and the other Nazianzen. They beare now the name of the Eaſterne Churches. The Greekiſh religion differeth much at this day from the Romiſh. They may marrie but one woman, they acknowledg but two Sacraments, to wit, Baptiſme, and the Lords Supper, & Communicate under two Species, namely, Bread and Wine. They abhorre Purgatoire, and all manner of Carved Images. They will not ſuffer the Crownes of their heads to be ſhaven; but having ſpoken of the tenets of their religion in the deſcription of Ruſſia and Muſcovia, wee now paſſe it over briefly.

Church gouvernment.

Their Church Gouvernment is by foure Patriarches, firſt he of Alexandria, who preſideth over Ægypt and Arabia, II. he of Hieruſalem, who gouverneth the Greekes of Paleſtina, III. he of Antioch, whoſe juriſdiction conteyneth Syria, Armenia and Cilicia, & IV. he of Conſtantinople, to whoſe charge are committed all the other Provinces of the Grecian Church. As the Popes of Rome are choſen by Cardinalls: ſo are theſe Patriarches by Arch-Biſhops. There ſhines in theſe Patriarches a ſingulare Sanctitie, and Gravitie.

Their yeerely revenue is collected out of thoſe Churches over which they Commaund, becauſe the Clergie haue no maintenance of their owne.

Their habit & manners.

The Greeks differ much at this day from their Anceſtours in their behauiour, habit, and manners, for now they wheare the hindmoſt haire of their heads very long, and ſhaue of the forepart. They weare broad-brimd hatts and thick felts, as the Turcks doe: ſo they uſe but litle Houſehold ſtuff: they lie not on Feather-bedds, but upon Boulſter, and Matraſſes ſtuffed with Cotton. They cannot endure to haue wine and water mixed together. They commonly invite one an other to Feaſts and Bankets, in which they are given to drinking and Carouſing: their Weemen muſt not come to them, but keepe them ſelues a part. They uſe ſtill to this day in Greece, the old Heatheniſh manner of weeping, crying, and howling over the Dead.

The better ſorts of the Greeks, which are rich, able, and haue any authority, goe after the faſhion of the gentrie of that Countrie wherein they liue. Thoſe which dwell under the Venetian Common-wealth, cloth themſelues after the faſhion of the Venetians, and ſuch as inhabit among the Turcks, are clodeth after the manner of the Turcks.

The Turckiſh Gouvernment at this day.

The Gouvernour of Greece under the Turkiſh Emperour is commonly called Rumely Beglerbey, that is, Lord of Lords, and hath Commaund over all the Countries and Dominions, which he hath in Europe. He hath 40. Sangiacks, or Sangiaglars under him, which are Captaines over Horſemen, choſen out of the Spachoglans, and are made Gouvernours & Commandours of the chiefe Cities, to rule them in peace and unitie.

Theſe haue under them 150, or more Sobaſcis Cimmeriotas, which are as their Lieutenants, and commaund the ſmaller Townes. Vnder theſe Sangiacks there are 30. thowſand militaire Spachi, each of them having three or foure horſe to ſerve in the warrs, every one of them being ranked under his owne Flamboler or Cornett, ſometimes making a troope of 2. 3. 4. or 500. Horſemen.

The migthieſt of theſe Sangiacks is the Gouvernour of Modon, whoſe commaund reacheth over all Morea, and when neceſſity requireth, or that he receiueth any Commaund from the Beglerbey, then he is to aſſiſt him with a thowſand Horſemen, which he keepeth upon his owne charges.

Alſo the Gouvernour of Boſnia hath under his Commaund 800. Horſemen. The Gouvernour of Theſſalonica hath under his charge 500. Horſe, whereof a hundred of them are to attend his perſon, and the others upon any Commaund are to be ſent into the ſervice of the Beglerbey. The Sangiaks under their Beglerbey, haue Commaund over aboue 20. thowſand Horſemen, which are called Timariots, and are payd out of the Turcks rents, and treaſurie. Moreouer, there are 60. thowſand Akengi or Acconti, that is, venturous or deſperate Souldiers, which ſerve on Horſeback without pay, being free of all tributs and exactions, and the Cities and townes through which they paſſe are to find them Victuals. There are others beſides theſe, which hould their Lands by fealty. Theſe ſometimes when occaſion ſerues, gather together a head of ſome 60. thowſand Horſemen, and with whome certaine Foote-men, are joyned. And thus much of Greece in generall, we will now come to the particular deſcription of the parts, and membres thereof.

THE DESCRIPTION OF MACEDONIA, EPIRVS, and ACHAIA.

The seuerall names.

MACEDONIA, is a very large Countrie, and is so named from Macedo the Sonne of Osyris, King of the Argiues: or as some say from Iovis and Thya: or as Solinus whriteth, after the Nephew of Deucalion. Plinius and Trogus witnesse, that it was named hererofore Æmathia, from a King of it called Æmathus. Livius relateth that it was first called Peonia, afterward Æmonia, Edonia and Piera. Trogus saith also, that it was named Bœotia. Stephanus and Hesichius declare, that a part thereof was called Macetia, from whence the whole Countrie afterward tooke the name, as Eustathius upon Dionysius maintayneth. In the Booke of the Machabees it is called Cethim, where we read, that Alexander came out of the Land of Cethim. This Province of Macedonia, lyeth betweene two Seas, having on the West side the Ionian, and on the East part the Ægæan Sea. On the North side, it boundeth upon a part of Dalmatia and Misia superior, and on the South with Epirus, and Achaia. It is every where a very fruitfull Countrie, environned and shutt in for the most part with Mountaines; saving upon that Coast, which lyeth next the Ionian Sea, where it is plaine and full of woods, and this whole tract at this day is called Albania, being large, fertill, and pleasant; yea rich in Golde and Silver: for as Aristotle testifieth, that in former times, there was found in it an unknowne kind of Gold. Out of the veines of the Earth there is digged Brimstone. Also Macedonia produceth the pretious stone called Pæantides. Solinus writeth, that this stone doth conceiue and bringeth forth, and is also very good to helpe women in labour.

This is that Macedonia (saith Plinius) which formerly bore rule over the whole World; subdued Asia, Armenia, Iberia, Albania, Cappadocia, Syria, Ægypt, and so forward beyound Mount Taurus and Caucasus: tooke in the Countrie of the Bactriani, domineered in Media & Persia, and had in their possession all the Easterne Countries.

Shee was the Conquerresse of India, following the stepps of Bacchus, and Hercules. This is that Macedonia, in which our Generall Paulus Æmilius in one day tooke in, pillaged, and sould 72. townes, so averse and mutable was the fortune of two persons. Macedonia contayneth many territoires under it, whereof Thessalia (called by Castalius at this day Comenolitari) is the chiefest.

Cities & Townes.

Heretofore this Countrie had in it many famous Cities. At this time Thessalonica is the Metropolitan, to which people S. Paul wrote two of his Epistles. It is seated on the Sea, and is a populous City, wherein many Christians, and Iewes inhabite. The Iewes haue in it some 80. Synagogues, and swarme here in such abundance, that in this towne and Constantinople onely, are rekoned 160000. Iewes: yet notwithstanding their multitude, they are not here onely, but in all places where they abide, contemned, and hated: and at euery Easter in danger of death. For Biddulph telleth us, that if they stirr out of doores, betweene Munday, Thursday at Noone, & Easter-Eue at night, the Christians among whom they dwell, would stone them, becausse at that time they crucified our Saviour, derided, & buffeted him. Here the Sangiack of Macedonia, keepeth his residencie. Not farre from thence lieth Siderocapsa, famous becausse of the Gould-mines neere unto it. Also Pella, where the Kings treasure was wont to be kept: where also, as Plinie witnesseth, the King kept aboue 3000. Mares to breede upon. Stagyra is the towne where Aristotle was borne. In the City of Apolonia the Emperour Augustus learned the Greeckish tongue. Dyrrachium formerly called Epidaurus, lieth over against Brindisi: the other townes are Aulon, Croia, and Cavalla. The rivers of this Countrie, next unto Strimon upon the Frontiers of Thracia are Axius, Erigonus, Atliacmon, and Peleus. The Mountaines are Pelion, Ossa, Pindus, Nymphæus, Athos. The Mount Athos is so great, craggie & steepe, that one can hardly clime up to the topp of it, & ouershaddoweth the Ile Lemnus. It hath many Vineyards, Oliue-trees, Bay-trees, Myrtle, & Apple-trees upon it, & at this day the Cologeri, which are Greekish Moncks, haue religious houses upon it; so that the Turcks themselues favour them, & hold them in much esteeme, & divers times bestowe many Gifts, & Almes upon these Moncks.

Rivers.

Mountaines.

EPIRVS.

Epirus.

EPirus according to the testimonie of Ptolomie, is a Countrie in Greece, which as Martianus Capella writeth, was heretofore called Chaonia. Gerbelius alledgeth out of Dionysius, and Thrasybulus, that it was formerly named Oricia and Dodona. Leander, and Erythræus say, that it is called at this day Albania: Richerius, and Aeneas Sylvius giues it the name of Lartas, and Castalius, nameth it Ianna.

The bounds.

This Countrié boundeth Eastward, upon the river Achilins, Southward upon the Venetian Sea, Westward upon the Ionian, as farre as the river Celydnus, or Pepylychnus, and Northward upon Macedonia. This Land in many places is barren, and full of woods, but along the Sea Coast, the soile is reasonable good, and fruitfull. Plinius mentioneth, that the Mala Orbiculata, or the Apples, which were as round as a ball, came first out of Epirus, and therefore were called by the Grecians Epirotish Apples.

Cattaile.

It breedeth also very large Cattaile, but no Asses. There are in it huge Oxen, Doggs, Sheepe, and faire Horses. Virgil. Lib. 1. Georg. commendeth much the horse of Epirus, when he saith:

India mittit ebur, molles sua thura Sabæi:
At chalybes nudi ferrum, virosaque Pontus
Castorea, Eliadum palmas Epirus equarum.

An ancient people & Gouvernment.

This Countrie was once inhabited (as Trogus witnesseth) by the Molossi, whom Pyrrhus Sonne to Achilles brought under the yoak of servitude. In the Troyan times it was gouverned by Vlysses, and after him came under the Aecidas, who enlarged and encreased much their Empire, till it came under the Romans, and the Emperours of Constantinople, by whose beneficence and goodnesse, it was gouverned a long time by Despotes: but at last, about some fortie yeeres agoe, this Countrie was subdued by the Turkish Emperour Amurath the second, who droue the Christian Princes out of it.

Cities. The chiefest Cities in this Countrie are Dodona, very famous in ancient times because of the Oraculum Iovis Dodonæi. Nicopolis was founded by Augustus, in memorie of the glorious victorie, and navall fight he obtained against M. Antonius, and Cleopatra: this was in those dayes a very populous City, it is now called Preveſa. Ambracia now Laria, so named from the river Lartus, was heretofore the Kingly Seate of Pyrrhus Epirota, and the place where Cleombrotus Ambraciota was borne, who as Cicero mentioneth, having read Plato his booke of the Immortality of the Soule, and therefore being over much grieved at the miseries of humane life, leaped downe from of a high place into the Sea, and so bereft himself of his life. Actium, which Gerbelius maketh to be a principall towne in Acarnania, was a Colonie of Augustus, & at this day is called Capo Figulus. And by Strabo & Virgil Buthrotum: but Plinie nameth it a Colonie. Sophian saith, that it is now Butrintus. At Leucas was the Temple, and Groue of Apollo, of which it is said, that assone as any man came into it that was in loue, he was presently delivered from the heate thereof. From hence came the famous Poetresse Sappho, as Strabo testifieth.

Rivers. The rivers of Epirus are Ptolemies Acheron, or Livies Acheros, Strabos Achelous, & Sophianes Aspris, Nigers Catochis, Cyriaci Anconitani Geromelia.

Hills & Mountaines. The Hills in this Countrie are the Ceraunian, or Acroceraunian Mountaines, so called because they are subject to Thunderclaps, & very famous for their wonderfull height, & much feared by Navigatours: for when they see any clouds arise upon them, then there followes commonly great stormes, and tempests. Also the Mount Stymphe, from whence as Strabo witnesseth the river Arachtus taketh his head-spring.

The Inhabitants of this Countrie, as Belonius reporteth, remoue out of their Countrie by Troopes, and that because of the barrenesse thereof; and goe to worke in other places, as in Macedonia, Romania, and Natolia, where they serue the Turck for money, and hyre out themselues to cutt and tresh Corne, and such like labour, and when harvest is done, then they returne home againe to their wiues, and children. They are Christians, and speake a language differing from the Greeke: they are of the Greekish religion, and because they dwell so neere Greece, al of them speake the Grecian tongue.

ACHAIA.

Name. Achaia is a Province in Greece, calleth by Ptolomee Hellas, & by Plinie Cæcilius, in his Epistles Mera Græcia. This Countrie is bounded Northward Limits. with Thessaly, by the river Sperchius, the Bay of Malius, & the hill Oeta. On the West side with the river Achelous: on the other side whereof Epirus presently beginneth. On the East, and Northeast part, lyeth the Ægean Sea, and Mar di Mandria, euen to the Foremountaines of Sunius, which now is called Capo delle Colonne. Southward with Peloponnesus or Morea, to which it joyneth, & is fastned. I finde in ancient Writers, that this Countrie was heretofore devided into 9. Provinces, namely these:

Fertility. The Province Doris neere unto the Mount Pernassus, Ætolia lying by the river Evenus. This Countrie to the Northward is plaine, and fruitfull. It had in it heretofore many ancient townes, among which Calidon was the chiefest; but now at this day (as the others) lyeth ruined & desolate. Through this territoire runneth the most cleare river Evenus, which at last dischargeth himselfe into the Sea. Moreover here lyeth the craggie Countrie of the Locri, & the Opunti, having in it the large and noble City of Amphyssa, where also Naupactus is seated though some place it in Ætolia.

The Territoire of Phocis lyeth by the hill Pernassius having bene adorned with the Citie of Delphos, where was the stately Temple of Apollo and the Oracles.

Cities. Bæotia lyeth betweene the Mountaines in a Moorish ground, but the soile thereof is fatt, and fruitfull. The townes in this Countrie, are Ascra seated at the foote of Helicon, and is the towne, where Hesiodus was borne. Orchomenus was very famous for the Oracle of Tiresias. Thebæ, as Plinie relateth, was not much inferiour heretofore to Athens in sumptousnesse & magnificencie, & was the native Citie of many braue, & valliant Captaines, which now is destroyed. Plutarch was borne in Cheronea. Platea was famous for the memorable victorie, which Pausanias Captaine Generall of the Grecians obtained against Mardonius one of Xerxes Captaines. Tanagra was the most Idolatrous, & superstitious City. Aulida was the Rende-vous of the Grecians, when they went to the Siege of Troy. The Countrie Attica is barren, & full of woods. The Metropolitan City whereof is Athens, being more extolled by Pomponius then is needfull here to declare. By Athæneus it is called of Euripides Græciæ Græcia, or a briefe Comprehension of Greece. This City also is much commended by Cicero, namely in his Oration pro Flacco lib. 2. de Legibus, and in his Diologue de Partitione. The City Marathon was also very renowned for the braue victorie, which Miltiades obtayned against the Persians: and Eleusis was no lesse famous for the Idolatrie of Ceres, which was wont to be called Eleusinia. The Territoire of Megaris, as Stephanus reporteth is a rough Countrie, where the City Magara lyeth by the Istmus, which is so named from the Countrie.

Rivers. The most famous rivers of Achaia are Ismenus, which running through Bæotia, passeth by the City Thebes. Cnopus is called by Strabo Asopus, and is termed by Homer the Grassie River: Evenus, was formerly named Lycormas, and as Apollodorus and Strabo witnesse, is a river in Ætolia.

Mountaines The principall Mountaines of Achaia are Parnassus, called by Lucanus in his fift booke, Mons Phœbo Bromioque sacer. It is of a wonderfull height, whose two topps even kisse the Clouds, whereof Ovid versifyeth thus.

Mons hic cervicibus petit arduus astra duobus,
Nomine Parnassus, superatque cacumine nubes.

According to the Testimonie of Claudianus, and Lucretius, it lyeth in the midst of the World. Helicon as Plinie relateth, was consecrated to the Muses. Hymetus was famous for the honey, marble and other medicinall mineralls. The mount Cytheron as Lactantius saith, was so named from the Cytherne-play which oftentimes was heard upon it. There are other hills much extolled by the Poets.

Arch-Bishops. The Arch-Bishops of this Countrie are first he of Phillipolis, under whom these Bishops are: namely Christopolitanus, Dragonensis, Chrysopolitanus. The Arch-Bishop of Serassanus hath none under him. The Arch-Bishop of Thessalonica hath under him Curensis, and Verienſis. To the Laricensian Arch-Bishop are subject the Bishops of Dinutriensis, Almurensis, or of Armiro, Cardicensis, Sidoniensis, & Dinucensis. Vnder the Neopatensian Arch-Bishop is the Lariotensis. Vnder him of Thebes, the Bishops of Iorocemensis, and Castorienſis. Vnder him of Athens, the Bishops Thermopilensis, Davilensis, Salonensis, Nigropotensis, Molgarensis, or Megara, Roonensis, Eginnensis: besides these there are the 2. Arch-Bishops of Corfu, and Durazzo.

MOREA, heretofore
PELOPONNESUS.

Name. HAVING paſſed through the principall Regions, and continent of Greece, it reſteth now that we come to the deſcription of Morea, famous by the ancient name of Peloponneſus, as we read in Ptolomee, Strabo, Stephanus, Procopius & others. It is a Peninſula ſhaped like a plantaine leafe, and embraced almoſt by the Corinthian & Saronian armes of the Mediterraneum, and is called happily Morea, from the Incurſions of the Moores. The circumference of it is 4000 furlongs or 600 miles, to which Artimiderus addeth 400 furlongs more. On the North it adjoyneth to the continent of Greece by an narrow Iſtmus of 6 Bounds. miles in breadth. Touching the limits thereof after many diſputes betweene the Peloponneſians and the Ionians. It was reſolved finally with the unanimous conſent of them both, to ſet up a pillar, as a partition betweene them, with this inſcription on the one ſide: Thus farre reacheth Peloponneſus & not Ionia, and on the other ſide, Thus farre reacheth Ionia & not Peloponneſus. Many great Princes have attempted (but in vaine) to have digged a navigable paſſage through this ſtraight. Among the reſt, firſt Demetrius, Iulius Cæſar, & Caligula, with intent to have ſtrengthened the ſame, and that the voyage into the Ægean Sea might become more ſhort & leſſe perrillous. This Iſtmus as we read in Dion, and others was alſo begun to have bene digged through by Nero, who to hearten on his Souldiers, loath to attempt ſo fruitleſſe an enterprize, tooke a ſpade in his hand, and buſily begann the worke: yet at laſt the Souldiers being frighted with the blood, which abundantly brooke forth with the groanes and roarings, which they continually heard, and with the Hobgoblins, and furies which were allwayes in their ſight: perſwaded the Emperour now halfe out of the humour to leave this, and enjoyne them to ſome more Fertility. profitable ſervice. This Peninſula is the very Key and Bulwarke of Greece, and as Plinie ſaith for the fruitfulneſſe thereof, will not give place to any other countrie, having all things in it, aſwell for delight as neceſſitie, which it produceth in abundance: for the Plaines and Hills are fertill, and is accommodated with many good havens, bayes & roades, which make divers Pro- Deviſion. montoires & Capes. This fruitfull countrie was heretofore divided into 8 Provinces, as Corinthia, Argia, Laconia, Meſſenia, Elis, Achaia, Syconia and Arcadia, and in ancient times this part of Greece was very famous for the Common-wealths of the Mycenians, Argives, Lacedemonians, Sicionians, Elians, Arcadians, Pylians & Meſſenians, and for the Dominions of many Princes, which made it renowned as Agamemnon, Menelaus, Ajax & others, in ſo much, that aſwell fo the importance and Majeſtie of the place, as the ſitu. ion thereof, made it heretofore to have the preeminencie almoſt over all Greece. At this day Peloponneſus is all under the ſubjectiō of the Turck, as the reſt of Greece is, though of late yeares, it was bravely defended by ſome petty Kings of Greece, named Deſpotes, and by the Venetians againſt the Barbarians. It now groneth under the Turkiſh thrauldome. Morea being gouverned by a Sanzack, who is under the Beglerbeg of Grecia, and is to ſerve him with a thouſand horſe, whenſoever he is called upon; he is of great power and authoritie, and hath for his yearely revenew, and entertainement 14000 Crownes. Corinthia famous for the Epiſtles of Saint Paul, is ſituate upon the Iſtmus, which tooke this denomination from the prime Cittie heretofore named Ephyra, which Cicero in good erneſt called the light of Greece in his Oration for the Manihan Law, and in his acts againſt Varrois, a moſt faire, and a moſt beautifull citty, repleniſhed with al things, whoſe ſoile was exceeding good and fruitfull. Titus Livius alſo calls it a moſt noble, and a fertill Soile: and Plutarke in Ariſtidus writeth that Corinth next unto Athens and Sparta, was in greateſt authority. It had a haven, and the Seas waſhing upon it on both ſides: the one looking towards Aſia, the other towards Italie, which made Horace tearme it Corinthus Plimaris by the commodiouſneſſe whereof, this Cittie encreaſed mightily, becauſe it was frequented from all parts, by thoſe which came every yeare to keepe the Iſtmian Games. Acro-Corinth ſtood upon the top of a Mount, being three furlongs and a halfe high, and above Corinth, having 40 furlongs in circumference. Upon the very top of the Mount ſtood the Temple of Venus, neere unto which was the Fountaine Pyrene, called by Perſeus Fons Cabellinus, becauſe it was by the Poëts fained to have bin made by the horſe Pegaſus, daſhing his hoofe againſt the rocke. In the heate of their pride, the Corinthians abuſed certaine Romane Ambaſſadours, ſent unto them. But iraſci populo Romano nemo ſapienter poteſt, as Livy ſaith, and this the Corinthians found to be true: for Lucius Mumminus tooke the towne, and burnt it to the very ground, 952 yeares after it had bene built by Aletus, the Sonne of Hyppotes, as Paterculus relateth. It was after reedified, and is now but a ſmal Village, called by the Turkes Cranto. Next unto Corinthia followeth the Countrie of Argia to the Eaſtward of it: where the Cretan Sea beateth upon the coaſt of this Countrie: Ortelius ſaith it is called at this day Romania. The chiefe Citties are Micene, where Agamemnon dwelt, who was Captaine Generall of the Greekiſh army before Troy, in which were 69 Kings wafted over with a navie of 1224 ſhips, famous alſo for the Temple of Iuno, aſwell for antiquitie, as for devotion. It is reported the Cyclops rounded it about with walls. Neere unto this was the Lake Lerne, where Hercules ſlew the Serpent Hydra with ſeven heads, or rather brake expulſed and cleared this quarter from Pirates, Robbers and Theeves.

Argos, a Cittie built (as ſome ſay) by Argus, who had Argos. ſo many eyes, that hee could ſee every way, the Sonne of Agener King of Phenice, ſo much renowned by the Poëts. Ariſtotle among the 150 Common-weales, whereof he wrote (witneſſe Diogenes) hath deſcribed that of the Argives. The firſt King was Inachus, the laſt Achriſius, whoſe daughter Danaë, being ſhut up in a tower of braſſe, was yet raviſhed by Iupiter, to whome ſhe bare Perſeus, who tranſlated the Kingdome of Argos to Micene. Nauplia ſo called, becauſe Nauplius the Sonne of Neptune raigned in it, at this day it is named Neapoli, and is the ſtrongeſt town in all Romania. Epidaurus is ſeated in the end of the Saronian Gulfe, famous for the Temple of Æſculapius filled with the tablets of thoſe, whome he had cured as ſuperſtitious men beleeve. The ſicke which reſorted to this Temple of Æſculapius, to be healed ſlept in it all night, and it is ſaid he cured them while they were a ſleepe. Here is alſo Hermiona, where heretofore the Virgin Iunos Temple ſtood. Strabo ranks it among the chiefeſt townes of Argia. Trœzem conſecrated to Neptune, and therefore called Poſidoma, and others.

2 Il tempo doue fu rapta Helena da Paride

Laconia. Laconia lyeth South, is one of the beſt Countries of them all, and reaches to the promontoire of Mallea and Tenarus. The Metrapolis was Lacedemon, called alſo Sparta, but now Miſithra, once a famous Commonwealth, heretofore great and mighty, and was not girt about with ſtrong walls, but with the vertues of her inhabitants, renowned as well for the magnificency of the buildings and works, as for their ſtrict diſcipline, inſtruction and auſtere lives, whoſe Lawes were compiled by Lycurgus, who going a journey bound the people by oath, to obſerve all his Lawes, till he returned: and being gone from thence, commaunded that when he was dead and buried, his aſhes ſhould be caſt into the Sea: by this meanes his Lawes were kept in Sparta, almoſt 700 yeares. The diſcipline of this Citty both in warre & peace, made it feared by the neighbours as well as honored. The people were accounted the chiefe of all the Grecians, and directed the reſt as ſubordinate to them. At laſt the Athenians having conquered many large Provinces in Aſia, began ſomewhat to Eclipſe their glorie, which they not enduring, warred againſt Athens, and after many loſſes on their parts ſuſteyned, tooke the Cittie, and diſmantled it.

Leuctra. The ſecond Cittie of note is Leuctra, on the Sea-ſide well knowne to Plutarch, by the dolefull and tragicall hiſtorie of the daughters of Scedaza. There is an other towne of Epidaura, lying in the boſome of the Argick gulfe beſides the Saronian. It is reaſonable well peopled, and is called Malvaſia, Amicla.

Meſſenia. Meſſenia ſtretcheth to Mount Tagita, and the River Pamiſus as farre as Alpheus, it takes it name from the Metrapolis Meſſene on ſinus Meſſemacus, now called Golfo di Caron. In this Cittie Menelaus was King, whoſe wife the faire Helena, was the cauſe of the deſtruction of Troy. Caſtaldus calleth this Citty Mattagia, the native Countrie of Ariſtomenes called the Meſſenian, who as Pauſanias reporteth being dead, was found to have haire growing upon his heart. In this territorie alſo is the famous Cittie of Methona, now Modon, a noble towne, where the Turkiſh Sanzack keepeth his reſidencie. In theſe confines ſtood the Temples of Diana, common alike to the Meſſenians, Spartans and Dores: it hapned here that ſome Sparta Virgins were raviſhed, which abuſe the Spartans pretended to be the ground of their warre: the true reaſon being indeed their covetuouſneſſe of the hole Empire. This warre broke out three times, the firſt continued 20 yeares, in which ſpace the Lacedemonians, fearing their abſence would hinder the propagation of young children in the Citty, ſent a Companie of their luſtieſt young men, to accompany their wives. Ther offſpring were called Partheny, who comming to full growth abandoned Sparta, ſayled into Italy, and there built Tirentum

The other townes are Corona, now Coron. Pilon whereof Neſtor was King, called by Homer the eloquenteſt of thoſe three ages, named now Navarino. Arcadia hath on the Eaſt Laconia, on the Weſt Elis and Meſſene, on the North Achaia propria, and on the South the Sea: this Countrie tooke its name from Arcus, the Sonne of Iupiter and Caliſto. The chiefe Cities are Pſophis, Mantinea, neere unto which the Theban Armie conſiſting of 30000 foote and 3000 horſe routed the Army of the Spartans & Athenians, conſiſting of 25000 foote, & 2000 horſe. In this battell Epaminandas that famous Captaine, received his deaths wound, & not long after dyed: at his laſt gaſpe one of his frends ſaid, alas thou dieſt Epaminondas, and leaveſt behinde thee noe children: nay replyed he two daughters, the victorie at Leuctra, and this at Mantinea. Megalopolis the birth-place of Polibius, that moſt grave and excellent Authour, called now by Sophian Leontura, and by others Londaria. Phialia towards the Sea. Here was the Lake Stymphalus, & the River Stix, whoſe water for the poyſonous taſt, was called the water of Hell.

Rivers. The moſt famous Rivers which water Morea, are Aſopus, now Arbon, as Thevet witneſſeth: Peneus called by Niger & Thevet Igliaco. Alpheus named by the Natives Rophea, or Orphea, as Sophian ſaith, and by Niger Carbon, if you will give credit to the Italian Marriners, there are 140 Kivers & brookes, which fall into it: the water whereof hath a precious vertue heales, the ſcurvie, ytch & wilde fire. Paniſas called by Niger Stromio, by Caſtaldus and Mercator Pernaza, being the greateſt in all Morea, whoſe waters hath a healeing vertue in curing young children and boyes of their ſickneſſes. Eurotas now Baſilopotamo, as Sophian and ſome others affirme, by Niger Iru, by the ſides whereof growes abundance of Bay-trees. Inachus, which Sophian and ſome others call Planizza.

Mountaines. The Mountaines are Stymphalus, the higheſt in all Arcadia, called by Niger Poglici: Pholoë & Nigers Xiria. Cyllenus now Mela's Cyllena, and as Strabo ſaith, is the loftieſt in all Arcadia. Menela called by Mela Menalius, Cornium in Ptolomy Grevenos, is Niger Zarex, but Gemiſtus tearmes it Zaraca: but Ptolomy and Strabo Mintha, and Niger Olono. Evan ſeemeth to be ſo called in Pauſanas from Evoa, a word and terme of the Bacchuſes, becauſe that Bacchus and the woemen, which followed him, cryed out with this word in this place. Tayget called ſo by Plinie Pauſanias and Stephanus, which is a Mount in Laconia, neere unto the River Eurotas: from whoſe ſpinnie toppe, one may ſee and diſcouver all the chiefe Citties of Peloponneſus. Upon this Mountaine are bred diverſe wilde beaſts. It was conſecrated to theſe Heatheniſh Gods, as Bacchus, Apollo, and the Goddeſſe Diana and Ceres.

The Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops of Morea are theſe in the Province Romana. Unto the Arch-Biſhop of Corinth is Suffragan the Argivan Biſhop. To the Arch-Biſhop of Patrazen the Biſhops of Colon and Modon, Coron, Amicla and Androvilla.

CRETA or CANDIA,

AND THE ILES OF

Corfu, Zant, Milo, Niſcea, Santorino & Scarpantho.

WE are now come to the laſt Map of Europe, wherein Mercator deſcribeth unto us the Iland of Candia, with ſome leſſer Iles lying in Greece. Creta according to Ptolomee, is an Iland in the Mediterranean Sea, called now Candy. It is environned with the Adriaticke, Ægean, Carpathian and Lybian Seas: for on the North Archipelagus waſheth it, on the South the Lybian & the Egyptian Sea beate upon it, on the Weſt the Adriaticke and Venetian Sea, and on the Eaſt the Carpathian Sea. It ſtretcheth out in length 250 miles from the Eaſt to Weſt, that is, from the Promontoire Samonium, which lyes Eaſt, to Criu Metopum towards Cyrena, on the Northſide lyeth the Cape Cimarum. The Soile is very fruitfull, eſpecially in wines, which wee call Muſcadels, of which they tranſport yearely 12000 butts, together with Sugar, Candie, Gummes, Hony, Olives, Dates, Apples, Oranges, Lemmons, Raiſens, Mellons, Citrons, Pom-granates, yet as other Countries of the like hot nature, it is not a litle dificient in Corne: the moſt or greateſt part of which is yearely brought hither from Peloponneſus. Malmſey is preſſed onely in this Iland, & from thence tranſported to Venice, and ſo into other parts of the world. The Mountaines afford diverſitie of Phyſicall herbes: as Ciſtus, & that in great quantity, from whence they doe gather their Ladanum Halimus, that reſiſteth famine and Dictamnus, ſo Soveraigne for wounds, whoſe vertue was firſt found out by Staggs and Bucks, that by eating thereof, ejected the arrowes wherewith they were wounded. The whole Iland by nature hath not a Wolfe, a Foxe, a Serpent or any harmefull beaſt or venomous thing in it, ſaving a kinde of Spiders called Phalangium, therefore the Cattle may eaſely lye out all night in the fields and paſtures, eſpecially Sheepe, Weathers and Rammes, which they call Striphoceros, beſides it foſtereth nothing that is wilde, but Hares, Red-deare and Fallow, where there is excellent hunting, at all kinde of game. Beſides, there is not an Oule to be ſeene in this Country, & if any ſhould be brought into it, ſhee would preſently die. Metellus firſt made the Cretans ſtoope to the Romans, after they were under the Greeke Emperours, untill Baldwin the Latin Emperour of Conſtantinople beſtowes this Iland upon Boniface Marquis of Monteferrato, who ſould it to the Venetians anno 1194. But in the time of Duke Dandalus they rebelled and were againe in the yeare 1343 reduced to their obedience. So remaine they at this day the Grecians being permitted the free exerciſe of their Religion, by whome it is for the moſt part inhabited. And although in many things, they imitate the Venetians, yet they ſtill retaine their old Vices, Lyers, Evill Beaſts, ſlowe bellies, whereof they were formerly upbrayded by S. Paul out of their Poët Epimenides. Titus cap. 1. verſ. 2. They ſtill exerciſe ſhooting, wherein (as Lucan ſaith lib. 3) through all ages they have excelled.

Gnoſsians good Archers through the uſe of bowes.
Not Partoia better then Gortina knowes.

Uſing the Scythian bow, but much better then the Scythians. The Countrie people doe dance with their bowes ready bent on their armes, their quivers hanging on their backs, and their ſwords by their ſides, & as Belomus relateth, they traine up their boyes & children in ſhooting, & in ancient times conſecrated them to Diana, and are ſo skillfull in the uſe of the bow, that they put downe the Turcks for ſhooting: they are alſo excellent Sea-faring men, and Navigators, therefore Ariſtotle ſpeaketh truely of this Iland, that it ſeemes it was created by nature to that end, that it might have the avantgard and domination of Greece, and that in regard of the excellent ſite thereof: for as it is ſaid, it lyeth in the midſt of the Sea, on the one ſide having Peloponneſus, and on the other ſide lyeth not farre from Tropio, Aſia and Rhodus. It is noe marvell then that Minos ruling over this Iland, became alſo maſter of the whole Sea, and of all the adjacent Iles, in cauſing them to be peopled, which before laye vaſt and unhabited. This Country as ancient Authours affirme, was once called Hecatompolis, for that it had in it a hundred Citties: this Citty was alſo called Gnoſsus arcus, tela Gnoſſia, ſeated in a plaine not farre from the Eaſt extent of the Iland, and from the North ſhore not above 6 furlongs, where it had a convenient haven: long ſince having nothing left but a ſound of the name, a litle Village there ſtanding, now called Cinoſus. The next in dignitie is Gortina ſtrongly wald, ſeated not farre from the Southerne baſis of Ida, who ſheweth what ſhe was by her Ruines, there yet remaining an Aquaduct entrie ſupported by a hundred arches, certaine ſtragling houſes poſſeſſing the place now named Mataria: The third is Cydonia, now next to the greateſt, & called Canea: ſeated towards the Weſt, and on the North ſhore; enjoying a large & a ſafe harbor: theſe three were all of thoſe hundred that remained in the dayes of Strabo the Coſmographer, who was of this Countrie. The whole Iland is divided into the Province of Canea, Rhetimo, Candia and Sittia, lying furtheſt Eaſtward, ſtrengthened both by the ſhore in few places approchable & by the many fortreſſes. It hath no navigable Rivers; but many great brooks and ſprings, in which growes great ſtore of Colocaſsia, or the Ægyptian Beane. Along the Northerne Sea-coaſt are theſe waters, Meletopotamus, Scaſinus, Cladilis, Epicidomus, Giffo and Divorto. In the Weſterne part is Nopuliar, and in the Southerne Limens. Along the Coaſt and ſhore of this Iland, there are taken abundance of all kinde of fiſh, eſpecially of one ſort called Scarus, a kinde of fiſh which cheweth like a beaſt, called by ſome a Gilt-head or Goldeine, of the bigneſſe of a Barble, which is ſeldome taken in other countries: there is much mention made of this fiſh in ancient writers, for the Romans held it to be a moſt delicate fiſh, in accounting it among the beſt of all. In this Countrie alſo growes the Apples of Adam, the juyce whereof they tunne up, and ſend into Turkie, much uſed by them in their meats: the chiefeſt Mountaines in this Iland are three in number, the higheſt is Ida, ſeated almoſt in the midſt of the Iland, now called Pſiloriti, from whoſe lofty and ſpiny top both ſeas may be diſcerned, where ſtandeth a little Chappel, compact of great ſquare ſtones, without lime in forme of an Arch, being there ſo exceeding cold in the heate of Summer, that the Sheaphards are glad to deſcend before night into the Valley. From hence iſſue many ſprings, ſome part of it is of a plaine deſcent, ſome precipitate, ſome clothed with trees of ſeverall kinds, but by the Cypreſſe eſpecially graced. Moreover this Mountaine doth ſo overtop the reſt, that one may ſee the Sunne riſe, before it appeares upon the Horizon. Two other Mountaines of Fame there be, the one at the Weſt end, called anciently Leucoare, and the other at the Eaſt end, now named Sethia, and of old Dicta, which received that name from Diana. The Venetians enjoy Candie at this day, nothwithſtanding all reall rebellions of the Natives, and threatned invaſions of the Turkes. For the keeping of it from a forraine Ennemy, they have furniſhed the Iland with 78 or 80 Gallies, for the defence of the ſhoares, they have exceedingly fortifyed the haven of Suda with 2 ſtronge Caſtles, this haven being capable of more then a thouſand Veſſels, and therefore meritoriouſly reputed the doore, & entrie into the Countrie. It is reported that the King of Spayne Philip the 2. did offer unto the Venetians money more then enough for this fort, but it would not be accepted, for though the Spaniard ſeemed onely to intend the retreate, and reliefe of his owne navie, when he ſhould undertake any expedition againſt the Turke: yet the wiſe Venetians ſaw, that by this haven he might at all times awe, & when he liſted ſurprize the whole Countrie. Againſt the attempts of the Natives, they have garriſon'd Canea with 7 Companies of Souldiers, Candie with 2000, & the leſſer proportionably, over which there is ſet ſo ſtrickt a guard, that a naturall Cretan is not permitted to enter weaponed into any of them.

Under the Arch-Biſhop of Creta or Candia are Suffragans the Biſhops of Kirokenſis, Archadienſis, Gerapetrenſis, Sicinienſis or of Sittia, Melopotaminenſis, Arienſis, Calaranonienſis, Epicalamoſa, or Agienſis & Riſſanienſis. Under the Atridenſian Arch-Biſhop are thoſe of Caſenſis, Scopulenſis, Napronenſis and Margaricenſis, &c. And thus much for Candia.

CORFV.

THE Iland called at this day Corfu, was formerly named Corcyra, from Corcyra, the daughter of Æſopus, and alſo Pheacia, from a Virgin of that name, whome Neptune here deflowred. It was heretofore very famous, and powerfull for warre, both by Sea and by land: it lyeth two miles from Epirus, where the Sea is narroweſt, and where it is wideſt ſome 20 miles. It ſtretcheth Eaſt and Weſt in the forme of a bowe, & in length is 54 miles, 24 in breadth, and is ſeated conveniently for the Venetian as being the Center of their Lordſhip by Sea. The aire here is very milde, ſo that there growes in it whole woods of Citron, Lemmon, Orenge trees, & ſuch like. The Soile is fertill, abounding in Vines, Olive-trees, and divers other fruitfull trees. Here they make great ſtore of Honey: but ſeeds being ſowne growes not well in this Iland, by reaſon of the hott Southerne winds which parches them, before they waxe ripe. Corfu was celebrated by Homer, for the ſhipwrack of Ulyſſes. The chiefe Cittie is Orfu, which the Turkes by their often repulſes have found impregnable: for it is ſituate at the foote of a Mountaine, on the top of which are built two unacceſſible Fortreſſes, as being ſtrongly fenced with naturall rock: the one of theſe is called the old Fortreſſe; the other the new, both juſtly accounted the chiefe Bulwarkes of Venice, whoſe trade and potencie would ſoone faile, were theſe Forts in any others hands. For this cauſe the two Captaines are ſworne before the Senate of Venice, never to have mutuall converſe or intelligence one with an other, either in word or writing, leaſt by the corruption of one Captaine, the other might perhaps be wrought from his allegeance. Neither have they commaund there for any more then two yeares, their commiſſion then terminating, & new Succeſſours being ſent them: the other townes are Pagiopoli & Caſtello, S. Angelo.

ZANT.

ZACINTHUS or Zant, Plinie placeth to lye betweene Cephalenia and Athaia, it is ſome 36 miles in compaſſe. The fields in this Iland are exceeding fruitfull in Corne, Courrence, wine & oyle, the value whereof amounts yearely to 150 thouſand Crownes, the Inhabitants are Grecians, ſubject to the Venetians. Upon the top of a hill ſtandeth the towne and Caſtle of the ſame name: cloſſe by the Sea-ſide, being environned with woods, round about the towne are fatt paſtures for Cattle. It is ſeated in a healthfull aire, here is alſo the famous Mountaine Elatos, and diverſe Rocks.

MILO.

MILO is an Iland lying in the Cretan Sea, containing ſome 80 miles in circuit. It is very fruitfull in corne & oyle, but the Vines doe not proſper well in it. Here is a ſilver mine, in which alſo is found the precious ſtone Sardonix.

NISCIA.

THE Iland Naxus called by Sophianus & others Niſcia, is 80 miles in compaſſe, and is accounted one of the fruitfulleſt Ilands here abouts, eſpecially, becauſe it yeelds ſuch abundance of wine. There is found alſo in it a kinde of Marble, being ſpeckled like an Adder or a Snake: here alſo is found the ſtone Smirillus or Smirus, as Plinie tearmes it. It is reported there was found here a gold Veine, which by the negligence of the Inhabitants was loſt againe: there are alſo a kinde of Waſpes or Flies, which if they ſting one, is counted mortall: there are alſo abundance of Battes: this Ile once beloriged to a Noble man of Venice, called Ioannis Quirinus, but afterward came into the hands of Duke Iacobus Criſpus, who was chaſed into it by the Turkiſh Emperor Solyman. It is now inhabited moſt by Jewes and Turkes.

SANTORINO.

S*Antorino* or Pheraſia is an Iland lying in the Archipelagian Sea, not farre from Attica, it hath the form of a halfe Moone, though before it was burnt, and ſplit aſunder into 2 parts by the Sea, betweene which there now lyes ſome clifts, and had an other face. It is reaſonable fruitfull, and accommodated with good havens. The Inhabitants live moſt upon fiſhing, & are now under the Turks command.

SCARPANTHO.

S*Carpantho* formerly Carpathus, or as Homer will, was once called Carpathus (hence the Carpathian Sea taketh her denomination) and lyes halfe way betweene Candie and Rhodes, being about 60 or 70 thouſand paces in circuit. It is a very craggie and a Montainous Countrie, and yeelds great abundance of fine Marble. This Iland had once in it foure townes, for which reaſon it was called Tetrapolis, as Euſtathius upon Homer doth witneſſe: there are ſome havens but not very ſafe ones. The Inhabitants ſpeake Greeke, and are of their Religion, and acknowledge the Venetians for their Lords.

THE GENERALL DESCRIPTION OF THE SEVENTEENE NETHERLANDISCH PROVINCES.

BELGIVM, or Netherland, heretofore famous for their militarie Inhabitants, is commonly devided into seuenteene Provinces; in regard that the Princes ruling ouer them, bare 17. titles, and some other remarkable considerations. For, whensoer the States of these Countries held a generall assembly, or meeting, they had not wont to appeare in such number as [illegible] resorted under others for exemple: the Dukedome of Limburg, with th appendances; as also the Marquisate of the holy Empire, gaue their voices and contributed with Brabant and the Earledome of Zutphen, made the fourth qrter of Gelderland. And Dornick with the Countries longing to it, together with Ryssell, Douay, & Ories (being otherwise townes of Welch Flanders) h their speciall voices, and contributed a part. So lewise did Valenciennes, which is notwithstanding a tne, and member of Hainalt. But seing there is an eration, since the time of the ancient Gouvernmt of these Countries, and the devision of them, whaue thought good to follow the order of the ancit titles, which the Princes of these Netherlands hl, and which are yet in use to this day.

The Dudomes then of the Low Countries are foure in nuber, namely: Brabant, Gelderland, Limburg, and Luxenrg.

The Eardomes are seuen, to wit, Flanders, Artois, Hainalt, Hondt, Zeeland, Zutphen, and Namurce. Th third ordein dignitie, is the Marquisate of the hol Empire. Te fourth are the Baronies, or Seignories, of VVest-Friezand, Mechlin, Vtrecht, Over-Yssell, and Groyning. These Countries are commonly called the Netherlands, from the low site of them, in regard of Germanie, and other high-land Countries, which frountiers upon them.

The Spaignards, Italians, and some other Westerne Natious call them Fiandera, that is Flanders, and the Inhabitants Flemmings, by an improper manner of speech, taking a part for the whole: for Flanders is properly but the name of one of the seuenteene Provinces.

The bounds. The Netherlands on the one side are bounded with the North-Sea, and on the Landside, with the Earledome of Embden, the riuer of Eems, the Countries of Benthem, and VVestphalia: the Dukedomes of Gulick, & Cleue: the Bishopricks of Collen & Triers, the Dukedome of Lorraine, and the Kingdome of France. Within the limits whereof lye also the Arch-bishoprick of Camerick, the Diocesse of Luyck, and some other Lordships, which doe not properly belong unto the seuenteene Provinces.

The largenesse. Netherland, according to Guicciardine his dimension (who, though he was an Italian, excelleth herein the Netherlanders themselues) is about a thousand Italian miles in circuit: in the Circumference whereof, there are aboue 200. Cities, and Walled Townes: the chiefest of them being famous for their riches, and might, as Amsterdam, Middelburgh, Rotterdam, Lovaine, Antvverpe, Brussells, Bolduc or the Bosch, Mechlin, Luxenburgh, Nieu-megen, Gent, Brugesse, Dornick, Ryssel, Atrecht, Valenciennes, Bergen in Hainalt, Dordrecht, Haerlem, Delph, Leyden, Ter Goude, Namurce, Zutphen, Leeuvvarden, Vtrecht, Deventer, Groyning, and diuerse others, which shal be described in their particular Mappes.

Besides the number of these walled Townes, there are are in the Netherlands aboue 150. Hamlets, which haue rights, and priuiledges of a towne, and before the last fortie yeeres warres, which haue miserably spoyled and ruined the plaine Countries, there were more then 6300. Villages with Churches, Steeples, & Bells in them, besides an infinite number of rowes of houses, mansions, Gentlemens-houses, & Castles: in so much that many yeeres since the power of these Countries was so great and flourishing; that not onely the Emperour Charles the fifth (in whose time they were all under him) but also long before his great Grand-sire Charles Duke of Burgundie, surnamed the vvarrlike, intended to haue made them a Kingdome, and to haue entituled them, The Kingdome of Burgundie.

But for as much as euery Countrie stood upon his souveraignity, & had not onely their seuerall Coines, Ells, Measures, and Weights: but also their particular Rights, Lawes, and Priuiledges, and were neuer obedient to their Princes; but upon limitted conditions, this was not effected, but came to nothing: howsoeuer ambition, and the desire of domineering was the Source, and Fountaine of these long, great, and bloodie warrs in the Netherlands.

Navigation. The might, and welfare of the Netherlands, consists principally in their Navigation, and Fisherie, which as two inexhausible mines, keeps and preserues them in continual [illegible]. the Sea lyeth so commodiously for them, that with a faire winde, they can saile out of Holland, and transport their commodities by shipping, in two dayes and two nights into Norvvay, in fiue or sixe into Denmarke, and so forwards into Svveed-land, Prussia, Lyvonia, and some other parts upon the Easterne Sea. And being bound Westward they can saile in some houres to Douer, and the Fore-land of England, in 4. 6. 8. 10. 12. or 14. daies into France, and unto some of the Sea-havens of Spaigne, according as they lie, either farre, or neere. The Inhabitants of these Countries, are very able and skillfull Marriners, which doe not onely content themselues with the Navigations aboue said; but also transport their marchandises unto all the Ports of the Mediterranean Sea, as farre as Constantinople, and Soria, yea unto the West-Indian Coasts, as into Brasil, the South-Sea, East-India, China, Persia, and other Regions, Northward, as farre as Nova-Zembla, & Green-land: Briefly, into all the parts of the world. For the Low Countries haue such abundance of shipping, that one may see upon the Sea at once (which one would scarcely beleeue,) seuen or eight hundred shipps, bound Eastward, which haue sett saile from Amsterdam, Enckhuyn, Hoorn, Medenblick, Rotterdam, Middelburgh, and Flishing. Besides diuerse others, which goe for France, England, Spaigne, Italie, the Mediterranean Sea, the East and VVest-Indies, and Moscovie.

Fishe They driue such a great trade in fishing, especially for the taking of Herrings, Cod and Saulmons, that euery yeere they sett out seuen or eight hundred Herring-Busses, or Fisher-Boats, which make commonly three Voyages in a Summe and as Guicciardine relateth in his times, before these troubles haue returned euery voyage with seuen Last of Herrings, reckoning each Last at 12. Tones, amounting to the number of 50. thousand Lt, which were sould for nintie or a hundred gilders the Last, which makes in Starling-money betweene 8. and 10. pounds for each Last.

The Saulmon, & Cod amounted to in those daies, being sould for two gilders a peece, aboue hundred thousand Crownes yeerly: whence the Reader may easelie perceiue, what an infinite treasure they fetch out of these two Gould-mines, sin which time it hath daylie encreased.

Manufactures For a third Mine in these Countries, we may also account the singular skill, and industrie of the Inhabitants in making of all sorts of Manufactures, as namely Woollen and Linnen Cloth, Tapistrie, Sayes, Fustians. Also diuerse sorts of wares, which are sould, and carryed into other Countries by water and by Land: not only into Spaigne, Italy, Germanie, and other Counties of Europe; but also into Barbarie, Guinea: yea into the East, and VVest-Indies. But not to dwell long in this matter, wee will onely alledge that which Guicciardine reporteth, namely, that the revenew of the Princes of the seventeene Netherlands, was not much lesse, then the reveneus of the King of England, excepting the Lands and Rits of the English Church, which the King in the times appropriated to himselfe.

Temperature. The aire in these Countries is soewhat grosse, and moist: yet nevertheless wholesome, and fitt for digestion, and very good for the breeding of all kinde of Cattaile, and the yeelding of fruits.

Summer The Summer is faire, pleasant, and delightfull: for the heate being not ouer hott is to be endured, so that one is not much troubled here with Gnatts, Flies, and Waspes, saving in Zeeland where they abound more.

Thunder, Lightning and Earthquks happen seldome dome hereor the coldneſſe of the aire doth not produce them

Winter. The Wter is commonly longe, cold, and ſharpe, eſpecially hen the winde bloweth from the North-Eaſt: but wn it is South, or South-Weſt, in ſtead of cold, the is ordinarely great ſtore of rayne.

The Pares in the Netherlands are for the moſt part plain and euen, without any hillocks, much leſſe hills, ving in Luxenburg, Limburg, Namurce, & in ſome ps of Hainalt, which Countries are montainous, d full of hills.

e Soile. A Gre part of Brabant, Emperiall Flanders, Gelderland, and veryſſell, is Sandie, but in diverſe places is well mared, and a very fruitfull ſoile, for all kind of Encreaſe

In Gake Flanders, Artois, Hainalt, and Zeeland, there gres abundance of good Wheate', neither is there y wanting in Gelderland, and in the Dioceſſe of Vtrech

Euerwhere there are great ſtore of Fruit-trees, which yld yearely abundance of Apples, Peares, Plumes, herries, Mulberries, Peaches, Abricocks, Wallnus, Haſſe-nutts, and Medlowes. In ſome places ere growes Cheſtnutts: but Figgs, Granad-apples, ranges, Citrons, Lemons, Oliues, and ſuch like fru growe not here, but are brought thither in abundce out of Spaigne & from other Countries.

The are Grape[illegible] places, but by reaſon of the co ney growe not ripe in con[illegible] time & ſo not fit or the Wine-Preſſe: there are no wines made in the w-Countries, except about Lovaine, in the Provi of Namurce, & in the Dutchie of Luxenburg, wher here are ſome ſmall wines made, which are ſowri

Tre or timber, & fyring grow here in abundance, chiefl hire Linden, or Teile-trees, the Coles whereof are ve good for the making of Gunpouder. In the Foreſt of Ardenna there growes many Yewe-trees, which ſhall ſee betweene Namurce, and Hoey, the wood hereof is very good to make Bowes off, but the ſa poyſon: for Iulius Cæſar teſtifyeth, that Caticulus oyſoned himſelfe with the Sap thereof. Ther alſo a Tree here, which growes not in other Countes, namely the Abeel-tree, which is a kinde of white Ipplar, and is found moſt in Brabant.

For erbes and Garden fruits, there are as faire here as any other Countries, for Pompions, Melons, Cumbers, Artichoks, Aſparages, and diverſe other fae plants and herbs, the ſeeds whereof came firſt out f Italie, and are now as faire here as there.

Here s no kind of Cattaile wanting (ſaving Buffles) neefull for the ſuſtentation of man. The Oxen, eſpecially in Holland, and Friezland are ſo huge, that of late there hath bene found thoſe, which haue weighed 2800, and 3000 pounds: Sheepe and Muttons are here alſo great, fatt, and well taſted. Heere likewiſe are large and ſtrong Horſes and Mares, eſpecially in Friezland. Wool is not ſo fine here, as in other Countries, by reaſon of the aire, & moiſtneſſe of the grounds.

The rivers in the Low Countries are as faire, large, Rivers. and many in number, as in any other Countrie of Europe: yea perhapps of the whole world. The chiefeſt whereof are the Rhyne, the Maze, the Scheld, and the Ems, which fall into the Sea. The Rhyne ſpringeth out of the Alps in Svviſſerland, & traverſing through Germanie, at laſt looſeth his name in the Maze at Crimpen in Holland. The Maze commeth out of the Mountaine Vange, which Cæſar calleth Vogeſus, lying upon the Confines of Langres, not farre from the ſprings and Fountaines, out of which the Seine, & the Marne flowe, and falleth into the North-Sea, betweene Graveſand, and the Brill. The Scheld ariſeth in Pi[illegible]die, in the territorie of Vermandois, from a hill, out of which alſo the Somme, and the Sambre haue their heads, and at Saftingen, foure miles from Antvverpe, devided himſelf into two armes, or branches, whereof the one of them falleth into the Sea betweene Sluiſe in Flaunders, and an Ile in Zeeland called VValcheren, taking by the [illegible] name of the Hound; and the other parteth the Zeelandish Iles, and looſeth the name of the Eaſterne, and Weſterne-Scheld, betweene Schouvven, and VValcheren abouesaid, where he meeteth with the Sea. The Ems taketh his head-ſpring in VVeſtphalia, neere unto the Village of VVidenborg, and a litle beneath Embden disburdeneth himſelf into the North-Sea. Theſe foure braue rivers abounding in fiſhe, receiue into them all the other leſſer rivers in the Netherlands, which are many in number.

Among the woods and Foreſts, which are in the VVoods. Foreſts high land Countries of the Netherlands, the chiefeſt is the Foreſt of Ardenna, which at this day (though it be nothing ſo great as it was formerly) exceedeth in greatneſſe all the Foreſts of Gallia. At this time where it is longeſt, which is from the towne of Theonville in Luxenburg, unto the Dioceſſe of Liege, it is not much leſſe then thirtie Dutch miles.

For brevitie ſake wee will paſſe by other woods, & mention onely that foreſt of Soina, which lyeth cloſſe by Bruſſels in Brabant and is aboue ſeuen Dutch miles in compaſſe, making eight thouſand Acres of Land: and euery yeere there was hundred Acres hewen downe, which before the troubles, or laſt warrs, yeel-

are in the Netherlands aboue 150. Hamlets, which haue rights, and priuiledges of a towne, and before the last fortie yeeres warres, which haue miserably spoyled and ruined the plaine Countries, there were more then 6300. Villages with Churches, Steeples, & Bells in them, besides an infinite number of rowes of houses, mansions, Gentlemens-houses, & Castles: in so much that many yeeres since the power of these Countries was so great and flourishing; that not onely the Emperour Charles the fifth (in whose time they were all under him) but also long before his great Grand-sire Charles Duke of Burgundie, surnamed the vvarrlike, intended to haue made them a Kingdome, and to haue entituled them, The Kingdome of Burgundie.

But for as much as euery Countrie stood upon his souueraignity, & had not onely their seuerall Coines, Ells, Measures, and Weights: but also their particular Rights, Lawes, and Priuiledges, and were neuer obedient to their Princes; but upon limitted conditions, this was not effected, but came to nothing: howsoeuer ambition, and the desire of domineering was the Source, and Fountaine of these long, great, and bloodie warrs in the Netherlands.

Navigation. The might, and welfare of the Netherlands, consists principally in their Navigation, and Fisherie, which as two inexhausible mines, keeps and preserues them in continuall [illegible] the Sea lyeth so commodiously for them, that with a faire winde, they can saile out of Holland, and transport their commodities by shipping, in two dayes and two nights into Norvvay, in fiue or sixe into Denmarke, and so forwards into Svveed-land, Prusia, Lyvonia, and some other parts upon the Easterne Sea. And being bound Westward they can saile in some houres to Douer, and the Fore-land of England, in 4. 6. 8. 10. 12. or 14. daies into France, and unto some of the Sea-havens of Spaigne, according as they lie, either farre, or neere. The Inhabitants of these Countries, are very able and skillfull Marriners, which doe not onely content themselues with the Navigations aboue said; but also transport their marchandises unto all the Ports of the Mediterranean Sea, as farre as Constantinople, and Soria, yea unto the West-Indian Coasts, as into Brasil, the South-Sea, East-India, China, Persia, and other Regions, Northward, as farre as Nova-Zembla, & Green-land: Briefly, into all the parts of the world. For the Low Countries haue such abundance of shipping, that one may see upon the Sea at once (which one would scarcely beleeue,) seuen or eight hundred shipps, bound Eastward, which haue sett saile from Amsterdam, Enckhuyn, Hoorn, Medenblick, Rotterdam, Middelburgh, and Flishing. Besides diuerse others, which goe for France, England, Spaigne, Italie, the Mediterranean Sea, the East and VVest-Indies, and Moscovie.

They driue such a great trade in fishing, especially for the taking of Herrings, Cod and Saulmons, that euery yeere they sett out seuen or eight hundred Herring-Busses, or Fisher-Boats, which make commonly three Voyages in a Summe and as Guicciardine relateth in his times, before these troubles haue returned euery voyage with seuen Last of Herrings, reckoning each Last at 12. Tones, amounting to the number of 50. thousand Tt, which were sould for nintie or a hundred gilders the Last, which makes in Starling-money betweene 8. and 10. pounds for each Last. Fishe

The Saulmon, & Cod amounte to in those daies, being sould for two gilders a peece aboue hundred thousand Crownes yeerly: whence the Reader may easelie perceiue, what an infinite treasure they fetch out of these two Goulde-mines, sine which time it hath daylie encreased.

For a third Mine in these Counties, we may also account the singular skill, and industrie of the Inhabitants in making of all sorts of Manufactures, as namely Woollen and Linnen Cloth, Tapistrie, Sayes, Fustians. Also diuerse sorts of wares, which are sould, and carryed into other Countries by water and by Land: not only into Spaigne, Italy, Germanie, and other Counties of Europe; but also into Barbarie, Guinea: yea into the East, and VVest-Indies. But not to dwell long in this matter, wee will onely alledge that which Guicciardine reporteth, namely, that the reuenew of the Princes of the seuenteene Netherlands, was not much lesse, then the reueneus of the King of England, excepting the Lands and Rents of the English Church, which the King in the times appropriated to himselfe. Manu Elures

The aire in these Countries is soewhat grosse, and moist: yet nevertheless wholesome, and fitt for digestion, and very good for the breeding of all kinde of Cattaile, and the yeelding of fruits. Temperature.

The Summer is faire, pleasant, and delightfull: for the heate being not ouer hott is to be endured, so that one is not much troubled here with Gnatts, Flies, and Waspes, saving in Zeeland where they abound more. Summer dome hereof or the coldneſſe of the aire doth not produce them.

Inter. The Winter is commonly longe, cold, and ſharpe, eſpecially when the winde bloweth from the North-East: but when it is South, or South-Weſt, in ſtead of cold, there is ordinarely great ſtore of rayne.

The Paſtures in the Netherlands are for the moſt part plaine and euen, without any hillocks, much leſſe hills, ſauing in Luxenburg, Limburg, Namurce, & in ſome parts of Hainalt, which Countries are montainous, and full of hills.

Soile. A Great part of Brabant, Emperiall Flanders, Gelderland, and Veryſſell, is Sandie, but in diverſe places is well manured, and a very fruitfull ſoile, for all kind of Encreaſe.

In Generall Flanders, Artois, Hainalt, and Zeeland, there growes abundance of good Wheate, neither is there any wanting in Gelderland, and in the Dioceſſe of Vtrecht.

Euerywhere there are great ſtore of Fruit-trees, which yeld yearely abundance of Apples, Peares, Plumes, Cherries, Mulberries, Peaches, Abricocks, Wallnuts, Haſle-nutts, and Medlowes. In ſome places there growes Cheſtnutts: but Figgs, Granad-apples, Oranges, Citrons, Lemons, Oliues, and ſuch like fruit growe not here, but are brought thither in abundance out of Spaigne & from other Countries.

They are Grapes in many places, but by reaſon of the coldneſſe they growe not ripe in common time & ſo not fit for the Wine-Preſſe: there are no wines made in the Low-Countries, except about Lovaine, in the Province of Namurce, & in the Dutchie of Luxenburg, where there are ſome ſmall wines made, which are ſowrish.

Tree for timber, & fyring grow here in abundance, chiefliest Linden, or Teile-trees, the Coles whereof are very good for the making of Gunpouder. In the Foreſt of Ardenna there growes many Yewe-trees, which I ſhall ſee betweene Namurce, and Hoey, the wood whereof is very good to make Bowes off, but the ſap poyſon: for Iulius Cæſar teſtifyeth, that Caticulus poyſoned himſelfe with the Sap thereof. There alſo a Tree here, which growes not in other Countries, namely the Abeel-tree, which is a kinde of white Popplar, and is found moſt in Brabant.

For herbes and Garden fruits, there are as faire here as in any other Countries, for Pompions, Melons, Cucumbers, Artichoks, Aſparages, and diverſe other faire plants and herbs, the ſeeds whereof came firſt out of Italie, and are now as faire here as there.

Here is no kind of Cattaile wanting (ſaving Buffles) needfull for the ſuſtentation of man. The Oxen, eſpecially in Holland, and Friezland are ſo huge, that of late there hath bene found thoſe, which haue weighed 2800, and 3000 pounds: Sheepe and Muttons are here alſo great, fatt, and well taſted. Heere likewiſe are large and ſtrong Horſes and Mares, eſpecially in Friezland. Wool is not ſo fine here, as in other Countries, by reaſon of the aire, & moiſtneſſe of the grounds.

The rivers in the Low Countries are as faire, large, Rivers. and many in number, as in any other Countrie of Europe: yea perhapps of the whole world. The chiefeſt whereof are the Rhyne, the Maze, the Scheld, and the Ems, which fall into the Sea. The Rhyne ſpringeth out of the Alps in Svviſſerland, & traverſing through Germanie, at laſt looſeth his name in the Maze at Crimpen in Holland. The Maze commeth out of the Mountaine Vange, which Cæſar calleth Vogeſus, lying upon the Confines of Langres, not farre from the ſprings and Fountaines, out of which the Seine, & the Marne flowe, and falleth into the North-Sea, betweene Graveſand, and the Brill. The Scheld ariſeth in Picardie, in the territorie of Vermandois, from a hill, out of which alſo the Somme, and the Sambre haue their heads, and at Saftingen, foure miles from Antvverpe, devided himſelf into two armes, or branches, whereof the one of them falleth into the Sea betweene Sluiſe in Flaunders, and an Ile in Zeeland called VValcheren, taking by the way the name of the Honte, and the other parteth the Zeelandish Iles, and looſeth the name of the Eaſterne, and Weſterne-Scheld, betweene Schouvven, and VValcheren aboue-ſaid, where he meeteth with the Sea. The Ems taketh his head-ſpring in VVeſtphalia, neere unto the Village of VVidenborg, and a litle beneath Embden disburdeneth himſelf into the North-Sea. Theſe foure braue rivers abounding in fiſhe, receiue into them all the other leſſer rivers in the Netherlands, which are many in number.

Among the woods and Foreſts, which are in the VVoods. Foreſts high land Countries of the Netherlands, the chiefeſt is the Foreſt of Ardenna, which at this day (though it be nothing ſo great as it was formerly) exceedeth in greatneſſe all the Foreſts of Gallia. At this time where it is longeſt, which is from the towne of Theonville in Luxenburg, unto the Dioceſſe of Liege, it is not much leſſe then thirtie Dutch miles.

For brevitie ſake wee will paſſe by other woods, & mention onely that foreſt of Soina, which lyeth cloſſe by Bruſſels in Brabant and is aboue ſeuen Dutch miles in compaſſe, making eight thouſand Acres of Land: and euery yeere there was hundred Acres hewen downe, which before the troubles, or laſt warrs, yeeldeth the Prince aboue fifthie thouſand Gilders.

Deare and Game. Within and without the ſaid Foreſt, there lie many faire Villages, Cloiſters, and Abbeys. In all the Woods and Foreſts of the Netherlands, there are many Staggs, Hinds, fallow-Deere, Badgers, Roe-deere, Wilde-hoggs, Hares, Connies, and ſuch like game. In ſome parts of them there are Wolues, Foyes, and Pole-catts, but there is good order taken for the deſtroying of them. The Land-fowle in the Netherlands, are Peacocks, Hearnes, Swanns, both tame and wilde Storkes, Geeſe, Ducks, Henns, Turkies, Pigeons, Woodcocks, Partridges, Quailes, Finches, and all kind of ſmall birds. Alſo Eagles, Kites, and diverſe kind of Hauks for hawking. The water-fowle ſhalbe ſpoken of in the particular deſcription of Holland.

The Inhabitants. The Inhabitants of the Netherlands are for the moſt part, tall, ſtrong, faire, and well proportioned, ſomewhat Sympathizing of the nature of their Neighbours in each Countrie: as Eaſtward of the Eaſterling, Southward of the High Dutches, and Weſtward of the French. The Netherlanders are ſtoute and valliant Souldiers both by Sea, and by Land, fearing no perills or daungers: eſpecially when they haue a carefull Commaunder and a good Leader. They are faithfull in all their actions, but chiefly able Sea men: for there is no place in the world, where they ſee there is any profit to be gotten (for they are greedie of gaine) but they finde it out, and ſaile unto it with their ſhipping. For their ſtout Sea-fights their Arch-Ennemy the Spaignards themſelues can witneſſe. They are very capable, and induſtrious; for they make all ſorts of manufactures, which are found elſwhere, and doe not onely make them themſelues, but are alſo the Inventers & Authours of many fine Arts, which were never found out before. For they invented Clocks, Printing, and the Compaſſe, the making of Chariots, the laying of Colours with oyle, and the baking of Glaſſes. They gaue ſeuerall names to the winds, which are yet to this day in uſe among the Tranſmountaine Nations. They reſtored Muſicke, when it was almoſt loſt, and brought it to perfection as it is now, and found out diverſe Muſicall Inſtruments. And what a luſtre the Latine tongue (which was as it were wholy forgotten) receiued from Eraſmus of Rotterdam, that great reſtorer of Learning in theſe parts, all Learned men may iudge. The Netherlanders are curious Painters, excellent Engravers, Architectours, Image-Carvers, workers of Pictures in glaſſe, yea to conclude skillfull in all Arts & Sciences in the World.

Manners. The Manners of the Netherlanders are in manie commendable, for they are meeke and moderate, not highminded, not trecherous, warin ſpending that which they haue gott, not lightly caſted in adverſity, not proud in proſperitie: for the moſt part of them, having by their labour and diligence gott as much as will mainteyne them honeſtly, they take their eaſe, and lay out their meanes in lands, and houſes: for this people aboue all other Nations are giuen much to building and manuring Lands. Luxurie or whoredome is not ſo common with them, as among other Nations. They are truſtied will truſt others; but being once deceiued by a, they will never truſt him againe. The greateſice among the Netherlanders is Drunkenneſſe: hich is not ſtraunge, becauſe they dwell under a and cold Climate, which begetts ill blood, anderefore to cheere themſelues, are giuen more to drinng, then other Weſterne Nations. But this vice is ſo much, as it hath beene heretofore, eſpecially in-n of qualitie.

Women. The women here are happie, for beſid this that Nature hath made them generally of a fa complexion, and well porportioned: they ame alſo to ſuch a capacitie that the moſt part of therule their huſbands. Their libertie is great, for th converſe with all men, and come into all compan, which makes them able for marchandiſe and trag, ſo that they [illegible] buy and ſell [illegible] their huſbands: yea manie of them gett their huſbds, and their Childrens living: yet notwithſtandi this converſation and freeneſſe it makes them unchaſt, or immodeſt: for the Netherlandiſh men are very chaſt, modeſt, and diligent: ye ſhall dome ſee them idle: yea the richeſt ſort of them re alwais buyſie in their famillies, and ſo curious in keeping of their houſes and houſhold ſtuff, neate & cleane, that they make rather Idolls of them, th houſes: for the very Floures in Holland are kept irer and cleaner, then the Platters, Potts, and Diſhin Italie, and France. They are frugall and ſpar in their houſe-keeping, and husband all things the beſt, having moſt by them all proviſions within ores: for there is ſcarcly a houſe, where they haue an Oxe or two powdred and as many fatt Hoggs, beſides Butter, Cheeſe, Salt fiſhe, Barrells of Beare, Nde, Peaſe, Beanes, and other victuals, which they layn for their winter proviſion: and though they liue nerely, when they are by themſelues: yet they entertaine their frends liberally, & when a frend coms to viſite them, they entertaine him freely, and thike nothing too good for him.

The Netherlanders had wont to be more commended mended heretofore for their Apparell, then they are at this day: for now Pride is growne to ſuch a heigth among them, that they followe the new fashions of euerie forraine Nation Their language is very ancient, copious, and perfect: but hard to be learned by ſtraungers, for they can hardly pronounce it well, though they haue liued 20. yeers in the Countrie.

Contrariewiſe the Netherlanders quickly learne all forraine languages and tongues, for many of them, which haue dwelt in forraine Countries, ſpeake as good Engliſh, French, high Dutch, Italian, Spaniſh, yea the Perſian, and Syriack tongues, as if they had bene borne and bred up in theſe Countries. And for the Learned languages, as Latine, Hebrew, & Greeke in theſe they excell all the Nations and Learned men of the World.

But to returne againe to our Dutch tongue, and to ſpeake ſome thing of the antiquitie thereof: It is well knowne, that in the time of Iulius Cæſar, which is aboue 1600. yeeres agoe, yea perhaps long before the ſame ſpeech, which is now ſpoken, was then uſed in theſe Countries; & if need ſhould require, may be ſhowne out of diverſe Authours. True it is, that there is happed ſome alteration in it, becauſe euery Countrie hath gotten the toone, and pronunciation of their neighbours; but nevertheleſſe is in effect, one and the ſame ſpeech, being fluent and copious in ſhort and plaine words, for the expreſſion of the thoughts of the heart. This ſpeech goeth further then many others, for they ſpeake Dutch from Calais in France, as farre as Livonia, or Liefland and further.

The Netherlanders are pious people, and of the firſt among other nations that were converted to the Chriſtian faith, & receiued the Goſpell. This appeares by the many faire Churches, Abbeys, Cloiſters, Gaſthouſes, and Hoſpitalls, wherewith both Townes, Villages, and Countries are beautified and adorned. And thus much briefly of the ſituation, nature, and propertie of the Netherlands.

Now followeth their politique Gouvernments, which by the inteſtine diſſentions, and warrs are devided into two, namely, in the Provinces, that were gouverned by her Alteſſe of famous memorie, the late Arch Ducheſſe of Brabant Iſabella Clara Eugenia Infante of Spagne, daughter unto Phillipp the ſecond King of Spagne, heretofore Lord of the Netherlands, as the Dukedomes of Brabant (ſaving ſome Townes, to wit, The Boſch, Maſtricht, Bergen op Zoom, Grave, Steenbergen, Williamſtadt with their juriſdictions) Luxenburg, a part of the upper quarter of Geldres, and the toone of Gelders, with ſome ſmall places lying thereabouts, then the Earledomes of Flanders (except Sluyſe, Axell, Ardenburgh with diverſe Schanſes and Forts) of Artois, Hainalt, and Namurce, the Marquiſate of the holy Empire, whereof Antwerpe is the Metropolitan City, and the Seignorie of Machlyn. And in the Vnited Provinces, which are ruled by the noble, high and mightie Lords, the Lords the States Generall of the Countries, & the illuſtratious his Excell. Frederick Henry, Prince of Orenge, Earle of Naſſawe, &c. whereof the firſt is all Gelderland (ſaving Gelders it ſelfe) the Dukedome of Limburg, the Earledomes of Holland, Zeeland, Zutphen, with the Seigneuries of Frieſland, Vtrecht, Over-Yſel, and Groyning: alſo the Townes in Brabant and Flanders aboue mentioned, ouer which the Spagnard hath no commaund: We will ſpeake of each Government in order, which they had in common before the troubles; and afterward of the particular Gouvernments, as theſe Countries now ſtand under the obedience of the King of Spayne, & under the High & mightie Lords the States, and deſcribe them before the Maps of Holland and Brabant.

Concerning the politique Gouvernment, and the State Eccleſiaſtique: the ſame is maintained in that maner, as it was obſerved heretofore before the troubles under the houſe of Burgundie: whereof Guicciardine, and others write at large. But after the 17. Provinces were devided, & ſeparated one frō an other by the warrs, the forme of Gouvernment (eſpecially in the Vnited Provinces under the obedience of the high and mighty Lords the States Generall) was altered and ordered as time, and occaſion required. To ſpeake then briefly of the policie obſerved aſwell in the Provinces under the Commaund of the King of Spagne, as at this day in thoſe of the free Vnited Countries. It is manifeſt, that the countries, which are under the King of Spagne are gouverned almoſt according to the ancient māner: which forme conſiſteth in the Counſellours of State, reſiding by the Prince, or in his abſence by the Gouvernour of the Countries: this is formed ſometimes out of a greater, and other whiles out of a leſſer number of Counſellours, being moſt of them noblemē, or particular Gouvernours of Provinces. In this Councill they treat of peace and warre, receiue and ſend out Ambaſſadours, make and caſſeere Officers, and in fine handles all occurrences, which concerne the welfare and good Gouvernment of the Countries.

The privie Councill holds alſo their reſidencie neere unto the Prince, or the Gouvernour of the Land, and conſiſts of tenne or twelue Counſellours, moſt of them Doctors, and Licentiats in the Lawe: this hath à Preſident, who is Keeper of the broad-ſeale. This Councill hath power to giue Priuiledges, Graunts, and Pardons, and to decide all controuerſies, touching the partition of Lands, Bounds, and Limits.

The Councill of the Finances, or treaſurie, in which commonly there are three of the Chiefeſt Lords of the Countrie, called the Superintendants of the Finances, a Treaſurer, a Receiuer Generall, and three other States men, which are Commiſſioners, with two Secretaires, and ſome other Miniſters: theſe haue the chiefe charges ouer the Princes Domaines, and reuenews, and giue out Ordinances for the payments, aſwell of the Charges of warre & Fortifications, as other expences about the ſeruice of the Land. In this Councill alſo they farme out the Princes reuenews, ſo that this Councill is held for the Princes Exchequer.

This Councill, as alſo the Marſhall of the Court, who becauſe he carrieth a long hathorne Rod, as a ſigne of Iuſtice, is commonly called the Red Rod, and which the Princes whole Court muſt followe.

Beſides the Princes Councills aboue ſaid, there are others called the Chambers of Account, whereof the principaleſt is held at Ryſſell in Gallike Flanders, the other at Bruſſels in Brabant: they haue alſo their Preſident, and certaine Receivers with ſome other officers belonging to them, and are as members, and Dependants of the Chamber, or Councill of the Finances, or reuenews.

The Prouinciall Councill conſiſts of a certaine number of Counſellours, being Doctors or at leaſt Licentiats of the Lawe, and is called the high Councill, ot Parliament of Machlyn: hither they maye appeale, and no further for moſt ſuits and Cauſes in the Countries. In Brabant they name it the Chancerie, becauſe there is a Lord Chancellour, or a Preſident joyned with ſome other Counſellours. Moreouer, there is an Advocate Fiſcall, an Atturney Generall, Recorders, Secretaires, and other inferiour Officers, which receiue Stipends from the Prince. In this Court are heard all Appeales for ſentences, pronounced by the inferiour Benches, belonging to euery Court.

The Bands of Ordonnance, which the Prince of the Countrie had in the times of peace, and when his highneſſe had no ordinarie footemen in his ſeruice, conſiſted in foureteene Companies, aſwell Curaſsiers, as light Horſemen, whereof ſome of them were not aboue 50. or 30. ſtrong, ouer whome ſome chiefe Lord, or noble man of the Countrie commaunded.

Neither had he in thoſe times any ordinarie Saylours or Mariners, but ſuch as ſerued vpon the men of warre, under the Eſquadron of the Admirall of the Sea, who was commonly one of the Chiefeſt Lords of the Countrie.

The Maſter of the Ordinance hath Charge ouer the Magazins and Storehouſes, and giues Order to the Officers and Miniſters to take out of the Magazins the Ordinance and all manner of Amunition, and to receiue them in againe. This Office is executed by one of the principalleſt Lords and Noblemen of the Land.

Moreouer, there are Maſters of the Game, Maſters of the Forreſts, Keepers, and Rangers and ſuch like Officers, which are for the moſt part men of qualitie, and whoſe charge is to preſerue the Game, and to looke to hunting, hawking, fiſhing & ſuch like things. And thus much briefly of the State, and Policie in the Countries of the King of Spagns ſide, which hath beene in uſe a long time, and is yet obſerued to this day: ſo that there hath hapned but litle alteration, onely during the Inlandiſh warrs, in which their highneſſes were driuē to ſpend ſome Spanish money, and ordained to that end a Spanish Councill for the Treaſurie, which they called El Conſeio de la Haziendo, which conſiſteth onely of ſome Spagnard, who beare the greateſt ſway and authoritie, as likewiſe the Spanish Councill of warre.

Whenſoeuer the Prince, or Gouvernour intends to aſſemble the States of the Countrie to demaund any thing of them, either for money, or any other aſſiſtance, or to propound ſome weightie buſineſſe unto thē, as for the raiſing of new taxations, and Cuſtoms, or to enact any new Lawes or Statuts: then he ſends fourth his letters into euery Countrie, and appoints a certaine day, where and when the Deputies of the States ſhall meete. Theſe being come, & all of them preſent, firſt thoſe of Brabant take their place, next unto them thoſe of Flanders, then Artois, Hainalt, Valenciennes, Ryſel, Douay, & Orchies, then thoſe of Namurce, Dornick, and the Dornick Countrie, and laſtly thoſe of Machlyn. But concerning the other Countries they are under their owne Princes, and haue their ſpeciall priviledges, and immunities. Theſe States then conſiſt in three members, The Lords Spirituall, the Nobility, & the Chiefe townes of euery Province. Thoſe of Brabant, Artois, Hainalt, and Namurce, ſend their Commiſſioners for all theſe three members, Abbots for the Spirituall; Earles, Marquiſſes & Barons for the Nobilitie & Gentrie; and à Bourrough Maſter or two, with the Recorder of euery towne. Theſe States appearing thus upon the Land-day appointed, doe not aſſemble all at once, but commonly one Province after an other, in the great hall of the Princes palace; where in the preſence of the Gouvernour nour Generall, the Preſident, or ſome one of the Counſellours of State, in the name of the Prince, propoundeth that, which the Prince deſireth of thē: uſing many apparant reaſons, to gaine the hearts of the Aſſembly. The propoſition being made, the Deputies requeſt ſome time to deliberate upon it, and having conſulted thereupon, after ſome uſuall Ceremonies euery member a part, in the behalfe of the Countrie, which ſent them, giues up their anſwere in writing: wherewith if the Prince be not cōtented, thē he ſeeks to juſtifie his cauſe with reaſons, and to moue the Committies to conſent their unto: for according to their Priviledges, the Prince maye not conſtraine them, but muſt ſtay, till he hath gottē all their Voices: for if but one towne onely, when all the others haue conſented should oppoſe it, the former conſent were nothing: for the Deputies will conſent to nothing, but upon condition, that the other States alſo shall all agree & conſent unto it; ſo that not onely the chiefe men of the Deputies, but alſo all the Members muſt giue their voices joyntly together, before any thing be concluded. And thus much touching the policie uſed in the Provinces under the ſubjection of the King of Spagne.

The State Eccleſiaſticall is almoſt mainteyned in the abouesaid Countries, as it is in France: for the nomination & choiſe of fitt perſons for Bishops, Abbots, Prelates, and the like, is made by the Prince, & confirmed by the Pope of Rome; who notwithſtanding, hath no power to cite any man out of the Countrie, be he a Clergie or a Lay-man, but when he hath any thing to say againſt him, he muſt ſend heither his Legats, to decide the cauſe in controverſie. Neither hath the Pope authority to conferre any Church-benefice upon any man, nor to ſend out his Bulls, or his Brievets (if he meanes they ſhall take any effect) without the Princes conſent. To this end, the Emperour Charles the fifth made a very provident decree, namely, that no Eccleſiaſticall perſon of what quality ſoeuer he were, ſhould not from that time forward appropriate unto him ſelf any Houſes or Lands, without the expreſſe commaund, and conſent of the Prince of the Countrie. For his Majeſtie moſt providently conſidered, that in proceſſe of time, the Clergie would haue devoured the whole Countrie, & ſeing they might not ſell, but buy, and that their ſucceſſion was perpetuall, & they euery day grew richer, at laſt of neceſſitie muſt followe, that they would haue become Maſters of the Countrie, and ſo much concerning the State Eccleſiaſticall and the Gouvernment under the Commaund of the King of Spagne.

The ſupreme Commaund in the Vnited Netherlands, or (as the French ſay) the Souverainty ouer all cauſes, which concernes the Common-Weale of the ſaid Countries, is adminiſtred by the noble, high, & mighty Lords the States Generall, whoſe aſſembly conſiſts of ſuch, and ſo many Committies, as euery Countrie shall thinke good from time to time to depute, aſwell out of the knights & gentrie, as out of the Magiſtrates, and the Rulers of Townes. Theſe giue not their Voices Capitatim, or head by head, but Provincialiter, that is, in the behalfe and as repreſenting their owne Province, and their Commiſſion extendeth not onely to adviſe, and reſolue upon diverſe points, for which they are called and aſſembled, but alſo upon all accidentall occaſions, which may happē, and to reſolue upon that, which may tend beſt to the good and the ſervice of the Land.

The order which they obſerue then in giving their voices is this: Gelderland, and the Earledome of Zutphen hath the firſt, next unto them Holland and VVeſtvrieſland, then Zeeland, Vtrecht, Vrieſlant, Over-Yſſel, and laſt of all Groyning, and Ommeland, & Each Province hath his Preſident euery weeke by turnes. The Preſident makes the propoſition, collects the voices, and concluds by the moſt opinion and the pluralitie of voices. and this in Generall concerning the Souverainity, and ſupreme Magiſtrate of the Vnited Provinces.

Now touching the Gouvernment, and power of each Province in particular (for the one is aſwell Souveraigne, as the other (and that from the leaſt to the greateſt) both in matters of policie, and juſtice, with all their Priviledges, Rights, Liberties, and Cuſtomes, for which they haue their ordinarie Officers, & Miniſters, according to the ancient forme, onely with this alteration, that thoſe which had wont to adminiſter juſtice, in the name of the Lord of the Countrie, doe it now in the name of the States of each Countrie: aſwell the States Generall, as thoſe of the particular Provinces whereof ſome are deputed for the execution of their reſolution, as alſo for the ordering of all accidentall cauſes, concerning the wellfare of the Provinces in Generall out of the Gentrie, and Magiſtrates of Townes, as Counſellours, which are bound by oath, as likewiſe others of their Committies, appointed for the furtherance, hearing and shutting up of the accounts of the Land, and other particular cauſes, all according to their limitted power, and inſtruction.

The Provinces of Holland, Zeeland, Vtrecht, and Over-Yſel, as alſo the Townes and Lands lying in Brabant, Flanders, Limburg, and other places, being under the obedience of the said Lords the States Generall, haue for their Gouvernour the Illustrious Lord, Frederick Henry Prince of Orange, and Earle of Nassavv, who is likewise Captaine Generall of the Armie in the service of all the Vnited Provinces. The Gouvernour of Fries-land, Groyning, with Ommeland and Drent is Henricus Casimirus Earle of Nassavv, the Sonne of Ernestus Casimirus Earle of Nassaw of famous memorie, who in the yeere 1632. was shott dead with a bullet before Ruermond.

The Lords of the Councill of State in the Vnited Provinces, after the nomination & deputatiõ of each Province, receiue their Commissions, & Instructions from the Lords the States Generall, to whome they are bound by oath to be true and faithfull unto them, and to gouverne themselues according to the instruction, which they giue them.

Notwithstanding, the Lords the States Generall reserue unto themselues the libertie to doe al things, which they haue prescribed, and commaunded the said Councill in their instructions, when they see it may serue for the seruice of the Land, in such a case altering & diminishing, or enlarging their Instructions, & interpreting them if they finde any obscuritie in them.

In this Councill of State sits alwaies one in the name of the King of Great Bretaigne, by vertue of the alliance renewed and confirmed betweene his Majestie and the Vnited Netherlands.

The Privie Councill, and that of the Finances, or revenews, are not in use in the Vnited Provinces: but in stead thereof, during the warres there is a Chamber for the Revenews erected. In former times they had a Treasurer and a Receiuer Generall, with some inferiour Receivers, which had the Ordering and mannaging of all moneys, and Treasure concerning the Generality. The Chambers of account in Holland, and Gelderland continue still upon the Old Burgunian foote: but in the yeere 1594. there was a new Chamber of Account erected at Middelburg in Zeeland.

For the Ordering of Sea-affaires, the Lords the States Generall, besides his Excell. Lord Admirall of the Sea, haue appointed as Vice-Admirall Monsieur Dorp. The Councellours of the Admiralitie consists of certaine persons nominated and chosen by euerie Province, & these are to followe those orders, and Instructions, giuen them by the Lords the States Generall: the Assemblies, or Colledges of this Councill are fiue in number, namely, the first at Middelburgh, the 2. at Rotterdam, the 3. at Amsterdam, the 4. at Hoorn or Enchuysen, and the 5. at Harlingen, or Dockhum, each towne taking his turne.

The Chanceries of Gelderland, and Friezland, together with the Courts, or Provinciall Councills of Holland, Vtrecht, and Overyssll, continew still upon the old foote; but in stead of the Grand Councill, or Parliament of Machlyn, Anno 1582 there was erected in Holland a chiefe Cour of Iustice, for all suits in law called the High Counill, unto which any man maye appeale from the sentences pronounced by the Provinciall Courts of Holland, Zeeland, and West-Friezland; wherein they may sue for a revision for any errour supposed. In this Councill, the Lords the States may depute some Larned Lawyers, and Counsellours to revew, & oursee the determined suits & evidences, & if they finde any errour in them, to pronounce sẽtence, according to which euerie mã is to gouverne himselfe, & not to appeale any higher. These Counsellours are nominted, and chosen by the Provinces of Holland, Zeeland, and West-Friezland, and consist commonly of a President, and nine or tenn other Counsellours of the Lawe.

Touching the East, and West Indian Companies, they haue also diuerse chambers, as at Amsterdam, Hoorn, Enckhuysen, Rotterdam, Delf, and Middelborgh. Their ordinarie returnes from Iava, Persia, the Coast of Cormandel, the Molcos, China, Ambon, and other places in the East Indies, are all sorts of Spiceries, Silks, Cottons, Dyamants, Peerles, Musk, Radix-China, and diverse other costly wares, which sometimes are valued to be worth fiue hundred thowsand pownds starling: so that the Participants of this Companie, receiue great gayne and profit for the moneys which they haue laid into it: besides, this navigation brings great trading into the Townes, and setts many poore men a worke, which gett their living by it.

The West Indian Companie hath done great harme to the Crowne of Spagne: for Anno 1624. with their Shipping under the Conduct of Generall Willekes, they tooke in the towne of Salvador, lying in Brasile in the Bay of Todos Los Sanctos, and kept it diverse months. Also (in the yeere 1627) that valiant Sea-Captaine Peter Peterſz Hen, surprised the King of Spagnes Silver fleete in the Havanes, by the Ile Cuba, and brought in for the Companie the worth of aboue three milions of pounds starling. And finally, within three yeeres after upon the ninth of Marts, Generall Lonck, and Theodore Wardenburgh tooke the towne of Olinda in Farnambucq: which the Directours of te said Companie hold yet unto this day: with some other Forts, and Ilands taken in since, lying upon the Coast. What an infinite losse, and dommage this Companie hath done done and doth daylie to the Crowne of Spagne, the Spagnards themſelues knowe beſt, which would be too long here to relate.

The Quarters, and Villages in the Countries are gouverned alſo according to their ſeuerall rights, and priviledges, and haue Rulers over them, as well in Generall, as Particular, to wit, for the mainteyning of their Dykes, Draines, Cauſies, Seas, and Waterbancks, and all things depending on them: they haue their Dike-Graves and his Councill, that is, Banke-Lords, whoſe charge is to looke to them, and cauſe them to be kept and repaired. For Criminall cauſes, and the execution of Iuſtice they haue their Bayliffs, Schouts, or Pretours, which are Gentlemen well borne: and in civill matters their Officiers and Iuſtices for the adminiſtration of Iuſtice, whoſe charge is to looke to the politique order & gouverment of the goods and incomes of the Villages in particular. There are alſo ſome Townes, and Villages, which haue their owne Lords, that haue authoritie of a ſuperiour & inferiour iuriſdiction which are notwithſtanding under the Soveraigntie of the Countrie.

Concerning the publick exerciſe of Religion in the Churches of the Vnited Netherlands, aſwell within the Townes, as abroad in the Villages of the Countrie, it is maintained, and taught upon the ſame foote, as the reformation was receiued in theſe Provinces manie yeeres ſince, according to the Confeſſion of their faith publiſhed in print. The Remonſtrants, alſo thoſe of the Confeſſion of Auſburgh, the Annabaptiſts, yea the Papiſts and Ievves, in ſome places (by connivencie) haue their publick Conventicles, and no man forbidden to goe to them: but their Miniſters, and Preachers are not maintained upon the Common charge of the Land. Onely the publick exerciſe of the Romiſh Religion (for ſome weightie reaſons) is moſt of all prohibited; and yet ſo, that neither thoſe of the Romiſh Religion, nor any man elſe, is conſtrayned to receiue the Reformed Religion, but all of them may liue; and are maintained under the protection, and gouvernment of theſe Countries, without any moleſtation of Conſcience for their religion, or beliefe. yea, diuerſe church men & women, which liued here before the troubles, and ſtayed in the Land, haue had and doe enioye yet reaſonable allowance, and maintainance out of the Church livings, whether they continued in the Romiſh Religion, or betooke themſelues to the Reformed Church. And thus much in Generall of the ſeuenteene Provinces: nowe what is furthers to be conſidered ſhalbe communicated to the benevolent Reader in the particular deſcription of every Countrie apart.

THE GENERALL DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF BRABANT.

AMONG the Dutchies lying in the ſeuenteene Provinces, the Dukedome of Brabant, is the moſt famous and chiefeſt: though the Princes of theſe Countries ſett not downe firſt this name in their Generall titles; but in ſtead thereof the Dukedome of Lorreine, which uſe hath cõtinued from ancient times untill this day: for her Highneſſe of famous memorie, the moſt excellent Infante of Spaigne, had wont to write her title thus: VVe Iſabella Clara Eugenia, Infante of Spaigne, by the grace of God Archducheſſe of Auſtria, Ducheſſe of Lorreine, of Brabant, Luxenburg, &c. and that for this cauſe, Lorreine, which the Latine Writers call Lotharingia, the French Loraine and ſometimes Lothier, tooke the name from Lotarius Sonne unto the Emperour Lotharius, whoſe Grand-father was Charles the Great, Emperour of Rome, and King of France. This Lotharius being heretofore Emperour, out of devotion (as Paulus Æmilius, and ſome other Authours teſtifie) went into a Cloiſter, and there in the yeere of our Lord 856. became a Monke, ſharing firſt thoſe Countries and Domaines, which he poſſeſſed, among his three Sonnes, whereof the youngeſt named Lotharius had giuen him a great part of the Dukedome of Burgundy with the whole Countrie of Auſtria, that afterward from him, or as ſome ſay, from his Father came the name Lotharine, or in Latin Lotharingia, conteyning in it the Dukedome now called Loreine, with the Countries of Brabant, Hainault, Cleve, & Gelderland. This Loreine came by Duke Lotharius, and his Succeſſours from the houſe of the Emperour Charles the Great, which gouverned it ſo long, till at laſt the King of France, called Charles the Simple gaue it to the Emperour Henry the firſt. Some yeeres after this Countrie was giuen in fief, by the Emperour Otho the ſecond, to Charles of France, who ſought to alienate it from King Lotharius his brother, but pared the Limits Loraine ſo neere, that he gaue a great part thereof to the Biſhops of Collen and Luyck. Now the foreſaid Lotharius coming to deceaſe, he left one onely Sonne after him, named Levves the fifth, who was the laſt King of France ſprang from the ſtemme of Charles the Great, and gouverned but one yeere. Whereupon the ſaid Charles Duke of Loraine, as lawfull heire, and the next unto the Crowne of France, came into the poſſeſſion, and Gouvernment of the Kingdome. But Hugh Capet (of whoſe blood all the Kings of France are deſcended to this day) made warre againſt him, tooke him priſonner, and caſt him into the priſon of Laon, where he dyed. This Duke Charles left three Sonns behinde him, who alſo dyed ſhortly after him. They being deceaſed, there a roſe a new warre about the ſtate of Loraine, betweene the French and the High Dutches, which at laſt was pacified, becauſe the Emperour Henry the ſecõd beſtowed the aforeſaid State, by fee farme on Godfrey of Ardenna, giuing him alſo the towne of Valenciennes, and ſome other places with this reſtriction, that he muſt doe hommage to the Romiſh Empire. From this Godfrey the Princes of Loraine are lineally deſcended, who gouverned it, till the time of the Emperour Henry the fifth, about the yeere 1106. For in that time, the ſaid Emperour devided this Countrie into the Vpper, and Nether Loraine, giuing the one part thereof, namely, Vpper Loraine (which is now the Dukedome of Loraine at this day) to Richard the Couſin Germanie of the aforeſaid Godfrey, & the other part, to wit the Nether Lorreine (which is now Brabant) to Godefry with the Beard, Earle of Loraine: This Godefry then was the firſt among the Earles of Loraine, who bore the title of Duke of Brabant, & yet notwithſtanding held that of Loraine, for his pretẽce was to both the Lorains, though he poſſeſſed but one of them. This title his ſucceſſours held, and called themſelues Dukes of Loraine, though they poſſeſſed it not: for that which is alledged touching the Manſion houſe of Gennep in Gallike Brabant, that it was called the Court of Loraine, is frivolous, ſeing this place lieth in and under Brabant, and therefore can make no Dukedome a part, and thus much in briefe of this title of Loraine.

Emperour Lotharius.

The antient bound of Loraine or Auſtraia.

Hugh Capet.

Vpper & Nether Loraine.

From whence the name of Brabant came, is not certainely knowne, ſome deriue it from Brennus Gallus a famous Captaine, ſerving againſt the Romans: Others from a towne in Brabant, which was deſtroyed long agoe, but we finde no mention made thereof in any Hiſtories: Others from Bratuſpandius a towne of the Belloni, of whome Cæſar writeth in the ſecond book of his Commentairies: Other againe from Salvius Brabus of Arcadie, who couragiouſly followed Iulius Cæſar into the Netherlands: Some againe think that Brabant tooke its name from Godfridus Barbarus Earle of Lovaine, and that formerly, it was called Barbantia in ſtead of Brabantia: Others from Brachland for a good part of it lieth barren, and untilled. But for theſe diverſe nominations, wee leaue them to the judgment of the Reader, for it is enough for us, to ſhewe that Brabant, and the princely title thereof is very ancient, which among the reſt appeareth by the teſtimonie of Iean le Maire, who in his deſcription of Gaule ſaith that he had read a very ancient manuſcript, wherein their was written the Epitath of Charles Martel the fourth Duke of Brabant, who was the Grand Father of Charles the Great, and who not long after about the yeere of our Lord 700 gouverned ouer it with great fame. The ſaid Latin Epitath is this:

Ecce Brabantinus Dux quartus in Orbe triumphat
Malleus in mundo ſpecialis Chriſticolarum
Dux Dominuſque Ducum: Regẽ quoq; Rex fore ſprevit.
Non vult regnare, ſed Regibus imperat ipſe.

Now for the better underſtanding of this Epitath, ye muſt knowe that Charles Martel after the deceaſe of Hilderick King of France hauing the Crowne preſented him, gaue this anſwere to the Ambaſſadours, which offred it him: I had rather (ſaid he) commaund Kings, then to be a King, for preſently after the death of the King, he eſtabliſhed Dagobert in his Fathers place. Who, after he had reigned foure yeeres, dying, Childerick the nephew of both theſe Kings deceaſed, ſtood for the Kingdome, but Charles Martel, not willing thereunto, gaue him battaile, and overthrew him: whereupon he ſending Ambaſſadours to the Vanquiſher, did earneſtly requeſt him, and moved him ſo farre, that he put the Crowne upon his head. But this honour laſted not long: for a while after he was driuen to ſurrender up the Kingdome to Pepin, the Sonne of the aforeſaid Martel, whom Charles the Great had begott, as ye may read at larg in the particular Hiſtoriographers of Brabant; and diverſe others.

The Site. Brabant is bounded Northward with the Maze, which ſeparateth a part of Gelderland from a part of Holland, Southward with Hainault, Namur, and the Biſhoprick of Luyck, Eaſtward with the Maze againe, which ſeuereth it from an other part of Gelderland, Weſtward part of it lyeth upon the Scheld, which ſeparateth it partly from Flanders, and partly from the Length. Countie of Aelſt. The length of it from Gemblours to Geertruydenbergh, that is, from the South to the North part, is counted to be 75 miles, and from Helmont to Bergen upon the Zoom, where it is broadeſt, about 60 miles; ſo that the circumference thereof is about 240 miles. Aire. Brabant hath a very healthfull aire, and ſo temperate, that when as the Countries Fronting upon it are infected with the plague or ſudden ſickneſſes, it is commonly free, and not troubled with them.

Grounds. The Grounds are plaine and even, and without hills, yea for the moſt part fruitfull, and yeeld good ſtore of Corne, ſaving about Kempen, which quarter is very barren and heathie, but by the labour and dilligence of the Inhabitants growes euery day better, and more fruitfull for a number of Cattaile, which Rivers. they turne into it. The chiefeſt rivers in Brabant are the Maze, and the Scheld, with many other ſmaller rivers, ſprings, and ſtanding waters, which for brevities ſake wee will paſſe by, and ſend the Reader unto Guicciardine, and others who haue written at large of them.

Woods. The woods in Brabant are theſe: the Sonian, Zaventerloo, the Great-vvood, the Great-heget, Meerdale, and diuerſe others beſides, wherein there are all kind of Deere, wild Swine, Hares, Foxes, and other game in abundance, and it is free for euery man, to hunt in all the woods: ſaving in ſome few, which are reſerued for the Princes delight. There are in the Dukedome of Brabant beſides Antvverpe (which is one of the foure Capitall Cities of this Countrie, and which ſhal be deſcribed under the Marquiſate of the Holy Empire) 25 walled townes, namely (Lovaine, Bruſſel, Townes. Boſch, which are the three Capitall Cities) moreouer Aerſchot, Bergen op Zoom, Megem, Breda, Dieſt, Maeſtricht, Steenbergen, Lier, Vilvoord, Gemblours, Iudoigne, Hainalt, Land-Halen, Sichenen, Herentals, Eyndhoven, Helmont and the Grave.

There are beſides theſe eighteene other places, which though they be no walled townes, yet enjoy the ſame Rights, Priviledges, Immunities and Cuſtomes as the others doe, theſe are called Liberties, to wit, Ooſtervvyck, Oorſchot, Turnhout, Hooghſtrate, Liberties. Duffel, VVaelem, Merchten, Aſche, Vueren, Duysborg, Vpper-Hulpe, VVaveren, Breyne, Alend, Gennep, Geele, Arendonck, and Dormal.

There are ſeuen hundred ſteeples with bells, and Villages. Parochiall Churches, whereof the chiefeſt of them are Saint Odenroy, Boxtel, Rooſendael, Grimbergen, and Gaeſbeeke with others. The Lordſhip of Raveſteyn is likewiſe counted under Brabant, but properly belongs to the Dukedomes of Gulick, Berge and Cleve.

Alſo the Marquiſate of the Holy Empire, which is indeed comprehended under Brabant, but ſeing the Prince beareth a title of it a part, it ſhalbe deſcribed in the particular Map. The Inhabitants of Brabant The nature of the people are for the moſt part of them a merrie, pleaſant and a frendly people, which nature they retaine as long as they liue: for though the ancient people of Brabant looſe their ſtrength through age; yet are they of a frolick diſpoſition, and as the Common proverbe is: The older a Brabanter is, the merrier. But at this day they alter much in the greater townes, in regard they frequent and converſe with the Spainards, Italians & other forraine Nations, ſo that many of them become proud, highminded, and deceiuable. Since the yeere 1599, aſwell Brabant as ſome other Countries, are ſeparated from the Vnited Provinces, & remaine under the obedience of the King of Spaigne. The forme of gouvernment is mainteyned by the Councill of ſtate, the privie Councill, likewiſe of the Finances, and Chambers of Account, which are held at Ryſſell and Bruxels, and the great Councill, or Parliament of Machlin', which is the higheſt appeale for the moſt part of theſe Countries. Since the deceaſe of the Archeduke the militaire gouvernment is much altered, and the Spainards beare the greateſt ſway: ſo that the Councill of warre is ruled, according to the humours & pleaſure of the Spainard. What concerneth further the ancient gouvernment is mentioned in the generall deſcription of the ſeuenteene Provinces: and thus much briefly in generall touching the deſcription of Brabant, now followes the particular Lordſhips, Liberties, and Townes lying in it.

The Dominion of MECHELEN,
Dukedome Aerſchot,
With that part, which is called little Brabant.

Name. THE Seigneurie and Cittie of Machlyn is called in French Maline, by the Germans Machel, and in Latine by ſome Maſtine. It is reported the originall of this name came from one Machiel, which kept an Inne betweene Antwerpe and Bruxell, as Abraham Ortelius relateth, which ſtood there where now S. Rombouts Chappell ſtands. It is a very ancient towne, & one of the chiefeſt in the Netherlands, lying almoſt in the very hart of Brabant, foure miles diſtant from Antwerpe, Bruxells and Lovaine. And though heretofore it did belong unto Brabant: yet it is now a Province of it ſelfe, which libertie and honour was given and graunted it by Philip the good.

Now touching the royaltie and juriſdiction of this Lordſhip, it extends no further then over the Citty of Machlyn it ſelfe, & her libertie, under which are theſe Villages and Hamlets following, namely, Hever, Muyſen, Hombeke, Leeſt & Heffene, with the outlands of Neckerspoel New-land, and ſome other lands belonging to them. It is true, that the faire and great Village of Heyſt, lying upon a high hill, ſome two miles from Machlyn, hath ſeven Hamlets, or rowes of houſes under it, which make a very large Lordſhip enjoying the ſame liberties, and cuſtomes as the Citty doth, and are all under the limits of her juriſdiction, but ſtands not ſo immediatly under the ſaid Alderman-ſhip, for it hath its owne Pretour, and ſeven Aldermen: yet one may appeale from them to the ſentence of thoſe of Machlyn. Thoſe of Heyſt contribute likewiſe with thoſe of the Citty in all requeſts and impoſitions, as appeareth by a certaine free agreement, made betweene them the tenth of March 1552, ſaving onely that they are free from paying any acciſe. The reſt of the Citty of Machlyn, hath nothing in common with the Citty it ſelfe, but holds with Brabant, & is adminiſtred by ſpeciall Officers.

Machlyn. The Citty of Machlyn is a very ancient, a brave and a pleaſant towne, ſeated in a very healthfull aire. The River of Deele, which is reaſonable great, and flowing out of the Sea, a mile beneath Machlyn inlargeth it ſelfe, running through the midſt of this Citty, and divideth it ſelfe into a great many branches & riverets, over which there are many bridges, which makes many litle Iles, in which are many fine buildings & Churches, which make a moſt pleaſant ſhow, and a brave accommodation for the Cittizens, for the lading or unlading of their goods and commodities. Machlyn is devided into 7 Pariſhes, every of them having a moſt ſtately, and a gallant Church, among the reſt, the Cathedrall called S. Rombouts Church, puts them all downe for an excellent & a magnificent ſtructure, having an high, thick, and a brave ſteeple, though it be not fully finiſhed and wrought up, from the top of it ye may ſee a great many townes, ſtanding in the adjacent Countries.

Within Machlyn there are 17 gildes, which when any weighty buſineſſe is to be handled and done, they muſt all appeare. Six of the chiefeſt of them, are Bakers, Bruers, Fiſhmongers, Dyers, Tanners and Butchers, which are in ſuch eſteeme there, that there muſt be an Alderman choſen out of every one of them. The Aldermanſhip of Machlyn conſiſteth of ſixe Gentlemen, ſixe maſters of the gilds, and their States are choſen out of the Magiſtracie, and Communally. Among all their gilds, the Tanners is accounted the beſt and chiefeſt. Theſe Gilde-maſters have a large place of their own, lying commodiouſly for water and ditches, convenient alſo for Cloth-dreſſers and Shearers. They have that priviledge, that they may hunt and hauke at any game, as well as Gentlemen. Theſe waters alſo are of excellent uſe for Dyers. Here they caſt as good ordinance, and as excellent, as they doe in any Citty in the world. This is alſo the Magazine, & Storehouſe for their Artillery and Amunition.

Among the many priviledges, which Machlyn enjoys, they have 2 that excels the others, the one is their Burgeſſes are free in all the Countries under the commaund of the King of Spaine on the other ſide, & give neither cuſtoms nor toules: the other is that their moveable goods, as well in Brabant, as in any of the Netherlandiſh Provinces, are free from paying of all kind of impoſitions and taxations. Theſe two priveledges they had graunted them by the laſt Duke of Burgundie, called Charles the hardie, and that for their loyall ſervice, which thoſe of Machlyn had done him in diverſe warres and expeditions, in ſo much that he entruſted & relyed more upon his Machlyners, then upon any other of his ſubjects and Inhabitants.

This Duke Charles anno 1473, inſtituted & ordained the Princes Councill, or Parliament of the Netherlād, then conſiſting of 34 perſonnages, whereof he himſelfe was the head, & next unto him his Chancellours: the others were two Preſidents, foure Knights, ſixe Maſters of the Requeſts, eight ſpirituall Lords, & twelve temporall Counſellours or Atturnies at Law. But Philip King of Spayne the firſt of that name, when he eſtabliſhed this Councill anno 1503, did a litle alter the number and quality, and authority of it, ſo that now it is compoſed of a Preſident, 16 Lords of the Councill, two Recorders, eight Secretaries, and ſome other inferiour Officers. The Earledomes of Flanders, Artois, Namurce, Luxenburgh & Valenciennes, with ſome other petty townes & lands, lying upon the frontieres of Flanders and Haynault, commonly knowne by the name of the Strife-townes, becauſe there hath bene much contention betweene the Flemings and thoſe of Haynault for their juriſdiction: muſt appeale all unto the Lordſhip of Machlyn for right. All ſuits alſo concerning the Knights of the order of the golden Fleece, muſt inſtantly appeare before this Councell and receive their definitive ſentences from them, aſwell in cauſes Civill, as criminall, as we have ſhowne you in the generall deſcription of the Netherlands.

In Machlyn were borne Ioannes Cochius, and Ioannes de Arundine, two famous writers: alſo Nicaſius of Woerden, who though he was blinde when he was but three yeares old, encreaſed ſo in learning, that he proceeded in Loven to be Maſter of Art: & thus much for Machlyn.

our Lord 700 gouverned ouer it with great fame. The ſaid Latin Epitath is this:

Ecce Brabantinus Dux quartus in Orbe triumphat
Malleus in mundo ſpecialis Chriſticolarum
Dux Dominuſque Ducum: Regē quoq; Rex fore ſprevit.
Non vult regnare, ſed Regibus imperat ipſe.

Now for the better underſtanding of this Epitath, ye muſt knowe that Charles Martel after the deceaſe of Hilderick King of France hauing the Crowne preſented him, gaue this anſwere to the Ambaſſadours, which offred it him: I had rather (ſaid he) commaund Kings, then to be a King, for preſently after the death of the King, he eſtabliſhed Dagobert in his Fathers place. Who, after he had reigned foure yeeres, dying, Childerick the nephew of both theſe Kings deceaſed, ſtood for the Kingdome, but Charles Martel, not willing thereunto, gaue him battaile, and overthrew him: whereupon he ſending Ambaſſadours to the Vanquiſher, did earneſtly requeſt him, and moved him ſo farre, that he put the Crowne upon his head. But this honour laſted not long: for a while after he was driuen to ſurrender up the Kingdome to Pepin, the Sonne of the aforeſaid Martel, whom Charles the Great had begott, as ye may read at larg in the particular Hiſtoriographers of Brabant; and diverſe others.

The Site. Brabant is bounded Northward with the Maze, which ſeparateth a part of Gelderland from a part of Holland, Southward with Hainault, Namur, and the Biſhoprick of Luyck, Eaſtward with the Maze againe, which ſeuereth it from an other part of Gelderland, Weſtward part of it lyeth upon the Scheld, which ſeparateth it partly from Flanders, and partly from the Countie of Aelſt. The length of it from Gemblours to Geertruydenbergh, that is, from the South to the North part, is counted to be 75 miles, and from Helmont to Bergen upon the Zoom, where it is broadeſt, about 60 miles; ſo that the circumference thereof is about 240 miles. Brabant hath a very healthfull aire, and ſo temperate, that when as the Countries Fronting upon it are infected with the plague or ſudden ſickneſſes, it is commonly free, and not troubled with them.

Length.

Aire.

Grounds. The Grounds are plaine and even, and without hills, yea for the moſt part fruitfull, and yeeld good ſtore of Corne, ſaving about Kempen, which quarter is very barren and heathie, but by the labour and dilligence of the Inhabitants growes euery day better, and more fruitfull for a number of Cattaile, which they turne into it. The chiefeſt rivers in Brabant are the Maze, and the Scheld, with many other ſmaller rivers, ſprings, and ſtanding waters, which for brevities ſake wee will paſſe by, and ſend the Reader unto Guicciardine, and others who haue written at large of them.

Rivers.

Woods. The woods in Brabant are theſe: the Sonian, Zaventerloo, the Great-vvood, the Great-heget, Meerdale, and diuerſe others beſides, wherein there are all kind of Deere, wild Swine, Hares, Foxes, and other game in abundance, and it is free for euery man, to hunt in all the woods: ſaving in ſome few, which are reſerued for the Princes delight. There are in the Dukedome of Brabant beſides Antvverpe (which is one of the foure Capitall Cities of this Countrie, and which ſhal be deſcribed under the Marquiſate of the Holy Empire) 25 walled townes, namely (Lovaine, Bruſſel, Boſch, which are the three Capitall Cities) moreouer Aerſchot, Bergen op Zoom, Megem, Breda, Dieſt, Maeſtricht, Steenbergen, Lier, Vilvoord, Gemblours, Iudoigne, Hainalt, Land-Halen, Sichenen, Horentals, Eyndhoven, Helmont and the Grave. Townes.

There are beſides theſe eighteene other places, which though they be no walled townes, yet enjoy the ſame Rights, Priviledges, Immunities and Cuſtomes as the others doe, theſe are called Liberties, to wit, Ooſtervvyck, Oorſchot, Turnhout, Hooghſtrate, Duffel, VVaelem, Merchten, Aſche, Vueren, Duysborg, Vpper-Hulpe, VVaveren, Breyne, Alend, Gennep, Geele, Arendonck, and Dormal. Liberties.

There are ſeuen hundred ſteeples with bells, and Parochiall Churches, whereof the chiefeſt of them are Saint Odenroy, Boxtel, Rooſendael, Grimbergen, and Gaeſbeeke with others. The Lordſhip of Raveſteyn is likewiſe counted under Brabant, but properly belongs to the Dukedomes of Gulick, Berge and Cleve. Villages.

Alſo the Marquiſate of the Holy Empire, which is indeed comprehended under Brabant, but ſeing the Prince beareth a title of it a part, it ſhalbe deſcribed in the particular Map. The Inhabitants of Brabant are for the moſt part of them a merrie, pleaſant and frendly people, which nature they retaine as long as they liue: for though the ancient people of Brabant looſe their ſtrength through age; yet are they of a frolick diſpoſition, and as the Common proverbe is: The older a Brabanter is, the merrier. But at this day they alter much in the greater townes, in regard they frequent and converſe with the Spainards, Italians & other forraine Nations, ſo that many of them become proud, highminded, and deceiuable. Since the yeere 1599, aſwell Brabant as ſome other Countries, are ſeparated from the Vnited Provinces, & remaine under the obedience of the King of Spaigne. The forme of gouvernment is mainteyned by the Councill of ſtate, the privie Councill, likewiſe of the Finances, and Chambers of Account, which are held at Ryſſell and Bruxels, and the great Councill, or Parliament of Machlin', which is the higheſt appeale for the moſt part of theſe Countries. Since the deceaſe of the Archeduke the militaire gouvernment is much altered, and the Spainards beare the greateſt ſway: ſo that the Councill of warre is ruled, according to the humours & pleaſure of the Spainard. What concerneth further the ancient gouvernment is mentioned in the generall deſcription of the ſeuenteene Provinces: and thus much briefly in generall touching the deſcription of Brabant, now followes the particular Lordſhips, Liberties, and Townes lying in it. The nature of the people

DOMINIUM MECHLINIENSE
Ducatum Arschotanum

Aerſchot beareth the higheſt title of any one towne in Brabant, having her own ſubalterne Lord, the Duke of Aerſchot. It is ſeated upon the River called the Demmer, three dutch miles from Lovaine, & as far from Dieſt, and from Machlyn and Liere foure great miles. This towne, and the adjacent Countrie, was once a Marquiſate, but afterward by the Emperour Charles the fifth, was advanced to a Dukedome, and that in regard of the faithfull ſervice, which theſe Lords had done for the land, as alſo becauſe of their large territoires and lands in Haynault, & the dignitie and revenew of this place, having heretofore bene an ancient Baronnie. The Dukes thereof are deſcended from the noble houſe of Crouy, which came firſt out of Frãce, whoſe firſt ſtemme was nevertheleſſe from a Sonne of Hungarie, they have bene brave and valliant Souldiers.

Liere. The Conntrie of Arckel lyes betweene Machlyn & Liere. Liere is a pretty pleaſant towne, lying upon the Nethe, two long miles from Antwerpe, & much there abouts from Machlyn: it is ſtrong both by nature and fortification. The Inhabitants are very civill men, and kind-hearted: they have every yeare a long Oxe-mart, which laſts from S. Iohns tyde, to S. Martins, to which abundance of Oxen, Bullocks, and Cattell comes: they alſo deale in wool and clothes.

Sichem. Sichem, Sichenen, or rather Sieckheym, was ſo called from a famous ſick-houſe, or a hoſpitall that was in it. It is a mile from Dieſt, lying upon the Demmer, & belongs to the Prince of Orange.

Dieſt. Not farre from Sichem upon the ſame river is Dieſt, whoſe libertie reacheth far: in this towne are two Canonicall Churches, the one founded to the honour of S. Sulpicius, and the other dedicated to S. Iohn. Dieſt is a very ancient Baronie, & hath for many yeares belonged to the Princes of Orange, who are the right and Lawfull Vicounts of Antwerpe.

Halen. Next unto Dieſt lyes Halen, upon the confines of Leige, which by reaſon of the warres betweene thoſe of Leige and Gelders, hath ſuſtained great miſeries.

Leeuwe. Some two dutch miles and a halfe from Halen is Leeuwe, upon a brooke called the Geef. Within Leeuwe is a great Priorie of Monkes of S. Auſtins order, whoſe Priour is one of the twelve Prelates of Brabant, who had wont to appeare among the States of the land. There is alſo a Colledge of Canons of Saint Leonards order: they brue within Leeuwe a certaine kinde of beare, that lookes as white as Whay, which is ſtrong, nappie and heady, being in great requeſt, & vvhich is vented into every Countrie. Leeuwe hath 4 greate gates, & a ſmall one, nine ſtone Bridges, and three Market-places.

Thienen. Two miles from Leeuwe, three from Loven, and as many from S. Truyen, is Thienen upon the River Geete: this town formerly flourished greatly in trading, and was thrice enlarged. Some thinke that it was once one of the fonre Headtownes of Brabant, and that afterward the Boſch came in its place: but in proceſſe of time Thienen vvas ruined by the French and Luyish warres, ſo that now it is almoſt an howers going about in circuit; but hath much vvaſt ground in it, and the houſes are greatly decayed: it hath 12 ſtone bridges over the River, three publike Feuntaines or Conduits, ſixe within, and foure without the gates, vvith a very large, and as brave a Corne-market, as ye ſhall likely ſee in any place; beſides ſix other Market-places. There is alſo a Colledge of Canons, in the Church built to the honour of S. Germain, heretofore Biſhop of Paris.

Loven. Three miles from Thienen lyes Loven, which towne as ſome imagine was formerly the capitall towne of the Levaci, others thinkes of the Grudi, an ancient people knowne to ancient writers eſpecially in the times of Iulius Cæſar. The name of it is derived of Iuſtus Lipſius from Lo, and Veen, Lo ſaith he ſignifies a hill or heigth, whereupon the old Caſtle of Loberg ſtands at this day. Veen is a fenine or a turfie earth, ſo that Loven betokens a low fenne or an earth, lying under a hill, but not to ſpend to much time in the derivation of the name of this tewne: Loven is a towne lying in a pleaſant and a fruitfull Soile, having ſuch a ſweete and a milde aire about it, that it yeeldeth Wines. She is watered with the River Dele or Dyle, being in compaſſe more then foure Italian miles in circuit, and encompaſſed with a double Wall. There are about it many pleaſant Meddowes, Paſtures, Vine fields & Farmes, and alſo many fine Hillocks and running ſprings. All which recreations moved their anceſtours to make choiſe of this place, for a Schoole of learning, in ſo much, that Duke Iohn of Brabant, the fourth of that name, erected in it a Univerſitie anno 1426, and adorned it vvith as famous men, skillfull in all the liberall arts and ſciences, as any he could get in all Europe. This Citty harh 8 gates, 9 Market-places, 53 towers and turrets upon her Walls, whereof one of them was built up with white ſtone vvhich they call Koſt-verloren or Loſtcoſt; it is ſo high, that in a cleare day one may ſee from the top of it the ſteeple of Antwerpe. Lovain hath 13 large Bulwarks about it, 14 Water-mills, and within the Citty are 16 ſtone bridges, and foure publike conduits. There are alſo divers fine Churches in it, Monaſteries, Cloiſters, Nunneries, Colledges and Hoſpitalls. Lovain was heretofore an Earledome, yea ſome will ſay a Dukedome commanding over the greateſt part of Brabant, and though day the Metrapoſhee hath loſt now this dignitie; yet ſhee continues to this lis of the vvhole Dutchie of Brabant, & by name, the fourth quarter her ſelfe under the juriſdiction whereof, are Thienen, Leuwe, Gemblours, Dieſt, Halen, Sichenen, Idoigne, Hannuyt and Landen.

Bruxells. Bruxels is a fine towne, lying partly upon, and parly under a hill, not above a quarter of a mile from the Foreſt or Wood of Sonia, it hath many fine Fountaines & Conduits in it, but the beſt of all is, becauſe it is ſeated in a moſt pleaſant and a wholeſome aire. There ſtands upon the vvalls 174 towers & turrets, whereof ſome of them through oldneſſe are decayed. The River runneth through the towne in diverſe places, having 12 ſtone bridges over it: there are 160 ſtreets & lanes in it, with 7 great and litle Market-places, alſo it hath ſeven gates, 7 Parochiall Churches, 7 ancient Gentlemens houſes, and 7 Aldermen. Bruxells is 4 dutch miles from Lovaine, & is girt about with a double Wall. On the Eaſt-ſide of this Cittie ſtands the Princes Court, & a brave Parke adjoyning to it, beſides many noble mens houſes, having fine Orchards and Gardens belonging to them. This Citty is in circuit not much leſſe then Lovaine, but is much more populous, & better built and compact. The Cathedrall was dedicated to S. Goedela, the daughter of Count Wittant, and of his Counteſſe Amelberge diſcended from the blood royall of Charles the great. The Senate-houſe is a ſtately ſtructure with a high ſpire upon it. Bruxells is the head-towne of the ſecond quarter of Brabant, under the juriſdiction whereof are Nivelle and Vilvoorde.

Nivelle. Nivelle is the third ſmall Capitall town of Brabant, lying 5 miles frõ Bruxells, here the Inhabitants make much fine linnen cloath, it is a gallant town, having 6 gates & 50 ſtreetes in it.

Vilvoord. Vilvoord lyeth upon the Sume, betweene Bruxells & Machlyn, being but 2 dutch miles from either of them, it hath an ancient Caſtle in it, where the records of Brabant are kept, granted to the Duke by Popes, Emperours, and other Potentates.

Gemblours. Gemblours is 5 miles from Nivell, & 3 from Namurce. It was once a Countie, but is now turned to an Abbey. There is in it an ancient Librarie, where there are many manuſcripts.

Indoigne. Indoigne lyeth upon the River Gias, 4 miles from Gemblours, having a very ancient Caſtle, where the Dukes of Brabant had wont to bring up their children.

Hannuyt. Hannuyt is a prettie towne, ſome 2 miles from Indoigne, lying in a Valley, which hath a very fruitfull Soile.

Landen. Landen is accounted to be the ancienteſt towne in all Brabant, lying 2 miles from Indoigne, & as much from Thienen.

Beſides there are a great many unwalled places, as Abbeys, Cloiſters, Canonizations, brave Lordships, and fine Villages, deſcribed in this Map, as the Marquiſate of Traſignies, the territoire of As and Gaesbeck, the Marquiſate of Weſterlo, & the Majouries of Campenhout, Vilvoordt, Geel, Cumtich, Grez, Incourt, Iaudrain, Geſtanirompont, Orp, Mont Saint Wybert, Hulpen, &c. and the Counties of Grimbergh, Tillier, Walheym, &c.

Rivers. The principaleſt Rivers which waters this part of Brabant, are the Nethe, the Demmer, the Bruſſels-Fare, the Eyck, the Senne, the Yſshe, the Jane, the Thye, the Dyle, the Geete. the Welpe, and ſome others.

VVoods. The Sonian-wood is the chiefeſt of all, full of all kinde of Deere and game, wherein the Arch-Duke and the Nobility, had wont to take great delight in hunting, beſides there is the Wood of Meerdale by Lovaine, with diverſe other great and fine groves and copſes.

The deſcription of the Marquiſate
OF THE HOLY EMPIRE.

IEarned Cornelius Grapheus in his life time Recorder of Antwerp writeth, that the Marquiſate of the Holy Empire, was firſt created by the Emperour Iuſtinianus, but others which are more ancient, as Ioannes Aventinus a famous German Hiſtoriographer relateth, that one Util brother to the Prince of Bavaria, called Theodon for his magnanimous actions, had cõmaund from Theodoricke the firſt King of the Franks to be Gouvernour over the Countries, lying betweene the Scheld, the Meuſe, the Rhene, and the Sea: for in thoſe dayes, the Danes and the Normans, did much harme to theſe Countries, and deſtroyed them miſerably. This Prince then entituled himſelfe Marqueſſe of the Antwerpian limits, which lay then upon the utmoſt borders of the Romane Empire. Iean le Maire ſheweth likewiſe, that this Marquiſate was inſtituted long before the time of Iuſtinian, and called by the name of the Marquiſate of the holy Empire, beginning from the midſt of the Citty of Valence, reaching along the Scheld to Antwerpe, & ſo forward to the Sea-ſide. This reaſon is probable by two things, which are to be ſeene yet to this day within Valence: the one is the imperiall hall, which hath yet their Marſhall and other Officers, where they keepe Seſſion, and adminiſter juſtice: the other is the libertie, reaching into a good part of the Cittie called the Baliewike: this is ſo great, that Manſlayers of every Countrie may freely dwell in it, as we have mentioned in our deſcription of Valencines. The ſame Author writeth alſo, that the firſt Marqueſſe, which left it as an inheritance to his children, was one Anſelbertus a Roman Senatour, whome his Sonne Arnold ſucceeded. But Paulus Æmelius, a famous Hiſtorian of France affirmeth, that it was firſt made a Marquiſate by Otho the ſecond of that name, then Emperour of Germanie, who about the yeare of our Lord 973 gave it as a dowrie to his Aunt Queene Gerberta, the Mother of Lotharius King of France, under whoſe juriſdiction in theſe dayes, were the Citties of Nivell, Lovanie, Bruxells and Antwerpe. Whether it be ſo or noe, they all agree in this, that Antwerpe is the Metrapolis of the Marquiſate of the Holy Empire, in ſo much, that from that time forward, the glorie of this gallant Citty hath bene famous, which wee will here deſcribe in order: Allthough it be now accounted under the Dutchie of Brabant, being indeed the chiefe towne of a third quarter of this Countrie. Aventinus and le Maire concurre alſo herein, that this Marquiſate came at laſt to be under Anchiſes, the Father of Pipin the ſecond, who is ſaid in the deſcription of Brabant, to be the firſt Duke of it: ſo that from him the other Dukes were lineally deſcended, & ſucceeded him in this noble Marquiſate. Theſe ſaid Marqueſſes are created & ſworne after a ſpeciall manner, as appeareth by the reciprocall oaths taken on both ſides, & laſt by the moſt mighty King of Spaine, who tooke his oath as Marqueſſe to the Magiſtrates of Antwerpe, to maintaine all their priveledges, liberties and imminities, and they likewiſe were ſworne againe to his Majeſty, to be true and loyall unto him.

Name. Now to come to the deſcription of Antwerpe it ſelfe, ye muſt note firſt, that whence it hath this name is not certainely knowne. Some fetch it from the huge Gyant called Druon, others from Antigonus, who in the dayes of Iulius Cæſar, built here a ſtrong Caſtle upon the Scheld, that when Merchants ſhipping paſſed by it, tooke the half of their Marchandiſes for toule, & when they dealt deceitfully with him, and gave him not the halfe, then he with held the Marchant, and cutt of his hand, which he caſt into the Scheld, ſo that from this action, it gott the name of Hand werpen or Hand-caſt, becauſe werpen in dutch ſignifyeth to caſt. From theſe diverſitie of opinions, the Reader may be pleaſed to take his choiſe, becauſe we cannot certainely determine thereof. Wee will now proceede to the ſituation Sue. of this Cittie, which lyeth under the longitude of 25 degrees, and 45 minuts, and under the latitude of 51 degrees and 15 minuts, and under the Celeſtiall ſigne Virgo, in a great plaine field: on the right ſide of the Scheld weſtward, where the ſame River parteth the Dukedome of Brabant from the Earledome of Flanders. Maclaine lyeth 8 leages from it, Gaunt 10, Bruges 15, Calis in France 33, London in England ſome 60, Collen 29, Paris and Roan about 70. from the Mouth of the Sea, if ye take it along the Scheld, it is counted 17, but by land noe more then 15. It is a ſtrong & a brave Cittie, girt about with ten great & ſtrong Bulwarkes, with ſeven ſtately Gates, whereof 6 of them have ſtone bridges before them. There are eight principall Channells cutt out of the Scheld, on which the towne is ſeated, the greateſt of them, being able to receive a hundred great ſhips, round about the walls there are wide and deepe moates, into which by the helpe and accomodation of two water-mils, ſtanding by S. Johns gate, they may let in as much water into the moate as they liſt. The circumference of this cit- The largenes of the Citty. tie being an Orbicular forme, is about 6179 paces, which is in circuit five Italian miles. Her length as ye goe through the midſt is 800, and the bredth 1020 paces. On the South-ſide of it lyeth a faire, and a ſtrong Cittadell or Caſtle, almoſt invincible, which ſtands about a muſket ſhot without upon the plaine, where the houſes being broken downe it commaunds the towne, and can play point blanck into it with their ordinance. It is kept continually with a Spaniſh garniſon, the King not daring entruſt any other nation with it. The walls about it are very large, beſet with rowes of Line-trees ſo broad, that 4 or 5 coaches or waggons may meete upon it, & paſſe one by another. Upõ the ſhore of the Scheld before Antwerpe lyeth a high Kay or head, where ſhipping may lye on with their full fraught, which had wont to come thether in abũdance out of the Sea, but ſince the warres beganne, the navigation is altogether decayed: for before the civill warres, it flouriſhed & was a towne of infinite trading: the things bought and ſould here amounting to more in one month, then that of Venice in two yeares, but now the Hollanders have ſo blocked up the haven, by their Forts and Sconces upon the Scheld, that the tratfick is removed hence to Amſterdam. The ſtreets & lanes in this cittie are counted to be 212 in number, & moſt of them large, and going out right. The Mar- Market-places. ket-places (whereof the greateſt is that which is by the Senate-houſe) are 22, but the faireſt of all, is that which the Marchants call the New-Exchange, a very faire & ſumptuous worke, having two towers with two brave clocks and chimes in them, above are rich ſhops and caſſes adorned, with all manner of choiſe wares & commodities. Beſides there is the Engliſh houſe, and exchange a ſtately ſtructure (where now the Ieſuits neſſle) which was the ſtaple for our Engliſh Marchant adventurers. The Churches, Cloiſters, Geſthouſes, & Churches. other Hoſpitalls in Antwerpe are 42 in number. The Cathedrall was built in honour of the Virgin Marie, called now our Ladies Church. It is a great, coſtly, & a magnificent ſtructure, having an exceeding high ſteeple, wrought up with carved ſtone, which is above two hundred Florentine ells high. There is alſo the new Church, which the Ieſuites built there of late yeares, a moſt excellent peece of workemanſhip and coſtly, for all the pillars, floores, pedeſtalls, footſtalls, windowes and barrs, yea all the ſtone-worke are made of Iaſper, Marble, Alablaſter, & other curious ſtones. Houſes. There are in it ſome 13500 houſes, beſides which there are many other publike houſes & edifices, as the Mint, the Tapiſtrie houſes, & Silver-ſmithes, the Shambles, the Fiſh-market, the Weigh-houſe, the Akon-houſe, the Portingals-houſe, the Glaſs-houſe, the Haſſian-houſe, & an other which puts them all downe for faire-neſſe, called the Eaſterne or Hans-townes houſe, ſtanding betweene two waters in the new towne, and the beautifull and ſumptuous Senate-houſe, which coſt more then a hundred thouſand crownes the building. The number of the Inhabitants. The number of the Cittizens, & inhabitants betweene the yeare 1556, & 1577, in which time Antwerpe flouriſhed moſt according to the calculation of a Ieſuite, who tooke it out of the Senate-houſe booke, conſiſted of above a hundred thouſand ſoules beſides Marriners and Sailers, which dayly came in and went out uf the Cittie: yea wee read that in the yeares 1549, 56, 59, & 61, they did reckon up above two hundred thouſand heads, which dwelt within this Cittie. All proviſions were heretofore in it in abundant manner, exceeding good and cheape, and the Citty furniſhed bravely with all things, which invited the inhabitants to liquoriſt-neſſe, ryot and wantonneſſe. This towne is alſo an imperiall Citty, and is a Vicountie, which title was formerly given to the Gouvernour of the Caſtle, but now trading and commerce is much decayed.

Policie. The Cittie of Antwerpe though it hath for her Lord the Duke of Brabant, as the Marqueſſe of the holy Empire: yet ſhee enjoyes and keepes a great many excellent priveledges, obtained from old times, that it is like a free Citty, & a Republike of it ſelfe; yet ſo that the Soveraigne Lord, retaines his Lawfull right & ſupreame authoritie. The government and whole adminiſtration of this townes Common-weale, is adminiſtred by foure members of the ſame, whereof the firſt containeth the Superiour Magiſtrate, conſiſting of Bourrough-maſters, Aldermen, Treaſurers and Receivers. The ſecond of thoſe who having bene heretofore Bourrough-maſters and Aldermen, after their limited time is expired, execute the inferiour Magiſtrates Duties. The third is called the Burgeſſie, or Porterie, comprehending 26 Captaines over the Burgers, who are choſen out of the 15 wikes in the Cittie, with the foure Headſmen appointed over them. The fourth is tearmed the Deaconie, which conſiſts of 54 Deacons, or Overſeers of the 27 Gildes. Theſe foure members makes the corporation, or bodie of the Cittie and Republike.

In the yeare 1583, the Duke d'Alanzon under the coullour of frendſhip, had like to have betrayed this Cittie, his armie which came to aſſiſts the States, lying then without it: for on the 17 of Ianuary that yeare, he ſends Marſhall Biron out of the towne to drawe his armie in armes under the pretext of a revew or a muſter, & had appointed one Rochepot his chiefe inſtrument for the effecting of his treacherie, who cõming to the Gate fained himſelfe lame, upon the bridge while the French entred, the Duke himſelfe riding after as faſt as he could to encourage them, crying to his Souldiers Marchez, marchez mes enfans, & ne pille peint; Vive le Meße, & ville gaignée, there got in 17 Companies before ever the old Prince of Orange (who was then in the Cittie, and had the day before forewarned them of this plott) and the Burgers could get into armes, ſome marching forward, others beſetting the walls and the next bulwarkes, maſſacring and killing the Cittizens as faſt as they entred, but in the interim the Burgeſſes and Souldiers taking courage, gott into armes, recouvered the gate, ſhut it, and let downe the percullis, & reſiſted them bravely, in ſo much that they damd up the gate with dead bodies, & ſlew a great many of the French within the Citty, beate them back, and made them leap over the wall into the moate, where a great many of them, (thinking to ſave themſelves by ſwimming) were drownd, for out of the gate where they entred, they could not get, but tumbled over one another. In the furie Rochepot, who had kalled ten or 12 Burgers, himſelf was ſlaine, Count Aignau, & the yong Count Chaſteau Rou, Son to Marſhall Biron, beſides ſome 250 gallants and Cavillieros, which lay dead in their Satins and Velvets, ſo that there were in all ſlaine 1538 men, which were the next day all taken up, & buried. The French furie.

In the yeare 1585, this Cittie after a long ſeege, was taken in by the Prince of Parma, ſince which time it hath ever ſince bene under the command of the King of Spaine, and the Arch-Duke Albertus, and Iſabella his wife, but the trading and flouriſh thereof is greatly decayed, having now a ſtrong Cittadell before their noſes to curbe them, and thus much for Antwerpe, & the Marquiſate of the holy Empire.

The Map of this deſcription followveth.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE MARQVISATE OF BERGEN,

The Earledome of HOOCHSTRATE, the Baronnie of BREDA, and the territoire of RYEN.

Bergen upon the Zoom.

BERGEN is knowne from Bergen in Norvvay, and Bergen in Haynault by a ſmall river called the Zoom, upon which it lyeth, & ſo is diſtinguiſhed from the others, by the name of Bergen upon the Zoom. It hath bene an ancient Baronnie, but in the yeere 1533 Charles the fifth made it a Marquiſate. The towne lyeth in the moſt Northerne part of Brabant, and ſo neere the Sea, that it is accounted one of the Port-townes. In former times, becauſe it is ſeated ſo commodiouſly, having a faire haven, great Priviledges, and yeerely Marts, it was much frequented by Marchants, an Tradeſmen: but when Antwerpe began to flouriſh, then the trading and proſperity thereof decayed. Now at this day it is a moſt warlike Frontier-towne, having a ſtrong garniſon, lying in it, under the commaund, and in the ſeruice of the High, & Mighty Lords the States Generall of the united Provinces, through whoſe provident care, it is now made invincible: for beſides the old Bulwarcks, Ravelins, Horneworks, Lines, and Counterſcharpes, wherewith it hath bene girt in a long time: There are alſo upon the one ſide of the towne, next the new-haven, three Royall Forts, called the North-Schanſe, the South-Schanſe, and Kyck in the pott, all of them having wide moats, and ſtrong outworks. The Archducheſſe, and the States of Brabant, knowing how much this towne did import thē, and what annoyance it did them, reſolued to gather together all their Forces, Horſe and Foote, and ſent them thither, under the conduct of their Generall Marqueſſe Ambroſius Spinola, of famous memorie, who upon the 18 of Iuly 1622, after he had taken in Steenbergen, and entrenched his Armie round about, brake ground, made his approches, and caſt up many workes and batteries, planted great ſtore of Ordinance, and ſhott ſo furiouſly upon the towne, as if he would haue battered it downe to the ground, giving many fiere aſſaults, and ſallies upon the outworks: but thoſe within the towne, being well provided with victualls, amunition, and a ſtronge garniſon, becauſe the Schanſes abouesaid ſo defended the new hauen, that the ſhipping might come in and out, made ſuch braue reſiſtance, and beate of their ennemy with ſuch Courage, namely, my Lord Morgan (who for that, and other ſeruices is now Gouvernour of it) with diverſe other valiant Colonells, Captaines, Officers & Souldiers, that they could nott gett an ynch of ground of them, yea after the loſſe ſome times of foure, or fiue hundred men upon a deſperate aſſault. Here the Engliſh ſerued againſt the Engliſh, who after they had beene oftentimes repulſed by the Engliſh, which ſerued in the towne, the Marqueſſe ſeing that their courage failed them, ſent a troope or two of Horſe in the breches of them to make them fall on, and keepe them from retreating. This ſeige during along time, at laſt the States reſolued to ſend his Exl. Maurice Prince of Orange of famous memorie with their army to relieue it, who after that Count Manſfeld, & the Duke of Brunſvvick had ioyned their forces with the Princes upon the heath by Breda, came and quartered at Roſendale, with intent to haue falne on and beaten up the Ennemie, but the Marqueſſe finding himſelfe not able to mainteyne the ſiege, and to defend his line, and workes againſt his Excellencie raiſed his ſiege upon a ſudden, drew all his men out of the approches, ſet fire on his quartiers, marched away, and left a great many ſick and hurt men, armes and materials behinde him, and drawing all his men in armes ſtayed a day between Bergen and Antwerpe to haue giuen the Prince battaile. And thus his Excellencie, upon the third of October relieued it, being the very ſame day of the yeere, on which Leyden was relieued by his Father of famous memorie. After the Marqueſſe had layne before it eleuen weekes, and had giuen many violent attempts, and aſſaults upon it, and ſprung divers Mines, he left the ſiege with the loſſe of aboue twelue thouſand Souldiers, as is credibly reported, and ſo marched away. Afterward Anno 1628 for the better defence of the towne, there was three maine Forts, made between Bergen, and Steenbergen, which are called the Rover, Mourmont, and Pinſens Fort: ſo that nowe Bergen op Zoom, is held impregnable, and one of the ſtrongeſt, and beſt fortifyed townes in the Low Countries, under the commaund of his Excellencie the Prince of Orange: and thus much for Bergen in particular.

Steenbergen

About ſix Engliſh miles from Bergen upon the Zoom, lyeth Steenbergen, which heretofore was a towne of note, and well frequented, but by the warres and ſtormes which haue broken the Banks, it is much ruined, and decayed. In the yeere 1622 on the 18 of Iuly, it was taken in (as is ſaid) by the Marqueſſe Spinola: but upon the ſeuenth of October, the ſame yeere after the reliefe of Bergen, it was recouvered againe, ſo that now it is under the Commaund of the Lords the States Generall, and under the Baronnie of Dieſt, belonging to the Prince of Orange.

Princeland.

Not farre from thence lyeth Princeland, which is a faire Countrie with ſome Villages built in it, which lād not long ſince was recouvered from drownd land. In the yeere of our Lord 1631 upon the 11. of September, Count Iohn of Naſſavv, the Prince of Barbançon, with diuerſe other Commaunders, having a great number of Punts, & Sloopes, provided with ordinance, amunition, victualls, and ſome foure or fiue thowſand ſouldiers, put out of Saftingen Creeke and came to Romerſvvall lying by the Land of Terthol, and ſo ſayled towards the Voſmare, to meete the reſt of their army, horſe & foote which were come into Princelād, where they ſtayed for the tide. His Excel. the Prince of Orange prepared men of warre and ſloopes to followe them, manned them with braue Officiers, and Souldiers, who between ten, and eleven of the clock in the night overtooke them, entertained fight with them, but by reaſon there roſe a great miſt and a fogg, the Spaniſh Punts and Sloopes were all diſperced, & the States ſhipping ſingling them out, fought with them, and droue them a ground, ſo that they loſt all their Sloopes, Ordinance, Amunition, Victualls, Materialls, eleven Barrells of Money, and foure thouſand Officiers and Souldiers were taken priſoners, & brought into Bergen op Zoom: but Count Iohn of Naſſaw, the Prince of Barbançon, and ſome fewe others, eſcaped by a boate into Princeland, and ſo ſaued themſelves.

Sevenbergē. Sevenbergen is a ſmall towne, which is now demanteled, lying ſome 12. Miles from Breda, and as farre from VVilliamſtadt. It is at this day neutrall, but during the warrs hath oftentimes bene beſieged, but newer taken.

The Baronie of Breda reacheth out towards Steenbergen, Roſendale, & Oſterhout, being a rich Seigneurie, and is ſo named from the ſtrong and famous Citie of Breda, which we will now briefly deſcribe unto you.

Breda. Breda lyeth upō a riuer called the Merck, whoſe head-ſpring beginneth a larg Dutch Mile aboue Hoochſtrate. It is a faire, pleaſant, and a ſtrong towne, well built. Among the reſt of the Structures, there is the ſtately Palace belonging to the Barons, and Lords of this place, deſcended from that ancient and Imperiall houſe of Naſſaw, which was firſt founded by Count Henry of Naſſavv, Vncle unto the Prince of Orange that now is. It is double moated and is built after the forme of a Caſtle; and if it had beene finiſhed, it would haue bene one of the faireſt houſes in the Netherlands. This Towne during the warrs, was moſt ſtrongly fortified, with Bulwarks, Ravelings, Counterſcharps, Horneworks, and other fortifications, that it can hardly be wonne by approches, but by famiſhing, as appeared in the yeeres 1624. & 1625. For Marqueſſe Spinola, hauing receiued an affront before Bergen, anno 1622, on the 28. of Auguſt 1624. came before this towne with a mightie armie, & entrenching himſelfe preſently round about it, begang this long ſiege: and hauing girt it about with a double Line of Circumvalation, with many ſtrong Forts, Hornworks, half Moones, and Traverſes, there was no meanes to beate him from it, though the Prince of Orenge attēpted to relieue it, by falling on at Terhey, & other places; ſo that thoſe within the towne, wanting Victualls, were driuen to yeeld it up to the Marqueſſe Spinola on the ſecond of Iuly 1625. being the beſt and the laſt victorie, that euer he gott in the Low Countries: ſo that Breda at this preſent, is under the commaund of the King of Spaigne, & was taken heretofore from the Spaignard by a braue ſtratagem performed by a few valiant men, who hiding themſelues in a Turfe-boate, & coming into the Caſtle, broake out, cutt of the gard before they could draw together, and ſo became maſter of this Towne. While it was under the Commaund of the Lords the States it flouriſhed & there was excellent Beere brued in it, which had a good taſt, and great ſtore of it vented and ſould in Holland.

Hoochſtrate. Hoochſtrate is a great towne, lying open and unwalled, ſome 18. Miles from Antvverpe, and as farre from Bergen. Charles the fifth made it an Earledome. The Earles of Hoochſtrate are deſcended from the ancient houſe of the Lalainghs, who dwelt in a ſtrong, and ancient Caſtle ſituated upon the Mercke, about ſome ſeuen, or eight miles from the ſaid towne.

Santvliet. Santvliet lyet in the mid-way betweene Antvverp, and Bergen op Zoom, upon the Scheld: it is of late yeeres by the Arch-Ducheſſe, and the Spaniſh Councill encompaſſed with a wall, and made a ſtrong towne, which may ſtand them in ſome ſtead, if they ſhould come againe before Bergen, to beſiege it, or to commaund the Scheld, or to cutt of Lillo, and Liefkenshoeke from Holland, and Zeeland: to which end, they made diverſe other Forts, as that of Hoogervverve, which they built out of the Mudd, on the ſide of the Scheld: it is a royall Fort which with great charge was raiſed out of the water, and provided with all things neceſſarie. Afterward they made other Forts beſides this, as S. Ambroſes, S. Philips, &c. whereby they annoyed much the paſſage out of Zeeland, Holland, & Bergen towards Antwerpe, tooke ſome ſhips and ſhott others: which would haue bene ill, if the Prince of Orange had not prevented it, who from Lillo wrought againſt the Ennemies Schanſes & caſt up ſome Forts, to hinder them and breake their deſigne. Notwithſtanding, fearing the worſt, at laſt Count VVilliam of Naſſavv, was ſent thether, by order from the Prince of Orange with a good number of Sloopes, & other ſhipping, & to his great honour, made himſelfe maſter of all the Ennemies forts (ſaving Sandvliet) and afterward alſo tooke in the Croſ-ſchanſe aboue Lillo, the Couvvenſteyns-banke, S. Ieames, and Peckgat, alſo took from the Ennemy the Schanſe called the Geuſes-brill made upon the point of the Polderne of Namen, changing the name, and calling it now the Papen-briſl.

Lillo. Lillo lyeth upon the Scheld three Dutch miles from Antvverpe, and was heretofore a fine Lordship, but in the time of warre is now made an invincible Fort, under the Commaund of the Lords the States Generall of the Vnited Provinces.

The territoire of Ryen. The territoire of Ryen, lyeth betweene Antvverpe and Bergen op Zoom: is hilly, and for the moſt part a barren heath: there is no towne in it, but ſome Villages, as Capelle, Voltvvyck, S. Gravenvveſel, & ſome others.

Herentals. The towne and Majourie of Herentals, lyeth betweene Antvverpe, and Liere, having a ſtrong garniſon in it, is a place well fortifyed, and is ſeated upon the riuer Nete.

Cantecroy. Cantecroy is a faire, and a ſtrong Caſtle, lying ſome three Engliſh Miles from Antvverpe, having eight villages belonging to it: ſo that King Philip the ſecond of Spaigne, made it a Countie, formerly belonging to the Cardinall Granvelle.

Oelen. Oelen, is likewiſe a Countie, and lyeth cloſſe by Herentals, and beareth rule ouer diuers Villages about it. And theſe are the chiefeſt Lordſhips, Townes, and Forts in this part of Brabant. There are many Villages, which wee for brevities ſake will paſſe over.

Rivers. The rivers in theſe parts are few, and litle, as the Vliet, the Merck, the Dunghe, the Scheyndt, the Nethe, and ſome others.

The Citie and Marquiſate of Antvverpe, comprehended in this Map, wee will deſcribe in a Map by it ſelfe.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE MAIORALITIE And the City of 'SHERTOGENBOSCH, Together with the Lands, and territoires lying about it.

THE Capitall Citie of one of the foure Quarters of Brabant is Bolduc, or 'sHertogen-boſch, that is, the Dukes-vvood, under the juriſdictiõ whereof, theſe foure members are comprehended, to wit: Kempland, Peeland, Mazeland, and Ooſtervvyckland in which there lie theſe townes, namely, Helmond, Eyndhoven, Meghem, and the Grave. This Citie tooke its name firſt from a fine, and pleaſand wood, which grew there, and where it was built, and founded anno 1185. in the dayes of Pope Alexander, and the Emperour Frederick the firſt ſurnamed Barbaroſſa, in which time the other three Capitall Cities of Brabant, Lovaine, Bruxells, & Antvverpe to helpe it forward, built each of them a Gate in it upon their owne charges. Now in proceſſe of time, by the manie Benefices, and priviledges of diverſe Princes and Lords, it became a very ſtrong towne, and had good trading in it. This Citie is ſeated upon a running riuer called the Dieſe, and lyeth foure Engliſh Miles from the Maze, 8. from Bommel, and ſome 12. from Raveſteyn. It was heretofore gouverned by the Biſhop of Luyck: But after King Philip the ſecond of Spaigne, departed out of the Low Countries, and that Pope Paul the fourth created diverſe new Biſhops in theſe parts, it was advanced to a Biſhoprick, and with fiue other Biſhopricks was ſubordinate to the Arch-biſhop of Machlyne. The firſt new Biſhop then of the Boſch was Doctour Franciſcus Sonius, who in a generall proceſsiõ was brought into it, by Nicolas Godaert Knight Baronnet of Ranſt, Lord of Rynenant, and Nicolas vander Steghen, both Counſellours of the Provinciall Counſell of Brabant, who were deputed in ſpeciall thereunto. Since which time the Boſch hath bene diuerſe times enlarged, & fortified with large Moates, ſtrong Forts, faire Bulwarkes, Horneworks, and Ravelings. It is built triangle wiſe, and is environned about with Low, and Mooriſh grounds, which are ſo füll of water, that it is unapprochable, ſaving on the Vuchterſide, and towards the Heath, where the great and the litle Schance ſtands, and onely no more firme ground left, then a paued Banke, or cauſey to come into it. There are two riuers runne through it, the Aa, and the Dommel, which was dammed up at the laſt ſiege. It hath ſeven ports or gates. 51. ſtone, & 58. wodden bridges, two faire Churches: S. Iohns the Cathedrall (which hath in it as faire a paire of Organs, & as ſtatly a Quire, as any Church in Europe) and S. Maries, beſides eight ſmaller Churches, 16. Cloiſters for men and women, & 26. Hoſpitalls, and houſes of Charity. This Citie hath held out againſt many aſſaults, entrepriſes, and beſiegings, the chiefeſt whereof we will briefly relate unto the Reader.

Anno 1585. Count Hohenlo having gathered a head together of ſome 4. or 5. thowſand horſe and foote, to amuze thoſe of the Boſch made a ſhew as if he had drawne them together to relieue Antvverpe, which was them beſieged by the Prince of Parma: but his deſſigne being upon this towne turned Back the 19. of Ianuary, and laying his men in ambuſcado neere the Port, ſome of them climed ouer the Paliſſado, which ſtood before the Port, and gott closſly into two ſmall Courts of gard, which ſtood upon the bridg, ſo that in the morning about eight of the Clock, when the Majour with the gard came to open the Gate they fell out upon them, cutt their throats, and became maſters of the Gate. Some of the reſt of his men hearing the alarme, horſe and foote rann as faſt as euer they could and entred the towne, and advanced as farre as the mercate place, and comig thither, ſeing ſome horſmen in armes, which had come in the day before with a Convoy, fearing that their entrepriſe was deſcouvered, their harts miſgiuing them, the firſt ranks turned faces about: which the Burgers perceiving tooke Courage, and gott into Armes. In the meane while hapned an other diſaſter, for the Porter being an old man and grevouſly wounded at their entrance (the ſurpriſers imagining that he had bene dead) reviued and gott with his hammer to the Percullis, ſtrook looſe the pinns, which falling hindred & ſtopped both their entrance and retreate, ſo that his men retyring (as is ſaid) were ſo putt to it, that they were driuen to leape downe the walls & to ſwimme ouer the moate to ſaue their liues, and thus the Boſch eſcaped this ſcowring: Count Hohenlo leaving behinde him ſome 300. men, and theſe of the towne had about 50. ſlaine.

In the yeere 1594. his Excell. Prince Maurice of Naſſavv had an other entreprize upon the Boſch, but failled. Alſo in the yeere 1601. upon the firſt of November when the Archduke had beſieged Oſtend, His Excell. of famous memorie, ſate downe before it and ſent Count VVillem of Naſſavv betimes in the morningh with 13. Companies of Friezes, ſeuen coullors of Scotch, 6. of Zeelanders, and 14. Cornets of Horſe under the commaund of the Droſſart Zalland, Monſieur du Boys, Cloet, and Ryhoven, horſe Captaines, with foure half Canon, and all neceſſarie amunition to Barlicom of Hintom and with the reſt of his forces came himſelf to Vucht, lay at the houſe of Heim, and Count Solms at the manſion of Herlaer, and quartered all his Officers and men in and about the Village, that night brake ground, advanced his approches with ſuch dexteritie and courage, that within a few daies after he gott under the wall; but the extremitie of the froſt and cold was ſuch, that diuerſe of his men being frozen to death in the approches, his Excell. upon the 27. of the ſaid Month, was forced to raiſe his ſiege and leaue it. Nothwithſtanding this towne was once more ſtrongly beſieged (upon the laſt of Aprill Anno 1629) by his brother the illuſtrious Frederick Henry Prince of Orange, and ſo girthin with Lines, Batteries, ſtrong Forts, Horneworks, Halfemoones, Spurrs, and Traverſes, that notwithſtanding Count Henry of the Berge, came with the Spaniſh army, and made diuerſe tryalls to relieue it, yet he could not prevaile, but marched away, ſo that after his Excellencie had taken both the Schances, ſapped and beate the ennemie out of all their workes, ſhutt them into the Towne, lyd a Gallery of 300 foote ouer the moate, gott into the Vuchter Bulwarck, and ſprung a Mine: And ſo tooke it in upon the 14 of Sept. following, being (as is ſaid) one of the foure chiefe townes of Brabant, which is now under the commaund of the Lords the States Generall of the vnited Provinces, ſince which time it hath bene ſo fortified with new Schances and workes, that it is now invincible. The Iuriſdiction of the Citie of Boſch, and the Maiorality thereof, beſides ſome townes, extended ouer aboue 109 faire Villages, ſo that it is a very rich Citie and Iuriſdiction.

Creve Cœur. Creve Cœur is a ſtrong Fortreſſe lying about 4 Engliſh miles from the Boſch, and hath held out manie beſiegings, and is now under the States of the vnited Netherlands.

Grave. Grave is a ſmall towne ſeated upon the left ſide of the Maze, 6 miles from Raveſteyn, & ſome 15 from the Boſch. It is the chiefe towne of the Land of Kuyck, and during the warres, was well fortifyed with Bulwarcks, Ravelins, and Counterſcharps. On the one ſide of it, there is a mooriſh ground, which makes it vnapprochable; ſince the States tooke it in, it is now ſo fortified that it is held to be one of the ſtrongeſt townes in the Low Countries, it is alſo under the States Generall of the vnited Provinces, but doth properly belong to the Prince of Orange that now is, as Lord, and heire unto the inheritances of his brother deceaſed Prince Maurice, Earle of Naſſaw of famous memorie, whoſe Father VVilliam Prince of Orange purchaſed in fee farme of Phillip the ſecond King of Spaigne, and that with the Conſent of the States of Brabant: otherwiſe the Duke cannot ſell, or morgage any of his Lands or Domaines.

Raveſteyn. The Lordſhip of Raveſteyn, is ſo called from a ſmall towne lying in it, named Raveſteyn: which lyeth alſo on the left ſide of the Maze, between the Grave, and Meghen, 6 miles diſtant from the one and the other. There was once a ſtrong Caſtle in it, which is now much decayed, and the walls ruined and demanteled by reaſon of an agreement made between the Emperour Charles the fifth, and the Duke of Cleve. It belongeth unto the Duke of Cleve and his Succeſſours, as the lawfull heire unto the deceaſed Lord of Raveſteyn, called Phillip, a very famous and valliant Prince, who notwitſtanding held it by fee farme from the Dukes of Brabant.

Meghen. Meghen hath for a long time bene honored with the title of an Earledome. It lyeth upon the left hand of the Maze ſome 9 or 10 miles from the Boſch: it is a prethe towne, the Niece of the laſt Earle, was maried unto the Prince of Chimay, afterwards made Duke of Aerſchot.

Helmont lyeth upon a river called the Ade, 9 miles from Eyndhoven, there is a faire Caſtle in it, in which in Guicciardins time there dwelled a Gentlemen of the houſe of Cortenbach, who was alſo Lord of this towne of Helmont.

Eyndhoven. Eyndhoven is the principall towne of Kempland, lying upon a ſmall river called the Dommel, 12 miles frō the Boſch, and belongeth to the Prince of Orange as Earle of Buren. And this briefly is as much as concernes this Map of one part of Brabant, comprehending in it, the Maiorality of the Boſch, with the Villages lying under it: as alſo Oſtervvyck, which is a Libertie lying 6 miles from the Boſch, Kempland, Mazeland, Peeland, the Earledome of Meghen, the Lordſhip of Raveſteyn, and the Land of Kuyck, in which there are diverſe Lordſhips, and faire Villages, which for brevitie ſake wee will omitt.

Rivers. The chiefeſt rivers in theſe parts is firſt the Maze, which lyeth very commodiouſly for commerce and trading in this Countrie, and brings them in good profit; the others are the Runne, the Beerſe, the Dummel, the Aa, the Scheyt, and ſome others.

The Earledome of HOORNE.

The Earledome of Hoorne. Although the Earledome of Hoorne be held by fee farme from the Emperour; yet is it ſubalterne, becauſe it was under the ancient Earles of Lotz in the Earledome of Liege, and is ſo incorporated, vnited, and neere a neighbour to Brabant, that I cannot omit the deſcribing of it, the rather, becauſe the Lord thereof by reaſon of ſome of his other Lordſhips, which lie in theſe Countries is ſubject and ſworn unto the King, under whoſe protection he hath giuen himſelfe. Hoorne then is an ancient Caſtle, lying a litle on this ſide the Maze cloſſe by Roermond, and is an Earledome having under it a faire Lordſhip, and iuriſdiction from whence this Caſtle taketh the name. Here lyeth alſo the towne of VVeert, fortifyed with a ſtrong Caſtle, and is a Lordſhip of it ſelfe, where the Earle for the moſt part keepeth his reſidence, and is about 9 miles from Roermond. There runneth through VVeert a ſmall river, whoſe head-ſpring beginneth not farre from thence, and aboue Hoorne at Neer runneth into the Maze. This Earledome beſides VVeſen, and Neer hath many other Villages and Lordſhips in it, which together (as is ſaid) is a fine royalty, and iuriſdiction. The Earles of this place are come out of France, and deſcended from the houſe of Montmorancy, the chiefe whereof was Iean de Montmorancy, a man of great honour, vertue, credit and reputation. As likewiſe in our times was Phillip Earle of Hoorne a Prince of great courage and State, being knight of the golden Fleeçe, Admirall of the Sea, and Captaine of the Catholick Kings guard, who by the ſaid Kings commaund, when the Duke of Alba came into theſe Countries, was publickly beheaded for the faithfull ſeruice he had done for his Countrie.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF LIMBVRG, AND The Countries beyond, or Over the MAZE.

The name.

THE Dukedome of Limburg taketh the name from the chiefe towne thereof: but frō whence Limburgh it ſelfe was ſo called is uncertaine. The Lords of this Countrie were formerlie but Earles, for in the yeere 1672 (as Munſter relateth) the Emperour Henricus created it a Dukedome. Others againe write, that it was made by the order of Frederick Barbaroſſa. The ancient Princes of Limburg ruled heretofore over Lorreine from whence they are deſcended. Anno 1291 Henry the laſt Duke of Limburg, dying without heires males, Iohn the firſt Duke of Brabant ſucceeded him, who notwithſtanding that he bought it, was nevertheleſſe driuen to gaine it by the ſword: for Reynold Earle of Gelderland, pretending that the ſaid Dukedome belonged to him by inheritance and right of Marriage, by the fauour of the Inhabitants made himſelfe maſter of the towne of Limburg, and the chiefe forts thereof, and beſett them with ſtrong garniſons, hearing that the Duke of Brabant, and diuerſe other Princes made preparations of warre, and that he had made a league with the Biſhop of Collen againſt him. Now the Duke of Brabant gathering his forces together paſſed them over the Maze in Boats, and marching directly into Limburg waſted and ſpoyled the whole Countrie, and tooke in diverſe Forts. Finally anno 1288 upon the ſeuenth of Iuly, both armies meeting together, there hapned a greate fight between them, ſo that the battaile laſted till it was late in the night: & at laſt, after many men were ſlaine on both ſides, the Duke of Brabant gott the Victorie, & beſides a great number of priuate Souldiers there were ſlaine in this battaile, Henry Earle of Luxenburg, & both his brothers VValramus and Iohn, Henry of VVeſterburg brother unto the Arch-biſhop of Collen, and a thowſand Gentlemen beſides, and the Duke of Gelders, with the Arch-biſhop: Count Adolph of Naſſaw, and VValramus Earle of Valkenburg taken priſoners. That is remarkable which is related of Siffridus the Archbiſhop of Collen, for after he had bene kept priſoner ſeuen yeeres by the Earle of Bergh, who had taken him in the battail, at laſt paying his ranſon, he intreated the ſaid Earle, to accompaine him a litle way into his owne Countrie, which he grainting, the Arch-biſhop ſubordned ſome of his men who lay in ambuſcado, and tooke him priſoner, afterward he was condemned by the ſaid Arch-biſhop to be ſhutt into an Iron Coupe, which was ſmeared ouer with honey, and ſo this miſerable Earle was ſtung with Waſpes, Bees, and Fleis till he dyed. After this defeate the Duke of Brabant ruined, and ſlighted this Caſtle: and the Duke of Gelderland was not releaſed till he had renounced his title and pretence to the Dukedome of Limburg: and thus this Dukedome came under the ſubjection of the Dukes of Brabant, and the houſe of Burgundie, but of late in the yeere 1632 after a few daies ſiege came under the commaund of the Lords the States Generall of the vnited Provinces by the wiſe conduct of his Excellencie Fredrick Henry Prince of Orang, Earle of Naſſavv, &c. After he had taken in Venlo, Strale, Ruermond, and the ſtrong, and mightie city of Maſtricht in the ſight of the Emperours, the King of Spaignes, and the Arch-Ducheſſe Armies.

From the ancient Princes of Limburg ſprung out of the houſe of Lorreine is deſcended Henry the firſt King of Portugall, whoſe magnanimous, and heroick actions, are mentiōned in the Cronicles of Spaigne, and other writers.

The bounds.

The Dutchie of Limburg boundeth Weſtward upon the Biſhoprick of Liege or Luyck, and Maſtricht, Northward upon the Dukedome of Gulick, Eaſtward upon Aken and Munſter, and Southward upon Luxemburg.

The Fertility

In the Summer it is a very ſweete and pleaſant Countrie, but the winter is very nipping and ſharpe, by reaſon of the froſt and colde; for in ſome places thereof, the hills are couvred with Snowe, till the midſt of Summer. There is in it great ſtore of all kind of Corne, and fruits neceſſarie for the uſe of man, ſaving Wine, which becauſe of the rawneſſe of the aire comes not to perfection, but in ſtead thereof they haue excellent wheate in abundance, which makes very fine white bread. There are alſo very rich, and fatt paſture grounds for Cattaill, with the milke whereof the Inhabitants make great ſtore of cheeſe like parmiſan, and ſend them into Holland, and Brabant. In theſe grounds are found alſo many Phyſicall herbes, and Minerals in the Sulpher, and Brimſtone-veines: ſo that it is verily thought, the hott, and healthfull bathes at Aken, haue their veynes and ſprings out of theſe hills. Copper and Iron Mines there are abundance, and alſo ſome Lead and Tinne, yea many hope in time to finde Gold, and Silver Mines in them.

Cadmia or the Copper ſtone.

Within an Engliſh mile and a halfe of Limburg there is a quarrie of gray ſtone, which ſeemeth rather to be a mettall, then any other matter. Plinie calleth it Lapis Eroſus in his 33 booke and firſt Chapter, and in the tenth Chapter of the ſame booke Cadmia. Of this ſtone or minerall mixed with copper is made Lettaine, which improperly is called Mettall, herewith they make candleſticks, and diverſe other things for houſehold ſtuff. This Stone, or Earth in Plinie, and Gallens opinion, is very good for many Physicall operations, but especially for such as are troubled with soare eyes.

The towne of Limburg. The chiefe and onely Towne is Limburg, lying upon a steepe and high rock, having a deepe dry ditch about it: in so much that rather by nature, then by fortification it is unapprochable, saving onely upon the Southside, where the height descended litle by litle. Within the towne their is a Castle built of pure marble stone, whereof there is great store hewen out by the Village of Hevermount, and in other places. The riuer of VVeset runneth along under the towne, whose headspring beginneth in the Forest of Ardenna, and neere unto Luyck runneth into the Maze. There is delicate fishe taken in it, especially Roches (which tast like Saulmon) Trouts, and Creviles in abundance. Here was borne Iohn Fleming, a Citizen of Antwerpe, very learned man, and an excellent Poet. Also Remaclius Fuschius, who wrote many worthie bookes. The Inhabitants of Limburgh trade most in woll, and making of vvollen Cloaths, which they transporte, and sell in the Netherlands. Closse by this towne there is great store of Yron forged, where there is a forge expressly made, which stands them in yeerely six thousand gilders to mainteyne it. There is no great matter to be seene within this towne, for the houses in it are small, and homely kept: Onely S. Georges Churchs is worth the sight, but for the streets they are small & narrow, and very troublesome to clime up becausse of the height, and steepnesse of them. By order from Iohn of Austria, the Prince of Parma being come into the Dutchie of Limburgh, tooke in the towne & Castle of Limburgh, which now belongeth to the States of the Vnited Provinces, as is said. Not farre from Limburg lieth the Castle of Henden, which is as strong as the Castle in the towne, and is also situated upon the top of a steepe Clift, so that it seemeth art and nature stroue together to make it invincible, for it is so sited by nature, that euen six souldiers, being provided with Amunition, Victualls, and other Militairy necessaries, are able to hold it out against a reasonable army. This Castle was betrayed, and delivered ouer by the Gouvernour of Limburg into the hands of the Princé of Parma: For when newes came to him, that the Prince was upon his March coming thether, then he wrote for Pouder, Bullets, Ammunition, and Victuals to the States, and promissed them to defend the towne and Castle to the last man: but hauing receiued these things, after the ennemie had planted some Ordinance, & that the Burgers begann to be affraid, he with his souldiers gott into the Castle, and a few daies after the towne was taken in, yeelded to the Ennemie, and so gaue ouer this strong Castle provided with all things necessarie without attending any shott or hostility, and thus much for the towne of Limburg.

In this Dutchie there are diverse Villages, which would be too long here to repeate. Also two great places Vpen, and Hern, which haue the freedomes & priviledges of a towne. Sixe Miles to the Southward of Limburg, there is a very famous Fountaine neere unto a village called the Spa, the water whereof is of Marvaillous Vertue, to cure diverse deceases, which Physicians haue thought to be past Cure: for there resorts thither a multitude of people, that haue ben sick of Consumptions, Dropsies, Feavers, and other sicknesses and haue bene healed. Betweene VValhorn, and Montri lye the Kelm-hils, which are so called from the abundance of Metall, that is digged out of them.

Neere unto the towne of Limburg is a great wood called Le Bois de Faigne, which is a pleasant wood, and where there is excellent Hunting.

Valckenburgh. Vpon the confines of the said Dutchie, there are three townes, which beare the title of an Earledome, namely, Valckenburgh, Dalem, and Hertogenrode. Valckenburg is a reasonable faire towne, and well fortified, lying about ten English Miles from Aken, and six from Mastricht, the jurisdictiõ thereof reacheth ouer many Villages, it is a faire tract of land, a fruitfull soile, and goodly pastures. Not farre from thence is S. Gerlacus his Cloister, which is a faire building, & very ancient. Duke Iohn the third of Brabant was the first that tooke in this Earledome of Valckenburg by force of armes, and gott it from Reynold Lord of the same place, for troubling Mastricht and the circumjacent places without any iust cause.

Dalem. Dalem is a small towne, having a Castle in it of no great importance, it lyeth some 9. Miles from Aken, & sixe from Luyck, hath the title of an Earledome, and commaund ouer some Villages on the further side of the Maze. Henry the second Duke of Brabant tooke it in heretofore and added it to his other Seigneuries. Vnder the jurisdiction of this towne there are two faire Abbeys.

Hertogenrode. The fourth member of the Lands lying ouer the Maze is Hertogenrode, called by the French Rhode Le Duc, a small ancient towne, with an old Castle in it, lying three Miles from Valckenburg.

Carpen. Among the same Earledomes is reckoned, the great Village of Carpen, situated betweene the Dukedome of Gulick, & the Bishoprick of Collen. This place is as great as a prettie towne, hauing a Canonicall Church in it, and a yeerely Mart, which makes it flourish, in regard of the store of wares, and commoditie, which is brought thither, and great resort of people unto it. There is a very strong Castle in it. In the yeere 1568. VVilliam Prince of Orang of famous memorie, tooke it in, and put a garnison into it. Duke Iohn of Brabant seing how commodiously this place lay purchased it, and annexed it to his other Countries lying on the further side of the Maze. The Riuers that water this Countrie besides the Maze, are La Beruine, which runneth by Dalem, the Geue by Valckenburg, and the VVorm, which taketh his course by Rolduc, or Hertogenrode. Riuers.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF LVXENBVRG.

Luxenburg.

THE Dutchie of Luxenburg, borroweth the name from the chiefe Citie of this Countrie, but from whence it taketh the name, we will ſhew hereafter. This Dukedome is bounded, with the Biſhoprick of Luyck on the North, and the Earledome of Mamurce, on the South with the Dukedome of Lorreine, on the Eaſt with the riuer of Moſel and the Biſhopricke of Triers, and on the Weſt partly with the Moſel, and partly with the Foreſt of Ardenna. It is a very hillie Countrie, and full of Woods, containing therein the greateſt part of the Foreſt of Ardenna. It is in circuit 240 Engliſh Miles comprehending in it 23. walled townes and 1169. Villages. The Foreſt devideth it into two parts, whereof the one is called Famenna, which is fertill in Corne, and all Kind of ſuſtentation, having alſo ſome Mines, and diverſe ſorts of Quick-ſtones, and yeeldeth alſo ſome Wines. The other is named Ardenna, which is ſomewhat barren, and yeeldeth nothing but a few Peaſe, Beanes, Barly and ſuch like. But nature hath ſupplyed this infertilitie with ſuch abundance of all Kind of Deere and game, that the like is not found in the Netherlands, as namely, Staggs, Hindes, fallow-Deere, wild Goates, wild Swine, Hares, and Conneies, beſides diverſe fowle, and birds, which are ſcarch found in other Countries. Among the reſt their is a bird, which they call Caurette, like a Quaile, but hath ſpeckled feathers, red eyes & feete, the fleſh where of is very white, and hath as dantie a taſt, as one can deſire. There are diverſe riuers, which water this Dukedome, whereof the principalleſt is the Moſel, which after he hath run a long Courſe of many Miles, disburdeneth his water at Covelents (a towne in the Biſhopricke of Triers) into the Rhyne. The names of the townes are theſe, Luxenburg (which is the Capitall Citie) Arlon, Rodemaker, Theonville, otherwiſe called Dietenhoue, Gravenmakre, Koninghmakre, Dierich, Virton, Echternach, Vianden or Viandale, Baſtoigne, Mommedy, Nieu-Caſtle, Danvilliers, Marville, Roche in Ardenne, Durbuy, S. Vyt, Marche, & Salme. There are beſides theſe diverſe other good places, which heretofore were townes, but by the French warres and compoſition of peace, had their walls caſt downe, namely, Ivois, Chyny and La Ferte. There are alſo many Caſtles in it, as bigg as ſmall townes, to wit S. Iohn, lying ſix miles from Luxenburg, and alſo the Caſtle of Manderſcheyt, ſome 24. Miles from it. The chiefe villages are Rochette, Avio, S. Hubert, with ſome others. There are in this Duchie ſeuen Counties, diuerſe Baronies, and many other Lordſhips: ſo that there is not any one Countrie in the Netherlands, that hath ſo many noble men and Gentrie in it, as Luxenburgh. Euery one of theſe Gentlemen keepes a good houſe, according to his abilitie, being upright, vertuous, conſtant, and loyall to their Prince. Their moſt exerciſe is in armes, and hunting. They are very loving, and Kindhearted one to each other, and many times invite one an other to their houſes, and Caſtles; and uſe great familiaritie, and freeneſſe among themſelues, and commonly marrie and make affinatie with their Neighbours, reſpecting more the qualitie, and vertue of the Perſon then Riches. He that committeth any ſcandalous crime or enormeous offence, which is againſt his honour and reputation, is ſo hated among them, that he dares not come into any good or honeſt compa-nie, neither is he advanced to any office or dignitie, but all men of quality ſhunns him, and giues no credit to him. When any diſpute or controverſie happens amo[illegible] them, then they preſently putt it to Arbitratours, & Vmpirers, who appeaſes it, by making them frends: ſo that they neede not ſpend their money upon Lawyers, and Atturnies. In fine, they liue happily, and enioy good daies, but are giuen to drinking, and uſe to much authority and ſeverity againſt their Tenants, making them their Slaues, in ſo much that the poore-huſbandmē can not marie their Children, or doe any thing which concerneth thē, without the leaue and conſent of their Lords. Herein they haue not that libertie as other Nederlanders haue, but are entreated according to the ancient manner of the Belgians, whereof Iulius Caſar writeth at larg in his Commentaries. The towne and State of Luxenburg (as ſome affirme) was firſt created a Dukedome by VVenceſlaus, King of the Romans and Bohemians. The Nederlandiſh Cronicles ſay, that the Emperour Charles the fourth made it a Dutchie anno 1346. Others that the Emperour Henry the ſeventh, deſcended of the houſe of Luxenburg and Earle of the ſaid Countrie made it one, in the yeere of our Lord 1309. The States of this Province conſiſts in three members, namely, the Clergie, Nobilitie, & Townes.

The Citie of Luxenburg (as is ſaid) giueth name to the Dutchie, but borroweth her name (as ſome ſay in a broken manner) from the riuer Aliſuncia, commonly called Elze, which runneth through this towne, and ſevereth the hillie from the lower part thereof which lyeth in a Valley: for this reaſō ſome men writs it Luxēburg, which is as much to ſay as Elzenburgh, others againe fetch this name from the Latine, and call it Lucis Burgum that is, A Caſtle of light. Theſe to confirme their opinion ſay, that the Inhabitants of theſe parts, were wonderfully giuen to Idolatrie, and therefore in all appearance, they named their townes and places after their Gods, eſpecially the ſeuen Planets, ſo that this City of Luxenburg was called the Caſtle or Bourrough of Light in honor of the Sunne, the Fountaine of Light, which they adored. As alſo Arlon a towne lying in the ſame Dutchie, ſignifieth (though corrupted) Ara Lunæ, that is, The Mones Altar, and Ivois by changing the V into O in Iovis, which is as much to say, as the towne or temple of Iupiter. This they maintaine also, that in this Dukedome lyeth the towne of Mars, surnamed in Famenna the great Village of Mercure, and (which is likelieſt of all) the towne of Theonville they suppose was so named from all the Gods. The Iudicious Reader may chooſe either of theſe two opinions, which he ſhall deeme to come neereſt the truth. To prooceede forward, we say that Luxenburg is a towne well ſeated, large, ſtrong and faire built, though many houſes were ruined in it, by the deſolation of the French warrs, which by reaſon of the povertie of the Inhabitants could neuer be reedifyed. The Cathedrall Church was dedicated to the honour of S. Nicolas. There is in it alſo a faire Cloiſter of Gray Fryers, which they say was founded in the life time of S. Francis. In this Monaſterie was buried Iohn of Luxenburg, King of Bohemia, Sonne unto the Emperour Henry the ſeuenth, and the Father of the Emperour Charles the fourth, who dyed in the yeere 1348 In this Citie is kept alſo the Court, or Provinciall Councill, conſiſting of a Preſident, a certaine number of Counſellours, Recorders, Secretaires, and other inferiour Officers. In this Court they either plead their cauſes in high Dutch, or French, as the Suters are borne in the parts, either fronting upon Germanie, or France, that they may underſtand one an other the better. For in the Towne of Luxenburg, Arlon, Rodemaker, Theonville, and ſome others, they ſpeake Dutch, but thoſe of Ivois, Mommedy, Marvil, and Danvilliers ſpeake French, and therefore their Lawyers and Officers muſt ſpeake, and underſtand both theſe tongues. The Appeales from this Court muſt come to the Parlament of Machlyne, where all their evidences and writing are truely tranſlated into French.

Arlon. Arlon whereof wee haue ſpoken euen now, is ſeated upon the ridge of a hill, being twelue Miles from Luxenburg, and 18. from Mommedy: It had wont to be a prettie towne, but now is much decayed by the warrs.

Rodemaker. Rodemaker lyeth 9. Miles from Luxenburg, and is a ſmall Towne with a ſtrong Caſtle in it.

Theonville. Theonville called in Dutch Dietenhoven, whereof we haue ſpoken before, is very commodiouſly ſeated upon the leftſide of the Moſell, ſome 12. Miles from Luxenburg, and as farre from Metz in Lorreine. It hath a very faire bridge ouer the riuer, and is a faire, ſtrong, and a wel fortifyed Towne. Reginus calleth it in Latin Theolon Villa, and ſaith that Charles the great came often times thether a honting.

Gravenmakere. Gravenmakere, and Koninghmakere are two ſmall Townes lying upon the Moſell, three Miles diſtant one from an other, and 15. from Luxenburg.

Dierich. Alſo Dierick is ſeated upon the ſmall riuer of Sure, ſome 15. Miles from Luxenburg.

Vireton. Vireton, and Echternacht are two prettie townes, lying a good way one from an other, but of a like diſtance of 18. Miles from Luxenburg.

Viandē. Viandē, or as ſome write Viandale, lyeth upon a brooke 21. Miles from the Capitall towne of this Countrie, and is a Countrie belonging to the houſe of Naſſavv.

Baſtonake. Baſtonake. lyeth in the Foreſt of Ardenna, nine miles from Nevv-Caſtle, and 24 from Luxenburg. It is a reaſonable faire towne commonly called the Paris of Ardenne: becauſe of the great Mercate of Cattaile, and Corne, which is kept in it, and whether the whole Countrie reſorts to the great accommodation and benefit of this place. Between Arlon, and Saint Hubert there are ſome Villages in this Foreſt, wherin they haue gott a ſtrange cuſtome, in the ſame manner as the Spaniſh women haue: for when they accompanie the dead Corpſes of their husbands to their graues, they howle, cry, and make a dolefull noize a long the ſtreets, pull the haire from their heads, and ſcratch their faces with their nailes, as if they were madd and frantick, which manners are rather fitting for Pagans, then Chriſtians.

Mommedy is ſeated upon the topp of a high hill, under which runneth the river of Chiers, being ſome 29 miles from Luxenburg, & twelue from Danvilliers. It is a reaſonable faire, and a ſtrong towne. Mommedy.

Nieu-Caſtle in Ardenne is fifteene miles from Ivois, and ſeuen and twenty from Luxenburg, it is a prettie towne, but not ſo faire, and ſtronge as it hath bene heretofore. Nieu-Caſtle

Danvilliers is 36 miles from Luxenburg, and 12 from Verdun in Lorreine. The one halfe of Marville belongeth to the Duke of Luxenburg, the other to thoſe of Lorreine, and therefore is called Ville commune, that is the Common towvne: it is ſeated upon the Chiers, and is 36 miles diſtant from Luxenburg. Danvilliers Marville

La Roche in Ardenne, and Durby lie of a like farneſſe from Luxenburg, to wit, 36 miles, and are two good places, which beare the title of an Earledome. La Roche Durby.

S. Vyt though it be but ſmall; yet is it a very fine and pleaſant towne, being 32 miles from Luxenburg, and belongeth likewiſe to the Illuſtrious houſe of Naſſavv. S. Vyt.

Some ſix miles further then S. Vyt is from Luxenburg, lyeth Salme, a rich, and a populous towne, which beareth alſo the title of a Countie. Marche, or (as ſome call it) Mars in Famenne, is an ancient, and a reaſonable faire towne, lying about fortiemiles from Luxenburg. For brevities ſake wee will paſſe by the Villages, and onely mention thoſe three, which are now demanteled: namely, Ivois, being 36 miles from Luxenburgh, and 12 from Mommedy. Formerly it was a faire, and a ſtrong towne, but anno 1552 was taken in by the French, and afterward by the treatie of peace, between France and Spaigne was ſurrendred againe into the handes of Philip the ſecond King of Spaigne: upon condition, that the walls thereof ſhould be razed and ſlighted, as likewiſe in ſtead thereof Tervvanen, which ſhould never be walled againe. Salme. Marche. Ivois.

Chiny, being as farre likewiſe from Luxenburg, was demanteled by the warrs, but now the walls litle by litle are repaired, and (though it belonged to the Arche-Duke) yet it hath but the title of an Earledome, the iuriſdiction thereof reacheth ouer ſome Townes, Villages, and Lordſhips, in ſo much, that when any Mandates are ſent out from the provinciall Court of the Dukedome, they add unto the name of the Duke of Luxenburg, the title of Earle of Chiny. Chiny.

About ſome 33 miles from Luxenburg, upon the Chiers lyeth La Ferte, formerlie a pretty towne, and is yet in a reaſonable ſtate at this day, though it be unwalled, and part of the Caſtle decayed. Wee will conclude the deſcription of this Dukedome with the Rivers, the chiefeſt whereof are the Moſell, and the Maze. The Moſell ſpringeth out of the Mount Vogeſius, not farre from the head of a river called Arar, a litle aboue a Village named Buſſans, and comming from the Southeaſt, taketh his courſe towards the Northweſt, & runneth through the townes named l'Eſtraye, Remiremont, Eſpinael, Charmes, and Bagon, and at laſt watering diverſe Countries, falleth into the Rhyne at Covelens. The French call the name of this river Moſelle, and the Latine Moſella. This river is highly commended for the clearenеſſe of the water thereof, and the abundance of delicate fiſhe which is taken in it. Touching the Meuſe, or Maze we haue ſpoken of the head-ſpring thereof elſwere, and thus much of the Dutchie of Luxenburg. La Ferte. Rivers.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF GELDERS.

GELDERS now named Gelderland, formerly called Ponthus, was first made a Seigneurie anno 878. by the Emperour Charles surnamed the Balde. The first Lord was VVichard de Pont, who with his brother built the Castle of Pont-Gelre, which is now the towne of Gelders, and giueth denomination to the whole Countrie. Though some Authours write, that it is fecht from Gelduba, a towne heretofore lying upon the Rhene (as Cornel. Tacitus witnesseth) but is now so wholly ruined, that there is not so much as a stone left, or any remembrance of it: Some relate that in the time of the said Emperour, there was in this Countrie a great, a cruell, and a venemous Beast, which lurked under a tree, that spared neither man, nor beast: but devoured all which came in his way, so that the Inhabitants were driuen to abandon that part, and hide themselues in caues & holes. Now it is said that the two Sonnes of the Lord Pont, marking what harme this beast did, by craft gott under it, and after they had wrestled a lõg time together ouercame it. In remembrance of which victorie, the said Lord built a Castle not farre from the Mase upon a riuer called the Neers, and named the same Gelre, because the said Beast had wont to cry so: bet whether this be true or a fable, we leaue it to the judgment of the benevolent Reader. Marlian and Munster write, that this Countrie in the dayes of Iulius Cæsar was inhabited by the Menapii, and the Sicambri: but wee will leaue this to be disputed of by Geographers, and will proceede forward to the site thereof.

The Bounds. Gelderland is bounded on the North with the Countrie of Over-Yssell, and the Southerne Sea: On the Southside partly with the Mase, which separateth it from Brabant, and partly with the Dukedome of Gulick: on the Eastside lyeth the Rhene, & a part of Cleveland, and on the West with Holland, and the Bishoprick of Vtrecht. It is a plaine Countrie having not manie hills in it, but diverse pleasant and profitable woods, among the rest the Echtervvood, which lyeth Northwest from Arnhem. The soile is very fruitfull in euerie place, especially for bearing of Corne, and the lower grounds, which lie neere the Rhene, the Maze, and the Whale; are full of excellent grasse for the feeding of Cattaile, which are therein abundãce. But this fertilitie, and fruitfulnesse is not alike in all place throughout Gelderlãd, for towards the Velovve, it is barren, hillie, and unfruitfull. It hath a very pure, and a good aire. Before the times of Otho de Pont, Lupoldus, and VVichardus his Sonne, there ruled ouer Gelderland some Lords of the house of Austria. For Martin Lord of Austria, had a Sonne named Lambert from whom the first Gouvernours of Gelderland were descended. For this Countrie Anno 1351. (as Richard VVasseburg testifieth) was gouverned by Gnidus, or as some say by Leopold the youngest Sonne of this Lambert. Charles the great Emperour of Rome adorned with his presence the towne of Nieu-megen, enriching it with divers ornaments; as being then the Capitall city of Gelderland, and left it to his posteritie, till that the Lords of Pontus, tooke the Gouvernment upon them, and made it their inheritance. We intend not to fetch the pedegree of the Lords thereof so farre, but passing by the Lords of Pont, and the Gouvernment of VVichardus, Gerlacus, Godefridus, Mengosus, and VViburgus, will beginne with Otho of Nassaw. He then having married the daughter of VVichard the third, called Adelheida, obtained the Countrie of Gelders, & in regard of his noble birth (for he was descended from the Othoes, Dukes of Saxonie) and courage in the warres of Henry the third, in the yeere CIↃ LXXIX. as Lazius, and the Chronicle of Zeeland mention, or as Aquilius relateth anno LXI. was then created Earle, and left his Sonne Gerard, whome he had procreated by his wife Adelheida heire of Gelderland: and by a second wife called Sophia the daughter of VVichman Earle of Gelderland, he gott Gerlacus, who succeded him in the Earledome of Zutphen. He dying without issue, this Earledome was annexed to Gelderland: so that Gerart left to his Sonne Henry both these Earledomes: to which his wife Seynara (or as some write Seynarda, the daughter of Godefroy the third Duke of Brabant) brought him for her dowrie the Velowe. He left behinde him two Sonnes, called Gerard, and Otho. The Eltest made warres against the Bishop of Vtrecht for the Velovv; after him Otho the second, tooke that warre upon him and succeeded him in his livings. After him Gerard the third attained unto this Earledome, who being deceased, Otho the third surnamed the Lame, had it by inheritance. The Chronicles mention that William Earle of Holland, who then bare the title of Emperour, morgaged unto him for a great summe of money the towne of Nieumegen, upõ this condition, if the said money were not repayd upõ the day appointed, that then the said Otho, & his successours should enioy the said towne as their inheritance for euer. This same Otho was the first that encompassed Ruermond, Arnhem, Bommel, Goch, Hardervvycke, and VVagening with walls. His Sonne Reinald succeeded him in the Gouvernment, and after him Reinald the second, who was in such grace & favour with the Emperour Lodvvicke, and the seuen Prince-Electours, that in the yeere 1339. upon the 14. of Aprill at the Dyel of Frãckfort he was created Duke of Gelderland. But after he had gouverned foureteen yeeres, there hapned a great quarrell and a warre, betweene him and his younger brother Edvvard, who overthrew him in a bataile, and kept him prisoner ten yeeres. This Edvvard being deceased, the intestine trouble began againe betweene his two ſiſters Margret, and Marie, who made warre one againſt another, which continued ſo long till Margret dyed without Iſſue: and that VVilliam the Sonne of Mary, who was Duke of Gulick, was called to be Duke of Gelderland, and Earle of Zutphen. His brother Reinald the fourth ſucceeding him dyed alſo without heires. Now his ſiſter Mary had by her huſband Iohn of Arkel a Sonne (named VVilliam of Arkel) who inherited the Dukedome, after the Death of this Iohn which William a fore ſaid murdered at Gorichom, and left no Children behinde him. After whoſe deceaſe his ſiſter Mary, had the Dukedome of Gelderland giuen her in Marriage, who brought it to her huſband Iohn of Egmond Lord of the Betouve. Shee barre him a Sonne named Arnald, who diſputed with Adolph Earle of Bergh for the Dukedomes of Gelderland and Gulick, whereupon the Emperour Sigiſmund gaue the right, and poſſeſſion thereof to the Earle of Bergh. But Arnald having married the daughter of Adolph Duke of Cleue, by the help of his Father in law recouvered the Dukedome of Gelderland, by force af armes from the ſonne of Adolph Earle of Bergh, called Rupert: whom Mary the widdowe of Reynald, the third Duke of Gelders, had marryed. This Duke Arnald being caſt into a priſon by his Ambitious Sonne Adolph, was releaſed out of it by Charles of Burgoundie; and gouverning but two yeeres after, diſinheriting his Sonne for his unworthineſſe, ſold his Countrie unto Charles Duke of Burgundie, and by will declared him his heire. He then both by purchaſe and inheritance, having obtained this Dukedome, ruled ouer it, till the yeere 78 in which time he dyed at Nancy. Afterward his daughter Mary ſucceeded him, and her huſband Maximilian Sonne unto Fredrick the Emperour. But Charles of Egmond Sonne unto Adolph, was called out of France by the States of Gelderland, who being wearie of the Burgunian Gouverment, with great ioy and reioycing made him Duke of Gelderland, and Zutphen. He governed ouer it almoſt to the end of his daies, and at laſt being ſicke, made William the Sonne of Iohn Duke of Cleue his heire. Who for a time though greatly againſt the will of the Emperour Charles the fifth, gouverned it. But at length having a great part of the Dukedome of Gulick taken from him, and being cruelly perſecuted by the Emperour, ſeing in what a badd caſe he and his Countrie was, cIcIↃXLIII. in the armie before Venlo was forced to aſke the Emperour forgiueneſſe: after which it was agreed on both ſides, that the Duke ſhould giue ouer his poſſeſſion of Gelderland, and renounce his oath made unto the States, and Inhabitants thereof, with condition alſo that the Emperour ſhould reſtore unto him all his Countrie of Gulick, ſaving two townes, to wit, Henſbergh, and Sittart. And thus thoſe of Gelderland, who were before free, came under the obedience of theſe Princes, yet ſo that they retained their ancient Lawes, Priviledges, and Stats.

The ancient Inhabitants. The Inhabitants of Gelderland were heretofore a warlike and a vailliant people: for the Romans ouer came them rather by craft then by force of armes, as ye may read in Tacitus. Appianus relateth that 500 of the Sicambri, which were the ancient people of Gelders, routed and beate 5000 Romane Horſmen, and ſlewe 700 of them dead upon the place, which was no ſmall try all of their valour. Wee reade alſo that their was a regiment of the Sicambri which ſerued under the Romans, and built a towne upon the Danubius which the Hungarians call Scambry from the Sicambri, which may be proued by this inſcription cutt in a ſtone, digged out of the ground (as Lazius mentioneth) in the time of Mathias Corvinus King of Hungarie, which was this:

LEGIO SICAMBRORVM HIC PRÆSIDIO COLLOCATA CIVITATEM ÆDIFICAVERE, QVAM EX SVO NOMINE SICAMBRIAM VOCAVERVNT.

That is:

The Legion of the Sicambri lying here in Garniſon, built this tovvne and called it Sicambria after their ovvne name.

But this (which many thinke to be a fable,) we leaue to the iudgment of the Reader: howſoeuer, the people of Gelderland are yet to this day no leſſe warlike, and couragious then their Anceſtours were, which might be ſhowne by diverſe of their actions, and which would be too long to rehearſe here. But for civilitie, humanitie and learning, they excell farre their forefathers, who were very rude and a cruell people: for Horace called them Feroces & cade gaudentes, that is, fierce and murderous, and thus much in briefe of the Generall nature, manners and propertie of the people of Gelderland.

Townes. The walled Townes in this Dukedome (beſides Zutphen with ſeuen Townes under it, being an Earledome of it ſelfe) are foureteen, namely Nimmeghen, Arnhem, Ruermond, (which are the three Capitall Cities) Tiel, Bommel, Harderwick, VVagening, Hattum, Elburgh, Gelders, Venlo, VVachtendonck, Strale, and Erckelens. Beſides theſe there are in Gelderland, & the Earledome of Zutphen, other places, which heretofore were walled; but now by the warrs are wholly demantled, or at leaſt part of them ſlighted, as Battenburg, Gent, Monfort, Echbrug, Meppel, and ſome others: which nevertheleſſe retaine to this day their towne freedoms, and Priviledges. There are in this Dukedome aboue three hundred Villages with ſteeples & bells in them. The States of this principality conſiſts in Barrons, Gentlemen, and the foure chiefe Townes, to wit, Nieu-megen, Arnhem, Ruermond, and Zutphen, whereof (as of the others) wee will ſpeake in the diſcription of the Map following.

Nieu-megen as Gerhardus Geldenhaurius witneſſeth, Nieu-megen being a burger of the ſame City, was firſt founded by Magus King of the Gaules, who called it after his owne name Magus. But afterward Bato King of the Catti, comming into this Countrie, tooke great delight aſwell in the pleaſant ſituation, as in the antiquitie of this place; ſeing that it began to decay, reedified, enlarged, and made three walls about it, ſince which time, and euer ſince it hath borne the name of Novimagus, that is, Nevv-magen or Nieu-meghen. The ſame Geldenhaurius, relateth moreover, that the Betavvers (which he calleth the Batavians) chooſe this towne for the Metropolitan ſeate of their Empire, therefore the Countrie lying about it, yet to this day is called the Empire of Nieumegen. For this towne was called in Latine pes imperii, that is, the foote of the Empire, becauſe (as ſome write) Charles the Great advanced it to the dignity of one of the three chiefe Imperiall Townes: namely Aken the firſt, Nieumegē the ſecond, and Theonvill the third. Nieumegen is ſeated upon the riſing of a hill, under which an arme of the Rhene runneth, called the VVhael, where it is very broad: It is a ſtrong, a great, and a populous towne, whoſe inhabitants after they came under the houſe of Auſtria, betooke themſelues to Marchandiſe and Learning, whereas before they were onely addicted to the uſe of armes. The Collegiall Church was dedicated to the honour of S. Stephen, out of which Church of late yeeres there was digged a ſtone, which had had Letters cutt in it with Latine verſes: the ſenſe whereof we haue brought into theſe Engliſh Rymes:

Eleven hondert yeeres aboue the fif tie five
After that Ieſus Chriſt vvas borne in this life,
VVhen Fredrik Prince of peace & Emperour of renovvne
Brought to her former frame that vvorck, that in the tovvne
Of Nimmegen had laine a long time in decay,
And vvas by Iulius firſt erected in his day:
VVho, though he did poſſeſſe a reigne more glorious like,
Iet vvas he not by farre this Prince of peace alike.

Among the ancient ſtructures in this Citie, the Chiefeſt is that faire and old Caſtle called Valkenburg lying upon the top of a high hill, which commaunds the whole Towne. The Inhabitants ſay, that it was built by Iulius Cæſar. There hath bene found in this towne, & about it many Antiquaries of the old Romanes, as Medalls & faires ſtones belonging to ſumptuous buildings, and Tombes. As likewiſe by the Whael ſide hath bene found diverſe remainders, and ruines of Romane workes, made (as is imagined) in the time when the Romane Garniſõ lay there: which place beareth the name of the Romish foote yet to this day.

Nieu-megẽ. Nieu-megen is a Burrow-Countie, a free-towne & a fee farme of the Empire, which may coine money by their owne authoritie, as other imperiall townes had wont to doe. All appeales of this towne come not to the Chancerie of Gelderland, but had wont to goe directly to Aken, acknowledging no other imperiall ſupremacie, but onely to ſend euery yeere a gloue full of Pepper, as an homage they owed to the Empire. Nevertheleſſe the Dukedome of Gelders hath juriſdiction and Soueraintie ouer it; and the States of this Countrie may coine money in their owne names, and haue as great a Commaund ouer it, as ouer the other townes of Gelderland. Vnder the quarter of Nieumegen, (which is the Chief City of the Dukedome) is firſt the Burg-Countie of Nieumegen: then the townes of Tiel, Bommel, and Bommelsvvard, the libertie of Gent, and the Vpper and Nether Betovv, which is called by manie Batavia. How Nieumegen in the yeere 1248. came under the Commaund, and dominion of the Dukes of Gelders; was for this cauſe. Count Otho the ſecond of Gelders, lent unto Count VVilliam of Holland King of the Romans, one and twentie thouſand Markes of ſilver, with this proviſo, that if the ſaid money were not repayd him upon a certaine day and time prefixed, that then he ſhould forfeyt unto him the towne, with the libertie, and the juriſdiction thereof: this was confirmed & ratifyed by the Emperour Rudolphus the ſecond, & ſo the money being not repayd, Nieumegen upon certaine conditions was incorporate into the Principalitie of Gelders.

Arnhem. Arnhem was called by Cornelius Tacitus and other ancient Authours Arenacum; it lyeth on the right ſide of the Rhyne. About an Engliſh Mile from it the Rhyne devideth himſelf into two braunches, betweene Nieumegẽ, & Duesbourg, which are about nine Engliſh miles diſtant from it. It is a larg, and a faire City, well built, having a goodly Church in it. The Citie of Arnhem had wont in former times to be the ſeate of the Dukes of Gelders. Here is held the Provinciall Court, and Chancery for Gelderland and Zutphen, conſiſting of a Chancellour, and ten Counſellours. They cannot appeale from the ſentences of this Court, but by favour may procure a Reviſion. Moreover King Philip the ſecond of Spaigne, as Duke of Gelders, erected in Arnhem a Chamber of Accounts, and eſtabliſhed in it two Maſters of Accounts, an Auditour, and a Secretaire. Arnhem is the chiefe towne of one of the foure quarters of Gelderland, including Zutphen under it. To which juriſdiction belong VVageningen, Hattum, Harderwyck, and Elburgh, all lying in the Velovve. Neere unto Arnhem their lyeth alſo an other Nooke of Land, called the Velovve Zoom, whereof one part of it reacheth almoſt to Zutphen, and the other to VVagening. In which are rich meddowes, where they feede many Cattaile.

Vpon the Mouth of the riuer of Roer, which runneth into the Maze, is ſeated the towne of Roermonde, which is well inhabited, faire and rich, and which by nature and fortification is ſtrong. The Cathedrall Church was conſecrated to the Holy Ghoſt, and of late yeeres at the requeſt of the King of Spaigne, the Pope of Rome made it a Biſhopricke. Roermonde is the ſecond quarter of Gelderland, under which theſe townes reſorts, namely Venlo, Gelders, Strale, VVachtendonck, and Erckelens, with the Liberties of Monfort, Echt, and Nieuvverſtadt, as alſo thoſe of Keſſel, Midle & Krieckenbeeck. The Countrie round about Roermonde is exceeding fruitfull, having fine Meddowes, & yeelding all things neceſſarie for the uſe of man. Venlo and Strale anno 1632. was beſieged, and taken in by the illuſtrious Henry Frederick Prince of Orange, and all that quarter (ſaving Gelders it ſelfe) came under the Gouvernment of the States of the Vnited Provinces. Roermonde.

Hattum is a ſmall towne, but very ſtrong, lying upon the left ſide of the Iſſell, ſixe Engliſh Miles from Elburgh. It hath a ſtrong Caſtle in it, the Wall whereof is 24. foote thick. Hattum.

Vpon the Eaſtſide of the Southerne Sea lyeth Elburgh, a ſmall towne, ſome ſixe miles diſtant from Harderwyck.

Harderwyck is ſeated upon the South Sea; it was heretofore a Village; but anno 1229. was walled, & made a towne by Count Otho the ſecond of Gelderland. The States of the Dukedome of Gelderland, and the Earledome of Zutphen haue of late yeeres erected in it an Illuſtrious Schoole, ſuch a one as Eaton is in England. Harderwyck.

VVagening is a very ancient towne, which peradventure is that which Cornelius Tacitus in his times calleth Vada. It is a ſmall towne but reaſonable well fortified. VVageningen

Tiel lyeth on the right ſide of the VVhaele, ſixe Engliſh Miles from Bommel. It is a ſtrong towne, whoſe juriſdiction reacheth ouer the whole Ile, called Tieler-vvard. Tiel.

Vpon the left ſide of the VVhael lyeth Bommel, a prettie, fine, ſtrong towne, from whence the VVard beareth the name. It is an Iland made betweene the Rhyne, and the Maſe, which encompaſſed it round about. It is the ſame (as Guicciardine ſaith) which Iulius Cæſar calleth the Iland of the Batavians, Famous in our times for holding out againſt the Admirant of Aragon, who had ſtrongly beſieged it, and which was relieued by Prince Maurice of famous memorie: who removing frõ thence built afterward S. Andreas Schanſe, lying upon a point of land, that Commaundeth the VVael, and the Maze, which Prince Maurice alſo tooke in, & the ſouldiers ſerving on the Arch-Dukes ſide, for want of pay gaue it ouer, came into the States ſeruice, and which are called to this day the Nevvgeuſe. Bommel.

Gelders is the towne, which giueth name to the whole Dukedome, it is very ſtrong, lying ſome ſixe Engliſh miles from Strale betvveene the Maſe, and the Rhyne in a low and Mooriſh place. Marqueſſe Spinola to the exceſſiue charge of the Countrie, cutt a fare, or riuer with many redouts upon it, from Rhyne-bergh to Gelders, and from thence to Venlo, as a paſſage to bring commoditie by water out of the Rhyne, to thoſe quarters; and with all to hinder the incurſions of the States ſouldiers, which now by the taking in of Venlo, Roermond, Strale, and Rhyneberch, is loſt labour and come to nothing. Gelders.

taken in alſo by the Prince of Orange Anno 1632.

Venlo. Venlo is a fine ſtrong towne, lyingh upon the right ſide of the Maze, this alſo was beſieged, and taken in by his Excellence the Prince of Orange in the yeere 1632.

VVachtendonck. VVachtendonck lying upon the river of Niers, ſixe miles from Gelders, was ſlichted and made neutrall.

Erckelens. Erckelens lyeth upon the Frontiers of the Dukedome of Gulick, ſome 12 Engliſh miles from Roermonde. The ſoile about this towne is exceeding fruitfull: and thus much in briefe touching the walled townes of Gelderland. For the unwalled, whereof wee haue ſpoken before, we will omit for brevities ſake: onely this, that Batenbourg, one of the ſame places (as the report goes) is very ancient, being the firſt Bourrough, or Caſtle, which Bato (aboue ſaid) built, and called it after his owne name. Wee would now conclude the deſcription of Gelderland; but ſeing there are two Earledomes lying within the Precincts of this Princedome, namely, Kuylenburgh, and Buren, wee cannot omit to touch them briefely.

Kuylenburgh then is a Lordſhip of a larg commaund, and iuriſdiction, lying upon the left ſide of the river of Leck, three Engliſh miles from Buren. It is a queſtion vvhether it be under the commaund of the Dutchie of Gelders, or no. Howſoeuer, it is a fee ſimple of it ſelfe, and for that reaſon vvas created an Earledome, by Philip the ſecond King of Spaigne, having many large Priviledges and freedomes belonging to it. Kuylenburgh.

Buren is neither a fee ſimple, nor a member of Gelderland, (as ſome vvrite) but a royaltie of it ſelfe, and notvvithſtanding lyeth vvithin the limits of the ſaid Dukedome. The tovvne is ſeated not farre from a ſmall river called the Ling, upon a brooke named the Molegracht, three miles from Tiel. It is a prettie tovvne, and hath a fine and ſtrong Caſtle, vvhich is 1360 paces about, & is adorned vvith 4 ſtrong turrets and double moated. It hath likevviſe the title of an Earledome, having iuriſdiction ouer diverſe Villages, and a good tract of Land. It belongeth at this preſent to his Excellence Frederick Henry Prince of Orange. And thus much of Gelderland in Generall. Buren.

THE FIRST DESCRIPTION OF THE EARLEDOME OF FLANDERS.

The Originall of the name.

THOVGH the name of Flanders be not very ancient; and that many menhaue their seuerall coniectures upon it: yet the originall from whence it came is not certainely knowe. Scepperus, and Nannius deriue it from Flendre, a high Dutch word, which signifieth a Shaft, becauſe the Flemmings in the times of Warre, & Peace delighted greatly in shooting. Meyerus from a Flaine, or a Cuſtard, which hath ſome reſemblance to a ſtanding water, or a Moraſh: whereof there are many about Dixmude, and Vuerne. Marchantius fetcheth it from a Dutch word Vol-laenen, that is, full of plaſhes, becauſe the Sea caſts much water into Flanders: others from Flando, as lying open to the windes: ſome againe from theſe two Dutch words Vele andre (that is many others) which being abbreviated maketh Vlaendre, as Allemania doth from Alleman, or Allmen, becauſe many nations in ancient times inhabited Flanders. And ſurely this is the moſt probable, conſidering the names of theſe places demonſtrate it: For Suevegen, and Sueveſeel are ſo named from the Suevi. Caſſel, Catſbergh, and Cathem from the Catthi, Gothem from the Getæ or Gothes, and the Saſz of Gent from the Saxons, which inhabited thereabouts. To conclude, others againe fetch the name of Flanders from Flandrina, the wife of Lidericus the firſt Earle, and Foreſter of Flanders, and thus much for the name.

The bounds.

This Countrie on the Southſide, is bounded with Artois, Hainault, and a part of Picardie: On the Eaſt with Hainault, and Brabant: On the North with the maine Northerne ſea, and with the Hound, or the mouth of the Scheld, which ſeparateth Flanders from Zeeland: and on the Weſt with the Britiſh, or Engliſh ſea. From the Scheld ouer againſt Antwerpe, to the new banke by S. Omars, it is three daies iourney in length making 30 thouſand Geometricall paces: and ſome 20 thouſand in breath. The aire is very ſweete and pleaſant, and the ſoile rich & fruitfull, eſpecially in Weſt Flanders, where there are many fine paſtures, and Meddowes, for the feeding of Horſe & Kine: ſo that Flanders aboundeth in Butter, Cheeſe, Wheate, and in all kinde of Fruitfull trees, timber for houſes, and Shipping, and wood for fyring.

That is 96 Engliſh in length and 64 in breath

Fertility.

The encreaſe of Cattaile is ſo fruitfull there, chiefly of ſheepe within the Precinct of Vuerne, that oftentimes an Evve bringeth forth fiue, or ſixe lambes; yea commonly three or foure, which they giue ſuck to and bring up. Now as France is accounted for the wealthieſt Kingdome, Millaine for the wealthieſt Dukedome, and Venice for the wealthieſt Seigneurie: ſo may Flanders be held for the beſt, and richeſt Earledome in Chriſtendome. It affordeth abundance of Sea and freſh-river fiſhe: and great ſtore of all kind of foule, as Pheſants, Partriges, Quailes, Heath-cocks, Buſtards, Turkies, and huge Brugges Capons, beſides divers other water foule. Neither doe they want Deere, Hares and Connies in the fields, woods, and Downes by the Seaſide: their Caſtles and Gentlemens houſes are environned with broade, and deepe moates. The Countrie of it ſelfe is exceeding pleaſant, in regard of the variety, & abundance of all things, which may miniſter delight to the eye. There are ſome hills in Flanders, which are not very barren: upon two of them are built Caſſell, & Geerſbergh, two faire townes: The chiefeſt, & greateſt wood, or foreſt is Niepe, lying within the iuriſdiction of Caſſel, & belongeth to the Earles of Flanders: In the midſt whereof ſtãdeth a Caſtle, called VValle wherein the Gouvernour dwelleth, and all the Officers appertaining to it; having a garniſon of Souldiers in it, and is ſo ſtrong, that it is accounted the key of Flanders.

Rivers.

The Rivers are the Scheld, whoſe head-ſpring beginning in Picardie, runneth trough Camerick, Valenciennes, Condé, Dornick, Oudenaerd, & Gent, where he receiveth the Leye, the Lieve, and the Moer into him, and there ſwelling, and growing bigger, taketh his courſe to Dendermond, where the Dender falleth into him, from thence to Rupelmond, ſo called from the mouth of the river, and then with a ſwift ſtreame, falleth downe to Antvverpe, and ſo paſſing by Lillo, diſchargeth himſelfe at laſt with two large mouths into the Sea: whereof the one branch is called the Hound, running downe betweene South-beverland, & Flanders by Fluſſhing, and the other retaining ſtill the name of the Scheld, disburdeneth himſelf into the maine Sea by Zierick-ſea. The Leye ſpringeth out of a Fountaine, lying in the Village of Lisbourg in the Countie of S. Paul, hath an exceeding cleare ſtreame, and is full of delicate fiſhe, and running by the ruinous Epiſcopall towne of Tervane, from thence to Arien, Mergem, Stegers, Armentiers, VVaeſtene, Comene, VVerveke, Meenene, Cortrick, Harlebeke, VVackene, and ſo paſſing by Deynſe to Gent falleth into the Schelde. The leſſer rivers are the Dendre, the Lieve, the Yperlee, the Aa, the Scharpe, the Rupel, the Colme, the Iſer, and by the benefite whereof the townes in Flanders haue great trading, and grow rich by the commodiouſneſſe of the Sea, and theſe navigable rivers.

The Sea Havens, and port townes are theſe: Duynkerck, Oſtend, Sluyce, Nieuport, Grevling, and the new Fort called the Scheurke by Duynkercke. The people here liue moſt by trading, that makes them rich and wealthie, which hath bene the cauſe, that the Inhabitants thereof, eſpecially thoſe of Gent, haue bene very ſeditious, & oftentimes rebelled againſt their Earles.

Townes.

Flanders ſurpaſſeth all other Provinces of the Low Countries, in the number of Townes, & Villages: for if ye will giue credit to Guicciardine ye ſhall finde, that Brabant hath 44 walled, and unwalled townes, & 100 Villages: Gelderland with Zutphen 30 townes, and not many leſſe then 300 Villages: Luxenburgh 23 townes, and 1159 Villages: Holland 32 townes, and aboue 400 Villages: Zeeland 12 townes, and 102 Villages: Vtrecht 5 townes & 70 Villages: Overyſſel 18 townes, and 100 Villages: Frieſ-land, with Groyning 13 townes, and 490 Villages: Artois 11 townes, and 854 Villages: Hainault 24 townes, and 950 Villages: Namur foure townes, & 182 Villages; but Flanders exceeds them all, and hath 62 walled & unwalled townes, and 1154 Villages.

Flanders is devided into three parts, namely Flemmish Flanders, Gallike Flanders, and Emperiall Flanders. Gent is the Metropolitan City of all this Earledome, whoſe Wall is ſeuen Miles in compaſſe. The City of Ryſſell is the chiefe towne of Gallike Flanders. The Flemmings heretofore haue obtained many great Victories in Syria, Paleſtina, and Ieruſalem, and wonne the City of Antiochia, where they overthrew (if that be true which the Chronicles report) a hundred thouſand Turcks, under the conduct of Robert Earle of Flanders, who was called alſo Robert of Ieruſalem, becauſe he hulp to take it in. For brevity ſake: I will conceale diverſe Victories of the other Earles, among the which Baldvvin for his valour was choſen Emperour of Conſtantinople. They haue carried themſelues alſo vailliantly againſt other Nations, eſpecially againſt the French, at the Battaile fougth by Cortrick, where they guined a great victorie in the field of Groning, and diſconfited the Earle of Artois, Generall of the Armie, alyed to the King, the Lord of Chaſtillon, the Cauſer of the Warre, the Coneſtable of France; two Lord Marſhalls of the Kingdome, eleuen Princes, and diuerſe other men of great quality, as Earles. There were ſlaine alſo in this field 60. Barons, and more then eleuen hundred Gentlemen, and Officers, beſides 22. thouſand Foote, and 4. thouſand Horſemen. So that they found in the place, where the battaile was fought 600. gilt Spurrs, which were hung up (as a Trophy of their victorie) in the Collegiall Church of Cortrick: which was gott by 60. thouſand Flemings, upon the eleuenth of Iuly, Anno 1302. There were many of the Vanquiſhers hurt, but not aboue a hundred priuate ſouldiers, and 10. Gentlemen ſlaine, as the Low Countrie Hiſtorie withniſſeth. And therefore I wil recommend the Reader to Learned Marchantius, to reade his fourth booke of the Hiſtorie of Flanders, where he relateth all the warrs, which the Flemmings had againſt other Countries.

The names of the Cities & Townes.

There are in Flanders 35. walled townes, the names whereof are theſe following, to wit: Gent, Brugge, Yperē, which are the three Capitall Cities, Ryſell, Douay, Dornyck, Cortryck, Oudenard, Aelſt, Hulſt, Dendermond, Bierfliet, Newvport, Sluyce, Duynkerke, Grevling, Burburg, Damme, Dixmude, Vuerne, Ardenburg, Ninove, VVinocxbergh, Geersberghe, Caſſell, Deynſe, Orchies, Lannoy, S. Amand, Marchiennes, Axel, Oſtend, Armentiers, Baſſee, & Meenene. Beſides all theſe there are diverſe other places, and Liberties, honored with Towne priviledges, whereof the moſt of them are as good as townes, aswell for the faireneſſe of their houſes, as the number of Inhabitants. Theſe are Belle, Hondtſchote, Popering, Eecloo, Giſtel, Middelburg, Rupelmond, Ronſen, Oosburgh, Harlebeke, Tielt, Rouſſelar, Thorout, VVervick, VVaſtene, Comene, Meeſſen, Oudenburg, Loo, Stegers, Mergem, Haſebrouck, Steenvoord, VVatene, Ekelsbeke, Nieu-kerck, Rouſbrug, Mortaigne, and ſome others: There are beſide 1154. Villages, and abundance of Caſtles, and Gentlemens houſes: in ſo much that when the Spaignards travelled through this Countrie, with Philip the ſecond King of Spaigne, they thought that Flanders had beene but one City joyned together.

Riches and reuenew.

The riches of this Earledome appeareth by the great revenews, which this Countrie bringeth in, aboue other Provinces in the Netherlands. For in the time of Maximilian of Auſtria, who by marriage was Prince of the Netherlands, there was found in a record, kept at Yperen, that the Dukedome, and Earledome of Burgundie brought in yeerely 27. thouſand, and 400. pounds Tournois, Brabant 12. thouſand, and 754. Luxenburg 1180. Gelderlandt 13. thouſand 885. Holland 14. thouſand 300. Zeeland 2685. Artois 17. thouſand 683. Hainault 12. thouſand 199. Namure 5936. but Flanders 42. thouſand 390. pounds.

This Earledome alſo hath bene honored, by the Princes of this Countrie, aboue all other Provinces in the Low Countries: for as the Solemne aſſemblie of the Knights of the Goldē Fleece, is an honorable, & a noble Order: ſo hath it not bene ſo oftē Solemnized, & held any where as in this noble Countrie; being the Prime & chiefeſt of all the Earledomes in the Netherlands. It was but once held in Holland, Zeeland, Vtrecht, Dornyck, Burgundie, and Spaigne. Twiſe in Artois & Hainault, Foure times in Brabant: but in Flanders, where it was firſt inſtituted, it hath beene ſeuentimes kept, & ſolemnized. And moſt of all the Princes of the Netherlands, either of the houſe of Burgundie, or Maximilian of Auſtria, chooſe rather, to celebrate their Nuptiall feaſts here, thē in any of the other Provinces. And this is the cauſe, that ſtraungers & Forreyners, as Italians, Spaignards, French, and English call all the Netherlanders Flemmings. For Flanders (without mentioning the great trading and Marchandiſe, which thoſe of Brugges, had heretofore with all the nations of the world, except the Iewes) was very famous for the warres they had with the French, at Conſtantinople, and in Aſia againſt the Turcks and Mahumetans, whereof the Greekiſh Chronicles make often mention. And verely the cauſe why the Netherlands were annexed together & vnited in one bodie, ſprang out of Flanders by the marriage of lady Margret the Third of Male (borne in the Caſtle of Male by Brugges) Counteſſe of Flanders, Artois, Burgundie, Nyvers, and Rethel, Lady of Machleyn, & Antvverpe, who was likewiſe Inheritrix of Brabant, and the Countries lying ouer the Maze, by eſpouſing Philip the Hardie Duke of Burgundie.

The Kings of France haue bene twiſe (& no more) taken priſoners by their Chriſtian Ennemies, & that by two noble Flēmings. Iohn the firſt of that name was taken by Dionyſius Lord of Morbeke, lying in the Precinct of Caſſell, in the battaile ef Poictiers, when he was ouerthrowne by the Engliſh, the anciēt Allies of Flanders; and Francis the firſt alſo of that name, was taken priſoner by the Lord of Lannoy (lying in the Caſtlevvick of Ryſell) in the battaile of Pavie, anno 1525, fighting againſt the Emperour Charles the fifth, borne at Gent, and Earle of Flanders, ſo that the King for his releaſment was faine to quit all the right and pretences he had to the Earledome of Flanders, at Madril, in October anno 1526.

The Earledome of Flanders, is at the preſent, under the Commaund of Philip the fourth, King of Spaigne, as Earle: ſaving a part thereof, lying a long the Sea Coaſt, next Zeeland: vvhich the high and mighty Lords the States of the free Netherlandish Provinces, haue gayned by the ſvvord, namely, the tovvnes of Sluyſe, Axell, Ardenburgh, Oſtburgh, Biervliet, Iſendike, Philippina, Terneuſe, and many Schanſes a long the Sea Coaſt, almoſt to the fare or paſſage ouer againſt Antvverpe.

Gouvern-ment.

The Policie of Flanders under the Gouvernment of their Earles conſiſteth of three members, to vvit, the Lords Spirituall, the Nobility, and the principall Tovvnes. The foure members of Flanders, as Gent, Brugge, Yperen, and the Vrye, that is, the Caſtlevvicke of Brugge, haue Commaund ouer the vvhole Countrie, under vvhoſe juriſdictions the Land ſtands.

Spirituall Prelates.

There are foure Bishops, to vvit of Gent, Brugges, Yperen, Suffrugans to the Arch-bishop of Machleyne, and the Bishop of Dornyck, to the Arch-bishop of Cameryck. The Abbots of *S. Flandria Flos Florum, Florebit Flandria Florens.

The Second Map and Description, which is OF WEST-FLANDERS

WEST-FLANDERS is the best, richest, and fairest part of the whole Earledome of Flanders, which lyeth most in the Bishopricke of Yperen, and some of it in the Diocesse of Saint Omar. Yperen is the chiefe towne of this whole quarter, which is also an Episcopall Seate, & accounted the third Citie of Flanders. It is a large, a faire and a rich towne, seated in a good soile, and is so named from the small riuer of Iper, whose head beginneth a litle aboue the towne of Yperen, and meeting with the Isara, runneth to Dixmude, and there deuideth it selfe into two brãches, that on the left side passing by Newport, falleth into the Sea, and the other on the right hand, runneth through Oudenborg to Brugges, so that this riuer is very commodious for the Fullers of Yperẽ. It is a common proverbe, that the foundation of this Citie is layd with lead; because of the great number of leaden Conduct-Pipes, which are under the ground, and which convey abundance of water to the common Conduits, & Wells in this City, as also there are the like at Brugges, the water whereof is very wholesome to drinke. Anno 1473. this Citi: within the wall was measured about, and the Circuit thereof found to be 1173. rod, counting each rod at 14. foote. having seuen Gates, a faire Senate or Towne house, so great and sumptuously built, that it causeth admiration to the people that stand upon the Mercate place, which is also very large. This structure is by a Plaine devided in two parts, the length whereof is 62. foote, and the breath on both sides 24. foote: so that the like is not to be seene in the Netherlands. There is a great, and a faire Cathedrall Church, dedicated to the honour of S. Martin the Bishop. It was heretofore a rich Priorie of the Regular Canons of S. Augustins Order, which were changed into Temporall Canons, as at Gent, the Abbey of S. Benedictus Order, called S. Baefs, is altered into a Cathedrall and an Episcopall Church, and in the place where the Abbey stood, there is made a strong Castle & Citadell, and now S. Iohns Church is become the Cathedrall. Within Yperen there is an Abbey of Monks of S. Benedictus Order by S. Nicolas Church, and dwell in S Iohns Cloister, which was formerly built without the towne of Terrenburgh, called in French Terouane, (which is now destroyed) & was once an Episcopall residencie; so that the Church livings belonging to it, are now devided amõg 3. new Bishops, to wit, of Bouloigne in Picardie, of Yperen in Flanders, and of S. Omar in Artois. This Cloister of S. Iohn, was transported from Terouane to Belle in Flanders, into the same place, where heretofore S. Antonius Cloister stood. But at last these Monks, and diuerse other Cloisters founded without the towne (for their more safetie) came, and setled themselues within the Walls of Yperen. Within Yperen there are also three Abbeys of Nunns: the one is called Nunne-bosch of S. Benedictus Order: the other Roetsbrugge of S. Augustins Order, which was formerly founded within the Precinct of Vueren, seated upon the river Isara, and Nunne-bosch in the Castlewicke of Yperen in a wood. Here are also the Clarisses, the foure begging Orders, namely, the Dominican, the Franciscan, Augustine, and Carmelitan Monks: also Capucine Fryers, and Iesuites, &c. and many Gesthouses and Hospitalls. Yperen is the third member of Flanders, under the jurisdiction whereof there are the Castlewyke of Yperen, Meessene, Rousselar, with Commene, and Armentiers as farre as the Ley, also Cassell and Belle with their Precincts.

Yperen.

Greatnesse.

Churches.

Castlewick The Castlewick of Yperen is honored with the Abbey of Zonnebeke of Regular Canons, and with many rich Priories of the same Order. In this Castlewicke there are 33. Villages, also under the jurisdiction of this City, there was made of late yeeres an Earledome.

Dixmude. At Dixmude there is a braue Mercate euery Munday, by reason of the benefit of the riuer of Isara, & that round about it lye the fatest & best grounds, & pastures in all Flanders, which makes this towne grow rich euery day, because of the abundance of butter, and cheese, which is transported from thence to Rome, & through all Italie: Therefore this towne is not unfitly compared to Kidneis, which of themselues being leane, are larded with fatt round about them. Here is a Nũns Cloister called Hemelsdale of S. Barnards Order, which was remouved heither from the Village of VVerckene, also there are Recollects, and a Leprous-house, as there are in many townes in Flanders.

Nevv-port is a towne lying halfe a mile from the Sea side with a channell into which some shipps may come at a high water. It is honored with the title of a Vicountie, and hath Recollects in it. Here in the yeere 1600. upon the second of Iuly was fought the last Battaile in Flanders, betweene the Arch-Dukes Armie, and the States, who got the victorie, slew 8000. men dead upon the place, tooke 106. Coullours, and some Cornets, the Admirant of Aragon, and diverse Collonells, Captaines, Officers & Souldiers Prisonners.

The battaile of Nevvport

Vuerne is no great towne, but hath many rich Burgers, & Gentlemen dwelling in it. Here is a braue Abbey of Premonstrates, or white Fryers, called S. Nicolas. It was erected anno 1119. without the towne: but of late yeeres was remouved into the towne, & hath verie faire buildings. These Fryers are much cõmended for their holy life, and Doctrine. Here is also a Collegiall Church, couvered with Lead, built in honour of S. VValburgus: ten of the Canons were remouved from thence into the Cathedrall Church of Yperen, and the Priorie of this Church was annexed to the Episcopall table of Yperen: there are in it besides, the Parochiall Churches of S. Nicolas, and S. Denis. There are also Cellitan-bretheren of S. Alexius Order, and Nunns of VVulpen, of the Premonstrats, or white Order. This Castlewicke hath under it 42. villages, whereof some are notable ones, as Alvergẽ for the greatnesse of the Church and the houses of many rich men, both Gentlemen, & husbandmen, as there are in most of all the Villages in West-Flanders, especially within the precinct, & libertie of Vuerne. Roetsbrugge is also a fine place seated upon the riuer of Isera, which hath a braue Mercate euery weeke in it. Stavel hath a faire castle in it, wherein the Vi-Count of Vuerne dwelleth, who is descended of the noble house of Horne. Lampreneſſe is much commended for the rich and fruitfull Lands lying round about it. Here comes euery winter out of the Northerne Countries many Phesants, Swanns, Wild-Geese, & Ducks. This Castlewick is greatly praised, for the goodnesse of the Pastures, & Meddowes, the fruitfull fields, and for all kind of trees. Eversham is a fine Cloister of Regular Canons, lying upon the riuer Isera: There haue bene many Priours, who gouverned it well, and hath bred many learned men; among the rest Gerard de Maistre a great Historiographer. There is also a small Convent, who terme themselues Birgittines, living in a wood called S. Sixtus, in the Village of VVest-Vleteren, which are hypocriticall companions, running up & downe all Flanders into Townes and Villages, under the pretence of begging almes. Their Patron was a Hermite anno 1612. who had bene foure times at Rome, where he dyed. Besides the number of these villages, there are eight others which in the raising and taxations of money are to pay with this Castlewicke one fourth part of the whole. In the Generall taxations of Flanders this Castlewike giueth a like with Cortryck, that of Aelst contributes more, otherwise this bringeth up as much as any other doth.

Cassel. Cassell called heretofore Castellum lyeth upon a very high-hill. It is a prettie towne, that hath signes of great antiquitie. The Romans from this towne made many wayes paued with stone, as to Collen, Dornick, Bavay, & Terrenborch: the Remainders whereof are to be seene in diverse places yet to this day, especially, as ye goe to Steegers. Here is also an ancient ruinous Castle, standing upon the very top of the hill. In the midst of the mercate place, there is a springing Fountaine. There are in it two Churches of Canons, one of them is founded upon the top of the hill, richly adorned & dedicated to the honour of S. Peter by Robrecht de Vries Earle of Flanders (Anno 1071) in remembrance of the Victorie, which he obtayned beneath this hill the first day of August; where by he brought all Flanders into peace, where he lyeth buried. The other Church is Saint Maries: there are Iesuites. Not farre from the towne lyeth a higher hill called Vvvenberg, upon which is founded a very fine Cloister of S. Francis Order, from whence there is a braue prospect round about the Countrie.

Castlevvike. The Castlevvike of this towne is famous for the great revenu, which it brings in, having 52 Villages under it. VVattene here tofore a small towne is now a Baronie under this Towne. There was a fine Priorie of Regular Canons built upon the top of a hill in a very pleasant place by Robrecht de Vries aforesaid. This Priorie was annexed to the Bishop of S. Omars revenu, which he gaue to some Iesuits to dwell in. There is excellent beare brued here, which is much desired by the people, that inhabiteth hereabouts.

VVattene.

Steenvoord. Steenvoord is a fine libertie having a Castle, a Hospitall, and a Mercate kept in it euery weeke. Vpon the first of Iuly there comes a great resort to Bollisseel in Pilgrimage. Here of late yeeres a husbandman found hid in the ground, in a white pitcher with a narrow mouth, two hundred peeces of money with this image and superscription about it. Posthumi in Gallia, à Lolliano devicti atque Casi. Peene is a Marquisate in which S. Williams Cloister standeth. In this Castlewick there are two Nunns Cloisters of S. Bernards Order: the one is called Ravesbergh, & the other VVoestine. Steegers, called in French Esterre, is an Earledome having towne-priviledges, lying upon the Ley: There is a yeerly Mart, & great resort unto it for the buying, and selling of Linnen-cloth.

Steegers.

Mergem. Mergem upon the same river hath likewise towne Priviledges, belonging to the Canons of S. Ame in Douay. Hazebrouck hath also the like Priviledges. One would thinke they were all fine townes, in regard of their streets, the number of people, and the riches of the Inhabitants. About a mile from thence lyeth Castle-vvall, or Motte au Bois in the midst of a great wood, belonging to the King, and neere unto it a Cloister called Prevain, of the Order of the Holy Trinitie. Morbeke is an Earledome as well knowne for the delicate Creame, as for the Castle that is in it. Havesberck is a Baronie. Bergen S. VVinocks is a prettie hansome towne, so called because of a fine Abbey of Monkes of S. Benedictus order, built upon a hill in honour of S. VVinocks who was an English man, and dyed at VVormhout, whereof the Abbot is Earle. This towne hath a vicount as Yperen and Vuerne haue: the land lying about it is as fruitfull, as the Precinct of Vuerne is, having many fruit trees, and wood for timber, and fyring. It is called the Nevv-Cloister, and is an Abbey of Nunns of S. Augustins order, built within the towne, & hath two parish Churches, S. Martins, and S. Peters. There are also Dominican, Capucine Fryers, and Iesuits. Vnder the Iurisdiction of this towne there be 33 Villages. Hontschote is not onely the greatest, and chiefest of this Castlewike: but also of all Flanders: yea of all the unwalled places in the Netherlands, saving the Hagh in Holland: every yeere they make in this Village, a hundred thousand peeces of Sayes, and there were as many houses in it before it was burnt by the French warrs, that they could bring 20 thousand men together, and the most of them all liued by making of Sayes, and of that which depended thereon. It hath the Priviledge of holding two Mercates every weeke, and hath also a very larg Mercate place worth the sight, with a great Church, and a very high stone steeple, which is counted the highest in all Flanders: as likewise the Senate house. There are also two Fryer Cloisters, the one dedicated and founded in honour of the holy Trinitie, provided with good incomes, standing in a pleasant place, belonging to the Lord of Houdschote: the other is the Franciscã Cloister. There are also two Nunns Cloisters of S. Francis his Order, which were founded aboue foure hundred yeeres agoe. Shortly after the death of the said Lord of the noble house of Bardeloos, as Grammaius witnesseth. The other is a Gest-house. Houtkerk is an Earledome, belonging to the Illustrious house of Horne, as also Hontschote. VVormhout is one of the greatest Villages in Flanders, and hath a goodly Church and a yeerly Mart: part of this Village is of the Earledome, appertaining to S. VVinocks Cloister in Bergen. Herzele hath likewise a yeerly Mart, and also Oostcappell. Ekelsbeke is a Priviledged towne, and Baronie, with a very fine Castle in it. Belle is a goodlie place unwalled, having towne Priviledges, where there is a Iesuites Cloister. It hath 14 Villages under the iurisdiction thereof, lying in a very good quarter, under which there is Nevv-kerck, having a mercate in it, belonging to the Earle of Egmont. Burburgh is a fine small towne, lying open, appertaining to the Duke of Vendome, or rather to the King of France, with Dunkerck and Graveling. It is a Vi-Countie, having an Abbey of Gentlewomen in it of S. Benedictus Order, founded in the yeere 1099: this Castlewike hath 14 Villages under it.

Hontschote. Ekelsbeke. Belle. Castlevvick Burburg. Castlevvick

Dunkerck (saving the fortification) belonging to the King of Navarre, is a very strong Port-towne, & hath a haven well knowne far and neere, being the best which the King of Spaigne hath in the 17 Provinces, it hath but a small channell & a short Haven which is very hard to come into, by reason it lyeth so neere the Sea. This towne though it be very populous, yet is it but small; howsoeuer growes very rich because of the boote, & prises which they gett every day from their ennemies; for the Dunkerkers now and then meete with the Hollanders, and the Hollanders with them: there is a very faire Church in it having a foure square steeple, built very high with a fine chime of Bells as most of the Townes, and Liberties of Flanders haue: within the towne there are Franciscan Fryes, and Iesuites, and without Capucins.

Dunkercke.

Greveling is also a Sea-port vvith a haven, but of no great use, it is a small tovvne but hath a strong Castle. There lies a Dutch Garnison in it, as there doth a Spanish in Dunkercke. It is a strong Tovvne, girt about vvith fine Bolvvarcks, vvhereof 4 of them vvere made upon the charges of the 4 mẽbers of Flanders, & the 5 at the cost of Gallike Flanders. This tovvne is as it vvere the Key of the land, belonging to the King of France. Betvveene Dunkerke, and Greveling, they haue made royall Forts by the Sea side called the Scheure, lying ouer against a Seabanke or a shelue called the Splinter. There are also other fine places having tovvne Priviledges, vvhich are not vvalled, as first Poperinge, appertaining to the Abbot of S. Bertin, vvithin the tovvne of S. Omar, vvhich is a great and a rich libertie, having three Parochiall Churches in it, to vvit, S. Bertins, S. Maries and S. Johns. Here they make great store of Bayes, & Cloth, and sett here much Seagrasse, vvhich brings in the Inhabitants great vvealth and riches. Here is also the Priorie of S. Bertin. VVaestene lyeth upon the Ley and is a great through-fare from Yperen to Ryssell, there is in it a Castle, and an Abbey of Regular Canons. The Castlevvike of VVaestene, (or VVarneston in French) hath 15 Villages under it. VVervvic is an ancient place upon the Ley, and hath a very fine Church. Meessene is a very faire libertie, & hath a braue Abbey in it of S. Benedictus order, built to the honour of S. Mary: being one of the richest, & the chiefest Gentlevvomens Cloisters in all Flanders. The Abbesse is Countesse of the Tovvne, and hath some Canons in it, vvhich say service. Loo in the Precinct of Vuerne, hath a rich Abbey in it, of the order of the Regular Canons, vvhereof a part belongeth to the Abbot, vvho is Earle of it.

Greveling. Popering. VVastene. VVervvick Meessene. Loo.

The Third Mapp & Deſcription OF EAST-FLANDERS.

HERE are deſcribed in this Mapp, the Cities of Gaunt, Brugges, Oudenaerd & Cortrick, with the Caſtlewicks, Townes & Villages lying thereabouts. Wee will beginne then firſt with thoſe places, which are under the Commaund of the Lords the States Generall of the Vnited Provinces, and which they haue gayned by the Sword, then come to the other townes, and places under the obedience, and power of the King of Spaine.

Biervliet. Biervliet, Oſtburgh and Ardenburgh are walled, and ſtrong townes under the obedience of the Lords the States. Biervliet lieth in an Ileland mentioned by the Greekiſh Writers, namely by Nicetа Choniata, & others for their braue & warlike actions, under the conduct of their Earle of Flanders, the Emperour Baldvvin, who was the firſt, that ſcaled and entred the walls of Conſtantinople, and tooke in the Tower, which ſtood by the Haven ſide: in remembrance whereof, the Burgers of Biervliet, giue for their towne armes, and upon their ſeales foure great Greekiſh B. in Or, within a right Croſſe likewiſe Or in a field Vermilian, theſe foure letters in Greeke ſignifying, Βασιλεῦς Βασιλέων Βασιλεῦσι Βασιλέων, that is, King of Kings ruling over Kings.

Biervliet in ancient time was joyned to the firme land, being the foote-way betweene Brugges and Antvverpe: but in the yeere 1337. by an inundation there were 17. villages drowned lying about it, by the breaking in of the Sea through a ſmall gape in the Sea banke. Here VVilliam Beukelens was borne, who found out the firſt invention of barreling of Pickle herings, which redounded to the great profit, and benefit of this Countrie and the circumjacent Provinces, and dyed Anno 1379.

Oſtburgh. Oſtburgh with the Precinct thereof, lieth by the Ileland of Cadſand, in a very fruitfull ſoile. It had once great trading before Brugges began to flouriſh.

Ardenburgh. Ardenburgh formerly called Rodenburgh was heretofore the chiefe Citie, and the moſt famous towne for Marchandize of all the Flemiſh Sea-townes: but now is decayed, and of no great account. Here was a Church of Canons, dedicated to the honour of S. Marie, built in the yeere 1296. by Michell Biſhope of Dornick, under whoſe Dioceſſe it was. This Church was accounted the faireſt in all Flanders, but is now ruinated by the warrs, and nothing left ſtanding but the ſteeple & ſome pillars. Not farre from thence, there is a ſmall towne, and a Caſtle called Middleburgh, with a Collegiall Church: and within a litle of it, ſtood heretofore the Cloiſter of Zoetendale, of the Order of the Regular Canons founded Anno 1215. The deceaſed Prince of Orange Maurice tooke in all theſe townes in the yeere 1604. when he beſieged Sluyce.

Middleburgh.

Sluyce. Sluyce is a Sea-Port, with a ſtrong Caſtle which is a large towne and by nature invincible, by reaſon of the Water and Moores lying round about it. This towne flouriſhed heretofore greatly, in regard of the Haven, which is one of the beſt in all Europe; wherein 500. ſhips may ride ſafely under the Winde, as hapned An. 1468. when as 150. ſhips of great burden were harboured in it. A while before, Charles the Sixth King of France, gathered together a Navie of 1400. ſhips in it, with intent to haue invaded England, but all in vaine. This King kept his Court here in this towne for ſome months. Right ouer againſt this towne, lieth the fruitfull Illelād of Cadſand, which is as it were the Bulwarke of Sluyce. They may feede within the walls of this towne aboue a 100. Cowes. Sluyce is now in the hands of the States, having a ſtrong Garniſon lying in it, and invincible Forts round about it, as being now the Bulwarke of Fluſhing and the Ile of VValcheren. Anno 1604. it was beſieged by Prince Maurice, and after a Gallerie of 3. or 400. foote long was made muſket proofe, that 4. men might march a front in it, the Batterie being made, & the Gallerie ready to be putt ouer upon punts with Oares: his Exellencie by ſome Runawayes, hearing that thoſe within wanted victualls, held up his approches and famiſhed it out, & ſo tooke it in with a hundred and ſixe braſſe, & yron peeces of Ordnance: ten great Galleys ſunke in the Haven, & ſett at liberty ſixeteene hundred Slaues, which ſerved upon them.

Tſendike is a very ſtrong Fortreſſe, which is now made a towne by the Lords the States, is honored with towne priviledges & hath a very commodious Haven. It was taken in alſo by Prince Maurice 1604. The States haue in this quarter many Sconces, as the Ioffer Schonce by Tſendike, S. Phillips, S. Catherins, Nivelt Sconce, Henries Sconce, Slyckenborgh & Hans Friezes, all Forts as ye goe betweene Sluyce and Tſendicke. The Hofſtee & Ooſtvliet Sconces lying within the Iland of Caſſant, and the Old & New Pas-Sconces by Sluyce. The Crabb, the Oly, the Alder & Spitſbroeck Sconces, lye round about Ardenborgh, under the Commaund of the King of Spayne. They haue beſides about Sluyce, S. Fredericks, S. Donaes, the Starre, S. Iobs & Blankenberghe Sconces, Plaſſendale Sconce by Oſtend. The Fort called Trieſt, lying upon the new fare betweene Gaunt and Brugges, and diverſe others. Whereby the Reader may eaſely ſee, of what great importance that part of Flanders is to the States and how much it concernens them to maintaine, and keepe them againſt their Ennemies.

Tſendike. Sconces. Gaunt.

Let us now come to the chiefe Cities, Townes & places in Flanders, which are yet under the power of the King of Spaine, and firſt of all wee will ſpeake ſome thing of the Metropolitan Citie of the Earledome of Flanders called Gaunt, or in Latine Gandavum, which (as the fame goeth) was firſt founded by Iulius Cæſar. This braue, & huge Citie lying about 12. Engliſh miles from the Sea, hath 8. faire Gates, and is watered with foure rivers, to with, the Scheld, the Ley, the Lieve and the Moore, ſhee hath beſides a new-fare or Channell, cutt by mens hands, which reacheth from Brugges to Gaunt, and from thence bearing ſhipps of a good burden falleth into the Sea at the Sas of Gaunt.

Rivers.

The greatneſſe thereof. The Circuit of this Citie is within the walls 45640. Romaine feete, which make ſeuen Italian miles, or 3688. Rodds, each rod being 14. foote longe. This Citie was once meaſured about, & found to be but three Rodes leſſe in cõpaſſe thẽ Lovaine, but 5. greater then Luyck, & 15. then Collẽ. There are in it 98. bridges, under which laden ſhips may paſſe, 20. litle Ilelands well inhabited & fiue & 30000. houſes within the city. It is the Staple for all kind of Graine. They keepe within this citie Lyõs & Beares, which ſome times breede, & bring forth yõg ones. They once turned a Lyõ & a Bull looſe together, which fought ſo long time till at laſt the Lyons pawes were to hard for the Bulls hornes, & ſo the Lyon overcame the Bull. This citie of Gaunt, & Earledome of Flanders giue a Lyon for their armes. There are within this towne 4. Water miles, an infinite number of Querne mills, a 100. Wind mills, and aboues 55. Churches. The Cathedrall Church is very large & ſumptuous conſecrated to the honour of S. Iohn the Baptiſt, and S. Baefs the Patron of this towne, who lieth burried there in a ſtately Tombe, and kept with great reverence, and diverſe other Reliques and monumants. It is the Biſhops-Seate. There is alſo an other great Collegiall Church called S. Veerls or S. Pharaildis, the Virgin. The Abbeys of Monks & Fryers is first that which stands upon S. Peters-hill, the noblest and richest in all Flanders, dedicated to S. Benedictus: also Boudeloos, of S. Bernards Order, Drongen of the Premonstrates Order, &c. The Womens Abbeys are Biloke & Ter Hage of S. Bernards Order, & Groenenbrill of the Society of S. Victor, &c. The Foure Begging Orders, the Celletans, Capucines, Iesuites and diverse Nunns Cloisters, besides 5. Reformed of S. Austins Order, and 16. Gesthouses, & Cloisters. Two Findelingshouses, without the Citie are the Carthuysian, and the Nunn-bosh Cloister of S. Bernards Order. There are in the Citie 52. Gildes, & diverse weavers. Gaunt is the first member of Flanders, contayning under it Alst, Cortrick, Oudenaerd, Dendremond, with their Castlewicks, and 4. precincts, as also the Castlewick of Gaunt, with the Land of VVaes and Biervliet, Geersberg and Nienove.

The Castlewick of Gaunt.

The Castlewick of Gaunt, is very well seated upon the rivers of Scheld, Ley and Moorevvater. Here was founded the Fryers Abbey of Dronghen, Regular Canons of the Premonstrates Order. There are within this Castlewick 46. villages, under which also is the braue Baronie of Nevell, with the Castle of Odonck. Everghem is an Earledome belonging to S. Peters Monasterie in Gaunt.

Brugges.

The Citie of Brugges is marvaillously adorned with publick and private buildings, which are greatly extolled by Writters, and to speake all in fewe words, this citie is built to giue delight to the eye, & content to the minde. Gaunt, Antvverpe, Bruxells, Lovaine and Maclaine are very faire cities, but Brugges putts them downe all. Æneas Silvius, Pius the Second Pope of Rome, who had almost travelled throughout all Europe, saith, that Brugges was one of the three finest townes, that ever he saw in his life. The river Reya runneth through it with a slowe streame, over which there are many bridges, & then passing by Damme falleth into the Sea, by Sluyce. This citie heretofore was one of the most famous marchant Townes in all Europe, in which there dwelt 17. Nations, each in their owne quarter and Colledge, to whome there was brought costly marchandises, and commodities from all the Corners of the World, and from Brugges was sent into the other parts of the World, faire Horses, fatt Oxen, delicate Butter and Cheese: pickled, and red Herings, diverse sort of Saltfishe, Wollen & Linnen Cloth, Tapisteries and hanging most curiously wrought, admirable Pictures, all sorts of Manufactures, which could be imagined or thought upon: yea, and in such abundance, that Brugges seemed to be a litle World. Hence it was, that the name of Flanders, obscured the name of Netherland, and the other Provinces. This Citie was so beautifull and rich, that Iane Queene of Navarre, espouse to Philip the Faire King of France, comming heither Anno 1301. beholding the beautie of the woman & the braverie of their Clothes, cryed out with admiration, and amasement. I had thought that I onely had beene a Queene, but here I see 600. This Citie entertained with great magnificencie Philip the Good, and Charles Duke of Orleans, founding 18. Silver Trumpets before them. In this Citie was solemnized the marriages of the two Philips, of Elsate, & the Good, also of Charles the Hardie, Prince of Flanders. Within this Citie (Anno 1429.) was first instituted the Order of the Golden Fleece. The Circuit of this citie is within the walls 26600. foote, or 4. Italians miles & a halfe. It is one of the most pleasant townes in all the Netherlands. There are in it aboue 60. Churches and Cloisters. The Episcopall is that of S. Donaes, whose image is kept there with great reverence in a silver boxe, he being the Patron of this Citie. There are besides two other exceeding faire Churches of Canons, the one S. Maries, the other S. Salvators.

There are also many Monasteries, the chiefest are the Abbeys of Monkes of Saint Benedictus Order, called Saint Andrevvs and of Saint Bernards Order named at Dovvnes, vvhich of late yeeres vvas founted vvith such a stately structure, as is admirable to behold, and vvhich vvas heretofore remoued from vvithout Vuern into this citie. There is an other besides those of Regular Canons called Eechout Cloister dedicated to the honour of Saint Barthelemevv. There are also tvvo Nunneries, the one called Spermael, the other Ghistell of Saint Bernards Order, and of Saint Clares. Also foure begging Orders, Capucins, VVilliamites, Celletans and Iesuites, and tvvo Carthusian Cloisters, the one for men, and the other for vvomen vvith diverse others. They haue 52. some say 68. Gilds. In this citie vvas borne King Philip the Sonne of Maximilian, and the Father of Charles the Fifth Emperour, vvho vvas borne vvithin Gaunt. Those of Brugges found out first the Isles Acores, and for that reason are called the Flemish Ilelands. Brugges is the second member of Flanders, having vvithin the libertie of it Vurne, Bergh S. VVinnocks, Nevvport, Dunkerck, Graveling, Ostend, Sluyce, Damme, Thorout, Ardenburgh, Middleburgh, Oudenburgh, Dixmude, Loo, Poperinghe, Ghistle & Blanckenberghe.

The territoire of Vryen.

The territoire of Vryen is so named, because of the great liberties, vvhich it hath obtained, & is freed by the citie of Brugges. This Land hath 27. Senatours or Lavv-giuers, vvhich are never deposed, the libertie thereof reached 21. English miles in circuit about the citie of Brugges, and hath a very fruitfull soile. There vvas formerly founded in it the Abbey of Vander Doest for men of S. Bernards Order, but vvas aftervvard annexed to the Episcopall Table of Brugges. The Nunnes Abbey of Spermall, of the same Order, vvas remoued vvithin Brugges, and besides an other of Nunns called S. Truyens of S. Victors Order. The revenevv of Merckems Cloister, being Nuns of S. Benedictus Order, is novv the possession of the Iesuits of Tperen. This territoire hath 35. Precints under it, cõtayning 90. villages, vvhich must adresse themselues for suits in lavve unto the Castle of Brugges, saving some places vvhich are under the jurisdiction of the Lords the States, & must come to Sluyse, vvhere their is a Magistrate in speciall, to decide controversies in the Vryen, the Land of Cadsand and other parts. Vnder the territoire of Fryen are comprehended the Baronies of VVinendale, Praet, Maldechem and Guise. The Banditoes of Flanders may dvvell freely in this territoire. The territoire of Fryen maketh the 4. member of Flanders, under vvhich the Castlevvicks of Vuerne, Bergh and Burburgh are vvith their appartenances.

Largenesse.

Oudenaerd is the old habitation of the ancient Nervii, from vvhence this tovvne taketh the name: It is small, but vvell seated upon the Schelde, and is rich by reason of the abundance of Tapisterie, vvhich is made in it. The tovvne & Baronie of Pamel vvith the Castle thereunto belonging is joyned to Oudenaerd vvith a bridg ouer the Scheld. Here liues Franciscan Monks.

Oudenaerd.

The Castlevvick of Oudenaerd is seated very commodiously upon the Schelde. Here is the Abbey of Eename vvith Monkes of S. Benedictus Order, and an other of Nunns of S. Bernards Order, called Maidendale Abbey. This Castlevvick hath 33. villages under it, and the Barronies of Antoing, Bosnutt & Petechem upon the Schelde, adorned vvith S. Clares Abbey of Nunns, as likevvise a faire Castle.

Cortrick.

Cortrick is a faire, great and a rich tovvne, lying upon the Ley, vvith a Castle belonging to it. There is a Canonie of S. Maries, a rich Gesthouse, and also Franciscan, Capucine Fryers, and Iesuits: vvith an Abbey of Nunns of S. Bernards Order, called Groening. It hath a large & rich Castlevvick, having VVevelgems Abbey of Nunns, under it of S. Bernards Order, & 76. villages, under vvhich also is the Earledome of VVakene, lying upon the Ley. Where that famous Cosmographer Lodovicus Hondius vvas borne. Englemonster is a Baronie vvith a Castle in it. Isegem, an Earledome & Tielt, Harlebeke, Deinze & Meenene are annexed to this Castlevvike. Harlebeke is an ancient Canony, & an unvvalled tovvne lying upon the Ley. Here vvere buried the first Forresters & Earles of Flanders, entituling themselues Earles of Harlebeke, vvhich is novv but a Vicountie.

Castlevvick.

The deſcription of GALLIKE, OR WELCH-FLANDERS.

Name. Allike-Flanders is ſo called, becauſe it is properly belonging to France, whoſe language is ſtill uſed in this part. It is bounded on the North with Teutonicke Flanders: on the South with Hainalt, on the Eaſt with the Schelde, and on the Weſt with the River Leye and Artois. And though this territoire be of no great extent, yet it is very pleaſant, enjoying a fatt & a fruitfull Soile, with many fine fields; yeelding Graine, which alſo produce good Methegline, and excellent Wheate, though not much, having many goodly and large paſtures fitt for the feeding of Cattle. In the part of Flanders, lye the great and rich Citties of Ryſſel and Douay, with many other prettie townes, as Orchies, Armentiers, Lanoy, Baſſee, Marchiennes and Comene, and the mighty towne of Doornick, with its juriſdiction, having under it the townes of S. Amand and Mortaigne.

Bounds.

Fertility.

Ryſſel. Ryſſell or Liſle called in Latine Inſulæ, is the braveſt towne for trading in all Flanders: yea in all the Netherlandiſh Provinces under the King of Spaine his command. It is a large Citty, & populous flouriſhing in all riches and gentrie, and by the accommodation of the River Deula, which comes out of Artois by Lens, which diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Leye at Dulſemont, is much enlarged. This towne was firſt built anno 1007, by Balduinus Barbatus, Earle of Flanders, and becauſe his Sonne Baldwyn the good, was borne in this Citty, he gave it the ſurname of Ryſſell: who loved this towne ſo well, that he girt it about with Walls in the yeare 1066, and founded in it the ſtately Church of Saint Peter, which he endowed with great riches for 40 Canons, under which were Sugfragans, the Biſhops of Cambrick, Doornick and Terouan, over whome at this day is the Biſhop of Yper. In this Citty is a faire and a ſtrong Caſtle, there is yet to be ſeene the old walls & ruines of the Citadell of Buck, where the Lords and Governours dwelt, which kept this Countrie for the Kings of France, which to this day are called Caſtellaines of Ryſſell. Theſe Lords were the firſt called Forreſters & Overſeers of the woods, but in proceſſe of time attained to great dignity, becomming hereditarie Earles, and Peeres of France.

In this Citty of Ryſſell dwels manie Handie-craftsmen, which make all ſorts of Stuffs, as Sayes, Grofgreins, Serges, &c. So that this towne for theſe manufactures puts downe Antwerpe, which beares away the bell from all other townes (ſaving Amſterdam) in the Netherlands. Indeed, this towne ought no more to be called litle Antwerpe: ſeing old Antwerpe is much decayed, and impoveriſhed by reaſon of the taking in of the Boſh and Maſtricht, which now hinders and cuts of the ancient trading, which had wont to be betweene Collein, Germany and it. Within Ryſſell is the Chamber of Accounts for all Flanders, having in it a Preſident, 4 Overſeers of the Accounts, 5 Auditours, 3 Recorders or Secretaires, and other Clarks, & inferiour Officers. All Treaſurers and Receivers muſt appeare here to give up their accounts. In this Chamber is kept the Records and Regiſters of all the Priveledges, graunted to this Countrie by the Princes thereof. This is the Metrapolis of Gallike Flanders, and hath a perticular Governour, which commaunds over Douay and Orchies. There are many fine Churches & Cloiſters in it. Amongſt the reſt the Ieſuites, which is ſo magnificent and great, adorned with ſuch brave Images and pictures, that it is admirable to behold, and in ſuch abundance, that one can ſcarcely ſatisfye the Eye. And as the Paters have erected very ſumptuous buildings: ſo hath the Citty built them a ſtately Colledge held for the faireſt and beautifulleſt of all the low-Countries: having a brave garden, full of fragrant flowers, herbs, trees and fruits. Beſides a great many Nunneries, there are diverſe Cloiſters of Monkes & Fryers, among the reſt the foure orders of begging Fryers, or Capuchins. There is alſo an exceeding rich Hoſpitall or Geſthouſe, founded by the Lady Ioane of Conſtantinople, Counteſſe of Flanders. This Citty hath 6 Gates, and as many Sub-urbs: after that the order of the Golden Fleece was inſtituted at Brugges, the firſt aſſembly and ſolemniſation thereof was held in this Citty, in the Collegiall Church of S. Peter, which laſted three dayes, and the King made his Feaſt on the laſt of November, being S. Andrew the Apoſtles day, the Patron of Burgundie. Without this Citty is a faire Abbey of Monkes of S. Bernards order, called Loo Abbey, founded anno 1152, having alſo an Nunnerie neere unto it, called Marketta: this is the braveſt Nunnerie in all Flanders, erected by Ioane of Conſtantinople, Counteſſe of Flanders, richly endowed, wherein are diverſe Sepulchres & Tombes, of the Earles and Princes of Flanders.

Ryſſell hath a large juriſdiction & a Caſtellainſhip, having under it theſe ſmall territoires and lands. As Carembault with 11 Villages and Lordſhips. Pevele 26. Melanthois 21. Ferrain 28. Weppes 32. Over-Scheld 7. the County 12. So that Ryſſell hath under its command 137 Villages. Roubaix is a Vi-county. Houbourdin a great Libertie, or Royaltie belonging to the houſe of Burgundie, as alſo Phalenpin, adorned with an Abbey of Regular Cannons. Eſpinoy is a Princedome, Seclin is the chiefe towne in the land of Melanthois, having a faire and an ancient Colledge of Canons, founded in honour of Saint Piatus the Martyre. Noyelle is a County of it ſelfe, Busbehe a Barronie appertaining to the high Bailife of Yper, deſcended of the houſe of the Idegems. Ciſoing is a place well knowne, in regard of the ancient, and rich Abbey of Regular Canons, which ſtands in it. Herles, Croix and Coupigny are all Counties.

Douay. Douay is built in that place, where heretofore thē Catuaci inhabited. This faire, ſtrong and large Citty, is ſeated upon the Scarpe, which paſſing through diverſe Countries, runneth through it: it hath many fine Fountaines and ſtately buildings, eſpecially for Colledges and Seminaries, with diverſe fine Churches, and whereof the richeſt and ancienteſt is Saint Ames, which flouriſhed in the time of Clodoveus, King of France, about the yeare of our Lord 500, of which it is ſaid. Arconaldus the founder of it, was the King of France his Coneſtable, the other Canoniſation is S. Peters. There are 6 Parochiall Churches in it, and three Abbeys for Nunnes: the firſt is called des Pres, of S. Bernards order: the ſecond the Sin, of S. Auſtins order, which heretofore ſtood without the towne: the third is called the Paix, being reformed Nunnes of S. Benedictus order. The Abbot of S. Vaeſt erected that of Atrecht a magnificent Colledge and Cloiſter, called S. Gregories, wherein he put the reformed Engliſh Monkes of S. Benedicts order. In this citty is alſo a Cloiſter of the order of the Trinitie, with the 4 begging Fryers Cloiſters, the Capuchins, Jeſuites & many Nunneries.

Philip the ſecond, King of Spaine, erected here a famous Univerſitie, wherein they beganne to teach in the yeare 1562, where there are a great number of Schollars of all profeſſions, faculties and arts, eſpecially in Divinity, where there comes to the Lectures every day, at leaſt 300 Students in long gownes, & many Fryers & Monkes in diverſe habits, which is worth the ſight. There is in it a great number of Colledges & Seminaries, the chiefeſt whereof are thoſe of Marchiennes, of Anchin & S. Vaes: but the fineſt of them all is that of Hennin, which puts downe all the others, and was founded by Anthony Hennin, Biſhop of Yper. Within Douay is the ſtaple of corne, which comes out of the circum-jacent countries, and where they drive a great trade in it. In the Caſtellainefhip of Douay and Orchies, there are 28 Villages, whereof Flines is accounted the chiefeſt, and where there is a great and rich Nunnerie of S. Bernards order, founded by Margareta of Conſtantinople, and hath bin ennobled with two counties in Flanders with Biſhopricks. Bovingy is a Barronie.

Orchies. Orchies lyeth five miles from Ryſſel, & three from Douay: it is a reaſonable great towne, and very pleaſant, where they make many Stufs & Sayes, this towne with Ryſſel and Douay, make one government.

Lannoy. Lannoy is a litle towne, but very ſtrong, where they make great ſtore of Tripes, called Peſants velvet.

Armentiers. Armentiers is a rich, & a pleaſant towne, lying upon the Leye: they make in it abundance of cloaths and ſtammels, and in the time of peace, there are made above 25000 of peeces yearely, & a certaine mingled cloath with foure colours, which are tranſported into Italie, and to Conſtantinople. This towne belonged to the Earle Egmond, with the adjacent caſtle of Erkingem. In this towne are diverſe cloiſters of Gray-Fryers, Ieſuits and others, not yet confirmed by the Pope of Rome. Betweene Armentiers & Steeghers there is a ſmall territoire, called la Love, honored with two fine Liberties and Villages, whereof Leventys is the chiefeſt: there is alſo a Priorie belonging to S. Vaeſt his cloiſter in Atrecht, of Saint Benedicts order. The countrie about it is wonderfull pleaſant, abounding in all kinde of trees, eſpecially ſuch as are fruitfull, all belonging to this Abbey; being endowed with many priveledges and liberties, without giving any impoſts or cuſtomes to the Prince. Gorge is a Lordſhip & Liberty, having many fine houſes in it, and is populous, becauſe of the fatneſſe of the Soile, lying upon the Leye. Beaupre is an Abdeſſe of Nunnes, which lyes likewiſe upon the Leye of S. Bernards order. Baſſee lyeth three miles from Steegers, and is a ſmall towne, where they trade much in wooll. This towne belongeth to the Earle of Harhes, who is of the houſe of Hornes: here is a fine Nunnerie of S. Francis his order.

Comene is a pretty towne unwalled, lying upon the Leye: there is in it a very fine ſtrong Caſtle, which formerly belonged to the houſe of Croy, having alſo a Cloiſter of Cannons, dedicated to the honour of the Virgin Mary. Marchiennes is a ſmall walled towne, ſeated upon the River Scharpe, belonging to the Abbott of that place. Here is a goodly Abbey of Monkes of Saint Benedicts order, with ſumptuous and ſtately buildings.

Dornick. Now wee come to the deſcription of the great, mighty and populous citty of Dornicke or Turnay, lying upon the Schaldis, taken by our Henry the eight, anno 1513, to whome the Cittiſens payd a hundred thouſand Ducates for their ranſome. It was reſtored to the French for ſix hundred thouſand crownes, and taken from them againe by Charles the 5. It fronters upon Haynalt, and hath a Governour over it. This is a very ancient towne, once inhabited by the Nerry, who in the dayes of Iulius Cæſar, were counted a valiant and warrlike people. The Schelde runneth through the midſt of this citty, which parts Flanders from Haynalt: for there are two parochiall churches, the one S. Nicolas, the other S. Brixes, which are in Haynalt, and àre under the Arch-Biſhop of Camericke. It is a very ſtrong citty, well fortifyed, having a cittadell & a great garriſon in it. There are many ancient and ſtately houſes, adorned alſo with many churches, cloiſters and hoſpitals. This citty was firſt converted to the Chriſtian faith by S. Piatus and Chryſolitus, who ſuffred Martyredome under the Emperour Diocletian. It hath heretofore bin in poſſeſſion of the French and the Engliſh, who built the Caſtle in it: but at this preſent is under Flanders. The citty without hath a beautifull proſpect, having many ſpires built with blew ſtone, which ſhowes the antiquity of it, and upon the walls, and in the ſtreetes there are 99 Turrets, from whence it is reported, the citty tooke this name of Turnay. One muſt aſcend up to the Churches by Staires, within they are obſcure and darke, ſaving the Cathedrall, which is very faire, lightſome, and of a ſtately ſtructure and building. There is a very fine Abbey in it of S. Benedicts order, called S. Martins, beſides two Abbeys of Regular Canons, the one named S. Nicolas de Prez, and a great many other Cloiſters, as the Dominicans, Franciſcans, Croſs-bretherens, Ieſuites and others. Under the liberty of Dornick, there are 67 Villages, lying all in a fatt Soile, whereof ſeven of them are in Haynalt, Mortaigne Mortaigne hath 9 Villages, & S. Amand 8, all under the Caſtellainſhip of Dornicke. Mortaigne was heretofore a fine towne, but now lyes ruinous, & become a Village, it is ſome three miles from Dornick, where the Scarpe falleth into the Schelde, having a Lord over it, and an Abbey called Chaſteau l'Abbaye.

S. Amand S. Amand is a pretty towne, lying upon the Scarpe, 4 miles from Dornick: it hath a very fine Abbey belonging to it; having a Lord over it, which ſurpaſſeth in wealth all the Abbeys of this quarter of S. Benedicts orders. The Abbot of it hath both ſpirituall & temporall juriſdiction, having 8 Villages under it. S. Amand converted Gaunt to the Chriſtian faith anno 630, for which he was entituted the Apoſtle of Flanders, from which time forward Gaunt and Brugges were ſubordinate to the Biſhop of Dornick, who was alſo Suffragan to the Arch-Biſhop of Rheims in France, till the yeare 1561, that Pope Pius the IV, made new Biſhops over Gaunt, Brugges & Yper, at the requeſt of Philip the 2, King of Spaine, then Prince of all the Netherlands.

The fourth Mapp and Deſcription
OF FLANDERS, Called EMPERIALL and PROPRIETARY.

Diviſion.

EMPERIALL Flanders was ſo called, becauſe it was long under the ſubiection of the Emperours, comprehending under it the Citie of Aelſt, and the Countrie lying about it, alſo the Land of VVaes with the foure Precincts. This part was formerlie called a Seignorie, in regard it was gouverned by their owne Lords, to wit, of the towne, and Countrie of Aelſt, were under the obedience of their owne Earles, and the Land of VVaes was under the ſubiection of the Hollanders, and the foure Precincts acknowledged none but the Biſhop of Vtrecht. This was the reaſon why Levves of Male, wrot himſelfe Earle, and Lord of Flanders.

But that part of Flanders, which was held as an inheritance, and in Propriety, acknowledged not the King of France, as the Earledome did; neither the Emperour, as Emperiall Flanders had wont to doe: containeth under it Dendermond, Cheersbergh and Bornhem with their territoires, whereof wee will ſpeake in the deſcription of this Map.

We haue devideth the other parts of Flanders into three Maps. The one Comprehending Eaſt-Flanders, the other VVeſt-Flanders, and the third Gallike Flanders. Vnder Eaſt Flanders we haue deſcribed the Citie of Gent, with her Caſtlevvick, the towne of Brugges with the Land of Vrye, as alſo Oudenard and Cortrick with their Caſtlewiks: under VVeſt Flanders we haue placed the townes of Yperen, Vurne, Berghen S. VVinnocks, Caſſell, Burburgh, Belle, VVaeſtene, with their Caſtlewicks, lying as farre as Artois, and Picardie. Vnder Gallike Flanders are contained the Cities of Ryſſell, Dovvay and Orchies, with their Caſtlewicks, and the towne of Dornick with the Lands belonging to it.

Aelſt.

The Chiefe towne of Emperiall Flanders is Aelſt: which (as is reported) was built by the Goths, in the yeere of our Lord 489. This towne was held by the Earles of Flanders, as a fee ſimple, proceeding from the benefice of the Emperours, ſo that the Earles of Flanders entituled themſelues Princes of the Holy Empire, which were foure Martiall-Earles of the Romiſh Empire, and perpetuall protectours of the Epiſcopall Church of Camerick.

Aelſt is a Vicountie, lying upon the river of Dender, hauing a great mercate of Hopps in it, which they uſe in bruing of Beere. They make alſo in this towne fine tapiſtries and hangings. There is a Church of Canons called Saint Gaugericks, which was remouved from the Village of Haltre, lying thereabouts, and brought into this towne. There are alſo Fryers Cloiſters of the VVilliamites, Carmelites, Capuchines, and Ieſuites. There is alſo neere unto this towne a Nunnerie of S. Bernards order, called Roſtene.

There groweth in the Caſtlewick of Aelſt very good Barlie, which land is almoſt encompoſſed round about with the Scheld, and the Dender, and reacheth almoſt to the Gates of Gent, Oudenarde, and Dendermond: yea not farre from Dornick. This part according to the common Calculation hath 172 Villages under it, among which Steenhouſe is noted more for the princely title it beareth, and for the libertie of Banditoes, then for the riches thereof. Liedekerke is an ancient Caſtle, lying upon the Dender. Lombeke is a Vicountie. Among the aforeſaid number of Villages, are counted theſe fiue Barronies, to witt, Rode having 17 Villages under it, Boulare 16 Villages, Gaverie being a royaltie, with a ſtrong Caſtle in it, and 11 Villages, Zottegem 10 Villages, and Schoriſſe ſeuen. In the Church of Zottegem lyeth entombed, that famous Prince and Admirall, the Earle of Egmont, knowne aſwell for his excellent gifts of Nature, as for the braue victorie he obtained, againſt the French by Gravling, when he was Gouvernour of Flanders, and Knight of the golden Fleece; yet notwitſtanding in the time of the tyrranie of Duke d'Alba he was beheaded within Bruxells. Vnder Aelſt within the Baronie of Zottegem in the Village of Velſick, where there was found 200 Silver Meddales, two peeces of gould with this ſuperſcription: Severus Pius Auguſtus, a molten Image, a precious Onix-ſtone in which a Satyre and a Lyon was engraven, with diuerſe other antiquaries, and a Grenate of a great value.

Nienhoue is a ſmall towne, lying under the commaund of Aelſt: but is a juriſdiction of it ſelfe. It is ſeated upon the Dender, and hath a fine Abbey of Monkes belonging to it, of the Premonſtrates order, dedicated by Gerard Conſtable to the honour of Saint Cornelius Anno 1137. This towne belongeth to the houſe of Egmont. Nienhoue.

The Land of VVaes hath a very rich, and a fertill ſoile, lying a long by the Scheld-ſide, and is likewiſe watered with the river of Durma, whoſe head beginneth at the Village of VVinchell, and at Temſche falleth into the Scheld. This Land hath a Magiſtracie of ſeuen Aldermen, which continue allwaies. Within the Land of VVaes there are 23 Villages, S. Nicols is the chiefeſt of them all. Sinay had a very faire Abbey of Fryers in it, of Saint Bernards order, called Bauvveloo, which is now remouved into Gent. VVaes-Munſter had alſo an Abbey of Nunns of S. Victors order, which was remoued and new built within Dendermonde. Temſeke is a fine place, lying upon the Scheld, hath a faire and pleaſant Caſtle, with a fine Church in it, which Village formerly was the patrimony of Saint Amelberga. Rupelmond is ſeated upon the Scheld upon the mouth of the river of Rupell, having towne Priviledges, though it lyeth open and unwalled. This place was of great note, becauſe of a faire Royall Caſtle in it lying upon the Scheld; where the priſoners of the Earledome of Flanders were commonly kept, in the ſame manner, as thoſe of Brabant were in the Caſtle of Vilvoord. Here was borne that famous Mathematician, and Geographer Gerard Mercator, the ſecond Ptolomie of our age. The Land of VVaes.

The Land of Beveren. Betweene the Land of VValls, and the Scheld, lyeth the ſmall Land of Beveren, comprehending under it an ancient Caſtle, and foure Villages: here is alſo a Cloiſter of the VVilliamits Order.

Within the foure Precincts are foure townes, two walled as Hulſt and Axell, and two unwalled, namely Bouchaut, and Aſſenede. Hulſt is know by reaſon of the The 4. Precincts. ſtrong ſituation thereof, which in the yeere 1596. was beſieged, and taken in by the Cardinall Albertus Arch-Duke of Auſtria. Hulſt is the chiefe towne of this Hulſt. Precinct. The foure Precincts haue 30. Villages under them, which are very fruitfull for the bearing of wheate, and other graine, ſo that they may truely be called the Garner of Gent, and the places circumjacent. There is a Cloiſter in Hulſt, of S. Francis Order. Hulſt hath 12. Villages under it, Axell ſeuen, Aſſenede ſeuen, and Bouchaut three. Axell is very ſtrong, being under Axell. the Commaund of the Lords the States Generall of Aſſenede. the Vnited Provinces. Aſſenede hath a fine ancient Caſtle in it.

The Sas of Gent is a royall Fortreſſe, under the Commaund of the King of Spaigne, and lyeth as a Bulwarke to Gent. Within this tract of Land, there The Sas of Gent. were founded two Abbeys of Nunns, of S. Bernards order called Oſterloo, and Doriſell. Alſo by Axell is the Cloiſter Ter-Haghe of the ſame order, which is now remouved from thence & reedifyed within the Citie of Gent. Haſtingen lyeth within the Precinct of Hulſt, and is a towne with an ancient Caſtle upon the Schelde: neere unto it lyeth the Polderne of Namen ſo called from Iohn Earle of Namen, or Namurce, Lord of Sluyſe, the Sonne of Guy Earle of Flanders, who made the Sea-banke.

Ter Neuſe is alſo a prettie towne, wel fortified by the Lords the States of the Vnited Provinces, lying upon the Sea within the Precinct of Axell, very ſtrong by Ter Neuſe. nature, becauſe the Land and the Coaſt runneth out like a Noſe, or a point into the Sea, and euery twelue houres all the Land lying round about it, is ouer-flowne, and drownd: ſo that this is a very hard, and a difficult place for the ennemie to become Maſter of. In theſe parts, a long the Sea Coaſt and the Scheld ſide, lye many Forts and Schanſes.

The Schanſes belonging to the Lords the States are Liefkenshooke lying oppoſite to Lillo upon the Scheld. S. Anne by Hulſt, the Doole, Maurices, Philippine by Schanſes & Forts. Axell, and diuerſe others. The Forts under the Commaund of the King of Spaigne, are the Sas of Gent, the Fare ouergainſt Antvverpe, Borcht, S. Maries, the Pearle, Iſabella, Callo, Kieldrecht, S. Antonies, Calbeck, Tongherfort, VVindam, and Beckaf, all Schanſes lying within the Land of Bornhem, &c. ſo that this tract of Land is full of Schanſes, Forts, and Redoubts. For the defending, and freeing of the Flanders and Zeeland, being ennemies one to an other.

Hitherto wee haue deſcribed Emperiall Flanders: it reſteth now that we ſpeake ſome thing of the places in Flanders, which ſome Earles and Lords poſſeſſe, as their owne inheritance, without acknowledging of any man aboue them.

Dendermond is ſo called, becauſe it lyeth upon the Mouth of the Dender, where it falleth into the Scheld. Dender-mond. It is a fine Towne. The head of the Dender, beginneth in Haynaults, aboue a ſmall towne called Leuſe, and running by Aeth, Leſſen, Geersbergh, Ninove, and Aelſt, diſburdeneth himſelf into the Scheld at Dendermond. In this towne there is a collegiall Church, dedicated to the honour of the Virgin Marie. Here is alſo a farre double Cloiſter of Birgittins: which hath a large compaſſe, where Fryers, and Nunns in one Church ſay Maſſe together. There are alſo of late yeeres, come into it Auguſtine Fryers, and Capucines. There hath be a very ancient Caſtle in it, which now lyeth ruinous. There are made in Dendermond many fuſtians, and euery weeke there is a great Mercate kept in it, where great ſtore of Flax is ſold. The Caſtlewick and Land of Dendermond is very good, and fruitfull, and lyeth very commodiouſly by reaſon of the riuers of Scheld, Dender, and Durma. By this towne ſtands a Nunns Abbey, called Zvviveke of S. Bernards Order. This Land hath 15. Villages belonging to it, under which is Baſſero, where many ſhips are built. Laerne hath a Caſtle in it.

Next unto this Land of Tendermond lyeth an other The Land of Bornhem. ſmall peece of Land called Bornhem, on the other ſide of the Scheld upon Brabant ſide, hauing three Villages in it. Bornhem it ſelfe hath a Caſtle in it.

The Towne of Gersbergh built upon the Top of a Gersbergh. Hill, is of a great circuit. It was called ſo, becauſe that Baldvvyn, ſurnamed Montanus, bought this hill of a Gentleman named Gerard, about the yeere 1068. whereupon he founded this towne, which retayneth the name of the Owner to this day. This towne hath a faire Abbey of Monks in it, of S. Benedictus Order: famous for the reliques of the holy Martyr called Adrian of Nicomedia for which cauſe this towne is often called after the name of this Martyr. There is beſides in this towne a Cloiſter of Carmelites, and an other of S. Ieromes Order. There are alſo Springs, and Fountaines in it. Not farre from the towne, lyeth a Carthuſien Cloiſter, and upon the Dender, a rich Nunnerie of S. Bernards Order called Beau-pré, or great Beau-pré, to put a difference betweene it, and an other of the ſame name, lying upon the Riuer of Ley by Steegers: and thus much for Flanders.

The first Mapp and Description

OF THE

EARLEDOME OF HOLLAND.

The name & whence it is derived.

HOLLAND one of the noblest, and richest Earledomes in the World, was so called (as some affirme) from the abundance of Woods, which grew in it, as if one should say, Hout-land, that is, VVood-land, because this Countrie in ancient times was as a wilderness, overspred with woods: Others say, it tooke this name from the hollowness, lowness and moorishness thereof, and for that reason is named the Earledome of Holland: Some others againe fetch Holland from Hoy or Hay-land, because of the abundance of meddowes & Hay, which is made in it. But learned Iunius (which is most probable) sheweth an other reason, that Holland and Zealand were so called, from two Ilands in Denmarke: for out of these Northerne Regiõs, came (as Swarmes) those Infidells and Pagans, which were the bane, and destruction of all Europe, and overspreading Holland & Zealand, at last after many warres, overcame & mastered the Inhabitants, and withall altered their ancient names, which the Romans feared, and called them after the names of those Ilelands from whence they came. This opinion also is confirmed by many other Learned men, to wit, VVilhelmus Heda, Petrus Nannius, Iohn vander Does, Lord of Noordvvick, Petrus Scriverius, and diverse other Authours, to whose judgment wee willingly submitt our selues.

Holland made an Earledome.

Holland then was first made an Earledome, in the time of the Emperour Charles the Balde, who seing this Countrie greatly troubled, and spoiled by the Normands and Danes, created (Anno 863.) Theodoricus the yongest Sonne of Sigebert Prince of Aquitanie Earle thereof, whose eldest Brother VValgarus, was thẽ Earle of Teysterland, that is of Tiel, Bommell, Arckell, Heusden, Altena, Viana, Cuylenburg, Bueren, Leerdam, Asperen, Heuckelom, & so forward, as farre as the Old-Mase. This Theodoricus was by the said Emperour, enfeoffed into the possession of the whole Countrie of Holland, and a part of East-Friezland as farre as the Lauvvers and Dockum, that he might be the more able, and powerfull, to resist, and withstand the incursions & inroads of these Heathenish Danes and Normans, which dwelt then in Vtrecht from troubling and spoyling the Christians. How many Earles succeeded him afterward, till the daies of Floris Earle of Holland, would be here too long for us to relate.

Bounds.

We will now proceede to the Site of this famous Earledome: Holland then is bounded on the North, and West side with the maine Northerne Sea: On the South with the Maze, and Brabant, on the East partly with a Gulfe, or bosome of the Southerne Sea, & partly with the Bishoprick of Vtrecht, and the Dukedome of Gelderland. The chiefest Rivers which water this Countrie, are the Rhyne & the Maze, which spreading themselues into many branches and armes, chang their names in some places. And though Holland by nature is full of water, litle rivers and ditches, yet the Inhabitants thereof, not contenting themselues therewith, haue by their art and industrie, not onely lead the waters into the Streets of their Townes and Villages: but also may passe by boate, and transport their commodities by shipping (which is a great ease and benefit to them) from one towne to another, and so saue the charge of going by Land.

The nature of the ground.

Holland is a lowe, quaggie, and a spungy Earth, yea in some parts is drowned, and couvered with Meeres, which with diverse armes of the Sea and the Rhyne, make many small Iles: This loweness of the ground causeth them to make many bankes and high causies, to keepe the water & rivers in, which when the ditches & grounds are overflowne, then the water by dranes, wind-miles, and Sluces is conveyed, & disburned into the Sea, so that there is but little arrable land, & fewe woods in Holland, but instead thereof, they haue good and fatt Pastures, which feed an infinite number of Oxen and Cowes, which yeelds them abundance of Cheese and Butter.

Feens.

Now it is no more called Hout-land or VVood-land, but nature in lieu of the woods (which were there heretofore) hath giuen it Feens, where there are abundance of excellent Turff made for fyring. In the Downes by the Sea side, and in the lower grounds, there are great store of Conneis and Hares, in the pooles, plasches and standing waters, an infinite number of Ducks, Geese and other Waterfowle.

Fishe and trading.

The Sea & the Rivers yeeld as many kind of fishe, as any place in the World. Besides all this, Holland flourisheth in merchandize, as much as any Countrie in Europe, for they saile unto all the parts of the Earth, and the Merchants of Holland (besides the Chambers of the East, & West-Indian Companies and the Guinean and Greenelandish navigation) haue trading in all the quarters of the World, for there is not a haven, where any profitt is to be had, but they with their shipping and Merchandize finde it out.

The Temperature.

The aire notwithstanding the abundance of waters and moistness of the grounds, is sweet and good, caused by the wholsome winds, the saltness of the Sea, and the multitude of the Inhabitants. The Hollanders for the most part, aswell men as women are of a faire complexion, tall, and well made, shewing curtesie, humanitie and civility to euery one: at this day they are growne able wise and sharpwitted; so that the ancient proverbe Auris Batava, that is, a Hollandish eare, which signified, that they were downe right, plaine honest-meaning men without bitterness, and none of the subtilest, is nowe altered: for all manner of arts and occupations are invented and flourish in Holland, as well as in other places. The Hollandish women are exceeding faire, modest, & excellent Housewives, and loue their children dearely, keepe their houses, floores, scrine-works, kettles, potts, panns & tinne ditches so cleane and fine, that they shine like looking glasses.

The forme of Gouvernment.

The Gouvernment of Holland consists in the Knighthood, Gentrie and Townes. The Knighthood and Gentrie with those of the Townes represent the States of the whole Earledome, and those which are cited to all assemblies are these: The Lords of Bredenrode, of Asperen, of Schagen, of Duyvenvoord, of Assendelft, of VVyngaerd, of Matheneesse, of Poolgeest, of VVarmont, of Renenburg, of Noortvvick, of Besoyen, & of Aertsbergh.

The States of Holland.

The Cities and Townes, which are cited and send their Deputies to the Land-day, are first these chief-townes, namely Dordrecht, Haerlem, Delf, Leyden, Amsterdam, & Ter Goude. After these Rotterdam, Gorckom, Schiedam, Schoonhoven, and Briel: from South-Holland & from the North quarter of West-Friesland Alcmar, Hoorn, Enckhuysen, Edam, Munnickedam, Medenblick & Purmerent.

How they assemble.

The convocation or citation of the Knighthood, Gentrie, and townes of Holland and VVest-Friesland, is done by the Advocate of the same Province, who also in their assemblie maketh all the propositions, gathered the voices, and concludeth by the most voices. The States being mett with their Deputed Counsellours, ordinarily hold their residencie in the Hagh, and consult with the States Generall. This Citation happeneth commonly five or sixe times in a yeere, but extraordinarily so oft, as necessitie requires, and in this assembly they sit, and resolue upon that, which is most for the service and the safetie of the Land.

Deputed Counsellours.

The aboue said States depute for the execution of their resolutions, as also for the ordering of all daylie and accidentall causes, concerning the welfare of the Provinces, some persons amonge the Gentrie, and Magistrates of the townes as their Councell, which are bound unto them by oath.

Likewise they appoint also other of their Committies out of the Gentrie, and Townes for the furtherance, hearing, and closing up of the common accounts of the Countrie, and other speciall bussinesse, all with limited commissions and instructions, so that every one of these Counsellours and Committies are bound, and enjoyned to answere their actions before the Lords the States of Holland, and VVest-Friesland, as also the Counsellours of State, are obliged to doe the like before the States Generall. Touching the ordinarie processes & suits, aswell in causes Civill as Criminall, together with the gouvernment of the townes and villages in the Countries, we haue spoken thereof so much before in the Generall Description, as we thought good to informe, and giue satisfaction to the Reader, & therefore will now proceede to the devision of the Earledome of Holland: but before we will shutt up this point of Gouvernmēt, with the words of that laborious & judicious Historiographer Emanuell de Meeter, who though sometimes he got no thankes on both sides for his labour: yet in this point he can not be blamed, or corrected by any man, that is impartiall. His words in his twentith booke are these: so that the causes (sait he) aswell concerning the State, and revenewes of the Countries, as also the Policie and Iustice administred in the Townes & Countries, together with all causes in generall, hapning notwithstanding the warres, & the excessiue charge of them, are managed with as good order, gouvernance and equitie, as if the Countries enjoyed an absolute peace, which is knowne to all forraine Nations, and men of quality, which frequent these Countries, that they are gouverned in as good a forme with the administration of justice, as is found in any Kingdome, or well gouverned State: and which is worthy of observation, that all forraine Nations in the point of Trafficke, Commerce & Navigation, are more favoured and lesse charged, then the Inhabitants of the land themselues, which makes these Countries be the more frequented and inhabited by straungers.

The devision of Holland.

That part of this Earledome, which lyeth Southward (reaching from the Middle Rhyne which runneth through Leyden) to the Maze side, is called South-Holland, where the Ilands of the Vorne, & the Earledome of Zealand, lye Westward: From the Middle Rhyne Eastward, inhabit presently the Kennemers and VVest-Friezes, now commonly called North-Hollanders, who with both of them, as in a lap shuts in the Frisiabones or VVaterlanders, together with the Goyers, and all this tract, with the Ilands of Texel, VVieringe, Vlieland, Vrck on the one; and those of East, VVestvoorne, Coorendike, Peters-hill and some others: on the other side is called by the name of the Earledome of Holland, and therefore the whole-body of the firme land of Holland, is by Geographers devided into South-Holland, Rhynland, Kennemerland, VVest-Friesland, VVaterland and Goyland, being in circuit about 180. English miles, but for the breath thereof a man may travell through it in the space of sixe houres, where it is broadest: yea in some places by the Southerne Sea, the Ocean, and in Holland, it is not three miles broad: and yet nevertheless within so small a compasse comprehendeth (if ye count Muyden and Medenblick, which are now walled) one and thirtie walled Townes, which if ye add hereunto the Briell and Goede Reede, lying in the Iland of East and VVest-Voorne, there are in all 33. within this whole Earledome, namely, Dordrecht, Haerlem, Delf, Leyden, Amsterdam, Ter Goude, Rotterdam, Gorckom, Schiedam, Schoon-hoven, Briell, VVeesp, Naerden, Muyden, VVoerden, Oude-vvater, Iselsteine, Viana, Leerdam, Asperen, Heuckelom, VVorcum, Heusden, Geertruydenbergh, Sevenberge and Goe-ree. All which wee will comprehend and describe within the limits of South-Holland, and devide the whole Earledome into two parts, namely, into South & North-Holland, including within the first part, that which properly is called South-Holland, together with Kennemerland & Goyland, and under the second VVest-Friesland & VVaterland, in which last part, are seated these townes, Enckhuysen, Hoorne, Alcmaer, Edam, Monnickedam, Purmerend and Medenblick. Besides these walled Townes, Holland hath some other places, which the Brabanters call Liberties, which heretofore were walled, but now by the intestine troubles and other disasters either part of them, or wholly unwalled: enjoying nevertheless the priviledges & liberties, which they had when they were walled. In South-Holland are these, Nevvport, Vlarding and Gravesand; in North-Holland, Bevervick: besides, there are in all Holland aboue foure hundred villages, among which is counted S'Gravenhagh, which lies open, and putts downe many of the lesser townes in Holland. Whereof we will speake more at large in his due place.

Cities & Townes.

Kennemerland.

Before we end this description, we will speake some thing of the Kennemers, come (as is thought) from the Latine word Caninefates, that is, Conney-Eaters. The Kennemers tooke their name from the river Kinheym, which by a place now called Crammendam fell into the Sea. Haerlem is the chiefe towne thereof; but whereas some suppose, that it should haue reached no further then from Catvvick to the spring which runneth through, & under the Churchyard of Haerlem, learned Adrean Iunius holds it for an untruth, and mainteyneth, that Kinheymeria or Kennemer-land, extended it selfe, as farre as Alcmar; seing that Heemskerck lying in the midst thereof, can shewe yet to this day a hillock, upon which the Earles of Holland had wont to be created Lords of Kennemer-land.

Some deriue the name of Goyland from the Cauchi, who were formerly so called hereabouts & this Countrie Cauch-land, which afterward changed this name into Goyland. But Iunius and some others with him, are of the opinion, that the Emperour Otho the First, gaue heretofore this tract of land unto Goedela or Goele, the Abbesse of the Cloister of Altena, who in remembrance thereof honored it with her owne name, and that this Cloister afterwards in recognition of some benefit was giuen unto the Earle of Holland: whether it were so or noe, we leaue it to the Iudgement of the Iudious reader.

The ſecond Mapp and Deſcription

OF

HOLLANDT,

Contayning the ſituation of DELF-LAND, SCHIELAND, and the Circumjacent ILANDS, as the VOORNE, Vpper FLACKEY, GOEREE, and others.

THE moſt Southerne part of Holland, comprehendeth chiefely in it, thoſe Lands, which are encompaſſed with the Maze, or thoſe whereupon it beateth, ſo that the courſe thereof, maketh here & there diverſe Ilãds: for which cauſe the chiefeſt Countrie, is called Maſe-land, as that part alſo which is environed with the Rhyne, is called in Dutch, or in the Netherlandiſh tongue Rhyn-land.

How the ſituation lay in ancient times Plinie (in his 4. booke de Natur. Hiſtor. Cap. 15.) deſcribeth moſt liuely & exactly as it were with a pencill, his words are theſe in effect: Vpon the Rhyne it ſelf about 900. paces in length, lye the famous Ilãds of the Batavians, Frizes, Chauci, Friſiaboni, Sturii, and Marſatii, namely, betvveene the Heil, and the Vlie, vvhere Northvvard he falleth into a Meere and VVeſtvvard into the Maſe, retayning ſtill in the midſt of this confluence of vvaters, a reaſonable great Riuer, called after his ovvne name. By which words it appeareth plainely, that all theſe people, which inhabited betweene the Mouth of the Maſe, and the Rhyne, where the VVhael runneth, this Authour nameth firſt the Batavians, which are the Hollanders: for there is now no more remembrance left of that name; but onely two places in Gelderland, which are called the Vpper, and Nether Betovve: where he ſaith, that the Rhyne falleth into the Maſe, is to be underſtood of the uppermoſt part, where receiving the Wael, and looſing the name of the Rhyne, falleth downe beyond the Briell, and there diſchargeth himſelf into the North-Sea: ſo that the ſame, which he calleth Helĩũ is the Weſterne, and that which he nameth Flevum or the Vlie, is the Eaſterne mouth of the Rhyne. Of this mouth then of the Rhyne formerly called Helium, there are yet ſome remnants left in the names of Hellevoets-Sluys, and Breheel, or Brehil, is a much to ſay, as Breede-Heel, that is Broad-Heil. Theſe ſmall Ilands, which at this day lye about the Mouth of the Maſe, cannot be better deſcribed, then they were by Plinie in ancient times, who ſimply called them the Ilands of the Batavians. But if that be true, which is mentioned in an other place, namely, that the Schelde (as Iulius Cæſar withneſſeth in his 4. booke of the Gallike warrs) ſhould fall into the Maſe, then is it manifeſt by all reaſon, that the Ilands of Goeree, Voorne, Beyerland, and others, were all encompaſſed in old times by the riuers of the Schelde, Maſe, Meruvve, and the Yſell, which runneth by Ter Goude.

The Ilands called Goeree, and Voorne, lye upon the Sea with high downes to ſtopp the violence thereof, as they doe upon the other Coaſt of Holland. Goeree is alſo a towne lying in this Iland, ſo that Goeree is both a Towne, and an Iland belonging to Hollandt, though it is counted the laſt of the 32. townes of Holland; as is ſeene in the armes of the Townes of Holland, in a Glaſſe-windowe in the great Church at the Haghe. Now it lyeth unwalled, & as a pray to ſouldiers in the time of troubles, and warrs. The Inhabitants liue here (as they doe in diuers others places of Holland) by Knitting of Netts for navigation, and fiſhing. The name of this towne was giuen it from the good ſituation of the Haven, ſo that Goeree, is as much to ſay, as a Good-roade or Haven for Shipping to ride in.

The Iland of the Voorne, in the ancient Chronicles of Holland is writt after diuers manners, in ſome bookes Voervotzee, in others Voornerzee, and Voornotzee, which is the beſt, becauſe the ſillable Ee, or Oe, betokeneth an Iland. Within this Iland (beſides the Villages) there are three chiefe place, to wit, the Briell, Geervliet, & Heenvliet; unto theſe may be added Hellevoet-Sluys, for the goodneſſe, & deepneſſe of the Havẽ. The Iland of Voorne.

It ſeemeth the Briell tooke the name, from the broad outlet of water: For on the right ſide of it, the Maſe hauing receiued the Rhyne into it, falleth into the maine Sea: ſo that the Briell, ſignifieth nothing but (as is ſaid) Brehiel, or a broad riuer: though the word hiel ſignifieth a hill, or a downe, as Megerſ-hill, Peters-hill, Ruygen-hill, and other places. This towne is ſeated on the Eaſtſide of the Iland of Eaſt-Voorne. The Inhabitans liue moſt upon fiſhing, and taking of herings, as likewiſe thoſe of Geervliet, and Heenvliet, which two ſmall townes, enioy a certaine royall benefice. Somerſdycke and Oelkenſplaet, lye oppoſite againſt them not farre frõ Zeeland. Bommene is likewiſe counted under Holland, though it lye in the Land of Schouvven, there is a good fare and a paſſage ouer into the Iland of Vpper Flackey, and from thence to Hellevoet-Sluys. In the Iland of the Voorne lyeth the Lordſhip of Putten, where the Maſe parteth Beyerland frõ the Land of Stryen, which heretofore had each of thẽ a Free Lord. Ouer againſt theſe places lyeth Yſelmond ſo called from the Yſell, which from Yſelſteyne running by Ter-Goude falleth into the Maſe againſt it: More to the Weſtward lye two places called Portegael, and Roon. This is made an Iland, and is very fruitfull, having not onely fatt paſture, but alſo good arrable Land, upon which wheate, and other fruit growe. There is alſo abundance of Methegline made in this Iland.

Geervliet, Heenvliet Somerſdyck Oelkenſplaet, Bommene, Putten, Beyerland Stryen, Iſelmund.

Paſſing from hence ouer the Maſe, the firſt that we meete with is Maſeland-Sluys, which is a Village with as many houſes in it, as a ſmall towne, and is rich, by reaſon of the many fiſhers, which dwell there; and a litle within the Land is Maſeland it ſelfe. This tract of land hath manie Villages, as alſo one of the anienteſt townes of Holland, called Vlaerding, lying upon the Mouth of the Mervve. Vlaerding was once walled, & had a Caſtle in it, which was waſht away with the Maſe. Hermannus Contractus mentioneth the antiquitie of this towne, who hath writtẽ of the name of the townes of Holland in particular. For he calleth Earle Theodorick the fourth Marqueſſe of Flaerding. Some thinke the right name is Verdinger, becauſe there was heretofore a Tolehouſe, where ſhippers and Merchants uſed to cheapen their cuſtome as neere as they could, and therefore was called ſo from the Dutch word dingẽen, which ſignifieth to cheapen or indent.

The Chronicles of Holland mention, that Old Vlaerding ſtood heretofore, where nowe the Maſe falleth into the Sea, where there was a Caſtle built by ſome Gyants, which came out of England.

Graveſand. Along this coaſt by the Sea ſide, there are downes, as in other parts of Holland. By the downes lyeth Graveſand, which formerlie was a fine towne, fortified with walls with a good hauen, and a high ſteeple, which is as a Pharus, or Sea marke for Mariners. This was heretofore the Pallace, and Court of the Earles of Holland, till Guilhelmus Emperour of Rome, remouved it to the Hagh. There are yet ſome ruines left of the ancient Court, & the Court-Lane and other places giue ſufficient teſtimonie of the antiquitie thereof. Here was alſo a Cloiſter of Regular Monks. Graveſand is much noted for the delicate greene cheeſe which is made there. The ſoile is very fruitfull, and beareth excellent wheate.

Schieland. Next unto Maſeland, lyeth Schieland ſo called from the river Schie, whence alſo Schiedam, a towne not farre from Vlaerding taketh the name, having a large and a commodious haven. This place got the name, and Priviledge of a towne in the yeere 1274, and was called then Nieuvendam till the yeere 1300, but after was named Schiedam. The Inhabitants are moſt fiſhers, and knitters of Netts, and liue by taking of herings.

Schiedam.

Rotterdam. Next unto this lyes Delfs-haven, and then the merchant towne of Rotterdam, ſo called from the river Rotte, which runneth through the Citie. It was founded about 300 yeeres agoe, as Adrian Iunius of Hoorne witneſſeth in his Batavia, whence it appeareth evidently, that thoſe which fetch the name of this towne from Rotarius King of France, and that it was built in the yeere of our Lord 42, or Anno 778 (as ſome write) are much deceiued. This is a very populous, and a rich towne, having great trading by ſea, where there is good beere brued, which is vented in the other townes of Holland and in the army: Vpon the one ſide of it, there is a fine hauen, made with blew free-ſtone: It is famous for that learned man, which was borne and liued in it, to wit Eraſmus of Rotterdam, in remembrance of whome the Magiſtrats haue ſett up a braſen ſtatute in the Market place, bigger then a man, with a booke in his hand.

Ter Goude. Ter Goude lyeth about nine Engliſh miles further then Rotterdam, and is ſo named (as Iunius ſuppoſeth) from the Gou, which lyeth neere it, others take it from the river Gouvv, which runneth through this towne.

Ter Goude lyeth upon the Yſell, not upon the river ſo called, which runneth through Gelderland into the Southerne Sea; but upon that, which comming by Vtrecht, Iſelſteyne, Montfoort, and Oudevvater, runneth through the midſt of the ſaid towne. It is worthy of obſervation that there is ſcarce a houſe in this towne, but the ſaid river runneth under it. Iohannes Bloſius was once Lord of it, who was borne of the onely daughter of Iohn of Haynault, who was brother unto VVilliam, Earle of Holland and Haynault: whoſe huſband was Lodovicus Bloſius. This Bloſius afterward having married the Ducheſſe Machtelt of Gelderland, wrote himſelf Duke of Gelders, and Anno 1372 made the Inhabitants of Ter Goude free from paying of all Cuſtomes and toles in Gelderland.

The other townes here abouts are Delft, and the Haghe, which is unwalled. Delft is ſo called from the Delft. ſmall river of Delfe, which runneth from the Hagh through this Citie, and ſo into the Schie to Delfshauen. This towne was built 500 yeeres agoe, by Godfrey the Crookback, Duke of Lorreyne, who was a provident and a vaillant Prince. At Delft was borne that Arch-Heritick David George. Here alſo was VVilliam Prince of Orang of famous memorie piſtoled, where he and Prince Maurice his Sonne lye entombed in the new Church of Delft, and where alſo the illuſtrious Prince of Orange Henry Frederick Count of Naſſau, that now is, was borne. To Delft belongeth Delfshaven (which was built after Delft was burnt Anno 1536) and lyeth upon the ſide of the Maſe.

The Hagh is one of the braueſt, and richeſt Villages in Chriſtendome, as ſome fooliſhly imagine, Haegh. was ſo named from Heilich-buſch, or Hagh-buſch, that is, Holy wood, or Hedg-vvood. But Iunius giueth a better reaſon, and ſheweth it was ſo called from the many hath-thorne hedge (for Hagh in Dutch is a hedge) which grew there abouts. The great Court, & brood poole, which is in it, was built and made by VVilliam Earle of Holland, who was Emperour of Rome. They haue now encompaſſed it with a large moate, and haue enlarged it with abundance of fine houſes and diverſe ſtreets.

About an Engliſh mile and a halfe from it, lyeth the Scheveling Village of Scheveling upon the Sea ſide, whoſe Church about 100 yeere ſince was waſhed, and eaten away by the Sea, which begins againe to beate upon the new Church. Anno 1570 there was ſixtie houſes drowned by a ſtorme, and a ſpring floude; whence appeareth what a dangerous Coaſt this is.

The deſcription of part of the Townes
OF SOUTH-HOLLAND.

MANY writers are of the opinion, that the Dortish, Alblaſſer, and Crimper-wards, with other ſmall Iles, lying betweene the Maze, the Rhene & the Leck, borrowe this name Ward from the Engliſh & Saxons: ſo that Keyſers-ward, Bommeler-ward and others, were called Wards; becauſe they were Ilands.

Dorts-ward. Bounds. The Dortishward lyeth betweene the Maze and the Kil, having the land of Stryen on the Weſt, Eaſt and South a large Lake, whereof that part of it, which lyeth next Geertruyden-bergh, is called the Bies-bos, a little lower lyeth the Hollands depth.

Bies-bos. The Biesbos is a large Lake, ſome 12 miles in length, and two in bredth. It was heretofore a lowe ground, where ſegges and flaggs grew, for which reaſon it was named the Bies-bos, or Flagg-wood: but in the time of Philip Duke of Burgundie, Earle of Holland, anno 1421, it was droun'd with a high ſpring-flood, and as it were turned into a Sea or a Lake, for at that time through a high water 72 Villages, two Caſtles, & many thouſands of people: Cattell and Sheepe were by this inundation overwhelmed and drouned, according to this:

Perdidit hoc diploma homines Armenta, Gregeſque.
Septuaginta duos pagos, & Florida rura.

Dortrecht. In the Dortish ward is ſeated that ancient famous Cittie of Dordrecht, or Durtrecht, a Maiden-towne, which was waſhed away from the firme land, by the ſaid ſpring-flood anno 1421. Adrian Iunius and ſome other Authours calls it Durdrecht, as if one ſhould ſay, the Law or right of Duretius: but others derives it more rightly from the River Dort, and trecht or drecht, that is, from a fare or a paſſage over, as Maſtricht which ſignifies a paſſage over the Meuſe, Vtrecht over the Rhene, Amſteldam from the River Amſtel, Roterdam from a damme over the Roote, &c. One may read of the river Dort not onely in the ancient monuments, but alſo in an old Map kept here in this Cittie, as that excellent writer Ianus Rutgerſius mentioneth. The ſame Authour writeth likewiſe, that there was a Village not farre from Dort, called Dorts-monde or Dorts-mouth, becauſe it lay upon the mouth of the River Dort, even as wee call alſo Yſelmonde, from the mouth of the Yſel, which was in the deluge aforeſaid drownd, when Dort was rent from the maine land. The antiquitie of this Cittie may be marked in that which Reginus Prumienſis relateth thereof anno 898. For Dort is one of the oldeſt and chiefeſt Citties of Holland, having that power and priviledge, that ſhee may ſtop & take toule of all wares and commodities, which came downe the ſtreames, till they ſould them, having bene once the ſtaple of wools and cloth, of timber for building of ſhipping and houſes, and is now the ſtaple of Rheniſh wines. In this Citty anno 1618, was held a Nationall Synode, convocated of many famous and excellent learned men out of the reformed Churches of Chriſtendome, who with one unanimous conſent, rejected and condemned out of the ſacred word of God, the five Pelagian hereſies of Iacobus Arminius, who attributed too much to the corrupt faculties of man, touching Free-will and foreſeene faith, derogated from the glorie of God in the worke of mans ſalvation, as appeareth by the Canons, & booke of the ſaid Synode. Not farre from Dort ſtandeth on the water ever ſince the 72 Villages periſhed, a peece of the ſtrong & ancient Caſtle of Merewede, whereby thoſe of Dort hold yet ſome rights and priveledges.

Geertuydenbergh. Having paſſed the Bies-bos on the Brabantiſh ſide, upon the left hand of the Merwe, lyes S. Geertruydenbergh, ſo named from S. Geertruyd, the daughter of Pipinus de Landeu, who was highſteward unto the King of France. She dying anno 664, is ſaid to have lived and converſed moſt in this place, and that this was her Inheritance, as letters from the Lady Hilſwid, Counteſſe of Stryen witneſſe, which lay by Dort, for the contents of her letters are theſe: I have added to the aforeſaid Church all my allodiall goods, lying within my land of Stryen, which the mighty King Zuendebolchus formerly had given, and chiefly to the Church of Stryen dedicated to our Lady. Alſo Geertruydenbergh, where the pious Matron Geertruyd lived when ſhee was in the body, who lived in a Cell, which the Godly Amandus conſecrated for her, beſides this the land of Gillezeel and Earle, the Caſtle of Sprundelheim, with all the appurtenances, as it lyeth upon the River Marbatte. The Hollanders, the Brabanders, and the Ennemie have had many blowes about this towne. It is now under the States Generall, and is well fortifyed. In the Bies-bos are taken abundance of Salmons, Shads & Sturgeon.

Alblaſſer-ward. Alblaſſer-ward is ſo called from the Village Alblas, neere unto Alblaſſer-dam lyes Souburch. This ward lyeth on the left ſide of the Leck, which is ſuppoſed to have bene an arme of the Rhene. But Ortelius ſearching neerer into the words of Tacitus, where he ſpeaketh of Corbulus ſaith, that the Leck was a ditch, which the Romans cutt betweene the Rhene & the Maze, without comming into the Sea, to paſſe from the one to the other.

Schoon-hoven. Schoonhoven lying upon the left ſide of the Leck, is ſo called from the fine gardens and Orchards, which was about it. Here they take great ſtore of Saulmon in the Leck. It is verely thought, that this towne was built out of the ruins of Nieuport. The Lord of this towne in ancient times was John of Haynault, brother unto William Earle of Holland, he had an onely daughter called Joane, who marrying with a French Earle, called Lewes de Bloïs. Schoonhoven fell to the houſe of Bloïs, ſo that to this day all that tract of land, which lyeth betweene Ter Goude and Schoonhoven, was called the land of Bloïs. This towne was built in the yeare 1303, with a Caſtle, but was not then walled, for John of Haynault firſt made a brick-wall about it, not farre from this towne lyeth the Caſtle of Hartsberg. And under Schoonhoven are theſe Villages, namely, Cabau, Polsbroeck, Berghambacht, Amerſtol, Stolwick, where abundance of excellent cheeſe is made, Bourepas, Berkon Vlüt, Iaerſvelt, Crimpen, Leckerkerck and Ouwerkerck.

Nieuport. Nieuport lying on the other ſide of the Leck, ſeemes to have bene in ancient times a fine and a populous towne, but now as other gallant townes is much decayed, and become a Village.

Oudewater. Oudewater is a town not farre from Yſelſteyn, well fortifyed with a wall and a moate: what this towne hath endured by the Spanyards, the Hiſtories can witneſſe.

Yſelſteyn. A litle further into the Countrie lyeth Yſelſteyn, ſo named from the River Yſel, it belonged once unto the Earle of Buren, but now unto the preſent Prince of Orange.

Viana. Viana is a pretty town, lying in a quadrant upon the Leck, and belongeth to the noble and ancient houſe of Brederoode. It hath an exceeding faire Caſtle, though not ſtrong, with a moſt pleaſant Orchard, and a garden belonging to it, & a fine grove of loftie trees ſtanding by it, full of fine Walkes. Unto this Lordſhip of Viana (which is a free towne unto which men in debt may fly for refuge) are theſe Villages, Heykoop, Boeykoop, Lexmonde, Laeckervelt, Achthoven, Meerkerck, Ameyde and Thienhoven.

Some two or three dutch miles beneath Viana in the Countrie lye Leerdam, Heuckelem and Aſperen, all heretofore belonging to the Lords of Arckell, who were alſo borne Lords of Goricom, and whereof wee will firſt ſpeake.

Goricom. Goricom is a fine towne, walled firſt by Iohn of Arckel, who built a faire Caſtle in it an. 1230. William of Bavaria Earle of Holland deſtroyed it afterward, and laid it levell with the ground. Unto Goricom belong theſe Villages, as upper and lower Blockland, Schelluynen, Herner, Nieuland, Spijck, Kedichem, Oofterwijck, Middelkoop, Leerbroeck, and ſome others.

Leerdam. Leerdam, or rather Lingerdam, becauſe it lyeth upon the Linge, was once under the territoire of Arcklens, till by the marriage of Maria of Arcklens, it came to the Earle of Egmond, and afterward to the houſe of Buren, and now appertaineth as Earle of Buren to the Prince of Orange.

Heuckelom and Aſperen. Heuckelom lyeth upon the Linge, having bene au ancient towne, which had heretofore the houſe of Arcklens for her Lord: but Aſperen, and that by marriage fell afterward to the houſe of Boetzelaer, who came out of Cleave-land.

Heuſden. Over againſt Goricom on Brabants ſide lyes the land of Altena, Worcum & Heuſden: Heuſden is a fine ſtrong town, a brave Frontier, beſett with a ſtrong Garriſon.

VVorcum. Worcum is ſeated upon the confluence of the Maze & the Wale, & is under the commaund of the Lords the States of the United Netherlands, beyond Worcum lyeth the ſtrong Caſtle of Loveſteyn, upon a point on the other ſide of the Maze.

Altena. Altena ſtretcheth out large on all ſides upon the Brabantiſh ſide, & was heretofore a fee-ſimple belonging to the Duke of Cleve, under the land of Altena & Worcum are firſt Loveſteyn, Almkerck, Gyſen, Roſwick, Neereyl, Opeyl, Wtwick, Warthuyſen, Emmichoven, Sleeſwijck, Hil and others.

The Villages appertaining to the juriſdiction of Heuſden, are Herp, Hedichuyſen, Vlymen, Engelen, Cuyck, Onſſenoort, Outheuſden, Elſhout, Bardwick, Doveren, Drongelen, Genderen, Babiloman-broock, Huſleen, Alburgh, Wijck, Veen, Eeten and Meuwen.

Sevenbergen. Next followes Sevenbergen, which lyes on the left hand of Breda, and on the right hand of Geertruydenbergh. It is not ſo named from ſeven Berghs or Hills, but from ſeven ſmall Havens or Creekes, which run into it, which lay very commodious for Shippers to put into, to ſave their ſhips and goods: Sevenbergen was once under the commaund of the land of Stryen.

It is memorable, that we reade in ancient Hiſtories, how that before the great inundation anno 1421 mentioned before, there was a Sea-banke, which went from the land of Stryen to Sevenbergh, which now is overflowne with a Sea, and is now called the Hollands depth.

Clundert and VVilliam-ſtadt. Neere unto Sevenbergen lyeth the Iland of the Clundert, the towne being moſt ſtrongly fortifyed: as alſo William-ſtadt, called Williams-towne, after the name of William Prince of Orange, of famous memorie, who alſo built it.

The Map of HOLLAND,
VVherein is the discription of Rhijn-land, Amstel-land, &c.

RHYN-LAND, which belongeth to Holland, tooke this name from the Rhene, becauſe this part of Holland was watered with the Rhene, which wee before have proved out of Plinie, to wit, that the Iland of the Kennemers, Batavians, Frizes and others, lay betweene the Heil, that is, the mouth of the Maze & the Vlie, which was the utmoſt mouth of the Rhene. For the Rhene had in the midſt a broad ditch, which bare the name of the Rhene it ſelfe: for the Rhene about Lobec divided himſelfe into 2 branches, the one of them ran through Druſius his fare into the Yſel, and the other on the further ſide of Arnhen, the chiefe towne of Gelderland, from thence to the towne of Rhene, and ſo to Wijck to Duerſtede, & there looſing hie name, is called the Leck. But in old times the Rhene had wont to take his courſe on the right hand of Utrecht, as we can ſhew to this day, and comming to Utrecht, divided himſelf againe into two parts, the one running by Weeſp, a towne in Goyland, and ſo to Muyen diſchargeth himſelfe at laſt into the Southerne Sea, this braunch is called the Vecht, the other paſſing by Woerden and Alphen, and ſo to Leyden, kept the name of the old Rhene, but before he came to Leyden, he divided himſelfe into three Rivers, namely, the Man, the Zyl, and the Douze, which falls all into the Leydens Meere, and paſſing by Leyden, the Rhene runneth forward to Rhyns-burgh, & from thence towards Catwick, and ſo comming into the Downes ſtops, and makes a kinde of a ſtanding poole; ſo that he can not finde the old ditch or cutt, which had wont to lead him into the maine Sea, by the houſe of Brittaine, and thus the Rhene beneath Leyden, beyond Rhijnsburgh taketh his courſe towards Harlem, ſeemes to have made diverſe brookes, and to have ſought a new way into the Sea, the chiefeſt where of was at Egmond upon the Sea, as we may prove out of Plinie. Hence followes that the Coninefates, or Connie-eaters, now called Kennemers, had here their lands, and habitation: For Reginus witneſſeth alſo, that the Kennemers had a haven upon the Sea-coaſt, where the Normans, which had wont to invade Kennemer, landed for he ſaith in plaine termes, an. 804, the Normans came from Denmarke to Kinhem, &c.

VVoerden. In this Countrie (which comprehendeth alſo the Kennemers) lye diverſe townes and Lordſhips, as firſt Woerden, where the Rhene ran through to Utrecht: it is a towne well compact, adorned with a faire Caſtle, now a receptacle for old & maimed Souldiers penſioners. Once Woerden was under the commaund of Utrecht, and afterward came to Erick Duke of Brunſwick. The Villages belonging to Woerden, are Bodegrave, Woerder-Indijck and Te-koop. Further towards Leyden, ye have Alphen and Poelgeeſt, for in the opinion of the learned, Alphen vvas that place, vvhich Anthonine the Authour of the booke entituled Ilermar, calleth this Caſtra Albimana, making it to lye betvveene Utrecht and Leyden, though it is corruptly called in Latine Albimams, and that the Romans built there a Caſtle, called after the name of one o their chieftaines Albinus is very probable. Next unto Alphen lyes the houſe of Poelgeeſt, where there was heretofore a ſtrong Caſtle, but anno 1448 was by the civill warrs deſtroyed, and razed to the ground.

Next comes to your vew the famous Citty of Ley- Leyden. den, called by Ptolomee in the opinion of all learned men, Lugdunum Batavorum, as appeareth by diverſe Statua's, ancient engraven Stones, old peeces of coine, and other monuments, which have bene digged out of the earth at Leyden, for Adrian Iunius witneſſeth, that it was named Lugdunum Batavorum, and adds here unto, that in Voorburg the old Caſtle of late an. 1624, upon the 7 of Iune, there was found a ſtone foure foote long, and two broade, in the preſence of Thomas Segethus, which wrote theſe words out of it, and ſent it to the famous Ioachimus Morſius, as an antiquity written in ſhort letters, which vvhere theſe in length.

Iovi Optimo Maximo Sarapi Iſidi Frugifero, Cæleſti Fortunæ bono evento Felicitati, Lari viali & Genio Loci. L. Lucretius Palatina (ſe tribu) Fauſtinianus. Centurio Legiones primæ, monumentum poſuit, & pro ſe ſuiſque in eam rem votum liberis conſecravit.

Leyden may truely be called the Netherlandiſh Athens, for it is a moſt famous Univerſity, which hath bred many learned men, as Iunius and Tremelius a Iew, who tranſlated the Latin Bible, with commentaries upon it. Here lived the famous Scaliger. Here lived once that eloquent Lipſius, before he turnd his coate, & wrot a pamphlet of the lying miracles of the Vrouwe van Scherpenheuvel, or the Lady Montaigue by Bruſſels to currie favour with the Arch-Duke Albertus, & the Infanta Iſabella, after he had left Leyden, to ſcrue himſelfe into the good opinion of the Papiſts.

This Citty in the yeare of our Lord 1573, was ſtreightly beſeiged by the Spaniards, who reduced the Citizens and Inhabitants to that extremity, that they were driven to eate Rats and Mice, leather, Doggs, leaves of trees, & ſuch like, ſo that a number of them were famiſhed, and dyed for hunger, the plague likewiſe being amongſt them. When the Ennemy had wrought over the moate, & was ready to lodge in the Bulwarke, and that this towne lay a bleeding, and was paſt all humaine reliefe: then the Lord for their deliverance muſters up the winds and the waters, the ſluces towards the Sea-ſide opened, and the Sea-banks cutt. The old Prince William of Naſſauw, Prince of Orange, of famous memorie, putting from Delph ſome Souldiers in boates and ſloops: when the water was broake in, and had overflowne all the Meddowes, went to relieve them, but the winde blew ſo high, and the waters ſo mightily encreaſed, that before he came, the Spaniards ſwame as ſo many drownd Mice, from redoubt to redoubt, from worke to worke, to ſave themſelves, and ſo on the third of October 1573. the Ennemy quitted this ſeige, and thus miraculouſly delivered: Juſt alſo upon the very ſame day of the yeare, as Prince Maurice relieved Bergen-op-zoom, when the Marqueſſe Spinola abandoned his ſeige anno 1622.

Villages. The adjacent Villages are Waſſenaer, Rhijnsburg, Catwijck on the Rhyne, Catwijck on the Sea, Noordwijck within Nordwick upon the Sea, Oſtgeeſt, Warmondt, Woorhout and others. The Lordſhips & Caſtles about Leyden are Poelgeeſt & Alphen, the houſe of Warmondt, Bouchorſt, Does, Swieten, Craneſteyn, Suydwijck, Engeſt, Roomburgh, Rooſenburgh, Torenvliet, Sonnevelt and Teilingen.

Haerlem. Haerlem was once the chiefe towne of the Kennemers, & before it was girt about with a wall, Balduyn of Haerlem governed it, who by Schagen was defeated by the Freczes. Haerlem is now one of the faireſt, richeſt, pleaſanteſt and ſtrongeſt townes of Holland, having as faire, and as ſtately a Church, as any towne in the Netherlands, in the midſt of it riſes up a heavy tower or ſteeple, which hath no other ſupport to reſt upon then the roofe of the Church, there hangs in it ſome ſilver Bells, which the Haerlemers after they had taken in Damiata, brought thither as a Trophie of their victorie. Through the midſt of the Citty runneth the River Sparre. Sparre. Printing was firſt invented at Haerlem. In the yeare 1572, it was beſeiged by land and by water, and after a long ſeige was betrayed by a Burgemaſter, and ſome Traitours within the towne, who covertly let the Spaniards in, who after entrance fell a maſſacring the Burgeſſes after they had promiſſed to give them quarter, and plundring the towne, & put a great many Burgers, Women & Children to the ſword: in this furie the Papiſts cryes out to the bloodie minded Souldiers, to tell them that they were Catholicks, thinking thereby to receive more favor from their hands, then the Proteſtants: the Spaniards anſwered them: that was good for their ſoules, but their bodies muſt dye for the King, and ſo went the way of all fleſh, Villages. aſwell as the Proteſtants. The Lordſhips & Villages are Bredenroode, Aſſenburgh, Heemskerck, the houſe of Marquet, Mereſteen, Foreſt, Reewijck, Velſen, Polenburgh, the houſe of Haerlem, Hemſtee and Beverwijck lyeth ſome two miles from Haerlem, in a pleaſant place, cloſſe by the river Y, where there are many houſes and gardens.

Sparendam. Sparendam lyeth on your right hand as ye goe to Amſterdam, a towne not belonging to Kenmer-land, but to Amſtel-land, which taketh the name from the river Amſtel, which runneth through it. Amſtel-land lyeth to the South-weſt of North-Holland, having Utrecht on the South, and on the Eaſt & North-eaſt-ſide Goyland.

Amſterdam. Amſterdam hath on the one ſide the River of Y, the land about it is mooriſh, hollow, ſpungie, having many quagmires and fenine grounds about it, out of which they make turfe for firing. The Cittie for this reaſon is built upon piles, and was called Amſterdam, from the River Amſtel. It is a moſt magnificent, rich, and a migy Citty, having a very faire haven, where diverſe timer at one tide a 1000 ſhips of all ſorts have bene ſeene to goe out and in, ſo truely ſaith one

Quod Tagus atque Hæmus vehit & Patolus in unum
Verè hunc, congeſtum dixeris eſſe locum.

What Tagus, Hæmus and Paſtolus beare,
You ſhall conjecture to be heapt up here.

This citty ſince the decay of Antwerpe hath mightily flouriſhed, and enlarged herſelfe with moſt ſtately, loftie and uniforme houſes and buildings, called the new towne, having large ſtreets, and broad waters betweene them, into which ſhips of a good burden may come. This Citty at this day beares a great ſway, becauſe they contribute ſo much money to the maintenance of the warrs, and when the States are driven to a hard pinch for want of money, as before the Bos and Maſtricht, they have freely lent them ſome, to pay both their Souldiers and Workemen. It is a Citty that hath a great trading now, as any one in the world, frequented by an infinite number of Marchants, which brings all vvares and commodities to it: as Engliſh, French, Italians, Portugals, Eaſterlings, Danes, Poles, Muſcovians, Turcks, Perſians, yea many Iewes, which are ſeene every day upon the exchange. This is briefly related by the Authour which hath publiſhed a booke in the commendation of Amſterdam, with thoſe dutch verſes.

Mijn Stuerman grijs van kop, die liever rijſt en ſinght
In 't bedde van de Zee, als in de veeren ſinckt, Mijn Coopmanſchappen voert naer alderley gheweſten,
Want waer dat water is, is voor my wat ten beſten.

Weeſp and Muyen are two miles from Amſterdam. VVeeſp. Muyen. Weeſp is environned with a wall, having the Vecht running upon the one ſide of which comes out of the Rhyne by Utrecht, & from thence diſburdeneth himſelfe into the Southerne Sea.

Naerden is the chiefe towne of Goyland, which Naerden. indeed ought to be called Goodland, it taketh it name from the Cloiſter of Goedela. This towne was once ruined by the Governour of Utrecht, ſprang from the houſe of Arcklens, but afterwards was rebuilt out of the old rubbige, and ruines thereof.

The third Map and Deſcription OF HOLLANDT.

North Holland.

THis third Map containeth North-Holland, in which not only the Kenemers inhabith; but alſo the VVeſt Friezes: for Tacitus calleth them Minores Friſij, in regard of thoſe, which dwelt beyond the Northerne parts of the Rhyne, and termed them Friſii Majores. Plinie nameth the VVeſt Friezes, Friſii in Rheno, and the other, Friſii trans Rhenum, or Trans-Rhenani.

The leſſer Friezes are now the North Hollanders, who were ſo called ſince the yeere 1303, in which time after a long warre, which they had with the Hollanders, they were conquered by Iohn of Haynault, Earle of Holland, ſo that they loſt then both there liberty, and name: yet to this day they had rather be called VVeſt Friezes, then North Hollanders, as may appeare by their publick acts and writings, in which they entitle themſelues VVeſt Friezes.

For the better underſtanding of the difference of the Friezes, we will here cite Plinies words is his fourth booke, and fifteenth Chapter. Vpon the Rhyne about 900 paces lyeth a famous Iland, vvhere the Batavians Kennemers, and Friezes, and other people inhabited betvveene the Heil, and the Vlie: for ſo were the mouth of the Rhyne called which Northward falleth into a Meere, and the mouth of the Maſe Weſtward. This place, & ſome other ſhew manifeſtly, that the leſſer Friezes, were ſeated upon the Rhyne: but thoſe which inhabited beyond the Rhyne dwelt in the Continent, which fronteth upon Germanie, which Plinie in his 25 booke, and third Chapter teſtifyeth in theſe words. In high Dutchland the armies of the Emperour Germanicus, being paſſed ouer the Rhyne, they found by the Sea ſide a fountaine of freſhe vvater, vvhen the Souldiers had drunke of it their teeth preſently fell out, but they found there an herbe, vvhich vvas a preſent remedie for it, called Britannicus, or ſcurvie graſſe, vvhich the Friezes ſhevveth them, vvhen the armies lay there.

Whence it appeareth plainely, that the Friezes, which inhabited beyond the Rhyne, were ſeated upon the firme land: ſo that it is manifeſt, that there were two ſorts of Friezes, namely, thoſe which dwelt in the Ilands, and the others in the firme land, which are now called VVeſt, and Eaſt Friezes.

VVeſt Friezes.

The VVeſt Friezes then, that we are here to ſpeake of, beginn at the end of the river called Kinhem, which runneth through Alcmar, where the bounds of the Kennemers end. For the towne of Alcmar formerly belonged to the Kennemerlanders: where they held a ſtrong garniſon againſt the VVeſt Friezes, who had continuall warres againſt the Hollanders, whereof a certaine Authour ſpeaketh thus: The Kennemers take their name from the river Kinne, which runneth by Alcmar, betvveene Nuburch, and Medenburch, and parteth Holland from Friezland, for Kennemerland is North Holland, whoſe townes are Haerlem, Bevervvick, and Alcmar, which fronterth upon the Province of Holland.

Alcmar.

Alcmar ſeemeth to be ſo named from the many Meeres, which lye about it, as if one ſhould ſay All-Meeres. Now at this day many of them are drawne dry, and made good land, the chiefeſt of them is the Bemſter, which a few yeeres a goe upon the great charge of the citizens of Amſterdam, was drawne dry, and made land, and now is adorned with as fine trees, ponds, and Gentlemens houſes, as in any place in the world.

About three Engliſh miles from Antvverpe, beſides VVarmenhuyſen, which is a fine Village, layeth a towne called Verone, or Vrone, which as Iunius witneſſeth, was heretofore the onely merchants towne of the VVeſt Friezes, but now is a heape of ſtones, whoſe ruines lie yet to be ſeene, betweene Coedike and Longdike. That the ſaid towne, and place lay very commodiouſly for the Weſt Friezes, to fall into Holland appeareth plainely, for in regard of their continuall ſtirrs and troubles, which they oftentimes raiſed, they were at laſt ouerthrowne, and deſtroyed by Iohn of Haynault, Earle of Holland, with expreſſe commaund, that this place ſhould be razed to the ground, and never built up againe; which Iunius teſtifieth in his hiſtorie of the yeere 1303, as alſo Vbbo Emmius in his calculation of time, with theſe wordes:

ECCE CADIT MATER FRISIA.

Enckhuyſen.

The chiefeſt towne of North-Holland, is now Enckhuyſen, which name (as is reported) came from houſes, which ſtood aboue in a rowe; ſo that Enckhuyſen is as much to ſay, as ſingle-houſes. It is nowe a fine populous towne, having good trading, well built, lying upon the Southerne Sea. Beſides there Merchandiſes, which they tranſport into other Countries beyond Sea, they haue there great ſtore of Saltpanns. The Countrie lying about it, was heretofore called Drechterland, as appeareth by the ancient Chronicle of Holland written in verſe. This name came from a Fare, or paſſage ouer the water into Eaſt Friezland; ſo that all the townes in Netherland, ending in tricht, dricht, or drecht betooken a fare, or a paſſage ouer, as appeareth by theſe townes, Maeſtricht, Vtrecht, Dordrecht, Svvyndrecht, and other townes. Of this Drechterland the ſaith Chronicle ſpeaketh thus in the yeere 1155.

Alſmen elf hondert las Ende vijf ende vijftigh onſes Heeren Iaer
Quamen met Oorlogen ſvvaer
De Vrieſen van Drechterland,
En hebben gherooft en verbrandt,
Die van Kennemerland, &c.

That is:

Drechterland.

In the yeere of our Lord 1155 the Friezes came out of Drechterland, and by greeveous vvarres, burnt, & ſpoyled thoſe of Kennemerland.

This Countrie here abouts for the moſt part (as Weſt Friezland) is very mooriſh, and yet nevertheleſſe full of graſſe, and good feeding for Cattaile. Vnder Enckhuyſen are theſe Villages, namely, Grootenbroeck, Luttlebroeck, Bouvverſ-kerſpel, Hoogekerſpel, Hem, Veenhuyſen, and Broeckhaven.

Hoorne.

Next unto Enckhuyſen lyeth the towne of Hoorne, which is ſo named from a crooked Hoorne, which next unto Enckhuyſen is the chiefe towne of Weſt Friezland, for it is a populous towne, and hath good trading, and is well compacted with faire houſes, with broade ſtreetes, and a very good, and a commodious Haven, and the land lying about it is very fertill, with meddowes, and paſtures, where they feede a great many of Neate, which yeelds them great ſtore of Butter, and delicate Cheeſe. Vnder the juriſdiction of Hoorne, are theſe Villages, to wit, Avenhoorne, Beeth, Oudendike, VVoggenom, Nybixvvou, Hauvvaert, Berchout, Svvaech, Banejaert, Betlem, Oſtblocker, VVeſtblocker, Binnevvyſe, VVeſtvvoude, Schellinchout, VVydeneſſe, Ooſterbeck, Schaervvou, Groeſthuyſen, Opmeer, Spanbroeck, Opdam, Hensbroeck, &c. Hoorne lyeth ſome ſixe Engliſh Miles from Medenblick, which hath a very fine, and a convenient haven, belonging to it, with a very ſtrong Caſtle, which oftentimes hath defended the Inhabitants thereof, whereof Albert of Staden maketh mention, in the yeere 1255. The Villages which are under Medenblick are theſe, VVarnartshouſt, Oppertoes, Oſtvvoude, Sybkerſpel, Bennebroeck, Abbekerck, Lambertſchagen, Tvviſch, Hoogevvoude, Ertſvvoud, and Midvvoud. In the Village of Hooghvvoude, William Emperour of Rome, and Earle of Holland was ſlayne by the Friezes, as alſo 260. yeeres before that, by the Village of VVinckell, Arnald Earle of Hollandt, was likewiſe ſlaine in a battaile, which was fought in the yeere of our Lord 993. Beſides theſe Villages, there lieth an other called Schagen, which is almoſt as great as a towne. Likewiſe Old, and Nevv-Nierop. Vnto VVeſtfriezland alſo belong the Ilands, which are not fully expreſſed in this Map, as the Texel, Huyſ-duynen, Ter Schelling, VVieringen, Vlieland, and ſome others.

Medenblick.

Schagen.

After Medenblick follow the townes of Edam, and Purmerent. Some are of the opinion, that they doe not belong unto VVeſt-friezlandt, but rather to VVaterland. Plinie calleth them Friſiaboni. And though no other Authour but he uſeth this word, nevertheleſſe in the booke of the Romans ſuperſcriptions, this word is written thus, Friſiævoni, or Friſiaboni.

Wether they be written Friſævo or Friſiabo it matters not much, for they come both from the Dutch word VVoonen, to inhabite, for the Danes call VVoonen in their tongue Bo. Therefore wee often read in ancient writers, Chaibones, and Chaivones, alſo Ingevones, and Iſtevones.

Edam was formerly called Ydam, from the riuer Ye, it is a prettie fine rich towne, where there is abundãce of excellent Cheeſe made. The Originall of the name is ſhowne by the Village of Middelye, which lyeth hard by it, in the midſt of the Ye. Edam hath alſo a very commodious Haven, and many Ships Wharfs, for here they built many great ſhips.

Edam.

Some three Engliſh Mile from Edam, lyeth Monickedam, which is ſo called from a Meere, lying neere unto it, named Monicks-meere, ſo that it may fitly be called Monick-meerdam.

Monickedam.

Next unto it lyeth Purmerent, ſo named from the Purmer-meere, which now is drayed out, and made land. It is a hanſome towne, with a Caſtle in it. Heretofore was Lord of it VVilliam Eggard, who enioyed the ſame, by the favour of VVilliam the ſixth Earle of Holland, who was his Receiuer: After his deceaſe, the ſucceſſion fell to his Sonne, and after him to his ſiſter, and her husband the Lord of Zeyl, who ſould it to the Vicount of Montfoort, but afterward for the ſedition and uprore of his Succeſſours it was confiſcated by the Emperour Maximilian, who gaue it unto his Generall Balthazar Volkenſteyn of Auſtria, who ſould it to Count Iohn of Egmond.

Purmerent.

The Egmonds ruled ouer it ſo long, till the Admirall Egmond, who was beheaded, had all his living confiſcated by the King of Spaigne. Finally the Lords the States of the Vnited Netherlands, purchaſed it of Phillip the Sonne of the Admirall Egmond, who was ſlaine in a battaile in France, anno 1550. Vnder Purmerent are the Villages of Vlpedam and Neck. Cloſſe to this towne lyeth the Beemſter, whereof wee haue ſpoken before.

Touching the greatneſſe of the Southerne Sea, about Enckhuyſen how this Land was eaten away, ye may read in the eightith page of the booke entituled Diſcept. Chorogr. and therefore wee will not make any mention of it here.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE EARLEDOME OF ZEELAND.

Name.

THE Earledome of Zeeland, comprehendeth within it the Ilands (as ſome ſuppoſe) called heretofore Arboricas: but had this preſent name from the Danes, who tooke in firſt the Iland of VValcheren, and named the ſame Zeeland, after one of the chiefeſt Ilands of the Kingdome of Denmarck. Levinus Lemnius a famous Phyſician of Zierick-Zee giueth it this name from the Sea, and Land, which environneth it round about. But whether it be ſo or no, as alſo of the anciēt people & Inhabitants of theſe Ilands, how they were formerly ioyned to Flanders, ye may read in Guicciardin & Iohn Reygersberge, who wrote the Chronicle of Zeeland, and other learned men. Wee will proceede then to the bounds & limits thereof.

Bounds.

Zeeland on the Weſt, & Southweſt, (but principally on the North & Northweſt ſide) is bounded with the maine Sea, but well fenced with high downes, & hills of white ſand, which by nature are caſt up, to ſtopp the raging waues, and the violence thereof. Theſe lie in the Land of VValcheren and Schouwen, as being the two utmoſt Ilands of this Earledome. On the Eaſt, and North-Eaſt ſide, it is ſeparated from the Earledome of Hollandt, by diuerſe great channells, and outlets, as the Goerees-gat, Flacke, and Volckerack. On the South and South-Eaſt, lyeth the left arme or mouth of the Schelde, which parteth Brabant from Flanders, and deuideth himſelfe into two braunches. Where the Downes end in Walcheren and Schouwen, with all the other Ilands, there theſe Ilāds are encompaſſed with ſtrong high Sea-bankes, made with an infinite charge, ſo that the Sea cannot ouerflowe them. Emanuel de Meeter writeth in his ſixeteenth booke, that they are aboue fortie Dutch Miles about, and coſt aboue a hundred and fortie thouſand Pounds ſtarling: now what a great charge, they coſt daylie to maintaine them, againſt the raging of the Sea, which beateth continually upon them, the Reader may eaſely judge.

Fruitfulneſſe.

But this infinite charge, is doubble recompenced by the fruitfulneſſe of theſe Ilands: For there growes in them abundance of Barlie, Oates, and Rye, and exceeding fine Wheate: alſo Cabidg ſeed, wherewith they make Oyle for Lampes, and Sope for waſhing. Alſo there is great ſtore of good Woad for Dyers. In the Iland of Schouvven are fine Bay-trees, which grow there well, ſo that they beare ripe berries, which happens not in many other Countries. There growes alſo abundance of Phyſicall herbes in them. The paſtures are very fatt, and good; yea without the Sea-banks, upon the Marshes, there is good feeding for Cattaile. The Downes (as in Holland) are full of Connies, and in the Corne fieldes and ſtubble, are great ſtore of Hares, Partridges and Quailes. Touching the aire Levinus Lemnius a foreſaid ſpeaketh thus: I dare not (ſaith he) promiſſe too much in ſome places, of the ſvveetneſſe of the aire, for it is more unhealthfull, thē in the adiacent places, becauſe of the many foggs, and dampes, vvhich ariſe (eſpecially in Summer) out of the pooles, and Moorish grounds, as alſo by reaſon, that they ſet but a fevv trees in theſe Ilands: yet this benefite they haue, that they are ſeldome infected vvith the plague, but vvhen it is among the people, it is ſore and vehement, and vvill hardly ceaſe.

For this badneſſe of the aire, they haue a common proverbe, that they would wiſh they had the Zeelandiſh rents, and the Brabantiſh aire: yet nevertheleſſe in the Iland of Schouwē, the aire is reaſonable good.

Inhabitants.

The Inhabitants of theſe Ilands are acute, ſharp witted, and ſubtill, ſimpathizing ſomewhat of the nature of their Countrie. There are a great many of able Marriners, and ſkilfull Navigatours, which beſides there inlandiſh commodities, driue a great trade of Merchandiſes, and ſayle into all parts; they are good ſouldiers but chiefly by Sea, which doe their ennemies great harme.

Townes.

There are in Zeeland but ſixe walled townes, whoſe Deputies haue voices in the aſſembly of the Lords the States of this Countrie. Theſe are Middelburgh, Zierickzee, Ter Goes, Ter Tolen, Flishing, and Ter Veere. Beſides theſe there are alſo S. Martins-dyke, Armuyden, & Brouvvershaven; which are alſo prettie walled townes, and haue towne priviledges; but are not properly counted among the other townes. Roemers, or Reymerſvvall (which was held to be the ancienteſt towne of Zeeland) is for the moſt part now demantled, and is reckonned among the Villages, and yet hath a Burrow maſter, who with his fellowe Burgers goe oftentimes a catching of Muſles. There are about a hundred Villages in Zeeland, among which ſome of them are very faire, and great, as namely Domburg heretofore a towne, having towne priviledges. Hamſtede an ancient Baronie, Scherpeniſſe, Cruningen, Baerland, and diverſe others. The State of this Countrie conſiſts firſt of the nobility: and thoſe which repreſent the whole nobility, are theſe, namely the Marqueſſe vander Veere, and Fliſſing, which now belong to the Illuſtrious Frederick Henry Prince of Orang and Earle of Naſſau: and the ſix townes before named, lying therein, beginning from the Eaſterne Scheld, whoſe greateſt and chiefeſt Iland is the Iland of Schouvven.

Villages.

The Iland of Schouvven.

This Iland the Latiniſts call Schaldia from the riuer of Schelde, which ſeparateth it, from all the other Eaſterne Ilands of the Weſterne Schelde. It is in circuit (beſides the Polderns, joyning to it, called Dreyshore, Zonnemaer, Noortgouvven, and ſome others) about 21. Engliſh Miles, but if you ſhould goe along the Sea-banke, it is a Summers daves journey about.

Zierickzee.

The chiefe towne of it is Zirickzee, the greateſt, & principalleſt towne next unto Middlebourgh, of all Zeeland. It was built in the yeere of our Lord 849 by one Zyrigus, or Zirick, from whome it was ſo named. Others maintaine, that it ought to be called Ceres-zea, that is, the Goddeſſe of Corne, in regard of the abundance of graine, which groweth there. Others fetch it from that famous witch Circe, as Fliſhing from Vlyſſes, but this we leaue to the iudgment of the Reader. But ſure it is, that this is one of the ancienteſt townes of Zeeland, and heretofore flouriſhed greatly by trading, and Merchandize: but now the Inhabitants liue moſt upon fiſhing, and taking of herings. It is walled round about, and hath a very fine haven, which is an Engliſh mile and a halfe long. Among the publick edifices (for wee will paſſe by the others) the chiefe Church is called Lievens Munſter, having upon the Weſtſide of it a very faire tower, though not very high: but the intent was, to haue built a ſpire upon it, and to haue made it one of the higheſt ſteeples in the Netherlands, as the Moddell thereof demonſtrateth. The iuriſdiction of this towne, reacheth ouer all the circumjacent Villages, as farre as Duveland.

Lievens Munſter.

Brouwvers-haven. In this Iland of Schouwven lyeth alſo the towne of Brouwvershaven, which formerly was but a Village, but now is encompaſſed with a Wall.

The Villages within this Iland are Haemſted, Burgh, Noortvvell, with the Polderns annexed to them, as Dreyshore, Sonnemaer, Nortgouvve, and others.

Ter Tolen. The ſecond Iland lying upon the Eaſterne Schelde, is called the Iland of Ter Tolē, ſo named from the chiefe towne in it, which is not ſo great, as the Iland of Schouvven: though it be enlarged with Saint Martins dyke. The ancient towne of Tertol tooke his name from a certaine Tole, which was wont to be payd there unto the Earles of Zeeland, it lyeth ſome ſixe Engliſh Miles from Bergen op Zoom, & is of late fortifyed againſt the incurſions of the ennemie.

S. Martins-dyke. S. Martins-dyke is the ſecond walled Towne, and is a very fine and a pleaſant place, which with the Lordſhip of Scherpeniſſe belongeth to the Prince of Orange, Frederick Henry of Naſſavv.

In the ſame Iland they haue banked, in proceſſe of time, the two polderns of Poortfliet, namely, Voſſemaer, and Staveneſſe, each having a village in them, called after their owne names.

Duveland. Duveland is the third Iland of the Eaſterne Scheld, and is ſome ſixteene Engliſh Miles in compaſſe, and toke the name from the abundance of Doues, which are there. They haue ſeuen Villages in it, whereof theſe foure Nievverkerck, Ouvverkerck, Viane, and Capell are the chiefeſt.

Oreſand. The fourth, and laſt Iland of the Eaſterne Schelde is Oreſand, or (as ſome write) Moore-ſand, lying betweene Schouvven, and Northbeverland. And this in brief is that which concernes Zeeland upon the Eaſterne Schelde. Now followes Zeeland upon the Weſterne Scheld, in which lye the Ilands of VValcheren, Southbeverland, Northbeverland, and VVolfersdyke.

VValcherē. VValcheren is the chiefeſt Iland of Zeeland, not in regard of the greatneſſe, but for power, and riches, It is about 30. Engliſh Miles in circuit, and hath in it foure walled townes; namely. Middelburg, Fliſſingē, Ter Veere, and Armuyden. The ancienteſt townes as Domburg, Zouteland, and VVeſt-Capell, which though they are now but Villages, enioy nevertheleſſe Towne priviledges, and liberties.

Middelburg is the Metropolitan City of all Zeeland, and taketh her name from Middel, and Burgh, becauſe it lies as a Bourrough, or Caſtle in the midſt of VValcheren, and is ſeated in the height of 51. degrees, and 34. minutes, about an Engliſh Mile from Armuyden, and three from Fliſſing, and as farre from Ter Veere; being a great, faire, ſtrong, and a populous Citie with pleaſant ſtreets in it, adorned alſo with fine houſes, and many publick edifices, which for brevities ſake wee will here paſſe ouer. Middelburg

Flishing, or Vliſſingen tooke her name from a Vleſſe, or a Flagon, which (ſome ſay) S. VVillebrood, one of the firſt & chiefeſt Apoſtles of Zeeland, forgott there. It is a fine Sea towne, ſtrongly ſeated, and is indeed the Key of the whole land, which flouriſheth greatly by their Navigation, and the many priſes they bring in from their ennemies. Flishing.

Veere, otherwiſe called Camp-Veere, becauſe it was wont to be a paſſage to Campē (a great Village in Northbeverland, but is now periſhed by the Sea) and lyeth North-Eaſt upon the Sea ſhore, ſome three Engliſh Miles from Middelburgh, and Flishing. Anno 1358. it was walled, and in regard of the ſituation, & commodiouſneſſe of the Haven, was much frequented. Veere.

Armuyden was heretofore a fine Sea-port, which lyeth about a Mile from Middelburgh, but now is much decayed, becauſe the Haven is ſhutt up with a ſand, ſo that there is ſcarce a faire houſe left in it. The Villages in this Iland of VValcheren, (as is ſaid) are Domburgh, VVeſt-Cappel, Ramekens, Zuydborgh, and ſome others. Armuyden.

South-Beverland is the next Weſterne Scheldish Iland to VValcheren, hauing on the South ſide the Earledome of Flanders, which parteth the one from the other, with an arme of the Schelde called the Honte, or Hound. It was in former times ſome 60. Engliſh Miles about, but is now leſſe by reaſon it is eaten away with the Sea, and the beating of the Scheld upon it. Within this Iland lyeth the towne of Ter Goes, a fine pleaſant towne: the villages are theſe, Baerland, Cruyningē, Heyntienſ-zant, Elfsdyke, Bieſelungen, and Perſicke-Damme. Southbeverland. Goes.

Romerſvvall had wont to be the oldeſt towne of Zeeland, & layd in the midſt of Southbeverland, but is now decayed and lyes alone in an Iland of it ſelfe. Romerswall.

Northbeverland is the third Iland of the VVeſterne Schelde and was heretofore a pleaſant place, called the Paradiſe of Zeeland. But the high water anno 1532. ſpoyled it much. Colyns plate, and Catzhoeck, two fine new Villages, lye in it. Northbeverland.

VVolfersdyke is the ſmaleſt, and leaſt Iland of the VVeſterne Schelde, ſome nine Engliſh Miles in circuit, having two Villages in it, to wit, Tarmuyen, and Zabinge, and had formerly a litle towne in it called Piet. And thus much in briefe touching the deſcription of Zeeland, and the Ilands and Townes belonging to it. VVolfersdyke.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ERLEDOME OF ARTOIS.

THE Countrie of Artois, comprehended heretofore under Flanders, fell by Marriage to the crowne of France, and was created an Earledome, by S. Levves, who gaue it in fee ſimple to his brother, but 184, or (as ſome write) 170 yeeres after, came againe under the commaund of the Earles of Flanders, remayning an Earledome of it ſelfe, a part from the other Provinces. This hapned in the time of Levves the Wallon, who in the right of his Father, was Earle of Flanders, Nevers, and Retel, &c. and in the behalfe of his Mother, the Daughter of the laſt French Earle of this Countrie, was Earle of Burgundie and Artois, leaving behinde him one onely Daughter, which he had procreated of his wife the lady Margret, Duke Iohns daughter, the third of Brabant. We will not enter any further into this matter, but proceede to the deſcription of Artois, which on the Northſide is bounded with the river of Ley, and the New fare, or paſſage, which ſeparateth it from Emperiall Flanders: On the South, and the Weſt with Picardie, and on the Eaſt with Gallike Flanders.

Bounds.

Fertility.

Among other fruits of the Earth, which growe in it, there is abundance of fine wheate, which feedeth not onely Artois it ſelfe but the neighbouring Countries: it is a fine pleaſant Countrie, having a healthfull aire, and a fatt ſoile. Within the Earledome of Artois, there are nine Caſtlewicks, with diverſe Abbeys, and Cloiſters. They haue twelue walled townes, namely, Atrecht, or Arras, S. Omers Bethune, Arien, Bapaume, Heſdinfert, Renty (which rather is a Caſtle then a towne) S. Paul, Perne, Lillers, Baſſee, and Lens. Beſides theſe one may ſee the ruinous places of the two ſtrong demoliſhed townes of Heſdin, and Terouane. There are 54 Villages in number, whereof ſome of them were deſtroyed, and forſaken in the time of the French warrs. The States of Artois conſiſt of foure Members, to wit, of Prelates, the Chapiters and Churches, the Gentrie, and Townes.

Atrecht or Arras.

The Citie of Atrecht (called in Latine Atrebatum, in French Arras) was in the time of Iulius Cæſar, and euer ſince the Capitall Citie of theſe people, which he in his commentarie calleth Atrebates, which in theſe times are thoſe of Artois.

Atrecht lyeth a flight ſhoot from the river of Scarpe, 18 Engliſh miles from Douay, 24 from Dourlans, 15 from Camerick, and 42 from Amiens. It is a very large Citie devided into 2 parts, by a wall which ſeuereth them, the one part is called la Cité or Burrough, and belongeth to the Biſhop; the other, La ville, or towne, which is under her owne Lord. The Caſtle or Burrough is ſmall, but faire, ſtrong, and well fortifyed with Bulwarks, and Schances. In this part ſtandeth the ſumptuous, and faire Cathedrall Church of Our Lady, with an exceeding fine Librarie of all manner of bookes and manuſcripts, treating for the moſt part of Divinity. The firſt Biſhop of this Church was S. Vedaſtus in the yeere of our Lord 531. The Biſhop of Atrecht is both the Spirituall, and temporall Lord of this Burrough, acknowledging none aboue him but the Earle, who nominates him, & then he is confirmed by the Pope. La ville, or Towne is ſo great, and ſtrong by ſituation with Walles, Ramparts, Bulwarkes, a large and a deepe dry moate, that it is held invincible. There are in it very fine ſtreets, and a faire, and great Markett place. In this part ſtandeth S. Vaſts Abbey, which is counted the richeſt in all the Netherlands. The houſes in this towne are finely compacted together, and haue large and ſpacious cellars under them: ſo that in the time of warre, the Burgers can ſecure and hide their Wiues and Children in them from Canon ſhoot and Granadoes.

S. Vaſts Abbey.

Saint Omer in Guicciardine his opinion was ſo named from a holy man borne in Conſtance, who in his life time was Biſhop of Teruane, for whoſe Sanctitie of life, Aldroals a very rich and pious Lord, out of zeale gaue him a Caſtle called Sithiu, to built a Cloiſter of it, which this holy man doing, he founded there a braue Church, and called it after his owne name S. Omers, who afterward was advanced to a Biſhop. This Cloiſter and Church being finiſhed and built, S. Omer himſelfe, and afterward his Countrieman S. Bertin, with diverſe other Godly men, came and dwelt in it, whereby this place at laſt was ſo famous, and populous, that they made it a towne, and called it after the name of this holy man Saint Omer. He dying in the yeere of our Lord 695, three yeeres after Saint Bertin built the Abbey, which is called alſo after his name Saint Bertins Abbey. The towne of Saint Omer is ſeated upon the river Aa or Ha, twelue Engliſh miles from Arien, and as farre from Ardres. It is a ſtrong Frounter-towne againſt France, lying in a good ſoile, and having many Villages under it.

S. Omers.

By Saint Omer leyth a fine great Lake full of freſh ſprings, which riſes there out of the ground, and runs into the Ha. In the midſt of it there are diverſe ſmall Iles, and meddowes, where they feed ſheepe, and in that water they take fiſhe at all ſeaſons in the yeere.

A Lake.

About 15 miles from Arien, and ſome 10 miles from Lillers lyeth a fine and ſtrong towne, called Bethune, where they make great ſtore of excellent cheeſe, which is carryed from thence into other Countries.

Arien or Aire. Arien called by the Wallons Aire, lyeth upon the riuer of Ley, which runneth through the midst of it; about sixe Miles from Teruane. It is a prettie strong Towne with an old Castle, and built closse together.

Bapaume. About eighteene English Miles from Arras lyeth Bapaume, a small towne but strong, and that by reason of the situation thereof: for within 9. Miles of it, there is no freshe water, & therefore can hardly be besieged. It hath a strong Castle in it, and commaunds ouer a great tract of Land.

Renty. Renty is a small Castle with a faire Village; lying upon a running riuer, 15. Miles from Monstreul, and as farre from Hesdenfert. This is a very strong place, and honoured with the title of a Marquisate, belonging to the noble house of Crouy.

Hedsinfert. Hedsinfert is a towne lying upon the riuer of Canche, and by an other riuer called Blangis, which falleth into the Canche. It is as strongly situated, as any of the frontiers: is now onely called Hesdin, hauing a Gouvernour ouer it.

S. Paul. About 18. miles from S. Omer, and 24. from Arras lyeth S. Paul, which for a long time, hath bene honored with the title of a Countie, and hath a very large Commaund. France, and Burgundie contend to this day for the souveraignity thereof; but it is provisionally in the possession of Burgundie.

Perne. Perne is a fine place, belonging to the Countie of S. Paul, and lyeth fifteene miles from the said towne.

Lillers. Betweene Arien and Bethune lyeth Lillers a prettie towne.

La Bassee. Teruanen. La Bassee lyeth about 8. miles from Lens. Teruanen in former times was a strong, & an ancient towne, lying upon the head of the riuer Ley 9. English miles from S. Omer, but was heretofore destroyed by the Imperialists, and taken from the French.

The newe Ditch. Neere unto Teruane, Arien, and S. Omer, there is a Channell, which the Wallons call La fosse neufve, or new ditch. This (as is reported) was made by mens hands in the time of Earle Bauldvvin the good, to hinder the incursion of the Ennemie. Others say, it was made for a partition, betweene Artois and Flanders. It is a very long, but a narrow ditch, and is like an arme of the Sea: and yet lyeth 24. miles from it. Some maintaine, that heretofore the Sea came up to this place: becausse there haue bene offentimes found hereabouts peeces of Anckers, and other equipage belonging to shipping.

Among the Villages of Artois, there are some very faire ones, which haue yeerly Marts, and other Liberties, and these are Avennes le Comte lying 16. Miles from Arras, Aschicourt an English Mile and a halfe from this towne, S. Venant a fine Village, sixe Miles from Arien, Couriers, Blangis, Ligny, Auchy, and Pas, all of them great and fine Villages, lying upon the utmost Frontiers of France.

Those of Artois haue bene heretofore rich, & had great trading, but now by reason of the continuall warres with France, are impoverished and driuen to follow the Warrs, being good souldiers and able men both on foote, and horseback, very faithfull to their Lord, and Vtter ennemies to the French. They speake French, but though badly and corruptly, saving the Gentrie, and some of the better sort, who by travelling or otherwise haue bettered much their Mother tongue.

Cameryck or Cambray. The City of Camerick is not properly under the 17. Provinces, seing shee hath her owne Bishops, who Gouverns thē, aswell in causes spirituall, as temporall, and entitle themselues Princes of the Romane Empire, Bishops, and Dukes of Camerick. But for as much as some hundred yeere since, it was under the protection of the Earles of Flanders, it is now kept at this present, with a strong garnison of the King of Spaigne. The Bishop in that which concerneth the temporality, hath now but the bare title left him. And therefore in the description thereof we will follow the order, which Guicciardine, and others haue observed.

Name. Camerick then (as Ian le Maire, and other Moderne writters affirmed) was so named and built by Cambre, King of Tongeren. But Paulus Æmilius, and some other Authours of greater note and credit, say it is the same towne, which Iulius Cæser (in his fifth booke of his Gallick warrs) called Samarobrina: saying, that there they held the Generall Convocation and Parlament, for all France. The Latinists call it now Cameracum, and the French and Wallons Cambray. It lyeth in the longitude of 26. degrees, 6. minutz, and in the latitude of 49. degrees, & 45. minuts, upon the riuer of Schelde, which runneth through it, & is some 21. English Miles from Valenciennes. It is a very large, strong, and a well compacted citie, embellished with many braue Churches and Cloisters, the Chiefest whereof is S. Maries, being the Cathedrall, or Metropolitan Church of Cameryck, having a very large, and a broade extention belonging to it. Situation.

An ancient Bishoprick. The first Bishop of Cambray, was Diogenes the Martyr, a very vertuous and a holy man. The fifth Bishop of it was (Anno 598) Saint Gaugericus, or Gauger. In the time of our Fore-fathers, this Bishoprick, at the request of Philip the second, King of Spaigne, was advanced to an Arch-bishopricke.

Trading. Those of Cameryck haue great trading in linnen Cloth, which they call Camerick: there are made in this city, aboue sixtie thousand peeces of linnen euery yeere, being worth 240000. pounds. This towne is a Castlevvicke, hauing a fine Lordship under it called Cambresis, with a Castle in it of the same name, and many good Villages. This is the first towne, that Clouis le Chevelu, King of France, wann in Gallia Belgica, about the yeere of our Lord 445. A good while after the Danes burnt it. And being built up againe, it came under the Earledome of Haynault. Afterward the Germane Emperours separated it from Haynault, & made it a free Imperiall Citie. At last it was giuen by the Emperour Henry the fifth, into the protection, and keeping of Robert Earle of Flanders, and Prince of Aelst. This protection also was afterwards confirmed to the Earles of Flanders, by the Emperour Frederick the first, anno 1164. in the time of Count Theodorick of Alsatia. Notwithstanding all this, the French alwaies pretending right to this towne, tooke it in diuerse times, and defended it against many attempts, yea till the time of Maximilian the first, when the Citizens droue the French out of it, and tooke the towne from the Emperour. Thē Cameryck came againe under the Earles of Flanders, but upon condition that it should remaine neutrall, and did so, till the Emperour Charles the fifth made himselfe absolute Lord thereof, & built a strong Citadell in it. In the yeere 1574. both the towne, and Citadell was taken in for the Lords the States of the Vnited Provinces. Afterwards the French 1581. became masters againe of it, and continued under their Commaund, till the ninth of October 1595. in which time the Count de Fuentes tooke it from them, upon composition for the King of Spaigne, under whose Commaund it remaines now at this present. A Castlevvicke.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE EARLEDOME OF HAINAVLT.

Name. THE Earledome of Hainault, is ſo called from the riuer Haine, or Hania. It was alſo named Lovver Picardie, and formerly Saltus Carbonarius, or Coale-vvood, becauſe there grew much wood in it, whereof they made Charre-coale, as the Inhabitants doe at this day in the foreſt of Marmaut, which ſome thinke is a part of the old Coale-vvood, or Silva Carbonaria. Hainault is bounded on the North with Brabant and the Earledome of Flanders: on the South with Campagnie and Picardie: on the Eaſt, partly with the Earledome of Namurce, and partly with the Biſhopricke of Luyck: and on the Weſt with the Schelde, and Gallike Flanders. The leght of it is 60 miles, and 48. the breath. This Countrie hath a ſweete, and a temperate Aire; and is watered with many rivers, ſtanding waters and Fountaines, as the Schelde, the Sambre, the Dura, and others. There are alſo diverſe woods in it; but the chiefeſt is that of Mormaut, and S. Amands. They haue alſo many Meddowes, and Paſtures for the breeding, & feeding of all Kinde of Cattaile, and the ſoile is very good, for the bearing of Corne and Wheate. In diverſe places they haue Mines of Yron and Lead, quarries of ſtone for maſſonery, wherein alſo they finde Touchſtone.

Soile.

Here they caſt glaſſe, haue quick chalke, & a great many Coale-pits. There are in this Earledome 24. walled townes: whereof Bergen is held the chiefeſt of this Countrie: Valenciennes is a towne, and a Lordſhip of it ſelfe, the reſt are Quenoy, Condé, Landrecy, Avennes, Chimay, Marienborgh, Philipville, Beaumont, Maubeuge, Bavais, Bins, Reus, Soigny, Breyne le Conte, Engen, Halle, Leſſine, Chevre, Aeth, S. Geleyn, and Leuze. Beſides according to Guicciardin his account, there are aboue 950. villages: but Robertus Cenalis reckoneth twelue hundred, which haue all Churches and Bells, with many Caſtles, and Gentlemens houſes, among which, ſome of them are great, & fine Villages, as Pequicourt, Fontaine, Lalaing, Montigny, Antoin, Bye, Briſeul, Ligne, Boſſu, Barlemond, Glayon, Traeſegny, Ecochinne, Trelon, Sor le Chateau, Barbançon, Aimeries, and diverſe others. In the Earledome of Hainault, they haue men of great dignity and ſtate, as one Principate, tenne Counties, twelue Peeres, two and twentie Barones, ſixe and twentie Abbeys, a Lord Marſhall, a Seneſchal, a Chiefe Foreſter, a Chamberlaine, and diverſe others Offices which belong to the principall Lords of the Countrie, whoſe ſtate conſiſteth in fiue members, Namely, the 12. Peeres, the Prelates, the Gentrie, the foure chiefe Officers, and the Townes. This ſmall, but noble flouriſhing Countrie, the Earles thereof holds from none, but God & the Sunne, and therefore is it often called, Pais de Henaut tenu de Dieu, & du Soleil, & this in briefe concerning this Earledome in Generall, now we will ſpeake of the townes in particular.

Townes.

Villages.

Offices.

The Citie of Bergen named by the Wallons Monsen Hainault, to diſtinguiſh it from other townes ſo called, taketh her name (as Guicciardine relateth) not onely from the hill, whereupon it ſtands) but alſo in honour and remembrance of many Saints, and excellent perſonages, who heretofore as Hermits inhabited ſolitairely in this ſilent place. and ended here haue liueth in happineſſe S. VValbert, S. Berthild, S. VValtruyt, S. Vincent, S. Amand, & diverſe others, who were famous, not onely for their pious life; but alſo for their noble Deſcent. Bergen is 45. miles from Engen, and 30. from Bruxells, ſeated upon a riuer called the Trull, whoſe head riſeth out of diverſe Springs, neere unto the village of Marpen, taketh his courſe Weſtward, & coming from Bergen falleth into the Haine. It is a very ſtrong towne, hauing three wide moates about it, frō whence (as it is reported) they cā drowne the Countrie round about it. Within the Citie there is an ancient Caſtle, and divers Canoniſations, Abbeys, Cloiſters, and Convents, which haue great incomes, freedomes, and priviledges. The Provinciall Councill of Hainault hold their reſidencie here. The whole Countrie maye appeale hither; ſaue the towne and Lordſhip of Valenciennes. All ſentences pronounced in this Councill are definitiue and they may not appeale any higher. All ſints in law are quickly ended, & no ſentences determinate are giuen, but in the preſence of the chiefe Bayliſe of Hainault, who is the Princes Gouvernour, aſwell in civill, as criminall cauſes. Bergen was not onely made by Charles the great, the capitall city of Hainault, but alſo a particular Earledome, who had a long time Earles of it ſelfe, who aſſumed afterward unto them ſelves, the ancient title of the Earles of Hainault, and are as the Chronicles relate, deſcended from the houſe, and blood of the ſaid Emperour.

Bergen et Mons.

Valenciennes. Valenciennes in all likelyhood, was ſo called from the Emperour Valence, who coming into theſe parts, and ſeing the ſoile ſo good and fruitfull, the aire ſo healthfull and temperate, and this place ſo well ſituated, ſtayed here for a time, & neere unto an anciēt Caſtle which ſtood there, built this towne, & called it after his owne name Valentiana: which the VVallons at this day name Valencienne. This Emperour, to the end it might be the better inhabited, beſtowed upon it the ſame priviledges, as Romulus heretofore gaue unto the inhabitants of his new built city of Rome, namely, that ſuch as came to build, and dwell therein, ſhould not be troubled for any civill, or criminall cauſes: which freedome being ſpread abroad through the greateſt part of the Countrie (which continueth yet) was called Banlieue, but now is ſo moderated, that thoſe which committed any horrible crime, as willfull Murther, or the like, could not helpe themſelues herewith, but were puniſhed according to their demerits. The Citie of Valencienne lieth ſome 21. Miles from from Bergen in Hainault, and as farre from Ryſell, and is ſeated very pleaſantly upon the Schelde, which runneth through it: as alſo within the inſide of Porte Cardon, runneth the ſmall river of Revell, which brings in ſuch abundance of water, that beſides many fine Ilands, which it makes, the water runneth through the ſtreets, and under the houſes, to the great accommodation of the Inhabitants, and the ſtrengthning of the towne, which upon one ſide they can ſett under water: on the other ſide there are hills, and deepe Moates, with a ſtrong Wall, and Bulwarkes, ſo that it can hardly be beſieged, but with two armies, and that with a great difficultie. One may ſee yet the ruines of the old Caſtle, ſtanding betweene the Schelde, and the Bulwarkes of the towne. It is a very faire, and a great Citie, having ſtately and ſumptuous houſes and publick edifices in it, among the reſt S. Maries and S. Iohns Churches, the Palace called now the Earles Hall, a braue Senate houſe with many Cloiſters, and Nunneries, & publick houſes. The politick gouvernment in Valencienne, is compoſed, & kept in ſo good order, that other townes Eſpecially Nurenburgh, ſent Deputies thether to informe themſelues in the forme of their gouvernmēt, & doe obſerue ſome of their lawes, yet to this day in their well ordered Common-weale, the common Burgers liue there moſt upon Merchandiſe, trading, & manifactures, in which they are very ſkilfull. Here is alſo the ſtaple of French Wines, which are carryed by Karrs into the Netherlands. This Citie hath her owne Priviledges, & Cuſtomes, differing from others of Hainault, which thoſe of Bouchain, Quenoy, and Condé enioye with 132 Villages, which are all under the Caſtlewick of Valencienne, and in caſe of Appeale are not ſubiect to Bergen, but are under the high court of Machlaine. The State of this Seigneurie conſiſts of Prelates, Gentlemen, and Citizens.

The Gouvernment.

Bouchain. Bouchain lyeth upon the left hand of the Schelde, betweene Valencienne, and Camerick, & hath a ſtrong, and an invincible Caſtle. Quenoy is a ſtrong, and a well ſeated towne, lying about 9 miles from Valenciennes: ſixe miles alſo from Valenciennes lyeth the prethe, pleaſant towne of Condé, belonging to the noble houſe of Lalaing. Landrecy ſtandeth upon the river Sambre, nine miles from Quenay, and 18 from Valencienne; though it be but ſmall: yet is it a reaſonable ſtrong towne. The ſtrong frountier towne Avennes, is built upon the river Hepre, 12 miles from Landrecy, and 16 from Maubeuge. Chimay is a fine ſtronge towne, having the title of a Principate, belonging to the Duke of Aerſchot, lying 18 miles from Avennes. Marienborgh is nine miles from Chimay, and 30 from Bergen, ſeated between two rivers called the Blance, and the Noire. The ſtrong frountier of Phillip-ville, lyeth about foure miles and a halfe, from Marienborgh. Beaumont is a very pleaſant towne, appertaining to the Duke of Aerſchot, ſome 16 miles from Chimay, and as farre from Bins. Vpon the Schelde 16 miles from Bergen, is Maubeuge a prethe towne. Bavais alſo is about 18 miles from Bergen. Bins lyeth upon an arme of the Hayne, 9 miles from Bergen, where formerly the widdowe queene of Hungarie, founded the palace Mariemont. Sixe miles from Bins, and nine from Bergen lyeth Reux which is a fine pleaſant towne, & a very ancient, having commaund ouer a great many Villages, Charles the fifth created it heretofore an Earledome. Soigny is 9 miles from Bins, and as many from Bergen, lying upon a ſmall river called Seine, it is a ſmall but a prethe towne.

Breine le Comte, is nine miles from Hall, and 16 from Bergen, it is a very ancient towne (as ſome imagine) ſo called from Brennus the Subvertour of the Romans, and is named Le Comte, to put a difference between it, and a Village in Brabant called Breine Aleud. Engen called by the Wallons Engien, is ſixteen miles from Ath, 18 from Bergen, and as many from Bruſſells: It is a very fine towne, where they make tapiſtries, and hangings. Hall called in french Noſtre Dame de Haulx, lyeth alſo upon the Seine, within this towne there is our Ladies Church, wherein many miracles are done.

Breine le Comte. Engien. Hall.

Leſsine, where much Linnen cloth is made, is 16 miles from Engien and 18 from Bergen, ſeated upon the river of Denre. Chevre is a fine pleaſant towne, bearing the title of an Earledome, belonging to the Duke of Aerſchot, lying upon a hill three miles from Ath, and 15 from Bergen. S. Giſline ſo named from the Abbey, is a ſmall towne ſixe miles from Bergen, the river of Hayne runneth through it. Leuze is a prethe towne, lying about 15 miles from Valencienne, & ſome yeeres ſince was burnt downe, but afterward repared and built up againe. Theſe are all the walled townes in Hainault: ſaving a prethe towne called Fontaine l'Eveſche lying upon the utmoſt confines of the Earledome, and Biſhoprick of Liege or Luyck, about three miles from the river of Sambre, and ſixe from Bins. But ſeing the Earles of Hainault, and the Biſhop of Luyck are in diſpute about the Lordſhip of this towne, we will ſpeake nothing here of the deſcription thereof.

Leſsine. Chevre. S. Giſlin. Leuze. Fontaine.

Before wee ſhutt up this deſcription, wee will mention ſome thing of the Villages and Caſtles, and thoſe territoires, which are honoured with the title of Counties and Baronies, comprehended under this Earledome. The firſt Village, and Countie is Lalaing, which hath a Caſtle, and a great circuit of ground belonging to it. Montigny in the Countie of Ooſtervant, is a Baronie lying ſixe miles from Dovvay. Antoing upon the Schelde, lyeth three miles from Dornick, is a pleaſant Village with a faire Caſtle: in it: which ſome thinke, the Roman Marcus Antonius formerly built. Ligne is a fine Village with a Caſtle: before the troubles, it was an Earledome, which now is advanced to a Princedome. Boſſu is a faire Village, with a braue Caſtle, which was not fully built, and lyeth ſome ſeuen miles from Bergen, and ſixteene from Valencienne. Barlemont is a great Village with a Caſtle, ſix miles from Lantrecy, and as farre from Avennes lying upon the Sambre. A mile and a halfe from Avennes is Glayon, a fine Village with a Caſtle, which hath the title of a Baronie. Traſegnie is ſixe miles from Bins, being a fine Village with a Caſtle, renowned for the houſe of their ancient Barons. Sor Le Caſteau lyeth ſixe miles from Avennes, and is counted the chiefeſt Village in all Hainault, having a very ancient and a ſtrong Caſtle in it. Three miles from Beaumont, lyeth Barbançon neere unto a great wood of popplar trees: it is a great Village, and a Baronie belonging to the Earles of Arenberge. Aimeries is ſeated upon the river of Sambre by Barlemont, ſome 5 miles from Maubeuge, and is a great Village with a Caſtle, and a very ancient Lordſhip. There are alſo other ſmall townes and places within the confines of Hainault, but ſeing they belong to other Lords, we will make no mention of them here, and thus much for the Earledome of Hainault.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE EARLEDOME OF NAMVRCE.

Situation.

THis Earledome of Namurce, which taketh the name from the chiefe towne, lyeth betweene Brabant, Hainault, Luxenburgh, and the Bishoprick of Luyck, is a small hillie countrie, but full of all pleasure, and delight. It hath a very sweete, and healtfull aire. Through this Earledome run many rivers, brookes, & springs, among the rest the famous Maze, and Sambre, which are not onely commodious to carrie out, and bring in all sorts of commodities: but also afford all kind of delicate fishe.

Temperature.

Rivers.

There are also many pleasant woods, full of Deere and game, among which Marlaigne-vvood is accounted the finest of all. The soile is exceeding fruitfull for wheate, and all kind of graine. The hills (whereof there are many) are couvered with good wood, and timber, and the Countrie is watered with diverse fine Springs, and Fountaines.

Woods.

Fertilitie.

In the hills there are Veines, and Mines of Lead and Iron, with many quarries, and Stone pits of all sorts of faire and solid Stones for building, namely, black, redd marble Stones, mingled with white veines almost like unto the Iaspe. There are some also of a gray, and blewish coulour with white veines running through them. Besides these, there are abundance of ordinary Stones, wherewith they make chalke. Some yeeres since they haue digged also some good Stone-Coale out of the Earth, whereof there are abundance in Hainault, and the Bishoprick of Luyck. They finde also here good Store of Saltpeter, a necessary thing for the warres: so that the Inhabitants liue richly here, by the fruits of the Earth, & the seuerall Mines which are in this Countrie: besides this, the Mines, Quarres and Stonepits keepes them from Idlenesse, which is an ennemy to all vertue. And surely, these woods, hills, and rocks, abounding with so many Mines, and Stonepits, besides the strenght they are to the Countrie, they yeeld more profit, & incomes to these of Namurce, then the best tilled Lands of other Countries. The Inhabitants are very diligent, and industrious; and spare no cost in finding out these mines where in their chiefe riches consists. Moreouer, they haue such a necessarie commoditie of water and wood, for the refining of yron, for working, for melting and carrying from one place to an other, that they are alwaies bussid, and never cease from working, forging, casting, and refyning in so many furnaces and flames, that one would thinke he were rather in Vulcans forge (whose chimney the Poets fained to be Mount Ætna) then among men.

Mines & Stonepits.

This Countrie was formerly a Marquisate, but afterward changed often the title. The first Marquesse of Namurce (as we read) was Balduin Earle of Hainault. He made his sonne Philip Marquesse of Namurce, who not with standing, did enioye it also with the consent of his Eldest brother, who was to be Earle of Hainault. He dying without issue, his sister Tolentis, who martyed Petrus Cortemens obtained this Marquisate, though she was the yongest daughter. After him succeeded his Sonne Philip, who dying also without issue, the succession fell to the Emperour Balduin his brother, who was then at Constantinople: but his sister Magret, marrying the Earle of Viana, usurped it. But the Emperour returning home, went and besieged Namurce, tooke it in, and turned his sister Margret out of it. Afterward returning back to Constantinople, he borrowed of the Queene mother to S. Levves, twentie thowsand pound Flemish, & morgaged to her the Marquisate of Namurce with all the revenu, till he had repayd her the principall. But shortly after there arose many troubles and dissentions, for the possession of this Marquisate, betweene Henry Earle of Luxenburgh, Iohn Earle of Hainault, and the Empresse. Notwithstanding Martha the wife of Balduin, kept the command thereof. She then being much pressed by the Burgers, and Inhabitants, was also accused to haue committed high treason, because she had beheaded Balivium, and consequently that her livings ought to be confiscated. The Citizens being wearie of her, dispatched their Deputies to Henry Earle of Luxenburgh, and called him to assist them: whereat he much reioycing, came to Namurce, tooke in the Castle, and so gott into possession. But his Kingdome lasted not long: for the Emperour Balduin, who was the right Heire of it, by the advise of S. Levves, sould the said Earledome for 20000. pound Flemish, to Guido Earle of Flanders: and thus Guido Earle of Flanders, aswell by purchase, as by marriage (for he marryed Isabella, daughter unto the Earle of Luxenburgh) obtayned the Earledome of Namurce. He dying at Compiene in prison, his Sonne Iohn succeeded him, who after the death of his father, came speedely from Paris, and in S. Albins Church was chosen Earle. He returning back from Prussia, where he had warrs, dyed by the way: so that his brother Guido succeeding, dyed also of a hurt received in tilting in Flanders: then his third brother Philip was sent for out of Norvvay, and made Earle of Namurce. He being slayne in Cypris, his yonger brother VVilliam the Fourth being not of age, under the tutelage of his Mother, had this gouvernment left unto him, whom the Emperour Charles the Fourth created, and gaue him many large priviledges. This VVilliam deceasing, his Son VVilliam succeedeth him, who was trained up in the warres from his youth. After him succeeded ceeded his brother Iohn, who being taken priſoner, by the Biſhop of Luyck, was driuen to pay a very great ranſome for his releaſement: ſo that he was forced to ſell his Earledome to Philip, the good Duke of Burgundie, onely reſerving the title of uſum fructum or fee-ſimple to himſelfe during his life. Finally, Marie of Burgundie the daughter of Charles the Hardie, brought this Earledome to the houſe of Auſtria, with whom it continueth to this day.

There are in this Earledome of Namurce, beſides the chiefe towne of Namurce, three other walled Townes, namely, Bovines, Charlemont and Valencourt, with 182. Villages, and many rich Abbeys. The States of this Countrie conſiſts of the Lords Spirituall, Nobility, and the Magiſtrates of the townes.

Original of the name. Wence the originall of the name of Namurce came is doubtfull, and not certainely knowne. But learned Iuſtus Lipſius is of the opinion, that it is compounded of theſe two Dutch woords, Na and Muer, becauſe it lyes as a wall, or a towne upon the Maſe. Others imagine that this Towne was built by the Romans, as an invincible Fortreſſe, which afterward was called by the Gaules Neuf-mure, that is, Nevv-vvall, which word was litle by litle changed by the VVallons into Namurce, and in Dutch into Namen. Theſe two conjectures haue more appearance of truth then that ould wiues tale, which ſaith, that upon the top of that hill, where now the Caſtle of Namurce ſtandeth there was the Statute of an Idoll called Nam, who anſwered by oracles, and gaue aſſiſtance to theſe which ſought unto him. But ſeing by the comming of our Saviour, Ieſus Chriſt, all witchcraft, Divinations and ſuch unlawfull Arts are ceaſed, and that then the Oracles of the falſe Gods loſt their credit, this Idoll alſo ceaſed to anſwere and was mute, & ſo the people ſhould tell one to an other: Nam mute, that is, the Idoll Nam is mute, whence they ſay this towne tooke her name. But leaving theſe dotings, Namurce is ſeated betweene two hills, upon the left ſide of the Maſe, into which the Sambre, a fine river running through the towne, falleth. Luyck and Bruxell lye about 30. miles from Namurce, and 24. from Lovaine. It is a good and a fine towne, with a great, and a ſtrong Caſtle in it. There are ſeven Hermitages lying about it, where many religious and pious men dwell. This towne for a long time hath bene honoured with the title and dignitie of an Earledome, having a great and a large juriſdiction. The King holds here a Councill conſiſting of a Preſident, and diverſe Counſellours, from whom they may appeale to the high Councill of Machlaine. Some yeeres ſince this towne was made a Biſhops Seate, and the Cathedrall Church dedicated to the honour of S. Albin. The Inhabitants are valliant & good Souldiers, faithfull and loyall to their Prince. They ſpeake the French tongue, but corruptly. They are courteous, and very ſkillfull in ſome handicrafts, though there be not many Merchants & Tradeſmen among them. This Countrie is full of gentrie of ſeverall houſes, which are very ancient, and deſcended of an noble blood, but many of them by baſtardiſme.

Situation. Provinciall Councill. A Biſhoprick. The Nature of the Inhabitants.

In the Countrie of Namurce, about nine miles from the towne and ſixe from Houy (a ſmall towne under the Biſhoprick of Luyck) lyeth the Village of Andenne, where there is a very ancient Priorie of Nunns Gentle women, built aboue nine hundred yeeres agoe, by Begge Old King Pepins daughter, and wife to Anchiſes; to whom Dagobert King of France, gaue the Dukedome of Brabant, out of which marriage ſprang the other Pepins, Charles Martel, and Charlemaine. This order of Nunns, being Gentle women, is like that at Nivelle mentioned before. There is alſo an other Convent, of the ſame order, ſixe miles from Namurce in a Village, lying upon the Sambre called Mouſtier. Betweene Namurce and Dinant upon the hill Polvage where are ſeene yet to this day, the ruines of the ancient towne of Chevremont, which was ruined, & deſtroyed by the inlandiſh warres of the Ligeois.

The Priory of Andenne. Mouſtier. Chevremont

Bovines lyeth upon the left ſide of the Maſe, 12. miles from Namurce, it is a ſmall, but an ancient towne, formerly well built and inhabited, but hath oftentimes bene ruined, and ſpoiled by the warrs.

Bovines.

Charlemont is likewiſe but a litle, yet a marvaillous ſtronge towne, lying ſome nine miles from Marienborch, and 21. from Namurce upon a hill, on the left ſide of the Maſe. It was ſo named from Charles the Fift, who made this a ſtrong towne, and a frontier, againſt Marienborgh, which the French then held.

Charlemont

About 21. miles from Namurce lyeth VValcourt or Valencourt, a fine towne, with a fruitfull ſoile round about it.

Valencourt.

Vpon the Maſe towards Bovines, lyeth Dave, a brave Village with a ſtrong Caſtle, and a great Lordſhip, bearing the title of a Vicountie. There are others among the Villages of Namurce worthy the naming for their greatneſſe, pleaſantneſſe, and faireneſſe, as the Village of Floren, lying 16. miles from Namurce, Vaſcie, ſome nine miles, and Samſon ſixe, with ſome others, which for brevities ſake wee will paſſe by.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE Lordſhip, and Dioceſſe OF VTRECHT.

ANCIENT Batavia, having heretofore bene mighty, & potent under her ovvne kings, in proceſſe of time, the right ſtemme failing, it was devided into many parts, as amonge the Inhabitants of the Iſel, the Biſhops of Vtrecht, the Earles of Holland, & the Dukes of Gelderland, every one of them having a ſhare in her. That part then which fell to the Epiſcopall Citty, was called the Dioceſſe or Biſhopricke of Vtrecht, and had for her firſt Archbiſhop S. VVilleboord ſurnamed Clemens, an Engliſh Saxon, who came into theſe quarters, about the yeare of our Lord 690. He being ſent into Friezland, to convert King Radtbot, and his ſubjects, unto the Chriſtian faith, and not prevailing there; in regard of the Kings ſtifneckedneſſe, returned back into Eaſt Franckenland (for ſo was the dioceſſe of Vtrecht called in thoſe daies) from whence this Radtbot had bene chaſed, whoſe countrie he wholly converted to the Chriſtian faith, and rebuilt againe the church called Saint Thomaſes, which Dagobert King of the Gaules had founded, where he made a Fount to baptize with. Afterward comming to Rome to Pope Sergius, for the great zeale he had to the enlargement of the Goſpell, he was honoured with the title of Archbiſhop of Vtrecht, and ſurnamed Clemens, which happned anno 697. And comming to Vtrecht into the poſſeſſion of his Archbiſhoprick, founded there a church in honour of Saint Martins, Archbiſhop of Tours, and ſo made it his Epiſcopall ſeate, for him and his Succeſſours. After him ſucceeded S. Bonifacius, vvho at Dockum in Friezland with 52 of his Clergie were made away, and martyred; whereby the Archepiſcopall dignitie, with the conſent of the Church (which ſuffred then much affliction, and oppreſſion by the Normans) was transferred to Colleyn. But afterward king Pepin, and Charles the great, reſtored not onely the citty of Vtrecht to her Epiſcopall dignitie: but alſo graunted unto the Biſhop temporall power, right and Dominion over the whole Dioceſſe, whoſe extention in thoſe daies reached much further then it doth now, jea almoſt over all anciēt Batavia, as ſome write. But whether it were ſo, or no; yet this is moſt certaine, that he governed not onely that part which is now called the Dioceſſe, but alſo the Countries of Overyſel, and Groyning makingh together three provinces of the ſeuenteene, as well in cauſes ſpirituall as temporall, ſtanding under the obedience of the Biſhop of Vtrecht, till the yeare 1527, and till that Biſhop Henry of Bavaria was conſtrained, yea forced through the ſedition & willfulneſſe of the Cittizens of Vtrecht, who did him all the ſpite and affront, that they could, embraced in his armes the Emperour Charles the fifth, by reſigning over into his imperiall majeſties hands all his temporall right of the countries, and townes under Vtrecht, Overyſel, and Groyning (as ye ſhall heare here after) which ſome yeares before had alienated it ſelfe from the Biſhoprick, to craue his helpe, to reſtore him againe unto his ſpirituall Iuriſdiction. Which reſignatiō hapned with many ceremonies, for the Earle of Hoogſtrate then maſter of the Ceremonies of Holland, was ſent by the Lady Margret the Emperours Aunt, then Gouverneſſe of the Netherlands, to Vtrecht, where he in the name of the ſaid Emperour, as Duke of Brabant, & Earle of Holland, tooke poſſeſſion of the two aforeſaid Countries, and their Townes, together with the right & pretences, which belonged unto the ſeate of Vtrecht frō the Province of Groyning. Hereupon followed in the yeare 1534 a treaty of Vnion, betweene the townes, and Countries of Vtrecht, and Overyſel with all their dependances on the one ſide, and thoſe of Holland on the other ſide, whereby thoſe of Vtrecht were united to thoſe of Holland, ſo that from that time forward, they both ſhould be ruled by one Governour, & upon the ſame foote, and entertainment, as the Governour of Holland had wont to enjoye. Likewiſe that thoſe of Holland; and the States of Vtrecht ſhould haue but one meeting. That the Governour in every tovvne of theſe two provinces ſhould yearely chooſe and make nevve Magiſtrates. That all Banditos out of Holland ſhould not be free in Vtrecht, and contrariewiſe that all civill ſentences pronounced in Holland by lettres requiſitoire ſhould be executed in Vtrecht. That al fee-ſimples and inveſtures ſhould be written in theſe ſubſtantiall words, To hold them from the Earle of Holland and Lord of Vtrecht. And to that end this union may be ſincerely kept, wee ſweare unto the performance thereof on both ſides, and the adminiſtration of the courſe of Iuſtice, to remaine upon te old foote of Holland & Vtrecht. Now touching the ſpirituall ſupremacie and Iuriſdiction of Holland, that continued vvith the Biſhops of Vtrecht, till the time of Fredericke of Sautenburg the laſt Biſhop, or to ſpeake more properly, with the Archbiſhop of this towne, for in his time Vtrecht was made an Archbiſhopricke, commaunding over the Biſhops of Holland, Zealand, and Friezland. But he dying in the yeare 1580, the Lords and States of this Province of Vtrecht tooke upon them the whole government, and commaund thereof, when the Vnion was made at Vtrecht with the other united Netherlands, ſo that now they acknowledge no other Superiour, but onely the Lords the States Generall of them.

The firſt Archbiſhop of Vtrecht vvas an Engliſh Saxon.

Novv to proceede to the deſcription of the Countrie it ſelfe, and to the chiefe cittie thereof in ſpeciall, ye muſt obſerue, that it is environned about on the South, the North and the Weſt ſides with the Earledome of Holland, and on the Eaſt with the Dukedome of Gelders. The ſoile is very fruitfull, and fatt, & yeeldeth moſt excellent wheate and other graine. The grounds in this Dioceſſe lie much higher then they doe in Holland. Beſides the capitall Cittie of Vtrecht, there are foure other walled townes in it, namely VVyck te Duerſtede, Rhene, Amersfoort, and Monfoort, which fiue townes with the fiue Chapiters, belonging to the citty of Vtrecht, together with the Nobility & gentrie make and repreſent the States of this Province.

Bounds. Soile. Fertility. Townes.

Vtrecht was once called Antonina from one Antonine of Rome afterwards by Dagobert of France Trajectum; becauſe of the common ferrie there. It is the Metropolis of this Province. Adrian Iunius is of the opinion, that it tooke this name from a certaine Romane Inſcription, to diſtinguiſh betweene it, and their garniſons, which laye then along the Rhene: for in that place where now the cittie ſtands, lay the fiue & thir-thith Legion of the Romans, which was written in ſhort in theſe Latine words V. TRIG. LEG. STAT. which ſignifieth in length Quintæ Triceſimæ Legionis Statio. But ſeing the three Letters LEG. were by antiquitie of time worne out, ſo thoſe that were unſkilfull in this language read, V. TRIG. STAT. by joyning all the pointed letters together, which ſeemes not ſtrange, for the towne of Cantſtat in Suevia, tooke its name from the ancient inſcription LEG. ANT. STAT. which being fully written at length is Legionis Antoninæ Statio, that is, the encamping place of Antonines Legion. This Antonnie from whome Vtrecht firſt tooke its name, was Senatour of Rome, which flying from Nero's tyrannie, is ſaid to haue made his retreate into theſe parts, where he firſt built this towne. The Caſtle being afterward taken in by Dagobert of France, was ſtrongly fortifyed and tooke its name from Trajectum, becauſe it was a through fare, from all parts, as ſome verſes vvritten in the Dom, or Cathedrall of Saint Martins Church can witneſſe. A ſtately Church which hath a very high and a loftie ſteeple almoſt as high as S. Pauls in London, and is ſeene a great way off. This citty is ſo ſeated, that a man in a daye maye goe from hence to any one of 59 walled townes equally from this diſtant, and to dinner to 26, and returne home againe at even to bed.

Biſhop Balderick did firſt girt Vtrecht about with Walls, & repared the Dom, or Cathedrall Church, for which worke he was honored by the Emperour Charles the Balde, with the juriſdictions of Deventer and Tielt. Vtrecht is ſeated upon an arme of the Rhene, which river before tooke his courſe into the Leck, paſſed by this Citty, and ſo forwards diſcharged him ſelfe into the Sea, ſo that the waters thereof are yet to be ſeene to this day in the moats & channels thereof, and along that courſe, which the Rhene had wont to take to VVoerden and Leyden, where it yet retaines the name of the Old Rene. The Cittie of it ſelfe is very great, and of a large circuit, faire, ſtrong, and magnificent, and had in it before the troubles a ſtrong Citadell, called Vredenborch: The founder whereof was Carolus Quintus, but afterwards was ſlighted, & broken downe with the Conſent of Don Iohn of Auſtria, becauſe he feared, that the old Prince of Orange ſhould ſurprize, and fortifie it ſtronger. Amonge the churches, which are many in number, there are fiue Collegiall Churches, or Chapiters, namely, Saint Saviours heretofore Saint Bonifaces, Saint Peters, S. Iohns, our Laidies, and Saint Martins the Cathedrall, which once was puld dovvne by Adelbalt Biſhop of Vtrecht, becauſe it was then to litle for him, and afterward was rebuilt, and made up againe in that great, and ſumptuous forme as ye ſee it is at this day, which is to be admired. It was Conſecrated by twelue Biſhops in the preſence of the Emperour Henry the firſt, in the yeare of our Lord 1023, as appeareth by ſome verſes engraven in the Church.

Beſides the Cathedrall Church, there is the Collegiall church, called our Ladies, a faire and a well built ſtructure, founded by the Emperour Frederick Barbaroſſa, as a fine & penance layd upon him by the Pope becauſe he had deſtroyed, and layd vaſt the gallant cittie of Milan, and all her churches, and holy places. In the beginning of the foundation of this church hapned a wonder: for they found in the ground a kind of a quickſand, which they could not ſtop by no materialls, as wood, ſtone, earth or ſuch like; had it not bene for one of the workeman, that was more ingenious then the others, who ſtopped this quickſand, und the bubling up of the water, with Oxe or Cowes hides, to make the foundation firme, & to finiſh the worke, in memoriall whereof they wrote theſe Latine Verſes, with the picture of a Bullocke ſwimming over a water engraven in a ſtone, the contents are theſe:

Accipe poſteritas, quod poſt tua ſecula narres,
Taurinis cutibus fundo ſolidata columna eſt.

The other Churches, Cloiſters, and Hoſpitals wee will for brevitie paſſe by, & ſay onely this, that within the citty of Vtrecht is held the provinciall councill for the whole Dioceſſe, conſiſting of a Preſident, and nine other Councellours, with ſome officers, belonging to them. Touching the Cittizens, and Burgeſſes of Vtrecht they are curteous, able and ſubſtantiall men, but touchie and high minded, two vices which commonly proceeds from proſperity. In this cittie dwels as great a number of gentlemen, as in any place in the Netherlands, ſaving in the Hagh in Holland. In Popiſh times this cittie flouriſhed much with the multitude of Clergie men, which for that reaſon was famous in every Countrie. Among the reſt this was the birth place of Pope Adrian, heretofore the Tutor and Schoolmaſter of Charles the fifth, who advanced him to the papall dignitie.

VVyck te Duerſtede is one of the ancienteſt townes of Batavia, heretofore mighty and great, ſo that in thoſe dayes ſhee had 50 Churches and temples in it, but was twiſe ſackt, and deſtroyed by the Normans. It is at this preſent a reaſonable rich towne, lying upon the river Leck a Dutch mile from Kuylenbourgh, & three from Vtrecht. VVyck te Duer-ſtadt.

Vpon the ſame river, which is an arme of the Rhene, two miles diſtant from VVyck and fiue from Vtrecht, ſtands Rhene, a very ancient towne, called by Cornelius Tacitus, as it ſeemes, Grinnes. Rhene.

Amersfoort is a pleaſant, and a fine towne, ſeated in a wholeſome aire, having a church in it with a high ſteeple, lying upon a ſmall river called the Eems, it is populous, and well furniſhed with all proviſions, all things being cheape in it. In the yeare 1629 when Frederick Henry Prince of Orange was engaged before the Boſh, with the States armie, and that the Ennemies army and the Emperours commanded by Monte Cuculy had gott into the Velowe by the way of Diverſion to dravv the Prince from that ſiege, Count Cuculy comming before it & ſummoning it, it was ſoone yeelded over to him, upon the 14 of Auguſt that yeare. In the interim VVeſel was ſurpriſed, and taken in by the States ſouldiers under the Conduct of the Heere or Lord of Dieden, a place of great importance & the Magazine from whence the Ennemies Army had their Victualls, and where their bridge lay over the Rhene, where they loſt their Canon & munitions, and had a thouſand priſoners taken with abundance of riches in the towne, for indeed this Citty was the Sedes Belli, and their retreat in theſe parts. The Surpriſall of this towne was ſo ſudden and did ſo frighten, and amaze the Ennemy, the doore being ſhutt behinde them, that Count Cuculy was driuen to abandon this towne, and to retire himſelfe to the Spaniſh army for feare of a ſhroder blowe, which he did on the 22 of that month without bidding thoſe of Amersford fare well. Amerſfoort.

Montfoort lieth upon the Yſel, ſome three Engliſh miles from VVoerden, Oudevvater, and Yſelſteyn, it is a prettie towne, firſt built for a frontier againſt thoſe of Holland, becauſe there hapned betweene the Earles of Holland, and the Biſhops of Vtrecht a bloodie warre for a longe time, in regard the Emperour Charles the Balde had giuen a part of this Biſhopricke to the Earle of Holland. In thoſe daies the Citty of Vtrecht was ſo powerfull, that Pope Pius the ſecond, who liued in the yeare 1450, writeth, that the Biſhop of Vtrecht could raiſe in an inſtant 40 thouſand men under his owne Command, and though he was much warred upon by the Hollanders, Friezes, and Gelders, yet was he able to defend himſelfe, & to maintaine his owne Countrie and Cittie. Montfoort

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE LORDSHIP OF OVER-YSSEL.

Name.

THE Yſſel an arme of the Rhyne, and a third outlet, by which he had wont to diſcharge his waters into the Sea, hath giuen nomination unto the State, and Lorp-ſhip of Over-yſſell, which we now purpoſe here to deſcribe; for it lieth on the furtheſt ſide thereof, & therefore is called by the latiniſts Tranſiſulania. That we may then the better underſtand, what the Yſel properlie is, ye muſt note, that about two touſand paces aboue the towne of Arnhem in Gelderland there was a long cut or ditch begonne, which with an unſpeakable charge & labour was made by Druſus Germanicus, the Step-ſonne of Tiberius Emperour of Rome, by the dexteritie of his ſouldiers, to keepe them from idleneſſe, and lazineſſe.

Tranſiſulania.

This ditch is yet to this day, called after his owne name Foſſa Druſiana, that is, Druſus ditch, and through which Germanicus Cæſars ſonne, to accompliſh the promiſe made to his father (as Cornelius Tacitus witneſſeth) paſſed proſperouſly, with a thouſand ſaile of ſhips, into the lake of the Rhyne, called now the Southerne Sea, and ſo through an other cutt, or ditch gott into the Ems. This ditch was ſixe, or nine miles long, & led the Rhyne by Doeſburgh lying in the Earledome of Zutphen, which perhaps was ſo named from Druſus; where the old Yſel, a river coming out of VVeſtphalia, falleth into it, and thence borroweth the name of the Yſel. Then running by Bronckhorſt and Zutphen, paſſeth by Deventer, the chiefe towne of the Province of Over-Yſſell, and from thence to Hattem, and Campen, which towne by the alteration of the courſe of the river, is ſeated on this ſide of the Yſell, & yet nevertheleſſe is counted under this Province: from thence making many ſmall Iles, & receiving the Svvart-vvater into it, runneth into the Ye, which leadeth him into the Sea, leaving Vrck, and Ens two litle Ilands on the left hand, deſcribed in the map of Holland: but before he diſcharged himſelfe into the Sea, there was a ſtone-cauſie, upon which ſhippers uſed to ſhoue forward their ſhipps, (ô ſtrange alteration of terreſtriall things!) where men had wont to dwell fiſhe now ſwimme: ſo that this ditch of Druſus, by the helpe of ſome Meeres, eſpecially of the Ye, litle by litle made this great Southerne Sea, or Lake: which did great harme to the Countries of Friezland, & Over-Yſſell, and did much diminiſh and leſſen them from their ancient greatneſſe. So that this cut, or new Yſell, did no good, but was ſwallowed up in the Southerne Sea, and ſo loſt his old courſe into the Sea, betweene the Ilands of Vlieland, and Schellinck.

Now to come to the deſcription of Over-Yſſell, this Countrie hath on the North Friezland, on the South Gelderland and the Earledome of Zutphen, on the East VVeſtphalia, and on the Weſt the Southerne Sea, and the Yſell. It is devided into three States, namely, Yſelant, or Zallant, Drent, and Tvvent. It is a plaine, and a fruitfull Soile & Countrie, which yeeldeth much graine and Corne, and hath alſo many fine, pleaſant, and profitable woods, beſides eight walled townes, to wit, Deventer, Campen, Svvoll, Vollenhove, Steenvvick, Haſſelt, Ootmarſen, and Oldenzeel, with ten other braue places, namely Meppel, Geelmuyden, Coevorden, Hardenberghe, Omme, Almeloo, Goor, Diepenhem, Delden, & Enſcheden, all of them having great priviledges, & freedomes: moreover there are aboue two hundred villages, among which ſome of them are great and faire. The States of this Province, conſiſts of two members, to wit, the firſt in Officers & Gentlemen, the ſecond in the three capitall Townes, namely: Deventer, Campen, and Svvoll.

Townes.

Deventer lyeth on the right ſide of the Yſell, twelue miles from Svvoll, and is a reaſonable great towne, very ſtrong, and well fortifyed, full of many gallant houſes and publick buildings, is well inhabited, and populous, having many goodly paſtures and meddowes lying round about it, which when the Yſell ſwells, are overflowne with water. The Yſell runneth cloſſe by the towne, and ſerveth as a moate upon the one ſide of it. The other ſide hath partly a deepe moate, and partly a large haven to defend it. The walls are very high round about it, with ſtone turrets ſtanding cloſſe one to another, being lyned nevertheleſſe with a thick Earthen wall, and a great roundle or Mount of Earth, which lyeth before the Brinck gate, with a falſe-bray under it, beſides, a great Bolvvarck lyned from the botome with brick, which is juſt before the Yſell-bridge, to keepe the water from overflowing into the moate. Alſo by this Bolwarke, and the Brinck gate, lyeth the Noorenbergiſh Tovvre, very high and great, the wall whereof is 18 foote thick, which commaundeth all the places round about it. Beſides this outwall, there is an other brick-wall about the towne, beſett with turrets, but hath no moate. In fine Deventer is a very ſtrong towne, wherein alſo there is good trading, having for a long time had aliance with the other two townes of this Countrie and the Hanſe townes, for all three of them were made three imperiall townes (Anno 1495) for the enlarging of the Empire. Becauſe Maximilian the firſt, King of the Romans propounded in the Dyel at Wormes the weaknes of the Empire, they then added 91. Cities and townes unto it; ſuppoſing that this would ſufficiently ſtrengthen it againſt all aſſaults, and attempts, ſo that theſe three townes, were then choſen amonge the reſt as imperiall Cities, and were endued with many ſpeciall priviledges, and immunities.

DITIO TRANS-ISULANA

FRISIAE PARS ORIENTALIS

Joannes Janssonius excud

der the Countrie of Over-Yſſell, though it lyeth on this ſide of the Yſſell upon the mouth of this river, 15. miles from Deventer. It is a braue and a grand towne and proſpers reaſonable well, but had heretofore better doings, and trading, before the channel altered & grew ſhallow. It is encompaſſed with a high and a large Stone wall, adorned with many Turrets, and Roundles after the old faſhion, hath very broad Moates, but no earthie Wall, but thoſe which Maurice Prince of Orange, of famous memorie, cauſed to be made. This towne lyeth in a Valley by the river ſide, in the forme of a bowe, whereof the river, being their broade, is as it were the ſtring, having a faire bridge layd over to the midſt of the towne, which is built upon huge beames faſtned in the ground, as the foundation, but the props & arches for the ſhipping to paſſe under to ſaue charges, are ſome ninety foote wide one from an other, and are ſo artificially faſtned, and joyned aboue one to another, that it ſeemes the whole frame hangs in the aire, & is ſo faſtned as if it were underpropped. This towne hath ſixe Gates, and all the Land ſide lies ſo lowe, that the Burgers can putt it under water, when they pleaſe, which is a great ſtrentghning to the towne. Some thinke that Campen was that Roade for ſhips, whereof Ptolomee ſpeaketh: Others are of the opinion, that it is the port, or haven of Manarmanus.

Svvoll. Svvoll lyeth upon a ſmall river, which falleth into the Vider or Vecht, being three longe miles from Campen, it is a farre and a ſtrong towne, double moated and well fortifyed with a thick Wall, and Bolwerks, for when any warrs, troubles or daungers hapned, thoſe of Vollenhoven, where commonly the Gouvernour of Over-Yſſell held his reſidencie, for their better ſafety retreated thether.

Vollenhoven. Vollenhoven lyeth in the boſome of the Southerne Sea, ſixe miles from Steenvvick. It is a prettie towne, and well ſeated, for all Victualls and commodities, are brought unto it very commodiouſly both by Water, and by Land, & therefore the Provinciall Councill of Over-Yſſell is held here, from whoſe ſentence no man may appeale, which had wont to be pronounced in the preſence of the Gouvernours of Friezland & of Groyning.

Steenwick. Steenvvick ſeemeth to haue bene an ancient towne which lyeth in a round over againſt Blockziel, upon a ſmall river, that within three miles of Meppel falleth into the Southerne Sea. It is but of a ſmall compaſſe, and not aboue 1600. ordinary paces about. The ſoile about it is very good for the bearing of Corne. Here alſo they make great Store of Turfe, ſo that it is a towne of reaſonable trading. Formerly it was but a weake towne, but ſince the warres, was made exceeding ſtronge. There are three Churches in it, whereof the chiefeſt is called S. Clements, built with a high foure-ſquare towre. There was heretofore a Caſtle in it built by Mr. George Schenck Gouvernour of this Countrie, but afterward in the yeere 1523. was demoliſhed.

Haſſelt. Haſſelt lyeth upon the ſame river Vider, ſixe miles from Vollenhoven, it is a reaſonable rich and a ſtrong towne.

Ootmarſen. The ancient towne of Ootmarſen is nine miles from Almeloo & was founded (as Trithemius ſaith) by Odemare King of France, from whome it tooke his name, and that upon the very Grave of Vechtan his ſpeciall good frend. Others ſuppoſe it was ſo named from an ancient people called the Martii, which inhabited thereabouts.

Oldenſeel. Oldenſeel, as ſome thinke took the name from the ancient Salii. It is a ſmall towne which lyeth about three miles from Ootmarſen, and of all the townes in Over-Yſſell, was onely under the commaund of the late Archduke Albertus, who held an ordinary garniſon in it, till Count Erneſt of Naſſau of happie memorie, Gouvernour of Friezland, after a few dayes ſiege tooke it in, upon the firſt of Auguſt 1626. and brought it againe under the Commaund of the Lords the States Generall of the Vnited Provinces, by whoſe commaund ſhortly after, it was ſlighted, being weake, and no able to hold out a ſiege, or the aſſault of an Ennemie.

Meppel. Meppel is the chiefe Village of the Liberties of Over-Yſſell that are unwalled, & lyeth upon a ſmal river, ſome 12. miles from Coevorden.

Geelmuyden. The faire and ſtrong Caſtle of Geelmuyden, lyeth upon the mouth of the Vider, betweene Haſſelt, and Vollenhoven, being but three miles from either of them.

Coevorden. The invincible fortreſſe of Coevorden, lyeth about three miles from Hardenbergh, and is a common through-fare for thoſe of Friezland, Ommeland, Drenth, and Over-Yſſell into Germanie. For the other paſſage by VVedde, over the Boertange, a heath ſo called, which is daungerous for Theeues and Robbers, and not ſo ſafe at all times. Coevorden hath on the Northeaſt ſide a long Moraſh, as farre as VVedde, on the Weſt a ſtanding water, which runneth paſt Haſſelt, and Svvart-Sluyce. On the North the Village of Dalem, and a hard heath which goeth towards Groyning. On the Eaſt the Countie of Lingen. On the South the Earledome of Benthem. And on the Southweſt, lyeth Hardenbergh, it lies 15. miles from Linge, and as farre from Oldenſeel, 27. from Deventer, 15. from Svvol, 18. from Steenvvick, and 21. from Groyning. Site.

Hardenbergh lieth three miles from Coeverden, and 12. from Svvoll upon the Vider, which commeth out of the Earledome of Benthem, and a mile and a halfe aboue Hardenbergh by Coevarden receiveth the Aa into it, and ſo taking his courſe by Omme, paſſing by Svvoll, and from thence forward to the Svvart-vvater, falleth into the Southerne Sea by Haſſelt. Hardenbergh &c.

Omme is about ſixe miles from Hardenbergh. Omme.

Almeloo lyeth upon a ſmall river, which runeth into the Vider, and is ſixe miles from Goor. Almeloo.

Goor lyeth upon the Vider or Vecht, three miles from Diepenhem. Goor.

Diepenhem is ſixe miles from Delden, & Delden foure from Enſchede. Diepenhem. Delden.

Enſchede is the laſt of the villages of Over-Yſſell, being but 3. miles from Oldenſeel. Enſchede.

THE DESCRIPTION OF WEST-FRIEZLAND.

Name.

THE name of VVeſt-Friezland, and the Friezes is diverſly derived, for ſome write, that the word Friſia came from Phrygia, which was their natiue Countrie and ancient habitation. Others ſay, that in regard of the piercing aire, and ſharpe Froſt which theſe parts are ſubiect to, it is taken from the verbe Vrieſen to Freeze. The Abbot of Spanheym (following Hanibaldus a notable falſifyer of hiſtoricall truth) mainteyneth, that they were deſcended from one Friſius the hairie, King of the Francks, directly contrarie to Plinie and Tacitus, who calls them by the name of Friezes many ages before. Howſoeuer, they were an ancient people of lower Germainie, whoſe militairie valour, was well knowne to the Romans, who never ſince altered their name. Tacitus according to their power, deuideth them into Majores, & Minores Friſii, that is, into the greater, and the leſſer Friezes. Theſe two nations inhabited along the ſide of the Rhyne as farre as the Sea coaſt, & had within the circuit of their territoires many great Lakes, and Meeres, which the Romans ſailed ouer with their navie. Tacitus affirmeth, that the VVeſt-Friezes were the Eaſt-Friezes, and not the Embdeners, which aſſume unto themſelues this name at this day, but indeed they where the Chauci minores: for thoſe where the ancient VVeſt-Friezes, which dwelt about Staveren, Sneeck, Franicker, Harlingen, and Leuvvarden: and thoſe which inhabited in the utmoſt confines of Holland, were called North-Hollanders, and therefore Plinie teſtifyeth, that their countrie bordered upon the Caninefates, and that both theſe Friezes dwelt along the Rhyne, as farre as the Ocean. Friezland then by the river of Ems, is deuided into two parts, to wit, VVeſt and Eaſt-Friezeland: that which lieth VVeſtvvard we will here deſcribe by the ancient name of VVeſt-Friezland, as having bene alwaies held for the mightieſt of the two.

Majores & Minores Friſii.

Bounds.

This Province is bounded on the Weſt, and North with the Northerne Ocean, on the South with the Southward Sea, and partly with the territoire of Overyſſell, & on the Eaſt with the river Ems, which ſeparateth it from VVeſtphalia.

Temperature.

The aire in this Countrie is reaſonable good and healthfull, and though it be ſubiect to infection, by reaſon of the many dampes, foggs, and exhalations, which riſe out of the Meeres, and lakes: yet are they expelled, driven and purged away by the windes.

The paſtures, and Grounds in this Countrie, are mooriſh & lie very lowe, ſo that the moſt part of them from the latter end of Summer, till Lent be paſt, are overflowne with water, and can hardly beare any corne: for the ſeed that is caſt into them, becauſe it is long before they grow drie, is choaked, and ſpoilded: & indeed, they are rather fitter for paſturage, & the feeding of Oxen, & Cowes, whereof they haue great ſtore which yeeld their owners great proffit by making of Butter & Cheeſe, which they tranſport into, and vent in other Countries, then for tillage. Beſides they haue here a breede of goodly mares and horſes of a large ſize, with long hairie Fetlocks aſwell for the ſaddle & horſes of ſeruice, as for coaches, and waggons. They haue not much wood in this Countrie; but in ſtead thereof, nature hath plentifully ſupplyed that defect with abundance of excellent turfe, as well here as in Holland. So that they neede not burne bones (as the Scythians did) for want of wood; for they haue not onely enough to ſerue their owne turnes, but alſo to furniſh their neighbouring Countries and Townes. Of this turfe they haue two or three ſorts. The firſt is made of a ſpungie, and a light Subſtance: The other of a more ſolid, and heavie matter, as hard as a brick. The one is ſoone kindled, and ſoone out, the other more durable, laſteth longer, and giueth a greater heate. The firſt being caſt into the water floates aboue, & the ſecond ſinks downe to the bottome like a ſtone. The lighter turfe is moſt uſed, but in baking, bruing, burning of bricks, and for Saltpannes. The other is the common firing of the united Provinces, when it is on fire and flameth, it ſendeth fort a reflexion, which maketh one looke as pale as Ghoſt, and ſome times caſteth forth a ſulpherous fume, which cauſeth a diſeaſneſſe in the head, like ſea-coale, which if ye caſt a litle ſalt into it, it is preſently remedied. The manner of making of this turfe in VVeſt-Friezland and Holland is this: In the Fennie, and Mooriſh grounds, they haue a great many rowes of Dobbins or long ditches in ſome places 20. foote broade, and in others ſome more, ſome leſſe, having bankes betweene them about ſome ten or twelve foote wide: Out of the bottome of the ditches the Turfemakers bagger up (that is, with a long pole a bagg or a hoope nett) a kinde of ſlimie mudd, which they caſt betweene theſe ditches upon the banks, to dry in the Sunne and the Winde, and being halfe dry, they come and trample upon it, and ſpread it a broade to that thickneſſe, which they would haue their turffe off, and becauſe their feete ſhould not ſinke into it, they binde under the ſoles of their ſhooes foure-ſquare planks, and ſo going upon it lines out their worke, by cutting this mudd with a flatt yron ſpade, like checquer worke or the paines of glaſ-windowes, where lying till it be dryer, they take it up with the ſame inſtrument, and pile it up in heapes, as high as a man, leaving holes betweene them that the Sunne may beate upon them, and the winde wiſke through them, and being become reaſonable dry, they putt them into havells in the Fenns, till they be as hard and as dry as a brick, and this is the ordinary fuell of Holland, Zeland, and Weſt-Friezeland. They haue an other kind of turfe cutt in heaths, which they pile and ſett up in heaps in the ſame manner, this is commonly enterlaced with ſmall rocts of bruſh, and makes a good fire, which is quickly kindled and quickly burnt; whereas the beſt ſort makes a fire which will laſt ſome two houres. The poorer ſort alſo, make a kinde of turfe of Cowedung mingled with hay and ſtraw, which they dry in the ſunne and ſerues them for fyring, but this is offenſiue to their eyes and makes an ill ſmell.

Hollands. Turfe & the manner of making it.

In theſe Fenns and lower grounds, where there are plaſhes, there are many Koyes, to cath fowle in.

Koyes and the manner of making them.

& taking of fowls. They alſo are made in this manner; where the Lord of the Soile, or the huſbandmen marke where fowle lye in the Fenns, maſhes, or a low meddowe, they caſt up a pond foureſ-quare of the biggneſſe of halfe an acker of ground, and plant about it Willowes, Oyſſiers, or ſome other trees, and from the foure corners, or points caſt up a ditch, which growes narrower and narrower, from the mouth of which corners they make as it were a bowre over it like an arbour ſome 40. or 50. paces long, is made leſſe and leſſe: and at the end thereof they cloſſe it over with a tonnell nett, and betweene the brinke of the pond, and the trees they make a hedge or ſhelter of ſedge, or reed round about the pond, with intervalls and peeping holes one within an other leaſt the fowle ſhould ſee them. The koy being thus made, and growne about with trees in this manner, the Koy-men haue tame ducks, which as Fraifours are taught, to betraye the wilde ones by flying out and bringing them home to their maſters Koy, and being light in the Koy they growe very familiar together, ſo that in time, being uſed to this koy, there is a flight of three or foure hundred coupple of Duck & Mallard, Wiggin, and Teale. The Koyman having good ſtore of foule in his Koy, uſes at certaine times to feede his traitorous Ducks, from his peeping holes till they come to the mouth of his tonnell & then caſts them out ſome chaffe and Corne, which being uſed to it comes preſently to that place, and the wilde ones, growing bould ſwim along with them, and fall a feeding as well as they. Now here is the cunning behinde this Shelter of reed, the Koy-man turnes out a litle Curre or Dogg, with a handkierchiefe or a cloth abouth his neck, the wild Fowle being amazed, at this ſight and taken up with wunder, are ledd by the tame ones into the mouth of the Tonnell. The Koy-man then ſeing that he hath gotten within his compaſſe ſtarts out at one of his peeping holes, ſhowes himſelfe & the wilde ones riſing flie further & further into the tonnell of the nett till they are catcht: & thus are thowſands of Teale taken in the Koyes of the Low Countries, which are a great benefit to the Owners of theſe Koyes, and ſerves the Countrie with abundance of Fowle, eſpecially if it be a wett Winter, and thus much for my owne Countrie the Ile of Elie.

Kings & Ancient Gouvernment. To returne againe to VVeſt-Frieſland, this Countrie had formerly Kings of their owne, till the time of Charlemagne, but before they bore for a long time the heavie yoake of the Danes, and Normans, and after his deceaſe, had endured many aſſaults, till at laſt they enjoyed reſt in the dayes of that peaceable Prince Charles the Fifth.

Townes. There are twelve townes in VVeſt-Friezland, whereof Leuvvarden is accounted the chiefeſt, being a rich City, adorned with goodly houſes, having a ſtrong Caſtle in it, and is fortifyed with a good wall, and deepe moates about is, againſt the aſſaults of an ennemy. Here is alſo held the Court and Chancerie of Friezland, from whence no man maye appeale. Svvichem is the towne where Viglius was borne, and lyeth cloſe by it. Dockum where Gemma Friſius was borne hath a fertill ſoile round about it, & pleaſant paſtures, lying within ſixe miles of Leuvvarden, & within three of the Gulph, or Sea boſome, & was once under Gelders. Sneeck being nine miles from Leuvvarden lyeth in a lowe, and a moiſt ground, which will beare no corne, but in ſtead thereof, they haue rich meddowes. This towne was built not aboue two hundred yeeres agoe, ſince which time it is ſo enlarged, and hath ſo flouriſhed, that it will ſcarce giue place to any towne in Friezland. This towne hath breed & bene the nurcing mother of many Learned, and Famous men, as Ioachimus Hopperus, the light and ornament, not onely of this towne, but alſo of all Friezland and the Netherlands. Alſo Petrus a Fritema an excellent lawyer, Albert Hero a great Divine, and a Philoſopher, & divers others. Staveren lyeth by the ſhoare of the Southerne Sea, among plaine and levell fields, devided one from an other by many ditches, and draines. There is no remarkeable thing in it, but onely an ancient Caſtle, which commaunds & lookes into the Sea, the foundation whereof was layd Anno 1522. by George Schenck Gouvernour of Friezland at the commaund of the Emperour Charles the Fifth, that the Burgunians with the more eaſe, and conveniencie might ſend Men & Victualls into the next townes of Holland. Plinie in his 4. booke and 15. Chapter tearmeth the ancient Inhabitants thereof the Sturii. Harlingen lyeth upon the Mouth of the Southerne Sea, hath a fertill ſoile, a ſtrong Caſtle, a commodious haven, & a good read and harbour for the Eaſterlings, and Northerne Friezes, and a towne where there is a good traficke and a great reſort of people. Franiker was ſo called from the Francks, and is the natiue towne of Ioannes Vlpius, wo was very ſkilfull in the three languages. It is alſo an Vniverſitie. There are other townes alſo as Damme, Bolſvvarden, Ylſt, Sloten, VVorcum, and Hindeloopen.

Friezland hath alſo many Ilands, whereof Schellinck is the chiefeſt, noted much for the catching of Dogfiſh, which are taken in this manner: When they lie a ſunning by the Sea ſide, the Peſants ſeing them, wrappe about them ſelues Oxen or Cowes hides, and to amuze them, falls a dauncing, and a leaping upon the Sands, theſe fiſh being taken and delighted with this antick, come neerer to them, and being gott a pretty way from the brinke of the Sea, they pitching their netts, betweene them and home caſts of their hides, at which ſudden ſight, they being frighted, ſcrambling to get againe into the Sea, are taken in theſe foiles. Here where borne Rudolphus Agricola, VVeſſelus, and Reinerus Pridinus all famous Philoſophers and Devines. Ilands.

Lakes Meeres & Rivers. There are in Friezland (as is ſaid) many Lakes, Meeres, Pooles & Rivers, as the Lauvvers, called heretofore Laubacus, Lavica, and Labola, upon the Eaſt ſide lyeth Ems, and on the South part the Southerne Sea.

State & policie. Friezland is devided into three principall States. The firſt is the Countie of Ooſtergouv, whereof Leuvvarden is the capitall Citie, and theſe are devided againe into Lordſhip and precints, as Leuvvarden vvard, Tietzarker vvard, Yderdar vvard, Rauvvarder vvard, Fervverder vvard, Dongervvard in which VVetzens lyeth, Dantummer vvard, in which Dantummavvold ſtandeth, Cerſpelen, in which Suyrhuſum is. Colmerland, whereof Collum is the chiefe, VVeſternland wherein lies Beetz, Smalingerland, in which was the Abbey of S. Benedictus Order, called Smalingerly. The ſecond State is the Countie of VVeſtergouv, in which are theſe precints, as VVonſeravvard, whereof VVitmarſum is the chiefeſt. Franickervvard, Bonavvard, in which Mimerſgæ lyeth, Meynaldummarvvard, wherein Baert lyeth, Hennardarvvard, VVeynbritzarvvard in which Gauve lyeth, Geſterland, whereof VVickell is the chiefe place. The third is the Countie of Sevenvvoldt, having under it theſe precints, Donye, VVeyrſtal, in which Donigæ lyeth, Lemſter, Vuigæ, wherein Lemmer is. Aengevvert, in which lyeth Cathrybant, Schotterland, in which is both Nevv, and Old Schotten. VVittingervvard, in which are Old Horne, Haſſcher, Vyfge, wherein alſo lyeth Haſcherhorn. All VVeſt-Friezland, and Groyning, where in times paſt under the ſubjection, & obedience of the Biſhop of Vtrecht.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE SEIGNORIE or LORDSHIP OF GROYNING.

THE Citie of Groyning with the circumjacent territoires, and Villages, commonly called the Ommelands, were in ancient times held for a part of Friezland, becauſe they fronted, and lay ſo neere upon it, and after many troubles, became a rich and a populous State and Province of them ſelues, who for a long time mainteyned, & defended their owne Liberties, Lawes, and Statuts, ſometimes giving them ſelues under the protection of the Biſhop of Vtrecht, and otherwhiles under the Earles of Holland, for which they gaue them a yeerly tribute, and did them homage, till at laſt a faction roſe, betweene the Sheringers, and the Verkoopers of Friezland. Now for the preventing of future troubles, and the ending of this quarrell, the Emperour Maximilian the Firſt, gaue as a fee ſimple unto Duke Albert of Saxony, who was then Vicar of the Empire, the State of Groyning, and Friezland, lying on the further ſide of the Ems. This being diſtaſtfull to the Friezes, that would not acknowledge him, he was driuen to ſide with the Scheringers, by whoſe help, and aſſiſtance (under the Conduct of his Generall Fucks) he made warrs againſt the Verkoopers, that had joyned themſelues with thoſe of Groyning. The event of this warre was ſuch at the laſt, that thoſe of Groyning were forced to renounce all their claime, and pretences to the territoires of Ooſtergouw, VVeſtergouw, & Sevenwolds, and beſides, to paye to this Duke yeerly the ſomme of thirtie thowſand Crownes. The other townes alſo whereof Leuwarden was the chiefeſt, ſubſcribed to theſe conditions, but afterwards caſting of this yocke they revolted, whereupon the Duke of Saxonie coming into the Countrie with an army, conſtrayned them by force of armes to yeeld unto him. The Groyningers fearing to be ſerued in the ſame kind, by the mediation, and interceſſion of the Biſhop of Vtrecht obtained a truce from him.

Ancient Lords.

The Friezes after this rebelled a third time, which occaſioned a new warre, that laſted till the deceaſe of Duke Albert, who left his Sonne his Succeſſour. Vpon his death, the Friezes taking courage againe, thinking now no more perills & daungers had hung over their heads, beſieged Damme, which Edſard Earle of Embden held in the behalfe of the Duke of Saxonie. Hereupon alſo Huge Count of Leyſnitz, beſieged the Citie of Groyning, but once more through the interceſſion of the Biſhop of Vtrecht a truce was made for the ſpace of foure yeeres, which time being expired, and that thoſe of Groyning would no longer obey the Emperours commaund, Count Edſard of Embden, and Vyt, of Draeckdorf, as chiefes in the behalfe of Henry, Duke of Saxony, came againe and beſieged Groyning, and caſt up two ſtrong forts before it, which did much diſtreſſe them in the Winter. The towne now ſeing, that the promiſſed reliefe of the Overyſſelliſh townes failled them, where ready to haue entred into compoſition with the Saxon, had it not bene for an affront, which hapned in the interim. For juſt at that inſtant, when they were coming to partie, the Chieftaine Vyt of Drackendorf, had taken ſome Burgers priſoners, who being not able to pay that ranſome, which he had impoſed upon them, uſed them baſely, cutt of their noſes and eares, and turned them againe into the towne: which did ſo exaſperate the Citizens, that the treatie brooke off, and they would by no meanes haue to doe any more with the Saxon, but preſently offred the towne to the Earle of Embden, upon this condition, that he would never ſuffer them to come againe under the Saxon, & ſo agreeing together (Anno 1506.) the Earle entred into this towne, with full power and authority, and after the Citizens had taken the oath of allegance unto him, he built a ſtrong Caſtle in it. Duke George of Saxonie taking this monſtrous ill, with the aſſiſtance of Erick Duke of Brunſvvick in revenge of this, fell into East-Friezland, with a mighty army and burnt and ſpoyld his Countrie, which forced the Earle of Embden, to forſake Groyning & come to defend his owne Countrie and inheritance, for which afterward he was cited, and baniſhed by the Empire; & looſing Damme, was driven to quitte Groyning, as being unable to reſiſt ſo mightie Ennemies. Whereupon thoſe of Groyning, ſeing themſelues diſtitute of helpe and abandoned, ſent Deputies unto the Duke of Saxonie, that they were willing to compound with him, if they might keepe and envoy their priviledges, and that he would raze the Caſtle. The Duke of Saxony, not accepting of theſe proffers: but puffing and ſnuffing at them (as many proud men doe before a fall) would haue the towne deliuered into his hand, without any reſervation, or exception whatſoeuer, and ſo the Deputies of the towne returning without effecting of any thing, toold him before they departed, that neither he, nor any of his poſteritie, ſhould euer be Lord of Groyning againe: and coming home, conſulting among themſelues, chooſe an other Protector, and found it good, to preſent this towne to Charles of Egmont, Duke of Gelders, who received them into his protection, and preſently tooke poſſeſſion of it by William of Oyen & VVerner Spiegel. The Caſtle was inſtantly demoliſhed, and the Burgers tooke an oath to be true to the Duke, and the Crowne of France, becauſe he had alwaies ben in league with it, to helpe to defend him againſt the power of the Burgunians. This cauſed a long, and a bloudie warre, betweene theſe two Dukes, till at laſt, the Duke of Saxonie, being weary of the warre, ſould and reſigned all the right, and intereſt he had unto Friezland, unto Charles Prince of Spaigne, for two hundred thowſand Crownes, and ſo the Duke of Saxonie retreated into Miſia. After this a warre began againe, betweene thoſe of Gelders, and Burgundie. Flores of Yſelſteyn iided with the houſe of Auſtria, and the Earle of Embden tooke part with thoſe of Gelderland. But at laſt the Groyningers, having bene 20. yeeres under the commaund of the Gelderers, paying euery yeere unto the Duke, a tribute of 30. thowſand Gilders, expecting no good ſucceſſe, but that the Emperours power grew greater euery day, and that the Duke of Gelders was not able to ſupport them, addreſſed themſelues unto the Gouverneſſe of theſe Countries, the Lady Margaret, the Emperours Aunt, who accepting of them, ſent preſently Georg Schenk of Sautenburgh unto them, and (Anno 1536.) on the eight of Iuly, tooke the oath of allegance of them, to be true and faithfull to the Emperour her nephew, and thus this towne after ſo many troubles, and alterations of Princes, and Gouvernours came under the houſe of Burgundie and Auſtria. Afterward, in the yeere 1595. in the month of Iuly, Maurice Prince of Orange of famous memorie beſieged it ſtraightly & deſtreſſed it much, ſo that it was forced to yeeld, and to come into the union of the States of the Vnited Netherlands.

Groyning. The City of Groyning, being the Metropolitan of this Province, is a very ancient towne, and as Munſter writeth, was built 378. yeeres, by a Troyan called Grunnius, before the nativitie of Chriſt. Within the Citie there are many ſtanding Pooles, and Waters, partly made by nature, & partly caſt up by the hand of man, from whence are made broad moates, and ditches. It is a great towne, fairely built, and well compacted together, wherein many rich Burgers dwell.

Situation. It lyeth in the longitude of 28. degrees, and 24. minuts, and in the latitude of 53. degrees, and 16. minuts about 18. miles from Leuvvarden. The Cathedrall Church was dedicated to the honour of S. Martin, & is under the Biſhop of Vtrecht. In this Church there are a faire paire of Organs, which Rudolphus Agricola a citizen of Groyning, made with his owne hands. Anno 1614. the States of this Province for the advancement of Learning, erected here an Vniverſitie. It is a populous and a mighty towne with a ſtately Lordſhip belonging to it, whoſe commaund reacheth farre, both Eaſt and Weſtward. It hath a rich ſoile, and diverſe fatt paſtures, and Meddowes with many villages. Northward it is in league, and confederacie with thoſe territoires, which reach as farre as the Sea, commonly called the Ommelands. They haue alſo their gentry, which make the ſecond member of the Province of Groyning, but the City it ſelfe and the Magiſtrates thereof, are accounted for the firſt member.

Damme lyeth about ſixe miles from Groyning, it hath bene heretofore walled, but Anno 1536. was ſlighted. Damme.

Delfziel is a fine village, lying upon the Sea ſide, as farre from Groyning, as from Embden, lying about nine miles. There lies a ſtrong Schanſe, which oftentimes hath bene caſt up, and razed; but now is built up againe, and in Eſſe. Delfziel.

The City of Groyning, with the Ommelands, and Circumjacent territoires, make a Province of themſelues, & whereas heretofore there hapned ſome difference, betweene them & the other Vnited Provinces by ſome Commiſſioners and Counſellours, it was decided, and appeaſed, and publikely proclamed in the Hagh, Anno 1597. ſo that now they liue in peace unitie and quietneſſe one with another.

To the frendly

READER.

BEcauſe wee are not borne for our ſelves alone, but for the publick good, as farre as God our chief benefactour requireth of us. It behooveth us to accommodate with our beſt power this Geographick worke unto that end, a part whereof wee are here ſetting foorth. It is well knowne, that for the knowledge and practiſe of hiſtories the uſe, and profit of Geographie are greater then I can expreſſe: but it hath a worthines yet more praiſe-worthy, if well applyed to the end, whereunto it is moſt proper (the knowledge of a Politick State) therein repreſenting not only the ſight of places, but alſo the nature and lawfull condition of them all, as requiſite in the Duty of a Geographer. For as the Painter will not have ſatisfied his profeſſion, that hath repreſented a man according to the proportion of his limbs, but neglecting the colours and Phyſiognomick ſignes left unto us his nature & paſſions hidden, in like manner he will ſhape us a Geographick body, dead & ſenceleſſe, that ſetting down the deſcription of places ſhall forgett the relation and proportion which they hold together. Therefore, I have principally endeavored to deſcribe before every Mapp the order & nature of the moſt remarkeable places in every Province, the better to profit, the ſtudious, and carefull of Politick matters and State affaires. Yet if our deſcription be imperfect in many things, and erroneous in ſome points, maruall not at it (Reader.) For wee have not the formes of Gouvernment of all Countries, neither had wee leiſure to find them out: but of as much as wee have ben able to collect, by the reading of hiſtories, wee have at laſt drawn out a reſemblance, or rudiment of a Politick State, that may inſtruct thee of the order & condition of the thing propounded, ſo that it is the eaſier for thee to correct, and adde unto that which thou wilt find deficient in thine own country: which if thou doeſt, and wilt ſend it mee, I ſhall acknowledge it to proceed from thee in the reformed frontiſpice of the Fable. If every man would doe ſo much in his owne Country, it is incredible how great profit Lovers of Geographie ſhould reap thereby.

Now as there are three chief things to be conſidered in the gouvernment of Kingdomes, Provinces & Principalities, viz. the Eccleſiaſticall State, the Politick, and the Adminiſtration of Juſtice: I wil deſcribe firſt of all, before the Chorographick Carde of every Country, how many Politick States and conditions there are in it, according as the order of dignities is there obſerved. Then in the diſtinctiõ of places noble (becauſe the chiefe Gouvernment is in the hands of the Nobility.) I ſhall name thoſe firſt that are held in fief and redevance of the Prince: Then the free, and all orderly deſcending from the higheſt to the loweſt degree of Nobility, or Dukedomes, Earledomes, Lordſhips. And thirdly, in what Government the Province is divided, which be three things ſufficient to the knowledge of the Politick State. As for the Juſtice, wee will note the juriſdiction of the Dioceſes, & Parliaments or higher Aſſemblies, whereunto is raiſed Appeal from the Inferiour Courts. After which concerning the Cleargy, there will be made mention, firſt of the Arch-Biſhops (if there be any) then of Sutfragan Biſhops, and others that follow them in order. I have a good mind to run over all that: but if matter be defective, I will how ever doe my beſt, to ſtimulate (at leaſt) and provoke all lovers of their owne Countrie, to better and more perfect things: Each place ſhall be marked by number to find it preſently in the enſuing Table. The firſt number ſhall hold the degrees and minutes of longitude, which will be found at the North or South-ſide. The laſt ſhall beare the numbers of Latitude, which will be found at the Weſt or Eaſt ſide. From thoſe tearmes and limits, following on this ſide, the Meridians, on the other, the Paraleles, upon the latitude, you will come unto the common ſection and place propounded by you, of them that are in the Indices of Maps, you wil know the ſight by themſelves. But if the names be not found in the propounded table that will be the fault of him, who firſt repreſented it, for which cauſe the deſcription of Principalities, and Lordſhips was not to be forgotten.

And becauſe the Nobility holdeth the Gouvernment & Dominion of Provinces; it will be both pleaſing and profitable, to know the degrees and proper conditions thereof. The higheſt, is that of an Emperour or of a King, which follow in their ranck the Duke, Earle, Baron, and the Tribunus militaris, called of the Low Dutch Bander-heer. As it were Lord of a Band, that is a trouppe, ſubjected under his Banner. After him goes the Knight, called of the French Chevalier, of the low Dutch Ridder. Laſt of all is the Squire, that beareth the marks & ornaments of Nobility, but hath not yet received the dignity of this order. There are 3 degrees of Earles: he that is in the firſt is called of the French Vicomte, that is next unto his Duke before all other in privileges and authoritie, Ludovicus Guicciardin is of opinion, that he ſhould be called Burgrave. It may be that this order of Earles hath ben thus diminiſhed as it is ſeene this day, but at the beginning his authority was greater, as it appeareth in his deſcription. In the ſecond ranck is the Comte Provinciall, named of the Low-dutch, Landgrave: In the third the Marquis, Marcgrave. Theſe are the chief degrees and order that is held in the Government of each Country. There may be ſome difference in the ſubdiviſion of theſe degrees, but they are more diſtinguiſhed by their priviledges then formes of Government. I will ſet foorth the differences and Lawfull conditions of the order, I have propounded, as I have found it in a French Booke titled la Diviſion du Monde, deducing from the lower Nobility the creation of other degrees, the properties whereof and order of Government may the better be cleared thereby.

The Knight (ſaith he) or Chevalier, from a noble Squire, is thus made. After a long times triall of his valour in the warres, if he hath ben in ſundry charges, and have competent meanes to uphold the State of Chevalerie, being iſſued of a rich, great and noble family, when a battell is offred or other remarkeable encounter; Hee ſhall ſignifie to the Generall of the Army or to ſome generouſe and valliant Knight that he deſireth the order of Knighthood. Then after the conflict, where he hath behaved himſelfe well: he ſhall preſent himſelfe to the Generall or foreſaid Knight, whome he muſt pray in the name of God and S.George to give him the badge and marks of the order, which heard the Generall ſhall draw his ſword, & ſtrike this Petitioner thrice, ſaying: I create thee Knight in the name of God and S.George, to maintaine the Chriſtian faith, and faithfully keepe the Church, Juſtice, the Widowes, and Orphans. But if he be poore, though valliant, he may not be admitted therein: If he hath not ſufficient revenues to conſerve the honour and dignitie of Chevalerie.

The Tribunus militaris, ein Bander-heer is made of a Knight, if having for a great while followed the warrs, he holdeth lands enough and revenues, to wage & entertaine 50 Nobles, that is a trouppe, to follow his enſigne on horſeback: for none may plant his Cornette or Banner, if he can not bring in to the field at his owne charge, a trouppe of 50 Horſe-men at the leaſt, all Nobles and well maintained.

The Baron may be made of a Knight or Noble squire, when he hath in his Tenements foure Caſtleſhips, having high, meane, & lower juriſdiction: then the King may give him leave to take up the Banner of a Baron, though not unleſſe he hath made proof of the greatnes of his valour in the laſt warres. Thus by his firſt offices he is Knighted, by the ſecond a Tribunus militaris, and by the third a Baron,

The Earle is the next aſcending. and firſt of all, the Frontier-Earle, called Marqueſſes or Marc-grave, he may be created ſuch that hath two or three Baronies mortaiſed under one Dutchie, and may be created by his Duke in whoſe dominion he holdeth them.

Then the Provinciall Earle, (which is Land-grave) is made if he hath foure Baronies under him, whome the Duke may create or the King at the Dukes leave or entreaty.

The Vicomte (Prince Earle) may be made if he holdeth five Counties, or more, in one Dutchie, or joyned one to the other, and may be created by the Duke in great ſolemnity by the Kings permiſſion; whoſe preſence will make his principalitie the more honorable. The Earle that will be a Duke, ought firſt of all, to have in the Kingdome where he is to be crowned foure chief Earledomes, and in each of them 4 other Counties or Baronies under the faith and protection of them, ſo ſhall he have the right and title of Ducall dignity: He ought withall to be crowned by the King or Emperor, by whome he is preſented with a litle hatt enriched with pearles & pretious ſtones in the chief of his townes, and great aſſembly of Princes, Dukes, Earles, and Barons, in a great feaſt day, as is vſuall at the inauguration of Kings.

He that will be a King muſt neceſſarily have foure Dutchies, holding together ſubject unto himſelfe, and in every Dutchie foure Cities, whereof he be onely Lord, in each of them an Arch-Biſhop, & under each of them 10 Epiſcopall Provinces, thus provided he ſhall preſent himſelfe to the Imperiall Majeſtie as to his Soveraign Lord, or prevaile ſo farre by his Embaſſids that he may come and crowne him.

This forme of creating Kings and other Princes ſeemeth new, for whilſt the wandring nations of the Goths, Vandals, Lombards, and other, who brought their Kings along with them, did not meaſure the Royall dignitie by the extent of lands, but by the ſtrength and multitude of people. The Duks themſelves who were firſt inſtituded anno 569 by Longinus Exarck of Ravenna, then eſtabliſhed by the Lumbards, were not choſen but for their valour and prudence in the managing of affaires: Add, that Paulus AEmilius ſaith, that the Dukes and Earles, were at firſt committed onely to the keeping of townes and Gouvernments of people, conditionally, that they might be depoſed when need and occaſion ſhould require: neither could the foreſaid Lawes of creating Princes be made or eſtabliſhed ſuch, ſince they meaſure and require the goods and tenements to be hereditary, & under ſuch & ſuch conditions: Becauſe the Dutchies and Counties were conferred by Kings and Emperors onely for certain times, and upon conditions, which might be changed from day to day: But though the time of ſuch inſtitutions can not properly be determinated. It is notwithſtanding probable, that the Monarks introduced and confirmed them under Ottho the ſecond, Emperor: or about the yeare of our Lord 1000 or a litle after. For untill that Emperor every Prince according to his ritches power and ambition did aſpire unto a greater degree and dignity, and even to the Royalty it ſelfe, thus of one Kingdome of Lorraine, which extended from the Rhin unto the Eſcaut or River of Hont, was limited with the Sea of Friſeland, and belonged onely to Lotharius Sonne of Ludovicus Pius, are ſince proceeded and become many Kingdomes, viz. That of Burgundie, which is beyond the Mount Jura, extended unto the Alpes, comprehending all Swiſſerland, the Rauraci (thoſe of Baſle) the Dauphinois, Savoyards, and Burgundians beyond Iura, & the Kingdome of Provence, which held likewiſe part of Burgundie and Savoy, called ſince the Kingdome of Arles, whereof alſo the Arch-Biſhop of Treves is called Arch-Chancellour and Electour of the Empire: Beſides this, the Kingdome of Lorraine, held that, which now is called Lorraine, and with it, the reſt betweene the Rhin, and Eſcaut, unto the Friſon Sea, and ſometimes called the Kingdome of Auſtraſia. Againe Charles the Bald & his Brother Lewis, did part this Kingdome of Lorraine betweene them, retaining each the title of King: I omit many other Kingdomes borne at the ſame time, as great mens ambition lead them: but Ottho the ſecond having taken away the name of Kingdome, divided this Lorraine in new Dutchies and Counties as members cut of from the ancient body as ſaith Cuſpinian; & having divided it 981 did firſt eſtabliſh Charles brother to Lotharius King of France, Duke of Lorraine as witneſſeth Richard de Waſſembourg. And it ſeemes that ſince that time this Arbitrary Election of Kings and Princes hath ceaſed, by the card which Monarcks have had, to reunite and joyne all to their owne body, firme and naturall; according to the proportion & harmonie of the members with the head of a humain body. In a word, to keepe the better order, for the future, in Principalities and magnaging of affaires, theſe Lawes were introduced in the time which I have mentioned.

Thoſe are (Reader) the degrees of Nobility & difference of dignities. Now, note how in every Kingdome the Provinces be dividen, what is the forme of gouvernment, & with what proportion every thing is there diſtributed according to their degrees: what is the proper duety of every one, what habitude, report, and conference one hath to the other, and principally to his chief. You will finde therein a notable harmonie, to the place and tranquillity, to the ſtrength, and authority, pride and riches, vertue and wiſdome, to the Majeſtie of a Kingdome: the extent and enlargement of limits, to varietie and incertitude, to the decline and deſtruction, or other thing whereunto one may tend, as formes of managing human affaires be diverſe: that which you will finde or judge to fall out ill, obſerve whence it may proceed, that which you will ſee to have ſucceeded well, enquire after the cauſes of it: And thus will you know the beſt forme of Policie, and will treat with better luck & profit, all that which concerneth Geographie. Aud to the end you may enter it more methodically, I will add here as the

as the foundation of the whole building an Abridgement of the Politick State of the Kingdome of France, which the noble and learned Dominicus a Burmannia made and dreſſed up at my requeſt in behalfe of the worke and Reader, whoſe example ſhould be enſued by the ſubject of other States, that ſo other more remarkeable formes of a human Gouvernment might be reduced as in a ſhortned Picture.

The Politicke State of the Kingdome OF FRANCE.

THE French, held by all writers, for a moſt adviſed people, & great warriers, willing to eſtabliſh unto themſelves a good Politick State, preferred the Monarchie to all other. For they ſaw it thus ordained by nature, that men doe more reverence and feare one, that precedeth all others in dignitie, then a certain number of choſen men liable unto change: Adde, that reaſon ſuggeſteth that in all things men neceſſarily have recourſe to one onely, as to a head or ſpring of all actions, and that the authority that many have to command together, is a matter full of difficulties and danger. Beſides, examples ſhew that Monarchies though mutable by the death of Princes or other human accidents, have laſted longer, have ben quieter, and not ſo often croſſed as the Ariſtocratie or Democratie, as is ſeene in the Aſſyrians, Parthians and Ægyptians, and to come nearer home, in England, Spaine and France, to whoſe States none may compare for the time of their continuance. It happens, not ſeldome that the conduct of the moſt eminent called Ariſtocratie, is changed in Oligarchie which is a Gouvernement of few perſons when of the moſt apparent a few of them onely doe ſhare the honors and advantages of the Publick to increaſe their privat wealth by inpayring of the Common, which they ought principally to have tendred. The other forme which concerneth the vulgar, & is termed Popular State or Democratie hath ever ben held turbulent, ſtormy, full of broyles, & Ennemy to excellent and generous perſons. The French then, have ever moſt adviſedly choſen to leave the diſpoſition & conduct of affaires rather to one alone whome they ſaw to excell the other in Prudence, courage, and vertue, then to many of the chief or to the multitude it ſelfe. By reaſon that ſuch a perticular State may ſooner and more eaſily prevent the Inconvenients, and when happned, remedie them alone, then many together equall in degree and authority. Yet not ſo, that they have given an unbridled power, to doe all things according to his owne will, but well limited with certain Lawes and conditions that there might be noe grownd for Tyrannie: as will be ſeene ſubſequently. Finally, as there is nothing among mankind that is ſolid conſtant and permanent, but all is corrupted & loſt with time, or changed with the courſe of ages. So is it with France, for though it hath alwayes ben a Monarchie yet it hath not alwayes ben guided by the ſame forme of Gouvernment, which wee will make appeare ſummarily and orderly from the beginning of that Kingdome, according to what wee have learned out of diverſe authors.

Such was the State of Gaule before that the Romans had conquered and reduced it into a Province, that it was neither wholly governed by one alone, nor the particular Townes and Cities under the Popular power, no more then the chiefeſt perſons. But was ſo divided that many of them were gouverned by the adviſe of the chiefeſt, which there upon were called free, & other acknowledged Kings over them. All obſerved this old cuſtome to convoque at a certain place and day a Generall Counſell of all the nation there to adviſe and reſolve on that which concerned the good of all the State. Tacitus in his 3 booke numbreth therein 64 Cities, that is to ſay (as is underſtood by Cæſar) Provinces, which did not onely uſe the ſame language behaviour cuſtomes and quallities, but had alſo like Magiſtrates and Officers, as he mentioneth in diverſe places the Cities of the Heduans, Bourgundians, Arvernes, thoſe of Auvergne, & the Rhemiſh, Rheims chiefly. Now they called their Kings then (or rather Roytelets) thoſe who had a Royall command, not for a certain time onely, as the Magiſtrates of Cities, but for their life time, & perpetually, though but of a ſmall extent, whom cuſtome hath ſince changed in Dukes, Earles, and Barons.

Thoſe Kings were not hereditary, but choſen by the people, for the good opinion they had of their juſtice, neither had they an infinite, abſolute, and diſſolute power, but ſo bound by certain Lawes, that they were not leſſe under the peoples authority then the people under theirs: So that their Royalties were ſcarce any things elſe then a perpetuall Magiſttature: for Cæſar nameth ſundry particulars whoſe parents had obtained the Kingdome, they were then kept cloſe & reſtrained by the authority of ſome principall Officers choſen by the people, wherein Plato, Ariſtotle, Polybius and Cicero ſay, that the forme of a Commonwealth conſiſteth.

Now after that Gaule was reduced by the Romans in forme of a Province, her Kings were thus choſen & eſtabliſhed, for their vertue and Nobility, (according to the cuſtomes of the German Kings ſaith Tacitus) by the peoples judgement and election, of whome there are onely three races found, ſince 1200 yeares, wherein this Kingdome hath floriſhed.

The firſt, of the Merovinges, which iſſued out of Merovée, have continued their familie by the ſpace of 283 yeares.

The ſecond, of the Carolovinges, which ſprung from Charles the great extended their linnage by the ſpace of 337 yeares.

The third of the Capets or Capevinges, which deſcended of Hugh Capet, doe yet continue for above 600 yeares to command in the Kingdome. For although the Aſſemblies of the generall States, & Great Counſell of all the people hath ever had free authority to chuſe their Kings; They have alwayes nevertheleſſe left that prerogative unto the children of the deceaſed Kings, and to thoſe of their bloud, for the good eſteem they had of their Nobility (as the Germains) and the vertue which they reputed naturall in them. Yet ſo notwithſtanding that if ſuch were not 14 yeares old, they could not be thereto admitted, but they provided themſelves of another that were of a Lawfull age: A Preſident whereof is ſeene in Clogio, King in the yeare of Chriſt 309. There be alſo ſundry examples that this Kingdome of France hath oftentimes ben divided among many children of the deceaſed Kings, by adviſe of the chiefeſt in the kingdome. And if the people having rejected the Sonne of the deceaſed did chuſe another, they left unto the rejected for the maintenance of his ranck & dignitie the goods which were proper and patrimoniall to the deceaſed. The reſt which belonged unto the kingdome State or Crown was left unto him, to whom the kingdome was given, as alſo the things which are ſaid Fiſcall and publick, as deſtined, both for the entertainment of his authority, and the remedy of ſuch accidents as might fall upon the State, of which ſorte are the Dutchies and diverſe Counties, which likewiſe were aſſigned unto them, in the great Aſſemblies: It hath alſo ben evermore obſerved, that the daughters of Kings ſhould be kept back from the ſucceſſion of the kingdome, not by the Salique Law (as is, not well credited) for it ſpeaketh of none but of the private patrimonie, neither of the Fiefs, nor the goods Allodiaux, whoſe author was one Salagaſt, one of the chief of the kingdome, whence it tooke the name of Salique: But the daughters being poſtpoſed, the Crowne is deferred by the moſt eminent, to the Brothers, or Uncles, or Coſens, or other neare kindred: and thus much for the firſt poinct. Before the breaking up of the ſecond, it ſeemeth not amiſſe to repreſent in few words the members of the kingdome, that preſide at the eſtabliſhing of the King, the better to cleare there by the harmony which is betweene the head & members of ſo great a body.

Above all, this is very remarkeable that this Kings power, and the Orders of this kingdome are ſo united, and reciprocally obliged with mutuall offices, that ſcarce any notable differents can raiſe between them. There are three kinds of principall orders, of which hath alwayes conſiſted the ſolemne Aſſembly, and generall Counſell of the whole kingdome. viz. The Nobility, the people, and the vulgar. Each of them hath accoding to his quality, his particular Lawes, and cuſtomes, with which they are ſerved, & are ſo bound, joyned, and incorporated to the generall body, that they can not eaſily ruinate one another, or conſpire againſt the Kings perſon. As for the Clergy which may be put in, for a fourth Order, though for the greatnes of their meanes and authority they may be placed in the firſt ranck; we will ſpeak of them attetwards.

The Nobility of France, or the order of the Nobles, and Chevaliers, enjoyeth very great commodities and privileges, whence proceedeth the great affection they beare to their King, even to the hazarding of their lives for his, & the good of the Country, for they pay no tribut, they goe armed every where, and have meanes to live with honour, ſo that none of them is forced to any vile or mercenary State, for it is not permitted them, unleſſe they live at home as home-bred Sluggards, and preferre a queſtuary husbandry to ſuch expence as ſhould bring them honour, and the amitie of every body. but if they will follow the Court, they have enough to entertaine themſelves & be honeſtly ſet forth: Becauſe there be many & ſundry charges & conditions in the Kings traine, appointed to the Nobility alone, where they may ſpend a quarter of a yeare, and then returne to the pleaſure and husbandry of their lands: They have all penſions from the King, wages, and yearely entertainements, with occaſions enough (which are oftentimes offered) to hope yet better things: the Princes, and others more eminent in the State, receive alſo penſions from the King in acknowledgement of the paines they take in the managing of publick affaires: And reciprocally ſuccour the decayed Gentlemen, either with their table at Court & ordinary maintenance, or with other meanes required. Moreover the Kings doe keepe evermore great numbers of Cavalerie to exerciſe and breed up the Nobility, amongſt which there be many offices & honours diſtributed unto them, which continues as well in peace as warre: The greateſt of the Nobility are provided according to their merit and quality, of thoſe charges of Cavalerie, ſome are Lieutenants, others Cornettes, others Archers, and thoſe which are unable to beare Armes ſerve the others: If there is noe warre, they may ſtay at home, where they may ſpare part of that pay which they have received in the warrs: withall it is almoſt incredible, what great number of charges and offices there is in the townes, appropriated to the Nobleſt, for ſome of them are Gouvernours of Provinces, others have charge of the Frontieres and limits of the kingdome, others of Caſtles and Forts, others of Townes and Fortifications, that I may not ſpeake of the higheſt offices, as Conſtables, Admiralls, Marſhalls, Great Maſters, Colonels, and others. Beſides, the Kings are wont to give yearely penſions to many Gentlemen that have no other charge then to wayt neare their perſons, which are therefore called Penſionaris: whereby it appeareth in how faire and advantagious eſteem the French Nobility is held, and that not without reaſon, for it is the Nobility principally that maintaineth the Country againſt their Ennemies, and by nature doth oftentimes excell the others. Such advantages likewiſe are diſtributed unto them as well for recommendation of their Anceſtors vertue, as to be unto them a ſtinging goad to runne on better and better, through the careere of honor.

The other order hath likewiſe no ſmall benefits: Wherein are the Marchants, who gaine and grow the richer, becauſe they may ſo freely traffique throw-out all France, and that the Nobles make no profeſſion of Merchandiſe; they goe for the moſt part very well in clothes: Unto theſe alſo are given the charges of receiving keeping, and diſtributing the Finances, and even the States of Iudicature, and all that concerneth the diſtribution of Iuſtice, whence ariſeth to them a great deal both of profit and honour, for this kingdome beareth many kindes of Iudges, Councellers, Advocats, Procuratonrs, Greffiers, and the like, farre more numerouſly then all the reſt of Chriſtendome, which is exceeding meet for thoſe that contemning Marchandiſe or other callings apply themſelves unto this golden harveſt. In ſhort, this order doth ſo many wayes profit that it is envyed of the Nobility, though it precedeth all others in dignity and fame. And many even of other conditions endeavour to thruſt in among theſe pecuniary men.

The third order is of the Vulgar, and indifferently mixt multitude which make manufacture, and workmanſhip of all kinds, and Country labour. Now, it is not fitting they have to much liberty, or be to rich, nor exerciſed in the warres: For ſince all men, doe naturally hate all kind of ſervitude, & affect to encreaſe their riches, they would preſently take up Armes and oppreſſe their Principalls, which hath ſometimes and even of our age hapned in France, and elſewhere. But it is neceſſary that in every State there be ſuch orders and degrees to conſerve it, as wee ſee in a human body the weaker and ignobler members helpe and miniſter to the worthier. Neither have theſe (notwithſtanding) occaſion of complaining, or deploring their condition, becauſe that Iuſtice is equally diſtributed unto them as to others, and they are maintained in the ſame liberty and freedom which they have received from their forefathers, they are alſo admitted to many offices of State, in ſuch ſort, that by their labour, diligence and vertue, they may aſcend to the ſecond order, which may not attaine to the firſt but by expreſſe favour of the King who permitteth it to thoſe whome he ſees he ſees to have done or be able to performe ſome memorable exploit for the good of the State: Which is prudently introduced: firſt, to conſerve the order of Nobility and Chevalerie entire, which diminiſheth dayly in purſuite of the warres, and ſcarce can beare up the burthen of Armes. Secondly, that men wakened by the object of ſo faire a recogniſſance may ſtrive by vertue, who ſhall firſt aſcend to this degree of honour. Thus, thoſe of the lower order aſpire to the ſecond, where being come, they labour generouſly to reach even unto the firſt. Whereby it happens, that there is leſſe envy and enmity among them, ſeing the path-way, and ſpacious field opened to the greateſt honours, and on the other ſide, the danger & puniſhment propounded unto thoſe, that will purſue them unlawfully and againſt the faſhion and cuſtome of the Country: But if the aſſays thereof were too irkſome and difficult, or that men ſhould deſpaire ever to aſcend higher, then the more couragious even of the lower State, would eaſily find occaſion of change, and induce thoſe of their condition, to take up Armes againſt the greateſt: but the contrary is ſeene, & many even of the meaner ſorte are finally provided of faire eſtates. A point practiſed by the old Romans, that traced the way unto thoſe of the popular condition to aſcend unto the State of Chevalerie, whence afterwards they had an open entry to the dignity of the Patricii and Roman Senators: Beſides this, you ſee therein the order of the Clergy common to all others that are affected thereto, for it happens oftentimes in France, that ſome men even of the moſt vulgar recomended by their learning and vertue attaine to the greateſt honours, even of the Cardinalat and Papacie. A thing which enflameth men exceedingly, to their ſtudies and practiſe of vertue.

By all which as aforeſaid, it appeareth, how faire & pleaſant is the connexion of the order of this Realme, whereof if one ſwarveth from his Duety, the remedy is at hand, for if the Nobility doth wrong the others, Juſtice correcteth it, whoſe authority is ſo great, that even all the Princes, hereof be they never ſo puiſſant are forced to ſubmitt themſelves thereunto. And if the people or vulgar undertaketh any novelty as is oftentimes hapned, the Nobility can eaſily by their power and practiſe of Armes make them recant and repaire their offence, which hath cõteined all in their owne duety, and make them to live quietly together, ſince they neither had cauſe, nor meanes to attempt any thing, & that puniſhment lyes at the doore of the delinquent: Thus they all unanimouſly love their King as the Author of ſo great happines, and when need is, doe moſt willingly obey his commands, and withall contribute very freely to the publick occaſions: But if any private man miſtaketh himſelfe herein, there is preſent phyſick for this diſeaſe, which hindreth it from going further.

Thus you ſee how properly this Monarchie is tempered, according to diſtributive Juſtice, governed under a King Ariſtocratically, that is, by adviſe of the principals, and democraticaly alſo, by the entermiſe of the people, ſith the Offices & honours are alwayes open to the French, and this is the forme of the Commonwealth ſo much recõmended by ancient Philoſophers, by reaſon of the ſweet harmony and right temperature of the conditions thereof, wherein this old golden Law hath a place, Let the peoples good be for a ſupreme Law.

But to returne to our purpoſe, of theſe three orders they were wont to congregate on the firſt day of May, a publick and ſolemne Councel, called ſince a Parliament, upon ſome important affaires. Where th: King ſate in a gilded ſeat as Preſident, under which were ſeated firſt of all the Princes, Lords and Officers of the Crowne, then the Deputies of all the Cities of the Realme. The King was led at the entry of the Palace on a Chariot, drawen by Oxen, driven by his Chartier, ſo ſeated by the Princes in his ſaid gilded chaire (as is mentioned.) After whom every one ſate in his ranck, in which State and Sacrarie was called the Royall Majeſty.

The authority of this Aſſembly hath ever ben great, in which from the beginning of this State was principally treated of theſe points. Firſt, of the Creation & Depoſition of the King: then of the peace or warre then offred, of publick Lawes, of the higheſt Offices: Magiſtratures, and Procurations of the Realm, of the Aſſignation of part of the Royall Patrimonie to the Children of the deceaſed King, of the Daughters dowry termed in the vulgar German Abannagium, as a part cut of: In a word, of all that which is called this day by the vulgar, State affaires: for (as I ſaid) there was no other conference about affaires of the Kingdome, then in this Aſſembly. Moreover, if any Prince or other illuſtrious perſon was accuſed of ſome fault and forfeitur, he was called to this place to be judged on the defence which he produced to the contrary. If the King himſelf intended to make ſome great expences, as to build a Curch or Monaſtery, he propounded it to the Councell to take their adviſe therein: finally the authority thereof was ſo ample that even forraine Princes did ſubmitt the deciſion of their controverſies, to the ſentence they ſhould receive from thence.

Now the Hiſtoriographers doe call this Councell Court, ſometimes Aſſembly, now & then Parliament, and at other times Placitum, Arreſt, becauſe that the buiſeneſſe in queſtion having ben well debated there, and conſidered, finally the Decree pleaſed the greateſt part. As the judgements and adviſes of Philoſophers were called by Cicero and others, Placita: whence this clauſe at the ends of Edicts & Mandats of the French Kings, Quoniam ita placitum eſt, becauſe it hath ben thus decreed, ſeemeth to have ben drawn, which is not now well rendred by the Secretaries Car tel eſt noſtre plaiſir, or For ſuch is our pleaſure.

There were alſo choſen Governours or Lieutenants of the State, who under the Merovinges were called Majors of the Kings houſe, that is Maſters of the Royall Palace that had ſuch power and authority as the Superintendents over the Gardes of the Imperiall Pretorium, who were alſo called Præfecti encharged of the Government of the Palace: Theſe having by the Kings drowſines as it were beleagred the Royall authority, did in the end, (increaſed in power) ſeaſe and uſurpe it themſelves: for as they managed almoſt all the greateſt charges, and commanded the Armies in time of warre, the Kings contented with the ſole and emty titles of Kings, lived in deliciouſnes and ſloath. In ſuch ſort, that this evill crept in ſo farre, that under Childeric the 18 King, Pepin Major of the Palace, who under the Kings Authority had allready ſwayed and ended many warres, tamed and ſubdued the Saxons, did not refuſe the preſent occaſion of making himſelf King, ſeing himſelfe favored of a victoriouſe and triumphant Army. Now this great authority of the Majors began as I have ſaid in the time of Clotaire the ſecond, about the yeere of Chriſt 588. to wit, on the 130 yeare of the eſtabliſhment of this Realme.

In ſhort, Pepin was promoted King, after the depoſing of Childeric, concerning which you may ſee the Appendix of Humbaldus, or John Tritem. beſides Marſil. Patav. c. 6. de Tranſlat Imperii. In this yeare (ſaith Tritem.) the heads of the Kingdome aſſembled upon the depoſing of Childeric the ſlothfull, held a Councell, and they all unanimouſly conſented, that Childeric ſhould be depoſed, as having neither judgement nor power to command, and that Pepin who had all the publick authority ſhould be advanced in his place. Whereunto notwithſtanding Pepin would never conſent before he had the adviſe of Pope Zacharias there upon, for certain reaſons (which he did alledge) moving him thereunto.

In ſtead of this maſter of the Palace, the Conneſtables, Comites ſtabuli, ſeem to have ſucceeded: In thoſe times, them were called Comtes that were provided of great eſtates at Court, and that in part governed the State. This Comte d'Eſtable was peradventure he, whom the Romans called Magiſter Equitum, that is, that had the charge and conduct of the horſe-men, & to whom obeyed thoſe that had charge of the keeping of the horſe, who were commonly called Scarieri. The Germans call him Mareſchalcus, and hath at this time ſuch an authority, as formerly the Præfectus Pretorii, or (as I have ſaid) the Maſters of the Palace, under whom are at this preſent 4 Mareſchalci or Magiſtri Equitũ, that decide the differences hapned in the warr, and warlike employment.

Since that, were created in the time of Hugh Capet, (though all writers doe not well agree in their Origine,) the Peeres of France, for having deprived the true heire of his Crowne, he thought fitt to oblige unto himſelfe by ſome new office the moſt eminent of the State, and it is generally beleeved that he effected ſome ſuch thing.

It is ſaid, thoſe Peeres were choſen for two occaſions: the firſt, that they might have the charge of the Kings Inauguration, or (as they ſpeake then) Inveſtiture of the Realme, that is to ſay, that they might adorne the King of his Habit, badge, and ſolemne ornaments in the Aſſembly of the Princes, and moſt eminent in the Kingdome: and to doe Juſtice if any of the chiefeſt were accuſed of felonnie, or other capital crime: for as formerly thoſe differences were made even in the generall Councell (as I have ſaid) and that ſince, under the Capets, that cuſtom was referred to the Parliament of Juſtice, to whoſe judgement the Princes not willingly ſubmitted themſelves, it ſeemed good to theſe ſecond Kings, the better to ſecure their affaires, to eſtabliſh this order and aſſembly of Peeres, beſides the Court of Parliament, which was ſince called the Court of the Peeres, The order and number of whom, hath notwithſtanding oftentimes ben varied, for they have not allwayes ben twelve, (as ſome beleeve, but ſometimes more, and ſometimes leſſe, as the King pleaſed, who diſtributed the degrees and advantages: which may be proved by ſundry examples, as the dignity of Petre was conferred to diverſe Princes, and by their adviſe ſome others of the principalls of the Kingdome even Biſhops, were added. Finally, forreine Kings & Princes were enrolled in their number.

And though by the inſtitution of theſe Peeres, as alſo that Hugh Capet made the Charges and dignities as Dukedomes and Earledomes of temporall, perpetuall, to gaine the hearts of the chief of the Kingdome did not leſſen and (ſlily) not a litle diminiſh the authority of this Generall Councell, although the whole buſines proceeded with the adviſe of this aſſembly: Yet notwithſtanding, other important affaires depended ſtill of the formet order of this Councel, which is the ground of Budeus & Charles du Moulins ſaying, that the right price and raiſing of money hath allwayes remained in the peoples power.

That warre is memorable, which the principalls of the Kingdome animated by the continuall and daily prayers of the Commons, were reſolved to undertake for the publike good againſt King Lewis the 11. Neither ought that generall Councell held at Tours under the ſame King, the firſt day of April, anno 1467 to be forgotten, wherein was concluded that 36 diſcreet men ſhould be choſen of all the orders for Surveyors of the State, that ſhould reforme it, and take heed to the Right and Juſtice, to wit, 8 of the Clergy, (which was then allready become an order) as many of the Nobility, and as many of the Iuſtice & people: which the King did ratifie by his letters in forme of an Edict, teſtifying that he would be pleaſed with all that ſhould be ordained by thoſe 36 perſons for the good and honour of the Kingdome.

Such was in generall the forme of governing the Realme untill the Capevinges, and wee have rehearſed the charges of the officers of the Kingdom, which they that adminiſtred were properly called Adminiſtrators of the Crowne and Kingdome, Officers or Wiſe, as were indeed thoſe, who (as wee have ſaid) made the Publick Councell of the Realm, and likewiſe the Peeres of France, the Conneſtable, Admirall, Chancellor, and High Treaſurer, or Super-intendant of the Finances. There hath alſo ever ben Councellours and Officers to the King that ruled his particular affaires, and ſerved him as ordinary Miniſters of his perſon, as are Chamberlaines & other Officers of the Court and Kings perſon.

Beſides theſe charges, in proceſſe of time, other were inſtituted, namely for the Iuſtice as are the Parliaments and Souveraign Court; for it is to be noted, that till the time of the Capevinges the forme of miniſtring Iuſtice to the parties, was ſimple, eaſy, and ſhort; by reaſon of the few differences and ſuites that were then among the French, which may be gathered by King Lewis the ſecond, ſurnamed Riche, (reigning about the yeare 1233. as the Lord of Ionville writeth in his life) who decided & diſpatched forth with the differences of the parties that came, and complayned to him, or elſe in cauſe he were buſy referred them to ſome of his traine, who made an end of them immediately: And that at the example of other Kings his Predeceſſours, namely of Charles the great, who determined of ſuites as they were putting on his ſhoes: and indeed one of the Lawes of his Capitulary, beare: That our Comiſſioners, and Sentmen give notice to the Comtes and People, that wee intend to ſit one day by in every weeke to heare the pleas and differences of parties. But at length the malice of men waxing greater, the number of ſuits increaſed ſo much, that they were forced to dreſſe up a bench expres & ſedentary: Such as was the Palace of Paris under Lewis Hutin, or (as others think) of Philippe le Bel, about the yeare 1292. Then they multiplied ſo much the number of theſe few Iudges & Councellers, that they made of them three Courts of Iuſtice, and ſundry roomes. The great Chamber, the Chamber of Enqueſts, and that of Requeſts. But in the yeare 1522, the King Francis, the firſt increaſed the number of 20 new Councellours, of whom was made up the fourth Chamber: and himſelfe anno 1543 added yet others 20. Furthermore, this Aſſembly of Judges was not in former times perpetuall and continuall, as it is this day, but aſſigned and indictive for a certain time and Place, ſignified by the Princes adviſe, who onely had power to ordaine it. And commonly on S. Martins day (the 11 of November) he gave notice by a publike edict, that he graunted power to the Judges to meet, and begin a Parliament, which thing was called an opening of Juſtice or Parliament, that had ceaſed untill then.

But the authority of this Councell and Parliament advancing by litle and litle, increaſed ſo farre, that noe Edict, Mandat, or Royall order, had any force or authority: if this Court of Parliament had not counſelled, or at leaſt approved it in their Aſſembly, for after their approbation it was to be verified and regiſtred in the Regiſtrie of this Court, then publiſhed upon the place, and thence in all parts of the Kingdome where it was needfull. Neither was there any Officer of note, or Magiſtrat in the whole State, either civill or military, that was not admitted, approved and authorized by it, and made oath unto it to performe his duety well, well, ere he did medle with this charge, ſince it was not Lawfull to appeall from this Courts Arreſts, which were immutable as ſacred and perpetuall. In a word, all the power and authority which the generall Councel or Aſſembly of the Generall States had ſometimes had, was in the end transferred to this Court.

But now, when the King doth deliberate & ordaine all in his Privy Councell, it is converted in a forme of Councel of ordinary Iudges, and is no more employed in the affaires of the Realme. It is ſtated and fixed at Paris, the authority thereof is ſtill very farre extended, and hath more power, then all the other Parliaments, which are now ten in number throughout all France: Each of them dealeth with all cauſes both civill and criminall, and men muſt reſt on what ſhall be there reſolved. That of Paris hath yet more, that it is honored ſomtimes with the Kings preſence, if any very important buſines hapneth, either concerning warre or peace; as alſo that the Kings Agrements, Covenants, Treaties, and whatſoever toucheth the ſetling & conſervation of the State is there recited, approved, verified, and enroled in the Regiſter of that Court, which is kept by them. Thus, thoſe matters which were of old, and from the beginning of the Kingdome of France-Gaule, referred to the publick Aſſemblies of the States, and afterwards (them being aboliſhed) to the Senate or Parliament of Paris, are at this preſent trans-ferred to the King only, and thoſe whom he will take for his Councell. But to proceed.

There is another Conncell, called Great; compoſed of the Aſſembly of the true Princes & principalls, both of the Kings traine and Kingdome; in which under the Kings Charles the 7, and 8. was only treated of publick affaires, and that which concerned the good of the Kingdome; but the time and diſſolute number of ſuites, have very much impaired the eſtabliſhment thereof: ſo that Charles the 8. was adviſed to make an ordinary ſettled Councell of 17 Councellers, which King Lewis the 12. hath ſince encreaſed to 20. adding thereunto the Chancellour for their Preſident, in ſo much that under King Francis the firſt, the dignity of Chancellour was turned to that of a Preſident, and ordained, that they ſhould attend no other cauſes then extraordinary, that ſhould be referred unto them by the Privy Councell, and the appeals of the Provoſt of the houſhold.

Beſides the foreſaid ten ordinary Parliaments, and the Great Councell, the King holdeth yet a Privy Councell, which is ordinary and perpetuall following the Kings perſon, & is not commonly employed then in the affaires of the State and Kingdome, though it be now allmoſt converted in a bench of ordinary Iuriſdiction, attending oftentimes to the cauſes of townes and Parliaments, and ſometimes even to the leaſt cauſes of perticular perſons, in ſuch ſorte, that very eminent Lords withdrawne to ſuch occaſions, have in a manner put by all thought, and knowledge of publick affaires, and thoſe that concerned only the wellfare & manutention of the Realme. Whereby all the carke and Governement of the State ſeemeth to be fallen on the King himſelfe and but on few of thoſe which are ordained to that end, of whom conſiſteth the Councell Privy and of State. Wherein are deliberated and reſolved the greateſt buſines, upon which it was allready adviſed in the Privy Councell, and that of the Finances, provided they be ſuch as require the Kings expreſſe knowledge. All the Benefits, Letters and Mandats of the King are there ſigned, Commiſſions diſpatched: al the Expeditions of other Princes, Kings Lieutenants, Preſidents, Captaines, & others are there opened and communicated. There are received their propoſitions and anſwers, which afterwards are given to the Secretaries of State.

There is moreover another Councell, commonly called des Finances, which hath charge of the Kings and Realmes treaſure, whereunto are adjoyned the Intendents thus tearmed, les Secretaires des Finances: Item the Treaſurers.

AN ADVISE, for the uſe of MAPS.

BEING reſolved to referre the Geographick reaſon unto the Celeſtiall, that the due proportion of places, as it is in the round forme of the Earth might (likewiſe) be nearely kept in the plaine. It was neceſſary to fix a right conveniencie, and proportion of the degrees of longitude, with the degrees of the Meridian or latitude: for which cauſe (the immediately enſuing Map conteining but few degrees of latitude,) I have reduced this proportion, allmoſt to the middlemoſt parallele of the Map, that ſuch as is the reference of this parallele unto the Meridian, ſuch likewiſe might be the proportion of the degrees of longitude to this ſame parallele, in the degrees of the Meridian or latitude. Thus, all the Meridians are then between themſelves paralleles: But when there was many degrees of longitude, becauſe there hapneth in the paralleles above and beneath a great difference of proportion to the Meridian, to the end that the juſt conveniencie & ſymmetrie of places ſhould not be too diſtant from the truth: I have choſen two paralleles allmoſt equally diſtant of the middle and extremes, to whoſe conſideration and report, I have made the Meridians rules, Indices, and deſignatives of the degrees of longitude, which then are not Paralleles, but according to greater or leſſer diſtance, which the conceived and ſett paralleles have betweene themſelves, doe more or leſſe mutually turne, or encline towards them, and towards the middlemoſt Meridian of the Mappe. I have ſhewed upon Ptolomees Geographie, how this rule and deſignation of Meridian may be found: You will finde the degrees of latitude and longitude marked on the ſide of every Mappe, for the moſt part of latitude in both the ſides of the Mappe, but of longitude above and beneath, ſince according to the uſuall faſhion of Geogtaphers the upper part may be ſett to the North. But if the Country to be deſcribed is more extended betweene the North and South, then betweene the Eaſt and Weaſt: then, oftentimes wee ſett up the Weaſt: However, the Eaſt and Weaſt ſide will alwayes ſhew unto thee the latitude: the other, repreſent the degrees of longitude. Every degree is divided in 60 parts, called minutes, and ſometimes in one, if the greatneſſe ſuffer it: or in two, or in five, or ten.

This ground being laid, I have followed the beſt deſcriptions in the repreſenting of every Country. Wherein hath much furthered me the King of Spaines worthy Surveyor and Geographer Chriſtian Sgrothenius (a great travellor,) who hath better and more largely deſcribed that which he hath undertaken, as alſo the moſt ſedulous Geographer of his ſaid Majeſty, Abraham Ortelius, who hath moſt liberally communicated unto mee all his beſt Cardes, though he had the ſame deſigne which I had: I will not forgett the others in their places that have helped me elſwhere, to the end the Reader may know the honour which they have meritted by this benefitt, and that I may not appeare ungratefull towards them. Furthermore, I have carefully conferred all that I have received & found elſewhere, thereby to make the deſcrip. tions more perfect, One onely thing is (notwithſtanding) wanting, which I much deſired: It is an exacter number of the chiefeſt places, that is much defective in the Maps heretofore printed: which the Reader will excuſe, whom I pray to helpe us therein, and to celebrate the Nobility, and Politick order, as alſo the names of places, ſights, & qualities thereof, which will be to his honor. The litle rounds doe note the true ſight of every place, and from thence their diſtance is to be taken, Then there are markes whereby places may be knowne, Bare villages by bare rounds, when there is nothing worth the note. The Caſtles & Forts of note are marked by a litle hook upon the round ♂. Monaſteries by a croſſe ♁. The Townes have commonly two towers. The Hamlets of Nobles one. Wee have obſerved this as farre as it hath ben known and aſſured unto us: Other things are eaſy enough, and every man may ſupplie to the defects he may obſerve therein. If any deſireth to know the longitude or latitude of a place, where the Meridians are Paralleles, he wil know it taking a paire of compaſſes which he ſhall extend from one ſide of the Map unto the other. If you have taken the diſtance from the Eaſtſide, the compaſſes will ſhew you of this ſide the degree and minute of the longitude into the Northſide. If you have taken the diſtance from the North, even ſo it will note unto you the latitude to the Eaſtſide: But when the Meridians are not Paralleles, the latitude of the place will be found in this manner. But in Univerſall Maps where the Paralleles be round and circular, the diſtance of the place, taken of the next Parallele, will ſhew you the ſame in the Eaſtſide. Now the longitude muſt be taken with a thread or ruler ſett upon the place, and often turned, untill, that the ſame minute of the ſame degree be marked on both parts, as well on the North as South part, and then ſuch as it may be will be the longitude of the place it ſelfe. The miles or milliaria are different according to the diverſenes of the Country. If therefore you will compare them that you may know them, referre them by the compaſſes to the degree of the Meridian, and look by the revolution or returne of the compaſſes how many miles will be therein comprehended, you will know how many miles will make a degree, either for one Country or for another. You will finde the German miles (15 whereof make one degree) fourefold to the Common Italian, and almoſt twofold to ſome of Sueveland and Weſtphalie.

Sometimes you will meet with a line having a litle Cercle thus ∽o∽, It ſignifies the name of the place, & is inſerted there that none ſhould doubt of the name of ſome place, in the preſſe and conſtraint of places which are ſometimes pretty well crowded.

I Have gone about Spayne diligently, & the Principall Provinces, Now being paſt the Pyrenean Mountaines I meet with Gaule, a part of Europe ſaid to have ben ſometimes called Galatia of Gala wich ſignifieth milke becauſe it produceth white men or men of a whitiſh colour, the mountaines there hindring the heate of the Sun from entring, & blackning them, Diodorus deriveth this name of Galata Hercules his daughter; Others otherwayes. Ptol. lib. 2. and other Greeks, termeth it Celtogalatia. Diverſe men beleeve that Gallia (Gaule) was named frõ Galatia, though others draw it from elſewhere. But all that, is not ſo important, as that it ſhould impeach us. Sure it is, the terme of Gallia was very farr extended under the Latin writers, as it will appeare; Poſtel and Arrias Montanus ſay that the Hebrewes call it Tzarphat. At preſent it is called France of the Franci, a people of Germanij neare the Rhin, that toke it by force of armes, and there erected the State, which hath ſince ben called the Kingdome of France. The Greeks tearmed generally the Gaulois Celtas & Galatas; which were alſo called Gomerita, as Ioſephus is of opinion. Thus much for the name. Next follow the ſite and quantity which I will repreſent by its limits, longitude, latitude and circuit. As for the limits, to take France in the ſtate wherein it is this day. On the North whence it regardeth the Lower Germany they limit it with a line drawn from Callice unto Strasbourg that leaveth on the left hand the Country of Artois, Haynaut and Luxembourg: and at the right hand Picardie and Lorraine, and on the ſide that it looketh towards. England, with Oceanus Britannicus, On the Weaſt it is bounded with the Ocean ſea, caſting a great golphe in Aquittaine. On the South (the ſide with which it joyned Spaine,) it is limited with the Pyranean mounts, and where it is leſſe ſtraitned and larger it is bownded with the Mediterranean ſea. Laſtly on the Eaſt the Alpes doe ſever it from Italie, like as the mountain Iura divideth it from Suiſſerland; and the Rhin from Germanie. And all this Kingdome, if taken in a right line from Eaſt to Weſt, from the Iſland of the French Iuriſdiction Heÿſſant (ſometimes called Sena) oppoſed to the laſt ſhore of Brittaine in France, unto the brims of Rhin, hath ſom what more then 300 French leagues in length. Or elſe if men will meaſure the length thereof according to ſome, taking it from the Weſt to Eaſt South-Eaſt, from the Iſland Aldernay of Normandy, unto Nice, they will find it 330 leagues, The breadth thereof, to take it from the moſt Southerly parts which are towards the Mediterranean ſea as farr as the towne of Calais, is about 220 leagues, and the compaſſe of all France is above 1020 leagues. The quality followes, the greateſt cauſe whereof are the Climates. It lies under part of the fifth, under the whole ſixth and ſeventh and part of the eight between the degrees of latitude 41 & 52, of longitude the 20 and 38. And al though it be moſt commonly ſubject to the North winds, it ought notwithſtanding to be accompted for one of the beſt Provinces of Europe, for the wholeſomnes and good temperament of the aïre thereof. Claudianus ſaith it is of a moſt happy conſtitution: Cæſar (lib. 3. Coment. Civ. Bell.) moſt wholleſome, and (2. Belli Gall.) a moſt fruitfull mother of people. Strabo ſpeaking of the Auvergnats and others, That land is for the moſt part plaine, now & then ſwelling with litle hils, & between them of moſt pleaſant valleys, both very admirable, for the plenty of fruites and other things found there: The fields well laboured doe luxuriale with the aboundancie of corne & wheat; Strabo ſaith moreover that it produceth great ſtore of Corne, Millet and Acorne. Nothing is there reſting except that which forreſts, & fennes doe hinder. It aboundeth in good wine which is communicated partly to the Brittons, Normans & Picards, partly to the neighbours, the Germans, Netherlanders, Engliſh & others, unto whom the couldnes of the aire, hindreth the fruitfulnes of vines. Strabo and Athenæus ſay It hath had mines of gold & ſilver; They are thought to be exhauſted at this time; The ground which is not otherwiſe imployed, produceth all kinds of flocks of Beaſts, & of paſturage to feed them, which is the reaſon that here is allwayes ſeen ſo great quãtitie of fleſh, milk, butter, cheeſe, wools & every other like things: The French had all the Gaules peaceable, under King Clouis, who was the firſt Monarck of all Gaule, and did firſt of all profeſſe the Chriſtian faith, and firſt uſe in his Armes and Enſignes the three flowers de Luice, ſent frõ heaven (as is reported, to make his ſucceſſors carry them; His ſucceſſors were, either by a right or collaterall line, Childerick Clotaire the firſt, Cherebert, Childerick 2. Clotaire 2. Dagobert the Great, Clouijs 2. Clotaire 3. Childerick the 3. Theodoric 1. Clouijs 3. Childebert 2. Dagobert 2. Clotaire 4. Chilperick 1. Theodorick 2. Charles the fatt, Eude, Charles the ſimple, Raoul of Burgundy, Lewis d'Outremer, Lothaire, and Lewis the 5 laſt of the race of Charles the Great: who being poiſoned, the Crowne was by his death transfered to Hugh Capet, the firſt French, Earle of Paris, & titular Duke of the French & Burgũdy. Unto Capet ſucceded Robert the Devout, Henry 1. Philippe 1. Lewis 7 yet yõg, Philip 2. Godgiven & Auguſt, Lewis 8. S. Lewis 9. Philip 3. Philip 4. Le Bel, Lewis 10. Hutin, Philip 5 le long, Charles 4 le Bel; unto whõ (dead without iſſue male) was ſubſtituted Philip 6 de Valois ſonne to Charles Earle of Valois; who had for his ſucceſſors Iohn of Valois, Charles 5 the wiſe, Charles 6 le Bien-né, Charles 7. Lewis 11. Charles the 8 ſurnamed Crook back, Lewis 12 ſonn to Charles d'Orleans, Frãcis de Valois 1. ſonn of Charles Earle of Angouleſme, Henry 2 de Valois, Francis 2. Charles 9, Henry the 3, who being murdered with a litle knife by one Iaques Clement Iacobin as he preſented him a letter, had for his ſucceſſor publiquely & lawfully pronunced Henry the 4 of Bourbon, ſonn to Antony de Bourbon, Earle of Angouleſme, King of Navarre, moſt Chriſtian King of the Gaules; unto whom (maſſacred by Francis Ravaillac) is ſucceded his ſonne Lewis 13. Now the French are active, and ready to the warres, of whoſe warlike valor, it will not be amiſſe to heare what Strabo writeth who was a moſt learned man, a Capadocian borne, bred a Grecian; of a grave judgement ſavouring the Antick, a Romã Citizen, & a great Travellor. All the Nation (ſaith he) of them who are now called Gaulois & Galates, incenſed to the warre, is of a couragiouſe ſpirit, ready to the combate, of a mind otherwiſe honeſt, ſimple, & abhorrent of evill maners; And therefore provoked by ſome diſpleaſure, doe unite themſelves & fall couragiouſly on the ennemy without feare or regard of any danger. None is ignorãt in what terror the Romans, Greeks, & Aſiaticks, had the name of Gaulois ſince they went out of their Country to wards Apollo Pythius, whoſe Temple & Oracle, (ſo famous throughout all the world) they ran ſacked at pleaſure, took, ſacked & burned Rome; belea-

The Index following after the mappe, will let you know where you may ſeek the Dutchies and Counties, above named which I have collected for that uſe that at leaſt the moſt eminent places of Gaule may be found ſtraightwayes; ſince it were too great and litle available a labour to comprehend the contents of particulars.

The Middlemoſt Meridian of the mappe is 23. the other are enclined towards it according to the nature of the Paralleles.

beleagred, & ranſomed the Capitole, builded diverſe townsin Italie, Milan, Come, Breſſe, Bergome, Trente, and Vincenze: Even in our age the Duke of Bourbon tooke Rome. But now, Gaule is not ſo farre extended as formerly, for that part of Italie, which is ſited betweene the Alpes & Ancone, was ſometimes called the Ciſalpine Gaule, at preſent, Lumbardie. And a great part of Belgick, is this day attributed to Germany, which belonged unto Gaule, according to the deſcription of Cæſar, Ptolomee, and other auncient. For Cæſar divideth the Tranſalpine Gaule, which Plinii nameth Comata, & Ptol. Celto-Gallia, in Celtick, Belgick, and Aquitanicke: and Ptol. propoundeth us Gaule divided in 4 parts, that is, in Aquitanicke, in the Lyonnoiſe, in the Belgick, and the Narbonnoiſe. They limited it with the Pyrenean mounts, the Rhin, the Ocean, and the tops of the Alpes: In this time, all that is after Calais regarding the Eaſt is attributed onely to Germany: and the Germans alſo doe appropriate unto themſelves all that is on both the banks of the Rhin. The prime townes thereof are Paris, Marſeille, Narbonne, Lyon, Poictiers, Thoulouze, Bourdeaux, Tours, Angers, Orleans, Nantes, Roüen, Amiens, Bourges, Dijon, and other whereof afterwards. Gaule hath no Lack of Lakes: of which the moſt renowned is that which was aunciently called the Leman Lake, whereof there is an expreſſe Carde, about a quarter of a mile from the towne of Auvergne: Beſſe is a great hill, bearing a large Lake ſo deepe, that it is ſaid it cannot be ſounded, no water is perceived to flow into it, and if any thing be thrown therein, there will inſtantly be heard a thunder, and thunderbolts & lightnings ſeen, accompanied with haileſtones and raine. Not farre from thence is ſeene a Cave, the entry whereof is round, it is called Creux de Soucis. As alſo an Abyſmus the bottome whereof can not be ſounded, where likewiſe enclining your eare, after you have thrown a ſtone in it, you will ſuddenly heare a deaf ſound, with a mervellous great claſhing ſomwhat like to a thunder heard a farre off: and in Summer, there is heard ſome noiſe, though nothing be caſt therein: it is thought that they are winds that thruſt and ſtruggle together. The Abitacin or Avitacin Lake, ſo named of Avitus againſt Clermont in Auvergne, it is ſo lively repreſented both on the right and left hand by Sidon. lib. 2. Epiſt. 2. that hee ſeemeth toſpeake of it now newly. As for the Lake Rubreſe, ſee Pomp. Mela lib. 2. in that chapter where he deſcribeth la Gaule Narbonnoiſe. France is likewiſe delighted in Rivers, which (great & ſmall) are innumerouſe in her: the chiefeſt are the Scine, the Loire, the Garonne, & the Rhoſne. It ariſeth in the Dutchy of Burgundy in Alſets quarter, drawing a litle above a league to the Northſide of the Dorp called S. Seine, by two brooks enterlaced with two Villages Billij and Perriere. Having viſited and cut out many quarters, townes & villages, Paris alſo, whereunto it formeth a faire Iſland, and then ſerved Roan, the head of Normandy, entreth largely enough in the Engliſh Sea, but yet maketh there ſome currents and tides, ſomewhat dangerous to Seamen, which ought to take great heed thereof, the Normans call it moſt commonly la Bare: for as ſoone as it hath caſt it ſelfe into the Sea, it flowes and runnes back on a ſudden againſt the nature of other Rivers, yea aſcendeth with a terrible noiſe unto the height of a pike. Ignorant, and unexpert or idle mariners, can not but looke for great dangers there. The Seine receiveth in her courſe many Rivers, the moſt renowned whereof be the Marne, Oyſe or Ayſe, the Ayne or Eſne. The River of Marne, to the Latins Matrona iſſueth out of the Faucilles (a hill a litle above Langres) and paſſing by Ianville, S. Didier, Chalon, Dormant, & Meaux, and receiving ſome Rivers of leſſe fame, as le Saut, Boiſe, Ourk, and Treſme, mingleth it ſelfe with the waters of Seine at Charentons bridge neare unto Paris. Oyſe (Eſia) ſprings of a place above Guiſe towards the Eaſt, not farre from the Village of Oigny: It paſſeth through Picardie, and watering Guiſe, la Fere, Compiegne, S. Maixant, and ſome other townes. It doth exonerate it ſelfe into the Seine neare Poiſſy, a litle below Pontoiſe. The River Aiſne (Aixona) is unto Cæſar a River of the Belgick Gaule, upon the skirts of the Dioceſe of Rheims. It ſpringeth in Barrois below Clermont neare the Dorp Souilli. I mentioned the Loire in the ſecond place, called by Cæſar and Ptol. Ligeris, at preſent Loire, and Leire; the head thereof is in the Village of Velay, at a place termed la Font de Loire: it is greater then the other, & therefore with reaſon called the Father of the Rivers of France. The waters thereof are cleare and pure, having traverſed a great deal of land, (Strabo ſaith, it did ſometimes ſeparate the Celtes from the Aquitaines) looſeth it ſelfe in the Weſterne Sea, neare Nantes, by an overture of allmoſt eight leagues broad, yet dangerouſe by reaſon of ſome ſmall banks of ſand, which encounter there: About a league and a halfe more inward. are the Rocks, called Porcelets. This River receiveth many navigable ones: the Rivers of Allier, le Chair, Vienne, and Maine. Th' Allier (Elaver) ariſeth above Clermont, and breedeth a greater quantity of fiſh then the Loire, though it be not ſo great. The Chair paſſeth thorough Poictiers, Vienne fitteth Chaſtelerand, ſome call it Viane, others Vignane: Maine is called in Latin Mediana. The Garonne followeth, which ſeparateth the Gaules from the Aquitaines, Strabo 4 calleth it Garunas, Ptol. Garina, Frontin Garonna. It retaineth yet this name from the head thereof unto Blaye, a Caſtle where the Roman tongue beginneth, but from thence it is called Geronde & Gironde. Having run through diverſe Countries, & paſſed thorow Tholouze and Moiſſac, & from thence to Bourdeaux, it caſteth it ſelfe in the waters of Oceanus Aquitanicus, with a mouth allmoſt two leagues broad: At the opening, whereof the Mariners comming from Sea, are ſaid to be preſented with Rocks called Aſſes of Bourdeaux, becauſe that their noiſe and lowing are ſomewhat like the braying of thoſe beaſts. The Shippers of the Netherlands name the North part of thoſe rocks, Noorder-Ezel, the South, Zuyder-Ezel. Over againſt the land of Medock, a tower is elevated ſomewhat neare the old by the command of Henry the 3. at the Country charges. Which ſerveth of a nightly fire and Lanterne to direct the ſhippes to avoyd thoſe Aſſes, and hold the right courſe, to enter well this River, wherein els too many ſhips are loſt. It is called la tour Cordan, whereon is ſet a Sentry (thereunto appointed & waged) to make & maintaine the whole night a great fire for a ſignall to the travellors and mariners. The Garone receiveth many Rivers navigable as the Tarn to that Country people, Tar to the French: the Gers: Oldt, l'Old, or l'Olt: la Dordoigne, or Dordonne, a great navigable River, which cedeth but litle to the Garone and other. The laſt place I appointed for the Rhoſne, to the Latins and Greeks Rhodanus, the naturall name is le Ros. Plinius ſaith it to have ben named of Roda, a Colonie in thoſe parts: The ſource of it, is not very farre from that of the Danube, the Rhin, Arole, Ticin and other, which are ſeene to iſſue of the Mountaine Briga, it entreth in the Lake of Geneva, at the Dorp Neuf-ville, and paſſeth through without looſing ſcarce any thing of his colour, then commeth foorth at the towne of Geneva, whence this River is varied according to the diverſity of the places it covereth, untill that (increaſed with ſome Rivers and Brookes,) it doth precipitate it ſelfe into the Mediterranean Sea neare unto Arles in Provence, diſburthening it ſelfe therein by ſeven mouthes (ſaith Apollon. in the Argon.) by five, (according to Diodorus and others,) three ſaith Artemidorus, in Strabo, Plinius and Ammian. But Strabo ſaith that Polybius held but two onely. Ptol. and Tit.

Livius, many; very adviſedly leaſt they might be reprehended of a lye: thoſe of that Country reckon five and more: Gras Neuf, Gras d'Orgon, Gras Paulet, Gras gram, Gras d'Enfer, Gras de Paſſon: the laſt whereof is called by Plinii Maßaleotick, becauſe it draweth nearer unto Marſeille: by Polybius, Maßaliotick, and maketh it the firſt, by reaſon of Marcellinus and Antoninus their degrees, by whom alſo the other mouths were named degrees. The Rhoſne receiveth the Arva, Soane or Sone, (Araris) the Iſere, Droume, and Durance: but let this ſuffice for the Rivers. France hath on the Northſide the Norman or Engliſh Sea, and on the Weaſt the ſame, ſaid Aquitanick, on the South the Mediterranean Sea: both which have made there diverſe gulphes: on the Weaſt the Aquitanick, is greater and more remarkeable, Lucanus calleth it Tarbellicus Ancon. In the bayes of the Norman Sea, are the townes of Dieppe, Conſtance, Caen, Cherbourg, and other. In the Mediterranean is the Sinus Gallicus, or Gallaticus, which is twofold, great and ſmall. The great is that where the Rhoſne powreth his waters. M. Porcius Cato calleth it Angulus Gallicus, Gauliſh Angle, or Corner, Titus Livius, Iuſtin. and others, Gallicus Sinus. The leſſe is ſet by Strabo, at the Promontorie or Cape of the Pyrenean hills named Aphrodiſium, or of Venus, Mela calleth it Salſus, Salted, Antoninus maketh alſo the Sinus Camblacitanus towards the Narboniſh Gaule: It had likewiſe formerly, and hath yet now ſundry good havens and harbors, whereof Lucas Carterus ſpeaketh amply in the fifth and following cardes. The chief be Staliocanus, Vindana, Brivates, and other knowne, & mentioned by ancient writers. Ptolom. Staliocan, is held by ſome to be S. Paul de Lyon in Brittaine, by others Roſcou, which I thinke the trueſt, becauſe this is the moſt commodious and ſureſt. For though it hath an Iſland before it, called Iſle de Bas, the entrance and roade (notwithſtanding) are the eaſieſt, and more then ſeven fathomes deep. The other is empeached, and as it were barred by Taurus (it is an Iſland with her Caſtle named the Bull at the mercy of whoſe Gardes they muſt paſſe,) encompaſſed with infinite rocks, as well hidden as diſcovered very dangerouſe, if men be not acquainted with the entry. Not farre from thence in the ſame Country towards the South, you meet with having doubled the Cape Gobee (S. Mathieu) Vindana, Port and harbor, called at this time Fenſtiers or Conqueſt, Breſt by Iovius, but not rightly, Ptol. ſeateth there the port Brivate, which beareth almoſt the word Breſt, and afterwards placeth the port Secor, now Luſſon or Luxon, then Santonum portus, the haven of the Santons or Santongeois, which Ville-neufve nameth Rochelle. The hills and Forreſts follow: as for the firſt, France is more hilly in ſome places then other, the higheſt Countries, be the Dauphiné, Provence, Savoye and Burgundy. Anjou's Mountaines are extended ſo farre as Brittaine and Poictou. The moſt remarkeable of Gaule are to the Auncients Cebenna, Vogeſus, and Iura: Cebenna (quoth Cæſar) ſeparateth the Arvergnes (thoſe of Auvergne) from the Helvians, (thoſe of Vivaretz.) To Plinii it is Gebenna, to Lucan. and Auſon. Gebennæ: Gebennici to Mela: the right name ſaith Scaliger in Epiſt. ad Merulam is Cebenna, per C. and that now it is called Montaignes de Cebennes and Cevennes: ſo that it were better read in Ptol. and Strabo Cemmeni, and Cebenna in ſome Latins, Cebenna to Vinet, to Nozoren, to Ville-neufve, (Mountaines of Auvergne.) Part whereof make that of Tarara, which men muſt paſſe by, going to Lyon; at the top of which there is a ſtone hewed, and thereupon the Merchants ſett thoſe that have not yet ben at Lyon, commonly called la Chaire de verité, (the Seate of truth) for they are forced to ſpeak truth whether they were ever there before, or no; and therefore pay their welcome to their company. Vogeſus mons to Cæſar 4. de bello Gall. Lucan. 1. Pliny and others, (the Mountaine Vauge.) It is ſaid Vocetus or Vocetius, but falſely in Tacitus 1. Hiſtor. & elſewhere, as others have allready noted it. Under the name of Alpes, Strabo deſcribeth it lib. 4. at preſent Mountaine of Faucilles, and yet otherwiſe. It ſeparateth Burgundij and Alſatz from Lorraine. And giveth us the Maze, ſaith Cæſar, and many other Rivers, which flow into the Rhin. The place whence the Moſelle doth iſſue, is called Kratzer, which Ortelius ſaith he hath out of a ſmall book of Great Grubertus, where the Rhin is deſcribed: Adding that this quarter is called Eſtaye in French, and Auff der Stay, in the Chorographick card of Lorraine, ſedulouſly guided and atchieved by John Scyllius at the charges and by command of that Duke, and that nothing, quoth this Scyllius, is produced in thoſe places, beſides the herbe named in French Cabareth: This Vogeſus beareth pure ſilver in the Valley Lebetie, but not in great quantity ſaith Munſter. Iura if I make it of France or Germany, is ſaid to begin its raiſe, in the confines of Baſle neare the Rhin, over againſt Waldzhut, very high and upheld by many great Rocks; Cæſar, Plinius and others mention it. Ptol. calls it Iuraſſus, Strabo Iuraſius and Ioras, the Naturalls name it diverſly according to the places where they find it. Neare the Caſtle of Haſburg, hard by Bruges, (a ſmall towne thus named in High-dutch, of a bridge ſeene there with one onely Arche, on the River called die Arr) it is called Botzberg, of the Dorp Botzen, ſeated with many other at the foot of the Mountaine. Munſter, Scadus, Lazius and others, are of opinion that this portion of Jura, is the Vocetus or Vocetius of Tacitus. Yet Ortelius doubteth not to read it Vogeſus, of which wee have ſpoken: in this ſame part of the Mountaine is a great Valley, ſaid Frick-thal, of the next Village. There are yet other dales, Lauffen-thal and S. Imers-thal, and other like, of all which notwithſtanding none paſſeth, beyond the Mount: If you are minded to goe thorow that way, you muſt every where goe up a great height. Now betweene the Saone and Farſpurg, this hill is called Schaffmat, which ſignifieth ſheeps medow. Betweene the towne Olten, and the Provoſtſhip of Humberg, it is tearmed Nider-hauwenſtein, Low-heuwed-ſtone; for the way there, is traced by the intercutting of the Rocks and ſtones. Betweene Walnburg and Balſtal it is called Ober-hauwenſtein, upper-hewed-ſtone, where the wagons and carrs loaded are led down this Mountaine, with great cables that keepe them up. Drawing towards the Weaſt, it is called Waßer fal, that is, fall of waters. Going further, the Savoyards call it allmoſt by the old name, Iurten. The branch of it extended towards Baſle about a mile from the towne againſt the River Byrſe, is called Blonwen, and waxeth much in height and difficult acceſſe, ſo farre as Delsperg, where it reaſſumeth his plaine: Proceeding yet further towards the French Monaſtery called Bellele, it groweth yet, then is lower and more remiſſe by the ſpace of a mile, from whence retaking its horrid and moſt irſome ſlopenes, it extendeth it ſelfe on this manner from Eaſt to Weaſt, which (it is ſaid) Iulius Cæſar hath made paſſable through the hole that he cauſed to be digged thorow the rock in forme of a gate, which Pierre Port, others Pierre portuz, accurately deſcribed by Munſter, teſte Merula, who ſaith he hath paſt that way.

By this Fontein, the Poët meaneth the River Byrſe, which there iſſueth out of a rock with great aboundance of waters. On that ſide, the Mount Jura drawing to the South-weaſt, advanceth betweene the Suiſſers and Savoyards, whom he looketh towards at the South-eaſt, and the Burgundians, whom he leaveth at the North-weaſt; hence it is that Cæſar in two places lib. 1. ſaith, that this Mountaine ſeparateth the Burgundians from the Suiſſers, accoaſting many and ſundry Lakes, the chief whereof is that of Geneva, where where farre and wide, called the Mount S. Claude, it doth finally reſt, at the meeting of the Rhoſne. I have ſpoken of the Pyrenean Mountaines in the deſcription of Spaine; I will ſpeak of the Alpes, when I ſhall treat of Italie. There be many Foreſts, yet not bigg nor too thick, much leſſe, hideous with bryars, thornes and buſhes. In the Country of Maine, are the Foreſts of Verſay, Longoulnay, Perſi, Sille, Charnay, Audain, Maine, Conciſe. In the Low Brittany, the Foreſts of Boſiblanc, Toriant, la Guierche. In Poictou theſe woods Mouliere, Dine, Broſſe, Ligne, and other: In Berry Roberts Foreſt, &c. In Anjou, thoſe of Lourſaye and Marſon. The whole Boulonnois is almoſt covered with one Wood: the Pavells whereof are the woods of Surene, Celles, Hardelot, Dalles, Bourſin. In the Vermandois not farre from Peronne, are Recoigne and Bouhan. In Picardie, the woods of Baine, Beauſieu, la Fere, Couſſi. Lorraine hath no want of them: Warned Waldt, le Banboù, Boù de Mondon, Heyde, S. Bevoiſt, la Voyge, Mortaigne, Doſeyne. Burgundy beareth ſundry Foreſtieres, and ſmall Foreſts, the names whereof have miſſed mee, as likewiſe of the other of Gaule: But above all the Foreſt of Orleans is of beſt eſteem, it being of a larger extent, then any other of France, and that of Fontaine-bleau paſſe-time of the French Kings, as is not ſeldome that of Montargis. Ardenne is for the moſt part ſeated in the Netherlands, and therefore is to be deſcribed there. Claudian. calleth it Gallicam, and Cæſar lib 6. de Bello Gall: the greateſt Foreſt of all Gaule: becauſe it ſtood ſometimes in the Belgick Gaule. As for their devotion, not only old manuſcripts, and ancient tokens: but the Churches alſo and other places, deſtined to Religious ſervice, as it were ſowed in ſundry parts of the Kingdome, ſufficiently decleare, that the Gaulois have ever ben addicted to Religion, and the French were of the firſt that embraced the Chriſtian faith, which of all others, have ever kept and maintained it with their beſt power. In Paris alone are ſeen 69 Churches, the chief of all which is the Cathed rall, named Noſtre-Dame the foundation whereof was layd by Philippus Auguſtus, anno 1091, and animouſly proſecuted anno 1257, under King S. Lewis, ſo that it became one of the moſt famous wonders of France: it is upheld with 120 pillars, the length thereof is of 74: the breadth of 60 the height of 100 paces. The Quire is all of freeſtone, artificially expreſſing divers ſtories of the Old and New Teſtament, the circuit of this Church conteineth 45 Chappells, all latticed of yron: It hath 11 gates. In front, there are three, having two doores, out of which are ſeene imboſſed the auncient pourtraitures of the French Kings. At ſides, are erected two mayne Towers, ſquare, repreſenting rather Forts, then Steeples. The greateſt bell named Mary, takes op twenty men to ring it, and in a calme, and ſtill weather, is heard 7 leagues of. It were an infinite buſines to ſpeake of the Churches of this Citie, & other parts of France: as likewiſe of the Abbays, Commonalties, Monaſteries, Hoſpitalls, Spittles, and other Retreats of Poore and Orphans. As for the Caſtles, Palaces, Howſes of pleaſure, and the like belonging to great men, it is better to paſſe them by, then to ſpeak too little of them. The Univerſities are numbred by Mercater, of all which have iſſued and iſſue dayly, (as of ſo many Troian horſes,) innumerable flocks of Divines, Lawyers, Phyſitians, Philoſophers, and other Profeſſours, which were tedious for me to ſum up; in a word therefore: The Freuch Nobility (which is at preſent very numerous) plyeth ſo cloſe to learning, yea excelleth ſo much in all arts and diſciplines, that there is no Province in the whole world to be preferred unto them herein: You will ſee there ſome children of the greateſt and moſt eminent, labour diligently night and day, without intermiſſion, in their ſtudies: There be ſome that will diſcourſe ſome houres together (to the amazement of men) of any ſubject whatſoever ex tempore, without any delay, by a wonderfull order and methode. There are alſo many and ſundry Libraries, the chiefe whereof is the Kings, and that of S. Victor at Paris; to omit the other, furniſhed with ſtore of moſt rare books printed and manuſcripts. Concerning their manners, and cuſtome, Diodorus, Strabo and others, witneſſe that the Gaulois are of a quick ſpirit, and not averſe from learning: Simmachus praiſeth them in ſundry places, for their ſtudiouſnes. M. Porcius Cato lib. 2. Origin. in Chariſius Soſipater: Moſt part (ſaith he) of the Inhabitants of Gaule pourſue after two things, with great care and induſtry, Warre and Eloquency.

Strabo makes them of a ſimple nature, neither inclining nor bending to any wickednes (a remarqueable vertue of the ancient Gaulois) Iulianus the Emperour an Eye witneſſe herein, aſſured, they knew not what flattery was, but lived and haunted ſimply and freely with all men alike, acknowledging only Venus the Goddeſſe of Matrimony, and Bacchus the Merry-blade, for the ſame buſines; As for the contraryes unto theſe, wee ought not to heare them, but as raylings, ſcoffes, and meere injuries, the fruits of wicked ſoules: For who (having compared the ancienteſt writers report, & the manners of theſe French at this time) will admit of what Servius ſaith, that the Gaulois are dull, and heavy? that, as Julius Firmicius reports, they are fooles and dizzieheaded; Iulianus himſelfe, forgetting in a manner what he had ſaid before, calls them ſots, beaſtly, clowniſh, rejecting all civility; and Polyb. that they care not for arts, or learning; and that himſelfe with Diodorus, Athenæus and Clemens Alexandrin, ſaith they are of litle faith, addicted to gluttony and drunckeneſſe. Titus Livius with Polyb. brands them with the note of ſoft, and effeminate, Mela of covetous of gold and ſilver, proud, ſuperſtitious: Solin. of Lyars, vaine men and idle-praters; Plutarch in Pyrrho, tearmes them unſatiate of ſilver. Nevertheleſſe, it is to be confeſſed that many vices are crept among the French by the Commerce and haunt of other nations. Florus lib. 3. cap. 10. ſpeakes thus: No man will ſay Gaulois doe fight according to the meere naturall vertue, miſcent Fraudem. Amian. lib. 15. ſaith; they are quarrelſome; Diodorus reprooves them for intemperancie of ſpeech, and that they ſpeake ſhort, and words ambiguous of purpoſe, and were delighted to preach their owne vertues, paſſing by other mens: full of threatnings, revilings, and ſelfe conceit. This glorioufnes was alſo noted by Strabo. Such was the bragging of Divico the ſuiſſer, who extolling the Helvetians warlike valour, reproached unto Cæſar their victory over the Romans, & bad him take heed, he were not an occaſion that the place where they were then, might not be denominated of his defeat. Thus Vercingetorix vaunted openly, that he would make an aſſembly of Gaule, unto which the whole world would not be able to reſiſt. As for the Religion and ſacred Politie of the old Gaulois, wee ought not to make aſtand to that which Cicero ſpeaketh, that the Gaulois have not any zeal to religion. Livius is rather to be credited, who profeſſes them not to be negligent or idle in matter of Religion. And Ceſar, who beſt knew this people, ſaith it to be much addicted unto Religion. Above all other Gods they worshipped Mercury (ſaith the ſame Author) whom they held to be the firſt founder of Arts, and guide of Travellers, as alſo that he had an eſpeciall power over all traffick, and was preſident in the Lucre. Max. Tyrius makes the Celtæ to have worſhipped Iupiter whom they honored, and marked with the higheſt oake, Str. writeth that Diana had a Temple in Marſeille, & Plut. ſay that Diana was reverenced by the Gallo-Greeks, but a marble found ſince, ſhewes that the Gaulois worſhipped yet another Diana, vvhich they d'Ardenne. Lucan. & Min. Felix report that they had other Gods, named Eſe, or Heſe, Teutate, and Tarana. But many learned men hold that they were the ſame with Mars, Mercury, and Iove: Auſon. nameth one Belenus for God of the Gaulois, who is called by Herodian in Maximinis Belis: which was happily the Tibilene of Tertullian. in his Apologetick, called by the Greeks Apollo. They adored alſo one Abellio of whom Ioſeph Sclaliger in Auſon. lib. 1. cap. 9. noteth, there was ſome monuments in the Covents of the 9 Nations. Lucian likewiſe in Hercule Gallicano, ſays they worſhipped Hercules Ogmianus. They adored (ſaith Athenæus) turning themſelves at the right hand, they ſacrificed men to their Gods, namely to Mars, as Cæſar witneſſeth in theſe words: When they are reſolved to fight, they allott him, what they ſhall take in the warres, they ſacrifice all the Cattell taken, and bring all the reſt in one place: Mountaines may be ſeene in ſome Countreys covered with heapes of ſuch things conſecrated, and it hapneth but ſeldome that any one in contempt of Religiõ dares hide in his owne houſe things thus taken, or take away that which is there ſett: there being a grievous punishment againſt thoſe that infringe this cuſtome. Wee read allmoſt the ſame things in Diodorus Siculus, Minutius Felix averreth likewiſe that the Gaulois offred human ſacrifices to Mercury: in ſo much that it had ben better if they had not had any Knowledge at all of the Gods, then to take thoſe for Gods, who were onely appeaſed by mens bloud, which ſacrifice they held moſt ſolemne. Now this uſage of men among the Gaulois, hath not onely ben in their ſacrifices but in Divinations alſo: Strabo ſaith that the Gaulois were wont to ſmite with the ſword the back of him that was to be ſacrificed, & that upon his ſtarting they preſaged of the future accidents. Tertullianus l. de Animâ ſaith, they were wont to paſſe whole nights by vaillant men: ſo to receave the Oracles: But there was not among theſe ancient Gaulois, any Lawfull ſacrifice, without their Druydes, ſaith Diodorus: they were the moſt famous Prieſts of Gaule. Thus much of the manners of theſe men in religiouſe matters, ſee wee now their cuſtomes in prophane. Titus Livius writeth, they were wont to goe armed to their Aſſemblies. In them (ſaith he, ſpeaking of the Gaulois) was ſeene a new & marvellous ſight, they came to the Counſell armed, for ſo is the manner of that people. Plutarch writes, that the women deliberated of peace and warre, and that their reſolution was followed: And Strabo, that they had this cuſtome, if any one interrupted him that was ſpeaking in the Aſſemblie there was an officer that came to threatne him with a naked ſword, and bid him keepe ſilence, which if he did not for the firſt time, he did the ſame the ſecond time, and likewiſe the third time, and if the Officer found this Interrupter obſtinate, he would cutt away ſo much of his Caſſock, that the reſt was of no uſe. Cæſar obſerveth that upon ſome remarckeable Accident, they cauſed it to be knowne ſtraightwayes all over the Country, by great cryes, and hootings from one place to another, by men ordained to that end. Diodorus makes the Gauloiſes faire and of equall ſtrength and height with the Gaulois. fruitfull, and well-bred, happy as well in the bringing foorth, as in the bringing up of children: Like ſervices were among them as in other Nations. Many (ſaith Cæſar lib. 6. laded with debts or too many impoſts, or overwhelmed with the rigour of great men, make themſelves Servants of ſome Gentlemen, who have the ſame right over them, which they have over Slaves. But yet they were more kindly dealt withall by them, then by the Romans, for the Gauliſh Lords had theſe in ſome reſpect neare their perſons, and were well ſerved by them in time of warre. They uſed earthen diſhes ſaith Diodorus, thick, and ſtrewed of ſundry flowers therein peinted. They ate their meales, not ſitting upon ſtooles, but on the ground, upon Wolves or Dogs-skins, or (as Strabo ſaith) upon beds, & were wayted on by children. They ſate commonly by the fire, where were pots, and ſpits full of good meat, eſpecially Porck & bacon, as well ſalt as freſh, and all other kind of fleſh: but for the moſt part (ſaith Strabo) milk was there intermingled. Plinii (ſaith lib. 22. cap. ultimo) that they made a kind of Potion, with fruit diped in it, to foxe themſelves: Diodorus affirme that they made a drink of Barley, which they called (Zithum) Biere. And another with water and hony. As for their clothes: they wore Caſſocks or Coats ſaith Strabo, heavy and woven of thick wooll, and called them Lænes. And Plinii lib. 8. cap. 4. ſaith, they divided thoſe coats by certaine plaits, to make more ſhew. Now thoſe plaits, or rounds, of Plinii, are Plinthia to Diodorus, by which is underſtood, as Ioſephus Scaliger meaneth, that which the French call at this preſent Lauſanges, quaſi Laurenges, of the leaves of Bay-trees. They wore alſo very large and round Britches, which Tacitus calleth a Barbarous clothing. Wee read in Strabo, that in ſtead of a gowne, or caſſock without ſleeves, the Gaulois had one opened with ſleeves hanging downe to their very bottocks and privities, of which kind of apparell there is yet ſome reliques, which the vulgar call Palletrock, or Pals-rock. Hee ſaith alſo they wore rings on their fingers: whereupon Diodorus alledgeth nothing, but Pliny ſaith onely, they wore them on the middle finger. Finally, the French people give themſelves at preſent, to all kind of trade, liberall and mechanicall arts, they are adventurouſe, and hardy, and goe all the world over, either for trade or warre.

Name.

THE Countie of Bulloigne (Bononia, & Bolonia in Latin;) is indifferent large, all ſandy, of a ſand & gravell, ſaid burning, whence ſome ſuppoſe it to be derived of Bouillir to ſeeth; which is ridiculous. This Countie is named of the towne of Bologne, Vpper & Lower, and hath her beginning at the Montaines of S. Inglevert, 'tis extended in length, unto the river Canche; in breadth, unto the Lake of Tournohen. It was entitled an Earl-dome in the reigne of Charles the Bald King of France, and at the ſame time, S. Paul, Oye, Guines, and Artois were honored of the ſame titles. In this County, are many townes and villages, amonſt other, Bologne, the Vpper & Lower; The Vpper ſituated on a high place, was but a Dorp before the Engliſh beſieged it; The Lower ſited on a plaine is bathed ſome times with the ſea, they are far aſunder about 100. paces. Diverſe name Bononia, in this part of the Gaules. Bononienſe oppidum (ſaith a Panegyrick author to the Emperour Conſtantin,) is noted among the Provinces and Cities of the ſecond Belgique. At this time it is comonly called in French Bouloigne. The Netherlander come ſomewhat nearer the old name, calling it Beunen. Yet in the oldeſt times Scaliger (in Epiſtola ad Merulam) for in Auſonio he ſheweth that in ſome quarter this towne reteyneth yet the name of Geſſoire, and with him Papire, Maſſon, Leland, Ortel & others, are of opinion it was called Geſſoriacum; which is confirmed in Peutingers mapps, in which wee read Geſſoriacum, now Bononia; and in Antoninus, who aſſigned unto it the fifteenth Legion, & elſe where Geſſoriacum Portum, & Portum Geſſoriagenſe. In Ptolomee Giſſoriacum, a haven of the Mourins: The Panegyrick unto Maximilian calls it, Geſſorygia, and allmoſt in this manner, in ſome Exemplaries of Antoninus, t'is tearmed Geſoricia. Hereof writheth Pompon. Mela. They are extended unto the utmoſt Morins, a people of the Gaules, and know nothing better then a port named Geſſoriacum; Thus Sueton. in Claud. cap. 17. where he ſpeaketh of the Princes expedition in Britany; And therefore being gone from Marſeille, unto Geſſoriacum by Land, &c. Others beleeue this haven not to be that Geſſoriacum. Iohn Talbot rather thinks it Calais, others S. Omer, Turnebus, Vicus Soaci; Boetius, Sluyce; Hermolaus Barbarus, Bruges; Bilibaldus, Gant; Cenal maketh Geſſoriacum Portum to differ from Geſſoriacum Navale, ſaying the firſt to be Bouloigne, the Latter Caſſel. But to leaue this, Godefroy firſt Chriſtian King of Hieruſalem was of Bulloigne, ſonne to Euſtatius Earle of Bulloigne, & Duc of Loraine. Neare Bulloigne was the port & haven of Itium. Thoſe that hold that unto Ptolomee it be Calais, are ſufficiently diſ-proued, for hee having put the Ouverture of Seine into the Sea, firſt of all, brings in Itium Promontorium or Cappe Itium, then Giſſoriacum, a haven of the Morins; whence the towne of Calais is about twenty miles diſtant.

Velſerus is of opinion that Geſſoriacum is the Port Itium, which ſome beleeue to be S. Omar, as well for the old name thereof Sitieu, quaſi Sinus Itii, as for the ſite of that place, which being low, & other coaſts notwithſtanding cloſing the towne, intimate this place to haue ben ſome times a very large Baye, or gulphe of ſea: Learned Camden, a man well verſed in the knowledge of this Hiſtory, ſhewes in his Britaine, that the Port Itius was ſometimes in the place now called Withſan neare Blavet; Others may indge of it. To this County of Bulloigne ſucceedeth the County of Guynes, divided from the County of Oye by a great Channell, that paſſeth thorow the towne of Guynes and makes the Country allmoſt impregnable; Guynes is the chiefe towne of this Countie, divided in two parts, the one ſeated in mariſhes, the other in dry plaine, ſtrong & muniſhed by the nature of the place, which King Herry the Second toock from the Engliſh, having ſent his Army there under Francis of Lorraine Duc of Guyſe Anno 1558. Meierus is very large in his Annales of Flanders touching the right & pretenſions of the Danes upon this land of Guines. There be alſo other townes, Hartincourt, Peuplinge, Conquelle, Port Nealy. This Countie hath within her two Baronies, to wit that of Ardres, & that of Courtembrone, thus called of their townes; then the Baronie of Fiennes. Two leagues from Ardres drawing towards the ſea, you may ſee Calais a ſtrong towne both by art & nature, ever held one of the keyes & gates of France; firſt walled (as they ſay) by Philip of Bouloigne, Vncle to S. Lewis. It hath a good Caſtle, with a great & ſtrong Tower which defendeth the haven and other places; This towne was taken by Edward the Fifth King of England the fourth of Auguſt, eleven moneths after that famouſe battaille which Paulus Æmil. lib. 9. deſcribed againſt Philip the Sixteenth King of France, at Creſſi in Ponthieu, Anno 1347. It was poſſeſſed by the Engliſh for the ſpace of 211. yeares, (& had ben in vaine beſiedged by Philip le Bon Duc of Burgundy, whom the Flemmings forſook there Anno 1431.) and as the Key of France, which the Engliſh were wont to ſay they carried at their girdle, carefully look't to, till that the French took it againe in King Henry the Seconds reigne, onder Francis Duke of Guiſe Anno 1558. in February. Allmoſt at the ſame diſtance, towards the Continent & firme land, Terroane is remoued from Calais & Boulogne, holding her old name, though ſometimes ranſacket by Charles the Fifth Emperour. It was formerly the Metropolitane & chief towne of the Morins, mentioned by Cæſar in his Comentaries, 'tis ſeated neare the head of the river

Guynes.

Lis, that paſſeth by the walls thereof. This towne after a long ſiege, & wonderfull aſſaults given by the Imperialiſtes, was taken par force from the French Anno 1553. The Netherlanders call it Terrennerberg; Antoninus Terrouana, or Tarvenna, The Wayes mapps, Teruanna, Ptolem. Taruana. Bouille ſaith it is named by ſome Tarubanum; Tritem. in his French Hiſtory maketh mention of the Terrubans, ſome call it Tervanna, as it were Vaine-ground, for the barrennes of her ſoyle. In the Wayes Note, among the Townes of the ſecond Belgick there is alſo made mention of Civitas Morinorum, id eſt, Ponticum, the Biſhoprick of Theroane. It is happily the Colonie & Plantation of the Morins (whereof in the old ſtone found vvithin theſe few yeares in Gelderland in the Lordſhip of the Sugambres, vvithin halfe a myle of Nimeghen.) The Land of Oye, extendeth ſo farr as Dunkerque in Flanders. Some other tovvnes there be, but leſſe famous. The Rivers. Boulonois (country of Boloigne) is vvatered vvith many rivers & brookes; Among other the river Arque, paſſing by the tovvne of Arque & S. Omar, goes directly to Graveling & thence into the ſea. Not far from thence is an arme of Sea called Scalenſe vvhich continueth foming unto the Caſtle of Ardres. There are ſeen likevviſe tvvo Channells or brookes of Salt-vvater named the Marquiſan & the Bolonois; And vvith this Hautia or Heſdin, a river vvhich giveth name to the tovvne of Heſdin. Novv follovv the Pontiues, & moriſh Brookes unto the River of Canche: Some of theſe Rivers & Brookes, make Pooles & Ponds full of fiſh denominated from the tovvnes they are neareſt; As are the Vivers of Hames, André, Ardres. All this tract is couered of Sandy hills as it approachet the ſea; In the Inland are the Hills. Mointaines of S. Ingelvert, the hills of Nero-Caſtel & Dannes. The vvholle land is full of Forreſts & Forreſts. darke vvoods, as the vvoods of Surene, Celles, &c. The Natives are held frovvard, hard to be pleaſed, and men vvhich doe not promiſe litle of their perſons.

THE DESCRIPTION OF PICARDIE.

Name. THOVGH the name of Picardie, be not very ancient: yet the originall thereof is not kowne, for there are diverſe opinions about it. Robert Cenalis ſaith, that the Picards are the right Gaules, and tooke their names from Hereticks called Begards; but are indeed much ancienter then the Begards. Others againe thinke that they had the name of Picardie giuen them from Lances, and Pikes, which were firſt made in this Countrie. Some againe fetch this name from the towne of Pequigny, or from a famous knight or gentleman named Pignon, the firſt founder of Pequigny and Amiens, who after the death of Alexander the great with an army of Souldiers ſubdued, and conquered diverſe Countries, and Lands.

Bounds. Picardie is bounded on the Weſt with Normandy, and the Britiſh Sea, on the North with Artois and Haynault, the Countries of Gallo-Belgica: on the Eaſt with Luxenburg and Lorraine, and on the South with Compiegne, and the Iſle of France. It is a very pleaſant and a fruitfull Countrie, which for the abundance of Corne, that groweth there is called the Garner, and Storehouſe of Paris and France. But they make noe Wines there, which they impute rather to the negligence of the inhabitants (as ſome imagine) who plant there no Vines, then to the nature of the Soile, which is a hot Climate, and fitt for the bearing of Grapes.

Soile.

Diviſion. Picardie then is devided into three parts, namely, the Right, the Lower, and the Higher. Of the laſt, wee will make here no mention, becauſe the moſt part of it, is comprehended and deſcribed in the Mapps of the ſeuenteene Provinces. That part then which is properlie called Picardie, beginneth at Crevecœur, and comprehendeth under it the Vidames, or Lordſhips of Amiens, Corbie, & Pequigny, alſo the Counties of Vermandois & Rhetelois, and the Dutchie of Tiraſche. The Vidamie of Amiens taketh its name from Ambianum. Many learned men are of the opinion, that it was heretofore called Samarobrina, and by Ptolemie Samarobriga. In ſome of Anthonines coppies, it is Samorberiva, or Samarabriga; For Briga in the old Spaniſh and Thracian tongue, ſignifieth a towne. Other write it Samonobriga from the Bridge, which lieth over the Soame which runneth trough it, and devided himſelfe into two braunches. Some againe ſay that the Emperour Gratian, called it Abianum, becauſe it is environned round about with water, which is very likely. This Citie is accounted one of the ſtrongeſt, and beſt fortified townes of France, and is indeed the Key of France for that ſide, which in regard of her ſituation, deepe Moates, high Walls and Bulwarkes will giue place to none. Within this Citie there ſtands a very faire and a goodly Church, which is built with ſuch cunning architecture, and curious workemanſhip, as any Church in Europe. They ſay they keepe in it S. Iohn Baptiſts head for a relique. The Countrie about Amiens is a Baily-wike. There is held Preſidiall Seſſions. The Major hath the managing of the politique affaires, and the Towne houſe. They hold a guard in it, called the Guard of Buffroy, with Sentinell, and Watch-houſes for the Burgeſſes, who keepe continuall watch among the Religious houſes. The firſt Biſhop of it was called Saint Firmin, borne at Pampelune, from whoſe time till Cardinall de Crequy deſcended from the houſe of Canaples, there were LXIX. Biſhops. The Inhabitants are much commended for their honeſty and loyaltie, and therefore haue no garniſon of ſouldiers impoſed upon them. Here were borne the famous Phyſicians Silvius and Fernelius, alſo that great Oratour Silvius, who made diverſe Commentaires, and expoſitions upon Cicero, and other learned men: The firſt Founder of Amiens (as many imagine) was that braue Captaine Pignon, who ſerued under Alexander the Great. Anno 1597. this Citie was ſurpriſed, and taken in by the Spagnards in this manner: They had ſent before ſome ſoulders in peſant cloaths, with piſtolls and ſhort ſwords hidden about them, and baggs of Apples and Nutts: they willingly ſcattered them coming in at the gate by the guard, and while thoſe that had the guard were a ſcrambling for the apples, and a loade of hay coming in, they interim kept up the perculis where the diſguiſed ſouldiers fell a cutting of their throats, and gott ſo much time, that they were inſtantly ſeconded with ſome horſe troopes, and other ſouldiers, which made the gate good, and ſo entring the towne before the Citizens could gett into armes tooke it in, & became Maſters of it, while Henry the Fourth had an other entreprize, with his Armie upon an other place: who afterward made the Spagnard ſurrender it over to him againe. The Vidamie of Corbie tooke its name from Corbia, which is a towne lying upon the Soame, where the river which runneth by it, falleth into the Soame. This is alſo one of the Keys of France for that quarter, and perhaps the ſame, which Anthonine calleth Curmuliaca, and that which lay betweene Samarobriva (or Amiens) and Cæſaromagnum now called Roye. The towne of Pequigny was peradventure ſo named from Pignon aboue ſaid, and well knowne becauſe William Duke of Normandie ſurnamed Long Sword, who through the ſubtility & treacherie of the faction of Earle Baldwin of Camerick, was drawne thither under the collour of making of a peace, where they maſſacred him. The French writters report alſo, that after they had overthrowne the Engliſh there, all thoſe which could not perfectly pronounce Pequigny, but Pequeny were putt to the ſword. The Countie of Vermandois, which yet retaineth the ancient name, comprehendeth in it, as the French Hiſtorians, and Coſmographers withneſſe Le Soiſſonnois, Laonnois & Tartenois; likewiſe the townes of Noyon, S. Quintin. The ancient Sueſſones are called at this day the Soueſſons, or Soiſſonnois, which Ptolemie calleth Auguſta Sueſſonum. It hath a ſtronge Caſtle in it, built of huge ſtone. It is the prime towne of Gallique-Belgica, belonging unto Rheims, to which Cæſar gaue the title of a Kingdome, it was long under the Commaund of the Romans; but Clodivus turned them out of it, and his Succeſſours poſſeſſing it made it the Metropolis of that Kingdome. The Soiſſons haue allwaies bene held for good, and valliant men. The Church and Abbey called our Ladies, was founded in Soiſſons by the Tyrant Ebroin, Majour of the Palace of France. There haue bene 79. Biſhops of Soiſſons, ſince Sixtus the Firſt, till Mathew the Pariſian. Laonnois taketh its name from Laon which is an ancient towne, ſeated betweene the rivers of Ayne, and Oyſe, lying upon a hill, and is the Capitall Towne of this territoire. It was built, as Sigebertus ſaith, by the Biſhop and Duke Clodivus Anno 100. who ordayned Genebauld Biſhop of Laon, ſince whoſe time till Ian Bourſier there haue bene 72. Biſhops ſucceeded him. Laon is at this day a Bailywike, having under the juriſdiction thereof theſe townes, Soiſſons, Noyon, S. Quintins, Rybemont, Coucy, Chauny, Guiſe, Peronne, Mondidier, and Roye. Compiegne is an neighbour towne, called in Latine Compendium, and by ſome Caropolis, after the name of Charles the Balde, who enlarged, and fortified this towne unto the forme of Conſtantinople 1396. and founded in it the Abbey of Saint Cornelia. His Daughter Iane was carryed away from Compiegne, by the Engliſh, who was ſould unto them by his owne people, which was a foule reward for the benefits, which France had receiued from him. This Lady was kept priſonner a yeere long and endured a great many miſeries, and at laſt 1331. in the month of Maye at Roan, being accuſed of Hereſie was burnt in that place, where now S. Michels Church ſtandeth, then ſhee was uniuſtly accuſed, and condemned for Hereſie, and Sacriledge by Peter Cauchon an Engliſh man, Biſhop of Beauvois, & a great Ennemy to the French, for which fact he was excommunicated by Pope Calixtus. After the death of this Iane, who was carryed away by William Flavy a Captaine of Compiegne, this traitour by the permiſſion of God, was ſtrangled by his owne wife called Blanche, and the helpe of a barber. Shee procured the Kings pardon, upon condition that ſhee could prooue, that her huſband ſought to drowne her. King Lewes founded at Compiegne the Curches of the Iacobine and Cordelier Fryers. La Ferre is the chiefe towne in Tartenois, very ancient, and a ſtrong towne, lying upon that place, where the Oyſe and the Serve meete together; having alſo a good Caſtle in it. Anthonine calleth Noyon Noviomagus, and placeth it betweene Soiſſons, and Amiens where the eighteenth Legion was quartered. Ptolemie nameth it Noviomagus from the Vadicaſſes, the vulgar people, and writters call it Noviomus: it is ſeated upon the Oyſe, and is one of the ancienteſt townes in all France. There are many antiquaries in it. It is alſo a Biſhops Seate, the Biſhops thereof are entituled Comte de Noyon, and Peere of France. The firſt Biſhop of Noyon was S. Medard, from whoſe time, till Iohn de Hangeſt there ſucceeded ſeuentie Biſhops on an other. S. Quintin, where the Earles of Vermandois held their reſidencie, is the chiefe towne which tooke its name from Saint Quintin, who was burnt there for the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith. Auguſta Veromanduorum, that is, Auguſt of the Vermandois was the Metropolis of that Countrie, which the Romans, to gratifie their Emperour, called Octavianus Auguſtus. This Citie lieth upon the Soame, and hath many Moores and Pooles lying about it: in ſo much that it is held the Key of France for that part, which in the time of warrs muſt endure the firſt brunt. Anno 1557. upon S. Laurence day the Spagnards tooke it in by an aſſault, but afterward was yeelded up againe, by a compoſition made betweene the French, & the Spagnards to Henry the Second, and thus much concerning Vermandois.

S. Quintin.

Retelois. La Tiraſche.

Retelois lyeth betweene Hainalt, Lorraine and Barrois, the principall towne is Retel. La Tiraſche is the chiefeſt towne in Guiſe, and hath a ſtronge Caſtle, which lies as a Fortreſſe againſt Luxenburgh. It is the ancient patrimonie, belonging to the eldeſt Sonne of the Duke of Lorraine, and thus much for the Right Picardie.

Lower Picardie.

Baſſe or Lovver Picardie conſiſts of diverſe parts, as of Santerre, the Counties of Ponthieu, of Boulogne, of Guynes and of Roye. Santerre is ſhut in with the hill called Saint Deſiderius, or in French Mont Didier from Peronne Roye, and Neſle. Mont Didier is a ſtronge place. Perone is a towne lying upon the river Soame, in which Hebert Count of Vermandois kept Charles the Simple King of France priſoner, he dying there, left his Kingdome full of troubles, and broyles. Roye is alſo a prettie towne, which hath a ſtronge Caſtle. There haue many famous men bene borne in this towne. The Marqueſſes thereof, are deſcended from the houſe of Courtenoy, which came of the bloud royall of France. Ponthieu is a Countie ſo named from the great number of bridges, that are in it; for it is a tract of land, which lyeth betweene the Soame, and the Authie, in which there are many ſtanding Waters, and Moores. The principalleſt towne in this Countie is Abbeville lying upon the river of Oyſe, where their is a Preſidiall ſeſſion and a Baily-wike, which is under the juriſdiction of Paris. The other townes are Crottoy, Rue, Treport, and Crecie famous for the bloudie Battle, fought betweene Edvvard the Third King of England (being Sonne to Iſabel the Daughter of Philip the Faire) and the French King Philip de Vallois, the Engliſh army being not aboue 27000. and the French ſome ſeuentie thouſand: yet God ſo bleſſed the King, that by the valour of the Prince & the Engliſh, there were ſlayne that day eleuen great Princes, 80. Barons, knights and men of armes, to the number of aboue fifteene hundred, where of the chiefeſt of them, were the old King of Bohemia, the King of Majorca, Charles Earle of Alanſon, brother German to King Philip, the Duke of Lorraine, the Duke of Burbon, the Earle of Flanders, the Earle of Savoy, both great Princes, the Dolphin of Viennois Sonne to Himbert Earle of Sancerne, and Harecourt, the Earles of Aumarl, & Nevers, ſixe Germane Earles. And the next day the Grand Priour of France, and the Arch-Biſhop of Roan, and other Gentlemen, and common Souldiers aboue thirtie thouſand, and then the King marched victoriouſly to Calis, and beſieged it and tooke it in.

The Battle of Crecie.

This Battle was fought the 27 & 28. of Auguſt. 1346. See Grafto, Ian de Serres, and Mr. Speed.

There are alſo in this Countrie two other Counties, the one called Monſtruel, the other Saint Paul. Monſtruell (ſome ſay) ought to be called Mount Royall, others imagine that it was ſo named from a Monſter that was ſeene there. Lovver Picardie comprehendeth in it, the Countie of Bouloigne, whereof wee haue ſpoken before. The chiefe rivers are the Soame (which is a ready paſſage by water to Amiens & Abbeville) alſo the Oyſe, the Marne, the Ayne, the Scarpe, and the river called the Eſcaut &c.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF NORMANDIE.

Name. NORMANDIE tooke this name from a Northerne People, for the word Norvvegia signifieth all that Region, which lyeth Northward, from whence the Danes & Norvvegians came like swarmes about the yeare of our Lord 900. & seizing upon this part and Province of France, taking it in, called it after their owne name Normannia, or the habitation of Northerne men. What great irruptions and invasions these nations made in Germany & France, is sufficiently knowne to all men, and therefore is needlesse here to repeate.

Bounds. Normandie is bounded on the West with the river Crenõ, which separateth it from Bretagne, on the North with the Ocean, on the South with Maine, and on the East with the Ile of France, wherein Paris lieth, and is seuered from the same by the river Oyse.

Fertility. It is a very fruitfull Countrie, as well for all manner of Graine, as for all kind of Fruits, especially it so abounds in Apples & Peares, that they make in it great store of Cider & Perry, which they transport and vent in other Countries. Besides this they haue abundance of all kind of Cattell.

The Norman Rollo was the first Duke of it An. 900. who by his fearefull invasion, tooke in the chiefest maritime Countries and townes of France, and made his incursions into the inmost parts of this Kingdome, which strooke such a terrour and anxiety into Charles the Simple, that to make his peace and reconciliation with him, after he was converted to the Christian faith, gaue him his Daughter Gilla in marriage, and all that tract of land called VVestenryck, with all Bretagne and the Countrie lying beyond the Loyre. From this Duke Rollo was lineally descended VVilliam the Conquerour Duke of Normandie, and King of England Anno 1067. After this Normandie continued English, till the daies of King Iohn: when Philip Augustus seized on all his estates in France, as forfeitures Anno 1202. The English then possessing Normandy, Guien & Aquitaine. The Earledomes of Anjou, Toureine, Maine, Poictiers & Limosin.

Townes. Ruan. The chiefest towne of Normandie is seated upon a fine running river called the Seyne, which by reason of the navigablenesse thereof, and the great shipping which comes to it, bringeth no small accommodation and profite to the Inhabitants. On the East side of it Sit. lieth Rubec & Aubert two smaller rivers. On the North side there are pleasant Meddowes & high hills, there was once a great faire stone-Bridge ouer the Seyne, which of late yeares is decayed and falne downe. It is famous in regard of the Parliement held there, & the Arch-Episcopall Seate. Here is the Sepulchre of Iohn Duke of Bedford, Regent of France, whose monument when a flattering Courtier persuaded Charles the Eight to deface; God defend (saith he) that I should vvrong him dead, vvhome living all the force of France could not resist.

The other townes are Aurenches, Eurex, Bayeux, Sais, Constance, Lisieux, Alençon, Aumale, Longueville, Eu, Harcourt, Tancarville, Malevrier, Mortan, Montgomery, Thoringny, Diepe, Gisors and Caux.

Division. Normandie is devided into the Vpper and Lower part. In the Vpper part there are three Dukedomes, namely Alençon, Aumale & Longueville. Also the Earledomes of Eu, Harcourt, Eureux, Tancarville, Maleurier, Mortain and Montgomery, likewise that part of this Countrie called Vaux, in which Gisors is the Capitall Towne, & the free Lordship of Aigle. The Lower part is also devided into small parcells, as into Caux, Bessin, Constantine, Hovivet, Royaume d'Ivedot and Le vaux de Vire. Within Lower Normandie lieth also the Arch-Bishoprick of Roane, unto which the Bishops of Sais, Constance, Lisieux, Aurenches, Bayeux and Eureux are subject.

The nature of the Inhabitants. Touching the nature of this people, they are not subject to any forraine lawes, but keepe stricktly their ancient customes and manners, they are much giuen to sedition, and uprore, howbeit they are affected to Arts, Sciences and Religion.

The Territoire of Maine is shut in with Bretagne, Normandie, Vendosme, Toureine and Anjou. It is full of high trees and woods, and hath many goodly Pastures and Lands, which beare much Corne: and in some parts thereof yeeldeth good Wines. The Inhabitants are craftie, frugall, & will not lightly be cousened. The Cenomanni were an anciẽt people, knowne by Cæsar, Ptolomy and others. The invasion of the Cenomanni in Italy, is mentioned by Polybius, Livius, and other Authours. Ancient people.

Rivers. There are three principall rivers in this Countrie, as the Mayne, the Loyre, and the Satre. This Territoire in old time was devided into two parts. For Mans was annexed to the Gouvernment of the French King, & the towne Maine, called in Latin Mania, with the Marquisate belonging to it, is now honoured with the title of a Dukedome, & acknowledged none but the house of Guise for their Lord.

Mans. The City of Mans is the Metropolis of Mayne, it is a very rich and a populous towne, seated in a most pleasant soile being washed with the rivers of Haigne, Orne and Satre. There are besides these some lesser townes, namely, Fronay, Chasteau du Loir, Champenay, S. Aignan, Benestable and such like.

Havens. The chiefe Haven townes are Harefleur, Deepe and Newv haven. The first of these our King Henry the Fifth of immortall memorie tooke in (the 22. of Sept. 1413.) after a short siege, and gaue them honorable composition, and leaving his Vncle Thomas Beaufort Earle of Dorset, Gouvernour of Harefleur, marches him self with 2000. horse & 13000. foote towards Calice through the Counties of Caux and Eu, aboue said. King Charles the VI. the Dolphin, his Brother the Count of Ponthieu, the King of Sicil, the Dukes of Berry & of Bretagnie with the most part of the nobility & gallants of France, had assembled an army at Roane of some 52000. with resolution to cutt of the Kings passage to Calice, and to giue him Battell, to that ende brake downe all the bridges, plashed the woods, cast up trenches in his way and strooke stakes into the Foords, & confronted him with their mighty army on the other side of the Soane. But the King at laſt hearing by his Spyes, that the river was paſſable at Bethencourt, by the negligent guard of them of S. Quintins, he gott ouer the river. His ſouldiers being weary & faint, many of them ſick, and their proviſions ſpent; were forced to feede upon nutts, roots and berries, and to drinke water. The day they ſpent with long marches and the nights being cold & wett, they found every where bad quarters: in ſo much that they were driven to ſtand upon their gards, becauſe the Ennemie entertayned them with continuall ſkirmiſhes.

King Henry ſeing himſelfe thus farre engaged, and many of his men ſick of the Fluxe, ſent unto the aſſembled Princes his profers, to ſurrender Hareflevv, & what elſe he had wonne: ſo as without diſturbance they would ſuffer him to march to Calice. But theſe young Princes diſpiſing the ſmall number of their adverſaires (puffed up with the vaine glorie of victorie) refuſed all conditions of peace, and were not onely negligent, in the duty of Commaunders: but alſo with an aſſeurance of victorie devided the pray, diſpoſed of priſoners, and prepared a Chariot to carry the Captiue King in Triumph, commaunding the cities and townes adjoyning, to ring their bells, and to render thanks unto God, who had delivered their Ennemies into ſuch a place of adventage, as an aſſured victorie muſt preſently follow: and ſo confident were they thereof, that they ſent to King Henry to know what ranſome he would giue. Hereupon King Henry ſent them word he was reſolved not to bouge out of his way, but to keepe on his march to Calis, and ſo having ſpent ſome times in prayer, in the ſtrength of the Lord of Hoſts, who is able to help with a few, aſwell as with a multitude: he committed the iſſue thereof to God, and ſo on thurſday the 24. of October he came to Azincourt, where the French in a field of advantage purpoſely choſen in the County of S. Paul, and neere unto Azincourt, had pitched their Banner Royall with an infinite hoſt. Whereof the Conſtable of France had the Conduct.

The Battells being ordered King Henry reſolved to breake through, and to open his way for Calis over his Ennemies boſome, or elſe to dye: and thereupon with a cheerefull Countenance & words full of Courage, he conforted his followers and ſaid: My moſt faithfull Companions, and vvorthy fellovv Souldiers, vvee novv goe into the field of honour, and to the vvorke of manhood, vvich your great valours haue ſo long exſpected and prayed for, Loe the day is novv come, and your vvorke the nobleſt in the VVorld: povver forth therefore your utmoſt forces, that ages may knovv vvhat the Lance, the Axe, the Svvord and the Bovv can doe, in the hand of the valiant: vvhoſoeuer therefore deſires riches, honour and revvards here he ſhall finde them,

The Kings Oration.

Nimirum hac medio poſuit Deus omnia Campo.

More over after the army had cõmitted themſelues to God, the King commaunded his Standard to advance, ſaying, Becauſe our injurious Ennemies doe attempt to ſhutt up our vvay, let vs upon them in the Name of the moſt glorious Trinitie, and in the beſt hovver of the vvhole yeere.

The Engliſh then ſeing the French ſtand, advanced forward, and giving a ſhoote fell on, when immediatly the Archers, which were layd in a meddowe darkned the aire, with a ſhower of ſharpe arrowes moſt fearefull to the ſight: but more deadly to be felt, and with all charged their Battell with an admirable courage: yea with ſuch a courage, not withſtanding their wants, as he that erewhile could ſcarcely bend his bow, is able now to draw his yard-long-arrow to the very head, whoſe roaving marke was the flanck of the French, ſo rightly aimed at, and ſo ſtrongly ſtuck on, that their ſides were altogether larded with arrowes, whereby the Avantgard was inſtantly diſtreſſed, and diſordered into ſuch a confuſed preſſe, that they were not able to uſe their armes at any advãtage. Their wings likewiſe aſſayed to charge the Engliſh, but Monſieur de Lignie in the one not well ſeconded by his troupes, was forced back, & Guilliaum de Surreres charging home in the other was ſlaine. The Battallions being broken for ſafetie fled to the Maine, where they bred both feare, and confuſion by the unrulyneſſe of their wounded Horſes; ſo galled with arrowes as they could not be gouverned. The French Horſe charging the Engliſh Archers, came on upon the Spurr, and that in ſuch a heate, as the Earth ſeemed to tremble under their thundring feet, and being forced forward without forſight of danger, carryed their proud Riders into the Iawes of diſtruction, for after the Engliſh Archers had giuen back, they fell by troupes upon thoſe goaring ſtakes (vvhich vvas purpoſely layd in ambuſcado for them) upon which they where miſerably ouerthrowne & paunched to death: the tempeſt of arrowes ſtill whiſling in the aire, ſparkled fire in their falls from the helmets of the French, & with their ſteeled heads, rang many thouſand their knelts. That dolefull day, who like to Corne cutt downe with the ſith, fell by whole plumps in that fatall field, the Engliſh ſtill following the advantage: againſt whome Anthony Duke of Brabant hoping by his example to encourage others (followed with a few) turned head and brake into the Engliſh Battell, wherein manfully fighting he was ſlaine.

With the like manhood Duke d'Alenzon a luſtie French Lord preſſed into the Battell, where King Henry himſelf fought, & encountring Humfrey Duke of Gloceſter, the Kings Brother; both wounded, and overthrew him, to whoſe reſcue if Henry had not come, he had dyed more honorable then afterward he did: for King Henry beſtriding him delivered his ſaid brother from daunger, and wanne himſelf much honour by the deed. Alenzon then coped with King Henry in fight, and with his axe cutt a part of his Crowne, which blowe was ſo ſurely layd on, that therewith his helmet was battered unto his brow, but the Lyon enraged with redoubled ſtrength, ſtrooke the French gallant unto the ground, and ſlew two of his men that ſeconded their maſter. The Duke thus downe cryed to the King, I am Alenzon, whom Henry ſought to haue ſaved, and ſo had done, had not the deafe eares of revenge ſtopt all ſound of life, againſt him that ſo had endaungered their Soveraigne Lord.

The French Rerevvard ſurpriſed with feare, at the diſaſter of the Avantgard, and the maine Battaile fled and ſtruck not a ſtroake, and ſo it pleaſed God to crowne King Henry with victorie: In which where ſlaine and taken priſonners, Charles D. Albert high Coneſtable of France, Geofry Bouciqualt Marſhall of France, Iaques Chaſtillon Admirall, Guiſard Dolphin of Arragon, great Maſter of the Kings Horſe, Edvvard Duke of Barre, Authonie Duke of Brabant, Duke d'Alenzon, Count Nevers, Count de Marle, Count de Vaudemont, Count de Blaumont, Count de Grandpre, Count de Rouſſy, Count de Taurquembourgh, Levves de Bourbon, Sig. de Preaux, Robart de Barre, Iean de Barre, and ſome 20. other great Lords, and as Iohn Tillet ſaith about 4000. Princes, Nobles, Knights and Eſquirers ſlaine that day, beſides ſome ten thouſand private Souldiers, & as many taken priſoners, and the King acknowledging God to be the giver of this victorie marched the next day towards Calis. Thus much briefly out of Mr. Speed.

Deepe is a famous Citie for its fidelity, and unmoveable allegeance to King Henry the Fourth of France, euen in the midſt of his troubles: at that time when the Confederate Papiſts of the Guiſian faction calling themſelues the Holy League had beaten him almoſt out of all his other townes, and in deriſion called him King of Deepe. Deepe. See Mr. Heylen.

Nevvhaven is called by the French Havre de Grace, in Latin Franciſcopolis, becauſe it was founded by Francis the firſt. This towne was in the firſt Civill warres in France, about Religion, yeeldeth into the hands of Elizabeth Queene of England, by the Prince of Condé, and his faction, as a towne of Caution; for ſuch forces as ſhe ſhould on their behalfe levie for them. Whereupon, the French King not liking a Neigbour ſo potent, made peace with the Proteſtants upon condition that the Engliſh might goe home, and thus much of Normandie. Nevvhavē.

THE DESCRIPTION OF LITLE BRETAGNE.

Name.

THE Dutchie of Bretagne, was firſt called Amorica, quaſi ad mare ſita, and now Bretagne from the Bretagnes; which in the raigne of Maximinus, came hither, and ſeated themſelues, to whome there flocked infinite others at the Saxons tyrannizing in Great Bretagne. Theſe people both conquered, and new named the Countrie, according to theſe verſes cited by Maiſter Heylen.

Vicit Aremoricas animoſa Britannia gentes,
Et dedit impoſito, nomina priſca, jugo.

That is,

The ancient Brittaine by Saxons chaſed,
From's natiue Albion, ſoone the Gaules diſplaced,
From Amoricke, and then victoriouſly,
After his name, ſurnam'd it Britanny.

The Brittiſh, or Welch language in part remaineth here ſtill, for ſuch as came out of Brittaine hither firſt, and married the Women of this Countrie, are ſaid to haue cutt out their tongues, leaſt they ſhould corrupt the language of their Children.

Limits.

Brittaine hath on the Eaſt the Normans, the towne of Maine, and a part of Anjou: on the South Poictou, the other ſides are environned with the Sea. It is the furtheſt Province of France towards the Sea coaſt, and ſhoots out ſo farre into the Sea, that it ſeemeth to be a Peninſula, ſo that it is not unfitly termed in ſome ancient hiſtories of France La Corne de France, for the forme thereof is like unto a horſe-ſhool, becauſe the utmoſt part, is rounded with the Sea, and the inmoſt towards the continent, groweth leſſer and leſſer.

Greatneſſe.

Bretagne is ſix daies journey in length, & three in breadth.

Fertility.

It is a moſt pleaſant, and fruitfull Countrie, for there are many goodly meddowes and paſtures in it, for the feeding of Cattaile and the getting of abundance of Fourrage. The Sea lyeth very commodiouſly upon it for navigation, and trading. The Inhabitants make good ſtoore of Salt there, which they dry & harden in the Sunne. Within the Countrie there are ſome Silver, Iron, and Lead Mines.

Ancient Inhabitants.

The Inhabitants are not in euerie part of alike abilitie, capacitie, and humanitie, but are for the moſt part craftie, and gripple, trading much in Wine, and other Drinkes. They ſpeake three languages, according to the ſituation, and Biſhopricks of their Countrie: for ſeing there are nine in Brittaine, thoſe which liue in the Biſhoprick of Cornvaille ſpeake the ancient Brittiſh tongue, and the Inhabitants thereof are the Cornubians, thoſe in the Countie of Saint Paul, where the Treguiers, the Alcteans as thoſe of Dol, Rhenes, and Saint Malo ſpeake French: but thoſe of Nantes, Vannes and Saint Brieu, ſpeake the Brittiſh and French tongues commixed together.

Different ſpeeches.

This Dukedome is called Litle Bretagne to diſtinguiſh it from Great Bretagne which is England & Schotland. Litle Bretagne.

The ancient Inhabitants were the Redones as appeareth manifeſtly by the Abbey of Redon ſo called, which lieth within this Dioceſſe. Redones.

The Nanmetes, or Nannetes are thoſe, which dwelt in the Biſhoprick of Nantes. Nannetes.

In the Biſhoprick of Cornovaille inhabited the Curioſoliti, which others called the Coriſopitenſes, Curoſopiti, and Criſopotes. Curoſopiti.

The Veneti and Ciantii dwelt in the Biſhoprick of Vennes, or Vannes. Venets.

The Oſiſmi and Oſiſini were thoſe people, which were called after the names of the townes of Triguier, and Landtriguier. Oſiſini.

The Diablintes, Diablintres, or Diablindi inhabited formerly in that place, where Leondoul lieth. Diablintes.

The Ambibari are ſuppoſed to be thoſe, which dwelt about Saint Michels mount, and were anciently called the Veneli, Venelli, and Vnelli, but are now the Ambians. Ambibari.

The Ambiliates, Ambialites are now the Lambalois, or as ſome imagine thoſe people, which dwelt at Amblie in Normandie. Ambiliates.

The Biduceſi are called now the Buocenſes of Saint Brieu. Biduceſi.

The Limovices or the Lemovices of Aquitanie, were called by Cæſar the Leonenſes, are thoſe of Saint Paul de Leon. Limovices.

The Cadetes, or Caletes were thoſe of Calice, as Fulvius Vrſinus altereth it: but others maintaine, that the Cadetes were thoſe of Chaſteau Brient, which lieth in Higher Bretagne under the juriſdiction of Mommorancy. Caletes.

This Countrie is divided into Hault, or High Bretagne, which lieth to the Eaſtward, and Baſſe or Lovve Bretagne to the Weſterne parts. High Bretagne is parted from Lowe Bretagne by a line, which runneth through the Caſtle of Andron, where the Inhabitants ſpeake partly the Brittiſh, and partly the Gallike tongues, & from thence reacheth forward betweene Saint Quintins, and Corlay towards the ſide of the Golfe of Vannes, and then to the river Villaine: yet ſo, that the towne called Saint Iohn ſtandeth in Lowe Bretagne. Higher Bretagne.

Name.

The Metropolis of this Countrie is Nantes, where heretofore the Dukes of Bretagne, had wont to keepe their Court, which in thoſe dayes was called but a Countie, being the title of the Dukes eldeſt Sonne. Nantes is ſeated upon the Loire, and by two other ſmall rivers in a very commodious place, lying not farre from the Sea ſide. The Biſhop keeps his reſidencie there, and ſometimes in thoſe foure places following. The Citie of Renes taketh the firſt place in the Parliament, and high Court of Bretagne: it is the ancienteſt towne of France, and one of the prime Biſhopricks of Bretagne. Here is kept the chamber of Accounts. Rem.

Dol or Doul was heretofore a Caſtle & the Biſhop of this place is allowed to weare a cloake, and therefore taketh place among the Arch-Biſhops. Dol.

Saint Brieu is a hanſome towne, lying upon a cliff, which ſerves Marriners for a Sea marke, to come into the Haven, upon the topp of it lieth a Caſtle, for the defence and Brieu.

S. Malo. Safegard of the towne. Saint Malo is the fourth Bishoprick, and is the same towne as some thinke called Aletum in Notitia Prov. Gal. and lieth upon the shoare of Neroica. That Aletha was a Sea towne in France where the river Rinctus runneth not farre from the Iland of Aaron. Surius de Gemblours describeth in the life of S. Machlovius, who was the first Bishop of this towne. In S. Malo was borne the braue Admirall called Iaques Cartier, who by the commaund and order of the King of France, found out first Comada, and other Lands, lying in the Northerne Ocean. In this Bishoprick there are many rich Abbeys, as the Abbeys of Beau Lieu, Montfort, and de Prez. Dinan is a very fine pleasant towne, where the Dukes of Bretagne had wont to take their recreation. Rieux lieth upon the river Villaine. Chasteau Briant is a prettie towne with a strong Castle in it, lying upon the Confines of the Bretans, Amoricks, and Angevins, being under the commaund of the illustrious house of Montmorancy. Lamballe whence Lambalois was named and peradventure the ancient habitation of the Ambliates. Here are many shopps of parchement, Vellum, & tared Sheep skins. Vitrayrs is a towne lying betweene Croisille, and a litle river, which separateth the Brettaines from those of the Maine, where there standeth, not farre from the Castle of Hermes, a great Elme tree, which parteth these territoires one from an other. In High Bretagne lie other townes, as Iugon, where there stood some ancient great Castles, the ruins whereof are yet to be seene: also Saint Aulbin de Cornier in whose fields was fought a great battle. Montcontour, Plerel, Iocelin, Malestroit, Pontigny, S. Iulian & Encenis and others. Finally upon the utmost confines of Poicton, are these places, which were commonly called Clissonnois, Raiz &c.

Dinan. Chasteau Briant. Lamballe Vitrayrs.

Low Bretagne. Vannes. Lovve Bretagne hath on the West side of it the Sea, which shutteth in three parts of it. The chiefest townes: and villages in it are these: Vannes, which is now a Bishoprick, and was called by Cæsar in his third booke of his Commentaires of the Gallique warrs, the Capitall city of the Veneti, & the chiefe place of the Armoricks. There is in it a Castle called l'Hermine, where the Dukes of Bretagne held in old time their Court. It is a question whither the Castle tooke its name from the Armes of it, or the Armes from the Castle. S. Paul de Leon was called by Ptolomy Portus Saliocanus, & Canalis, which was so named, in regard of the Salt that was made there. In this Bishoprick lye the Abbeys called Gerler de Religieux, S. Mathurin du finterre, S. Marie de Gerler, Triguier, Landstriguier, which hath a fine haven. Blavet is a towne lying within a nooke of the Sea where two rivers meete together traversing through it: that which runneth Eastward is called by the same name of this towne, the other is the Ella, esteemed one of the best Havens in this part of France, which Iosephus Scaliger supposeth to be Brest, from which some imagine Bretagne tooke its name. There are other townes besides, as Morlaye, which was a very commodious Haven for the English, also Guincamp gouverned heretofore by the heires of the ancient Earles of Stampes, which were descended of an English house.

Triguier. Blavet. Brest. Guincamp.

Peter the seuenth Duke of Bretaigne was Lord of Guincamp, he was the Sonne of Iohn the Fifth, and the fifth Duke of this Dutchie. Besides, Quimpetray, Conquerneaux, Quinpercorentin, S. Rognaut des Bois, and some others. There are also besides these places some good Havens as Ancray, lying not farre from Vannes, Homebont and Pontsecrot, where they take good store of Oysters.

Ancient Princes & Gouvernours. See Mr. Heylen.

The Lords of Bretannie first stiled themselues Kings, but afterward Earles about the yeare 859. and so continued till the time of Iohn the red Earle of Bretagne, who by Levves the Ninth was made a Duke An. 1250. In his posteritie it continued till the dayes of Duke Francis the Second, who joigning himselfe in league with Charles Duke of Berry, and Charles Duke of Burgundie against Levves the Eleuenth, drew a ruine on his head, which he could not possibly avoid. Charles Duke of Berry, as it was thought, was poysoned. Charles of Burgundie lost his life at the battle of Nancie 1476. and his Countrie was conquered by the French King. And Francis, this Duke having embarqued himselfe in the same troublous Ocean, must suffer shipwracke with his Copartners. The King of France invadeth Bretagne. The Duke ouercharged with melancholy dies 1488. leaving Anna his daughter and heire in the power of Charles the Eight, who contracts a marriage with the Orphan, and Vnited Bretaigny to France. There were many impediments, which might haue hindred this marriage; but Charles breaketh through them all. First, Charles himselfe had bene formerly contracted to Archduke Maximilian his Daughter: But this he held voyd, because the yong Lady was not of age at the time of the Contract. Secondly, Anne the Dutchesse was also contracted to Maximilian: & this he held unvalid; because the Dutches being his homager, could not bestowe herselfe without his licence. Thirdly, Maximilian had by proxie married her, which mariage he consummated by a ceremonie, in those daies new. For his Ambassadour attended by a great traine of Lords, and Ladies, bared his legg up to the knee and putt it into the Dutchesses sheetes, there by taking possession of her bed & body. But Charles consulting with his Devines, was tould, that this pretended consummation, was rather an invention of Court, then any way firme by the Lawes of the Church. Certainely God blessed not this wedding: for the children, which they had betweene them, not one lived. Charles being dead his Successour Levves, on the same policie, divorced himselfe from his owne Wife, and married this Dutchesse. And so this Dukedome, by the marriage of Anne Dutchesse of Bretagne with Levves the twelfth King of France her second husband, fell into the lapp of the Crowne of France, Anno CIↃ CXXI.

Vnto the illustrious house of Bretagne belongeth the Countie Montfort, the Vicount Rohan Ponthieuvra, Rieux, Raiz, Blossac, Avoulgour, Clisson, Leon, Vitre, Foulgeres, Ancenis, Grello and some others, whereof some of them are descended from the ancient Dukes of Bretagne, as appeareth by their Genealogies.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF ANIOV.

THE Dukedome of Anjou amonge other Baronies & Seigneuries, which belong unto the vaſſalage thereof are theſe foure Counties, Maine, Vendoſme, Beaufort, & La Val. The Hall of Iuſtice is in Angiers, unto which other benches, as Samur, Bauge, Beaufort & Vallée are ſubordinate. It hath but one Biſhoprick, namely, the Biſhop of Angiers, who is Suffragan to the Arch-Biſhop of Tours. Cæſar calleth the ancient Inhabitants of this Countrie, the Andes, and Plinie the Andegavi.

Limits. This Dutchie is boundeth on the South with Poictou, on the Eaſt with Toureine and Vendoſme, on the North with the Counties of Maine & La Val, & on the Weſt with Bretaigne.

Fertility. Though this Countrie be not great, yet is it very fruitfull and pleaſant, the hills being decked with Vines, and the Vallies full of greene Woods, fine Meddowes, and Paſtures for the feeding of Cattel. The Wines are much commended by the name of Vin d'Anjou. In brieſe, there is abundance of all things neceſſarie for the ſuſtentation of man. Out of the hills alſo they digg great ſtore of Slates, called Ardoiſes, where with they tile Churches and houſes.

Ancient Princes & Gouvernours. It is related that Childerick King of France, after he had made away Count Paul, became maſter of Angiers, and left the ſame to his Succeſſours. And that Charles the Balde, gaue the Vpper part of it to Torquato, (by ſome called otherwiſe) reſerving the right of Soveraignity to himſelfe, & the Lower part to Count Eude of Paris, and that Hugo Magnus, his Nephew, the Sonne of his Brother Earle of Anjou, reſigned it as a portion to Foulke, the grand Child of Torquato afore ſaid. After him ſucceeded theſe: Foulk the Second, Geofrie Griſgonelle, Foulke the Third, Geofrie the Second, Foulke the Fourth, Foulke the Fifth, who after Baldvvin was King of Ieruſalem, whoſe Daughter he married. Then Geofrie the Third, ſurnamed Barbatus, who eſpouſed Maud the Widdowe of the Emperour Henry the Fourth, the onely Daughter of Henry the Firſt, King of England, who had iſſue Henry the Second, and in the right of his Mother the Empreſſe, ſucceeded in the Kingdome of England, and by inheritance, by Geofrie his Father, added the Provinces of Anjou, Touraine, and Maine to the Engliſh diadem, and by Eleanor his Wife the Dutchie of Aquitaine, & the Earledomes of Guyen and Poictou. Afterward Godfrey the Fourth, and VVilliam Earles of Anjou, being vanquiſhed by their Brother the King, were chaſed out of that Countrie. King Henry the Second left his third Sonne Richard his Succeſſour to the Crowne of England, and Geofrie married Conſtantia, the Daughter and heire of Conan Duke of Brittanie, who did homage to his Brother Richard. Now he had iſſue Arthur, who in the right of his Mother was Duke of Bretagne, he did homage, fealtie, and tooke the oath of allegance to Philip the French King. Conſtantia his Mother out of a violent, and womanlike paſſion, and that becauſe of ſome emulation, betweene her & Queene Eleanor her Mother in lawe, without any juſt cauſe flies to Touraine to the French King Philip (to ſeeke a wolfe to whome ſhe might commit her lambe) to whoſe protection ſhe wholy ſurrenders his perſon, his cauſe, and his Countries. Philip pretending (as Princes uſe) a tender care of his neighbour Princes ſtate, (but thinking it was good fiſhing in troubled waters) forthwith without regard of truth or truce ſworne to King Richard, renforceth all Arthur Cities, & Caſtles with French Garniſons; ſome of which had ſcarce put their foote into Maunz; but King Iohn was at their heeles, ſacking that City, and demoliſhing it to the ground. The like alſo did Queene Eleanor to Angiers (while the King was at Roan, and girt with the Ducall ſword of Normandie, and crowned with a coronet of golden Roſes) as a terrour to all others, which after fealty once ſworne, ſhould dare to revolt. After this Arthur being exaſperated by his Mother, and ſtirred up & ſett on by King Philip, was proclamed Lord of theſe Dominions, and joyned with the Leaguers Armie. Queene Eleanor the Regent of theſe Provinces, having but a ſlender guard, betooke her ſelfe into Merabeau, one of the ſtrongeſt townes in all Poitou (ſending to King Iohn her Sonne for aide, who was then in Normandie and Maine to hinder and prevent Philips attemps, which could not ſo ſpeedely come) but Arthur knowing that upon the ſeiſure of ſuch a prize as Queene Eleanor was, he might drawe her Sonne to any conditions, beſieged her, and poſſeſſing himſelf of the towne, ſhee retreated into the Caſtle. King Iohn (hearing this) marching night and day with his Armv, encountreth Arthur, and the Leaguers Armie on a ſuddaine, beginns a terrible fight with them, overthrew them, entred the towne, relieued his Mother, and tooke King Philips two chiefe Confederates, Arthur and Hugh Brun, Raymund Father to Guido the huſband of Conſtantia, all the Peeres of Poitou and Anjou, aboue two hundred French Knights and others of commaund, beſides a multitude of priſoners. And ſo through the proweſſe, and valour of the King and his Engliſh, after a bloodie fight, he repoſſeſſed this towne, cacht his ennemies in this trap, & recouvered all the Provinces, which had revolted from him. And Arthur was carryed priſonner to the Caſtle of Roan.

mies had layd a foule ſlander, and a bloodie aſperſion upon him, that he ſhould haue made away Arthur. It vvas (ſaith one) by certaine perſons avovved, that Arthur attempting to eſcape out of hold vvas by caſualtie drovvned in the river Seine (on vvhich the Caſtle of Roan is ſeated) and yet the French men, the Kings mortall Ennemies (and therefore plenarie credit not to be giuen them) giue it out, that he vvas murthered by the Kings commaund: yea and by his ovvne hands: thus by the malice of Slanderers Englands Kings became defamed. This imputation ſprang from the French malignitie, and gaue life to King Iohns troubles and King Philips hatred, which yet once againe muſt goe maſked under the Roabe of Iuſtice. For Philip cits Iohn as Duke of Normandie, to appeare at a ſett day, to be tryed upon point of treaſon by his Peeres; Conſtantia Arthurs Mother (well brooking her name for her immutable hatred to King Iohn) is made the Plaintife, requiring iuſtice of Philip, as both their Soveraignes: King Iohn not appearing is condemned of a traiterous outrage, for being careleſſe of his oath made to the French, he, though an Vncle, had murthered his eldeſt Brothers Sonne, being a homager to the French, and that vvithin the French territoires, vvithout any legall courſe, nor by cognoiſance of thoſe to vvhome it appertained, vvhere upon he is adjudged to be held an ennemy to the French State, to forfeit all his Signories, vvhich by homage he held of the French. and thoſe to revert to the Crovvne of France, and a reentry to be made by force of Armes if any deny poſſeſſion. Thus now the ſecond time by a ſolemne, but moſt uniuſt ſentence (as the Pope himſelfe did ſtrongly and truely plead againſt Philips unprincely, & unjuſt proceedings) the French King & his Peeres diſinherited and condemned King Iohn, though abſent, unheard, neither confeſſing, nor convicted of the Action. Albeit at that time he ſent them his Royall promiſſe to come (if they would giue him publike faith and ſafe conduct for his comming, & returning) and anſwere at Paris touching the death of Arthur, though he vvas his liege man, had ſvvorne him fealtie, had violated the ſame, had raiſed a rebellion, and vvas taken in Battel. Hitherto Mr. Speed, of the raigne of King Iohn, pag. 558. and 559. After this Philip getting thus Anjou gaue it to Levves the Eight his Sonne, then it fell to Saint Levves his Succeſſour, who gaue it as an Appennage to Charles his Brother. Then Charles the Second ſucceeding him, he gaue it as a dowrie to Charles de Valois, who marryed Clementia his Daughter. Afterward it fell to theſe Kings, Philip de Valois, and to Iohn his Sonne, who raiſed this noble part of the Kingdome to a Dutchie, Anno 1350. and transferred it to his Sonne Levves, and then in a right line to Levves the Second & Levves the Third, who dying without iſſue, it fell to his Brother Rhene, his children dying, he ſubſtituted Charles his Brothers Sonne (or as ſome imagine his owne Brother) his heire, who made Levves the II. the French King his Succeſſour, and ſo this Dutchie was annexed to the Crowne of France, till Francis the Firſt gaue the uſe of it to the Mother Louiſa of Savoy, and returning againe to France, Charles the IX. gaue it as an Apennage to his Brother Henry, afterward King of Poland & France. The chiefe citie was called by Paul Diaconus, Andegavenſis Civitas, now Angiers. By Ptolomy Iuliomagus Andicavarum, ſeated on both ſides the river Meduana or the Mayne, having a ſtone bridg over it. It is well gouverned and honoured with an Epiſcopall Seate, a Seneſchalſhip, and a Baliewike. Beſides, it is a very famous Vniverſity erected by Levves the II. Duke of Anjou, Anno 1389. There are many fine townes lying in it, as Samur, ſeated upon the Loire, adorned with a Caſtle, heretofore an Vniverſity, alſo Montreneau, Bauge, Beaufort, Briſac, Monſtruel, Belay, Maleuvrier, Chantonceau, Villiers, Duretail, La Fleſche, Chaſteau-Gontier and Segre. There are alſo in it many Meeres, Marets, Pooles, and aboue fortie Rivers, Brookes and Springs. The chiefeſt are the Loire, Vigenne, or Vienne, the Maine, the Sarta, or Sartra & the Leorius. Without Angiers are the remnants of many ancient buildings & ruines, called Grohan, where they ſay the Romans had a Theater, for many antiquaries & meddalls haue bene digged here out of the ground.

Zu Lambeni Brit. in Richmundia. Comit. Mr. Paris ſaith Philip graunted for comming, but not for returning.

Angiers.

Townes.

There are (as is ſaid) diverſe Counties, Baronies, & Signories in this Dutchie, as Maine, Vendoſme, Beaufort, and La Val. The chiefeſt whereof is Comitatus Cenomanenſis, or La Comte de Maine. In Ptolomies times it was inhabited by the Cenomanni, and was one of the firſt Provinces, which they poſſeſſed in France. The Confines of this Countrie in ancient times extended further then they doe now, as is ſeene in Livius, Polybius, and Iuſtinus, who relate the incurſions of the Cenomanni into Italie. Part of this Countrie is fruitfull, and part is waſt and lieth barren: ſo that the Inhabitants, had rather entertaine one with Venaiſon, then with Bread & Wine: yet is it not altogether deſtitute of ſuch proviſions, for in ſome part thereof, it is fertill & yeeldeth Corne & Wine, for the goodneſſe whereof, neither Anjou nor Touraine can putt it downe. Beſides, they haue many goodly Paſtures, wherein they feede great ſtore of Neate and Cattel.

Counties now Dutchies.

Maine.

This Province (as Hiſtories mention) belonged heretofore to Aquitaine, and continued ſo under the Dukes of Aquitaine and Gaſcoigny, till a compact and an agreement was made, betweene Levves the XI. & Henry the III. King of England, upon the condition, that the Engliſh ſhould hold Aquitaine, as it was bounded on the North, with the river Carenton, and on the South with the Pirenean mountaines, and ſo quitting Normandy, and the territoires of Anjou and Maine, ſhould haue in lieu thereof xv. thouſand Florins. The French King Iohn gaue Maine & Anjou Anno 1360. to his ſecond Sonne Levves by Charter, who held it by feif. After him ſucceeded (as is ſaid) his Sonne Levves the II. and Levves the III. his Nephew. Theſe three bare the title of Kings of Naples. Levves the III. dying, his Brother Rhene ſucceeded him, whome Ioane the II. Queene of Naples made her heire, aſwell in the Kingdome of Naples, as in the Countie of Provence. This Rhene begatt of Iſabella, Daughter to Charles the Hardie, Iohn Duke of Calabre, whome Rhene his Father outlived: this Iohn had iſſue by Mary the Daughter of Charles de Bourbon, Nicolas Duke de Calabre, and Marqueſſe du Pont, who dyed alſo without iſſue, before Rhene his Grand Father. It is ſaid, that this Rhene would not reſigne over his right to the Kingdome of Naples and the Countie of Provence, to his Nephew Rhene, borne of his Daughter Iolanta, begotten by Frederick of Vaudemont, but transferred it to his Brother Charles Count of Maine, who dying alſo without iſſue, made Levves the XI. his ſole inheritour. In formes times this Countrie was devided into two parts, the firſt was Cenomanenſis Ditio, belonging to the Crowne of France, and the ſecond part was the Marquiſate, and acknowledged none but the houſe of Guiſe. Maunz is the chiefe towne of it, lying upon the Sartra, which heretofore was a Baliewike, but was advanced to a Preſidiall Court or hall of Iuſtice, by Henry the II.

Vendoſme.

The County of Vendoſme was raiſed to a Dutchie, the borders of it beginneth at Bogency, betweene the two Beauſſes, otherwiſe called Sologne and Vendoſme, and reacheth to Zaintogne, it tooke this name from Vendocinum, or the towne of Vendoſme, which Ptolomy called Vindicium Aulerciorum, Cenomannorum in Gallia Lugdunenſi, as ſome affirme: but Scaliger is of an other minde, and that Maunz is that ancient Vindicum. The Earles of Vendoſme ſprang from the Stemme of Bourbon, and ſo ſucceeded till the French King Frances created it a Dukedome, and gaue it to Charles his Sonne. Anthony ſucceeded his Father Charles Duke of Vendoſme & Peere of France, in the behalfe of Ioane d'Albert his Wife, alſo King of Navarre, of whome was borne Henry de Bourbon the IV. that mighty and victorious Monarck, who fought 11. Battles in perſon, who alſo was Prince of Bearn, and Duke of Vendoſme.

Beaufort.

Beaufort belonged once to the Dukes of Lancaſter, a towne in which Iohn of Gaunt delighted ſo much, that he called all his children procreated by Catharine Svvineford his third Wife, Beauforts, which Beauforts were afterward Dukes of Sommerſet, and Exeter. La Val we wil for brevities ſake paſſe over: & thus much for Anjou.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF TOVRAINE.

BELSIA, or La Beausse is a pleasant, and a fruitfull Countrie, which is commonly devided into three parts, that is, the Vpper, Nether & Middle Beausse. In the Higher part lie these Dukedomes, Chartrain and Chartres, with the Counties of Dreux, and Montfort: also Anjou with the Earledome of Maine and Perche. In the Lower Orleans, Sologne, and Loir. And in the Middlemost Blois, Dunois, Vendosme, and Touraine.

Limits. The Dutchie of Touraine beginneth three miles aboue the towne of Amboise, as ye goe to Blois, and endeth in de village called La Chapelle Blanche. The Bishop of Anjou, and Chousai gouverneth the clergie men. The pleasantnesse of this Countrie appeareth in the sweetenesse, and wholesomenesse of the aire, and therefore is truely called, Le Iardin de France, that is, the garden of France. They haue plentie of Wine, and Corne, and many braue woods to hunt in. Those of Touraine are accounted the ancienteſt, and chiefest people in France. The Metropolis of this Dukedome, hath on the one side the Loire, which with a crookling chanell runneth to the suburbs of Richi by S. Anns. on the South and West side it is watered with the river Indre. This territoire is not very great, because divers other Provinces, and Countries border upon it.

Tours. Tours is a very ancient citie, heretofore founded by the Gaules, and for her antiquitie putts downe all other townes in France: so that shee may truely be called the head-towne of many nations. Cæsar and some other Historiographers of Gallia named those of Touraine, the chiefest, and the bravest people of all France. Ptol. in his 2. Booke his 8. Chap. and third Map, nameth those the Turegi, which inhabited along the Loire. And Cæsar mentioneth them in diverse places, principally in the end of the second booke of his Comentaires, writeth thus: These affaires being thus executed, all Gallia vvas setled in peace, in so much that this vvarre caused such an amazement amonge the Barbarians, that the nations, vvhich dvvelt on the further side of the Rhyne sent their Ambassadours to Cæsar, and promissed vvith all, that they vvould send Hostages to him, and doe vvhatsoeuer he should commaund them. These Legions, because he made hast to returne back into Italy and Illyricum, he called them back in the beginning of Summer, and left his men in Angiers, Tours, and other tovvnes there abouts, vvhere he had vvarred in their VVinter quarter, and so departed into Italie. Whence one may gather, that those of Tours, were then no Ennemies to the Romans, but rather Cæsars frends; which is a signeof their ancient magnificencie, and glorie. This appeareth also by the histoire of Gregorie of Tours, who writeth that the Citizens of Tours are called in diverse places Senatours of Rome, and for this cause enjoyed the same lawes, and priviledges, as the Citizens of Rome did; being Confederates, allies, and frends to the Romane Empire. But when the Romane Empire & power began to decline, and to be crushed by the Gothes, Vandales, Burgonians, Hunns, and Gaules: Then Tours among the rest had like to haue lost her libertie, when the Gaules besieged it, and did greatly distresse it: but they having compassion on the Sepulchre of Saint Martin, whose bones lay entetred there, desisted from their determination of spoyling this towne, and quitted their siege, and afterward held this towne in such account, that they entrusted it with all their goods and power, and thus the City of Tours came under the Crowne of France, and after ward, when the Danes and Normans invaded France, Lewes the third resigned it ouer to Ingelger, Count of Anjou, that he might chase away the troupes of his ennemies, and defend the Loire. It is memorable what a braue victorie that Gallike Prince surnamed Charles Martell had in the yeere of our Lord 729. ouer the King of the Sarracins, whose army consisting of foure hundred thowsand Souldiers, were defeated just under the Gates of Tours. For which the Citizens thereof gott not onely a perpotuall honour, in resisting the Sarracins, but also shutt their gates against the Christians, when they sawe the victorie was doubtfull, that they might take away the hope of flight from them, and made them fight the more couragious and breake through the rankes of their ennemies.

The first Archbishop of Tours was Gratian, who liued in the daies of the Emperour Diocletian. After him Saint Martin the third Archbishop succeeded, anno 375. Some beleeue that he was borne in Hungary, and a souldier under Iulian the Apostate, but afterward changing his profession and religion, converted those of Tours to the Christian faith, and then dyed in the 26. yeere of his gouvernement. In this city is the Cathedrall Church of Saint Gratian, founded and dedicated to his honour by Saint Martin, in which there is a clock, that striketh not onely everie houre of the day, but also sheweth the motion of the planets in a globe, and the waxing and the wane of the moone. It hath two great Towers or Steeples of alike height, from the topp whereof one may see a fine prospect round about the Countrie. There is also Saint Martins Church in it, consecrated by his posterity in honour of him. In this Church his bones were kept, but afterward burnt in the time of the Gallike warres: yet the place where they lay, is encompassed with an yron grate, having these verses written aboue it.

The impious brood, Contemners of Gods vvorship & his name,
Haue burnt here to ashes Saint Martins bones vvith fire & flame.

About halfe a mile from this towne ſtandeth an Abbey, by which the Loire runneth, founded by Saint Martin aforeſaid. In it is a kings chaire and a cruſe with holy Vnction, which they ſay (if you will giue credit to it) Saint Martin receiued from an angell, with which unction Henry the fourth was annointed King, becauſe that that which was at Rheims in Bretaigne could not be gott, by reaſon of the warrs, which yet hangs up there for a monument, where is written, Here was Henry the fourth annointed King of France at Chartres in Saint Marie the virgins Church, after the Biſhop of Tours had ſaid Maſſe, and that on the 27. of Aprill in the yeere 1594. This cruſe with the Vnction for his annointing was with the unanime, and joynt conſent of the bretheren, brought to Chartres by Francis Mathias, Iacob Duyſeus, and Eſaias Ianay Priour of the Kings Great monaſterie.

Townes. The Smaller townes of this Dutchie are Amboyſe, Langers, Chinon, Loches, Mont-Richard, Chaſtillon, and Aſay. Amboyſe is a very pleaſant place, lying upon the Loyre, and as delightſome as any is in the whole Kingdome, whither the Kings of France oftentimes reſorted to recreate them ſelues, and to take their pleaſure. Levves the Eight built here a caſtle, where in Anno 1498. he dyed on a ſuddaine. Saint Martin after he had deſtroyed and caſt downe the Idoles, founded the firſt Church in it called Marminſter Church. Saint Florence his Church was built by Fulke de Nerra, Count of Anjou, who made it a Canonization, and endowed it with yeerely incomes.

Amboiſe. Amboyſe was under the Earles of Anjou, and under the Engliſh Monarcks, till Saint Levves annexed this Dutchie to the Kingdome of France, and that unfortunate King Iohn of England, loſt all his eſtate in France by confiſcation, Anno 1202. for then was it giuen to Charles Sonne to Lewes the Eight: in the right of his wife Earle of Provence, and by the donation of Pope Vrban, the fourth K. of Naples, and Sicily 1262. It was raiſed a Dutchie by Charles the Fifth Anno 1380. and laſtly giuen by Rhene the laſt Duke, to Levves the E leuenth Anno 1380. now of late it hath bene the title of the third Sonne of France. It hath a ſtrong Caſtle, lying upon a ſteepe and a high hill, which cannot be approched to, or taken in but by blocking up, or famiſhing; whither in the times of the troubles of France, the Queene mother & her Children retreated for their ſafety, and better aſſurance.

See M. Heylen.

Langers is a fine towne, lying Eaſtward a litle aboue that place, where the Loyre and the Indre meete together. Langers.

Chinon is a prettie towne with a Caſtle in it, where the French Kings, eſpecially Charles the eight, had wont to come to recreate himſelfe, for which cauſe he was called by ſome in deriſion King of Bourges. The Countrie and Soile round about it, is very pleaſant and fruitfull. Here beginns the long miles into Poitou, not farre from hence lyeth the Nonnain bridg, with faire ſtone Arches, & is almoſt halfe a mile ouer. Chinon.

Some ſay that Lodon ought to be under Poitou, heretofore ſome particular Lords gouverned it, but now is the Kings bench. Lodon.

Not farre from it lyeth Loche, which is fortifyed with a ſtrong Caſtle, where were found the bones of a gyant eight foote long, lying upon a ſtone with his hands under his head. Loche.

Montrichard is a towne ſeated in a delightfull plaine, environned about with hils, and pleaſant woods, called Les Foreſts de Montrichard. In the ſuburbs thereof are Houſes, and Caues made under the Earth, which upon the topps of them haue Gardens, and Orchards. Mont-richard.

Chaſtillon is a princely place ſeated upon the Indre. There are two Aſays, namely, Aſay le Bruſſe, and Aſay le Ferrun. Liſle Bouchard lyeth upon the river Vienne, which environneth it round about. Chaſtillon. Aſay.

Caude lyeth upon that point, where the Loyre and the Vienne fall one into an other. The Caſtle Pauline is honoured with the title of a Vicounty, ſtanding upon the top of a hill, where there is a fiſhe poole encompaſſed with a wall of aboue two miles about. Iulius Cæſar Scaliger in commendations of Tours hath made theſe verſes upon it following:

Splendidior nuſquam Gallis opulentia regnis,
Et nuſquam noſtro major in orbe nitor.
Non æſtus nocuit pecori, non frigora pomis,
Nec jam hortis certet Græcia fœta ſuis.
Nunc etiam Phrygiæque nurus, arteſque latinæ,
Atque petunt radios ſericaregna meos.
Aut ergo hic etiam Elyſii ſunt munera cœli:

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE COVNTIE OF BLOIS.

BEAVSSE is a dry Countrie: Nevertheleſſe fertill, and rich in Graine. Thoſe of Chartres, Orleans, Angiers, Maine and Tours, heretofore tilled this region. La Beauſſe is devided into three parts. The Higher, the Middle, & the Lower Beauſſe.

Higher Beauſſe beginneth at the Village commonly called Ablys, and reacheth beyond the territories of Chartres. It comprehendeth under it, the Countrie Chartrain, the Dutchie of Anjou, and the Countie of Perche. The Countrie of Chartrain, as Cæſar obſerveth, lyeth in the very heart or middle of all France, ſhutt in upon the one ſide with the Countie of Perche, and on the other ſide with the Dukedome of Orleans. The Metropolis is Chartres, a renowned City at this day, ſeated partly in a valley, and partly upon the ridge of a hill, abounding in faire buildings, girt about with a ſtronge wall, and fortified, with Bulwarkes, rampards, and deepe ditches, flouriſhing with many rich Inhabitans, & Citizens. It had heretofore Earles, who gouverned it. The Dutchie of Aujou beginneth at the village of Chouſay, and endeth betweene Montcontour, & Herraut, where Poitiers beginneth alſo, which bordereth upon the South-ſide of it, & on the Eaſt lyeth the confines of Touraine, & Vendoſme: on the North it is boundeth with Maine and La Val: on the Weſt it butteth upon Bretaigne.

Dutche of Anjou.

Bounds.

There are in this Countrie aboue fortie Rivers, many Pooles, a great number of Lakes, diverſe Brookes, Ponds. and Maraiſſes, beſides an infinite number of fine Springs. It is a hillie and fruitfull Countrie, and the hills in every place, are couvered with Vines & grapes, the valleys full of greene Woods, Groues, fine Meddowes and paſtures for the grazing of Cattell. Here are curious and delicate Wines, commonly called Vin d'Anjou. Thoſe of Anjou had formerly Lords and Dukes of their owne, whereof one of them was called Dumnacus, whome Cæſar vanquiſhed, as Hirtius teſtifieth in his eight booke: who afterward came under the commaund of the French, as ſome other Gaules did. The Capitall Citie of this Dutche is Angiers, a citie built with great magnificencie, on both ſides of the river Meduana, or the Maine, which parts are joined together with a faire ſtone bridge over this river: It is well gouverned, and honoured with an Epiſkopall dignitie, with a Seneſchallſhip, and a Balicwike, and hath a preſidiall Hall, and a famous Vniverſitie in it erected by Levves the ſecond Duke of Anjou, Anno 1389. and was repaired and enlarged by Henry de Vallois Duke of Anjou, brother to Charles the Ninth, Francis Baldvvin being called thither, to inſtruct them in the civill Lawe. This Dutchie hath many fine townes in it, ſome greater ſome leſſer, whereof the chiefeſt is Samur, an illuſtrious Schoole famous in regard of Philip de Mornay Lord of Pleſſy that excellent Divine and champion againſt the Papacie. The Count of Maine bordereth upon Anjou, Toureine and Perche, which is watered with theſe three principall Rivers: The Maine, the Loire, and the Sartra.

Rivers, Lakes & Pooles.

Fertility.

Samur.

The Countie of Perche, is devided into two parts, the one is the Lower, commonly called Le Perche Govet, and is a Caſtlewike almoſt environned about with the territoire of Chartres. The chiefe towne in it is Nogent. The other le Retrou, is the Higher, which is properlie the Countie it ſelfe. Among other townes Mortaigne lyeth in it, and is the Court for the Bailife of Perche. It is boundeth on the one ſide towards Normandy with Vernueil, & on that ſide which looketh towards Maine with Memers.

County of Perche.

Site.

Middle Beauſſe lyeth in the very midſt thereof next unto the higher part, which taketh up all that tract, which lyeth on both ſides of the Loyre, from Romorantin, a towne ſeated upon the Sauldre called the Greate, as farre as Vendoſme: but on the right ſide of the Loyre, it containeth all that Land, which reacheth from Chaſteau-dun to Blois, & the territoire of Tours. This part of La Beauſſe is called Vendoſmois, becauſe it comprehendeth part of the Counties of Blous, Dunois, and Tonnoire, and part of the Dutchies of Vendoſme, and Touraine.

Midle Beauſſe.

The ancient city of Blois gaue denomination to the Countrie of Blois, one of the faireſt, and flouriſhing townes in France, and very famous, aſwell for the ancientneſſe thereof, as that it hath bene the nurcing-mother of many Princes, and noble houſes. It is finely ſeated by the Loyre ſide, partly upon riſing hills, and partly in a valley, for which reaſon, it affordeth no good walkes: which diſaccommodation is ſupplyed with a moſt delicate and ſweete aire, which doth ſurpaſſe that defect by many degrees. And it is a moſt wholeſome and a healtfull place, by reaſon of the goodneſſe of the aire, which make many great men reſort hither, with hopes of preſerving them ſelues in good health and longe life. It is ſuch a pleaſant ſoile, abounding in Vine-fields, and all ſorts of Graine, and fruitfull Trees, that it will not giue place to any part of France. For it is ſo delightfull to the eye, for the marvaillous beautie thereof, that one cannot deſire any thing, neceſſaire for ſuſtentation, or recreation, but is to be found there. There are ſuch pleaſant Rivers, moſt ſweete Springs, delicate Fountaines, and Brookes, making a ruſſling noiſe & ſpreading themſelues, up and downe this Countrie with crooklings & turnings as ſo many veines, which miniſters great delight, and cauſes a ſweete aire: ſo that many great perſonages and men of quality, as is ſaid, come hither to take phyſick for their health; & this is the reaſon, why diverſe Kings and Princes ſonnes are nouriſhed and brought up here, and ſome times the Kings of France themſelues haue chooſen this place to liue in, for their health and recreation, for which reaſon it is commonly called, la Cité Royalle.

Of the antiquitie of the city of Blois.

And though the beautie of this City, & the Countrie circumjacent be ſo great: yet is there no mention made thereof, in thoſe ancient Hiſtoriographers, who haue chiefly wrote of this Nation, and their townes, which was the ſubject of their glorie, in deſcribing theſe people & townes, whome they were conſtrained to beſiege, and to conquere by force of armes. Howbeit the curioſity of thoſe is to be commended, who with great diligence, haue ſought ſo farre into antiquitie, that the towne of Orcheze, lying two miles from this citie, ſhould be the Store-houſe of Iulius Cæſar, in which was kept his warlike proviſion, and amunition, for the maintenance of his armie, as appeareth by the ruines of the great buildings thereof: and though I am of the opinion, that the foundation of this towne was not layd there, becauſe the ancient Gaules, had wont allwaies to chooſe a place for the building of their townes, upon the tops of ſome clifts or hills, and difficult places to clime and gett up to, or by ſome rivers ſide, yet without all queſtion, this is a very ancient towne as may be proued by diverſe paſſages in the bookes of Gregory de Tours; where it is ſaid, that in the daies of King Gontran in the yeere of our Redemption 560. when he ſought to take Iberulphe, who for his ſafety and refuge retyred himſelfe to Saint Martin of Tours: he had commaunded thoſe of Orleans, and Blois, that they ſhould take heede that he did not eſcape by flight. In this City alſo there is an ancient Caſtle, built upon a rock, lying moſt pleaſantly, ſeparated from the towne, which is the Kings ſeate and palace, from whence there is a moſt fine proſpect into the City, and round about the Countrie, which miniſters great delight to the eye. There are alſo in it two beautifull Churches: the one within the Caſtle it ſelf dedicated to the honour of Saint Salvator, endowed with large revenewes by Earles & Kings which haue ſucceeded one an other. The other conſecrated in honour of S. Iames. Likewiſe two faire Abbeys, which embelliſheth much this city of Blois. The one is Saint Lomers founded and beneficed, (Anno 927.) with rich incomes, by Rudolphus of Burgoigne King of France. The other is de Ladie of Bourgoignys, whereof no mention is made of the foundation in the ancient writers of monuments. There are alſo in this Citie many other ſumptuous ſtructures, dedicated to divine uſes, which would be to long here to relate. In theſe but eſpecially in Saint Saviours Church, are many ſumptuous Tombes of Kings, & Princes, cutt out moſt artificially in Braſſe, Alablaſter, and rich ſtones upon which Levves and Guido Earles of Blois are moſt cunningly cutt out in Marble. There are beſides in this Citie diverſe Conduits of Water, which make a ſtately ſhewe; having pipes under the Earth which leads and conveys the water unto them; whereof ſome of them haue ſuch high & great Vautes, that three men a horſback, maye eaſely ride in front through them. And in many places of the hardeſt rocks and mountaines, theſe conduict pipes are hewen through them, which haue coſt an infinite charge, & which would be incredible here to rehearſe. The admirableneſſe of which workes, ſhewe manifeſtly the ancient riches of the Romans, anſwerable to their power, though the Romane Hiſtorians make litle or no mention thereof. For they paſſe over in ſilence the famous buildings of Nemours, the Amphitheater of Bourdeaux, the magnificent ſtructures of Poitiers, and the Conduicts of Paris; Beſides the ancient manner of buildings, & the huge Stones layd in the walls of Caſtles and Townes, demonſtrate planely the Romane antiquitie, as alſo the old peeces of walls & ruines of divers places, and the foundation of them which were layd deepe under the ground.

Nature of the people.

There is a ſweete harmonie & concordancie among the Inhabitants, and Citizens of this towne anſwerable to the goodneſſe of the aire, and the pleaſantneſſe of the fieldes. For they are ſo loving & courteous, ſo full of humanitie, ſo gracious in their ſpeech and manners, ſo decent in their apparell, & ſo cleanely in their dyet & manner of living, having ſuch a familiar converſation one with an other; that all theſe vertues ſeeme to ſympathize with the nature and goodneſſe of their Countrie.

The ancient Earles of Blois.

Among the old Earles of Blois, I find that Theobald the ancient was one of the firſt, the Sonne of Gedeon, deſcended on his Fathers ſide from Rouland Robert, the Firſt Duke of Normandie. He had a Sonne called Otho, who encreaſed aſwell his principalities left him by his Father, as by his owne vertue and power. He was Count of Champaigne, Blois, Brie, Tours and Chartres. He begat Thibaud the Second, and Stephen, who ſucceeded his brother, dying without heires. From him and Alice the fourth Daughter of VVilliam the Conquerour, iſſued Thibaud the Third, and Stephen. The Sonne of the firſt of them, called after the name of his Father dying without iſſue, left many goodly poſſeſſions behinde him to Stephen his uncle on his Fathers ſide, who had obtained the Kingdome of England. Amonge whome wee read, that Levves the Sonne of Henry the Second, Earle of Champaigne, and of Brie, the Nephew of Henry the corpulent, & of King Stephen was Earle of Blois, to whome alſo the Dutchie of Romania, was given for his Heroick, and braue deeds of Armes at Conſtantinople. He alſo dying without heires, as likewiſe Thibaud their ſiſter Margaret ſucceedeth them; who was firſt Wife to Otho Earle of Bourgoigny, and after her firſt huſbands death ſhe was married againe to Gvvalter Lord of Avennes, of whome was borne Mary Lady of Avennes, Counteſſe of Chartres, and of Blois, who was eſpouſed to Hugh de Chaſtillon Count of Saint Paul.

In the yeere 1588. the 22. of November, was maſſacred at Blois by the commandment of Henry the Third, Henry de Loraine, Duke of Guiſe, and the next day his brother the Cardinall.

The Countie Dunois hath for its Capitall City Chaſteau-dun.

The Countie du Tonoire.

Site.

The Dutchie of Vendoſme, is environned with la Beauſſe, with Angiers, with Perche and Toureine: the chiefe Citie is Vendoſme, where that famous Poet Peter Rondſard was borne.

THE DESCRIPTION OF BELSIA OR LA BEAVSSE.

La Beausse.

The ancient Inhabitans were the Carnutes.

LA Beausse, though it be a very dry Countrie, which wants Rivers and Waters; yet never the lesse it is fruitfull in abundance of Graine. Venance Fortunate maketh mention thereof. All that tract, which is called at this day La Beausse, was formerly inhabited by the Carnutes, Aurelianenses, Andicavi, and Cenomanni, and Turi. Cæsar commendeth highly the Carnutes: Ptolomy calleth them likewise Καρνῦται. Plinie nameth them Allies, Tubulle Carnuti, and in Notitia Provinciarum Galliæ in the fourth Treatie of Lionnois la Citè des Carnutes, and as that which we call at this day the Bishoprick of Chartres and the Countrie Chartrain. In the time of Iulius Cæsar, Tasgetius, being descended of a good house was borne at Chartres, whose Predecessours had bene Gouvernours, and Rulers of this Towne, whome as Cæsar himselfe writeth for his vertue, & the good affection hé bore him, comming to him just when he had occasion to use him in his warrs, setled him in the place, titles, and dignities of his Ancestours. But in the third yeere of his raigne, his ennemies murthered him publickly by the Councell and instigation of many of this towne. For, the ancient Gaules had then their Cut-throats and Murtherers in every towne. Ancient Authours make mention very often of the Carnutes, and as Merula noteth, they had an annuall place dedicated to the Druides. Some men imagine that the name Carnutes is derived from the Greeke word Nutts: in regard of the abundance of Nutts, which growe in the woods of this Countrie.

Those of Orleans.

The Aurelianenses are in Paulus Diaconus lib. 5. c. 2. treating of the fashions of the Lombards mistaken, where some read, but impertinently and without distinction, Venientes de Cenomannicorum Aurelianensium Regione Franci, as if the Cenomanni had bene surnamed Aurelianenses, which is a great errour. For these were two sundry people. The Citie of the Aurelianenses in Notitia Provinciarum Galliæ, Tract. 4. in the Table of Lion, & in the Preface to the second Councill of Orleans, is called The Dutchie and Episcopate of Orleans. Those whome Tacitus name Andecavi or Andicavi, Ptolomy nameth Ανδικαῦοι, are termed & found in the ordinarie coppies Ωνδικαῦοι, but Plinie improperly calls those Andigavi, which in some coppies are Andegavenses. in Notitia Prov. in the third mapp of Lyonnois, they are called La ville des Angevins. In Cæsar Andes, whose Generall as Hirtius relateth lib. 8. was vanquished by this Emperour. But now is commonly called, The Dutchie of Anjou, the Bishoprick of Angiers, and the Angevins. Cæsar, Ptolomy, and some other Authours held those of Mans (a Gaulish people) in great esteeme. As also in Notitia Prov. Gal. Tab. 3. of Lyonnois, it is called La Citè de Mans, or Pais du Maine, & l'Eveschè du Mans, &c.

Angevins.

Those of Mans.

The Aulerces is thought to haue ben the first name of the ancient people of Gaule which in Plinie are called Cenomanni, Polybius, Livius, Iustinus, and other Historiographers speake much of the incursions and spoiles of the Cenomans in Italy. Ptolomy called them Κενομανοὶ and Plinie Cenomans. And Strabo likewise tearmeth them Cenomans, the Neigbours of the Carnes, aboue the Venitians, and because they were not content with their owne Countrie, Plinie placeth them in his third Booke and nineteenth Chapter of his Gaulę Narbonnoise among the Volcæ. Those whome Cæsar and Tacitus nameth Turons, are called by Ptolomy in his second Booke 8. Chapter and third Map of Europe Τυρόνοι. In the Treatie De Notitia Lyonnois Civitas Turonorum, which is now the Dutchie of Touraine or the Archbishoprick of Tours.

Tours

La Beausse is threefould. The Higher, the Middle, and the Lower Beausse.

The devision of La Beausse upper Beausse, in which lyeth the territoire of Chartrain & the city of Chartres. Site & fertility.

The Higher Beausse beginneth at the Village of Ablys, and reacheth to the fields of Chartres, & beyond them it comprehended under it the Territoire of Chartres, the Dutchie of Anjou, and the Countie of Perche, which as Cæsar noteth is in the very midst and Center of all France, and bordereth upon the Countie of Perche, and hath on the other side thereof the Dutchie of Orleans. It is called the Village of Chartres, by Nithardus in his first Booke of the descentions of S. Lewes his Children. Chartres is as good a Countrie as any is in all France for fertility, abundance of all things, and pleasure, having great store of all kinde of Graine, Cattell, Fruits and Wine. The chiefe towne is Chartres as Rosinus saith. Ptolomy calleth that Αὐτρικὸν, which is now Chartres. It is none of the least townes; but famous, situated partly in a plaine and partly upon a hill, having many faire buildings in it, girt about with Walls and Bulwarkes, and encompassed with a Moate, in which their dwell many wealthie men. At the foote of the hill runns a River, upon which stand Watermills, the head whereof beginneth in the County of Perch, and is conveyed by the industrie of man towards Louviers, and a litle aboue Roane falleth there into the Seine. The great Church is dedicated to our Lady.

In ancient times they had their owne Earles. The first of them (as is thought) was the Grandfather of Otho, whose Father was Theobaud the Elder, Cossin to Rollo the Norman, Count of Blois, who tooke in Chartres by force of Armes. Otho had these for his Successours, his Sonne Theobaud the Second, who dyed without heires, and Stephen, from whome issued Theobaud the Third his Grand child, and for his Cossin German Theobaud the Fourth, who deceased likewise without issue. After whose death no more mention is made of any Earles of Chartres. Heretofore the County of Dreux, as also Montfort was annexed to this Countrie. The Countie of Dreux tooke his originall from Robert the Sonne of Levves the Sixth, called the Corpulent King of France, who had for his Successour Robert the Second the yonger, but Peter the Elder of his Sonnes, was created the first Prince of Britaigne. After him succeedeth Robert the Third, and then his Sonne Iohn the First his Grand child, then Robert the Fourth, then his Sonne Iohn the Second, in the fourth linie. Robert the Fifth, Ionh the Third, and Peter who dyed without heires: after whome his Sister Ioane succeeding espoused Levves the First of Touars, and afterward Govin Beausard, who was the occasion that her husbands were setled againe in the Countie of Dreux, of whome never the lesse Historians make no great mention. This towne (as it is reported) was heretofore the seate of the Druides, lying upon the river of Evreux.

The Countie of Montfort for nobleneſse will giue no place unto it. Robert the Fourth, Count of Dreux (as it is said) was Lord of it, whereof wee haue spoken before, who marryed Beatrice the Daughter and heire of Iohn Count of Montfort. The towne of Montfort lyeth halfe way betweene Paris, and Evreux.

Lower Beausse. It resteth that we now come to the Lovver Beausse, which is a Champian Countrie without hills, and so abounding in Graine, that it maye truely be called The Garner of France, as Sicil was heretofore of Italie: lying betweene the Bishopricks of Orleans, and Chartres, reaching from the towne of Estampes Eastward, as farre as the Senons, and on the South side to the bridge of Orleans. It comprehendeth under it The Dutchie of Orleans, and the territoires and Domaines of Oris and Sologne.

The devision thereof. The Dutchy of Orleans in which Orleans it selfe lyeth. The Dutchie of Orleans taketh its denomination from the Citie of Orleans, situated upon the Loyre, which Cæsar in his 7. Booke and Hirtius in his eight called Genabum, and those which affirme the contrarie speake against all reason and truth. For as Scaliger writeth in his letters: Those are much deceived, who beleeue that Gia lay upon this river. Aimon in his first Booke and fifth Chapter saith directly, that Genabus is the same, which at this day is called Orleans. Vrsinus and Manutius call it in their coppies taken out of Cæsar Genabin, and Anthonine Cenabum, and Ptolomie Κήναβον, if there be not a fault escaped in the last fillable. Besides, it is corruptly and against the credance of Historie in Orosius Lib. 6. Cap. 2. read Senapum. Strabo in his 4. Booke Τλώαβον, πρὸ Καρνούτων ἐμπόριον. wee read in Sidonius Lib. 8. Esp. 5. to Pope Prosperus, and in Gregorius of Tours Lib. 5. in his Historie Chap. 33. and in Aimonius Lib. 1. Cap. 6. as in Iordanus, treating of the Actions of the Getæ, The Towne or City of Orleans.

Orleans. Gregorie of Tours likewise Lib. 1. Cap. 7. in his Historie of S. Gal and S. Anian calleth it Aurelia. It seemeth to haue taken this name from the Emperour Aurelius, if Otho Frisingensis in his 4. Booke & 41. Chap. be not mistaken: but those are greatly deceived, who giues it this name from the Empresse Aurelia, Cæsars Mother, or from Gould called in Latin Aurum. In Cæsars dayes this towne was accounted to stand in the Countrie of the Carnutes. At this day it is a braue, & a gallant towne, which may be raunged among the Site. chiefest cities of France. It is seated in an excellent and a healtfull aire: on the North side it riseth a litle more then in the other part of it, where there stands the magnificent, and sumptuous Church of S. Crosse: but of late times with some others, is miserably ruined and demolished, which is a lamentable spectacle. On Bourgoignes side it is much enlarged. Behinde S. Stephens his Church, there are yet the ruines of many ancient Walls, where is seene an old gate, called yet the Bourgonian Gate, and all the buildings beyond it to the New Gate, are called, La Ville Neufve, or the New Towne.

The Loyre beateth upon the Walls of it, & hath a faire stone bridge over the midst of it into the Iland, upon which stands the monument, and Statute of the Virgin of Orleans Ioane Darck, who by her valour saued this towne in the raigne of Charles the Sixth, Anno 1428. when it was straightly besieged by the English and almost lost. Levves Micquelle of Orleans composed a Booke of this subject, where ye may read the Storie thereof at large, and dedicated it to Charles the Cardinall of Lorraine. The Citizens of any quality in memoriall of their deliverance, keepe a day of prayer euery yeere for it, upon the eight of May. And this day is commonly called The Tovvne Feast. At the end of the bridge there lies the Suburb named Portereau. And the great Mercate place Estappe, or the staple, because of the abundance of Wines, which lies in hoggsheads upon it, and which are transported into other parts. The place of execution is called Martroi, in remembrance of Martyrs, which suffred there. It is one of the most famous Vniversities of France, which Philip the Faire, founded Anno 1312. wherein is chiefly taught the civill lawe, and where they speake the best and purest french in France. It is also honoured with the title of a Bishoprick. There haue bene Kings annointed in it, as well as at Reims, as Histories relate. The fields round about it are very fruitfull every where, and yeeld aboundance of excellent Wines, which are transported into the most parts of Europe, and for their goodnesse are called Vin d'Orleans. They haue had heretofore (aswell as some other Provinces in France) their Natiue Princes, and was formerly subject to the Romans, which being driuen out of it, acknowledged afterward the Kings of France, who honored it with the title of a Kingdome. It is thought that Cleodomir was the first King of it, who dying without issue, Clotarius his Brother succeeded him, who afterwards, his bretheren being dead, obtayned the whole Kingdome of France, and was then alwayes annexed to the Crowne of France, till the time of the Valoises. King Iohn by the commaud of his Father Philip, created it a Dutchie and joined it to his Kingdome, & than gaue it to his brother Philip Count de Valois, since which time it hath alwayes enjoyed the title of a Dukedome: but Philip dying without heire males, it fell againe to the Crowne of France, & finally was decreed, that the second Sonne of the King, should enjoy (as an Apennage or a portion) this Dutchie of Orleans, and the Dolpheny the title of the Eldest. It was once shrodly besieged by Attilla King of the Hunes, who was called Gods flaile, and hath almost bene taken in: yet at last partly by the industrie and valour of the Citizens, who defended it bravely, and partly by the aide of the mighty Armie of Aetius Patritius, of Merovv King of the Franks, and Theodoricke King of the Goths, it was relieued, and the Hunes being routed, where constrained to abandon it, and leaue all their spoiles behinde them.

See. Amm. lib. 1. cap. 6. Peter Equi. lib. 10. cap. 71. Siegib. anno 453. Greg. de Tours lib. 2. cap 7. Iournand. chap. 37. & some other Authours of that age.

Francis de Belle Forest hath wrot much in the commendations of this City. Leon Trepot Senatour of Orleans, wrote a whole booke of his Countrie. Of late times it hath bene lamentably spoiled and suffred much by the Civill warrs.

Loris. The territoire of Loris taketh his name from the famous towne heretofore called Loris. In the Castle of Loris were first established those ancient lawes, and customes now held & observed in Orleans.

Sologne. Sologne a part of Lower Beausse comprehendeth all the tract of land from Orleans beyond the Loyre, as farre as Amboise, reaching Eastward to the territories, which joyne and lye upon the river Care. It hath two parts, the Vpper in which are the Rye-fields, the heathie grounds, and the woods. The Lower part is full of fine rivers, meddowes, and pastures, which is more sandie, and not so fatt a soile as the other. The chiefe towne of it is Romorantine, which by some Romorantine. marks shews the antiquity of it. It may be Rodrina, mentioned in the ancient manuscripts. The Inhabitants, especially the common sort call their towne Ancient Rome, the name thereof comming some thing neere that City. Also Chasteau-Neuf strong in regard Chasteau-Neuf. of the Castle. It had about it heretofore many fine Gardens, Orchards, & Walkes for recreation. Now it is the Domaine of the Princes of Melfes. Aubigni was Aubigni. formerly a Royale seate, which Lewes the Second had erected. Cleri called this day Nostre Dame de Cleri, Nostre Dame de Cleri. famous for the Pilgrims, which resorts unto it. The Iargeau. last is Iargeau, and thus much of La Beausse.

The deſcription of that part of France,

Properly called

FRANCIA,

OR THE

ISLE OF FRANCE.

Name.

THIS part of France, commonly called Francia, or the Iſle of France, tooke this name firſt from the Francones, a people, which lived in the great Foreſt of Sylva Hyrcyma in Germanie, who driving the Vangiones out of it there ſeated themſelves, and called it after their owne name Franconia, which now beareth the name of France; but here it is taken more ſpeciall, & with a leſſer reſtriction, then the whole Kingdome it ſelfe, comprehending theſe parts in it, namely, The Vicountie of Parù, the Dukedome of Valloù, and the ſmall territories of Hurepens and Gaſtenoù. Theſe Francones Iulius Cæſar tamed, Maximinus ſlaughtered, and Conſtantine vanquiſhed, and Iulian the Apoſtate kept under: yet in the reigne of Valentinian the firſt, they beganne to ſhake of the clogg of bondage: and changing their name with the encreaſe of their Power, called themſelves Franci or Frankes, that is, Freemen. Heretofore they were governed by Dukes, till the yeare 420, when as Pharamond tooke on him the title of King. As for France the firſt that ever ſet foote there, was Merovens, who ſeing the Romans on one ſide putt to the worſt by Theodorick, and the Gothes invading it with the Burgundians on the other ſide: ſeazed on the Ile of France, ſubdued Parù, and made it the ſeate of the Kingdome. Afterward, when they had fully ſeated themſelves heere, the Kings uſed to divide their King dome, according to the number of their Sons. Hence was there a King of Orleans, a King of Auſtraſia, a King of Soiſſons, and a King of France, which allwayes was he and he onely that had his ſeat in Paris. At this day the Provoſtſhip, or Countie of Paris is divided into foure parts: the Pariſian, the Goelean, the Iſle of France, and the Vexin François. The Pariſian is commonly called le Pariſis, which contained heretofore all that tract reached from the gate of Paris to Pontoyſe, and ſo forward towards Clay and Brie. The name hereof is almoſt buried in Oblivion, ſaving that there are ſome memorialls left in ſome Villages, as Louvres, Cormeille, Eſtova, & ſome others, which are ſurnamed (en Pariſis) retaining ſtill this ancient name, as likewiſe upon the inſcriptions of ſome peeces of coine, called Solz, and Deniers Pariſis, as alſo in the taxations of the Parliaments of Paris. Some beleeve that the Gate, called now Paris-gate, had this name given it, in regard they went out at this Gate into Pariſis.

Ancient Princes & Inhabitants.

The Metrapolis of this Pariſis, & of all France is Parù, or Lutetia, ſo called by Cæſar. At this day it is commonly called Lutetia Pariſiorum, and Parù by the Natives of this Countrie. Some derive this name Lutetia from Luto, as being ſited in a clayie ſoile, that they uſe as a common Proverbe to ſay, it ſtaines as the dirt of Paru, by reaſon alſo of the mirie Pooles, and Marraiſes, which lye about it. This City was heretofore much leſſe, then it is now a dayes, lying then onely within the Iſle, which the Seine maketh there: This huge, and mighty Citie had at the firſt but a ſmall beginning, and every day growing more Populous, this Iland could not conteyne the multitude of People, which come to inhabite here, but were faine to build, and inhabite on both ſides of the River, and to enlarge it with ſuburbs, in ſo much, that this towne in proceſſe of time grew ſo bigg, that now it is the greateſt Citie of all France, & in regard of the greatnes is divided into three parts, whereof the greateſt is that which lyeth on the right ſide of the River, being the loweſt part, ſpreading it ſelfe Eaſt and Northward, commonly called Villa, or la Ville: the leſſer part is ſeated on the left ſide of the Seine, ſhooting out South, and Weſtward, and riſing a litle by reaſon of the hills, and hillocks is called the Univerſitie. The middle part ſtands in the Iland, which retayneth the ancient name of la Cité, being circled about with the River, and joyned to the ſmalleſt part with two, and to the greateſt with three bridges. That part which is named la Ville, lyeth in the forme of a halfe Moone, environned with the ſide of the Seine, girt about with walls, Bulwarkes and Moates, & lyeth in the forme of a Demy-circle. Parù hath ſeven Gates, as S. Anthonies, the Temple, S. Martins, S. Denis, the Martyrs Mount, S. Honorius, and Newgate. The City is defended from the Violence of the River with foure ſmall Iles, lying in a line as Barrs, and were firſt inhabited by reaſon of the commodiouſneſſe of the ſite, into which part the people had wont to goe over upon wodden bridges, as lying in the heart of the City, where the Kings and the Biſhops Palaces ſtand. The Univerſitie repreſenteth the forme of a Cap, wherewith the head of ſo great a Citie is couvered and adorned. Touching the publike, & ſacred buildings, there are in Paris 69 Churches, whereof the Cathedrall is a ſtately one. Beſides theſe Churches, there are about 13 Chappells, whereof that of the Palace Royall, called Sainte is the chiefeſt, founded by Saint Lewes, and is as brave a one, as any is on this ſide the Alpes: for it is built as if there were diverſe Chappells ſupporting one an other with Vaults, being borne up with Pillars onely on the ſides. Moreover there are a great many Cloiſters, Monaſteries, Hoſpitalls, Palaces, & Noblemens houſes, which would be to long here to relate.

Not farre from Paris, lyeth le Pont Charenton, where the Marne falleth into the Seine. There is an Echo, which anſwereth a mans voice 13 times, and which is more wonderfull, if one ſpeakes a word of 4 ſillables, one may heare it foure or five times perfectly repeated one after an other. The ſmall territoire of Goella, or Goelle hath loſt its ancient limits, onely keeping the name of Goelle in ſome places. In it lyeth in the Countie of Dam Martin, ſo named from the chiefe towne thereof called Dam-Martin, which is now reduced to a Village, lying upon a hill. The Iſle of France containeth all that tract of Land, from S. Denis as farr as Poyſſy, and Montmorancy, in Generall all that, which lyeth betweene the boſome, and the circling of the Seine towards Picardie, and Normandy: but ſome place the limits other wiſe. S. Denis in France, is a fine and a pleaſant towne, ſo named after S. Dioniſius Areopagita, as ſome unskillfull in ancient hiſtoires give out, relying rather upon the dotage & dreames of Monks, then upon the ground of truth. Poiſſy is alſo a gallant town, with a faire Caſtle in it, where the French Kings came often to recreate themſelves, and where their Queens had wont to be brought a bedd before S. Germain, was in eſſe. Here alſo the Kings Children were wont to be brought up, as they doe now at Bloù and Amboiſe. Betweene Poiſſy and Paris lyeth S. German en Laye, a pretty towne, which ſhewes the antiquity of it. Mommorancium is now called Mommorency. After the Iſle of France commeth Vexinum Francium, called now Vexin, or as ſome will have it Vulxin le Françoù, comprehēding within it all that tract, which reacheth from the River Oyſe to Clermont in Picardie. The memorie thereof is loſt; but onely that now and then in ſome ancient manuſcripts mention is made thereof. Thus farre we have deſcribed the Provoſtſhip of Paris, with the foure parts, or precincts belonging to it. The other part is called Valeſium, or le pays de Vallois, which is ſuppoſed tooke this name from the ſweete, & pleaſant Valleys about it. Some fetches the name of it elſwhere: Anciently it was a Countie, but afterward was created a Dukedome. The firſt Count of Valoys and Alençon, was Charles, the Sonne of Philip the third King of France: he by his Son Philip the fourth brought in the royall ſtemme of Valoù into France: the Dutchie of Valois reacheth to Picardie. The chiefe Citie hereof is Silvanectum, or Senlis, ſo named (as ſome imagine) becauſe it lyeth upon the skirt of a wood. It is a very ancient towne, and an Epiſcopall Sea, honoured alſo with a Bailiewike, or Provoſtſhip. This Bailiewike of Senlis enricheth the Dukedome of Valoys with many Lordſhips. As Pierrefons, Betbiſi, and Verberie, under which are the towns Angij, le Poni Saint Maxence (being environned with a Marrais, that parts the bounds of France and Picardie) Pangoing & Brenonville one from another. This Provoſtſhip hath in it Compendium, or Compiegne, heretofore a Princely habitation, called as ſome ſay Carolopolis from Charles the balde, who enlarged the towne walls and made them bigger. On the further ſide of Campiegne follow the Sueſſones and Landunenſis, a peodle of Picardie. Magny, Thorette and Creil belong to Campiegne. And under Senlis lyeth the Bailiewike, Provoſtſhip, and Vicounty, Pontes Aſiæ, or Pontoyſe, which Ivo in his 105 letter nameth Ponteſium, under the royalty whereof are theſe Townes, Ville neufve le Roy, and L'iſle Adam. Having paſſed Pontoyſe ye come preſently into Normandie. Under Senlis is alſo the County of Beaumont upon the Oyſe, with Perſang, and Metu belonging to it. The Countie of Beaumont acknowledge none but the Princes of the royall ſtemme of Vendoſme for their Lords.

Neere unto this town on the other ſide of the Oyſe, beginneth the land of Beauvois, a Countie appertaining to Senlis, and Valoys, having Bellovacum, or Beauvois for the capitall towne. In Cæſar (as Ioſephus Scaliger mentioneth in his Epiſtle to Merula) this ſhould be Bratuſpantium, which afterward the ſucceeding Emperours called Cæſaro Magnum, though Carolus Bovillus be of an other opinion, that Granviller, or Grattoſance was Bratuſpantium. The towne of Beauvois is ſeated very pleaſantly. having many fruitfull hills not very high, lying round about it, betweene which are excellent erreble Lands: neither have they want of Wine. The Women of this towne have many fine priviledges, graunted them in the yeere of our Lord 1472. by King Lewes the ſecond, becauſe they were the occaſion that Duke Charles of Burgundie, who had beſeeged it, was driven to quite his ſeige: not farre from Beauvois lyeth Claramontium, or Clermont, having a ſtrong Caſtle in it. Next Beauvois followes the ſmall territoire of Heurepois which beginneth from the Seine, under the litle bridge of Paris, and lyeth along the ſaid River, beyond Corbeil, Melun, and Moret, where it is ſeparated by the brooke Verinas, (which falleth into the Lone) from Gaſtenors, and bordereth upon Brie about S. Calombe grande, and upon the Senonciſes. It hath under it the Vicontie, and Baliewike of Melun, whoſe principall town Cæſar calleth Melodunum, and ſometimes Metioſedum, now Melun, lying in an Iland of the Seine, juſt as Paris doth, with a ſtrong Caſtle in it.

The Towne called now Corbveil, is named in Vita S. Petri Tarentaſii Corbolium. It is famous for the delicate fiſh, and luſhious Crabs that are taken there, being alſo fortified with a Caſtle. Fons Bella Aqua, commonly called in French Fontaine-Belle-eau, (that is, the Fountaine faire water) where the King hath a moſt delightfull Palace, like a Paradice; accounted not onely the faireſt houſe of France, but (as they ſay) of all Chriſtendome, where S. Lewes heretofore held his Court, and after him Philip and Francù de Valoù, having many antiquaires and rarities in it. The fourth part of this Francia, I have attributed to the territorie of Gaſtinoù, which is parted from Heurepois, by the River Verina, & comprehendeth within it the Dukedomes of Eſtampes, and Nemours, the County of Rochefort, & ſome others. The towne Stampa, or Eſtampes lyeth halfe waye betweene Paris and Orleans, upon the River Iunna, held the mother of the delicious crabs, which neere nnto Corbveil falleth into the Seine. The chief Towne of this Dutchie of Nemours, heretofore a County is Nemurſium, of Nemours, ſeated upon the River Lone, which a litle way beneath Moret disburdeneth it ſelfe into the Seine, this is none of the meaneſt Dutchies in France. Rupes Fortis, or Rochefort, beareth the title of a Countie, alſo Milly & Moret (which are accounted the bounds of Gaſtinois, and Heurepois) both fortified with Caſtles, and among ſome other towns, under the juriſdiction of Gaſtinois lyeth Montargis, or Montargium, quaſi Mons Argi, becauſe of the fine proſpect, which is round about it. This Towne Anno 1518, was wholly burnt downe, but afterward was reedified, & built up againe, and bewtified with a fine Caſtle, where ye may ſee painted the ſtorie of a Greyhound, who revenged the death of his maſter, by byting to death, him that had murthered his maſter. And thus much for the Ile of France, and the circumjacent territories.

The deſcription of the Earledome OF CAMPAIGNE.

CAMPAIGNE is ſo called, becauſe it is a Champion Countrie, full of large feilds, plaine and levell good for manuring. The Countries, which environ it, are Brie, Burgundie and Lorreine. It hath a very ſerraine, and a well tempered aire, & the Soile yeeldeth Corne, wine, Cattell, and Foule in abundance. There are alſo many fine woods and feilds to hunt and hauke in.

Campaigne if it be properly conſidered, is divided into Campaigne it ſelfe, and into the adjoyning territories, commonly called the upper and lower Campaigne. In the laſt lye Troyes, Ivigny, Baſſigni and Vallage. The towne now called Troyes, lyeth upon the Seine. The Countrie round about it, is very fruitfnll, and the Inhabitants drive a great trade in diverſe wares, & commodities: there is an Epiſcopall Sea, with a faire Caſtle in it, and upon the Seine are many Paper-miles; the juriſdiction of Troyes extendeth farre: beſides there is a preſidiall Hall for the Kings Judges. Unto Troyes belong Brie in Campaigne, the Hall of Barre upon the Seine, the Biſhoprick of Muſſi; la Ferte upon the Auge, Nogent, Pont upon the Seine, Frulle, Chaſtel, and S. Florence, which are all townes appertaining to Campaigne. At Troyes was held a Councell by the order of Pope John the eight, and by the helpe of the ſaid Pope, Lewes the Stammerer, was crowned King. The Huns and Normans founded this towne: the Cathedrall Church in it is built very ſumptuouſly, called S. Stephens. Ivigny is a Countie, which ſeparateth Campaigne from Bourgoigny, bordering upon thoſe of Sens, the principall towne whereof is Ivigny, under the juriſdiction of the Baliewike of Troyes. It is called alſo Baſſigny; becauſe it is ſeated in the greateſt part of lower Campaigne. This territoire is environned and encompaſſed with the Marne, the Meuſe, and the Moſell, in ſo much, that it is watered with more great Rivers, then any Country of France. The principaleſt towne thereof is Chaumont, or Chaument in Baſſigny, which tooke the name from Mons Calvus, or Baldmount. Upon the top of the rock lyes a ſtrong Caſtle, within this Caſtle there is a towre, encompaſſed with a wall, in which there is a great Hall, where the King uſed to hold an Aſſembly of his Peeres, and Nobles: this is alſo a Balywike, and a Court of Juſtice; becauſe it is ſeated in ſo convenient a place. There is alſo the Magazin, or Storehouſe for Salt, where the Kings Officers receive cuſtome & toule of all paſſengers, which comes thether by water or by land, where they doe juſtice, and pronounce ſentence in the Kings name: their chiefeſt trading is in draperies, linnen and weaving: the principall Church in it, is S. Iohn Baptiſts. Under the juriſdiction of Baſſigny lye Langres, Montigny, Goeffy, Nogent le Roy, Monteclar, Andelot, Biſnay, Choiſeul, Viſuory, Cleſmont, all of them being hanſome townes.

Vallage taketh its name from the fine, pleaſant and fruitfull Valleys which are in it, bordering upon Pertors, and Borrois. The chiefe townes in it, are Vaſſy, S. Didier, Iainville, Montirandel, Dontlerant, the Caſtle of Forges, Eſclaron and Arſi: but the principaleſt place of all is Vaſſi, lying upon the Bloyſe, under the commaund of the reformed religion, and for ſuffring a maſſacre upon the firſt day of March 1562.

S. Dedier tooke this name from a holy man ſo called, in whoſe honour it was founded. The Emperour Charles the fifth tooke in this towne; but after a peace was concluded, was reſtored againe to the French: afterward for the better aſſurance thereof, a Caſtle was built in it.

Iainville or Ioinville is an ancient towne, and the appennage, or portion of the eldeſt Sonne of the Duke of Guiſe, ſeated upon the River of Marne, and bordereth upon Campaigne. King Lewes, ſurnamed the Corpulent, cauſed this towne to be encompaſſed with a wall. The chiefe Church was dedicated to S. Landerick, where the famous, and ſtately ſtature of Godfrey of Boüillon, and the magnificent Tombe of Claudius Duke of Guiſe is to be ſeene: the Lord of Joinville, is heire to the Seneſchalſhip of Campaigne. This town in the dayes of Henry the ſecond, was much enlarged the Barenies of Hailly, Donlevant, Roches, Eſclatron, with other places and Caſtles belonging to it. In the time of Charles the fifth this towne was greatly ruined and deſtroyed. Arſi is a Bourrough lying upon the River Aube.

Upper Campaigne comprehendeth in it the land of Pertois, which is very fruitfull, and abounds chiefly in corne, hempe & wood. The principaleſt towne lying in Pertois is Vitri, ſeated upon the confluence of the Rivers Saux & Marne. Some imagine that Vitri tooke this name from the Romane Legion Victrix, which lay here abouts to hinder the incurſions of the Germans. Here is kept the Court of the Baliewick, under which are eight Provoſts and Caſtellans, namely, thoſe of Chaſteau, Thiery, Menehou, Chaſtillon, Fiſmes, Eſperney, Roveray, Paſſavant, Vertus, & Laſaincort. In the yeere 1141, being angry with Count Thibaud, Lord of Campaigne, for the offence of ſome of his ſubjects, ſett fire one Vitri, and burnt ſome 70 men, women and children, which fled into the Church to ſave themſelves, whereupon S. Bernard taxed the King of overmuch cruelty. This place was alſo ruined by the Emperour Charles the fifth, and reedifyed in a place called Montcourt, by King Francis the firſt, he endowed it with many great priveledges & mimunities, putting Argilliers, La Saincourt Louvement & other places under the juriſdiction thereof. Now follow the circumjacent places, as the Dutchie of Rheims and Langres, with the Counties of Chalons, Signy & la Motte, which are liberties of themſelves, and not ſubject unto Campaigne.

The Dutchie of Rheims called in French le Duché Pairie, and Archeveſche de Rheims, tooke the name from the ancient Durocortorum. Though Rheims be ſhut in and environned with Campaigne: yet nevertheleſſe it hath its owne juriſdiction, and Arch-Biſhop, who is alſo a Duke, and the firſt Peere of France. It is a cuſtome in France, that the Kings are here annointed with an oyle that was ſent from heaven, (as they ſay) & that Clovis was here annointed the firſt Chriſtian King, is abſolutely contradicted by their beſt and moſt judicious writer Du Haillan, who affirmeth Pepin, to have bene the firſt annointed King, & that there was none, de la premiere lignee oniſt, ny ſacré a Rheims none of the firſt, or Merovigean line of Kings, were annointed at Rheims or elſewhere. How ever, the Frenchmen hold this oyle in wonderfull reverence: and at the coronation of their Kings, fetch it from the Church, where it is kept with great ſolemnity: for it is brought by the Prior, ſitting on a white ambling Palfery, attended by his Monkes: the Arch-Biſhop of this towne, and ſuch Biſhops as are preſent going to the Church-doore to meete it, and leaving with the Prior ſome gage, & the King when it is by the Arch-Biſhop brought to the Altar to annoint him, boweth himſelfe before it with great reverence. The Cathedrall Church in this town is called S. Maries, dedicated to our Lady

La Duche Pairie and Eveſche de Langres, taketh this name from the chiefe towne, which lyeth in it called Langres. It is an ancient towne, neatly built, lying upon the hill Vogeſins, from which the River Marne ſpringeth, and maketh the bounds of the Countie of Burgundie Eaſtward. Among other Monuments in it, there is an Arcus Triumphalis upon the wall, with a combate betweene men, Lyons and Horſes in it, founded in memoriall of the conquering of the High-dutchies: it is alſo an Epiſcopall Sea, whoſe Biſhops are Dukes, and Peeres of France. The Cathedrall is one of the braveſt Churches in France, founded in honour of S. Martin, which afterward was called Saint Johns the Euangeliſts. The Countie of Ligni is ſo called from the chiefe towne Ligni, which is a very old town, lying upon the Saux. On the Eaſtſide of it ſtands an Abbey, upon the top of a hill, with a fine Fountaine by it. Touching the Countie la Motte, wee have no great matter to write of. The Countie of Chalon called in French le Eveſché Comté, and Pairie de Chalon, tooke its name from the towne of Catalaunum, or as ſome write Cathelaunum, now called Chalon in Campaigne: it is an Epiſcopall Sea, lying upō the Marne, having a ſteeple like a Pyramide. The Soile is very fruitfull, abounding in all things needfull for the ſuſtenſtation of man. Brie is an ancient Earledome, ſeated upon the meeting of the Marne, & the Seine: the Marne ſeparateth Brie from Campaigne, and the Seine parteth it from Gaſtinois. So that it lyeth betweene theſe two Rivers, as farre as the Dukedome of Burgundie. The name of this towne of Brie or Bray commeth from Count Robart, who being heretofore Lord of this Countrie dwelt in it, and gave it this name. It is a rough and a hillie land, but very fertill, lyes in a cleare aire, & healthfull. Brie was once a Colonie of the Normans, which came and inhabited in this Countrie, but after a long and bloodie warre, they were chaſed and driven out of it: for which reaſon, it is yet in ſome bookes called Normans Barroù.

The reſt of the townes in Brie are Chaſteau, Tierri, Meaux, Provins and ſome others. Meaux Iatinum was a towne of the Meldes, or Medes: it lyeth pleaſantly upon the top of a hill, from whence there is a fine proſpect over all the Countie of Brie, & underneath the foote of it, runneth the Marne weſtward. The juriſdiction of the ſaid towne, is the ſecond in the Countie of Brie, having the benches of Meaux, Crecy and Colomiers under it: but the County Robart and Thorcy are under the Caſtellainſhip of Paris. Meaux is a Biſhops ſea, erected in the time of the primitive Church: for S. Denis, who converted many places to the Chriſtian faith. Neere unto Meaux, was the Queens Court kept at Monceaux, and honored with the perſonnage of Queene Catherine of Medices. Provins is an ancient towne, lying upon a nooke of the River Moran, which is famous through all France, for the great and ſweete damask & red Roſes, that grow there in abundance, and are carried from thence to Paris, to make conſerve of Roſes, and Roſewater: there are lying about it many fine Meddowes, paſtures and waters. In this towne is held the ſeſſions of Brie, having a Bailife, a Lieutenant Generall, and particular of this County two Counſellours of Law, an Atturney for the King, and a Recorder. Provins anno 1471 had a great many houſes waſhed away with an exceeding high floud, wch had almoſt endangered, and drowned the whole town. Here ye ſhall finde alſo the Arch-Biſhoprick of Sens, with the ſmall towne of Pont la ville des Gauloïs Senonoïs, otherwiſe called Agendicum. Sens is a great, faire, and ſtrong towne, lying upon the Yonne, not farre from it is a Meere and a Fountaine by it, whoſe waters reſolves into ſtones. One of the chiefeſt ſtructures in it, is Saint Stephens, a brave Church. Sens is a Biſhops ſea, hath a Kings bench in it, is a Bailiewike, with a Preſident, & two Counſellors belonging to it. Neere unto this City lyeth Pont ſur Yonne: this country breeds many brave and valliant Souldiers. Right over the ſaid City. is the towne called la ville neufve le Roy: the Kings Court in it, is under Sens. Thoſe of Campaigne and Brie, though they be ſo neere Neighbours one to an other: yet they had wont not to agree well, but did lightly blame each other, and were very haſtie, headie and bitter one againſt an other; but this fault now is much amended, and have learned this commendable vertue, to moderate their chollar and anger.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DUTCHIE OF THE NORTHERNE PART OF LORRAINE.

Name & the ancient Princes & Gouvernours of it.

LOTHARINGIA or Lorraine tooke its name from Lotharius, whether from the Sonne or Nephew of Lodovicus the Emperour and King of France, it matters not. For Lodovicus Pius had foure Sonnes, who making warre againſt their owne Father, put him into a monaſtery, neere unto Soiſſons, who ſharing his Principates amonge themſelues erected a Tetrarchia, but at laſt, by the mediation & interceſſion of the Imperiall Princes, it was ordained, that Lotharius the Primogenitus and eldeſt (beſides the Empire, Italie, Languedock,) ſhould haue & enjoy afterward this Countrie, which he called after his owne name Lotharingia. Lewes had Dutchland, Charles France, and the territoires upon the Meuſe, as farre as the Ocean, and Pipin or his Sonne ſo named had Aquitania for his part.

This Lotharius had beſides, Lodovicus (who ſucceeded him in the Empire) an other ſonne called after his owne name Lotharius King of Lorraine. And thus this Countrie, which formerly was called Lotarii Regnum, and by the Germans Lottarijck, or Lothreick, gott the name of Lotharingia, or Lorraine, that is Loths Realme.

The French hiſtorians witneſſe, that Lorraine was heretofore of a larger extention then it is now at this preſent; being in thoſe dayes called Auſtraſia, Auſtria Oſterryck or the Eaſterne-Realme, to diſtinguiſh it from Weſtraſia, Weſtria, Weſterryck, or the Weſterne-Realme, which by altering of a letter, was alſo called Neuſtria, being devided into the Upper and Lower part, comprehending under it almoſt all that Countrie, which lyeth betweene the Rhyne, the Scheld, and the Maze.

The Lower part is now devided into many names, and belongeth to diverſe Princes. The Higer or Upper part is under the commaund of one Lord, which is called Moſellanica, and Tullingia, ſaving ſome fewe places in it.

Bounds. The other part ſtill enjoying the ancient name, is bounded on the Eeaſt with Alſatia and Weſterryck, on the South with Burgundy, on the Weſt with Campagne, and on the North is ſhutt in with the Foreſt of Ardenna bordering alſo upon Luxenburgh, Trier, and ſome other territoires. All which in ancient times went under the name of Lorraine, and were acknowledged for parts, and parcells thereof.

Fertility. And though this Countrie of Lorraine, be full of high-hills and environned with thick woods: yet is it very fruitfull in Graine and Wine, ſo that it is able to liue of it ſelfe, without any forraine proviſions.

Beſides it affordeth diverſe Metalls, as Silver, Copper, Yron, Tinne, Lead, & ſome precious ſtones, which are found in the bowells of Mount Vogeſus; among the reſt Lapides Lazuli, or the Azure-ſtone, which brings great gaine to the Inhabitants: they finde alſo there a kind of matter, whereof they make looking glaſſes, and other glaſſes, which are not found in any other part of Europe. There are alſo Chalcedonian ſtones of huge greatneſſe, out of the peeces whereof they make Cupps, and Calices. Metalls & precious ſtones.

Amonge other Beaſts bred in this Countrie, there are braue Horſes, which for mettel & courage, maye be compared to the Turkiſh and Neapolitan palfreys. Beaſts.

Lorraine (as is ſaid) was formerley honoured with a Kingdome; yet as the French Hiſtoriographers write, had not paſſing two or three Kings: for Charles the Bald, preſently after the deceaſe of his Nephew Lotharius became maſter of this Countrie, and tooke it in for himſelfe, making it a Dukedome, whoſe firſt Dukes are mentioned in ſome hiſtories. When the Germans chooſe themſelues an Emperour (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) Lorraine was the cauſe of many troubles betweene them, and the French; the former keeping poſſeſſion, the latter pretendigh a title. Charles Sonne to Lewes the Fourth King of France, being left to the courtoiſie of his brother, and by him not regarded, was inveſted in this Dutchie by Otho the Emperour Anno 981. for which cauſe he ſhewed himſelfe ſo alienated from the French, and ſo wedded to the Germans, that the French, after the death of his Coſin Lewes the Fifth, rejected him and chooſe Hugh Capet for their King. This Charles had one Sonne named Otho, who leaving no iſſue male inſtitued one Godfrey, from whome deſcended Godfrey of Bulloigne, who having ſold the Dutchie of Bulloigne, with his two Bretheren Balduinus and Euſtachius, went with a mightie Armie into the Holy Land, & having paſſed victorioufly through Aſia, and Syria, taking in Ieruſalem, was elected King of it. And his Bretheren Balduin and Euſtach ſucceedeth him in that Gouvernment. But to returne againe to Charles, he had alſo a Daughter called Hermingrade. From her deſcended Iſabel Wife to Philip the Second, who united the bloods of Pipin and Hugh Capet to the great Contentment of her Grandchild Saint Lewes, who being a man of a very tender conſcience is ſaid never to haue joyed in the Crowne of France, till it was proved, that by the Mothers ſide, he was the right heire of Charles of Lorraine, whome Hugh Capet had ſo uniuſtly diſpoſſeſſed. Ancient Princes.

A while after the Emperour Henry the Fift gaue this Dukedome to William Earle of Lorraine, from whoſe race deſcended the Lorraine Princes, as Theodoricke, Thibauld, Frederick and others, till Charles the laſt, after whome this Dutchie fell to Frederick Count of Vaudimont, from whome ſprange the firſt ſtemme of the Dukes of Lorraine which are now at this preſent.

Ancient Inhabitants.

This whole Countrie is devided by Mercator into two Mapps. The firſt is the Northerne, and the ſecond the Southerne part. The people which in old times inhabited in the Northerne part of Lorraine, were the Mediomatrices, and Leuci Mediomatrices, as Cæſar, Tacitus, Plinius, Strabo, and Ptòlomeus, witneſſe.

In Cæſars ſeuenth booke they are alſo named Mediomatrici, whoſe Metropolis, or chiefe towne was Divodurum now Metz. But In Notitia Provinciarum, ſub Belgicâ primâ, it is called Civitas Mediomatricum, or Metin, nouw the Biſhoprick of Metz, or the Countrie of Meſſin. The Leuci Lucanus deſcribeth in his firſt booke, & alſo Cæſar lib. 1. Plinie calleth them Liberii: they are named alſo in Ptolomie the Leuci, who maketh Tullum to be their chiefe towne. In Notitia Provinciarum ſub Belgica, it is called Civitas Lucorum, that is Tullum which goeth now under the name of L'Eveſché de Toul, or the Biſhoprick of Toul: and in Itinerario by Antoninus, Tullum Leucorum, ſome account the Tulingi metioned in Cæſar to be a people of Lorraine.

Nancie.

The Capitall Citie of Lorraine is Nancie (of late taken in by the King of France) which though it benot very great, is never the leſſe pleaſantly ſeated upon the Murta or Meure, in a fine plaine commodious place, lying in the forme of a Quadrant, adorneth with a ſtately Palace belonging to the Dukes of Lorraine, the river Meure running by it, which about nine miles aboue the Caſtle falleth into the Moſell.

Petrus Divæus and ſome others are of the opinion, that Nancejum ſhould be Ptolomies Naſion, and Anthonines Naſium, making it to lye upon the way, which goeth from Durocortorum to Divodurum: but thoſe which haue marked this more neerely, maye eaſely perceiue, that Anthonies Naſium lay not in that place, where now Nancie ſtands, and that Naſium, cannot be that towne, which is now called Nancejum; but rather a Village lying twelue miles from it, not farre from the Meuſe or Maze in the Province of Bar Le Duc, commonly called at this day Nas & Naſienſis, as appeareth in an old ſtone found there in the ground. That Naſſium was heretofore a great towne is moſt certaine and appeareth by the old walls, and ruines of it, which Clemens Trelæus Moſellanus witneſſeth in Ortelius.

Leſſer towne.

Next unto Nancie is Saint Nicolas, lying ſixe miles from Nancie upon the river Meuſe, in a plaine fruitfull ſoile. This towne by the often reſort of ſtraungers unto it, was in proceſſe of time ſo enlarged, that now it is not onely accounted a village any more, but alſo one of the chiefeſt townes of Lorraine; being girt about with a wall, & now puts downe & excells others both in fine houſes, ſtreetes, inhabitants, and good trading, marchandiſes, and manufactures.

A mile beyond Nancie lieth Fruart, about three miles from Ormes, and a litle further is Bayon, and Luneville, foure miles from thence are Pont a Mouſſon and Gerleviller, and fiue miles from it alſo ſtandes Charlestowne, within ſixe miles Chaſtenoy, Morhanges, and Vaucoleur, and a litle beyond them Maxen ſoubs Breſſe, ſeuen mile from it is Dompaire, Deneuvre, Hodon, & Chaſteau, and within eight miles Ramberville, Raon, Bellemont, Neuf-Chaſteau, Mugſtat, Marchin-ville, within nine miles Eſpinal, Bruyeres, & Darny, within tenne Ormont, Walderſing, Beaureins, within thirteene Vaigny, and within foureteene L'Eſtraye.

Shire or Countie-Townis.

The townes which beare the title of Counties are Vaudemont, lying within fiue miles of Nancy, alſo Chaligny, ſeated on the right ſide of the Moſell, within halfe a mile of Nancy, Amance weth ſeuen miles from Metz Southward, called in Latin Almentia, hauing bene in ancient times the Chancerie of Lorraine, Richecourt, lying not farre from a Meere, commonly called La Garde Lac, out of which comes the riveret that runneth betweene S. Nicolas, & Roſiers, where it falleth into the Meure. Remiremont lyeth on the left ſide of the Moſell, which maketh an Ile in the Southerne part of Lorraine. Amonius placeth here Rumaricum Caſtellum, and in Regionus is read (but corruptly) Auromarici, in ſtead of Ad Romarici, called in Dutch Rimilſbergh. Not farre from thence lye the Vales of Eſtray, and Vaigny. La Motte lyeth upon a brooke, which a litle way from it runneth into the Meuſe. Here abouts lieth alſo the royaltie of Sanctoy, and alſo the Imperiall Counties of Salm, Kirchingen, & Blanckenburgh. The towne Blanckenburgh is called in French Blancmont, which is not very bigg, but is ſituated in a moſt ſweete and pleaſant place, with an ancient, a great and braue Caſtle belonging to it, where the Dukes haue built a ſtately Palace. The inhabitans about it are giuen much to huſbandrie, and tillage.

Nomeny.

On the right ſide of the river Sella, about three miles from Metz to the Southward, lieth the Baronie of Nomeny: Nouwwee will come to the particular Lord-ſhips. On the left ſide of the river Sella not farre from the Linder Lake, in which the Iland and the towne of Techemfull lieth, is the Lordſhip of Marſall, within three miles of Nancy: the Lordſhip of Remere-ville, and S. Bellemont. Rumbertville lyeth on the right ſide of the river Mortona, not farre from a Fountaine where the Foreſt of Mortaigne beginneth. Roſiers is not farre from S. Nicolas within two miles of Nancy. Homburg is a long mile from Sarburck, ſeated upon a ſmall river, which a litle further diſburtheneth it ſelfe into the Sara. Mariemont is ſo called from the hill, which it ſtands upon, lying within a mile to the Southward of Linder-meere, or Lake. Sandacourt is in the mid-way, betweene Vaudemont & Motta, in the territoire of Sanctoy.

Lordſhips.

Metz.

The towne of Metz hetetofore was an Imperiall towne with Toul and ſome others, but King Henry the Second of France brought it under his obedience. This was formerly the Seate of the Kings of Lorraine. Petrus Divæus deſcribeth the ſame very liuely in his travells with theſe words: The Citie of Metz lieth (ſaith he) in a large plaine, which is watered with Aqueducts, and waters comming ont of the Moſell, whereof part of them run on the left ſide of the wall, and the other part ſpeading themſelues trough the towne to the great accommodation of the Burgeſſes, and ſo braunching out one from an other beneath the city, taking along with them another river calleth the Sella, which runneth on the richt ſide of the towne, where they meete together againe. If one markes well the ſite of this towne, he muſt acknowledge that it ſtands moſt pleaſantly: for though it lies in a plaine, yet it riſes by digrees with hills, ſo that one maye here obſerue the ancient manner of building of townes, and before ye come to the great Church ye muſt clime up a hill as if ye went up ſtares, and them ye come to the Mercate-place which ſtands upon the very topp of it, and ſo by litle & litle ye deſcend to the walls againe, which on the one ſide of the towne ſtand upon very ſteepe hills, where there are two paued waies or ſtreets made in ſuch a manner, as if one went ouer the tops of houſes from the one to the other way.

Verdun.

The towne of Verdun is called by the Latine writers Virdunum, and Verdunum, by Antonine Verodunum: In Notitia Provinciarum Civitas Verdunenſium, now L'Eveſché de Verdun. Theſe tree townes Metz, Toul, and Verdun are honored with the title and dignitie of a County, and thus much for the Septentrionall part of Lorraine.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE SOVTHERNE PART OF LORRAINE.

Meeres & Lakes.

BEfore wee come to the deſcription of the principall Rivers in Lorraine, wee muſt ſpeake ſomewhat of the Meeres and Lakes in it abounding in fiſhe. Among the reſt the greateſt is foureteene miles about, in which there are huge Carpes taken, ſome three foote long, having ſuch a ſweete and a delicate taſt, that the like are not found in any Countrie. This Meere is commonly fiſhed every third yeare, of the fiſhe whereof the Duke makes thirty thouſand Frankes. The Rivers which water it are the Meuſe or Maze, the Moſell, the Saar, the Voloyia, the Mortana, the Meurta, the Sella, the Hida, and ſome others. Wee haue ſpoken of the Maze in the deſcription of the Low-Countries. The others belong properly to this Countrie, namely the Moſell, and the Saar, which moiſten the greateſt part of them; but the others altogether and wholly. The head of the Moſſell ſpringeth out of the mountaine Vogeſe, not farre from the head-ſpring of the Soane, a little aboue the village called Buſſan, an then taketh his courſe from the Southweſt towards the Northweſt, and having paſſed by the townes of L'Eſtrage, Remiremont, Eſpinal, Charmes and Bayon, turning from the Eaſt towards the Weſt, runneth directly to Toul an Epiſcopall Seate, and then winding Nortward to Fruard, having ſaluted thoſe of Metz, Trier, and other people, at Confluentia or Coblentz falleth into the Rhene. The Germans call this river the Moſel, and the French Moſelle. Rhenanus and ſome others are of the opinion, that Ptolomy lib. 2. cap. 9. calleth this river Obriagum. But Iohannes Herauld is of an other minde, thinking Obringa in Ptolomy was not a river, but rather a tract of Land, lying by the ſide of the Rhene which is now called at this day Ober-Rhyn-gavv. Clemens Fraleus Moſellanus witneſſeth, as Ortelius writeth, that there is a Countrie about the Moſell, which retaineth ſtill the name of Obrinci. Auſonius commendeth greatly this river, for the cleareneſſe of the water thereof, the eaſineſſe of paſſing over it, for the pleaſant villages and meddowes which ſtand upon & embelliſh the ſides of it, and for the fiſhes wherewith it abounds, as Carpes, Trouts, Barbles, Salmon, Lampreys, Eeles, Perches, Roches, Tenches, Shads, Guggions &c.

Rivers.

The rivers and brookes which fall into the Moſell are theſe: Pronaa, Nemeſa, Sura, Gelbi, Erubro, Leſura, Drahone, Salmone, Sarano, and Aliſontia.

Vnder the Gouvernment of the Emperour Domitius Nero, L. Vetus undertooke to bring the Moſel into the Soane, by a channell, to the end that the Italian Souldiers comming out of the Mediterranean Sea, and paſſing up the Roane, and the Soane, might by this channell come into the Moſell, and ſo into the Rhene, to eaſe them of their long, and hard marches by land, and ſo might ſaile by ſhipping from the Eaſt to the Weſt, as Cornelius Tacitus mentioneth in his 13. booke. Of this river Moſelle, & the Rhoſne Auſonius chanteth thus in French verſes.

Les anciens boſcages, qui ſont des villages l'ornement
Druna, auſſi Druentia, avec leur rives eſcartez, Et tous les Fleuves Alpennins t'honorent bien reverem̃et.
Le Rhoſne auſſi qui en un coup deux villes ſemble ſaluer, Donne nom au rivage droit. C'eſt toy qui bien joyeuſem̃et Avec tes eſtangs criſtalins, je veux ſans fin recommander.
A Garone comme Mer te recoit amiablement.

The river Saravus or Sar, ſpringeth up not farre from the Countie of Salme, and of all other rivers is the greateſt, and moſt navigable of any that fall into the Moſell, and is very famous for many other rivers which runne into it. This river taketh his courſe by, and through theſe townes: Sarbruck, Feneſtrange, Sarvverden, Sar-Alben, Gemund, VValderſingen, Saarburgh, and ſome others, and at laſt diſchargeth himſelfe into the Moſell by Trier, not farre from Konterbruck.

Auſonius alſo in his Moſella remembreth this river, as taking his ancient name from the Inhabitants called Saar. It was alſo in old times called Sarra, as appeareth by this ancient Inſcription found at Sarre-Ponts, or Sarbridge, lying upon the ſame river, and which was afterward brought to Trier, which is this:

CÆR. RO. EXER. IMP. P.P.
S. C. AV. TREVE INGR-ESSVM. H. CASTRA SARRÆ.
FLV. PRO. MIL. CVSTODIA.
BIENN. POTITVS EST.

Voloia or Voloy, is a river, wherein peerle is found, and falleth into the Moſell by the village Charmeny. The Mortana runneth into the Murta by a village ſo called. The Meurta, or Meure, after it hath receiued many brookes, and rivelets into it, taketh its courſe betweene plaine fields, and meddowes, & after it hath runne along tract, at laſt a litle aboue the Caſtle of Conde, lying on the right hand of a rock, by a village of the ſame name, having made a ſharpe point with the Moſell, diſburtheneth it ſelfe into it.

About Metz the river Sella comming out of the Linder lake falleth into the Moſſell, which is very famous for Salt, an the abundance of fiſhe, taken in it, as alſo the two Nides, the Dutch running Eaſtward, and the French Weſtward, meeting together at the village Northen, where they fall into the Saar, two miles beneath the Abbey of Boſſonis-ville. In the valley of Deodate, there is a Fountaine which hath an excellent vertue in curing of all maladies: There are alſo Saltpits, wherein they haue moſt fine Salt, very ſauourie, & which in whiteneſſe ſurpaſſeth the Scythian Snovve, which yeeld the Duke yearely a hundred thouſand French Crownes.

Mountaines This Province is full of high Mountaines, abounding in all kinde of Metalls and Mineralls, excelling therein by farre the Pyrenean hills, especially in some places: they haue Silver mines, which yeelds good store of Silver oare, whereof the Duke makes great gaine. In the Mount Vogesus, or Vogese about *Lebertha*l is found pure Silver, though not much.

Mines.

Mount Vogesus.

Woods & Forests. Also this Countrie is ombraged with many thick Woods, and Forests, as VVarne-vvood, Saint Benoist-vvood, Mortaigne-vvood, Boseyne, Mondon-vvood, Bain-vvood, Voyge-vvood, Heath-vvood, and others, where in are good store of Deere, Hare, Phesants, Partridges & diverse other game.

Publike Edifices. Among some other publike buildings neere unto Saint Nickolas village, which lieth two miles from Nancy upon the river Meure, stands a great Church not very bright and transparant, the Pillars wherewith it is supported, are so slender, small and high, that it is almost impossible but that they should sinke under so heavie a burden. It hath a double steeple, in one of them is engraven the Motta of the Cardinall Charles of Lorraine, who was also Bishop of Metz, and Prior of this Church with an Obeliscus or a spire going up like a pyramide, with this inscription about it: TE STANTE VIREBO.

By the village VVasserbilch, where the Sura, and the Mosell meete together, there stands an other Obeliscus called Igel, a stately structure as a monument of antiquity upon a high place, the like whereof is not to be seene on this side of the Alpes. So that the Italians themselues admire it much. This monument is built with massie stone, standing upon a footstall of 22. foote square, going up by degrees with a spire 74. foote high, and engraven on all sides with fine Imagerie, and curious workemanship, upon the top of the spire sits upon a Globe some remnants of an Eagle spreading forth his winges, and seemes to haue had a vaile before his brest.

At Nancy in Saint Georges Church is to be seene the Tombe of Charles the Hardy, Duke of Burgundie, who on the fifth of Ianuary anno 1477. was slaine in a battell, fought betweene himselfe, the Svvisſers, and the Lorraines, whose bones afterward by the commaund of Charles the Fifth in the yeare 1550. in October were taken up by Beisot Herald, of the order of the Golden Fleece, & carryed to Luxenburg, & from thence by the order of Mary Queene of Hungarie, were remoued to Brugges in Flanders. The historie of this battell is this: In the yeare 1474. there hapned a great quarrell & a warre betweene Charles Duke of Burgundie surnamed the Hardy, and the Svvitsers, partly becausе they had consented to putt to death Peter Hagembach, and partly becausе the Emperour Sigismond had made use of them for the recouverie of the Provinces of Alsatia and Sungovia, which Charles sought to haue detayned: having then undertaken this expeditiō, passed with his army through Lorraine towards the Svvitsers, and by the waye besieged Nancy, tooke it in, from thence he marched through Vpper Burgundie into Savoy, where he tooke in by Granſen two Forts, and hanged all the Germans that were in it upon the snaggs of trees, to the number of fiue hundred. The Switsers to revenge themselues, overcame the Burgonnians in a battell, and droue Charles out of the field, in which the spoile and boote they gott was valued to be worth thirtie hundred thousand Crownes. Charles having raised an other army, undertooke the siege of Mursa, a towne under the jurisdiction of the Bernois. The Switsers siding with Rene Duke of Lorraine, from whome the Burgonians had taken Nancy, overthrew Charles and defeated him. In this battell Charles lost 17. thousand men, but he afterwards desirous to trye once more the hazard of warre, besieged Nance againe in the very hart of Winter, which Rene Duke of Lorraine had before recouvered from him. Rene then comming with an army of Switsers, French, and Germans to raise his siege, gaue the Burgonians battell, routed them, slew part of them, tooke others prisoners, and the rest thinking to eschappe by flight were drowned in rivers & water. The night putting an end to the battell, Charles hoping to haue saued himself by flight, after he had received three wounds, fell from his horse and was slaine, though not without great Suspicion of Treason, that he was betrayed by an Italian Count called Campo-basse, who abandoning the right wing of the battaile, committed to his charge, rann away to Rene with 400. Italians, and so ioyned with the Germans. The Corps of Charles layd buried in the snow, till it was melted, and then being found, was so altered and changed, by reason of his wounds, and the extremity of colde, that one could scarcly know him: whose body afterward (as is said) was carryed to Nancy, where he was enterred. And so this great Prince who was feared and redoubted in his life time, came to his end: which may teach us this lesson,

Que dés le jour de nostre nativité
Nous sommes tous subjets à la mortalité.
which is,
That from the daye of our nativity,
VVe all are subject to mortality.

In S. Georges Church also are the Tombes of the Dukes of Lorraine, without any Epitaphs upon them, as also in some other Churches. The last Dukes lie buried in Saint Francis his Church, among the rest is to be seene the sumptuous Tombe of Rene, who gott this victorie over Charles Duke of Burgundie: here lie entombed also Anthony, and his Sonne Francis, and Duke Charles his Lady called Claudia Valesia, Daughter to Henry the Second King of France.

The Magazin for ordnance and all maner of armes is kept in Nancy. Touching Saint Stephen his Church in Metz, Divaus writeth in this manner: S. Stephens Church, who is the Patron of this City, is built with such a structure, as we haue not seene the like in all our travells, being very stately to behold, and fully finished, which is seldome seene. There is a Crucifix in it with the image of Christ hanging upon it, which is overlaid with gold plate, wee sawe there a vessell of purple stone, of a reddish colour some ten foote long, and wide, wherein they kept their holy water.

In this City also are many other fine Churches, and in the Suburbs among the rest is Saint Arnulphs Church, wherein are the tombes of Lodovicus pius Augustus, his Sonne Charles, and the onely Daughter of King Pipin, which by the warrs are now so destroyed & defaced, that there is scarce a peece of these Suburbs left standing, and nothing remayning, but the ruines of old walls in the fields. Not farre from Mets by the village Iovy are some ancient remainders of the Aqueducts seene in the Mosell, to witt, some arches of white stone, hewen in the manner of Bricks, by the side of the river, the height whereof is sixtie foote high aboue the side of the river, whereout one may easely discerne what a great and a huge worke this was, and how high the Arches were aboue the Water it selfe. Vnder the Court or Hall of Metz, are these three Bishopricks Metz, Toul, & Verdun, all being subject to the Archbishop, & Prince Electour of Trier, and thus much for the Southerne part of Lorraine.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVKEDOME OF BVRGVNDIE.

Name.

THE name of Burgundie, commeth from the Burgundians a Dutch people, ſprang from the Vandals, which were ſo called from their Caſtles, & Fortreſſes, who being chaſed by the Allmans out of their habitation, which is now the Palatinate, in the reigne of Theodoſius the Sonne of Arcadius, droue away the Sequani, and the Hedui with the helpe of the Nuiſoni (as Tacitus mentioneth) & made themſelues maſter of this ancient part of Gallia. Petrus Sancto-Iulianus is of the opinion, that Burgundie, tooke the name from a certaine place within the Iuriſdiction of Langres, commonly called Burgund. It was formerly a Kingdome, but in the yeere of our Lord 1034. was devided into a Dutchy, and a County, whereof the Dutchy lying Weſtward was called the Nether & Kings Burgundie; and the Countie Eaſtward, the Vpper and Imperiall Burgundie. Wee will here onely deſcribe the Dutchy.

Bounds.

This Dutchy, on the Eaſtſide is bounded with Savoye, and the Countie of Burgundie, the Rhoane, running betweene them on the South with Lyonnoys, on the Weſt with Nivernois and Bourbonnois, and on the North with Champagnie.

Soile.

Ancient Gouvernment.

This Countrie is plaine and euen, and the Soile ſo exceeding fruitfull, that as France may be called the Garden of all Europe, ſo may this be tearmed the Epitome of France, or the faireſt flower of that garland. Richard Earle of Auſtun a braue old Souldier, was made by Odo King of France, Duke of Burgundie, of all that part, which lyeth on this ſide of the Soane, who gouverned this Dutchy two and thirtie yeeres, and left it to his Sonne Rudolphus, who afterward was elected King of France, leaving his brother Hugo Nigro Succeſſour to this Dukedome.

After him ſucceeded Odo his brother, or his Sonne (for there are two ſeuerall opinions thereof in hiſtorie) and next him Henricus, who dying without iſſue, Robertus King of France, obtained this Dukedome from Henricus (as they ſay) by vertue of a will: after him came his Sonne Robertus, and then Robert the grandchild of Hugo: after him ſucceeded Otho, Hugo the Second, Hugo the Third, and his Sonne Odo, then Odo the Third, Hugo the Fourth, Robert the Third, Hugo the Fifth, Eudo & Philippus, who dying without heire-males, Iohannes King of France ſucceeded him, and after him his Sonne Philipp the Hardie was by his Father inveſted into this Dukedome, after him his Sonne Iohannes the Vndaunted, and next him his Sonne Philippus the Good, the next was Philipp his Sonne Carolus the Bellator or warlike, after whoſe deceaſe Ludovicus the XI. King of France, incorporated & tooke in this whole Countrie, by the pretence of an eſcheat for want of heire males.

Townes. Dijon.

The Metropolis of this Dukedome is Divis, called by Gregorius Turonenſis Divionum, and by the Inhabitants Dijon. Some imagine that it was founded by the Emperour Aurelianus; but others thinke that he was rather the Reſtorer, and Conſecratour of it, and gaue it the name of Divis or the Gods, which the Inhabitants adored here. It is the faireſt towne of Burgundie, being ſeated in a pleaſant plaine, between two rivers called the Suſon & th'Ouſche, which run under the walls of this city, ſo that the Suſon often ſwelling, and overflowing, doth great harme to the towne, but the Ouſche runneth with a ſlowe ſtreame, and doth not onely furniſh the towne with fiſhe; but alſo is very commodious for the bringing up and downe of proviſions to this city. The walls lye exceeding high for the defence of the towne, and of late is fortified with Roundles, and Bulwarks. Here is held the chiefe ſeate of juſtice, or the Parliament, from whence (as out of a boſome) they fetch their paternall lawes. He that is chooſen Major of this citie, is conſtrained though againſt his will, to take upon him, not onely the honour, but alſo the charge and burthen thereof, and therefore muſt come into S. Maries Church, the Kings Atturney going before him, to take an oath to be true and faithfull to the King, and to ſtand for, and to maintaine the rights and priviledges of this city againſt every man, yea againſt the King himſelfe, if neede ſhould require.

Fertility.

Vpon the hills next adjoyning to this citie there grow excellent Vines. The Epiſcopall townes in this Countrie are Auſtun, & Chalon, both famous for their antiquitie. Auguſtodunum, or Auſtun, as it is called at this day, bare the name of Auguſtus Octavianus, who ſeing this towne ruined by the Warrs, which Iulius Cæſar had in Gallia, reedifyed it: but thoſe which ſay it was ſo called from Auge Apolloes wife, are much deceived.

This city was formerlie of a larg, & a great circuit, but ſince that time hath loſt a great deale of her ancient ſplendour, and beautie. Here are yet to be ſeene the ruines of the Amphitheater, of the conduit pipes, of the Pillars, and Piramids, with many old Meddels, and Antiquaries, which haue bene found here, and digged out of the ground. It is at this daye alſo adorned with faire Churches & publick buildings, being ſeated in the bottome of a hill, which is called Mons Cinus on the river Auronſius.

The towne of Cabalinum, or Cabalionum Eduorum,

Challon. now called Challon ſur Saone, by whom it was firſt founded is not certainely knowne, it lyeth on the right ſide of the Saone, in a very fruitfull ſoile and a healthfull aire, it is ſeated very commodiouſly alſo upon this river, for marchandiſe: and therefore Cæſar made it a Magazine, and ſtorehouſe for his armie. It was heretofore the royall ſeate of Gunſtranus, but Lotharius the Sonne of Ludovicus Pius Auguſtus, burnt it downe to the ground, ſo that he ſcarce left any memoriall of it, but afterward was built up againe, and now is a towne of rich trading. Halfe way betweene Challon and Maſcon, lyeth the ſmall towne of Torms, called by Spartianus and Antoninus Tinurtium, lying in a very pleaſant and fertile place, environned round about with the Soane and upon the hills, and hillocks about it are rich Vineyards, where they make excellent Wines.

Cuyſellum lyeth in a like diſtance from theſe two townes being under the Kings ſubjection. Ammianus, as Paradinus writeth, calleth it Secuſianorum & Secuſium. It is ſeated at the foote of a hill named Iura, and though it be much decayed here and there it ſeemes to haue bene a very ancient towne. On the Eaſt ſide of it lieth manie hills from which there iſſues divers riuelets and cleare running ſprings. And out of a rock of touchſtone floweth a ſpring, which by wodden pipes is led into the towne to a fine fountaine, whoſe water is very ſweete and wholeſome.

Beaulne. On the Weſtſide of it there is a large and a broad plaine. On the North part nine miles from Challon lyeth Belna, or Beaulne, upon a ſmall river called by the Inhabitants Bour-ſoize. Some thinke that this is Bitracta mentioned by Cæſar, and Strabo, but others are of an other opinion. This towne lyeth in a very mooriſh ground: & as Paradinus ſaith is ſtrongly ſeated by reaſon of a ſmall Meere which lies about it, that it is inacceſſible for an ennemy to approch unto, being beſides well fortified with Walls and Bulwarks. The ground about this towne is ſo fatt, and the Vines ſo noble, that your Beaulne Wines are in great requeſt through the whole World. Hard by it is the Cloiſter of Ciſtertium, and the Ciſtertian Fryers, ſtanding in a thick wood, founded by Duke Odo. This Cloiſter hath under it 1800. other Fryers Cloiſters, and almoſt as many Nunneries of the ſame Order.

Semur. Semurium, or Semur lyeth in the very midſt of this Countrie, which is alſo called Auxois, and is a fine towne. Halfe way betweene Dijon and Beaulne is Nuythonium, or Nuys, where they make good rappiers. The towne which is now called Avolon was heretofore named Aballon, Antoninus maketh it to be the place where the ſixeteenth Legion lay. And Antoninus his Sidolucum is at this day called Saulieu, where the eighteenth Legion quartered. That which is now called Flavigny, lying to the Eaſtward of Semur, about foure of fiue miles from it, is thought to be Flaviæ Eduorum. There are diverſe other townes, and Bourroughs, which for brevitie ſake I will paſſe over, as Auſone with a Caſtle in it, being as it were the Key of the Dutchy Eaſtward, under the walls whereof the Saone runneth. Likewiſe Noiers, Ravieres, Leigne, Monbard, Chaſtillon, S. Seigne, Seloigne, Crevaut, Viteau, Verden, Arnay, Seure, Tonnere called by Antoninus Tronoderum. In the Dutchie of Burgundie, there are three oher Epiſcopall townes, as Nevers, Auxerre & Maſcon: the firſt is honoured with the dignitie of a Dukedome, which is in French called le Duche de Nivernois, hath a large extent, and is watered with three navigable rivers, namely, the Icauna Elavere, & the Loire, there are alſo 13. walled townes in it, whereof Nevers is the Capitall, having under the juriſdiction thereof aboue thirtie Caſtlewicks, which Cæſar called Noviodunum: it is encompaſſed with ſtrong walls, heigh turrets, and deepe moats. The chiefeſt towne in the Dutchy of Nevers is Deziſam called Antonines Deciſe, and Decetia. The reſt are Clemecium, Douzium, Milinium, Angilbertſum, Corbignium, S. Leonard, Luyzium, Premezium, and others.

Bishopricks. Townes. Nevers. Deziſam.

Next unto it is Auxerre, which Ammianus calleth Antiſſidorum, and Antonine Antiſſiodorum, where he placeth the two and twentith Legion, the Royaltie about this towne is called Le pais d'Auxerrois, whence commeth the excellent Wine called Vin d'Auxerre. The towne which at this day is called Maſcon was Cæſars Matiſcona, in Tabula Itineraria Matiſco: in Notitia Provinciarum and by Antonine is called Matiſconenſe Caſtrum, where he placeth the tenth Legion. Philippus Bugnonius noteth in a certaine ancient writing ſealed, touching the deſcription and hiſtorie of this towne, that it was called Maſtico, & by Paulus Diaconus in Longobardicis Machaon Villa, and by Gregorius Turonenſis and others Matiſſana. For ſituation, trading, arts, and manufactures it equaliſeth Challon, lying along the Saone with a faire bridge which reaches over it, the other parts of it lie in the forme of a bowe.

Auxerre. Maſcon.

In this Burgundie and in the circumjacent Countries lie theſe Counties following, namely, Dijon, Auſtun, Tonnerre, Challon upon the Soane, Maſcon, S. Martin, Nevers, Langres, Auxerre, S. Iangou, Charolois, Chargni or Chagni, Monliet or Montit, Auxone, Rogemont, Muſſy, Breſtemont, Sees, Mombys, Senegnon, Gilby, Valenion, Tirecourt, Chevigni, Aine-ville, Eſpirey or Eſpyrien, Tarvant, Braſſey or Braſſe, Rochefort, Aine-court, Viteau, to which may be added, Arley, Ragny, Chaligny, Mommartin, Langey, Beauchamp, and Couches. The Biſhopricks of Auſtun, Maſcon, & Chalon, as alſo Langres; are under the Arch-Biſhop of Lyon. The rivers which moiſten this Dutchie, are the Souſon, the Louſche, the Soane, the Icauna, the Loire, the Elaver, and others.

Counties. Rivers.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE COVNTY OF BVRGVNDIE.

THis County of Burgundie, or High-Burgundie is called in French La Franche Conté, or the Free Countie, & as the Signeurie of Geneva, Savoy, & Lorraine acknowledgeth not the French; for this Countie is subject to their owne Earles, & free from paying of al mannner of tributes and taxations. It is said to be an imperiall feefarme, under the protection of those of Bern in Swisserland.

Limits. It is bounded on the North with Lorraine and Germanie, on the West with the Dutchie of Burgundie, on the East with Swvisserland, and on the South with Savoy, the length of it is nintie miles, the breath sixtie.

Fertility. This Countrie is exceeding fruitfull, yeelding all manner of sustentation, as fertill fields, rich Vineyards, and goodly Pastures for cattell. In every part they haue abundance of Wheate, Rye, Barlie, Oates, Beanes and Pease, neither want they fruitfull Trees.

In the heart, and midst of this Province, there are many goodly and fine Vineyards, for which reason by Arbois, & Vandanois there are such huge vessells to putt the Wines in, that they seeme higher then houses. About that place where the ancient Kings of Burgundie dwelt, called nowe by the Inhabitants Chambrette au Roy, they digg there out of the Earth, a kind of plaister not much unlike chawlke, also by Dola they finde white Marble, called by the Greekes Alabastrites, and an other kind of black Marble, full of purple speckels, and spotts, which is used for the Tombes of great Princes and Lords.

Cattell. There are also diverse sorts of cattell, especially abundance of Neate and Kine. As also fine ambling naggs of Granvelle, and braue Hounds, which are in great request in this Countrie.

By whome these Countrie haue bene gouverned. The anciẽt Earles of this Burgũdie were descended from the Imperiall & Royall Stemms of Frãce, whereof it is recorded, that the first of them which bore the title of Count Palatine, and Duke of Burgundie, was Eudes, after whome succeeded Phillipp his grandchild, who dying without issue Iohn King of France, gaue this Dukedome of Burgundie to his Sonne Phillip the Hardie; but Margaret the Daughter of Phillips Sister, obtained the Countie of Burgundie. Lodovicus Malanus her Sonne succeeded in the Gouvernment. After whose decease Margareta Malana his Daughter Countesse of Flanders was married to Phillip the Hardie, Duke of Burgundie. After whome succeeded in order, his Sonne Iohn surnamed the Vndaunted, Phillip the Good, Charles the VVarlike, and the Lady Mary, who was espoused to the Emperour Maximilian and Archduke of Austria, whose Sonne Phillip was married to Ioane heire of Castile, & Aragon, & he had two Sonnes Charles and Ferdinand, to the latter he gaue his inheritance in Germanie, & to the Emperour Charles the Fifth, Spagne, Burgundie, and Belgium, and after him they came to Phillip the Second King of Spagne, and now to his grandchild, Phillip the Third, who gouverned these Countries.

The Burgundians good Souldiers. The Burgundians, or, as some call them, the VVallons in stead of Gallons, are a warlike Nation, serving under divers Princes colours.

Precincts. This County is devided into three Præcincts, or Bailiwikes, for the better administration of justice, as namely into the Higher, Lowver, and the Dola, the first hold their residence at Vesulia, the second at Polichny, and the third at Dola.

Townes. Dola. Dola is the Metropolis of the whole County, and the gallantest and brauest towne of them, all seated upon the river of Dubis, or Doux, which there spreadeth himselfe into two braunches, and hath a stronge Castle it. Some imagine that this is Ptolomies Dittattion Vrbs Sequanorum. There is nothing wanting in it, which may beautifie a towne, it hath a very large Market-place almost foure squarre, somewhat more in length then in breath. On the West side of it, is a fine Senate-house, with a prison, Saint Maries Church is the chiefest, adorned with marveilous fine structure.

Besanson. Besides, there are many other townes, among the rest Vesontio commonly called Besanson, belonging to the Empire, formerly named Chrysopolis, situated in a very fruitfull Soile, the river Alduasdabis deviding it into two partes environeth it almost round about, saving on that side, which looketh to Dola-ward. It is also a Vniversity.

Nozeret. Nozerethum, or Nozeroy, heretofore called Nucillum, in regard of the abundance of Nutts, which growe there, was by Levves the Chalon after his returne from Ierusalem encompassed and fortified with a wall, and nameth Nozereth. There is a Castle in it, which because it is couvered with Lead is called the Leaden-Castle. Salina, or Salins is avery great towne, famous through the whole world for the abundance of Salt-pits, and the Salt, which is made there, becaus of the gaine and profit which the Inhabitants receive by it. The description of the other townes for brevity sake wee will passe over. Salins.

Meeres. This Countie hath also many great Lakes, and marveilous Meeres in it, where of the chiefest is called Abvoraginibus, the bottomelesse Meere having a strange wonder in nature: For the topp of the water thereof is couvered with a kinde of thick dirt, or claye, which one would thinke to be dry ground, over which men goe afoote, but will beare no waggons, or horses. In foggie and rainie weather yee shall see no water in it but onely when the sky is sereine & cleare, then the water bubbles & riſes up through the crannies and chaps of the dirt, and in a ſhort time guſheth forth in ſuch abundance, that it watereth the plaine of Colombana.

LA COMTE DE FERRETTE

Wonderfull, & ſtrange Meeres.

Betweene Nozereth, and Riparia there is another Meere in Bonivallis which abounds in fiſhe, eſpecially Pickrills, Pikes, and Perches, which every ſeuenth yeare vaniſheth and is not ſeene, and afterward riſes and appeares againe, this is ſtraunge and almoſt incredible.

The Southerne part of this County alſo is full of Meeres, amonge which there are two, the one called Great, & the other Litle Maleteux. Alſo Narlay Meere being of a wonderfull depth. Alſo Vernoy, the two Damblicies, Forgeay, Ronchault Meere, and divers others.

Riuers.

The rivers which water this countrie, are the Doux, Lougnon, the Dayne, and the Loue. The Doux lieth wholly in the Countie, which by Ptolomie was called Dubis, and Cæſar by Alduabis. Fulvius Vrſinus ſaith, that in ſome coppies it is read Alduaſdubis, and in others Alduaſdalis, but corruptly. This river ſpringeth out of the mount Iura, a litle aboue the pleaſant village of Mota, which for the greatneſſe thereof, may be compared to a towne, & coming from the South, runneth Northward through Pontier-meere, by Ponterlo, Mortua, and Vafro, where making ſome crookes by S. Hyppolito, from thence winding to the Weſt, neere unto Chaſtelot, runneth through Beſanſon, making a ſmall Ileland by Dola, at length after many Crooklings, and turnings, at Virdun falleth into the Saone, carrying along with him many other riverets and brookes. The river Lougnon taketh his courſe onely through High-Burgundie ſpringeth out of the beſome of the craggie hill Syrodus, neere unto which there lieth a great and a braue Village.

The Policie & Gouernment.

Touching the politike gouvernment of this County, ye muſt note, that ſo often as they ſummon, or call a Land-day, or Parliament, then the three States are cited, and called thither in the name of the Earle, & of the Prince of Orange as Lord of Nozereth and Arlay. Theſe three States conſiſt of the Nobility, Clergie, and Townes.

Counts & Earles Lords Spirituall & Temporall & Townes.

Hence one maye eaſely perceiue what a number of Noble, and Gentlemens houſes are in this County, beſides which there are foure famillies, that are deſcended from the Kings, and Princes of Burgundie, or at leaſt alied to them by conſanguinity, as namely, the Noble houſe of Vienna, that of Vergy the ſevere, that of Chalon the rich, which alſo beareth the title of the Princedome of Orange, & laſtly that of Neuf-Chaſtel, that is noted for the many fee-farmes, which belong to it.

All Appeales made from theſe three juriſdictions, or Balywikes appertaine to the high Court of Parliament at Dola. Touching the Spirituality, the Archbiſhop of Beſanſon is the Metropolitan; being likewiſe an Imperiall Prince, having three Suffragan Biſhops under him, namely the Biſhops of Baſill in Germanie, and in Svviſſerland of Lauſane, and Bellicenſe in Savoye.

The Archbiſhop of Beſanſon, as alſo the City it ſelfe are Imperiall members, belonging to the fift circle of the Empire, and Beſanſon is a free Imperiall towne, having bene heretofore the capitall of the Province of the Sequani, here the Gouvernour had continually his reſidencie. The tenth circle of the Empire is called the Burgonian circle, becauſe it was erected by the houſe of Burgundie comprehending under it the chiefeſt Netherlandiſh Princes and Lords, as the Duke of Burgundie, Duke of Bergen and VValheim, the Earle of Egmont and Iſelſteyn, the Earle of Horne, the Earles of Naſſavv in Breda, and the Count of Bergen.

The deſcription of the Dutchie OF BVRBONIE.

THE tract and Dutchie of Borbonie, hath taken its name from the place, which the Peeres, who bore rule over the whole Province firſt poſſeſſed. This Coũtry on the Northweſt and Weſt, is bordered with the Bituriges & Lemovices, on the North with Nivernus, on the Eaſt for the moſt part lye the Burgundians, on the South are thoſe of Lyons. The Soile is moſt ſandie, and but few places thereof will yeeld Corne. There be excellent Wines, & great ſtore of Rye every where. Thoſe whome Cæſar in his firſt booke de bello Gallico calleth Boy tributarirs to the Ædui (or Burgundians) are thought to have bene ſeated here of ould, whoſe Citie he ſayeth to have bene Gergovia, where he maketh alſo mention of Boya, without doubt the Citie of the Boy: theſe were of ſuch might, that being joynd with the Cenomanni and Inſubrians they daunted the pride and arrogancie of the Thuſcans, ſeazed on their dominions, and fixed their ſeats in that part of Italy, which is now called Romania. This whole territoire, as alſo many more, bordering there with, is ſometime ſaid to have bene ſubject to the Kings of Aquitania. Afterwards it had its owne Peeres, who from a Citie of none of the meaneſt were called Borbony: the laſt of them is ſaid to have bene Arcibaldus, who had one daughter, and heire named Agnes, ſhee being married to Iohn Duke of Burgundie, gave the Lordſhip of Borbonie in dowrie to her daughter Beatrice, whome ſhee had by him, having beſtowed her in mariage to Robert, Sone to Lewes the IX. with this proviſo, that it ſhould beare the name of his wife, that is of the Borbonian nation which was done. Robert therefore ſonne to Lewes the IX, who is inrowled in the number of the Saincts, was from thence foorth the progenitor of the Borbonians: for his Sonnes were Lewes, ſurnamed the great, who ſucceeded his father Johannes Claromontanus, Lord of the Citie of the Temple of Juſtin in Campania. Peter Arch-Deacon of Paris, he had alſo two daughters: Philippus Valeſius the ſixth, made this Lewis, the firſt Duke of Borbonie, an. 1339. to him were borne by Marie the daughter of Iohn Earle of Hannonia Peter the firſt, who ſucceeded James the progenitor of the Earles of Marchia and Vendoſme, Philip Lord of Belloicenſis Marie and Beatrix. This Peter was the ſecond Duke of Borbonie, and Lord of Molinium: he dyed in the battaile of Poictiers fought againſt the Engliſh. He of Iſabella daughter to Charles Earle of Valois, begate Lewes the XI, who ſucceeded his father: James Lord of Marchia, and 7 daughters. Lewes ſurnamed the good, married Anna the wife of Beraldus the Daulphin of Avergne, who was called Sirnus Dux, the Duke with the flat noſe, the daughter of Ioanna of Foreſt, who bore him Iohn his father ſucceſſor, Lewes and Iames Lord of Prauſium. Iohn the firſt of that name, having married Marie the daughter of Iohn Duke of the Bituriges, was Duke of Borbonie and Avergne, Earle of Claremont, Lord of Mompenſier, Foreſt, Bellyoci and Caſtrum Chinonis: from him iſſued Charles, who ſucceeded his father, Lewes Earle of Mompenſier and James. Charles tooke part with Charles the ſeveth, againſt the Engliſh, and Philip the good, Duke of Burgundie, with whome at length by the means, and mediation of his wife Agnes of Burgundie, Philips ſiſter he made peace. Agnes bore him Iohn who ſucceeded Lewes and Peter, who afterwards was Duke, Charles the Cardinall and Arch-Biſhop of Lyons, Lewes Biſhop of Leodium, Iames and five daughters. Iohn the XI Duke of Borbonie, and Avergne was Earle of Claremont, Foreſt & Marchia, Lord of Belloyoci and Caſtrum Chinonis Peere and Comeſtable of the Kingdome of France: who though he was thrice married, yet died without iſſue. Peter the XI ſucceeded Iohn his brother, who was Peer and great Chamberlain of France: of Anna daughter to King Lewes the XI he begot one daughter called Suſanna, who ſucceeded her father: Shee marrying Charles of Borbonie, Earle of Mompenſier, who by her marriage made her Huſband Duke of Borbonie. This is that Charles, who being Comeſtable of France, made defection from his Prince Francis King of France, joynd with the Emperour Charles the fifth, and under his conduct fighting againſt Rome was ſhot through with a bullet an. 1527 the 6 of May, and ſo died, wanting the fruit of his victorie, leaving no children behinde him. After the death of his wife Suſanna, the King chalenging Borbonie to himſelfe, the Dukes of Vendoſme by right of conſanguinitie, retained onely the armes and bare title. The Earles of Flanders had their iſſue from the firſt line of the Borbone race, & many great Kings and Princes have deſired affinitie with this royall and illuſtrious houſe, whence there is a twofold tract of Borbonie now deſcribed by the Geographers of France, viz, the inferior & ſuperior, the inferior comprehends, the Cities themſelves, and two Counties. As for the Cities the Metropolitan of the whole Dutchie is reckoned to be Molins, a Citie ſituated upon the River, which Cæſar calleth Elaver, now the Allier: of ould the Dukes ſeat, but afterwards a houſe of pleaſure, and a moſt ſweete retiring place of the Kings of France for recreation. Some thinke this to be that which Cæſar calleth Gerſobina, a Citie of the Celtes, belonging to the Boy, in which Cæſar had placed a helvetian battell: it containeth the garniſon or place of defence for the Seneſchallſhip of Burbonie, which was erected by King Francis the firſt of that name. In Molinum there is a pleaſant Caſtle, having a fine garden joyning to it, which yeeldeth Oranges & Citrons. In a certain gallerie of the Caſtle are the lively pictures of the Dukes of Borbonie with their genealogies to be ſeene, here is alſo a magnificent Fountaine. The other townes and cities are Bourbon, famous by reaſon of its antiquitie, was thought worthie to give the name to this Province. It is ſituated betwixt the Rivers Cher & Allier, it was famous in the time of Charles the great, there is a ſtrong Caſtle in it, and hot-bathes. L'Archimont, Montmeraut and Coſne, ſurnamed en Bourbonnois, lying upon the River of Loire; it hath a Caſtle in the territorie thereof, and grounds commodious for the feeding of Cattell, which doth exceede the reſt: Montluſſon, S. Porcin, the ground whereof produceth excellent wines. Varennes upon the Allier, is likewiſe a famous Citie: alſo Gannat bordering upon Avergne: Le ment aux moines; Souvigny le Comte or aux Moines la Palaus, glorying in a brave Caſtle: Eriſſon, Sancoinas, Petri ſanum, vulgarely called S. Pierre le Monſtier, a fine place of late times, not knowne by any ancient name. It is the ſeate of the Governour, to whome the cities, called the cities of the Bailiewikes are ſubject, as alſo the ſeats commonly called ly called Dourioù, Xançoù, Cuſſet & others, ſome whereof are ſituated in Avergne, others in Nivernoù, Ainay le Chaſteau, ſo ſurnamed from the Caſtle, S. Geran, S. Amand and others. The Counties are two, commonly called Beaujeloù and Foreſt: the firſt comprehendeth whatſoever is contained betwixt the Loire and the Arvovx. It is ſituated toward the Eaſt betwixt the Forenſes and the Burgundians, and was the patrimonie of the ancient Borbonians. The chiefe city is called in French Beaujeu: the other hath its name not from woods or Foreſts, as the word ſeemeth to import, but from the word Forum. The Forenſes which inhabit Northward bordering upon their brethren the Borbonnoù, & weſtward upon the Avergnoù, on the South upon thoſe of Lyons, and on the Eaſt upon Beaujeloù. The Earles of ould had the governement thereof, of whoſe race alſo the Lords of Beaujeloù are deſcended. The French Hiſtoriographers make famous mention of a certain Earle of Lyons, Foreſt and Beaujeloù, who had 3 Sonnes, namely, Arthauldus Earle of Lyons, Stephanus of Foreſt, Emfridus of Beaujeloù. The Counties of Foreſt & Beaujelou, having bene a long divided, at laſt they were annexed and reunited together againe by the death of Guicardus Earle of Beaujeloù, who in the time of Philip the 11. King of France, had to his honour enjoyed the office of a Comeſtable: for his ſiſter Iſabella Counteſſe of Beaujeloù was married to Reginaldus Earle of Foreſt, who was deſcended from the race of Arthauldus, of whome we have ſpoken before, and ſhee was of the progenie of Stephanus, brother to Arthauldus, as we have ſaid: we read alſo that from this marriage came Guido, to whome the Countie of Foreſt belonged by inheritance, and to Lewes, to whome fell the Lordſhip of Beaujeloù. After theſe we read of nothing, that carrieth any certainty. Henry the third, King of France, before he obtained the Monarchie of France, together with the Dutchie of Angiers, by right of Apennage, poſſeſt the Dutchies of Borbonie, and of Avergne, with the Countie of Foreſt. This contains 40 walled townes, and about as many large Villages. The chiefe citie of the Forenſes is Roane, ſeated upon the Loire, which having a bridge over it, there lyeth upon the road way to Lyons, it hath alſo a Caſtle. The ſecond place chalengeth Forum Seguſianorum, for ſo it was called in ould time, and now commonly Feurs. From this word (Forum) the Countrie of Foreſt hath its name, now commonly called le pays de Foreſt, but corruptly: for it ought rather to be de Fores. This citie is at this day the place of all the commerce of the whole Province: the reſt are Montbriſon, the ſeate of the Baliewike under thoſe of Lyons: S. Eſtienne de Furan, is the Arſenall of armes, and the ſtorehouſe for barrs of yron, which are tranſported from thence through all the Provinces of France: having the commoditie both of water, very fitty for tempering of yron and as alſo for the Sea-coales, which they dig up there, which hath ſuggeſted that art to the Inhabitants: S. Galmier or Guermier in the ſuburbs whereof is a ſpring or a well full of Alume, vulgarely called Font-foule, S. Germain Laval yeelding excellent wine. S. Bovet le Chaſtell, where the beſt ſort of tonges are made, S. Robert famous in reſpect that the firſt bridge was made there over the Loire. The chiefe families of the Foreſtian Nobilitie are thoſe, commonly called d'Vrſe, where there is a very ancient Caſtle, ſituated upon the top of a hill, yeelding a fine proſpect over all the neighbouring territories, next that lyeth Coſam belonging to the moſt ancient houſe of Lebi: The Superior is by a peculiar name called Le pays de Combraille: more hillie then the lower, where you have Mont-aigu, a Citie of reaſonable ſtrength, lying upon the River of Bouble, which falleth into the Allier by Marignane. The tract of Borbonie is watered with 2 other great Rivers, the Loire & the Allier, a River naturally belonging to Avergne. The Loire taketh its ſpinghead in Avergne, as a place vulgarely called La Font de Loire, taking his courſe through divers Countryes, and running through the Cities of Roane, Marcigni, Deſiſe, Nevers, Seville, Gyen, Gergeau, Orleans, Bloù, Amboiſe, Tours and Saumur, Le Pont de Cé, disburdeneth himſelfe in the weſterne Sea betwixt the Nannates and the Pictones. The Allier riſeth above the Citie Claremont, 4 miles beneath Brionde by Gergovia, it runneth within a ſmall diſtance of a place commonly called Vſon, where there is an excellent gold, & azure mine. It doth not much differ in greatneſſe from the Loire, having greater ſtore of fiſh in it then the Loire, this River running by Molinetum, diſburtheneth it ſelfe into the Loire, at a place called Le Bec d'Allier. The ground in Borbonie and Foreſt is in many places rugged, full of woods, but Foreſt is more rough then Borbonie, and upper Borbonie more hilly then the lower part. Touching the manners and cuſtomes of the Burbonians, they who border upon the Arverni, are for the moſt part of the ſame nature with them, fierce and ſubtile, very laborious, warie and covetous, the moſt of them are craftie, contentious and violent, yea ſuch with whome one would be loath to meddle, but thoſe againe who are farther remote, are very courteous, affable, of a ſubtile and ſtirring ſpirit, frugall and carefull husbands, addicted to lucre, and yet notwithſtanding kinde bountifull and officieus to Straingers. The Forenſes alſo are ſubtile, & of a good nature, wiſe in managing their affaires, but are covetous of gaine, and to that end doe travell into the fartheſt and moſt remote Countries for trading and marchandiſe, but are compaſſionate and mercifull to their owne Countreymen, which are brought to povertie & neceſſitie without their Countrie. One ought to be very wiſe, and warie in dealing or handling with any of the Forenſes. They ſend their commodities of yron and ſteele almoſt into all the parts of the world, eſpecially thoſe of S. Eſtienne, where there be many workmen, as good as any are in France.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF BERRY.

Name. THE Dutchie of Berry called in Latine Ducatus Bituricenſis, and in French Le Duché de Berry from the chiefe city Bituris, or Bourges, is environed on the North with Sologne, being a part of Nether Beauſſe, from which it is ſeparated by the river Lary, on the East with Heurepens, Nivernois, and Bourbonnois, where it is bounded with the Brooke Lo Faye: On the South with Limoiſin, where the river Croure watereth it, and on the West with Poictou, and Touraine, being parted one from an other by the river Clery.

Site.

Fertility. This Countrie is very fruitfull in all kind of Graine, Wine, and other proviſions, eſpecially in Cattell, & abundance of Sheepe, (that when they taxe a man for two much lying in many things, more then truth, they will ſay, Fy there are not ſo many Sheepe in Berry: where of this Countrie ſerues a great part of France.

There inhabited here formerly the Biturgies, which were called the Cubes, as Strabo, Ptolemy, and others withneſſe: for the Bituriges were twofould: namely, the Bituriges Cubi, whoſe principall city was Auaricum, or Bourges in the firſt Aquitania, and Biturgies Vibiſci, or Viviſci, whoſe Capitall City was Burdigala, or Bourdeaux in the ſecond Aquitania, being as Plinie mentioneth, two free townes under the Roman. In Notitia Provinciarum Bourges in the firſt Aquitania, or the ſixth Viennoiſe, is called the citie of the Biturices, or Bitoriges. Ioannes Calameus hath written much of the name of this people, in ſixe Bookes, which containe the hiſtorie of the Bituriges.

The ancient Princes and Gouvernments. In the reigne of Hugh Capet, Godfrey was Gouvernour of this Countrie of Berry, from whome as it is ſaid, Harpen was deſcended, who purchaſed this Countrie of Henry the firſt, who a while after, ſould it to King Philip the firſt for the defraying of his expedition, which with other princes he had undertaken, for the conquering of the Holy Land. A fewe yeeres after it was created a Dukedome, and giuen for an Appennage or portion to Iohn de Valois, by his father King Iohn of the ſame name. He dying without heire-males, it fel againe and was revnited to the crowne of France. Afterward it was giuen to Iohn the Sonne of King Charles the ſixth, who hath a great many Children. But he deceaſing without iſſue, left his brother Charles his Succeſſour, who came to the crowne, diſdayning the contract of marriage betweene Henry King of England, and Catharine his ſiſter, after the Engliſh had taken from him the greateſt part of his Kingdome, was in deriſion thereof called King of Bourges. After this Charles ſucceeded Charles his Sonne brother to Levves the eleuenth. After whome Margaret, ſiſter unto King Francis the firſt, who was firſt maried to Charles Duke of Alençon, and afterward to Henry of Albert King of Navarre, had this Dutchie from her brother to enjoy the uſe of it. After her deceaſe Margaret daughter unto the ſame King Francis, had alſo this Dutchie giuen her (as a Dourie) by her brother Henry the ſecond, when ſhe eſpouſed Emanuell Philibert Duke of Savoye.

Townes. Bourges. The chiefe towne in this countrie is Bourges, called by Cæſar and Antonine Auaricum: by Ammianus, Biturigæ, by others Biturica, Bituricæ, Bituriga Vrbs, and Biturica Civitas. Others againe ſay, that it taketh the name Auaricum from the river Eura, which watereth it. It is ſeated in a moſt pleaſant ſoile, which is not onely very fruitfull in Corne and other graine; but alſo in excellent Wines, Cattell, Foule, and all other proviſions, neceſſary for the ſuſtentation of man.

It is much commended for foure ſmall rivers, which runne about it, as the Auſfron, and Aurette on the one ſide, and the Yvre and Molon on the other ſide of it, which bring many commodities to it. It is not knowne who was the Founder of it, as of many others. The ſituation thereof was otherwiſe heretofore, then it is at this preſent: for it ſtood then in a Marais, where there is ſeene yet to this day almoſt all the old walls ſtanding, plaiſtred with a moſt ſolid matter, as it was the manner of the ancient Romans in thoſe dayes. On may ſee ſtill the beginning of it, at the Tovver, which is called the Great, paſſing through the midſt of S. Stephens Church, the Streete in S. Iohn Fields from the Gordian to the Newv-Gate formerly called S. Andrevves, then they turne through the ſtreete, where the Amphitheater ſtood commonly called the Arenes, reaching as farre as Tours-Gate, & from thence running up to S. Pauls-gate, by litle and litle winds, and turnes againe to the tower abouesaid.

This Citie was afterward by Charle-Maigne, and others ſo mightely enlarged, that now it contendeth for greatneſſe, with the largeſt & ſtrongeſt townes in the Kingdome. The forme of it lieth longer in length, then in breath; but is very large and ſpacious, fortified with foure & twentie high towers, among which the great one aboue mentioned, is called La groſſe tour, for the extraordinary thickneſſe thereof; being girt and environed about with a good wall and fortifyed with fine turrets, and a deepe moate, made in the reigne of Philip the Second King of France, about the yeare of our Lord 1190. It lyeth in a round forme, and very high, whereof one hath not ſeene the like, but is now ruined. From theſe two faire towers, it was called Bituris, quaſi Biturris. Here unto alludeth an ancient Grammarian in this verſe.

Turribus à binis inde vocor Bituris.
From tvvo Tovvers vvhich vvere builded here
The name of Bituris I beare.

des portalls, which are built here & there, as neceſſity requires; but in the time of warrs, when they feare an ennemy, they onely open foure. There are in it ſeuenteene Collegiall Churches, and as many Parochiall. Beſides theſe gallant Churches, this Citie is adorned with an Arch-Epiſcopall Seate, & hath a famous Vniverſitie in it a any is in France, for Calumenus calleth it, the honour of all Learning, being provided with many ſkillfull & learned Profeſſours, and Doctours, eſpecially of the lawe. This Citie hath oftentimes bene afflicted with great calamities, having bene fiue times taken in by the aſſaults of an ennemie, and hath bene almoſt wholly deſtroyed, or burnt with fire; but allwayes reedifyed, and built againe better and better. Charles the Seventh being chaſed in the warres with the Engliſh, made his retreate hether.

Seate of Iuſtice. Bourges is the Præſidiall bench or Court of Iuſtice for the whole Dutchie. Here reſides the chiefe Bailife, to whome all appeales muſt come, aſwell from the Maſhall of the city, as from the other Magiſtrates and Officiers of this Province.

Vnder the Gouvernment of the Gouvernour of Bourges, is the citie of Bourges it ſelfe, with fiue Dioceſſes, as Yſſoudun, Dun le Roy, Vierzon, Mehun and Concreſſault. Vnder the juriſdiction of Bourges, are the Counties of Sancerre, and S. Aignan, the Baronie of Montfaulcon, and fortie Caſtlewikes. Sancerre was called of old Sacrum Cereris, from Ceres which was adored here. It is a towne of good ſtrength, and was conſigned over unto the Proteſtants 1570. as a towne of caution, for the more ſincere obſerving of the articles of peace, then newly agreed on. Anno 1573. this towne endured a hard ſiege which brought the Inhabitants thereof to ſuch a diſtreſſe & famine, that they were not onely driven to eate Doggs, Catts, Horſes, Ratts, Mice, and Moles, but alſo when they had no more of them they ate their very ſkins and hides, yea it came to ſuch an extremity that they did not ſpare to feede upon their owne fleſhe & children, and to eate their owne dunge.

Argenton. Argenton (as Mr. Heylyn ſaith) was the title or honour of Philip de Comines, that excellent hiſtorian, who dived ſo deepely into, and writ ſo plainely of ſtately affaires, that Katherine de Medice uſed to ſay, that he made as many Heretickes in policie, as Luther had in religion: from this towne he was called Monſieur d' Argenton.

Caſtlewikes, Countries, & Lordſhips. The Caſtlewickes belonging hereunto are, Sancerges, Beaufau, Chapelle d' Anguillon, Le Caſtell de Boncard, Ialonges, Tarenay, Verdigny, Meneſme, Charantonnay, Brie, and ſome others.

The Countie of S. Aignan tooke this name from the Biſhop of S. Aignan. The Barronie of Montfaulcon contayneth under it, the Lordſhip of Baugy, and Gion. Alſo La Fane, Lyvron, Cony, Villabon, Seury, Marcilly, Marnay, Farges, Avor, Saligny, Percigni, Cru, Laſſax, Boisboſſon, Nuiſſement, Villiers, Compoy. The Caſtlewikes are theſe Ays d' Anguillon, Suryen Vaux, S. Soulange, S. Palais, La Sale du Roy, Bueil, Quantilly, Pomerigny, Franche-ville, La Chapelle, Nancay, Drye, Levreux, Beauheu, Brecy, Beugy, S. Florent, Neufri ſur Barainion, Morthonnier, Marmaignes, Maubranches, S. Vrſin, Tillay, Brilliers, Vatan, S. Satur, Lury, Eſtrechies, Maulpas, Ville neufe, S. Crapaix, Aſcilly, Iuſſy le Chauldrier, La Corne, Les Chaizes, Vauvrilles, Les Cloyes & Bonge, & thus much for the chiefe towne, and the large juriſdiction thereof. Now follow the other juriſdictions, as Yſſouldun, the Kings towne, which is a Bayliewike, having under it the Barronies of Chaſteauroux, Gracay, Ceracay, S. Severe, Lynieres, unto which is annexed the Caſtlewike of Riſay: Argenton unto which the Seneſchallſhip of Ravennes belongeth, and the juriſdiction of Servinet.

The Caſtlewikes are theſe following: Bourſſac, Chaſteau, Meillant, Mareul, Neffy, S. Sepulchre, Rully, Pauldy, Maſſy, Cahors, Perouſe, Chaſtellet, Maſſeuvre, Augurande, S. Chartier, Le Palleteau, Bommieres, Moche, Fully, Voullon, La Ferte Nonant, Ville-Dieu, Chaſtre & Charroux. Caſtlewikes.

Vnder Dun le Roy, (beſides other Caſtlewikes) belongeth Pra dict Callaut, the Baronie of Chaſteau-neuf, upon the river Carim, and S. Iulian. The Kings towne of Vierzon, comprehendeth under it, the Lordſhip of Champre, Motte d' Aiſy, Sarogoſſe, Brivay, and Mery. The juriſdiction of Mehun is ſubject to the Caſtlewiks of Love and Foici. Concreſſault, or Concourfaults, contayned under it Vailly, Argeney, Clemon & Beaujeu.

The rivers which water this Dutchie, or runne by the ſide of it, are the Loire, the Souldra, the Arrona, the Cher, the Theone, the Indre, and the Creuſſa, with ſome other ſmall brookes, wheroof the moſt of them fall into the Loire, which ſerveth to tranſport the wares of Berry into other parts. Rivers.

There are here and there many woods in thoſe parts, whereof S. Roberts and Lacenne Foreſt are the chiefeſt. Now I returne againe to the publike, and private buildings, for in Bourges, beſide the 34. Churches before ſpoken of, there are many Cloiſters of Begging-Monkes, and two Abbeys for men, the one is called S. Sulpitius, which is very rich and mighty, ſtanding without the city, the other lyeth within the walls and is named S. Ambroſes, having great incomes belonging to it. Beſides theſe, there are three Abbeys for Nunns. Of late yeeres alſo the Magiſtrates haue built in it a Hoſpitall or Gaſthouſe, for the reliefe and maintenance of poore and impotent men. Among the gallant buildings (for there are many there) the houſe of Iaques Cœur, who liued in the time of Charles the Seventh, ſurpaſſed all the reſt in ſumptuoſneſſe, and magnificencie.

There is alſo the Dutch-houſe, in which the Kings treaſurie heretofore was kept, before the Miſſe or Teare-Mart, unto which were wont to come a great reſort of ſtraungers & forraine nations, before it was removed to Lyons. Within and without this city, there are yet to be ſeene a great many of ancient & decayed buildings, of curious workemanſhips, and they finde daylie there many Antiquaries, which are digged out of the ground, eſpecially in that place, where heretofore the Amphitheater ſtood.

The Archbiſhop of Bourges hath under him theſe Biſhops, namely the Biſhops of Clermont, Rodes, Lymoges, Mende, Alby, Cahors, Caſtres, Tulls, S. Flour. Onely the Biſhop of Le Puy is exempted.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE TERRITOIRE OF LIMOSIN.

Name.

LEMOVICIVM, or Limoſin tooke its name from the principall towne called Limoges; but the originall of this appellation is not certainely knowne. Some deriue it from Lemovix, the Prince and Founder thereof, others quaſi in Limo ſita from the dirtie Soile in it. It is commonly called in French Le Pais or Comté de Limoſin. It is bounded on the North with Berry, on the East with Bourbonnois, on the South with Avergne, and on the Southweſt with Perigort, with which they hold more correſpondance and Neighbourhood, then with the other Provinces, and on the Northweſt with Poictou; the circumference whereof being almoſt as broad, as it is longe. There ſtands an old Elme tree betweene a village named La maiſon Neufve, and Argenton, a towne in Berry, which towards the North, parteth the bounds of foure Countries, to wit of Berry, Bourbonnois, Avergne, and Limoſin, in ſuch ſort, that heretofore the Princes of theſe foure Countries, haue ſtood under it & ſpoken on with an other, everie one of them within his owne territoire. Limoſin beareth not much wheate being a cold and a barren Countrie, but yeeldeth much Rye, Barlie, and Oates. There growes alſo many Cheſtnutts and Turneps in abundance. There is alſo good ſtore of Wine within the confines of Limoſin, but ſharp and ſowriſh, yet in ſome places they fall reaſonable good. For Bread, Meate, Fruits, Fowle, Venaiſon, and ſuch like they haue enough, ſo that one maye liue good Cheape in Limoſin. In Lower Limoſin are great ſtore of Vines and Grapes, the beſt Soile whereof is about Brive la gaillarde, where there are many Vine-fields, Meddowes, and arrable Lands. thereof Limovices, Strabo Lemobices, Ptolemie Lemovici, thoſe which wee call at this daye Limoſins, and in Notitia Provinciarum Galliæ, La Cité des Limovices. Some would haue them to be called Indigenes, & Aborigenes, fetching their originall & offspring from Lemovix, iſſued from the Gomorits, as ſome men dreame. Others imagine, that they are deſcended from Great Herculles Libick, who having brooke through Spaine, paſſing the Pyrenean Mountaines, came and made his abode here for a time among the Gaules. Now this Province hath ſome thing more peculiar belonging to it then the other Countries of Gallia, for whereas writters nominate onely the other Provinces, without making any mention of their Cities, whence the inhabitants tooke their name, here appeareth the contrarie, for Cæſar ſpeaking of the Limovices, and their towne, writeth that they were the firſt, which yeelded unto him, were Lovers of Peace and Concord, and haters of Diſcords & diſſentions. Now after that the Limoſins had entred into a leage with Cæſar, they were obedient to a Prince, alied to the Romans, unto whome they were ſubject, till the Gothes having taken in Aquitania chaſed them out of their Countrie. Wee read alſo that after the French had expulſed the Gothes, they ſett Gouvernours over the Limoſins. And then they had Earles, and Dukes created over them: whereof ſome were for the managing of militarie affaires, & others for the adminiſtration of juſtice. Amonge all the Provinces ſubjugated to the Romane yoake, and which had ſuffred many ruines, which cauſed aſwell the change of the names of the townes, as of the people, the Limoges, and all Limoſins may glorie in this, that they never altered theirs, for any affliction whatſoeuer befell them. And which is more, thoſe townes which were ruined by their ennemies were built up againe, and reedified by the Amborigines of the Countrie, without any change of their names, and liued under the obeiſſance of their Kings, with as much honour and riches as euer they did. This Province is devided into the Vpper, and Diviſion. the Lower Limoſin. The Vpper is (properly Limoſin) ſeparated from the Lovver by the Caſtlewikes of Maſſere, and the brooke of Bredaſque, by Vpper Vezere, and by Le Puy de la Marche, being fortie French miles in breath, ſo that the whole circumference of this Countrie contayneth foure ſcore French miles The Vpper part of it reached from Vareille, which is within a mile of Souſterraine, to the aboue ſaid Brooke being of the like ſpace. The chiefe towne is Lemovicum ſo Townes. called, as many thinke, by Hirtius in his eight booke of the Gallike warres, which is now Limoges. Fulvius Limoges. Vrſinus relying to much upon the authoritie of the ancient Coppies nameth it Limonum. Ptolomy calleth that Rhatiaſtum in his Aquitanian Gaule (as Ioſeph Scaliger ſuppoſed in writting to Merula) which ſhould be rather Ville-neufve. Yet Bertrand thinketh that Rhatiaſtum ſhould be Raiz; becauſe of the probability & reſſemblance of the name. Whether it be or no, it matters not. This towne is ſeated partly in a valley, and partly upon a ſmall hill, which lieth on Saint Martialls ſide, & the valley next to the river Vienne, where the Citie and the Cathedrall Church ſtands, dedicated to Saint Stephen. It is fortified with a ſtronge Caſtle and Walles. In the upper part of the towne, is a fine Fountaine, and the ſluce-Ponds, which ſerue not onely for the accommodation of the Burgeſſes, and the watring of horſes; but alſo on certaine dayes, and houres in the weeke, the ſluces being lett open, men and maides ſtand readie to ſcowre their ſtreets, and to caſt their filth into it, becauſe then this water as a ſwift currant runneth by their houſes. In the Abbey of Luzarche built by King Pipin, was found a manuſcript which made mention that the Limoges were once a Kingdome. Howſoeuer certaine it is that the Limoſins haue alwayes bene gouverned by Earles. The ruines which lye by the Vineyards ſhew the ancient and great circuit thereof. It was also created a Vicounty, but accomited of the greatest dignitie that was in all France; having respect then to the jurisdiction which was ambulatoire, and unsetled. It was first ruined by the Romans, afterward the Gothes brought it under their subjection, then the French, then Charles Martell, then Pepin, and at lenght was miserably spoiled by the English: nevertheless at this present flourisheth as much as ever it did: and now the Limosins haue as great trading, as they haue in any other place. It aboundeth not onely in skilfull Artisans for all manner of trades & occupations; but especially in enammelled workemanship, having besides fine Schollars and learned men in it. In briefe, the citizens are very industrious, and neuer lazie nor idle. The women are highly commended for their chastity, and charity to the poore. Besides it is honored with an Episcopall-dignitie, a Hall of justice, an Exchequer for the Kings moneys of that Countrie, and of Francaleu, having also the jurisdiction of a Vicountie, belonging to the King of Navarre, now King of France. Moreouer they haue their Counsellours for the Senatehouse, and a Court of Bourroughmasters for the Burgesses, and Marchants. I will for brevities sake passe ouer the lesser townes in silence, as Soubsterraine, Le Boisson, Barat, Dorat, and Confoulant. Amonge which Cassusium is famous for their yearely Faires of Horses, and Cattell held upon Saint Georges day. There are also Abbeys, the one called Grandmondt, the other Saint Leonards, lying betweene Lymoges & Felletin. Lower Limosin is more hillie, then the Vpper, which is fitly called La marche de Limosin, bordering upon Avergne, and Perigort. The chiefe towne is Tutela, or Tullis, lying in a very craggie, and a montainous place. Besides the Bishopricke, it hath a Court of Iustice, and a Baliewike belonging to it, which is a great hindrance to those of Brive and of Vsarche. There is also established the Election of Lovver Limosin, and the Receit for the moneys, which the Countrie brings up. Vsarche is a small towne, seated in a pleasant aire, upon the river Vexerevv, which is reported to be invincible. For which they haue a common proverbe, Que celuy qui a une maison a Vsarche possede une Forteresse en la jurisdiction des Limosins, that is, He vvhich hath a house vvithin Vsarche possesseth a Fortresse vvithin the jurisdiction of the Limosins. Historie is not silent to relate the vertues of the Inhabitants, who opposed themselues brauely against the English in Aquitanie, and were euer constant and faithfull to their Prince the French King. Brive la gaillarde, is a fine small towne, situated in a fertill & a gallant plaine, environned with shadie Woods, and the fields couvered with Vines; being the Seneschalls Seate. It is said to haue bene heretofore under the jurisdiction of Perigort: but afterward was annexed to the Limosins, by the commaund of Charles the Sixth King of France. There are also some others, as Treignac, Donzenac, Allasac, Belsoc, Meissac, Visset, and Belmont. Vpper Limosin is watered with the river Vienne, called in the speech of the Limosins Vignane, springing out of the Mountaines of Millevacces, and passing by Limoges, and then by Chastelleraud at Candes falleth into the Loire. The other river which washed the Vpper Limosin is called the higher Vexerevv, which comming out of the Pooles of Forsac, neere unto Massere passing by Segur, taketh its course into Perigort. Limosin hath bred many excellent and learned men. They are good husbands, sparing in their dyet, and contented with a litle, hating liquorishnesse, but great eaters of Bread, for which they haue a proverbe, Le Limosin Gourmand de pain, that is, The Limosin is a Glutton for bread. They drinke not much wine but in townes. The vulgar sort are too griping, & are nastie in their housekeeping. For the most part they are very laborious, ingenious, craftie, and subtill, not rash headed, but provident for themselues, and their affaires: yet this vice raignes amonge them, they will goe to lawe one with an other for a trifle; and which is worse, they are taxed for giving of money, to procure false witnesses. This is chiefly the nature of the Inhabitants of Tulle: but for those of Vzarche they care not much for merchandise, but choose rather to follow the Warrs, and to learne the use of their armes. For the Gentrie they are continually quarreling one with an other, for the rest they are very noble & generous, and herein the Burgesses of the townes imitate them. The Limosins commonly attaine to a great age, and their familles liue most together; so that ye shall see in the houses of some villages, an old man, which liues to see his third and fourth Generation, and some times they haue whole famillies of a hundred persons, descended from one blood, which liue all together as it were in a colledge. To Conclude, I will add hereunto, that which Iohannes Punctejus saith in his Latine verses touching the offspring of the Limosins, which are these following:

Bounds.

POICTONIVM, Pictavia or Poictou, hath on the South Angoulesme, and Xantoigne, on the West the Aquitaine Seas, on the North Brittaine and Anjou, the rest is shutt in with Touraine, Berry & Limosin.

Fertility.

This Countrie is exceeding fruitfull in Corne, & Cattell, Wool & Flaxe, and very rich in Wine. There is excellent hunting, and hawking; in regard of the abundance of Deere & game, which are in this Province. Wee reade that this Countrie was honoured heretofore by the Gothes, with the title of a Kingdome, whome Clodoveus King of France chased from hence, and likewise out of all Aquitaine.

The Emperour Lodovicus Pius, gaue to his Sonne Pipinus the Kingdome of Aquitania, whose Sonnes Pipin and Charles, were by their Vncle Charles the Balde driuen out of Aquitania, and shutt up in a Cloister, & so seizing upon this Princedome, gaue it to his Nephew Arnold, upon this cõdition, that it should neuer beare any more the title of a Kingdome; but of a Dukedome. After Arnold succeeded VVilliam, surnamed the Good, Eblon the First, Eblon the Second, VVilliam the Second and Third, Guy, VVilliam the Fourth, and Fifth, and Elenor Daughter of VVilliam the Fifth was married to Levves the Seuenth, King of France; who being suspicious of treason & adultrie divourced her: shee then on a sudden was espoused to Henry Duke of Normandie, who after the death of King Stephen, succeeded him in the Kingdome of England. Whence hapned the longest blondiest, & most grievous time of woe & calamities, which ever afflicted France. For after the decease of Henry, his Sonnes Richard, & Iohn succeeded him, aswell in his Kingdome of England as in his Maternall, and Patrimoniall inheritances in France. But Arthur being arrived, the Sonne of Goofrie, as being the eldest Sonne of King Iohn, pretended that he ought to be preferred before Iohn, and to this end was incited and stirred up thereunto by Philippus Augustus King of France, to take Poictou by force of armes from his Vncle Iohn, and to make himselfe master of it. He then gathering many troups together, was on a sudden surprised by Iohn, who overthrew his forces, and carryed him prisoner to Rouan, where he put him to death. For this cause King Iohn was by Constantia the Mother of Arthur, accused of Parricide, and for to accuse him of it, appealed unto King Philip, sitting in the Court of the Peers of France, where he was condemned for his offence, and adjudged to loose all his livings to the King, by the right of confiscation, as Lord of the Fief, & among the rest he gott this countrie of Poictou. But Levves the Eight his Successour gaue it to Alfonsus, who dying without issue, it came againe under the power of King Philip the Third, and continued with his Heires, till the reigne of Phillip of Valois, who was overthrowne in the Battle of Crecie by King Edvvard the Third of England, who tooke it in, and recouvered it againe, and held it more fully then before with all Aquitaine, by vertue of a treatie made betweene him, and King Iohn of France, who soone after created this Dutchie a Principate, which King Edward gaue to his Sonne, who having layd heavie impositions upon the Aquitanies, he lost the greatest part thereof, because they withdrew themselues from his obeissance, changing the Rose for the Flovver de Lys, under Charles the Fifth King of France. Whose Nephew Charles the Seuenth (by domestick dissentions) droue the English out of all Aquitaine, leaving after him for his Successour Levves the Eleuenth, who likewise gaue it to his Brother Charles as a fief, and fee simple. After his death King Levves tooke it againe to himselfe, and left it to his Sonne Charles the Eight, from which time forward Aquitaine or Gasconie, whereof Poictou is not the least part, continued euer since under the power and might of the Kings of France.

Ancient Inhabitants.

The ancient Inhabitants of this Countrie were called by Cæsar, Strabo and Plinie Pictones, by Ptolomie Pectones, by Ammianus Marcellinus Pictavi, Ausonius calleth this Province Pictonica Regio, and In Notitia Provinciarum Civitas Pectavi, or Pectavi in Aquitania 2. or 7. Viennensi, now a dayes it is called in French Le pais de Poictou.

Neere unto the Pictones, Plinie placeth also the Agesitanes, of whose memoriall, there are yet some remnants left to this day, in the village of Aigounois, not farre from S. Maxent, lying upon the river of Severe. Therefore those erre greatly, which place the Aginnates, among the Agesitanes. Seing these two people, dwelt at least fiue daies journey one from an other.

Townes. Poitiers.

The Capitall, and Royall City of this Countrie is called in Latine Pectavia, by Ptolomie and Antonine Augustoritum, & in French Poictiers, situated in a very pleasant place, among hills; but with a ridge descendeth into a plaine, which place they call Franchée. It is one of the greatest Cities in all France, but now a great part of it, lieth voyd without inhabitants, having Meddowes, Vineyards, and Plowe-lands within the Circuit of it. The river Clain traverseth almost round about it, making some small Iles, and at last falleth into the Vienne. It is a very famous Vniversitie, especially for the Imperiall lawe, which wil giue place to no Academie in France, but onely Paris, having bene founded by King Charles the Seuenth, in the yeere of our Lord 1421. whereof Iulius Scaliger in his description of townes writeth thus.

Si studium est anima: veniunt à corpore vires,
Galliaque à meritis poscit utrumque sibi.
Hæc studiis, alia belli exercentur amore:
Pictavium est animus, cætera corpus erunt.

The antiquitie of this towne is seene by the Theater, the Palace of Galean, and the arches of the Aqueducts, to leade the water by pipes, from farre places into the Conduicts, & Fountaines of the towne, which they call yet Arceaux de Parigne, sure testimonies of the Romans commaund over these people.

Some giue out, that this city should haue bene first founded by the Successours of Agathyrsus, and Gelonus Hercules Sonnes, which were called by the Poets Picti.

POIC: TOV PICTAVIENSIS COMITATVS

Miliaria Gallica communia.

Miliaria Germanica communia.

Amstelodami excudit Judocus Hondius.

Picti. For this people being driuen out of their natiue Countrie; by reason of their inteſtine broiles, came and ſetled themſelues in England, where they did ſo mightely encreaſe, that they were forced to leaue their natiue ſoile & ancient habitations, and to ſeeke out new: therefore they tranſported themſelues from thence by ſhipping into France, leaving the memorie of their name in this towne, and Countrie.

But ſome are of an other opinion; ſeing it is manifeſt in Pomponius Mela and Plinie, that the remembrance of the Picts, were in this place, long before they arriued here out of England.

A Biſhopprick. This Epiſcopall Seate commendeth much this Citie, for the reverend memorie of the name, and merit of S. Hilarie the Biſhop thereof, a man of ſingular learning, pietie & conſtancie, who like a moſt invincible champion oppoſed the dangerous faction of Arrius, and refuted mightely his damnable hereſie, with a moſt profound judgment and eloquence in his twelue bookes of the Trinity, which as a remembrance to his immortall praiſe he hath left behinde him. The judiciall Court of Poictou is gouverned by a Preſident, and two Lieutenants, the one is for Civill, and the other for Criminall cauſes. The Court of juſtice.

Niort. To this Court the Benches of many other townes muſt adreſſe themſelues, yea Poictiers it ſelfe. Niort alſo with the Caſtlewike thereof belonging to it, where there are held three braue yearely Marts for all Poictou. Fontenay Le Conte under the Caſtle, and Walls whereof the riveret Vendée runneth which ſometimes ſwelleth ſo high, that it overfloweth the Countrie round about Fontenay, and the adjacent territoires. Alſo Luſigna, where there is a very ancient Caſtle; commonly called Meluſine-Caſtle, &c. Mont-morrillon, Chaſtelleraud, La Baſſe Marché, Dorat, S. Maxent and others, to theſe maye be added Sivray, which of late yeares was made a Seneſchallſhip having a ſtronge Caſtle in it. Vnto Poictou belongeth alſo the Principate of Talmont, ſo called (as ſome ſay) Talon du Monde, that is, the VVorlds heele. Fontenay. le Conte. Luſigna.

Rhoche Sur-Ion. Alſo the Principate of Roche Sur-Ion, belongeth to the Royall houſe of Bourbon. Chaſtel Heraut hath the titel alſo of a Dukedome, ſeated upon the Vienne.

Vicounties. The Vicounties are Tovars upon the Tou, alſo Broſſe, Bridieres, & Roche-chovard. There are diverſe other townes, and Lordſhips ennobled with the title of Baronies, as namely, Manilers, where they take every yeere great ſtore of Saulmons, Shads, and Cod, whereof they make Stockfiſh, and ſend them into diverſe countries. Alſo Partenay, S. Maxent, Melle, Chizay, Chauvigny, Luſſac, Breſſuyre, Chazon, Chaſteneray, S. Meſnin, S. Gilles, Chaſteaumur, Les Sables, & Aulonne S. Hermine, and Montaigu, being a towne with a Caſtle in it, where there is much ſalt made, Mirebeau, La Motte, S. Beray, Vouvant, S. Hilaire, Mortemer, Luzaz, S. Savin, L'Iſle Iourdan, S. Benoiſt du Sault, Bour-neuff, Meroil, Mervant, Brige, Vouver, Villetaignaix, and diverſe others.

There hath bene alſo heretofore a towne in Poictou called Limonum, as appeared by Antonins Iourney, when he went from Bourdeaux to Auguſtodunum. Ptolomie nameth it Limonon, and In Tabula Itineraria, Lomounum. Many Learned men are of the opinion, that this was Auguſtoritum, or Poitiers. It is mentioned three times in the Commentaires of Hirtius. In ſome bookes it is written Lemovicum, againſt the credit and authority of ancient Manuſcripts.

Hereabouts was fought that memorable Battle of Poictiers, wherein Edvvard (of immortall memorie) the Blacke Prince of England, with a handfull of wearied Souldiers, being not aboue eight thouſand men, encountred King Iohn of France, and overthrew his Army the flower of France, conſiſting of 40000. men. In which Battle were ſlaine, 52. great Lords, ſeuenteene hundred knights, Eſquires, and Gentlemen, bearing coates of armes. Among the great ones there fell that day. Peter de Burbon Duke of Athens, Lord high Coneſtable of France, Iohn Clermont, Lord Marſh. Georg de Charney, Lord great Chamberlaine, and Sr. Reynold Camian who bare that day the Oriflambe, or grand Standard of France, & as many others, as made up the former account, and for common Souldiers, there lay dead in that place aboue ſixe thouſand. The liſt of priſoners taken that day were theſe, Iohn King of France, Philip his Sonne, afterward Duke of Bourgoine, the Archbiſhop of Sens, Ieames of Burbon Earle of Ponthieu, Iohn of Artois Earle of Eu, & Charles his Brother Earle of Langueville, Charles Earle of Vendoſme, the Earles of Tankerville, Salſburch, Naſſavv, Dampmartine & La Roche, within many other Lords, knights, Eſquiers, and Gentlemen to the number of about two thouſand, beſides 8000. private Souldiers, which were taken in this Battle, and a hundred Collours. The Battle of Poitiers was fought the 19 of September. Anno 1356 See Iaudo Serres in the reigne of Iohn of France & M. Speed in the reigne of Edward the Third King of England.

This Countrie is watered with the Clain, the Vienne, the two Sevres, the Vendée & ſome others, which furniſh the inhabitants with abundance of delicate Fiſhe. Rivers.

I cannot omitt to ſpeake ſomewhat of the Amphitheater in Poitou, neere unto the village Dovve, which was made in ſuch a manner, by the cunning and art of man, as if nature her ſelfe had formed it. It is wholly cutt out of a hollow hill, and wrought without any externall matter of Ciment, Chawlke, Timber or Stone. The whole deſcription of this mount and Amphiteater, is credibly related by Levine Keerſmaker, heretofore Burroughmaſter of Zerrickſea in Zealand, and is to be read in Iuſtus Lipſius his booke of the Amphitheaters without Rome, Chap. 6. who addeth that Dovve muſt haue bene heretofore more then a village, as may evidently appeare by the old peeces of the ancient highway, which went from this towne to Pontus Cæſarianus, now called Pont du Sey. Part of which way is yet to be ſeene to this day, but the greateſt part thereof is ſpoiled & broken, and the ſtones taken up for other uſes. About halfe a mile from Poitiers, upon the Kings highway, as ye goe to Bourges, there is a great foure-ſquare ſtone, which is ſupported by fiue other ſtones, for which reaſon they call it Pierre Levée, upon which is engraven this Diſtick: A huge ſtone.

Hic lapis ingentem ſuperat gravitate Coloſſum
Ponderis, & grandi Syderamole petit.

Touching the Spirituall ſtate of this Countrey, ye muſt note, that there are three Biſhopricks, all belonging to and ſtanding under the Arch-Biſhop of Tolouze, as namely, the Biſhop of Poictiers, who hath 27. Abbeys under him, the Biſhop of Luçon or Luſſen, who hath tenn, and the Biſhop of Mailleſay, having foure Abbeys under him. The Peſants in this Countrey haue a kinde of pedlers-French and a ruſticall ſpeech amoug themſelues. He that truſt them leaſt, is wiſeſt. They are giuen to riotouſneſſe, ſtrife & contentions, and for a trifle will goe to lawe one with an other: they canne playe alſo at Legier de main and of foure make fiue. But the Inhabitants in the townes are of a farre different humour: for they are men of underſtanding, curteous, affable, free-hearted and bountifull, ennemies to diſſimulation, deceit, and couſenage, lovers and honorers of learning and diſcipline, and the Nobility & Gentrie are conſiderate, provident, hardie and generous men. Manners of the Inhabitants.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE COVNTRY OF XAINTOIGNE.

THE Countrie of Xaintoigne, called in Latine Santonia from the ancient Inhabitants thereof the Santones, (or Xaintongeois) hath on the North Poictou, on the East Angoumois, and Perigorte, on the South the river Garound, and on the West the Ocean, and the Iles of Oleron, where there are great store of Hares, and Connies.

Name.

Site.

Wee reade in the Authour of the Ephemerides of the Gallike warrs, that the limits of the Santones (or Xaintongeois) were heretofore larger, and that they were not much lesse, than the Tolosates (or those of Tolouze) and that in their great wars against Cæsar, the Assembly of the Princes of Gallia, commaunded them to bring up twelue thousand men, when as the Pictones (or Poictevins) levyed but eight thousand, and the Lemovices (or Limosins) tenne.

Fertility.

Xaintonge aboundeth in Corne, and Wine, and is one of the best Countries in France, in so much that they send forth their commodities into Spagne, England, and other Countries. The ancient habitants were the Santones. Cæsar and others make mention of them, in the first Gallike warrs, in some coppies wee read Xantones, but in his second booke Santoni, and in his third booke of the Civill warrs Santonæ, if it be not a fault escaped. Strabo calls them Santoni, Ptolomie Satones in stead of Santones, as Stephanus writeth them. Plinie honoureth them with the title of Libertie, in in his 19. Chapter: & Ammianus Marcellinus rankes them among the chiefest of the Gaules. By Gallen Santonia when he wrot of the Santonick herbe which tooke its name from hence. Civitas Santonum, Cité des Xaintongeois is called in Notitia Provinciarum Galliæ, L'Evesché des Saintes, the Bishoprick of Saintes. Thus much for the ancient Inhabitants.

Townes.

Saintes.

The principall City of this Countrie is Saintes, founded by the ancient Gaules, which in ancient times was called Mediolanium Xantonum, or Santonum: by Antonine Mediolanum Santonum, upon his way from Bourdeaux to Auton. In Tabula Itineraria it is corruptly called Mediolanum Saneon, by Strabo & Ptolomie Mediolanium, and by Stephanus Mediolanum. After this People was subdued by Cæsar and the Romane Captaines, the name of this City was changed. There are many things which shew the antiquity of this towne. As first many peeces of the ancient walls, which are seene yet here and there. Secondly the foundation, and ruines of the Amphitheater, which is answerable to that of Perigeux, neere unto Saint Etropus Church. Thirdly upon Charent-bridge before the towne, where there is a very ancient Arch, upon the one side whereof are engraven these words: CÆSARI NEP. DIVI IVLII PONTIFICIS AVGVRI. and on the other side are diverse letters, which are so defaced, that one cannot read the meaning of them. Finally by the ruines of some Aqueducts & Conduits of Fountaines, which ledd the water into the towne now broken. This Citie is called by Ausonius in his 13. Epistle Santonus, & in his 14. and 18. Epistles Santones. It is seated upon the pleasant river of Charent, whose Source, or spring-head beginneth in a place called Charemac, betweene Limoges and Angoulesme. It is an Episcopall Seate, & hath had, as Belleforest counteth, 53. Bishops. S. Eutropus was sent thither first by S. Clement, who having converted this people to the Christiã faith, was afterward martyrized under the Emperour Domitian: & the last Bishop (as Belleforest saith) was Tristand de Biset. There is in it a monasterie of Nunns, dedicated to the Virgine Marie by Geffrey Count of Saintoigne, and Agnes his lady in the yeere 1047. The thirtith Bishop of Xainctes was called Pierre de Consousant, who built the Episcopall house, and Anno 1200. reedifyed the walls of the Cathedrall Church.

Rochell.

The other townes are Rochell; S. Iean d'Angely, Loygaire, Archaut, Pont Loublese, Blaye, Taillebourgh, Iarnac, Barbesieux, Iosac, Marennes, Soubize and Brouage. The city of Rochell called in Latine Rupella, is seated in one of the fertillest Countries of France, upon an arme of the Sea, where it ebbs and flowes up to it twise a day. It was built sixe, or seuen hundred yeeres agoe, by the Kings of France; because of the site & the commodiousnesse of the haven; & to curbe the Pirates, which troubled all the Armorick Coast, for it hath a very good port, and a braue roade for shipping to ride in, and indeed is a place impregnable, & so strong, that it is impossible to be gott but by famishing. On the South side, it is almost all fortified with a Gulfe of the Ocean Sea, on the North side of it, is nothing but Marshes, ouerflowne with water (which for this reason are good for the making of Salt, (cõmonly called Salines.) The other parts are fortifyed with Walls, Moates, Towres, Turrets, and stronge Bulwarkes, euery one of them, having their seuerall names; so that they can bringe no Canon to batther them. This towne was commaunded in ancient time by an English Gouvernour; but afterward was brought under the obedience of the French King by the Citizens rebellion, who droue the English out of it; for which cause Charles the Fifth, Anno 1562. gaue those of Rochell many fine priviledges, aswell concerning maritimate affaires, as for the choosing of a Major, and a shrife out of the bodie of the Citizens, for the politick gouvernment of the towne, and for this reason, no strang Gouvernours shall be imposed upon them, or troubled with any garnison, having also this priviledg, that no citadell or castle shal be built within their towne.

The siege of Rochell.

Rochell (anno 1573.) was besieged by Henry de Valois, Duke of Anjou afterward King of Poland & France, & endured one of the hardest bloudiest & most memorable Sieges, as hapned in many ages. In which the Besiegers thundred with their Canon upon the towne; both by Sea and by Land, made many furious attemps & assaults, poured in showres of Arquebusades among them, had scalling ladders, & by sapping, and mining blew up the Bulwarks. In Briefe used all the force and violence as possibly they could: but was as brauely defended by the besieged as assaulted, for men, weemen, and children (as feareleſſe) ran to anſwere all alarms and aſſaults of the Ennemie, ſtopped the breaches, encountred & tumbled downe the firſt that came to enter, and beate them back againe into their trenches, and oftentimes ſallied out after them many times with good ſucceſſe, which did ſo wearie them with continuall alarms, and ſallies, that they tooke noe reſt night nor day, and having ſtood out nine deſperate aſſaults (which were as courariouſly repulſed as giuen) at laſt the Ambaſſadours of Poland on the 17. of Iune, came to fetch Henry Duke of Anjou, whome the States of their Kingdome had choſen to be their King, ſo that by this meanes God wrought the deliverance of the City of Rochell, after they had ſpent almoſt all their victualls, and amunition of warre, and loſt many hundreds of men: and ſo the Kinge by the articles of peace formed in the manner of an Edict, graunted thoſe of Rochell, Montauban, Niſmes, and other townes the free exerciſe of their religiõ. This ſiege laſted from the beginning of March, till the ſeuenteenth of Iune fallowing, and after an exceſſiue charge, & the loſt of aboue 20000. men ſlaine upon ſervice, aſſaults, and dyed with ſickneſſe, was freed, the towne having endured in one month 13000. Canon ſhott. But which is moſt remarqueable, and miraculous, when the Souldiers and people were almoſt famiſhed for hunger, the Lord muſtered up an army of Muſcles & other Shellfiſh & ſent them into the haven of the towne which did abundantly relieue them; ſome imagine that this was cauſed by the thundring noize of the ordnance: howſoeuer God neuer forſakes his in their greateſt diſtreſſes. Rochell hath a Preſidiall Seſſion with Counſellours and Officers for the adminiſtration of Iuſtice.

Miraculous work of God.

Saint Iean d'Angeli.

S. Iean d'Angeli is a fine towne lately built, and is one of the principaleſt, and the beſt compacted in Xaintoigne. It tooke this name from an Abbey dedicated in the honour of S. Iohn, whereof the foundation was layd in the reigne of King Pepin, who kept his Court in the palace of Angeri (for there is but one letter changed in the termination of this word) ſeated upon the river Boutonne in the territoire of Aulnis. It is reported (if ye will giue credit to it) that ſome religious men, coming from the Holy land, brought into this place (as they ſay) S. Iohn Baptiſts head, upon whoſe coming the King obtayned a great victorie ouer his Ennemies; in acknowlegment whereof, he founded in this place where his owne palace of Angeri ſtood, an Abbey, & called it after S. Iohns name, and there putt into it Religious men to ſerue God, allowing them good meanes & revenews. In ſo much that a great many people came flocking thither, which by litle & litle built this towne, which now ſtands there at this preſent, and calling it after S. Iohns name hath euer ſince kept the ancient name. This hapned about the yeare of our Lord 768. when as King Pepin had warrs with Gaifer King of Aquitania, whome he vanquiſhed, as appeares by the ſtorie of the foundatiõ of this Abbey. This towne was beſieged by the Duke of Anjou 1569. and after it held out two months, it was yeelded upon compoſition ſigned by the King, that they ſhould march out vvith bagg, and baggage, vvith their armes, horſes, and flying Colours. By how much this famous ſiege was followed and as couragiouſly defended, by ſo much is it the more remarkable, for the raſhe and ſudden breach of faith and promiſſe which his majeſty had ſolemnely made. For the hiſtorie noteth, that he loſt aboue tenn thouſand men before it, & fiue or ſixe & twentie Gentlemen of the ordnance, all ſlayne upon their dutie, who had ſhott upon the towne aboue fiue thouſant Canon ſhott, and the many runawayes, that at laſt his great army was ſo weakned that it was not aboue 18. or 20. thouſand men. Pont Loubleſe, or Ponts is a towne which lieth foure miles from *Saincte*s. It is devided into two parts, the Vpper and the Lower towne, and that part which is called S. Vivian lieth now almoſt deſolate; becauſe that the Iewes, who dwelt in it heretofore, having hung up in deriſion a Crucifix upon the Hoſpitall, the Lord thereof deſtroyed them without any pitie. The other part of the towne on the North ſide is called Les Haires, and S. Martin is embelliſhed with many Churches, & Convents of White and Grey Fryers, whoſe Convent was founded by a Lord of the ſame place, called Regnaut in the time of Charles the Fifth. But the Fryers Cloiſters of S. Benedictus Order, and of S. Iohns of Ieruſalem were founded by Guy of Angouleſme. It hath three Pariſhes, & three Hoſpitalls, whereof two of them are for the entertaynment of ſtrangers, and the other for the Natiues of this Countrie: the revenews whereof had wont to be employed in the maintenance of Schooles. There are under the juriſdiction of Ponts, two and fiftie Pariſhes, and two hundred and fifthie Fee-farmes, belonging to Noble and Gentlemen. The Meddalls found there buried under the bottome of a pillar, ſhew evidently the antiquitie of this place, about the inſcriptions whereof, were written upon the one Divus Cajus Iul. Cæſ. Imperator, & upon the other ſide Aelius Pontus Nepos Pomp. Mag. Tumul. ſo that it is credible, that this Caſtle and Towne bore the name of Aelius Pontius, and that in all appearence Anthoni de Pont Lord of this place was deſcended from the Romans: beſides, there were ſome ancient chartres kept in it, wherein were written theſe wordes, Armadus Vlnerius Pontius & Anabalda Vxor, Diis Volent. and Albinus Coſſejus Pontius Filius Anab. Vlneri. D. A. Pont. and Helheida Vxor hic jacent. moreouer, Ecmoratus, Comai D. A. Pont. Egilda Filia Brenni Vxor. Howſoeuer, it is verely thought, that theſe ancient Romans tooke their name from Ponts, or bridges in regard of the number of them which were made over the river Seugne under this towne, & for a memoriall thereof, there is yet ſeene in one of the arches the armes of the Lords of Pont, which are three bridges Or, in a field Geules upon a Scutchion Argent. Blaye is more anciẽt then any towne in this Countrey: for Auſonius calleth it Blavia militaria, as beingh a ſtrong fortreſſe for the Romiſh garniſon. It bore the title of a Caſtle, before the French inhabited Gallia. The Lord of this place was that mighty & vaillãt Palatine Rolland, who liued in the time of Charles the great. This Charles built a Church in it, & named it S. Romans. Neere vnto the Port Santongeois lieth alſo the towne of Taillebourg or Bourg, which is reaſonable faire, & well ſeated. Barbeſieux is about nine miles from *Saincte*s, and fiue from Angouſleſme, from Coignac and from Ponts. It was in times paſt a very faire towne, and well fortified, as appeares by the ruines of the walls, ſituated in a fertill place though it lay aloofe from the river. There are in this towne two Pariſhes, the one is called S. Mathevvs, the Church whereof was heretofore dedicated to the Virgin Mary: the other S. Euſtachius. It hath a faire Caſtle in it, which was built by one of the great Grandſires of the Counts of Rochefault, not long ſince; becauſe that from this houſe the Lords of Barbeſieux are iſſued. Brovage is a ſmall towne, lying foure ſquare, built upon a marſh, wonne from the Sea. it is much noted for the abundance of Salt, which is made there. This place being beſieged by the Duke of Mayenne, the 22. of Iune 1577. was yeelded up upon compoſition, and they marched out of it, with their armes, bagg and baggage, & ſo remayneth at the devotion of the Conquerour. There is alſo the great Bourrough of Marans defended with a ſtronge Caſtle. This place retayneth the name of the ſoile, being built upon marſhie ground, where they make a world of Salt. The river of Sevre runneth by it ſo that they may with great eaſe bring their commodities to Rochell, conſidering alſo the Sea flowes up to the very Caſtle. The Saintongeois, make much money of their corne, which the Spaynards feth from them every yeare by marchants which ſells it to them. Rochell is very rich, becauſe it lyeth ſo neere the Sea, and principally in regard of the great commerce and trading, which they haue with the Engliſh, and Flemmings that reſort thither.

The Territoire of BOVRDELOIS,
The Countrie of MEDOC, and the Provoſtſhip of
BORN.

PTOLOMEE placeth the Gaſcons in the Dukedome of Arragon in Spayne, and acknowledge none of them in his deſcriptions of France: but in their ſtead, addeth the Bourgeſois, and Vibiſques. At this day then all Gaſcognie is ſituated in France, and borders upon the Bizcains, ſo that their Countrie lyeth betweene Baionne, and Bourdeaux, in which the Auſſes, Taruſatois, Leſtorois, Bigorrois, Nitiobregois, inhabited; whoſe capitall towne is Agen, Commenges, Garotes, and Elauſates. The Countrie there is for the moſt part fruitfull, and among other commodities yeeldeth good ſtore of wine; having a ſweete, and a pleaſant aire. The principall Citie in it is Bourdeaux, which Charlemagne in his Teſtament, accounteth to be one of the Metropolitan Cities of the Romaine Empire. It is ſituated upon the edge of the Garrone, towards the Pyrenean Mountaines, which lye weſtward. Over againſt the River ſide, there lye very pleaſant hillocks, and ſmall hills full of fruitfull trees, & Vineyards. Among them there is a ſmall hill, which litle by litle aſſendeh upright, and lieth Southward of the Citie, adorned with a thick wood of Cyprus-trees, which ſcarcely containeth ſeven acres of ground. The Cyprus-trees are very rare in France, for which reaſon thoſe of Bourdeaux, doe eſteeme and glorie much of their Cyprus wood, which they have kept and mainteyned from antiquitie to this day: ſo that who ſo buyeth any Bourdeaux wines, he cannot depart from thence, before he hath from the Magiſtrates a Cyprus braunch, for which he muſt give a peece of money for every ſhip that departeth from thence. This Citie is ſeated not farre from the mouth of the Garonne, as Strabo ſaith: the Sea flowing into the Garonne, maketh there a Lake, that floweth and ebbeth as the Sea doth. Which the Poët Auſonius, who was borne in Bourdeaux commendeth much in his learned verſes, together with his Countrie, the Climate, and the Soile in ſaying.

Burdegala eſt natale, ſolum, Clementia cœli
Mitis, ubi & rigua larga indulgentia terræ.
Ver longum, brumæque breves, juga frondea ſubſunt.

The walles of the towne have many times beene enlarged eſpecially in the yeere 1302. There is a fine ſtreete within Bourdeaux, ſurnamed the Wolfe-ſtreete, becauſe the Wolves fell into it Anno 582, which retaineth ſtill the name from them. There are in it at this day two famous Collegiall Churches, whereof one is the Metropolitan, twelve Parriſh Churches, eight Cloiſters of Moncks, a Nunnes Convent, and a Colledge of Ieſuits, which Francis Boulonois in the yeere 1573 inſtituted and founded. The Palace of Galienus, which ſeemeth to have taken the name from Galienus Auguſtus, is there yet to be ſeene: as alſo the deſolate, and ſmall remainders of the Amphitheater, heretofore famous. Vinetus, who was an eye-witneſſe of it ſaith, that it was environned with ſixe walles, whereof the outmoſt was the higheſt, and the inmoſt the loweſt, being 86 foote one from an other; the intervall, or diſtance within, had on both ſides a path, containing the ſpace of 224 feete in length, and 140 in breadth. The Amphitheater ſtood without the walls of Bourdeaux ſome 400 paces. The Palace of Safegard called Tutelæ, lay without the walls of the Citie, neere unto the River of Garonne: but the walls of the Citie being made greater the Palace was encloſed in it. Some thinke that it was an open Temple, & from the marke of the name, they gather that it was the Temple of the Tutelar God. Puy Pauline, tooke his name from Pontius Paulinus, the Diſciple of Auſonius, who was deſcended of the Illuſtrious famillie of the Paulins and Leontins. Hereupon Sidonius wrot a verſe in the commendations of Burgus. Auſonius maketh mention alſo, that there was a ſhippe wrights wharfe, and a haven that ran into the midſt of the Citie, when he ſaith:

Per mediumque urbis fontani fluminis alveum,
Quem Pater Oceanus refluo cum impleverit æſtu
Adlabi totum ſpectabis claſſibus æquor.

But now there is no markes remaining of this haven, unleſſe it be at the mouth of the ſmall River Peuga, where on each ſide thereof there ſtandeth a high towre, unto which heretofore a great chaine was faſtned, which is yet to be ſeene, and which was layd over unto the gate called Caillou. At this day there is no haven runneth into the Citie of Bourdeaux: ſeing the Garonne ſerveth in ſtead thereof. Now the Fountaine Divona is wholly dryed up, and no remainders thereof to be ſeene.

There is no Countrie in France, that aboundeth more in excellent wines than this: theſe wines are called there by the inhabitants, Vin de grave, for grave ſignifieth ſand, or ſandie ground. Now the land, which lyeth under the Citie, where theſe excellent grapes grow, is called grave, becauſe it is very ſandie. There are other wines beſides, as le Lermont, and de la Baſtide. The Garonne runneth through & watereth Bordeaux, and ebbeth and floweth more then 50 paces above the ſaid Citie. The Peuge and Diviſe being Rivers of no great importance, I will paſſe by. The Magiſtrates which are commonly called Jurats, together with the chiefe of their Senate the Maire gouverne the Republicke: theſe Jurats were in former times 324 in number, but afterward according to the number of the Countries belonging to the Citie twelve. This is the Seate of the Kings Parliament, which was firſt held there in the yeere 1351, upon the 12 day of November, upon which day they were all ſworne, to obſerve the Lawes and faſhions of the Pariſian Senate.

And it was ordained in this Parliament, that the Provinces of Bordeaux, Vaſatois, Agenois, Condomois, Londes, Cohors, Armeniois, Guercy, Limogois, Prigort, Angouleſme, Santoigne, and of Rochell, ſhould receive their Lawes and Statutes from thence. But afterward the Provinces of Armenois, Augeuleſme, Rochell and the greateſt part of Cohors fell of, & ſeparated themſelves. There was in this Citie heretofore an Epiſcopal Sea, but now is become an Arch-Epiſcopall, flouriſhing with the dignitie Metropolitan. The Univerſity of Bordeaux, was by the order of the Pope Eugenius fonnded after that of Toloiſe, and was confirmed and adorned by Lewes King of France with divers priveledges, anno 1472. & for the glorie thereof, was ſimply named the Schoole of Gaſcognie.

Thoſe of Bordeaux had from Charles the 1x. the right of keeping a Marte, or Faire, which they freely keepe, as well as thoſe of Lyons twiſe a yeere, to wit, in the month of March, and in October, which laſteth 25 dayes. To relate the acts, that thoſe of Bordelois have done, belongeth rather to a Hiſtorieographer than to a Coſmographer, therefore wee will paſſe by them in ſilence: onely we will mention of this, that Tetricus one of the 30 Tyrants in the time of Galienus was Elected Emperour by the Preſident of this Citie, and a purple robe put upon him, which was accounted high treaſon. By the warres of the Vandals, Goths, Sarrazins and Normans, the ſaid Citie was oftentimes deſtroyed and burnt, for which cauſe it is now not ſo fine, and bewtifull as it would have beene if theſe diſaſters, had not hapned to it, as Auſonius mentioneth. In the yeere 1479, there was an alliance made betweene thoſe of Bordeaux, and Burgus, namely that Bordeaux ſhould rule as a Prince over Bourg, & the other townes of that Province, which continued ſo, untill the laſt day, that the Engliſh commaunded it. Now in the times of warre, the Maire, and thoſe which were ſworne of the Councill of Bordeaux, chooſe ſome from out among their Burgeſſes, who ſhould be Gouvernours, & Commandours of townes, and Caſtles, and this was the cauſe, why the townes of Blaye, Bourg, Libourne, S. AEmilians Church, Chaſtillon, Cadillac, and S. Macaries Church were called daughters of the Citie of Bourdeaux.

Blaye, it is a very ſtrong towne, lying on the right ſide of the Garonne, 12 miles diſtant from the mouth of it, and 7 miles from Bourdeaux: there ſtand continuall centinells, or watch-men night and day upon a high towre, which beholdeth farre and neere, what is done upon the Garonne, & if any Ennemies ſhips come in, they ſhoote at them with their Canon as farre as poſſibly they can reach, for the River there is 2200 paces over. Burgus ſeemeth in formes times to have beene called Ebromagum, for it was built in the forme of a Bourg, or a Caſtle with publick Barnes, and afterward was ſtrengthned, and enlarged with walls, and turrets, by Pontius, Leontius, and Paulinus. It got the name of Bourg, for they called thoſe Bourghs, and Caſtles, which were fortifyed, and provided with all manner of graine, and neceſſarie proviſions for the time of warre. Libourne lyeth juſt in that place, where the two Rivers Dordoigne, and the Lilie runne into an other: when there was any infection of the plague in the great townes then they uſed to hold the Parliament of Bourdelois here. It is a new towne, for Froſſard maketh firſt mention thereof. In Bourdelois lyeth alſo Le pays entre deux Mers, Medoc, Le pays de Buch, and Le pays de Fronſac: being a land which lyeth betweene two Seas, and is a very fat, and a fertill Soile, lying betweene the Garonne and the Dordaigne. Theſe two Riyers, becauſe of their greatneſſe are called by the Inhabitants Seas: upon this ground is ſituated the townes S. Macari, Libourne, and Medoc, all which belong unto the Parliament of Bourdelois.

The Countie of Medoc, containeth the Land, which lyeth betweene Bourdeaux, the Sea, & the Garonne. It is almoſt all ſands, neere unto ſome Marſhes, and lyeth ſo low, that oftentimes it is overflowne, therefore it is not ſtraug, that the Shores of Medoc is daylie waſhed away, & the houſes of the Inhabitans in time will be eaten away, and ſwallowed up by the Sea.

Upon Medoc boundeth the Pays de Buchs, which beareth the title of a principate. Le pays de Fronſac, is a Marquiſate, and taketh the name from the towne, and Caſtle Fronſac, which Charlemagne built, when he made warres upon Hunold, Duke of Gaſcognie, and expulſed him.

THE DESCRIPTION OF LANGVEDOCKE.

NTO Gallia Narbonnenſis or Narbon, which was alſo formerly called Gallia Braccata (from the long fronzes or ſloppes which the inhabitants had wont to weare) belongeth Languedor, Provence, Daulphiné and Savoye.

Name. The name Languedoc cometh not from the Gothes (as ſome imagine) which after the Gothiſh ſpeech called it Langothia, but from the propertie of the ſpeech, they ſpeake there. For whereas the French men in affirming any thing anſwere Ouy, (that is, yea) theſe ſay Oc. Scaliger devideth the French tongue into the French and Tectoſagiſh or Provençall ſpeech. Againe he devideth the French tongue cõmonly into Ouy & Oc. The firſt are thoſe, which inhabit about Paris, & the adjacẽt Countries: the ſecond thoſe that now dwell about Toulouze, & Monpelier their capitall townes. The Frẽch tearme, the one the Cõmaund of the crooked ſpeech, the other the Gouvernment of the right ſpeech.

Bounds. Languedoc is environned on the Weſt ſide with Gaſcoigne, where the Garound runneth betwixt them both: on the North-weſt with Cadurçois, on the North with Alvernois and Forois: on the Eaſt with Daulphiné, and Provençaulx, ſo that all the Rhoſne belongeth to Languedoc, and the Parliament of Toulouze, & on the South with the Mediterranean Sea, and the Pyrenean mountaines.

This Countrie was very famous, eſpecially in the time of the Romans, for which cauſe it was more abundantly inhabited, then any other part of France, whereof I will ſpeake ſome thing of it in paſſing by, before I come to the particular Deſcription of the Situation of this Countrie, as it lies at this day.

Ancient Inhabitants. The ancient inhabitants of this Province were formerly the Volſſes, Arecomiques, Tectoſages, Septimanes, Decumanes, Atacins, Toloſates, Gabales, Albigeois, Velaunois, Conſeranois, Helves, Nemauſois, Aletois, Bezerois, Agatois, Lutevains, Magulannois, & Sontiates. The name of the Volſſes was very famous, and written after diverſe manners. For by Cæſar, Livius, Plinius, Silius, Mela and others, they were called Volſſes, by Strabo & Ptolomy Οὐολκοι, and in ſome of *Cæſar*s bookes are named Volgæ or Volgues. And by Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus Οὐολγοι. & by Auſonius in his deſcription of the Citie Toloſe, Belcæ, or Belſſes. Touching the Volgues we knowe there is a great concordance betweene the Greekiſh letters γ and κ, whereas they are writen by Dionyſius Οὔολγοι is ſuppoſed to be a fault, or at leaſt ought to be Οὔολκοι. Of the name Belſſes, which is found in Auſonius, there arẽ diverſe opinions, but in the laſt Edition it is thus written, Vſque ad Teutoſages primævo nomine Belcas.

A certaine learned man by name Elias Venetus witneſſeth, that in ſome coppies there ſtands, Panaque nomina Belgas.

And in an other

Paganaque nomina Belgas.

Beatus Rhenanus in his firſt booke of the High-Dutchies memorable Acts, corrects it thus:

Germanaque nomina Belgas.

For he had read in the eleuenth booke of the Gallike warrs, that Cæſar had underſtood by the Remes, that the moſt part of the Belgæ came from the High-Dutches, & in anciẽt times remouved over the Rhene, becauſe the land there was very fruitfull: in ſo much that they chaſed away the Gaules out of this Countrie: which as other things ſeemeth to be farre fetcht. For, what matters this riddle to the limites & bounds of the Tectoſages, & Narbonnois, which Auſonius placeth there? Ioſephus Scaliger in this firſt booke of his expoſition upon Auſonius Cap. 23. readeth:

Panaque nomina Belgas.

Now what the word Pagana and Pagi meaneth, he expoundeth very learnedly, ſo that the Bookes, wherein Primævo nomina Belcas is, ought to be rejected. For the Belcæ, as Auſonius, who was a French man, writeth, being perhaps ſpoken in the right ſpeech, are the ſame people, which are called Volgues, which at this day is not heard of among the vulgar people; unleſſe ſome will ſay, that this word Belcarie (are the Belces, which Auſonius mentioneth, & thoſe (I ſay) which others name Volgues) for that part of Narbonne or Languedoc, which Vinetus notheth; but Auſonius ſaith well in naming the Teutoſages, and, as others, Tectoſages

Primævo nomine Belcas;

Suppoſing that they were firſt called Belces, or Volces. There were two ſorts of Volces, the Aricomiques, and the Tectoſageois. Theſe people, which Pliny and Cæſar call Aricomiques are named by Ptolomy, Ἀρεκομικοὶ, and oftentimes by Strabo in his fourth booke Ἀρεκομισκοὶ, who inhabited the greateſt part of this Countrie, and whoſe natiue Soile was Narbon. Theſe were heretofore thoſe (as famous Ioſephus Scaliger noteth) which are now called Niſmes Vzetois, Magalanois, and Bezarrois. The Townes of the Nemenſois, Bezarrois, and Magalanois, and the territoire Vzets are placed in Notitia Provinciarum in the ſecond Vienne, which are now named Les Eveſchez de Numes, Mompeliers, Beſiers & Vſetz, which Pliny in his fourth booke, and Mela in his ſecond call Tectoſages, Strabo Τεκτόσαγες, & are once more ſo named by Plinie lib. 3. and by Livius 38. Alſo by Iuſtinus in his 32. booke of Trogus Pompejus, whoſe Forefathers (as he himſelf witneſſeth in his 43. booke, were borne in this Countrie of the Tectoſages, and in his journall calleth them Volce-tectoes, which ought to to be read, Volce Tectoſages and Tectogaſes in Auſonius. Τεκτόσαγες is by Stephanus as Ἄτεργξ Ἀσφαξ, where in the pages following he writeth Τεκτόσαγες ἔθνος Γαλατικὸν. ἔρεῖ) Τέκτοσάγης δίθεται, καὶ Τεκτοσάγαι, &c.

Let us now leaue this word-combate, and come to matters of greater moment. Languedoc then hath three principall townes in it, whereof ſome of them are Arch-Biſhopricks, and others Biſhopricks. The Arch-Biſhopricks are Tolouze, and Narbonne. Tolouze is not onely an Arch-Biſhoprick, but alſo the Parliament of whole Languedock, where the heigh court is held, & is beſides the chiefe Seneſchall-ſhip of Languedock. This Citie commonly called Tolouze is thus deſcribed by Auſonius:

Non unquam altricem noſtri reticebo Toloſam,
Cocti libus muris quam circuit ambitus ingens,
Perque latus pulchro pralabitur amne Garumna,
Innumeris cultam populis, confinia propter
Ningida Pyrenes, & pinea Cebennarum
Inter Aquitanas gentes & nomen Iberum.
Qua modo quadruplices ex ſe quum effuderit urbes,
Non ulla exhauſta ſentit diſpendia plebis,
Quos genuit cunctos gremio complexa colonos.

Tolouze. Tolouze is at this day (next unto Paris) the greateſt City of France, which was heretofore much larger and bigger, then it is now, as appeareth by Auſonius his verſes, and alſo by the 23 Epiſtle written to Paullinus, in which he calleth the ſame Quintuplex; that is fiue-fould, as if it had bene fiue townes. But it hath endured many ſhrod brunts, and miſeries, and their ancient glorie is (with others) much diminiſhed in the time of the doctrine of the Albigeois. The holy virgins Church, ſurnamed la d' Aurade, and that of Saint Quintins, as the Citizens report, were in ancient times the temples of Iupiter and Apollo. They ſay alſo that the ſtreet called Portbilier was ſo named in honour of the ſigne Aries, or the Ram in the Zodiack, as if on ſhould ſay Rams-gate, it may be ſo, but there is more certaintie of the antiquitie thereof by the ruines of the old Amphitheater and the Capitolium, that ſtand by the Inquiſition-houſes, for there is a round Caſtle, which Sidonius mentioneth in his ninth booke.

Tolouze was in old times the habitation of the Kings of the Gothes, according to the alliance, which was made betweene Conſtantius Patricius, and Vvallia King of the Gothes in the times when Theodoſius the ſeuenth, and Palladius were Conſuls, or Burrough-maſters.

There is in this city a famous Vniverſitie, where formerly all arts and ſciences flouriſhed, and where now there are very famous and learned men in the civill lawe, and other Profeſſours and Doctours of the chaire. From hence comes that old Proverbe (Aurum Tholoſanum) that men formerly was wont to uſe, when they would ſignifie that by the greateſt chance often lurketh the greateſt miſchance: for when the Romans under the conduct of their Conſul Q. Capio had invaded this towne of Tolouſe, and ſpoiled the Churches, and ſo become a great ſtore of gold: it hapned that howſoever had tucht any gold, was ſchrodely plagued with a moſt miſerable and deadly diſeaſe. Hereof jou may reade Aul. Cellius Noctium Atticarum Lib. 3. c. 9. and Strabo Lib. 4.

Next unto Tolouze for magnificencie Narbonne taketh place: from which Citie the whole Province is called Narbonnoiſe. This was the firſt Colonie of the Romans in all Europe. Cicero calleth it the Burrough and Caſtle of Italie. Plinie the habitation of the Decumains: it was alſo called Narbo Marcius, from Marcius one of the Conſuls of Rome, in whoſe time it was firſt inhabited. But others fetch this name from the old Souldiers of the Legion Martia. This City was alſo called Iulia Paterna; Iulia from the name of C. Cæſar Dictator of Rome; Paterna becauſe it tooke this name from Iulius Paternus, & not from Auguſtus the Sonne of Iulius. Auſonius in his Towne-regiſter verſifyeth thus of Nar-bonne.

Quis memoret Portuſque tuos Monteſque Lacuſque,
Quis Populos varios diſcrimine veſtis, & oris?
Quodque tibi quondam Pario de marmore Templum
Tanta molis erat, quantum non ſperneret olim
Tarquinius, Catuluſque, iterum poſtremus & ille,
Aurea qui ſtatuit Capitoli culmina Cæſar?
Te maris Eoi merces, & Iberica ditant
Aequora, te claſſes Libyca, Siculique profundi,
Et quicquid vario per flumina, per fretacurſu
Advehitur, toto tibi navigat orbe Καπήλος.

Sidonius Apolinaris mentioneth in the verſes following, the S. P. Q. Narbonenſis, that is the Councill, and people of Narbonne, wherein was engraven in a publick place, the antiquitie, greatneſſe, and magnificentie of this city, which he ſetteth forth in theſe verſes:

Salve Narbo potens ſalubritate,
Vrbe & rure ſimul bonus videri,
Muris, Civibus, Ambitu, Tabernis,
Portis, Porticibus, Foro, Theatro,
Delubris, Capitoliis, Monetis,
Thermis, Arcubus, Horreis, Macellis,
Pratis, Fontibus, Inſulis, Salinis,
Stagnis, Flumine, Merce, Ponte, Ponto;
Vnus qui venerare jure Divos
Lenæum, Cererem, Palem, Minervam
Spicis, Palmite, Paſcuis, Tapetis;
Solis fiſe viris, nec expetito
Naturæ auxilio procul relictis
Promens montibus altius cacumen.
Non te foſſa patens nec hiſpidarum
Objectu ſudium coronat agger;
Qui quod Cæſaribus ferax tuendis,
Felix prole virum, ſimul dediſti
Natos cum genitore principantes.

Auſonius

Ausonius in his Latin verses making mention of a lake or a meere, meaneth that which now is called L'Estang de Rubine, that is, Rubins poole, and Sidonius by the word Fluvius, the riuer Atois, which, as Ubius withnesseth, coming from the Pyrenean mountaines and passing by Narbonne, falleth into the Mediterranean Sea.

Episcopall Seates. Among the Episcopall Seates, there are some Capitall townes and chiefe places in this Province, As Gabales, Albigeois, Velaunois, Coseranois, and Albiens. The chiefe towne and Chiefe Townes. principall place of Gabales is Mimates, commonly called Mende de Civauldan, Albiens & Albinge is now simply called Alby, and Velaunois Velai, and Coseranois Coserans or Saint Ligier de Coserans, which is famous for the antiquity thereof. The principal place in Albiens is Vivarias, now called Albe des Helves. The others which are not Capitall townes are Nismes, Nismes. which is an old towne, as appeares plainely by the ruines of the ancient wall, which haue bene farre greater heretofore than they are now at this present: Thereabouts was an Amphitheater, which by the outward appearance was not much lesse than that of Verona. Before this Amphitheater, there was a Campus Martius, or a Combate-place, which (as that of Rome, is now built up againe, and serveth to an other use. That Sumptous Structure, called Le Cap Dieil was founded by Adrianus Emperour of Rome, in honour of his wife Glotina. It is built almost foure square, but in a forme more long then broad, & on the sides is supported with ten huge pillars; and on the fore and hindmost part but with sixe. The roofe is couvered with free stone, so that one maye walke upon the topp of it. The Church that standeth by the Fountaine, is built in a foure square forme; the sides whereof is borne up with two roes of pillars, of courious workemanship. There stand yet to this day the Eagles without heads, formerly the Armes of the Roman Empire, which is thought were puld of by the Gothes, in memoriall that the Roman Empire was now a body without a head, and that the power of their Emperours declining was now impotent and disjointed. Neere unto the walls of the old towne, stands an ancient edifice closse by the Fountaine called Tourremagne, built of small foure square stones, supposed to haue ben built first by the Romans. There are besides some ancient Statutes, and pillars with fine Epitaths engraven upon them: there stands one by the gate, called the Crowne-gate. This City is famous for the births of the Emperours Domitianus and Antoninus pius, the Philosopher. The Poole called by the Inhabitants La Fontaine, may rather be termed a Meere, and is happily the same which Ausonius mentioneth in his former verses, but some are of a contrarie opinion, and that it is not; the which coming from the adjacent hills, is ledd into the towne.

Three miles from Nismes lieth a bridge, Pont du Garde. called Pont du Garde, supported with three arches, so that men and beasts maye passe ouer it, and the water runn trough them. Betweene Saint Prives Church and Remolin there are yet some ruines, and peeces of the Aqueducts, which the Romans used to convey water with into Nismes.

Neere unto Nismes is Uset, which is called Vsez. also Utica and Usets. Also Lodeue Leva, or as some say Lodeve Luteva. S. Pont de Tomiers, Alet, and Montpelier called in Latin Mons Pessulanus, is a fine towne seated upon the top Montpelier. of a hill, about two miles from the Mediterranean Sea, having a very good and a wholesome aire, for which they haue a common proverbe, that there is none more healthfull, none more pleasant then this towne, no Citizens more civill, no soile more fruitfull, no Physicall herbes better, which allures Phisicians to come heither to practise Physick. For Nismes is an Vniversitie, which was erected in the yeare of our Lord 1216. just in that time, when the Sarracens were expulsed out of Italie. The Chancellour hath such autority & such respect giuen him, that when he walkes abroad the Schollars must attend him: whereof Rebuffus complained, saying that the often going out with him was an occasion of hindring his studdie. There are diverse colledges in this city, among which Collegium Papæ is held for the Chiefest, and was founded by Pope Urbanus, and provided with large revenewes. The Collegium Regium or Kings colledg was built by Henry the second King of France, and is a very braue one. The third is called College du Vergier, which breedeth the best Schollars, and the greatest number, who haue their free dyeth in it for ten yeares, and all things necessarie for their Studdies. Besides, there are these colledges called the Bezier, Bitera Septimanorum, Adge, or Agatha, Castres, Pamies, Mirepoix, and others.

The ſmaller townes are Beaucaire, Piſeaux, S. Gilles, Chaſteau Carry, Monteignac, Milant & others. Vnto Languedoc is annexed of late yeares the Dutchie of Foix, which had wont to be under Guienne. This Dutchie hath on the Eaſt Languedoc, on the Weſt the territoire of Commenges, on the North that of the river, & on the South ſide the Pyrenean Mountaines, which cauſe it to be barren, but yet nevertheleſſe, is rich in Iron mines, and Coale-pits. It taketh this name from the towne of Foix, which in regard of the antiquitie thereof is well knowne.

Foix. Site.

Apamiæ.

In this Dutchie lieth the Biſhoprick of Apamoie, and the Epiſcopall Seate Pamies it ſelfe, called in Latine Apamia, or abreviated Pamia. It is ſeated in a place, where the Lers and the Lagiere fall one into an other. Here was held the Councill of Epaunois in the time of Pope Celaſius the firſt, and in the reigne of King Sigiſmund; for the moſt of the Biſhops, which were preſent at this Councill dwelt hereabouts. The Synode of Eſpaume is called the ſixeteenth in Lib. 1. Diſtinct. 16. There are alſo ſome other townes, as Saverdun, and Maſeres, where their Counts dwell. Thoſe erre greatly, which ſuppoſe the Eluſatii to haue inhabited hereabouts.

The Arch-Epiſcopalitie

LYONS.

THE Arch-Biſhoprick of Lyons, or the Countrie, & Seneſchallſhip Lyonois, heretofore called Lugdunenſium Civitas, as it is named in Notitia Provinciarum, is bounded Nortward with La Breſſe, Eaſtward with Savoy, Southward with the Dauphiny & Languedoc, & Weſtward the Foreſt, & Auvergne, Here in former times the Seguſians inhabited, as Plinie, Ptolomee and Strabo witneſſe, and Cæſar nameth them Secuſianos, or Sebuſianos. The Metropolitan of this Territorie, is Lugdunum, for ſo this great, beautifull, and flouriſhing Citie was called by Tacitus, Plinius, Anthonius, and almoſt all Latine writers, Strabo nameth it Lugdunon, Ptolomee and Stephen Lugduna, Some derive this name from Lugure, others from Lucere, becauſe it ſtandeth upon a hill, as a Watch-towre making farre, and neere a lucent & ſhyning proſpect. Others againe, will have the name thereof fetcht from Lugdo King of Celtes. In an ancient Journall, which was made from Bourdeaux unto Ieruſalem, in the latter part thereof this Citie is named Lugdunum, which is interpreted in French: La Montagne deſirée de Lion: the deſired Mountaine of Lyons. But it ſeemeth thoſe ſearch the Originall of it further, which derive it from the Belgick, or Nether-dutch-word Luck, which ſignifyeth Fortune, ſo that Lyons ſhould have beene a Mountaine dedicated to Fortune. Erick the Monck in his 4 booke of the life of S. German, ſaith, that Lugdunum is as much to ſay, as Mons Lucidus, that is, a lightſome mount: and verſifyeth upon it in this manner.

On dit fort bien que du mot de lumiere,
Tire ſon nom le Lion François.
Qui luy fut impoſé autrefois,
D'autant que c'eſt une Montagne claire.

For Dunum among the ancient Gaules ſignifyeth a Mountaine, Peter of Avergne, Abbot of Cluny, lib. 4. Epiſt. 11. maketh mention of the ſaid Mountaine, ſaying: that afterward by Divine providence, thou haſt beene tranſported from the Hill of Vivaretz to the Mountaine of Lyons. And Seneca in his Comedie of Claudius the Emperour ſpeaketh thus:

Vidi duobus imminens Fluvius Iugum.

That is: I have ſeene upon two Rivers, a high Mountaine ſeated.

That this Mountaine cauſeth a very cloudie, and foggie aire, you may obſerve it in Sidonius l. 1. Epiſt. 8. By whome this towne was firſt founded, and built, it is uncertaine. But L. Munatius Plancus, enlarged it greatly, and from the Mountaine upon which it was firſt inhabited, remooved it into the plaine. In the dayes of the Emperour Auguſtus, the Romans planted a Colonie there, in the yeere of the foundation of Rome 711. Tacitus lib. 1. Hiſtor. and Plinie lib. cap. 18. calleth it a Colonie: for in a certaine ancient inſcription, wee reade, COL. AUG. LUG.

From that time forward this was alwayes accounted one of the chiefeſt Cities of the Gaules, and was in great eſteeme, and enjoyed the ſame priviledges & immunities as their neighbours did. For Plinie maketh the Seguſianos to be a free people, and Paul. 1. C. in his firſt booke Diſgeſt. Titt. chap. 15, compriſeth the Gauls of Lyons, and alſo of Viennes under the power of Italie. It was likewiſe no ſmall honour, and benefit to it, that Agrippa, ordainet that all wayes and paſſages ſhould be made from thence into France: he gave them alſo the priviledge of coining money, and there all tributs, and toules of Gaule were payd and received. Moreover, this tended much to the honour of it, that among all the townes of Gaule, a temple was built there in honour of the Emperour Auguſtus, with a fearefull Altar in it, as ſome fooliſh writers relate. Juſt there where the Arar and the Rhoane meeter together, of which temple Strabo maketh mention in his 4. booke. Paradinus ſpeaking of the Acient State of Burgundie, relateth that out of the ruines of this temple John Duke of Burgundie, built the cathedrall Church of Lyons, as appeareth manifeſtly by the ould marble ſtones, and the inſcriptions upon them. Of this Altar many Hiſtorians have made mention. Sueton in the life of Claudius, chap. 2. ſaith, that it was dedicated to Auguſtus in the yeare of the foundation of Rome 744, when Antonius Africanus, and Q. Fabius Maximus were Conſulls, which is likewiſe affirmed in the Epitome of Livius lib. 137. Dio alſo lib. 54. writeth, that in the dayes of Auguſtus, they celebrated their playes there, which were kept in his time. Sueton in his 20 Chapter maketh mention, that Caligula eſtabliſhed Comedies there, to ſee who could excell one an other in the eloquenteſt, and pureſt Latin, and Greeke tongues. In which Comedies he reporteth, that the Vanquished gave the prize to the Vanquishers, and that they were conſtrayned to make verſes to their praiſe; but thoſe which were not in ſome ſort applauded, should be defaced with a Spunge, or licked out with their tongues, if they refuſed to receive blowes upon the palmes of their hands with a Furular, or be ducked in the River, which Iuvenall likewiſe noteth in this verſe.

Qu'il ſoit paſle, & honteux comme l'homme mortel.
Foulant de ſes pieds nuds le Serpent venimeux:
Ou qu'il reßemble außi l'Orateur ſtudieux.
Qui doit le l'Endemain haranguer à l'autel.

Of this Altar Strabo writeth, and that ancient inſcription, which is to be ſeene at this day in this Citie upon the wall of S. Peters Church, which is this:

Ioui. O. M.
Q. Adginnius. Vrbici
Fil. Martinus. Seq.
Sacerdos. Romæ. &. Aug.
Ad. aram. ad Confluentes
Araris. &. Rhodani.
Flumen. II. Vir. in. Civitate.
Sequanorum.

What ſhall I ſay of other Inſcriptions, which are yet there to be ſeene? The Braſen table ſurpaſſing all others, which hath engraven in it the Oration, which Claudius the Emperour made upon the Citie whether it ought to be reſtored the Gaules or noe. He that deſireth to know further thereof, may reade Juſtus Lipſius his Commentarie upon the 11 booke of the Annalls of Tacitus, which a great perſonnage hath put into the Treaſure and Cellection of M^r. Smetius his inſcriptions. The old monument, and the magnificencie of this Citie, teſtifie ſufficiently, the ancient largneſſe as alſo the Temples, the triumphall Vaults, and the conduict-pipes thereof. And in the Forviere there are yet remaining ſome reliques of Forum Veneris Heretofore the nobleſt part of Gaule, was divided into five Lionnois, as is to be ſeene in the memories of the Provinces of the Gaules. Seneca in his 92 Epiſtle to Lucillius, lamenteth much the burning thereof, which hapned a hundred yeeres after the Colonie was planted there, and deploreth the loſſe, & dammage which it then ſuſtained by a fearefull fire. Nero the ſeventh yeere after this fire reedifyed & gave ſome helpe to this loſſe, as Tacitus writeth in his 16 booke of his Annalls. Herodian reporteth lib. 3. that this Citie was beſeiged, taken in, pilliged, and burnt againe by Severus, the Emperour, becauſe Albinus detained his Armie within it. Papirius Maſſonius writeth in his Annals, that by reaſon of the age of the Pope, Philippe le Bel, or the faire King of France brought the Citie of Lyons under his commaund. This Citie Lugdunum called Lyons, at this day is ſeated in a very pleaſant, and a commodious place, and is almoſt by nature invincible being fortified on the one ſide with two moſt fruitfull hills, and on the other ſide watered with the two Rivers the Arar, and the Rhoane, having in it magnificent Churches, and buildings, as well publick as private, and doth ſo flouriſh in trading, and riches, that it may truely be called the Metropolitan Citie of France, and as the heart, and Key of the Kingdome; by reaſon of the paſſages and wayes into Italie, Germanie, and other Countries. There is held in it, every yeere foure Marts, or Faires, unto which Merchants of diverſe nation doe reſort. In the time of Charles the ninth, when all France was in a combuſtion, and embroyled with civill warrs, he built there a Citadell, or Caſtle with much adoe, for the appeaſing of future troubles. More-over, the Arch-Biſhop keepeth here his reſidence, entituling himſelfe Primate of the French Clergie having 102 Biſhops under him. There is alſo a Seneſchallſhip, under whoſe juriſdiction belong Lyonnois, Foreſt, Matiſcon, & Belloiolezium, in which afterward there fell ſome ſmall alteration. Bernard Abbot of Clareval, giveth no ſmall commendations of the Church of Lyons. Indeed (ſaith he) every man agreeth, that the Church of Lyons, excelleth all the other Churches of Frante, aſwell for the dignity of the Sea, as for learning, and laudable inſtitutions: for where hath the reformation, cenſure, and rules of diſcipline beene ſo well kept and obſerved as there? good manners, mature Concills, ſage deliberations & authorite? the marks, of antiquitie? chiefly in Eccleſiaſticall functions, never liſning or giving way, to ſudden Novelties, neither would endure ever to be dishonored by the lightneſſe of youth. Iraneus a Greeke Authour was heretofore Biſhop of Lyons, who wrote 5 bookes againſt the impious opinions of the ancient Heritieks. Simphorian Campherius a Phyſician of Lyons hath written at large of the antiquitie, and originall of the Illuſtrious men and Biſhops, and other Authours of the Citie of Lyons, among which L. Plotinus Gallus was one, who taught Rhetoricke firſt at Rome, as Sueton ſaith, & under whome Cicero reporteth, that he and his brother Quintius learned firſt the foundations, and principes of the Latine tongue.

DAVLPHINE.

The bounds of Daulphine. The Etymologie.

DAVLPHINE, boundeth Southward upon Provence, Northward upon La Breſſe, where the Rhoane runneth betweene them, on the Weſt ſide lyeth the Conntie of Venaiſſin, & Eaſtward it butteth upon Piedmont and Savoy. It ſtandeth under the reſort of the Parliament of Grenoble, and taketh the name from Caſtello Delphini, that is in French Chaſteau Dolphin. This Countrie is not very fertill in all places, the Soile being not very good, for towards the Mountaines this Countrie is barren, and unfruitfull.

The Inhabitants.

The Inhabitants eſteeme much their libertie, ſaying they hold it from none, but God, and their ſword. They are couragious, and undaunted in warre, and in the times of peace laborious, & diligent about their affaires, and Negotiations: but are lightly deceived, and overreached by the craft, and ſubtility of their neighbours. The Countriemen and Peſants are rude, blockiſh, and clouniſh, having great and broad noſtrills. But the Gentlemen and Townſmen, are very courteous and civill, farre from pride, and arrogancie, recreative in their manners without any blemiſh to their gravities, quick-witted, capable of all manner of ſciences, eſpecially in the Mathematicks, and in the ſtudie, and ſearch of naturall things. In former ages beſide the Allobroges there inhabited here the Viennenſes, Caturiges, Ebrodunenſes, Segalaunois, Valentinois, Veconces, Deenſes, Gratianopolitani, Tricaſtini, Wapencenſes, and Bronnovy. The Citie of Vienne is ſo called in the memories of France, now the Arch-Biſhoprick of Vienne in Caturiges. The Colonie of the Viennois which uow is called Vienne is mentioned in the Oration of Claudius. They hold that at this day the name of the Hamlet of Charges, which lyeth upon Durance, not farre from Ambrun is the ſame, which Plinie, Ceſar, Strabo, and Ptolomee ſpeaketh of Κατὸεγες.

The Valentinois.

The Segulauni mentioned by Ptolomee, are thoſe of the Countrie of Valentinois, for Valence was accounted by Ptolomee the capitall Citie of Segalaunois, the Citie of Valence is now the Sea & Biſhoprick of Valence. The Vocontians are thoſe of the Countrie of Dié even to Vaiſon: the Vocontians are by Ceſar, Tacitus and Mela Ουοκοντιοι, by Ptolomee but unrightly, Ουοκόνδιοι. Juſtinus in his 23 Booke nameth the Vocontians, thoſe which dwell by Vots, as a manuſcript witneſſeth. Plinie calleth them Nation-Alliée, which Flaccus a Hiſtoriographer of the Romaine Feaſts, when he writeth touching the Triumphs of the Ligurians and Sallwvians, which at this day is called Le Peys de die juſque à Vaiſon, as is ſaid before. Ioſeph Scaliger nameth it Auguſta Dia Vocontiorum. Civitas Deenſium in the memories of France. The Biſhoprick de Die, and the Citie of the Gratianapolitans, now called the Biſhoprick of Grenoble. The Tricaſtins is ſo named alſo by Plinie and Livius, and their Citie Auguſta, and by Ptolomee τελκαστοὶ, & their towne ιυλιομαγος, as the ancient bookes, & the correcteſt copies call them. But at this day they are called the Biſhoprick of S. Antoni de Tricaſtin. In the records of France it is called alſo the Biſhoprick of Gaps, lyinh in Gapençois, and it is uncertaine, whether the Brannovians by the towne of Briançon were of theſe people or noe?

Chiefeſt townes.

The chiefeſt townes are ſeven in number, whereof two of them are Arch-Biſhopricks, namely Vienne and Ambrun, and the others five Biſhopricks, the reſt of the townes are of leſſe account. Vienne in former times was the capitall Citie of the Allobroges, which lyeth according to the opinion of Strabo 16 miles from Lions. Seneca likewiſe affirmeth the ſame in his Comedie upon the death of Claudius the Emperour. It lyeth upon the Rhoane. Auſonius nameth it Alpina. It is not onely at this daye an Arch-Biſhoprike, but alſo honoured with the title of a Dukedome. The opinion is, that the firſt Biſhop of it, was Creſcens the Diſciple of S. Paul. Mamertus was alſo Prelate of that place, who by the prayers of himſelfe, and others kept the towne from ruine and diſtruction, which he hath left unto poſteritie. Among the excellent men, which were borne, and bred here, the Hiſtoriographer Ado, who wrot the booke of Martyrs, was not accounted as the leaſt, witneſſe alſo the learned bookes of Claudius Mamercus, touching the ſtate of the ſoule, which are yet extant. It is reported that Pontius Pilatus lived here in exile; for there is yet a towre, which is called after his name, in which there is an old ruinous Statue or Image. Concerning the ancient quarrell and diſſention, betweene thoſe of Vienne and Lyons about the title of the Duchie, and the pre-eminence, you ſhall finde written in the booke of the hiſtorie of Tacitus. Sueton relateth alſo, that when the Emperour Vitellius ſat upon the Throne of Juſtice to give Lawes unto thoſe of Vienne, a Cock came firſt and light upon his ſhoulders, & afterwards leapt up to his head, ſo that the Diviners, who by foule fore-tould ſome augure, or ſignes to come, were not much deceived, in ſaying that it ſhould come under the power of ſome Gallican, that is, under the French nation, for afterward it is vanquiſhed by Anthonius, Generall of the Ennemies Army, borne at Toulouſe, who had given him as a ſurname in his youth Beco, which ſignifieth a Cocksbill. Vienne in the yeere 1543 ſuſtained great harme and loſſe by the overflowing and breaking in of the Rhoane. In honour of the Viennan Wine, we may freely report, that which Plinie in former times ſpake thereof: There is found now (ſaith he) a Wine-ſtock, which yeeldeth Wine of it ſelfe, which is not much unlike pitch, which maketh the Countrie of Vienne famous, and was firſt found by the people that dwelt by the Seyne, and the Swiſzers. Ambrun is environned with Mountaines, fertill in wines, fruits, and abundance of medicinall ſimples. In former ages the Arch-Biſhop Guilhelmus Ebrodunum, or Ambrum dwelt here, who by the commaund of Boniface the eight, compiled together the ſixth booke of Decretals. The Inhabitants reſpect their Superiours, and Prelats as Princes. The Kings of France have given many and large priviledges to them as the abſolute adminiſtration of Juſtice. The right of coyning of moneys, and other ſuch like royalties. The Metripolitan Citie of this Countrie is Ambrun. They have in it five Epiſcopall Townes, as Valence, Die, Grainoble, Saint Anthony de Tricaſtine, Gap. Valence taketh the name not from the Emperour Valentius, or Valentinianus (as ſome ſuppoſe) but from the valour and magnanimitie of their Souldiers. It is a Biſhops Sea, a Court of Juſtice, and a Univerſitie: in which heretofore Iacobus Cuyacius the glorie of his age, taught & lived. The towne and Coutrie beareth the title of a Duchie, in French it is called the Duchie of Valentinoù. The Romans dominered here, till the yeere of our redemption 415, in which time the Gothes became Maſter of Valence. In the yeere 575 it was beſeiged by the Longobards, or Lombards, but in vaine. There are to be ſeene in the Cloiſter of the Iacopine

Moncks ſome ſtrang things, as the picture of the Gyant Buardus, who was 15 Cubits high, and his bones: without the Citie under the ruins of Saint Peters Church, there is a Cave, which goeth under the Rhoane: and others affirme that the bodie of Iuſtinus was found without S.Felix gate among the Vineyards, which wee will paſſe over, and leave to other writers. Die is the capitall towne of the Countrie, which they commonly call Pays de Diois.

Gratianopolis now Grainoble, was heretofore named Cularo, the Walles in the Romiſh or Latine tongue were called Cularenſes Muri, as the ancient writers witneſſe, which is to be ſeene above the South gate of the towne, and likewiſe over that gate, which goeth towards Vienne, ſtanding Northward. This towne being enlarged, was called peradventure Gratianopolis from the Emperour Gratianus. This Citie is the Seate, and Court of the honorable and high Counſell of Delphine, ſituate upon the River Iſar at the foote of the Mountaine Chalemont. The ancient walls, and gates ſhewe of what antiquitie and forme it was built, the walls thereof was begunne by Francis the firſt, King of France, and being finiſhed lay as it were in a foure-ſquare. Northward betweene the Citie and the Suburbs, (which are very faire, and called S.Laurence,) runneth the Iſar, and over it there lyeth a very faire bridge. Southward runneth the ſwift fleeting River of Brach, which oftentimes overfloweth the grounds, and covereth them with a ſlimie mud, and will not be contained and kept within the Bankes. The Countrie lying round about Grainoble, is called by the Common-people of Daulphine Graſivouldan, and by ſome others Grivauldan. Not farre from the ſaid Citie Northward, are mines & quarries, out of which ſtone is digged, that they uſe in the towne. A mile from Grainoble lyeth a Village called Pariſet, where there ſtandeth a towre, which the Inhabitants call La tour S.Venin, and that in regard if any venomous thing be brought into it, it preſently dyeth: no man dwelleth in it. Auguſta Tricaſtinorum, according to the opinion of that famous man Ioſeph Scaliger, is now named S.Anthonie de Tricaſtin. Vapingum Gap is now the capitall towne of this Countrie, and is called in French Gapençois, which is environned round about with Mountaines. This towne lyeth at the foote of a high Mountaine, which the Inhabitants call Le Col S.Digo, where the Bailleiu keepeth his reſidencie. Beſide the townes of Vienne, Embrun, Valence, Die, Graſivouldan, and Gapençois, whereof wee have ſpoken, there are ſome others beſides, which in their one ſpeech are called Le pays du Troves, des Baronnies, and Briançonnois. The principall towne of the firſt is Mens, of the ſecond Buys, of the third Brianſon, which heretofore was called Brigantium. Not farre from thence lyeth a rock, which hath a portall hewen into it, and is open, having theſe words engraven above it, D. Ceſari Auguſto dedicata, ſalutate eam. It is thought that Julius Cæſar meant to have cut here a paſſage through this rock, and to have got into France. In this Countrie alſo are the Counties of Champant, and Roſillon.

In Dauphine there are many other townes, which the French Geographers divide into three parts, ſome lye upon the Rhoane, as Montelimart, & Thine, whereof the laſt belongeth to the Lords of Tournon. But upon the Iſar lye Mont-meilan, & Roman, two ſtrong townes, having Caſtles in them. The laſt is very rich, & hath a very faire bridge in it, which ſome imagine was built by the Romans. Others lye in the Mountaines, as Talart, which in former times was called Alamontis, Churges, Chaſteauraux, a place where they finde Slates, S.Criſpin. Others upon the Mountaines, as Veyne, Surre, Le Buyx, S.Euphenne, Vauxerre, Corp, Sameutre, Men. Viſible, where they finde abundance of Marble and Alabaſter ſtones, Ours, Eſſelles, which is the key of the Dauphine, and is the ſame towne, which Ceſar called Ocelum, and Chaſteau Dolphin, from whence this Countrie tooke the name. Alſo S.Clement, which is built upon a hill after a very ſtrainge manner. In the plaines lye Quirieu, Cremieu, la Verpiliere, Bourgoing, la Four du Pin, le Pont Beauvoiſin, whereof the one halfe of it belongeth to Savoye. La Coſté, S.Andre, S.Donat Macelan, Ville-neufve, S.Marcelin, Tulins, Lauwen, Modian, Moretel, S.Vallier, Beauvepaire, Beaupais, Murax, Nieron, Lon, which is a moſt fertill Soile. Ten, where there are excelent Wines, Chaſteau-d'Imble, Alleſſan, Montelier, Beaumont, Lauriel, Creſt, Salliens, alſo Verane, S.Paul Avallon.

Wee finde it recorded that Guido was one of the laſt Princes of Dauphine, that was ſlaine in a battaile againſt the Savoyard: our moderne French writers make ample mention thereof. Among others there are ſome, which report ſtrange and incredible things of him. Dying without iſſue his brother Humbert ſucceeded him, who being much grieved at the death of his onely and firſt borne Sonne, for that after his death ſo noble, a hereditaire Province, ſhould be divided into ſo many ſhares, became Jacobin-monke, about the yeere 1340, & gave to Iohn King of France his Demains, upon this condition, that alwayes the firſt Sonne of France, ſhould be called the Dolphin which being done. The firſt Dolphin was Charles, Son of the ſaid King Iohn. Humbert lived at Paris in the Convent of the Iacobins, where his Tombe is to be ſeene with this inſcription upon it: Here lyeth the Father, and moſt Illuſtrious Lord Humbert, heretofore Dolphin of Viennois, who leaving his principalitie, was made a brother of our order, and Priour of this Convent of Paris, and at laſt Patriarke of Alexandria, and perpetuall Adminiſtration of the Arch-Biehoprick of Rheims, and principall Benefactour of our Convent. He dyed in the yeere of our redemption 1355.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE PRINCIPALITIE OF ORANGE, And the Countie OF AVIGNON.

Name. THis Principate lyeth in that part of Narbonne, called heretofore Gallia Braccata, next the Inlandiſh Sea, ſeparated by the river Var, and the Alpes from Italie. It takes its name from the Metropolis, Aurange, or Orange, lying in the midſt of Avignon as this Map deſcribeth.

Site. The Roſne traverſeth the Weſt ſide of it, in the forme of a halfe moone, and on the North and Eaſt ſide it is environned with ſome hills.

Fertility. The fruitfulleſt part of this territoire, is watered with the rivers of Meine, Rivers. Louveſſe and Eques, which diſcarge themſelues all into the Roſne. The extention of this Princedome is not aboue 25. French miles. The ancient Inhabitants thereof were the Cavares, deſcribed in Notitia Prov. Gall. under Vienne. It is now entituled l'Eveſché d'Aurange.

The city of Orange. This towne called now by the French Aurange, and by the Inhabitants Aurage, was well knowne to Strabo, Ptolomie, Sidonius, Pliny, and Mela. The ſimpler ſort of Latiniſts, calls it corruptly Auraſi and Auraica: but the learneder Aurauſio Cavarum, & Pomp. Mela Colonia Secundanorum: For ſo yow ſhall finde an ancient inſcription engraven in an old Stone Col. Auraſia Secundanorum. Orange is both a Biſhops-Seate, and an Vniverſitie, wherein many rare and ſtrange Antiquaires are to be ſeene, among the reſt the Theatrum, Antiquities. and Arcus Triumphalis: as ye goe towards Lion-gate, in the Arch there is a Battell of Horſe of curious Workemanſhip, moſt curiouſly deſcribed, adminiſtering Matter of Wonder, & admiration to the Beholders, which paſſe that way. It was thought that C. Marius

Leſſer townes. was the firſt Erectour thereof. The leſſer townes are theſe: Martignan, Cadarouſe, Courtezon, Cauſans, Ionquiers, Saint Andrea de Ramiers, Brabayon and others. Debours is environned within its ſmall circle like a halfe moone. Orange it ſelfe was brauely fortifyed by Prince Maurice of famous memorie, and made ſo ſtrong (after the modell of the Lowcountrie forts) that it was Councills. accounted one of his Maiſter-peeces. This Citie is famous, and renowned, for the many Councills, which haue bene held in it. Anno 441. in the time of Pope Lyon, a Councill was held here, for the reſtoring, and reſtabliſhing of Church diſcipline. And in the dayes of Pope Hilaire, a Councill was held in it, Anno 462. for the diſputing againſt the reliques of the Pelagian hereſie, touching the grace of God & mans free-will. Afterward an other was called by Pope Felix, to confirme an Epiſtle written by S. Cæſarius Arelatenſis of Grace and Freewill, which this Pape had broached, and divulged. All theſe were called the Councills of Orange.

The ancient Princes and Gouverneurs of it.

This Principalitie fell to the houſe of Naſſavv, by Claudia the onely Daughter, and ſole Inheritrix to Iohn Prince of Orange, Sonne to Iohn the Firſt free Prince thereof, (as vvee read in Reuſer, vvho vvas by Francis the Firſt King of France, giuen in marriage to Henry Earle of Naſſavv, comming in an Embaſſie from the Emperour Maximilian Anno 1514. Rene Sonne to this Henry, dying vvithout Iſſue, made VVilliam his uncle heire to all his Eſtates, vvhoſe Sonne VVilliam Prince of Orange of famous memorie, ſo renovvned for his vviſedome and Martiall exploits in the Netherlandiſh vvarrs, vvas treacherouſly murthered at Delfe by an Aſſaſianat, called Balthazar Gerards a Bourgonian, vvho changing his name to Francis Gujon, vvas ſett on, and egged to this bloodie fact by the Prince of Parma, Aſſonvillan his Inſtrument, and a vvicked Ieſuit of Trier, vvho promiſed him, if he could diſpatch the Prince, he ſhould dye a Martyre, and (ſkipping over Purgatoire) his Soule ſhould preſently goe to Heauen. This Traidore coveting alſo after the 25. thouſand Ducats, promiſed in the proſcription of the King of Spaigne, that vvhoſoeuer could make an end of the Prince, ſhould haue it, vvrought ſo upon this villaine, that on the tenth of Iuly 1584. the Prince comming out of the doore of the Hall of his houſe, vvhere he had dyned, ſtanding behinde a pillar piſtoled him, and ſo this noble Prince vvho vvas truely entituled Pater Patriæ, after he had ſaid theſe vvords, Lord God be mercifull unto my ſoule, and unto this poore people, gaue up his ghoſt and ended his dayes, having vvith his vviſedome, courage and meanes holpen to maintaine and defend the Liberties, Priviledges, Immunities, and Religion in the Vnited Netherlands.

Prince Maurice. From vvhome iſſued theſe tvvo Illuſtrious and Generous Princes, Maurice Prince of Orange, by the Lady Anna his ſecond VVife, Daughter to Maurice Prince Electour aud Duke of Saxonie, and by his fourth VVife Henry Frederick novv Prince of Orange, by the Lady Lovviſa Daughter to Iaſper Earle of Colligni and Admirall of France, of vvhoſe heroick Actions, and hovv they haue enlarged the Liberties, and bounds of the Vnited Provinces, I vvill here briefely enumerate ſome of them up, to giue the Reader ſatisfaction.

See the Lawren Crans. After his Fathers death, Maurice Prince of Orange vvas in his youth the 6. of Feb. 1587. made Captaine Generall and Lord Admirall of the Vnited Netherlands in the Earle of Leiceſters place: vvho tooke in firſt Axele vvith Sr. Philip Sidney Anno 1586. and conſtrained Medenblick to obedience. Alſo Anno 91. on the 24. of September tooke in Hulſt, and on the 22. of October that yeare gott in Nieumeghen. Anno 92. tooke in Steenvvyck the fourth of Iuly. Alſo that yeare Ootmarſen, and Coevoerden, upon the 12. of September, after he had beaten Verdugo vvhich came to relieue it. Anno 1593. the 25. of Iune he maſtered Geertruydenberge. In the yeare 94. the 23. of Iuly tooke in the ſtrong, and great citie of Groening, after he had blouvvne up the great Raveling, in vvhoſe honour theſe verſes vvere made.

The victories and townes taken in by Maurice Prince of Orange from his youth to his dying day.

Gallies vvhich they had sunke, and sett at libertie 1600. Galley-slaues, vvhich he sent home for their Country. Anno 1605. tooke in the Castle of VVoude. Anno 1610. vvith the Marquesse of Brandenburgh, and the Duke of Nieuburgh in their right, gott Gulick the 2. of September. An. 1614. his Excellence to hinder Marquesse Spinolas progresse, tooke in Emmerick and Rees, & Anno 1622. joyning vvith Count Mansfeld, vvho had beaten the Ennemy upon a passage and brooke through his Countrie, came vvith his Armie to Rosendale, to relieue Bergen up Zoome, vvhich Spinola hearing, brooke up after the losse of some 12000. men, made him a golden Bridge, and left a great many sick men, armes and provisions behinde him, and so on the 3. of October relieued this tovvne. After the Lord had crovvned him vvith all these victories, vvhile Breda his ovvne tovvne vvas besieged by Marquesse Spinola, it pleased God Anno 1625. to take this vvorthy Prince to his mercy: vvho vvas so carefull of his souldiers upon any approaches or desperate vvorkes, that he had rather it should cost the States a 100. pounds vvith the spade, then to hazard the lifes of his men.

Townes and victories gayned by Henry Prince of Orange in the Lowe Countries since his Generallship.

After him succeeded his Brother Henry Frederick novv Prince of Orange, both in his Estates, and Gouvernment, vvho hath added these victories and tovvnes to his lavvrill vvreath. First he begann vvith Groll, and tooke it in the 19. of August 1627. Then (Anno 1629.) besieged the invincible and Maiden city of the Bosh, vvhich his Brother had tvvise attempted: tooke in the Scances, approched and sapt forvvard upon a narrovv causie, and by the vvay beate the ennemie out of three or foure of their traverses: and in the halfe moone before the port, made a gallery of 300. foote long over the moate, blevv up a mine in the Vuchter Bulvvarke, vvhich made such a breach, that one the 14. of September, this braue city vvas yeelded up unto him, and after Count Henry of the Berge and Count Cuculy (seing the Bosh past relieve) vvere gott into the Velovve, and had taken in Amersford, he snapt up VVesell vvith entreprise, tooke their ordnance, money, munition, and their bridge vvith some 1200. prisoners: vvhich fetcht the Ennemy out of the Velovv vvith a vvitnesse. Anno 1631. (it pleased God) to putt into his hands the Sant-Floote, consisting of some 80. great Pontons, and Sloops, vvith their amunition, ordnance, money; and men to the numbre of some 4000. prisonners, Officiers and Souldiers. And Anno 1632. marching to Mastricht, tooke in by the vvay, the fort of Arssens, Strale, Venlo and Roermont, besieged Mastricht, girt it about vvith invincible vvorkes, & in the sight of the Spanish & the Emperours Armies, that came to relieue it, vvonne this tovvne (being brauely defended) as it vvhere out of the fire: passed tvvo galleries aboue 300. foot long, underneath their deepe dry moate, gott into the vvall, sprung there a breach, attempted to enter it: vvhich those vvithin seing and fearing a secõd assault, on the 22. of August 1632. call for a parly, and having honorable Composition giuen them yeelded it up unto the Prince. Aftervvard also Limburch, & the Castle thereof.

To conclude, in May 1633. he besieged Rhynbergh, and after 20. dayes siege tooke it in. And thus much in briefe of the principality of Orange & of the Heroick and memorable actions achived by these three Princes of Oranges, as Trophies of their perpetuall honour.

AVIGNON.

Name. THe Cotuntie of Avignon, commonly called in French Le Comtat de Venaiscine, belongeth to the commaund of the Pope of Rome: on the West it bordereth upon Languedocke, there where the Roane parts them assunder: on the South and East upon Provence, and on the North upon Daulphine. It hath had heretofore diverse Lords, and stood under the obeissance of Rome, having the like libertie, as those of Gallia Narbonnensi, or Narbonnois had, of which they haue now lost some part. The Romans being expulsed out of Gallia, the Gothes then possessed it, afterward the Bourgonians, who being chased out of it, the French ruled over it.

Charles the Balde, King of France gaue this Countie, as a donation to Bosonius, who intituled himselfe King of Arles. But Otho the Emperour, conquering this pettie Kingdome, tooke in withall this Earledome, which is the reason why to this day they are, in diverse places of it, subject to the Imperiall jurisdiction. Afterward it came under the Cõmaund of the Earles of Provence: for Charles the brother of Levves the Ninth, having espoused Beatrix the Daughter of Raymund Earle of Provence obtained this Earledome. A while after he tooke in the Kingdome of Naples and Sicill, which his heires & succeissours gouverned. Among the rest Q. Ioane the Eldest daughter of Charles Duke of Calabria resigned her right and title of this noble Countie to Pope Clemens the Sixth, in payment for the arrierages of some tribute (or Peter-pence) which shee was behinde with him in the Kingdome of Naples, and so the Pope becomming Lord of it, calling it Terra Papæ, held it as a Fee-farme.

Site. Avignon is moistned and watered with the rivers of Rhosne, Durance & Sorge. In ancient times the Cavares, Memini, Vocontii & the Allobroges inhabited here. This territoire hath in it foure Counties, one Archbishop-Seate, which is Avignon it selfe, and three Bishhoprickes, to wit, Carpẽtras, Cavaillon du Contant, & Vaison.

Ancient people.

Avignon.

Soile.

The Metropolis is Avignon, lying upon the left side of the Rhosne, having a stronge Castle upon the one side of it, the soile round about it is fruitfull & good. They dye in it many wollen clothes, and fine Stuffs, & make there great store of paper. Heere is a bridge which goes over the Rhosne, which (as this whole river doth) belongeth to the Kinge, the Pope having no great share in it but onely a litle part of it which lies by the towne. All the magnificent buildings in this Citie are sevenfould, as 7. Pallaces, 7. Parish Churches, 7. Hospitalls, 7. Monasteries, 7. Nunneries, 7. Innes, and 7. Gates. The Cathedrall is dedicated to S. Mary, there is a Carthusian Cloister, which putts downe all the Cloisters in France. It is also an Vniversitie, which heretofore, when the Popes held their residencie in it was very famous. Paulus à Castro by his expositions upon the Civill lawe hath increased the honour of it, which are now called the Avignonian Prælectiones. Here liued that Learned Professour Andreas Alciatus. Among the Pallaces, the Popes is the faireſt and most sumptuous, called Brusle. The other townes are (as abouesaid) Carpentras Cavaillon, and Veyzon, of which it is written at Rome in Saint Pudentians Church this Inscription:

C. Accilio C. F. Martiali Vasione Veter. Ex. Coh. XII. Pr. Militavit Annis XVII. Vixit Annis LV. M. I. Q. Domitivs Adivtor Hæres Consorti Svo Bene Merito Fecit Et Sibi.

The lesser tovvnes vvee vvill passe over. Vpon the confluence of the rivers of Rhosne & Sorge stood heretofore à stronge tovvne called Florus Vindelium, just in that place, vvhere Portus Tralhe or La Traille is novv.

The Ferrie men, vvhich passe over the Rhosne, call the cable vvhere vvith they hale and pull their punts & boats over the Rhosne, the Traille, vvhich othervvise by reason of the svvift currant vvould be carryed dovvne the streame. Neere unto Avignon lieth Vaucluse, vvhither (as it is reported) that famous Philosopher Franciscus Petrarcha resorted, vvhen he had any contemplation or meditations in his head. It lieth in a most svveete and pleasant valley, environned vvith clifts, out of vvhich springs most cleare vvater and Fountaines. The profits of the Pope (as Mr. Heylin saith) are not great in Avignon, by reason of the ill neighbourhood of the Protestants of Orange; nay rather the keeping of this Countrie is a charge unto him. So that the people like vvell to be under his Gouvernment, as bringing more unto them, then he taketh from them.

Iulius Scaliger verssifyeth thus in cõmendations of this tovvne.

Thy libertie, (ô Avignon) thy vvorth, & honest name,
Makes thee to be reputed here, a second Rome for fame:
Thy stately Curches, Pallaces, and Houses are vvel knovvne,
But vvhich is more, thou art a Lord and master of thyne ovvne.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE COVNTRIE OF PROVENCE.

PROVENCE tooke this name firſt from the Romans, who called this goodly part of Gallia, Provincia, which reached from the river Var, to the city of Nice, & beyond the Rhoſne, as farre as Gaſcognie, becauſe they ſubdued it to the Romane Empire, and had reduced it into a Province, many yeeres before the coming of Chriſt. Yet at this day there is but a ſmall part of it which retaines the ancient name, to wit, about Marſeilles and Aix. It may be (as ſome beleeue) becauſe that part was firſt knowne, which for antiquitie, honour, and merit ſurpaſſed all the other Provinces of the Romane Empire: for all Gallia Narbonenſis was held the braueſt Countrie in all France.

Name.

Bounds.

Provence is boundeth on the North with Daulphiné, the hills de Velaye, and with a great part of the river of Durance; On the Eaſt it is ſhutt in with the Alpes, and watered with the Var, on the left hand whereof lieth the Citie of Nice, where the confines of Italy beginne; On the South the Gallike, or Mediterranean Sea beateth upon it, and on the Eaſt is environned partly with the Principate of Orange, the Countie of Avignon, and partly with the Rhoſne, which commeth from Lyons, to the city of Arles. It is ſubject to the Parliament of Languedoc. It hath a very ſweete pleaſant and a wholeſome aire. Beſides the great ſtore of Graine that is in it, this Soile yeeldeth excellent fruits without any great labour or tillage. They haue great ſtore of Raiſons, Figgs, Cheſtnuts, Apples, Peares, Oranges, Lemmons, Olives, Quinces, Pomegranets, Saffran, Rice, and ſuchlike fruits in abundance. Alſo plentie of Roſemarie, Myrtle, Iuniper, Sage, and Palme-trees. Vpon the hills of l'Eſterel there are a great manie Cork-trees. Neither want they delicate Vines, which make excellent Wines. There is but litle mention made of the ancient Counts of this Countrie. Howſoeuer, wee read in ancient Annales, that in the time of Levves the Eight, King of France, Raimond Berengier was Earle of Provence, and that Charles Count of Anjou, & of Mayne, Sonne unto this Levves, eſpouſed Beatrix, the onely Daughter and Inheritrix of this Earle, who by this meanes inherited this Countie, whome Charles (ſurnamed) the Lame, Prince of Salerna and King of Napels ſucceeded. There his Sonne Robert Duke of Calabre and King of Naples, next Q. Ioane (her Father Charles, Duke of Calabre being dead) ſucceeded Robert her Grandſire, who by teſtament was made Queene of Naples, & Counteſſe of Provence. She left behinde her Levves d'Anjou, the Sonne of King Iohn, for her adopted Sonne, to revenge her of her ennemies, and to be her ſucceſſour aſwell in this Earledome, as in her other eſtates.

Temperature. Fertility.

The Princes & Gouvernment.

After him Lewes the Firſt was created Earle, then Lewes the Second, and Lewes the Third his Sonne ſucceeded, being likewiſe adopted by Ioane the Second Queene of Naples, to be King of Naples & Duke of Calabre. But he dying without iſſue, left for his Succeſſour in his Principates, with the conſent of Queene Ioane, Rene of Anjou, who unwilling to reſigne over his Rights and pretenſes to the Kingdome of Naples, and to the Earledome of Provence to Rhene Duke of Lorraine his Nephew by Iolanta his Daughter, made them over to Charles his Brother Count of Mans, who having loſt his Sonne Charles, inſtituted King Lewes the Eleuenth his Vniverſall heire in all his Seignories. Some ſaye this was done by the teſtimentary will of Rene, againſt the great and juſt complaints of Rene Duke of Lorraine. This Countrie was anciently inhabited by the Salians, Aquenſes, Sextans, Sentians, Ebroduntians, Dinienſes, Veſdiances, Sanicienſes, Nerucins, Vencienſes, Vulgientes, Aptenſes, Retenſes, Octavians, Commones, Forii, Iulienſes, Segeſtorins, Albicins, Oxubins, Deciates, and others.

Ancient Inhabitants.

Beſides the leſſer Townes, there are two Archbiſhopricks and eleven Biſhopricks. Aix and Arles are the Arch-Epiſcopall Seates. Aix, Aquæ Sextiæ, Colonia is ſo called by Ptolemie, by the Latins Paterculus, Solin, and others, and in Plutarke Sextilia in the life of Marius. The ſtone which lies in Saint Benedictus at Lyons, he calleth Coloniam Iuliam Aquas Aix, from the Iulian Colonie, in an ancient inſcription, and an old piece of Coine of Veſpaſian. Hubertus Goltius ſaith it was called Colonia Iulia Aqua Sextia Legio 25. It was termed Aquæ, or Water from the hot bathes, and from thence retaineth the name of Aix. Sextia from C. Sextius Calvinus Conſul of Rome Anno 620. who having vanquiſhed the Salians, peopled this place with thoſe men, which he brought along with him, appointing and leaving there a ſtrong Romane Garniſon, to hinder & reſort the inroads and ineurſious of the Barbarians into theſe Coaſts, and to keepe the paſſages, which went from Marſeiles into Italie, ſeing the Marſeileans were not able to ſtopp them themſelues. See Titus Livius lib. 61. It was alſo called Iulia Auguſta, from Cajus Iulius Cæſar Auguſtus, who renforced this Colonie with old Souldiers, which he drew out of the 25. Legion that he had brought thither. It is alſo the Court of Parliament. C. Marius overthrew part of the Cimbri (a Germane people) neere unto Aix, and the other part of them in the Raudian Fields of Italy; but thoſe which inhabited ſince in theſe parts were the Ambrons and Tigurins, a Gallike people. Arles is ſimply called Arelas by Oroſius, and Auſonius in his regiſter of Townes, his title & 7. verſe. Alſo Auſ. calleth it Arelatus in his verſes aboue ſaid: as alſo Plinie, Sueton, Arelate in his life of Tit. Likewiſe Mela & others, but Strabo Arelata. Arelaton Salyorum Colonia, & by Ptolemie, a Colonie of the Saliſii, and by Plinie Arelatæ Sextanorum. The Stones ſhew aſwell as the Colonie, that the Salians were a very ancient people of Gallia. And by the Sextans of the ſixth Legion, which encamped there. Feſtus Avienus writeth, that it was called Thelina, by the Greeks, which formerlie inhabited there. And was ſurnamed Mameliaria (for what reaſon one knowne not) in a faire inſcription, which is to be read in a pillar, as Learned Scaliger teſtifieth. Fl. Conſtantine the Emperour, gaue order that it ſhould be called Conſtantina, and that the generall Aſſembly of the ſeuen Provinces ſhould be held there, to wit, for Viennois, for both the Narbonnes, for both the Aquitanies, Neufpeople, and the Maritimate Alpes. Auſonius calleth it Galula Roma in his verſes afore mentioned, becauſe it was a very famous, and a commodious towne for Marchandizes & for which reaſon the Roman Colonie ſtrived, to make it like unto Rome their mother Citie: and, as it ſeemed, called it Litle Rome. It is ſeated at this day, upon the left ſide of the Roane. But in the Tabula Itineraria of Languedoc it is placed on the right ſide. Auſonius ſaith, that the Rhoſne devideth it into two parts, which makes it ſeeme two townes. Now the face of the place being charged, it onely lieth on that ſide, which looketh towards Italie, and is environned about with Marſhes upon which they feede goodly Oxen. It hath bene much greater, before the Gothes deſtroyed the one part of it. It was once the pleaſant Court of the Kings of Burgundie, and afterward the abode, and reſidencie of the Earles of Provence. Her firſt Biſhop was S. Trophimus one of S. Pauls Diſciples, who ſent him into Gallia in the ſecond yeere of the Emperour Nero his reigne, from whoſe head ſpring (as Pope Zoſimus ſaith) all Gallia was watered with the ſtreame of Faith. Within the ſtrength of her Caſtle Honorius & Hilaire two famous Prelats held their reſidencie. The firſt place of the eleuen Biſhopricks, without any prejudice to the others, is Marſeiles. Marſeiles. All the Latines and ſome Greekes called it Maſſilia. Strabo and Stephanus Maſſalia, as the ancient coines withneſſe. By Ptolemie Maſalia, but now Marſeilles in Tabula Itin. The Countrie hereabouts was called by the Grecians, Greece, having bene once a Colonie of the Greekiſh Phocians of Aſia Minor: founded ſaith Solin in the 45. Olympiade in the dayes of King Tarquinius, as Iuſtinus beleeueth out of Plutar. lib. 43. Solon ſaith it was built by Protus, whome ſome call Protis. Strabo maketh the ſite of it ſtonie, neere unto the mouth of the Rhoſne with a long boſome and as a nooke of the ſea: in ſo much that Iuſtinus ſaith it tooke this name from Trogus. Cæſar ſpeaketh thus of it in his ſecond booke of the civill warrs. Marſeiles is almoſt waſhed with the Sea on three parts of it; the fourth on the land ſide, is that ſpace, which belongeth to the Caſtle, fortifyed by the nature of the place, and a very lowe Valley which would be very hard to conquer. Cicero commendeth ſo highly the gouvernment of this Common-Weale, that he durſt ſay upon the defence of Fontejus in a full audience of the people, That the Policie and Conſtancie of this towne, was not onely to be preferred before the Grecian, but almoſt before all other people. It fetcheth her Biſhopricks from the time of S. Lazarus, whome Ieſus raiſed from death to life. Thoſe of Marſeiles report (beleeue it if ye liſt) that he being depriued of his Goods, and dwelling, in the time of the perſecution, which tooke away Stephen the Martyr, he came into theſe parts with Mary and Martha his two ſiſters, and there preached the faith of Chriſt. And can yet ſhew his heath in the principall Church called the Majour, neere the wall of the towne by the Sea ſide. And thus much for Marſeiles.

The other Epiſcopall townes are Dine (called by Plinie Dinia from the Ebroduntins, and by Ptolemie Dinia from the Sentins) Graſſe, Glandeve, Glannate, Glannatena, a Citie in Notitia Provinciarum of Gallia in Viennois 4. In ſome Coppies it is Glanatica, & in others Glamnatena. They are much deceiued which ſay, that Glanum mentioned by Plinie, Mela, & Antonine ſhould be Ilanate, for Antonine placeth Glanum betweene Cavaillon & Arles; which is a great way from Glannate. It is not knowne at this day where Glanum ſtood. Senas which Ptolemie calleth Santium was a ſmall towne of the Veſdantins in the maritime Alpes. S. Paul de Vences or Vincium is a ſmall towne of the Neruſins in the maritime Alpes, called by Ptol. & Dion. Ventia. Apt, by Plinie Apta Iulia Vulgentium. Avia Iulia, & Apia Iulia, which is not right in Antonine: for in the beſt Coppies it is Apta Iulia, as appeareth in Tab. Itin. Ries, Rejus in Notitia Prov. Galliæ, in which under Vienne the Third, is read the Citie Rejenſium, that is Rejus. In Tab. Itin. Reis Appolinaris. Feriuls, Forum Iulii, in Plancius and Cicero, Forum Iulium, was by Ptol. a towne of the Commones. Col. Iul. Octav. upon the Coine of Auguſtus, as Goltzius ſaith: Forum Iulium Octavorum Colonia qua Pacenſis appellatur & Claſſica in Plinio: but now Port Marin. Ciſteron is Seguſtero in Ant. & in Tab. Itin. Ceſtero by Plinie, as Scaliger writeth, which in Ptolemie is that Ceſſero mentioned with Tolouze, and Carcaſſonne is at this day Caſtres in Languedoc. Tolon was called Telonum in the beſt Latiniſts, & in Ant. Telo Martius which was a ſmall towne, ſeated upon the falling back of the Sea, ſome nine miles from Marſeiles.

Provence hath on the South the Gallike Sea, and Marſeiles is a very famous and a Safe haven, locked in with a great yron chaine. The name of this Port was heretofore Lacydon, as Euſtathius noteth. Therefore it ought to be read in Mela his ancient bookes Lacydon, the Port of the Marſeillois, and therein Marſeiles. Port.

Strabo obſerveth that there were formerly in this towne ſix hundred Senatours, who enjoyed this honour as long as they liued, out of this nomber were elected fiueteene men to end and compoſe all ſuits in lawe. Senators. Theſe are they, whome Cæſar calleth the ſixe hundred Marſeiloiſes and the fiueteene prime men. Valerius the great ſaith likewiſe lib. 2. cap. 6. that there were ſixe hundred of them. Lawes & Cuſtomes. Now out of the fiueteene men, they chooſe the Trium viri, who had Souveraigne authority. The Common weale of the Maſſilians (as Strabo witneſſeth) was Ariſtocraticall. Ariſtotle in his fifth Booke & 8. Chap. of his Politicks ſaith, that it was gouverned Oligarchially. Surely that is richt Oligarchia to become Prince of a Republicke by blood, & not by vertue. Their lawes Electuarie (as Strabo & Iuſtinus lib. 43. who related briefly their Cuſtomes) were publickly propoſed, and that almoſt from the foundation of their towne. Their manner was to ſhutt their gates upon Feſtivall dayes, to keepe Gards and Sentinells upon the Walls, to viſite houſes for the finding out of Strangers, to gard their City, aſwell in the times of Peace as of Warre. Which they uſed not onely in times of neceſſity, but alſo from an ancient Cuſtome which they allwayes had.

SAVOYE.

THE Savoyards called heretofore Allobroges, were well knowne by the Victorie of Fabius, and the conjuration of Catilina. Ancient writers teſtifie, that this Countrie was once a Kingdome, in the time of Hannibal, when as Broncus being choſen Arbitratour, judged that this Kingdome belonged to the eldeſt Sonne, and ſetled him in it. Lucius Florus writeth alſo of a King called Betullus, who was taken priſoner by Fabius Maximus. There was alſo one Cottius King of Savoy, who was a great friend unto the Emperour Auguſtus, who called the Alpes after his name, by reaſon of the many tops he ſlighted there, to make them paſſable. The chiefe Citie of this Dukedome was in former times called Vienna, which Citie Mela nameth Vienna Allobrogum: whence the name of Savoy came is doubtfull. Carolus Bovillus reporteth, that this Countrie by reaſon of the narrow paſſages, wayes, and the ſmall number of Inhabitants was full of Theeves & Robbers, which either did rob travellers, or murthered them; and therefore in regard of the daunger that men were in which paſſed by the high-wayes, it was called Maulvoye, that is an Ill-way. But afterward a certaine Gentlemam beating & driving theſe theeves and murtherers away, it was called Savoy, or Salvoy a ſafe-way: but in what time this hapned, it is not recorded. Savoy in the Regiſter of the Empire, is oftentimes rekonned under the Provinces of Gallia Narbonenſis: whence it appeareth, that the name thereof is ancienter, than the French, or Savoyiſh tongues, which they ſpeake at this day. But thoſe ſuſpend their judgements better, who derive the word Sabaudia from Sabatia, which is a ſhallowe water, called now Savona. Mela calleth Tabatia, or Savone a towne. But howſoever it be, this is moſt certaine, that the Savoniſh waters are thoſe, which the Emperour Pertinax through covetouſneſſe, & ambition traded in Marchandiſe as a private man, which Capitolinus ſaith. Neither doth Plinie erre, or any other writers, when they affirme, that the Savoyards, or Sabati, dwelt in Italie, among the Ligurians. Seing Strabo witneſſeth, that the ancient Grecians counted Maſſilia under the Liguſtian Empire, which the French alſo afterward obſerved, naming them the Celtian Ligurians, who inhabited as far as the River of Rhoan. This name then went forward unto the ſhoares of the Mediterranean Sea, even to the inmoſt places. Beſides theſe Allobroges, the Centrones, Nantuates, Garoceli, Medulli, Verragri, Salaſſi, and others dwelt here, Livius teſtifieth that the Allobroges, or thoſe of Savoy, were as rich, & famous as any of the Countries of France. Horatius in his verſes written unto the people of Rome, wherein he ſeemeth to have compaſſion of them: becauſe of their inteſtine wars, calleth the Allobroges, or Savoyards unfaithfull and men that longed after novelties, upon which place an old expoſitor writeth thus: The Allobroges are Frenchmen of a reddiſh haire, and are called Sequanici, or Bourgonians, dwelling by the ſide of Ahæs as ye travell along by Veſontius into Germanie. They are people which long after newes, and very diſloy all to their Princes. The Centrones dwelt by the Greekiſh Alpes, where Tarantai now lyeth wee read in the records of the Provinces of France under Vienna, is the fifth towne, which the Centrones inhabited, that is Tarantaſia, which in French, is now called Le Archeveſche de Tarantaiſe. The Arch-Biſhoprick of Tarantaiſe. The Nantuates are accounted in divers places of leſſe antiquitie. Marlianus ſaith they dwelt by the Boden-Sea, where Coſtenz now lyeth. Paradinus affirmeth, that the Countrie, and the name of the Nantuates is ſeated at this daye, neere a petty towne called Nantua, which ſtandeth not farre from Chamlery. Of theſe Nantuates Ioſeph Scaliger to a certaine friend writeth thus. Take heed that you give not credit to beleeve that there is a Cloiſter in Savoy ſo called, as ſome fooles imagine, the which Octodurus, that is, S. Mauritius, which is properly S. Mauritio, as appeareth by the memorable ſignes of the afflictions of the Legions of Thebe, in which mention is made of Octodurus. Cæſar placeth Octodurus among the Nantuates hard by the Countrie of Gavot, or of the Veragris as he nameth them; ſome read them Antuates. But thoſe which place the Nantuates by the Boden-Sea, and affirme that they are thoſe of Coſtenz err as groſſely, as thoſe, who beleeve that it is the Cloiſter of Benedictus. The Carocelli as Raimundus judgeth, were theſe people, which inhabited under the Mount-Cenis, and were neere Neighbours to that people called the Medulli, whereof Vitruvius maketh mention in his eight booke. Philander and Barbarus maketh them to be the Inhabitants of the Vale of Cilera of Dalechampius, Miollantios, and the Tarantoiſes. The Countrie of the Veragris is called by Guilhelmus Paradinus Walliſſerland, and by Ægidius Saidus, the Countrie of Gavot: Pingonius ſaith, it is the Dukedome Chablaſy, by Marlianus it is called S. Bernards-mounts, and Bregentz, for he imagineth, that this people came from a Village, wherein the Abbey of S. Mauritus ſtand. Cæſar maketh the Nantuates, Veragri and Seduni, now the bounds of the Savoyards, to be from the Genffer-Sea, (or Lake Loſanne) and the River Rhoane, even as farre as the Alpes. The Salaſſy in the days of Ptolomee where thought to be that people, which dwelt at Augſtall, called ſo in high dutch, and in Italian, Val d'Oſta. In the memories of France mention is made of the Citie of Geneve, the Biſhoprick of Geneve, Doubtleſſe there hath bene in former times other Inhabitants in Savoy, whoſe names and habitations are at this day not knowne.

The ancient people were called Allobroges.

Centrones.

Nantuates or Vethlanders.

Carocelli.

The whole Countrie now, where Savoy, the Delphynie, & other neighbouring Provinces lye, were in former ages a Kingdome, as appeareth by the 21 booke of Livius his Hiſtorie. Savoy being a part of that Kingdome, had divers Princes & Gouvernours, but at this day for 500 yeeres it hath beene ruled by Dukes, who have enlarged their bounds and limits, and were called in times paſt, Earles of Maurienne.

Savoye, boundeth on the Northſide upon Burgundie with which many times they have beene encumbred with warres, and with Swiſſerland, betweene which the Genffer Sea, or Lake Loſanne lieth. Eaſtward on Wales, and Piemont, whereof they have not beene leſſe free; but that the high Mountaines hindred the incurſions of their ennemies. Southward, and Weſtward the Delphinie, with a part of the Rhoane, which parteth the Inhabitants of Savoy from thoſe of the Dukedome of Burgundie. Savoy hath a ſweete aire, & the Countrie is Mountainous. The Valleys and Dales are very fertill, and fruitfull, eſpecially, thoſe that lye Northward along the Genffer Sea, or the Lake Leſſanna, where moſt excellent wines are made, which is called Ripalium from the Shoare of the ſaid Lake. The paſtures are very good for the feeding of all kinde of Cattaile, chiefly thoſe, which lye round about Saint Bernards Mount. Through Savoy runne the Rivers Are, or Ara- or Araris, Iſara, Doria, Arva, Danius and others. There are beſides many great and large meers, among which the Lake Loſanna, or Genve Vicy, and Bourges are accounted the greateſt. The Metrapolitan Citie of Savoy is Chamberie, having a faire Caſtle, and the Duke of Savoyes Court in it, and is alſo the Court of Iuſtice and the Parliament. This Citie is ſeated in a pleaſant Valley, betweene Mountaines. Beſides Savoy there is alſo the Countie of Geneve, Maurienne, and Tarantaiſe. Alſo the Marquiſate of Suſa, with other Domanies, and Lordſhips, and laſtly the Countrie of Breſſe.

GENEVE.

THE Countrie of Geneve taketh the name from the Citie of Geneve, whereof the middle ſillable is pronounced as Eluſa ſhort, which commeth not onely from the Swizers, who call it Genff, but from the Peſants, that inhabite there abouts, & from ſome other Savoyards, who cal it Zeneva making the middle ſillable ſhort. But it is cõmonly the French manner, that they make a ſillable which is ſhort in the midſt to be longe, as appeareth by an infinite number of others, as in this words publique, facile & others, which the Latines nevertheleſſe pronounce ſhort. At this day it hath gott almoſt the name of Cenaoa, as Anthonius teſtifieth in his excellent booke of travells, betweene Milan and Straesburgh. It is a very ancient Citie. Cæſar maketh mention of a certaine Bridge there, which lay from Geneve over the River of Rhoane, that was broke off by himſelfe. Alſo of a wall, which reached from the Lake of Geneve, unto the Mountaine Soux, 19000 paces long, and 16 feete high, wherefore it is very ſtrainge, that other writers, as Strabo, Plinie, Ptolomee, & many others, made no mention of this Citie. This Citie lyeth now by the Lake of Geneve in two parts, having a wodden bridge over the Rhoane, underpropped over the midſt of an Iland, which hath houſes ſtanding on both ſides of it. The greateſt part of the ſaid bridge lyeth Southward, and the leaſt Northward. Upon the end of the Iland ſtandeth a watch-towre, whome ſome affirme was built by Caſar. In the greateſt part of the Citie ſtandeth the Cathedrale Church of S. Peter, which in former times as appeareth by the antiquaires which are here yet to be ſeene, was built in honour of Apollo. In the ſmaleſt part ſtandeth S. Gervais, his Church from which the greateſt part of the Towne on that ſide is named. He that is deſirous to knowe the ancient Monuments of this citie, and the controverſies which have hapned among the Biſhops, Earles, & Duks of Savoy about the rule and Dominion thereof, let him reade Franciſcus Bonivardus of that which he wrote to Sebaſtianus Munſterus. This Citie got their freedome about the yeere 1535, as it is to be ſeene in a certaine Mappe, which hangs in the Towne-houſe, with thoſe of Berne, a people of Swiſzerland. anno 1536. with whome they made an alliance, which ſince hath beene oftentimes renewed. Manie writers make mention that Geneve hath often beene troubled ſurpriſed, and afflicted with warre in former times. The Countie of Morienne ſhooteth out as farre as the River Arch, where S. Johns Church ſtandeth, and therefore is called S. Iohn of Morienne. It is a fine Towne having a faire Caſtle in it, aud is famous in regard of the ſepulchre of Humbert the firſt, who obtained the Conntie of Morienne, which is now the Dukedome of Savoy held in vaſſalage from the Emperour Henry the third, who was entombed there Anno 1548, and in his ſepulchre alſo was buried his Sonne Amedæus, ſurnamed Cauda.

The Countie of Tarantaiſe is ſhutt in betweene the Alpes, hills, and the Rivers Arch and Are, which at Chamouſſe meet together. It hath the name from the town of Tarantaiſe, which is now called by the Inhabitants Mouſtier, and by the High-dutches Munſter in Tarantaiſe, according to the opinion of Ioſias Simcerus. Humbert the ſecond, Count of Morienne, and Marqueſſe of Liounois, who brought Tarantaiſe under his commaund, lyeth buried there, and dyed about the yeere 1590.

The Marquiſate of Suſa is ſo named alſo from the Towne of Suſa, which lyeth not farre from the River Doria, which beneath Thurin falleth into the Poo. Ammianus writeth in his 15 booke, that the Towne Suſa lyeth upon the beginning of the Cottian Alps, and ſaith further, that the grave of Cottius is not farre from the Towne Walls. Some affirme, & that not without ſome reaſon that Suſa ought to be under Piemont.

The Domanie Foſſigni lyeth hard by the Lake of Geneve, in which the Towne of Ripalia ſtandeth, which is a pleaſant place, and famous in regard of Amedæus the eight, the firſt Duke of Savoy, who leaving his Princedomes became a Monke, and afterward was made Pope againſt Eugenius the IV. as is ſaid, and was named Felix the fith.

Unto the Dukedome of Savoy belongeth the Countrie of Breſſe, lying betweene the Rivers of Are, and the Rhoane. In former ages this was the Court of the Seguſians as ſome witneſſe. There ſtandeth the towne called Bourgh, & Breſſe. In this Countrie, are the Counties of Varz Montreniel, Pont de Veaux, Bauſgen. Vlrick Count of Bauſgen, and Lord of the Countrie of Breſſe, left an onely daughter behinde him, called Sibilla, which Amedæus the fourth, the 8 Earle of Savoy marrying, the Countie of Bauſgey, and all Breſſe fell to him by inheritance and came under his commaund. And thus much for Savoy.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE LAKE LEMANUS, ET THE SIGNEVRIE OF GENEVA.

With the circumjacent places.

Site. THIS Map following repreſenteth unto yow the Lake Lemanus, & the Signeurie of Geneva, lying upon the Frontiers of the Dutchie of Savoye, the Countie of Burgundie, the Territoires of the Swiſſers, and the Biſhoprick of Valez. Then the names

Name. of the Countries, Bailywikes, Baronies, Iuriſdictions, Wayes, Rivers, Mountaines, Townes, Villages, Caſtellainſhips, and Caſtles lying about the Lake. Savoye is inhabited by a people dwelling on this ſide, or beyond the Alpes, which ſpeake a kind of broken French, in times paſt called Allobroges, as Cæſar ſaith in the beginning of his commentaires, that Allobrox King of the Gaules flouriſhed about the yeare ſince the creation of the World 2423. Moreouer, an ancient Interpretour writeth thus of their Etymologie, upon the eight Satyr of Iuvenall: The Allobroges (ſaith he) are Gaules. Now they are called Allobroges, becauſe the Gaules called a field Broge, and went further. They were therefore ſo named, in regard they removed out of their owne Countrie into an other place, afterwards Bagaudæ (as the preſident Fauchet witneſſeth: then at laſt Sabaudi, in French Savoiſians, called now vulgarly Savoyards, and their Countrie Savoye. In the yeare 1126. this Province was gouverned by Earles, and from the yeare 1420. till now by Dukes. It is reported, that at the firſt it was for a longe time inhabited by a crew of theeues, and robbers by the high way ſide. But at this day it is well gouverned, and one may

Oh how hott is it!* & yet neverthelesſe neither the Roane, nor the Lake is ſeldome frozen ouer with yce: neither is it ſo hott, as it is in Daphiné, nor ſo colde as it is in the Louw Countries, where ſome times the rivers are ſo frozen, that they may drawe Canon over

The ſoile is very good, & kind for manuring, & affordeth much encreaſe: for it yeeldeth good ſtore of Wine, Graine Peaſe, Rapes, Turneps, white & redd Cabbage, French or Turkiſh Beanes, Spenages, Millions, Pompions, Leekes, Oignons, Beanes, Pulſe, Barly, Fitches and Oates. Beſides theſe fruits, Nutts, Peares, Apples of diverſe kinds, red and murrie Cherries, Mulleries black and white, Cheſtnutts & Almands, but ſeldome beareth any Figgs. Ye haue here alſo variety of all kind of Cattell and beaſt with land and waterfoules. Townes. According to the ancient Chronicles, in the yeare of the World 2790. Arpentine one of Hercules his Captaines, layd the foundation of Lauſanna, from whēce the name of Carpentras was taken, and which was altered, when they removed this towne upon the mountaine, about the time of Martin the Biſhop of Lauſanne in the yeare of our Redemption 593. The towne called Nevidum, heretofore commonly Benevis, being ruined before the coming of Cæſar, was afterward repaired and reedifyed under the Emperour Veſpaſian, by a Captaine of his called Nyon. Coſſonex was built Anno 442. and Aubone begun in the yeare 456. and finiſhed ſome yeare after. Geneva is a noble, a free, and an Imperiall City, which may ſtampe and coine currant Moneys of their owne. It was at the firſt called Genevre, becauſe (as ſome affirme) it was buit in that place, where a Iuniper tree ſtood. It ſtands upon a hill. This ſite Lemannus (the Father of the Almans or Germans) gaue it, the Sonne of Paris, and the grand Child of King Priamus, in the yeare of the World 2994. After this it was called Aurelia from the Emperour Aurelius, who repaired it, and brought it into a better eſtate, then Heliogabalus had left it, who burnt it downe to aſhes. Afterward Cæſar, and ſome other Latine Authours called it Geneva, and the Poets by a Poeticall licence Gebenna. The Allmans Genef, the French Geneve, & an Anagramme very fitly Vengee, or Revenge, For, notwithſtanding all the attemps of their ennemies, and the ſecret conſpirations which they had againſt it: yet hath it alwaies held out and defended it ſelfe; eſpecially on the 12. or 22. of December Anno 1602. It is moſt pleaſantly ſeated. On that ſide where the Rhoſne commeth from the Lake Leman, it is ſome what lowe, but a litle further riſes finely upon a hill. Geneva ſtands as if it were two townes, through the middeſt whereof the Rhoſne runneth, having a bridge over it, which joynes them together. The greateſt part of the City lieth on the South, and the leſſer on the North ſide. It is very well furtified, & furniſhed with ordnance, and all manner of munition and warlike proviſions. They keepe alwaies in it good watch. It is a great throughfare into France, Germanie, and Italie. Morge-Caſtle was founded by King Clotarius Anno 1135. And Evian, called heretofore Aquianum by Peter of Savoye, the Brother of Amedeus, and his Vicar anno 1237. The Lake Leman on the Swiſſers ſide, is ſixteene French, 12. Savoy, and 4. Germane miles in Breath. It hath ports and deſcents in it, at leaſt ſixe good avenues, or paſſages to come to it. From Morge-port, and the Rolle they tranſport good Wines to Geneva. From the Port called Pormentou and Nerny, or Neronis, they carry thither good ſtore of Wood, and Coales. The Rhoſne runs through it, but is not deepe enough to carry veſſells of burdē from his head ſpring till his entrance into the Lake becauſe of the ſhallo-wneſſe thereof, nor from the Swiſſers bridge, which is in the Suburbs of Geneve, till ye come to Selle the next ſmall towne, being ſome ſeuen miles diſtant from this city. This river within fiue miles of the towne paſſeth under the ground through a bottomeleſſe gulfe.

Mountaines. The Mountaine Iuraſſus is ſo long, that the Inhabitans about it were heretofore called by the Germans Longimani, or Tall-men. For, from the very topp thereof, one may eaſely diſcerne the ſteeples, & Churches of Geneva and Baſill, ſtanding foure or ſixe dayes journey one from an other. There is alſo to be ſeene with admiration, the Pierced Stone, which Munſter writeth off in his Coſmographie. The Maidens or Virgins Caſtle, built by Iulius Cæſar, and S. Claudaes towne, unto which lamme, & criple men reſort to be cured. Then the Snowie Fountaine for Summer time, and a naturall hollow concaue, as broad as an ordinarie Church, not very high, which is as darke as pitch being perpetually full of ſnowe, and yce, almoſt as hard and as clear as criſtall. Not farre from the Lake Leman, next unto Savoye, yee ſhall ſee the Mountaines in the very midſt of Summer continually couvered with ſnowe. And within a mile of Geneve, there is a mount, which with great difficultie and daunger ye muſt as it were clime up to the topp of it, by a great number of ſtares & ladders hewen out rather by the art of man, then by nature. There haue bene diverſe men, who aſſoone as euer they had ſett foote to goe up it, returned back being affrighted at the hideous ſight, and conſideration of the ſteepe downefall thereof. There is an other mount by Eagle-Towne, in the Dales (whereof) hapned a moſt dreadfull accident, which is to be read in the memorable Hiſtories of our times, in a Chapter of Earthquakes lately printed at Paris. Among all the mountaines of Chablais, Saint Sergius is the fruitfulleſt, the reſt are full of woods and ſhrubbs. Betweene them in the vallies in Summer time, there graſes a great many of Cowes, which giue much milke. For the reſt, it is well knowne what a fearefull precipitation mount Muſtruach hath, from which every yeare many loaden Horſes and Beaſts haue fallen & brooke their necks, yea ſometimes men themſelues. There are ſome clifts there, which are as ſharpe as teeth, and the edge of a ſword. It is véry certaine, that the roots upon the mountaines of Aig are unknowne, becauſe of the depth of the Lake, from the bottome whereof they ſpring up.

Foreſt and Woods. The Foreſts and Woods furniſh both poore and rich with abundance of Cheſtnutts, and their Swine, with maſt, fyring good cheape, & timber for huſbandmen to make waggons, wainес, and plowes withall. There are no Churches or Chappells with any Images, or Reliques of Saints, ſuffred there ſince the Romiſh Religion was baniſhed out of it, and that it pleaſed God, to ſend thoſe two excellent lights of his Church into it Mr. Iohn Calvin, & Mr. Th. Beza. Since whoſe time alſo the Church Gouverment hath conſiſted of a Miſcellany of Laymen, and Miniſters, to wit of Elders, and Deacons choſen yearely out of the beſt and godlieſt citizens, to help and aſſiſt the Miniſters in their miniſteriall functions, and for the diſtribution of collections to the Poore. The Burgeſſes haue ſuch a charitable order among them which is much to be commended, which is this: If a poore Artiſan, or a handecrafts man be impoveriſhed, or decayed in it, they make a common purſſe among the richer ſort to ſett him up againe. There are many ſtately, & Sumptuous Churches in this Signeurie, eſpecially that of Lazanne, lined within with black Marble, likewiſe that of Geneva, which ſhines like white yron: upon which thunder, and lightning fel once or twiſe; ſo that the leaden croſſe was melted, and the ſteeple tumbled downe, which ſtood whole till the time of Charlemaigne. There is alſo Evian Church, ſtanding betweene the Vineyards without the walls of the city: and Morges Church, that of late yeares was repaired. They haue cleared the Churches of all Images & pictures. Some Tombes and Sepulchres remaine ſtill in them; but none haue bene buried in them ſince the yeare 1430. In Geneva alſo there are Orphan-houſes, & Hoſpitalls of charity for the bringing up of Fatherleſſe, and Motherleſſe children, alſo Peſt & Leprouſhouſes. And a Hoſpitall for poore children and ſtrangers, which haue Teachers to inſtruct and catechiſe them, and to adminiſter conſolation & prayers to the ſicke: every of them alſo having a Phyſician, and an Apothecairy belonging to it. They haue alſo a Court, or Townehouſe in which there meetes every day 25. graue-Senatours, for the diſpatching of publick affaires, and the determining of all ſuits in lawe, aſwell Civill as Criminall. All their records, evidences, and bookes are kept in it with a watch by night. Upon the one ſide of the Gate, is a magnificent Bench commonly called the Tribunall: on the other ſide ye ſhall ſee the memoriall of times, the occaſion, and the meanes of the reformation of the State. Neere unto the Towne-houſe, there is the Arſenall, or ſtore-houſe for all kinde of Armes, Canon, and amunition, neceſſarie for the maintenance of a longe ſiege. There are alſo many peeces of ordnance, planted upon the Walls and Bulwarks of the City. They haue alſo diverſe ſtronge Fortreſſes in this Countrie, amonge the reſt S. Catherins, where in were kept alſo good ſtore of ordnance, & munition of warre ready upon any occaſion, brought into it Anno 1590. which was taken in by Henry the Fourth, and Anno 1601. was ſlighted by expreſſe commaund from him. Another which was built oppoſite againſt it by thoſe of Geneva: the peace being concluded, it was alſo razed for the ſaving of charges. The third called the Ripaille, which thoſe of Geneva gott from the French 1589. was alſo ruined, aſwell as the fourth at Verſon, after it was taken in by the Genevois. Court & Senate houſe.

Publike buildings.

Beſides theſe Fortereſſes, there are alſo ſome towers raiſed artificially; amonge the which La Tour Maiſtreſſe, or the Miſtriſſe-Tower, ſtanding within a new Bulwwarke like a katt overlooketh all, and defendeth Geneva on the Lake and Savoye ſide. The other is called the Iſle-Tower, or Cæſars, which ſtands upon the very topp of the Iſle, to defend that bridge, which heretofore appartained to the Swiſſers: who is ſaid to haue bene built by this Emperour. Geneva is a towne brauely provided with all manner of warlike, engins and materialls, as experience hath taught. For though it hath bene oftentimes beſieged, yet they were never diſtreſſed with famine. For, the Lake beating upon it, and the Rhoſne running through it, hath alwaies furniſhed them with abundance of fiſhe, as is ſeene yet to this day. Neither want they Gun-pouder becauſe they make great ſtore of it every day within the towne. They haue alſo many good lawes, and ſtatutes: Aſwell for the common weale, as for the Colledges. And, as Mr. Heylin writeth, they allow in this city all manner of honeſt recreations. Fornication they punish with nine dayes faſting: Adulterie with death. They haue a lawe, that if any malefactour flie to them for refuge, they punish him after the cuſtume of the place, in which the crime was committed. Otherwiſe, their towne being on the borders of diverſe Provinces, would never be free from vagabonds. Exemples hereof I will (ſaith he) aſſigne two: The firſt of certaine Monkes, who robbing their Convents of certaine plate: and hopingh for their wicked pranks at home, to be the welcomer hither, were at their firſt acquaintance advanced to the Gallowes. The ſecond is, of a Spaniſh Gentleman, who having fled his Countrie, for clipping and counterfeiting the Kings gold, came to this towne, and had the like reward. And when for defence he alledged: that he underſtood their city being free, gaue admiſſion to all Offendours: true (ſaid they) but with an intent to puniſh them that offended: a diſtinction which the Spaniard never till then learned; but then it was too late. There are alſo a great number of noble famillies in it. And many Learned men in all arts, and ſciences, whoſe writings are extant & much commended. There is a famous Librarie, having many excellent bookes & manuſcripts in it. The Inhabitans of Geneva are full of humanity and civility, ingenious, and good managers of their owne affaires. They keepe a good watch, and haue a ſpeciall care, to the actions of ſtraungers paſſing through their city, & yet giues them good entertainement. This towne for a longe time hath bene a ſanctuaire and refuge for many perſons, perſecuted for religion, having admitted manie of them to be Burgeſſes, and Citizens thereof, and their children into the adminiſtration of publike charges as they found them capable for them. The French, Engliſh, and Germans haue allwaies bene wellcome to them. And now there are many noble famillies of Italians dwell amonge them, which haue the pulick exerciſe of religion in their owne language: whoſe Miniſter was Learned Deodatus an Italian & excellent Divine. They goe very plaine & decent in their Apparell: and their cuſtome is, that they muſt not flaunt it out in gay cloaths, as they doe in other places. Sure it is, that the Genevois growe not very rich, it ſufficeth them, if by their labour and induſtrie they can get their living and maintaine their families in an honeſt manner. And if it were not for printing of bookes, their manufactures, their inventions in making of Silks, & Woullencloths, this Common-weale queſtion leſſe, would quickly become poore. Among other commodities wich they haue, they tranſport out of their countrie good ſtore of Cheeſe made in the Valleies of the adjoyning Mountaines, fatt Capons, huge Saulmon, Trouts, Gold thred: alſo Hoggs briſtles. And thus much for the ſtate of Geneva. Lawes & Cuſtomes. Manners. Marchandizes.

OF

Originall of the name.

HISPANIA is a noble Countrie of Europe, and the firſt part of the continent, lying upon the Ocean, which tooke this name from King Hiſpanus, as Iuſtine witneſſeth: others ſay, that it is ſo named from the famous City of Hiſpalis now Sivill. Abraham Ortelius, a man very well ſtudied in Geographie, is of opinion, that the word Spania came from Iberia, a Countrie in Aſia, formerly called Pania after Pan, which Dioniſius when he had conquered this Countrie, placed him there Captaine Generall, as the Authour, who had deſcribed the Rivers and hills of this Region. The Apoſtle Paul in the 15 Chapter of the Romans, and 28 verſe calls it alſo Spaine, in ſaying: I will come by you into Spaine. The Grecian writers, as Ptolomee and Stephanus call it Iſpania, without an h. Strabo, Plinie, and ſome others ſhewe, that in ancient times, it was named Iberia and Heſperia: Iberia from a Countrie in Aſia, or after King Iberius, or as ſome ſay, from the River Iberus. Avienes affirmeth, that it was called Iberia from Iberia, a City of Bætica, & had the name of Heſperia, from Heſperus the brother of Atlas, or as Horatius thinketh, from Heſperia the daughter of Heſperus, or from Heſperus the evening ſtarre, under which it was ſuppoſed to be ſituate, as being the remoteſt Countrie of Europe Weſtward, and becauſe Italie was likewiſe called Heſperia. Horace to diſtinguiſh it, nameth it Vltima Heſperia.

Touching the bounds of Spaine, upon two ſides of it the maine Ocean beateth, namely, upon the Northſide of the Cantabrigean, and Biſcaine, on the Weſtſide it hath the Atlantik Sea, on the third ſide, the Straight of Gibraltar, upon which the Iberian or Balerian Sea floweth, and on the Eaſtſide lye the Pyrenean Mountaines with their many loftie tops, from the Ocean, where Floviobrigia, or Fuentabria is ſited, reaching as farre as the Mediterranean Sea, with two famous Capes, whereof the one is called Olorſo, ſhooting out into the Ocean; the other which formerly bore the name of the Temple of Venus, is nouw called Saint Croce, reaching into the Mediterranean Sea.

SPAINE is accounted to be 200 Spaniſh miles in length, but in the greateſt breadth thereof not above 140, and in the narroweſt place 60. Iohannes Vaſæus in his Chronicle of Spaine mentioneth, that Spaine is ſo ſmall by the Pyrenean Mountaines, that travelling over them, and ſtanding upon the top of Saint Adrians mount, he could diſcerne, both Seas, which Ferdinand Colombus, who was a skillfull Geographer ſhewed him, namely, the Ocean next unto them, and a great way, as farre as ever they could ſee, they could diſcerne the white breaking ſurges of the Mediterranean Sea. The whole circuit of Spaine is about 600 Germane, & 1893 Engliſh miles. Strabo, Ptolomee, and others, liken Spaine to the figure of an Oxe hide, whoſe neck being the Iſthumus tieth it into France, & ſpreadeth it ſelfe over the Pyrenean hills, from the Mediterranean Sea to the Britiſh Ocean, then ſtretcheth its fore leggs out from Cartagena, to Biſcay, and the hindmoſt leggs from the ſtraight of Gibralter, as farre as Galicia, & the Britiſh Ocean, & the laſt which maketh the muſſle, or the taile, is the Promontorium Sacrum, called now Saint Vincents Cape, which ſhooteth out into the Atlantike Sea, farre beyond Spaine.

Spaine is ſituate in the more Southernly part of the Northerne temperate Zone, and almoſt in the midſt but wholly in fifth, and part of the ſixth Climates: the longeſt day being 15 howers in length, where the beſt temperate, and the fitteſt aire is for all things, being not ſo hott, nor ſo parched by the ſcorching heate of the Sonne as Africa is: neither as it is in ſome parts of France, becauſe there are continuall coole gales of winde, which doe allay, and refreſh the aire, & makes the heate of the Sunne to be more temperate, both in Winter and Summer: ſo that the aire in Spaine is very healthfull, & as Iuſtinus ſaith, is not infected with ſtincking foggs, which riſe out of mooriſh, and fenine places, for there comes out of the Sea, ſuch coole Brizes, which expells and drives awaye thoſe dampes out of the grounds, and makes the aire very freſh, & wholeſome. But the conſtitution of this Countrie, is not in all parts alike: for that which lyeth Northward (as ſome write) is colder and rougher, ſubject to ſtormes, comming out of the Sea without any inlandiſh pooles or waters: and is overgrowne with woods, as a wilderneſſe, full of rocks and clifts, which cauſes this place to be unhealthfull. But in the Southerne part, through which there runnes a continuall ridge of Mountaines it is a very wholeſome, and a pleaſant Countrie, having many fine Rivers to water it, and is often refreſhed with ſeaſonable, and ſweete ſhowers of raine: & therefore is not onely adorned, and decked with all manner of Fruits; but alſo may truely be called a Nurcing mother, both for man and Beaſt. The marveillous fertilitie of the Soile, and what the Earth produceth, as alſo what ſhee yeeldeth out of her bowells, the ſeverall kinds of Animals & Creatures, aſwell terreſtriall, as Marine who can recount them as they ought? For in ſome parts of Spaine, the Soile is ſo exeeding fruitfull, that for one buſhell of wheate, which ye ſhall caſt into it, will yeeld thirtie, yea in ſome grunds fortie. For phyſicall and ſimples, there are abundance, eſpecially ſuch as grow upon the Mountaines, having an excellent vertue, & operation. And where it is not ſo fruitfull, there growes flaxe, and ſpartum, which is a kinde of Broome with a ſtalke, where with they make baſkets, tye vines, and make Cables, & ropes for ſhipping. There are alſo in diverſe places abundance of Fruittrees. Among the Apples, theſe are held for the beſt, the Canuſia, or Regia, that is, your Queene & Kings Apples, your many kinde and delicate Peares, which have an excellent taſt, as your Muſcadell, and winepeares, commonly called Pinta, and by the Inhabitants Sine regula. Your Olives growe about Sivill, which are bigger then a wall nutt. What ſhall I ſay of other fruits, which in ſome places growe there twiſe a yeare, as Oranges, Citrons, Lemons, and Pome-granats, the pills whereof being preſerved, make excellent ſweet meats, and are Phyſicall. What ſhall I ſpeake of your excellent and curious Spaniſh Wines, which have ſuch delicate taſt & ſmell: but they fall better in one place, then in an other. Spaine was heretofore very rich in mines of gould, ſilver, copper, yron, lead and other mettals. What ſhall I ſpeake of the ſalt, that as Solinus witneſſeth, is not onely boyled in Saltpanns, but alſo they have ſuch ſtore of it, that they digg it out of Salt quarries: yea which without the helpe of man groweth there, neere unto Seguntia, & other places, being, ſodd with well-water it makes very good ſalt: from which the King receiveth a great cuſtome & toule. And if ye will give credit to Marinaus Siculus, he ſaith that there are in Spaine, whole hills of naturall ſalt. Beſides all theſe commodities and riches, they have in Spaine abundance of all kinde of Beaſt, and Cattell, ſo that the woods, hills, paſtures and fields are full of their lowing and bleating noiſe, your Spaniſh Gennets are there in great requeſt, eſpecially, thoſe which are bred in Bætica, more then thoſe of the other Provinces. Lyons, Cammells, and Elephants, there are none, but ſuch as are brought thither out of forraine Countries, and made tame. There is excellent hunting in the Mountaines, Valleys, and Woods, for Staggs, Hindes, wilde Boores, Hares and Coñines: And good Hauking, at Partridges, & other game, alſo there are great ſtore of Herons, Bittours, Craines, wild Geeſe, Ringdoves, and abundance of tame, and wilde Ducks.

Ancient Government.

Touching the ancient government of this Countrie, we will not trouble the Reader with that, which Iuſtinus, Diodorus, Ioſephus, Euſebius, Ieronimus and counterfeit Beroſus with Annius Viterbienſis his falſe expoſitours, and ſome others have written, there upon ſeeming all to be fained. For Tubal lyeth not in Spaine, nor in Europe, but in Aſia, and thoſe which ſhould have ſucceeded him in the government, as Iberus, Iubalda, Brygus, Tagus, Bætus, and others, farre be it that I ſhould account theſe for Kings, unleſſe I ſhould maintaine, that in thoſe dayes Kings were borne out of Rivers, which had no living Soules, alſo that is uncertaine (which one can hardly beleeve) that hapned in Spaine (after they had depoſed their Kings) touching the Lydians, Thracians, Rhodians, Phrygians, Cyprians, Phœnicians, Egyptians, Mileſians, Cureans, Leſbians, and Chaldeans, who ſhould have planted many Colomes there, and built diverſe towne; but verely thoſe things are held moſt autentique, which writers mention of the Carthaginians Romans, and afterward of the Gothes, Vandales, Saracens, Alanes, Suevians and Hunnes. When the Pœni, or Carthaginians, and other people of Africa, domineerd farre and neere in Spaine, & had ſpred themſelves over this continent Cnejus and Publius Cornelius Scipiones were ſent to warr againſt them with a mighty Armie, and hoſt from the Romiſh Senate, and Republick in the beginning of the ſecond Punick warre, who in the ſeventh yeare of their warre were diſcomfited, when Q. Fulvius Flaccus, and Appius Claudius Pulcher were Conſuls of Rome: the yeare following was ſent thither in the ſtead of his Father and Uncle, P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus Major, who by his heroicke Actions reduced this Countrie into a Province, and layd the firſt foundation of the Roman government, in that time when Cecilius Metellus, and L. Veturius Philo, where Conſuls of Rome in the 542 yeare after the foundation thereof. He having routed and putt to flight Aſdrubal, and Mago, the two Carthagian Generalls, by the towne Bætula, (lying in Andaluſia, ſuppoſed now to be Beca or Vbeda, afterward chaſed them out of all Spaine, and ſo becomming maſter, of it, made a luague and a confederacie with Syphax King of the Maſzylori, which Countrie is now called Biledulgerid. Three yeares after, in the time of the Conſulſhips of C. Cornelius Cethegus, and Minucius Rufus, Spaine was devided into certaine Bounds, and Limits, and two new Pretours ſent thither, namely, C. Sempronius Tuditanus, who governed that part which lay on this ſide, and M. Helvius Blaſius the other part, lying on the further ſide. Scarcely two yeares were expired, but there aroſe a great warre againe, ſo that of neceſſity they were driven, to ſend thither a Conſull for their generall with a mighty army, and to that end, ordained the Conſull M. Porcius Cato, whoſe lott fell on this ſide, who began the warre a freſh with Emporius, and ſo pacifying this rebellion Anno 560 he triumphed for it. This was that Cato, who by his warlike policie ſlighted, and caſt downe the walls of many Spaniſh townes in one day, as Livius and ſome other Authours mentionned. After Catos victorie, in Spaine many alterations, and changes hapned in the gouvernment as being now wonne, & then loſt; in ſo much, that there were above thirty Triumphs made for it. The Spaynards then beganne firſt to give tribute in the time of Auguſtus, who by his great warres forced all Spaine, and at laſt brought the Cantabri and the Aſturi under his obedience. He devided this whole Region into three parts, namely, into Bætica, Luſitania, and Tarraconia. Every of theſe had their Aſſemblies & Meetings. Bætica had foure, as that of Gaditanus, Cordubenſis, Aſtigitanus, and Hiſpalenſis. Luſitania, now Portugall hat three, at Emerita Auguſta, Pacenſis, and Scalabis. Tarraconia had ſeven, Carthaginenſis, Tarraconenſis, Cæſar Auguſtanus, Clumenſis, Auſturis, Lucenſis, and Bracarenſis. Thus theſe noble Provinces ſtood under the obedience of the Romans, untill the eight Conſulſhip of the Emperour Honorius, and the third Conſulat of Theodoſius, being about 494 yeares after the nativity of Chriſt: in which time the Vandals, Suevi, and Alani, being abbared to come into Galia by Stilico, getting over the Rhene, tooke in and became maſters of all this Countrie, and lived in it, like madd, and Barbarous men: till they were by Adolphus and Vallia (whome the Emperour Honorius ſent into France) expulſed and beaten out of it, who afterward paſſing over the Pyrenean Mountains, tooke Spaine from the Romans, and held it a longe time under their Power. Afterward in proceſſe of time, when the Gothes were warred upon by the Frankes, they turned their armes once more againſt the Vandals, and the Frankes, drive the Gothes out of France, and the Gothes againe chaſed the Vandals, and the Alani out of Spaine, and extirpated and deſtroyed all the Suevi which were in it. Iuſt in that time when the Vandals, and the Alani were called by Bonifacius into Africa, where he gouverned then in the name of the Emperour, and ſo cleared all Spaine of the Gothes, who having brought the ſame under their owne ſubjection, turned all the Roman garriſons out of it, having their owne Kings, who ruled over them a longe time, at laſt the Arabian Saracens overrhrowing them in a mighty Battell, in which their King Rodericus was ſlaine, they loſt all Spaine. Yet a remnant of them retiring & ſaving themſelves in the Mountaines of Aſturia, Biſcay, and Gallicia recouvered, and tooke in againe, litle by litle, their laſt Territoires, Townes, and Caſtles. But at laſt the Saracens, gathering a head together in Bætica Hiſpania, the State of their affaires decreaſing, & declining, the Gothes gott all Spaine againe under their power. Ferdinand King of Arragon vanquiſhed theſe Saracens, and their King Melus, who entituled himſelfe King of Granada, and chaſed them out of Spaine, this Countrie came againe under their owne Lords, & though heretofore in the time of the Moores, Spaine was governed by five Kings namely, of Caſtile, Arragon, Portugall, Granada, & Navarre: yet at this day there is but one, which beareth rule over it, to wit, Philip the third, the Sonne of Philippus Magnus, and Nephew to Charles the fifth.

The Chriſtian Religon was firſt here planted (as they ſay) by S. Jeames Anno 37 (who is their Patron, upon whoſe day if they have any ſervice or exploit to doe they commonly attempt it.) They have allwayes bene conſtant to the Biſhop of Rome, in ſo much that in the ſixth Councill of Tolledo, it was enacted, that the King ſhould ſuffer none to live in his Dominions, buth ſuch as did profeſſe the Roman Catholique Religion, of which their King is knowne ſo great a Patron, that a late Pope being ſicke, & hearing diverſe moane his approching end, uttered words to this effect. My life can nothing profit the Church, but pray for the King of Spaine, Spaine, as its chiefe ſupporter. A ſecond maine prop to uphold their decaying Religion is the Spaniſh inquiſition. This Countrie was in ancient times devided into diverſe parts: the Romans devided it firſt into the Citerior and Vlterior parts. They called that the Citerior, which lay next unto Rome, & the Roman Provinces, betweene the River Iberus, and the Pyrenean Mountaines, and the Ulterior was that tract, which lay beyond the Iberus, and reached as farre as the Ocean: In ſucceeding ages, wee read that Spaine was ſeparated into ſixe great Provinces, as into Tarraconia, Carthaginea, Luſitania, Galicia, Bætica & Tingitania lying in Africa, over againſt the ſtreight of Gibralter. In the times of the Moores, there were five Kingdomes, as Caſtile, Arragon, Portugall, Granada and Navarre: but afterwards they made a new deviſion of the whole Kingdome into three Realmes, to wit, thoſe of Arragon, Caſtile, & Portugall. Under the Kingdome of Arragon, (beſides Arragon it ſelfe) were comprehended Catalonia, Valentia, Majorica, and Minorica: under Caſtile, they counted Biſcay Leon, Aſturia, Galecia, Eſtremadura, Andaluzia, Granata, Murcia, & both the Caſtiles, together with the Iles of Canaria: they reckō under Portugall, beſides Portugall it ſelfe, Algarbia.

The Cities and Townes in theſe Kingdomes are almoſt innumerable. The chiefeſt whereof are theſe, Sivill, Madrid, Tarraco, Lisbona, Granata, Pampilona, Valentia, Barzelona, Leon, S. Lucas, Corduba, Nebriſſa, Compoſtella, Tolledo, Salamanca, Complutum, Pintia, Sarragoſſa, Aſturica, Auguſta and others.

There are alſo many Lakes and Meeres, for neere unto Beiara there is a Lake, noe leſſe profitable, then ſtrainge. In which there are a kinde of blacke fiſhes, called Turtures, which according to the teſtimonie of Marineus Siculus, foreſee raine and a ſtorme before it comes making a roaring noize (as if they were Bulls) which one may heare 18 thouſand paces off. Vpon the topp of Mount Stella, there is a Lake as Vaſæus writeth, in which is found peeces of old ſhipwracks, though it be above 12 miles from the Sea, He relateth alſo that the Inhabitans affirme, when the Sea is troubled, and rageth then there riſes alſo a great ſtorme in it, which toſſes the billowes up and down, Sueton in the life of Galba reporteth, that there fell into a Lake of Cantabria Thunder-dart, and that twelve Axſes were found in it. Plinie lib. 3. Natur. hiſt. cap. 3, maketh mention of Stagnus amænus, not farre from Valentia, which now is called Albufera.

Some reckon up above 150 Rivers and Currents in this region, and above 700 bridges, which are made over them. Among which that of Segovia, and Alcantara, are the chiefeſt: but the one River ſurpaſſeth the other in greatneſſe a faireneſſe. The Iberus mentioned in Ptolomee (which is now called the Ebro) ſpringeth out of Mount Idubeda in Biſcay, with two head-ſprings or Fountaines; whereof that on the right hand beginneth in the Aucenſian wood, called Monte d'Oca, and the other on the left hand by the towne of Fuentibre (and then by the waye receiveth into him a great many runing ſprings, and broockes) where it growes greater, and then running through the Calaguritan feilds (now called Calahora) paſſeth forward by the Navarrean townes called Iuliogriga, and Tudella, & ſo by Iulia and Celſa, commeth to Saragoſſa, and from thence turning towards the South, and then winding directly South-eaſt, traverſing through the Catalanean territoire, by the rich City of Derthuſa, at laſt having enlarged him ſelfe with many other Rivers, after he hath runne a courſe of foure hundred, and ſixty thouſand paces, with two ſwift ſtreames and violent outlets diſchargeth himſelfe into the Mediterranean, & Iberian Sea, retaining his freſh water after he hath runne 50 paces into it. The River Durius is accounted the greateſt in all Spaine, in regard of the innumerable ſprings and brooks which fall into him, the ſource of his head is in mount Idubeda, where it is called Sierra di Cocolo, parting the Vectones from the Aſtures, & the Luſitani from the Galæci: having ſaluted Turris Salana, (now Tordiſillas) Salabria, Miranda, & ſome other towns, running with a ſwift currant, (50 miles beneath Lamæca, by a towne in Portugall called Portus) into the Weſterne Ocean. This River is called by Ptolomee Doris, by Strabo Durias, and at this day by the Spainyards Duero. Tagus or Tajo well knowne to Ptolomee, and others, ſpringeth out of the top of the Mountaines called Oroſpeda ſome fifty Furlongs from the ſmall towne of Trajacet, not farre from Concia, or Cuenca, and then running throug the Carpetanian feilds ſaluteth to the royall City of Toledo, where there is a bridge made over him, and ſo taking his courſe by Talavera Auguſtobrigia, Alcantara, and by ſome other brave townes, parting Portugall as it were in midſt, on the further ſide of Lisbon, diſ burdeneth himſelf into the weſterne Ocean, being there two thouſand paces wide: the inhabitants call this River Taio, and the Portugals Teio, This Tagus heretofore famous, & excelled all the Rivers in Spaine, for the peeces of gould, and corrall, which were found in the ſands thereof, as Solinus and Iſidorus witneſſe: which Emanuell Enricus confirmeth, that this River is yet to this day rich in gould: as alſo ſome other Rivers in Portugall, abounding alſo with delicate fiſh and Oiſters. Yea which is more Pomponius Mela reporteth, that ſometimes alſo there are found in it precious ſtones. The headſpring of the River Anas, well knowne to the Greekiſh and Latin writers, riſeth out of the great Lake, and ſtanding Pooles in the Laminitanean Feilds, which in theſe dayes is called Campo de Montiel, being not farre from the towne of Cagnamanes, running by the Oretanos to Metallina (where it is ſuppoſed, that Vitellius ſhould have encamped his armie, according to the ancient inſcriptions, which are yet there to be ſeene) where going under the ground, and having runne ſome miles at laſt, riſing up againe with ſprings and bubbles by Vilarta, taking his courſe by Emerita Auguſta (where a long ſtone bridge with arches is made over him, paſſeth by Pacea Iulia, & running by ſome other townes, lying Southward, by Caſtro Marino falleth into the Ocean. This River is called in Spaniſh Rio Guadiana, according to the Arabick word Guad, which ſignifieth a river. The River Bætis riſeth out of mount Croſpeda by Caſtaona, as Strabo and Stephanus teſtifie. This mount is now called Sierra d'Alcaraz, from his head he taketh his courſe Weſtward ſaluting Corduba, & ſome other townes, then winding Southward towards Sivill, with a wide mouth almoſt a mile over diſchargeth himſelfe into the Atlantick Sea, not farre from Cales Males. Minius is a River in Hiſpania, Taraconenſis, whoſe head-ſpring beginneth 6 miles above the Aras Septianas, which at this preſent is called Lugo, lying a mile from the towne Caſtel Verde, cleaving Portum Merinum, and running through the bridge Belſario, & by the owne Ocenſas and then by Valentia, where meeting with the River Avia, after he hath taken his courſe 6 miles further, looſeth himſelfe in the Ocean. There are other Rivers beſides, as Lethe, Turius, Limæa, Sicores, Chalibs & Auſtra, which for brevities ſake wee will paſſe over, and ſpeake ſomewhat of the Sea, the Gulfs or Boſſomes and the Havens of Spaine. It is certaine that Spaine is almoſt environned round about with the Maine Ocean, and the Mediterranean Sea: ſaving on that part, which is bounded with the Pyrenean Mountaines and Gaſcognie. This region lyeth very commodiouſhy upon the Sea, for commerce and traffick, aſwell into the old, as into the new world of America, and ſhooteth ſo into the Sea, as if it would give a helping hand to other Countries. The ſeverall ſorts of fiſh, which the Sea yeeldeth are innumerable, whereof the principalleſt are Whales, Browne-fiſh, Lampreys, Congers, Pilchers, Oyſters and Muſsles.

The Gulfs or Boſſomes are three in number, all comming out of the Mediterranean Sea, as Sucronenſis, Illicitanus, and Virgitanus Sinus, the greateſt whereof is the Sucronenſis, which is very broad at the mouth, but the further it runnet into the land, the narrower it growes. The Illicitanus Sinus is reaſonable great, called now Puerto d'Alicante. The leaſt is the Virginitanus Sinus, having had this name as Mela witneſſeth from the towne Virgo, which at this day is called Vera or Bera. Among the Sea-havens of Spaine, the principaleſt is that which of old was called Magnum, lying betweene the Capes, or Promontoiries of Nirium, and Schythicum, now called Corunna.

Now follow the Mountaines, whereof the Pyrenean are the chiefeſt, which ſeparates Spaine from France. This Mountaine Pyrenæus, ſhooteth out from the Eaſt to the Weſtward, as farre as Celticum Promontorium, ſeparating the Spaynards in Ciſmontanos, & Vltromontanus, that is, on this ſide and beyond the Mountaines: ſo he ſpreadeth out to the Southward, neere unto the head of the River Iberus, and joyning with an other Mountaine croſſeth the breadth of Spaine. This Mountaine is called by Ptolomee and Strabo Idubeda, alſo Saltus Aucenſis, & at this daye Monte d'Oca, after the name of the ancient Towre of Auca, the ruines whereof are yet to be ſeene by Villa Franca, 20 miles above Burgos. The ſteepe rock, which lyeth by Archidona upon the way, as ye goe betweene Sivil and Granada, is a part alſo of Oroſpeda, who tooke the name and fame in the memorie of two faithfull Lovers, whoſe example which hapned there, will never be buyried in Oblivion, and therefore is called by the Spaynards La penna de los Enomerados, and by Paulinus Bimaris, becauſe it reacheth from the one Sea to the other, that is, from the inmoſt to the utmoſt. Strabo writeth, that Mount Calpe is of no great circuit, but exceeding ſteepe and high, ſo that it ſeemeth a farre off, rather to be an Ileland. Some faine that this was one of Hercules his Pillars; making the other to be at Abyla in Barbarie, and that theſe were the markes of the toile and labour of Hercules, pretending in old time it was but a hill, that Hercules digged through, and which cauſed the alteration of this place. In Alcaraſſo appeare the Marinian, Mountaines, ſo named by Plinie, by Ptolomee the Marianus, by Anthoninus Mons Mariorum, now called Sierra Morena. Under the foote of this Mountaine runneth the famous River Bætis, till he falleth into the Sea. By Barzelona lyeth a Mount, which the Inhabitants call Mont Ivi, which ſome interprit to be Mons Iovis, but ſome are of an other opinion, and ſay it ought to be called Mons Iudæorum, becauſe many of the Jewes were heretofore buyried in it, as the Epitaphs, which are found in it at this daye doe witneſſe. Of Woods, Foreſts, Wilderneſſes, & all manner of fruitfull trees, there are abundance throughout all Spaine, which would be here too tedious to relate. By the towne called Mons Majorus, there is a wood in which all manner of fruitfull trees growe, that for length, and greatneſſe puts downe all the woods in Spaine, having in it ſtately Oakes, Cheſtnut-trees, Wallnut-trees, Haſell-nut-trees, Cherrie, & Damſon-trees, Peare-trees. Figg-trees, and Vine-ſtocks. There are alſo many woods in Spaine, which yeeld good fuell for fyring, and brave timber for the building of houſes, and ſhipping. What ſhall I ſpeake of the many ſumptuous and faire Edifices both publike & private? how many brave Churches have they: Abbeys, Monaſteries, Nunneries, Geſthouſes and Hoſpitalls: Stately Royall Palaces, many Princes, Lords and Knights Caſtles, & houſes with an infinite number of magnificent buildings, both publick & private.

Thouching the Gouvernment ye muſt note, that the King of Spaine is not elective, but falls to him by ſucceſſion, yet notwithſtanding at his inauguration & Coronation, he muſt ſweare to his ſubjects to obſerve maintaine, and keepe their rights, Lawes, and Priviledges, aſwell as they are bound to ſweare homage and fealty to him. The Kings Children are all entituled Infants of Spaine, and his eldeſt Sonne, after he hath the conſent of the States and people of the Countrie, he is declared heire apparant, and Succeſſour to this Father the King, and beareth the title of Prince of Spaine. And though the King hath ſupreame authority, and power over his ſubjects in all things yet he never ſtatuates or enacts any thing, without the Councill and adviſe of twelve perſonnages, who as the chiefe States of the whole Kingdome ſit in the Kings Councill, where all affaires of weight and importance, thoſe are propounded, diſcuſſed & decided: but for all ſecret buſineſſe, which ought not to be divulged, they are handled in a privie councill a part, which conſiſteth in the King himſelfe, and the Preſident, and by a third part of the Kings Councill. All militairie affaires are diſpatched in a Councill of warre, ſelected out of twelve Lords of the Kings Councill, beſides the Dictators of Leon, and Caſtile with ſome others. Alſo there are in Spaine three Iuris Prefecturæ, which the Spaynards terme Audientias, or Cancellarias; whereof the firſt is held in Caſtile, the ſecond in Granada, & the third in Galicia: each of them having a Preſident and twelve Councellours. From thoſe if any man findeth himſelfe agrieved or wronged, he maye appeale to the Kings Councill for juſtice. Finally, there is a Lord Treaſurer in Caſtile, having foure Receivers under him. whoſe office is, to huſband well the Kings treaſurie, and give up his accounts for it. There are a great number of Dukes, Marqueſſes, Earles and Lords in Spaine. For beſides the Prince of Aſturia, and ſome others, there are 25 Dukes. The yearely revenew of theſe Dukes, ſome more, ſome leſſe, is thought to be worth from forty to a hundred thouſand Ducats, beſides the Dukes of Infantaſgi, & of Medina-Sidonia are much more, for the Duke of Infantaſgi his revenews are rated a hundred & twentie thouſand Ducats yearely, and the Duke of Medina-Sidonia a hundred & thirtie thouſand. They have at leaſt 80 Earles, who may yearely diſpend from then to five and twenty thouſand Ducats, whereof theſe are accounted the principaleſt, namely the Counts Bonavenſa, Alva, Miranda, and Oropeſa. It would be to prolix and teadious for the reader, to reckon up here the number of their Vicounts, Barons, Vice-royes, Governours, & Rulers of Provinces, the Admiralls of the Sea, and their grandſignores of the order of Knighthood. For in Caſtile alone are theſe orders, S. Iagos, Alcantara, Calatrava, & the Rhodian order of S. Iohn. In Arragonia, & Catalonia is the order of Monteſa. In Portugall is the order Militum Ieſu Chriſti, (whereof the King himſelfe is the grand-Maſter) to which order all the Provinces of Africa, Aſia, and America are annexed. Alſo S. Iames his order, and that which they call Avis, as alſo that of Maltha, and S. Iohns order. Among the chiefeſt famillies of Spaine, the houſe of Pacieca is the ancienteſt, in regard that Hirtius in his Comentaires ſpeaking of Corduba, maketh mention of L. Iunius Paciecus. The principalleſt houſes next unto them are thoſe of Meridona, Toletana, Cerdea, Cardonea, Larenſis, Velaſcea, Pimentella, Stunica, Henritica, Oroſia, Corduhenſis, Licenſis, Guſmanea, Mondragonea, he that pleaſes, may add the reſt unto them. Concerning the Clergie, ye muſt obſerve that in ancient times the Metropolitane, or primacie was accounted the Church of Sivill, which was tranſerred from thence to Toledo, where it continued to the great hurt, and detriment of Spaine, for when Toledo came under the Barbarians: then the Bracarenſian Arch-Biſhop had the adminiſtrations of this dignitie, according to the Records of the Bracarenſian Church. But after Toledo was recouvered againe by the Chriſtians, and the Toletan Prelate ſought to be reſtored to his former dignity, the Bracarean oppoſed him, but are alwayes aſpiring after great matters, and take great labour and paines, ſparing no charges (ever ſince they vanquiſhed their inteſtine Ennemies, and the Saracens) how they may make both the one and the other end of the world ſubject to their King, and whenſoever two or three of them meete together in what place ſoever it be they beginne to diſcourſe of weighty and State affaires, plotting all meanes and wayes how to weaken the force of their Ennemie, overlaying a thouſand wayes and deviſes, which when they have digeſted any plott, that may be ſerviceable then they reveale it their chiefes. They can endure much hardſhip, hunger and thirſt in their Armies. Upon ſervice and skirmiſhes they uſe more ſtratagems and ſubtilitie, then manhood and ſtrength, and being not very corpulent, and lightly armed, they are nimble, and come on and off at their pleaſure, and ſeing themſelves put to the worſt, yet when occaſion ſerves, can quickly betake themſelves to their heeles. And commonly whenſoever they come together, the moſt of their talke is of martiall affaires. For their Diet, when they are at home they live very ſparingly: but are liquoriſh, and greedie enough, when they are abroad, eſpecially if it coſts them nothing. To conclude, they goe decent, and comely in their apparell.

For Marchandiſes and Commodities, Spaine affordeth good ſtore: which either their Countrie produceth of it ſelfe, or elſe are brought into it from other places, and that not onely out of the adjoyning Countries, but alſo from farre regions, namely, ſilkes, wool, diverſe ſorts of linnen cloth, Salt, Sugar, Honey, Orãges, Pom-granats, Citrons, Lemons, Olives, Capers, Grapes, Figgs, Raiſons, Almands, Cheſt-nuts, Iuniper. Anis-ſeed, Comine-ſeed, Coriander-ſeed, Rice, Saffran, Oyle, Waxe, Alum, Sope, Purple dies, Barrells of traine oyle of whales, Bay-berries, and all kinde of fruits confited, and preſerved. Alſo Alabaſter, Corrall, Gould, Silver, Yron, Tinne, Copper, Lead, Rubina, or a kinde of herbe, which they uſe in dying of cloathes: Quickſiver, Cottons, Pearle, and precious ſtones, and all kinde of Indian ſimples, and Phyſicall herbes. In lieu whereof as a gratuitie are brought into Spaine, out of the European, African, Aſiatick, and American Countries, all ſuch wares and commodities, as the nature and propertie of their owne Countrie doe not aford. And thus having deſcribed Spaine in generall, wee will now come to the particular Maps and diſcriptions, according to this Regiſter following namely, Biſcaye, Gallæcia, Portugallia, Caſtilia old & new, Andaluzia, Valentia, Arragonia, Catalonia.

him, and would not let goe that hold which he had gott, here upon roſe a great quarrell and diſſention, as ye may read in the firſt booke of the Decretals, which diſpute (as it is reported) is not yet ended to this day. Now after that all Spaine was regained out of the hands of the Barbarians, then were the Biſhops reeſtabliſhed in their ancient Townes, and ſome new ones created. In our dayes they count there are 7 Arch-Biſhops in Spaine, under which there are 40 Biſhops.

The prime Arch-Biſhop is he of Toledo, who is alſo by Office Lord Chancellour of Caſtile, & next unto the King and his Infants, no man is of the like dignity and riches, as he is. Under his commaund is the Biſhop of Burgos, for which reaſon he was then called Aúritanus: but in ſome Councills, and publick Acts corruptly, and by an errour Auxitanus: from thence this Sea was removed by Alphonſo the ſixth, and by the authority of Pope Urban the third, Anno 1097 to Burgos. Alſo under this Arch-Biſhops obedience, are the Biſhops of Cuena, or Cunquenſis, of Cinquenea, or Ciguntenſis, of Oſma, or Oxomenſis, (who is miſcalled alſo in the Councils) Oxovienſis, of Corduba, which is a very ancient Biſhopricke, and had once a moſt famous Biſhop called Oſius: alſo the Biſhops of Jacenenſis, Paltinenſis, or Palentinus, and Segovienſis. The ſecond Arch-Biſhop is he of Sivill, under him there had wont here to fore to be 11 Biſhops, but now there are but three, namely, the Malacitanus, Gaditanus, and him of Canaria. The third is the Arch-Biſhop of Compoſtella, who held formerly his Epiſcopall Sea in Iria Flava, where he got the name Irienſis, being a Port-towne in Galicia, commonly called Padron. From hence this Biſhopricke was transferred to Compoſtella, and now he bears the name of Compoſtellanus, or of S. James. He hath theſe Biſhops under his juriſdiction, as thoſe of Corienſis, Placentinus, Aſturienſis, Samorenſis, Salmanticenſis, Oracenſis, Tuienſis, Badaiocenſis, Mindonienſis, whoſe reſidence was in ancient times Ribadeum, now called Mondonnedo. The fourth Arch-Biſhop is he of Granada, who hath theſe Biſhops ſubject unto him, as of Almeria, Guadicenſis, or Guaditanus, who was alſo formerly entituled Accitanus: for that place, which was heretofore called Accitana Colonia is now named Guadix. The fifth Arch-Biſhop is he of Valencia, whoſe Suffragans are theſe: the Biſhops of Cartagena, Orignella, Segorbienſis, or rather Segobricenſis, ſo called from the City Segobrica, now named Segorbia, alſo the Biſhop of Majorica. The 6 is the Arch Biſhop of Tarracinenſis, having theſe Biſhops under him, as the Ilerdenſis, or of Lerida, Dertoſanis, or of Dertoſa, Hertuæ Barcinonenſis, Gerundenſis, Vrgellenſis, and Vicquenſis. The ſeventh & laſt is the Arch-Biſhop of Saragoſſa, under whoſe ſubjection are thoſe of Pampelum, Calagurritanus, Ocenſis, and Balbaſtinenſis. But thoſe of Leonenſis, and Ovetenſis are ſubject to no man.

Portugall hath alſo three, as the Arch-Biſhops of Bracarenſis, Olyſiponenſis, and Funchalenſis. Touching the other Biſhopricks, Vaſæus in his Cronicle aforeſaid, will give the Reader good ſatisfaction. The annuall revenew of all theſe, as alſo of the Abbeys, & Monaſteries are moſt exactly caſt up by Lucius Marinæus Siculus, by Damianus à Goes, and ſome others. Unto the Spirituality alſo belong the Heritick-maſters, and Inquiſitours into mens Conſciences and credence, which at the firſt was inſtituted againſt the Saracens, Moores and Jewes, but now their power and authority to perſecute the true members of Chriſt, who are not affected to the Romiſh Church. Add here unto the Vniverſities of Spaine, whereof the chiefeſt are theſe, as thoſe of Salmanticenſis, Complutenſis, Connubricenſis, Pincianenſis, Saguntina, Oſcenſis and Ilerdenſis.

The Spaynards are of a quick apprehenſion, but apt to learne any miſchiefe, when they have ſtudied a while in the Univerſitie, they thinke they have learning enough: they dwell long in Sophiſtrie. They chooſe rather to ſpeake Spaniſh, then Latin in their Academies, mixing not a few barborous words among it. They ſeldome conferre their learning and knowledge to their poſterity, much leſſe to Forreiners, and Straingers, the reaſon is becauſe they cannot ſpeake much Latine. Howbeit ſome of them have bene, and are yet at this day many excellent men, who have publiſhed many learned Bookes, & writings as ornaments to their Countrie farre and neere.

The Spaynards are commonly of a hott, and a dry conſtitution, of a blackiſh complexion, which their women, uſe to helpe with painting and a Box of complexion, but for the moſt part (though ſhort) yet are they well limmed, and proportioned. The Spaynards for the moſt part are proud, high-minded great Inſulters and Domineerers, over thoſe of whome they become maſters. They are good Souldiers, & will hardly be beaten out of any hold, where upon they ſeize, unleſſe they be fired out: but being well encountered upon any peece of ſervice (as experience hath taught in the low Countries) they are humble and ſubmiſſive enough. They are Braggers, whereof I will here alledge one example of Duke d' Alvas, who having for a long time tyraunized, and executed the Spaniſh bloodie Inquiſitiō in the Low Countries (ſpoken of before) upon an number of innocent Soules, profeſſing the reformed Religion returning againe into Spayne, and being feaſted at the Court by ſome of the Dons and Nobles heated with wine, and puffed up with the bladder of Vaine glorie could boaſt, that he thanked God he had diſpatched and put to death 18 thouſand Hereticks by the hand of the Hangman, beſides what the bullet the ſword and the pike had devoured.

For ſuperſtition they exceede all other nations, for ceremonie, flatterie, and giving of great titles, they are their Crafts-maſters. They can keepe cloſſe the ſecret plots of their hearts, and are cunning Fayners and Diſſemblers. They can retaine their gravity with a kind of affable auſterity and ſeverity; which makes them much hated among all nations, as Mariana himſelfe boaſteth. Their women are not very fruitfull, bearing few Children. They abſtaine from drinking of wine (though they have wine there in abundance) and herein as Mr. Heylin obſerveth, verifieth the Engliſh Proverbe, that none is worſe ſhod then the Shoomakers wife, but they alledge in ſome doing, they imitate the old Romiſh women. The jealouſie of their huſbands mues them up like haukes, ſo that they are ſeldome ſeene, which reſtraint (as it is reported) makes them to be the more wanton gentile, and tractable, when they gett looſe, and finde their opertunities. Straingers are in little, or ſmall reſpect among them, and ſeldome welcome unto them, but oftentimes are diſcourteouſly uſed. When the Spaynards are in forraine Countrie, they complement with one an other, and uſe a great many Baſe los manos, extelling on an other up to the Heavens, & thoſe which in their own Countrie were before but Coblars, & Figg-basketmakers, ſwagger it out in other Countries, as though they were grand Dons, and Gentlemen. Yet this is to be much commended in them, they are great lovers of Iuſtice, and Equitie, for the pooreſt, and meaneſt, man ſhall have as good juſtice ſhown him, as the proudeſt, greateſt and richeſt: in ſo much that by the diligence, and care of the Magiſtrate. There are almoſt none or very few Murders committed, becauſe by their Lawes they curbe, and keepe them in awe, as much as poſſible may be, to keepe them from ſtaining their hands with any bloodie fact, leaving none unpuniſhed which ſhall tranſgreſſe the Lawe againſt his neighbour, or whoſoever he be that ſhall attempt any murtherous act. Notwithſtanding they are of a ſtirring and a turbulent Spirit, and cannot keepe themſelves quiet,

THE DESCRIPTION OF BISCAIA, GVIPVSCOA, NAVARRA, and of ASTVRIA DE SANTILLANA.

The originall name.

BISCAIE tooke this name, according to the opinion of Ioannes Biſhop of Gerunda, from the Baſtuli the ancient Inhabitants of Bætica: For they fleeting out of Lybia into Hiſpania Bætica, & being chaſed out of it by the Moores, made their retreate into the Mountaines of Galicia, where fortifying and ſetling themſelues it retayned the name of this people, ſo that from that time forward this territoire was called Baſtulia. Others againe ſay, that this name is derived from the Vaſcones, part of which people, when they had left their old habitations, came into this Countrie, naming it firſt Vaſcaia, then Viſcaia and by changing of V into B is now called Biſcaia.

Site.

This Countrie of Spaine lieth upon the Sea Coaſt, environned with Mountaines, the aire being more milder & temperate, then in any of the other parts of Spaine: for by meanes of the loftie Mountaines, wherewith it is rounded, the cold is not ſo vehement there, neither is it ſo ſubject to the extremity of heate. The Countrie is every where full of Trees, excellent good for timber for maſts & ſhips: beſides they haue ſuch abundance of Yron, that a whole Navie of Shipps may here be built, rigged & ſett forth. Here are alſo great ſtore of Cheſtnutts & other Nutts, Oranges, Rozzen, Gummes, diverſe Mettalls, as Yron and Black-lead, with diverſe other commodities. In ſtead of Wine, they preſſe and make there a kinde of pleaſant Cider. Moreouer they haue there all kinde of foure-footed Beaſts and Cattell, Fiſhe and Fowle, and all things neceſſary for the ſuſtenance of man.

Temperature.

Fertility.

Ancient Inhabitants.

This Countrie was in old time inhabited by the Cantabri, their limits extending in thoſe daies further, then Biſcaie doth at this preſent: for they poſſeſſed alſo Guipuſcoa & Navarre. Theſe people were in ancient times famous Hiſtoriographers, and thought no life or profeſſion, comparable to a ſouldiers. When all other people of Spaine were ſubdued by the Romans, they and the Aſtures their next Neighbours were not vanquiſhed, till Octavianus Auguſtus came himſelfe in perſon againſt them, & thoſe which were not as then ſubjugate to the Romans, by the valour & dexteritie of Vipſanius Agrippa, and ſome other Chieftanes and Lieutenant Generalls that came along with him, after a longe warre, which laſted fiftie yeares, at laſt they wearied them out, and overcame many of them.

Antiquity of their language.

The people of this Province (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) uſe a language, different from the reſt of Spaine, and is reported to haue continued without any great alteration, ſince the confuſion of Babel. That it is of this age he will not ſtand to proue, though an argument hereof may be, the ſmall or no affinity it hath with other tongues. Yet that it was the ancient language of Spaine is more then probable, becauſe this people haue ever continued without any mixture of forraine nations, as being never thrughly conquered, either by the Romans, Carthaginians. Gothes or Moores, and as they remained in their liberties, not wholly maſtered: ſo in their language, not altered. In like manner, the Arabique continued incorrupt, in the hilly parts of Granada, the tongue of the Old Britanies in our Wales, & the ancient Epirrotique in the high & woodie parts of that Countrie. Neither doe theſe Biſcaines differ from the reſt of Spaine in language, but in cuſtomes alſo. Three of them (ſaith he) I will ſet downe as a light to the reſt. Firſt they account themſelues free from taxes, and Contributions to the Kings of Spaine: yeelding them obedience with their bodies, but not with their purſes. And when any of the Spaniſh Kings, in their progreſſes come to the Frontiers of this Countrie; he bareth one of his leggs, and in that manner entreth into it. There he is mett by the Lords & Gentlemē there dwelling, who proffer him ſome ſmall braſſe peeces (Maravidis they call them whereof 600. goes to a crowne) in a leatherne bagg, hangingh them at the end of a Lance; but withall they tell him he muſt not take them. This Ceremonie performed, they all attend the King in his journey. Secondly, they admitt no Biſhops to come amonge them, & when Ferdinand the Catholique came in progreſſe hither, accompanied amongſt other by the Biſhop of Pampelona, the people aroſe in armes, droue back the Biſhop, and gathering all the Duſt, on which they thought he had trodden, flung it into the Sea. Thirdly, the women at all meetings doe firſt drinke, a cuſtome which hath continued ever ſince Ogdona Counteſſe of Caſtile would haue poyſoned her Sonne Sancho. Thus farre Mr. Heylin.

Amonge the townes of this Countrie Bilbao or Bilbo is accounted the nobleſt, in ſome mens opinion ſo called from Belvao, which ſignified Bellum Vadum, a fine foord: for it is ordinary with the Spaniards to pronounce B. in the place of V. This City was firſt founded by Didaco Lopeo de Hazo, a Prince of the Cantabrians, in the yeare of Chriſt 1300. or thereabouts. Amongſt the reſt there are three things, which adornes this towne, namely, the ſituation, the reſort, and plentie of all manner of food & ſuſtenance, & the variety of commerce, with the abundance of people that frequent it. It is ſeated about two miles from the Sea, in a very fine pleaſant plaine. All commodities, which are tranſported out of France, England, & the Low-Countries into Spaine muſt be firſt belanded here, from hence alſo Spaine, ſends forts their marchandiſes into forraine Countries. From hence alſo come your Bilbo-blades. Here dwell ſuch rich Citizens, that they are able every yeare to build 3. or 4. ſhipps.

Townes. Bilbo.

Oppoſite againſt it lieth upon the Sea a ſmall towne called Portugalette, where a great arme of the Sea floweth in, and waſheth not onely the towne of Bilbao, but almoſt all the houſes in it, by the accommodation whereof all manner of wares are brought into it at a ſmall rate.

Portugalette.

Likewiſe this Countrie hath many other commodious Sea havens, to which are brought all kinde of delicate Fiſhe, as alſo Pearles, though not of the beſt ſort.

Sea Havis.

The Inhabitants are kinde and of a frolick diſpoſition. The Biſcaine-maides weare noe long haire, but goe bare headed, till they marie, but being eſpouſed then they deck their heads with a tinſill quoife, made after the faſhion of a murion with treſſes, which they winde about their heads, and ſtands upright, as if they had a horne growing out of their fore heads.

The manner of the maids attire on their heads

The Principaleſt reaſon, wherefore the French, Engliſh, Neitherlanders & other Nations driue ſuch a trade here, is becauſe of their Spaniſh Woll, for there ye ſhall ſee the Markett-places, an every Corner full of Buyers and Sellers.

THE DESCRIPTION OF BISCAIA, GVIPVSCOA, NAVARRA, and of ASTVRIA DE SANTILLANA.

The originall name.

BISCAIE tooke this name, according to the opinion of Ioannes Biſhop of Gerunda, from the Baſtuli the ancient Inhabitants of Bætica: For they fleeting out of Lybia into Hiſpania Bætica, & being chaſed out of it by the Moores, made their retreate into the Mountaines of Galicia, where fortifying and ſetling themſelues it retayned the name of this people, ſo that from that time forward this territoire was called Baſtulia. Others againe ſay, that this name is derived from the Vaſcones, part of which people, when they had left their old habitations, came into this Countrie, naming it firſt Vaſcaia, then Viſcaia and by changing of V into B is now called Biſcaia.

Site.

This Countrie of Spaine lieth upon the Sea Coaſt, environned with Mountaines, the aire being more milder & temperate, then in any of the other parts of Spaine: for by meanes of the loftie Mountaines, wherewith it is rounded, the cold is not ſo vehement there, neither is it ſo ſubject to the extremity of heate. The Countrie is every where full of Trees, excellent good for timber for maſts & ſhips: beſides they haue ſuch abundance of Yron, that a whole Navie of Shipps may here be built, rigged & ſett forth. Here are alſo great ſtore of Cheſtnutts & other Nutts, Oranges, Rozzen, Gummes, diverſe Mettalls, as Yron and Black-lead, with diverſe other commodities. In ſtead of Wine, they preſſe and make there a kinde of pleaſant Cider. Moreouer they haue there all kinde of foure-footed Beaſts and Cattell, Fiſhe and Fowle, and all things neceſſary for the ſuſtenance of man.

Temperature.

Fertility.

Ancient Inhabitants.

This Countrie was in old time inhabited by the Cantabri, their limits extending in thoſe daies further, then Biſcaie doth at this preſent: for they poſſeſſed alſo Guipuſcoa & Navarre. Theſe people were in ancient times famous Hiſtoriographers, and thought no life or profeſſion, comparable to a ſouldiers. When all other people of Spaine were ſubdued by the Romans, they and the Aſtures their next Neighbours were not vanquiſhed, till Octavianus Auguſtus came himſelfe in perſon againſt them, & thoſe which were not as then ſubjugate to the Romans, by the valour & dexteritie of Vipſanius Agrippa, and ſome other Chieftanes and Lieutenant Generalls that came along with him, after a longe warre, which laſted fiftie yeares, at laſt they wearied them out, and overcame many of them.

Antiquity of their language.

The people of this Province (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) uſe a language, different from the reſt of Spaine, and is reported to haue continued without any great alteration, ſince the confuſion of Babel. That it is of this age he will not ſtand to proue, though an argument hereof may be, the ſmall or no affinity it hath with other tongues. Yet that it was the ancient language of Spaine is more then probable, becauſe this people haue ever continued without any mixture of forraine nations, as being never thrughly conquered, either by the Romans, Carthaginians. Gothes or Moores, and as they remained in their liberties, not wholly maſtered: ſo in their language, not altered. In like manner, the Arabique continued incorrupt, in the hilly parts of Granada, the tongue of the Old Britanies in our Wales, & the ancient Epirrotique in the high & woodie parts of that Countrie. Neither doe theſe Biſcaines differ from the reſt of Spaine in language, but in cuſtomes alſo. Three of them (ſaith he) I will ſet downe as a light to the reſt. Firſt they account themſelues free from taxes, and Contributions to the Kings of Spaine: yeelding them obedience with their bodies, but not with their purſes. And when any of the Spaniſh Kings, in their progreſſes come to the Frontiers of this Countrie; he bareth one of his leggs, and in that manner entreth into it. There he is mett by the Lords & Gentlemē there dwelling, who proffer him ſome ſmall braſſe peeces (Maravidis they call them whereof 600. goes to a crowne) in a leatherne bagg, hangingh them at the end of a Lance; but withall they tell him he muſt not take them. This Ceremonie performed, they all attend the King in his journey. Secondly, they admitt no Biſhops to come amonge them, & when Ferdinand the Catholique came in progreſſe hither, accompanied amongſt other by the Biſhop of Pampelona, the people aroſe in armes, droue back the Biſhop, and gathering all the Duſt, on which they thought he had trodden, flung it into the Sea. Thirdly, the women at all meetings doe firſt drinke, a cuſtome which hath continued ever ſince Ogdona Counteſſe of Caſtile would haue poyſoned her Sonne Sancho. Thus farre Mr. Heylin.

Townes. Bilbo.

Amonge the townes of this Countrie Bilbao or Bilbo is accounted the nobleſt, in ſome mens opinion ſo called from Belvao, which ſignified Bellum Vadum, a fine-foord: for it is ordinary with the Spaniards to pronounce B. in the place of V. This City was firſt founded by Didaco Lopeo de Hazo, a Prince of the Cantabrians, in the yeare of Chriſt 1300. or thereabouts. Amongſt the reſt there are three things, which adornes this towne, namely, the ſituation, the reſort, and plentie of all manner of food & ſuſtenance, & the variety of commerce, with the abundance of people that frequent it. It is ſeated about two miles from the Sea, in a very fine pleaſant plaine. All commodities, which are tranſported out of France, England, & the Low-Countries into Spaine muſt be firſt belanded here, from hence alſo Spaine, ſends forts their marchandiſes into forraine Countries. From hence alſo come your Bilbo-blades. Here dwell ſuch rich Citizens, that they are able every yeare to build 3. or 4. ſhipps.

Portugalette.

Oppoſite againſt it lieth upon the Sea a ſmall towne called Portugalette, where a great arme of the Sea floweth in, and waſheth not onely the towne of Bilbao, but almoſt all the houſes in it, by the accommodation whereof all manner of wares are brought into it at a ſmall rate.

Sea Havis.

Likewiſe this Countrie hath many other commodious Sea havens, to which are brought all kinde of delicate Fiſhe, as alſo Pearles, though not of the beſt ſort.

The manner of the maids attire on their heads

The Inhabitants are kinde and of a frolick diſpoſition. The Biſcaine-maides weare noe long haire, but goe bare headed, till they marie, but being eſpouſed then they deck their heads with a tinſill quoife, made after the faſhion of a murion with treſſes, which they winde about their heads, and ſtands upright, as if they had a horne growing out of their fore heads.

Marchandize.

The Principaleſt reaſon, wherefore the French, Engliſh, Neitherlanders & other Nations driue ſuch a trade here, is becauſe of their Spaniſh Woll, for there ye ſhall ſee the Markett-places, an every Corner full of Buyers and Sellers.

GVIPVSCOA.

The originall of the name.

Vipuſcoa was alſo formerly a territoire belonging to the Cantabrians. Some call it Lipuſcoa & Lipuiſca but corruptely, as Stephanus Garibayus. An Inhabitāt to the ſame Countrie ſheweth, whence it firſt tooke this denomination, I can not directly tell, unleſſe it came from the ancient towne called Opuſcua. On the Eaſt ſide it is bounded whith the river Vidoſone (which alſo is called Vidorſo, Alduida, Huria & Beoyvia) which taketh his courſe betweene France & Spaine, and the Pyrenean Mountaines: on the South with the Kingdome of Navarre, on the Weſt lieth Biſcaie, and on the North it is environned with the Biſcan Sea. The circumference of itis about 36. miles.

Site.

Limits circuit.

Fertility.

This Countrie hath a very mild aire, neither too hote nor too colde, but ſome what hun i le, & inconſtant, & in reg rd the moſt part of it is mountainous, and craggie, it is not much manured: but thoſe places, which are eared & tilled, are very fruitfull. There are almoſt noe Vine-ſtocks in it, but a few which growe by the Sea-ſide. This Countrie yeeldeth great ſtore of Yron & Steele, ſo that no place in the world affordeth more abundance, or better. There is ſo much digged here, that it is tranſported into diverſe Countries: yea it ſeemes nature hath made this Countrie Vulcans forge and Mars his Armorie. For here is not onely abundance of Yron & Steele; but alſo they make here all manner of Armes and Weapons: in ſo much that it is not unfitly called in the Records of this Countrie, The VVall or Fortreſſe of the Kingdomes of Caſtile and Leon. Navigierus writeth, that their is ſo much Yron and Steele digged here out of the bowells of the hills and mountaines, that the gaine thereof amounts yearely aboue the Summe of 80. thouſand Ducates. Therefore Plinie with good reaſon noteth Lib. 34. Cap. 45. That there vvas in this Countrie a hill vvhich vvas all Yron.

Yron & Steele.

An Yron hill.

Ancient Inhabitants.

Ptolomie, Pomponius, Plinie and ſome others ſay, the ancient people c lled the Oregeviones, Antrigones and the Varduli inhabited here.

Townes.

The chiefe towne in this Countrie is Toloza, lying upon the confluence of the rivers Araxis and Oria, there are other townes beſides as Placētia, where there are an incredible number of Forgers of yron dwelling. Motrico or as ſome write Monte de Trico, after the name of a clift, which lyeth by this towne. Fuentarabia called by Ptol. Phlaſiobrigia: Fanum D. Sebaſtiani, heretofore Hiſuru, afterward Don Baſtia, & now Dona-ſtien, but abuſively, which is as much to ſay as S. Sebaſtian, for the word Don in the Cantabrian ſpeech, ſignifieth Sanctus or a Saint. The moſt places of the Cantabrian Countrie, by reaſon of the diverſity of their ſpeeches, haue gott ſundry names, ſome time ſo called by the Cantabrians, otherwiſe by the Spainards, and after an other name by the French, which border upon it. This Saint Sebaſtian lieth upon the mouth of that river, which Ptolomie nameth Menoſca, & Pomponius Mela Menaſcus, & now is called Rio Gurumea or Vramea.

The head of Chalybs.

The head of the river Chalybs ſpringeth up in this territoire, the water whereof is excellent good for the tempering of yron, in ſo much, that the Spainards will weare no other armes or haue any worke but ſuch as are tempered therewith. Iuſtinus ſaith, that after the name of this river, theſe people were called Chalybes. This towne hath a very large haven, made not by the art of man, but rather by nature, where ſhipps may harbour, and ſhelter themſelues againſt all ſtormes & tempeſt. The entrāce into it is betweene two Caſtles, that which is Eaſtward ſtandeth upon the top of a high hill, much higher then the other, but that to the Weſtward upon a Cliſte.

Manners.

The Inhabitants of this Countrie, for their behaviour and ſpeech are like to the Biſcaines, they are ſharpe-witted, politick and well mannered, which allures other nations to converſe with them: they will not willingly be forced to any thing. They are Lovers and ſevere maintainers of their priviledges: they are full of agility and animoſity, and can handle their weapons with great dexteritie, & are giuen to followe the warrs. Their woman are of a ſtrong conſtitution, and as couragious as the men, hauing good countenances, envred to all manner of labour, neither are they puffed up with pride. Thoſe which inhabite by the Sea Coaſt liue for the moſt part upon navigation and Fiſhing; which brings them in a great deale of wealth and richeſſe.

NAVARRE.

Fertility.

Navarre being the ſecond Kingdome for antiquitie in Spaine, is everie where as fruitfull, and abounding in all things needefull for the ſuſtenance of man, as any of all the petty Kingdomes of Spaine.

Site.

It hath on the Eaſt the Pyrenean Mountaines, on the Weſt Iberus, on the North Biſcay, & on the South Arragon. The old Inhabitāts hereof were the Vaſcones, who paſſing over the hills into France, poſſeſſed that part of it called ſince Vaſconia or Gaſcoigne as Mercator ſaith.

Ancient Inhabitants.

Though it ſeemeth to be but of a ſmall circuit: yet are there 56. walled townes in it, whereof the chiefe are theſe, Victoria, Viana, Sangneſſa, &c.

Townes.

The Inhabitants of this Countrie were heretofore an animous & a warlike Nation, who oftentimes caſt of the Roman yoake, till at laſt they where tamed and ſubdued. For after that Cajus Iulius Dictator of Rome was made away, & that Octavianus Auguſtus ſucceeded him in the Empire, this people felt the furie & ſharpe edge of the Romane ſword, after that Auguſtus ſent 4. Legions againſt them, who deſtroyed this whole Province with fire and ſword: ſeing themſelues then overmaſtered, & that they were not able to reſiſt any longer the power of the Romans, many of them fledd up into the Mountaines, which for the craggineſſe & ſteepeneſſe of thē they cold ſcarcely clime up, called at this day Navaia, & ſhoote out farre betweene Meſcua & Eulate; after they had dwelt upon the topps of them a good while, they gott the name of Navini from the ſame Mountaines, but afterward, when the Moores had brought all Spaine under their power, then they called this people Navarres. Theſe Moores tyrannizing over them, and plaging them ſorely, they were driuen to abandon againe theſe Seats & habitations, and to betake themſelues into the Pyrenean Mountaines, where having elected a King of their owne, they liued under diverſe of their Kings, according to their owne lawes & ſtatutes, till the yeare of our Lord 1513. that Pope Iulius the Second excōmunicated Iohn Albert King of Navarre, as a Schiſmatike, & as an Adherent with Levves the Twelft King of France, & by a ſentence depoſed him from his Kingdome, & gaue it to Ferdinand the Catholique, who had long gaped after it, which hapned in this māner: Ferdinād having levied an army, under the coulour of extirpating the Moores, turneth upon the French King & him, & demandeth of theſe Princes, not onely a free paſſage through their Countrie; but alſo to haue certaine places of ſtrength putt into his hāds for his better aſſurāce. Theſe uniuſt demaunds the Navarroys denied, whereupō Ferdinand with all expeditiō, ſent the Duke of Alva to invade his Kingdome, which he tooke without giving a blowe, & chaſed King Iohn out of it, & ſo left it to his Succeſſours. The Frēch King being as backward in affording due aſſiſtāce, as the other was unprovided of meanes for defence. The French netled with this loſſe, diverſe times attempted the recouery of it, but in vaine, for the Spainard keepeth it ſtill to this day. The Metropolis of this Kingdome is Pampelona, which ſome call alſo Pompeiopolin, as having bene founded by Pompeius Magnus. It lieth under the longitude of 16. degrees, & 11. minut. & under the latitude of 44. degrees, & 43. min. The other townes are S. Iohan, Pedis Portus, Mon Real. Amaya, Eſtella, Olyta, Taffala and Tudela. The reſt of the chiefe townes as Leon, Aſtorga, Santillana, Riba de Sella, Palencia, Comora & Miranda compriſed in this Map of Aſturia Santillana, ſhal be more fully deſcribed in the next following.

Pampelona.

THE DESCRIPTION OF GALLICIA, LEON, AND ASTVRIAS DE OVIEDO.

The Originall of the name

GALLICIA (otherwiſe called Galecia, or Gallæcia in Latin, which name came from the ancient people Gallaici) is bounded on the North and Weſt with the maine Sea, on the South with Portugall, being ſeparated frō it by the river Duero, and on the Eaſt with Aſturia.

Bounds.

This Countrie in regard of the craggie Mountaines and want of water, is not much inhabited; yet there are ſuch an infinite number of horſes, & mares in it, as if they were conceiued and gatt by the winde.

Fertility.

Plinie writeth, that there are rich gold mines in it. Niger mentioned that in the rivers of the Artabroran Earth, there are found Gould, Silver & Tinne, & that this ſoile is rich in Gould, Copper, and Lead; ſo that oftentimes there ſtickes ſome peeces of Gould and Oare upō the plough-ſheards, when they eare up the ground. Vpon the Mountaines growes braue timber for the building of Shipping. Gallicia aboundeth alſo in fiſhe, eſpecially in Salmons & Congers, which they commonly call there Peſcades, beſides diverſe other kinds of delicate fiſhe, which being ſalted are ſent into ſundry parts of Spaine. In the Monthes of November & December, there are incredible multitude of fiſhe taken, which they vulgarly call Veſagos, weighing about two pound weight or there abouts, which are ſent freſh through out all Gallicia, by reaſon the piercing cold preſerues them from ſtinking. They haue a daintie taſt, but thoſe which are taken in the maine Sea, are held better, then thoſe which they catch in the Mediterranean Sea: for by reaſon of the coleneſſe of the Ocean, theſe fiſhe growe greater and fatter, and the further they are taken to the Northward, the better they are. The originall, and name of the Gallaici, ye ſhall finde in Iohannes Biſhop of Gerunda, in his Paralipomena Hiſpaniæ Lib. 2. as alſo *Rodericus Toletanus lib.*10. *de Rebus Hiſpaniæ. Cap.*4. & others.

Townes. Compoſtella.

The chiefe citie of Gallicia is Compoſtella, the ſeate of the Archbiſhop vulgarly called San Iago, in the honour of Saint Ieames, who lieth buried here, and of whome there is an order of knights. In a Church of this towne are kept the Reliques of Saint Ieames, which are to this day worſhipped with incredible devotion, and viſited with a wonderfull concourſe of people. This Church alſo did Charles the Great make one of the three Apoſtolicke Seates, the other two being S. Peters in Rome, and Saint Iohns in Epheſus. This towne is alſo a famous Vniverſitie. Franciſcus Tarapha, Ambroſius Morales, and Villanovanus write, that in ancient times it was called Brigantium. Oroſius nameth it Brigantia, and ſaith further, that there was a tower in it, upon which ſtood a Fire-beacon. Ptolomie calleth it Flavium Brigantium, which notwith-ſtanding Beuterus, Coquus, and Ioannes Mariana thinke to be Betancos, but Florianus and Gomecius maintaine the contrarie, that this ſhould be Cornua. Ioannes Gerundenſis is of opinion, that this towne Compoſtella, ought to be called Compos-ſtella, for ſaith he in theſe Countries, they had wont to call the morning & the evening ſtarre ſo, but it matters not. At Salamanca in the Librairie of the Colledg of Salvador there is a ſtorie of Compoſtel, compriſed in two bookes by Didacius the firſt Arch-Biſhop of Compoſtella, in which is deſcribed at large the originall, the progreſſe, and the encreaſe of the Churches of Compoſtella, which ye may read alſo in Lucius Marinæus Siculus *de Rebus Hiſpaniæ, Lib.*5. in that Chapter, which treateth of the Churches, Hoſpitalls and Religious houſes of Spaine, and of the miracles, which haue hapned there. The leſſer townes in this Countrie are Cornua, Bayona, and Orenſe, lying upon the river Minius, called by Ptolomy Therma Calidæ, which Gomecius in the life of Franciſcus Ximenius cōfirmeth, adding hereunto, that the Suevi a Germane Nation, bringing heretofore theſe parts under their obedience called it VVarenſee in their language, Ortelius being of the opinion, that it ought rather to be written, VVarme-See. Orenſium.

The towne formerly called Lucus in Gallicia, is now named Lugo: by Pomponius it is called Turris Auguſti, by Plinie Ara Sextianæ, and by Ptolomie Ara Seſtii, Promontorium ad Oceanum Cantabricum in Artabris. Pons Vetus now called Ponte Vedra. Ribadeum now Rivadeo, with diverſe other townes are deſcribed by Marinæus Siculus, in the beginning of his third booke. Lugo. Ribadeum.

The ancient Princes & Gouvernment of Gallicia which obtayned the title of a Kingdome.

The Hiſtorie of Spaine (ſaith Mr. Heylin) telleth us, that when the Vandals made their firſt inrodes into Spaine, there entred with them a people called the Suevi, who, according to the deviſion made betweene them & the Vandals and Alani, laid hands on this Province, under the conduct of Hermerick their firſt King. The third King Recaire did receiue the Chriſtian faith, & with it alſo Arrianiſme. He ſurpriſed Navarre and Arragon, but could not defend his owne Countrie from Theodericke the Gothe: who after gaue the Gallicians leaue to chooſe an other King. Hereupon enſued diverſe bloodie factions, betwixt the more potent of the Nobilitie, till at laſt the honour fell on Ariſmund. Finally, after this Kingdome had endured 177. yeares warrs; it was ſubdued by Leonigild a King of the Gothes. It was againe made a Kingdome, by Alphonſo the Great of Leon, and by him given to his Sonne Ordogno, An. 886. & was againe incorporated to Leon by Alphonſo the Sixth, who wreſted it from Don Garcia, 1081. For, after that Ferdinand King of Caſtile (Sonne unto Sanctius Major King of Navarre) had marryed Sanctia the Daughter of Alphonſus the Fifth, and the Siſter and Inheritrix of Veremund the third King of Leon, theſe two Kingdomes of Caſtile, and Leon, were annexed together. He made this teſtamentarie will amongſt his three Sonnes, that Sanctius ſhould haue his Kingdome of Caſtile, Alphonſus Leon and Auſtria, and Garcia Gallicia (which Countrie was conquered by his Wiues Predeceſſours, and till then bore but the title of an Earledome) and Portugall. Sanctius impatient at his Fathers partition, chaſed his Brother Alphonſus out of his Kingdome, and made away his brother Garcia, who after he had reigned ſixe yeares, was murdered by the ſubtilty of Vellido. Alphonſus then being expulſed, and living at Toledo in exile with the Mooriſh King, did not onely recouver againe his owne Kingdome, (which his Father had given him by will) but alſo the Kingdomes of Caſtile, Gallicia, and Portugall. This Alphonſus had three Legitimate Children, but each of them by a ſeverall

Kingdome.

Wife. By Isabella Queene of France, he procreated Sanctia, who was giuen in marriage to Count Rhodericke: he built a new habitation in the towne vulgarly called Ciudad Rodrigo. By Zaida Maura the Daughter of the King of Sivill, he had Sanctius, who was slaine in a Battell against the Sarracens. By his Wife Constantia he gott Vrraca, who after the decease of Sanctius & Sanctia, dyed without issue. After this shee was married to Raymund Berengarius Earle of Toloze, who dying she had for her second husband Alphonsus King of Arragon, and left for her heire, her Sonne Alphonso the Seuenth, the mightiest of all the Kings, which had bene before him, so that he entituled himselfe Emperour of Spaine. And so from that time forward, Gallicia, Castile, & Leon, haue allwaies bene gouverned by one Kinge & Prince.

The description of

LEGIO or LEON.

Site. LEgio or Leon, on the North bordereth upon Asturia, on the West upon Gallicia, on the South & East upon Old-Castile. The originall name. It tooke this name from the seuenth Germane Legion, which formerly (as some suppose in the reigne of the Emperour Nervus) encamped in this Countrie.

The principalest towne in this petty Kingdome is that from whence it fott this name, called by Ptolomie Legio Septima Germanica: by Anthonine Legio Gemina, and at this day Leon, which Franciscus Tarapha would haue rather to be derived from Leonigilda King of the Gothes, then from Legio, for which I see litle reason. Morales relateth, that this city heretofore was also called Sublantia, the remnant of which name remayneth yet in a place named Salanco, lying about a mile and a halfe from Leon. L. Marinæus Siculus in his third booke of the memorable Acts of Spaine, writeth thus of the Church of Leon: Though the Church which stands now in Sivill puts downe all others for greatnesse, and albeit the Cathedrall Church of Toledo surpasseth all others in riches, ornaments, and fine glasse-windowes, and that the Church of Compostella is of a huge and a stronger structure, as also for Saint Iames his miracles, and other monuments more famous: yet in my opinion the Church of Leon excelleth all the others in regard of the most curious workemanship, wherewith it is built, having a Chappell in it wherein 37. Kings of Spaine, and one Emperour haue bene enterred. But which is more remarkable, about the yeare of Christ 716. when Spaine was conquered (and that the Moores and Sarracens had almost overrunne and wholly possessed it) they begann first with this towne: For Pelagius (as Rodericus Toletanus Lib. 6. in his memories of Spaine, Rodericus Sanctius in his first volume & 11. Chapter in his Chronicles, and others relate) being descended of the Royall Gotish blood, and the Sonne of Fasila Duke of Cantabria, with a remnant of the Christians, who had retired themselues into the Mountaines of Asturia, proclamed himselfe King, & having scarcely taken the gouvernment of the Realme upon him, ouerthrew the Moores in a Battell, and so by force snatched Leon out of their hands. Which he presently made the seat of his Kingdome, building there a strong Fortresse, & a Citadell, against the violence, and incursions of the Barbarians & casting a side the Gothish Kings armes, gaue for his armes a red Lyon rampant in a white field, which the Kings of Leon giue yet to this day. After Pelagius his Sonne Fasila succeeded him, who dying without issue, Alphonsus Catholicus succeeded him in the Kingdome, the Sonne of Peter Duke of Cantabria, being lineally descēded from Ricaredus Catholicus, King of the Gothes: Leon. he was espoused to Ormisenda, the onely Daughter and sole Inheretrix to Fasila. In his familly and Succession this principalitie of Leon continued, till Veramund the 24. King of Leon. After whose decease, it hapned about the yeare 1030. he leaving no heire males behinde him, his Sister Sanctia, being married to Ferdinand of Navarre King of Castile (as is said) annexed the Kingdomes of Leon & Castile together.

ASTVRIAS de OVIEDO.

Bounds. ASturia is bounded on the North with the maine Sea, on the East with Biscay, on the South with Old-Castile, and on the West with Gallicia. This Countrie produceth Gould, and diverse sorts of Colours, both for painting and dying. It is not greatly inhabited, but onely by the Sea-coast. This is the ancient habitation of the Asturi, who are called so (as Isidorus witnesseth Lib. 9. Etymolog. Cap. 11.) after the river Astura, whereof also Florus in his Fourth booke of his Romane Historie maketh mention. From these people this Country is called by Ptolomie Ἀστόρια in Greeke, and by the Latinists in an old marble stone Asturia: in which it is also engraven Astyria, among the rest in a floore of a Chapell, standing by S. Gregorius in Cœlio monte, where in a brooken table ye shall see these words written: Fruitfullnesse. Antiquity.

CVRAT. REIP. NOLANORVM. PROCOS.
PROVINCIÆ NARBONENSIVM. LEGATO AVG.
ET IVRIDICO ASTYRIÆ ET GALÆCIÆ
CVRATORI VIÆ SALARIÆ. &c.

In an other Marble Table at Rome, on the further side of the Tyber in a Roman Citizens house, it is read also Asturica, but now this Countrie is at this day called Asturias. Plinie Lib. 3. Cap. 3. devideth the Asturas in Augustanos, and Transmontanos. The Augustani dwelt on this side of the mountaines to the Southward: but the Transmontani inhabited on the further side of the Mountaines to the Northward, and the Sea. Of the Astures, Silius Italicus, Lib. 1. speaketh thus:

— Astur avarus
Viceribus lacera Telluris mergitur imis
Et redit infelix effosso concolor Auro.

Townes. The chiefe townes of this Kingdome are Aviles on the Sea side, Palenza Oviedo, which gaue title to the first Christian Kings after the Mooriish conquest, who were afterward called Kings of Oviedo and Leon, Anno 896. Astorgo, a towne happie in this, that it felt not the furie of the lustfull King Vitiza: who to secure himselfe in his unlawfull pleasure, and to weaken his subjects, if they should attempt revenge, dismantled all the townes in Spaine, except Leon, Toledo, and this Astorga.

The honour or title of the Eldest Sonne of Castile is called Prince of the Asturias, which some suppose to be giuen unto them (as Mr. Heylin saith) because this was the first principalitie, that held out against the Moores. But indeed, the true originall hereof is to be referred to the marriage of Catharine Daughter unto Iohn of Gaunt, and in the right of her Mother Constance true heire to the Realme of Castile, unto Henry Son to Iohn the First, then in possession of this Kingdome. For to this new marryed couple it was graunted, saith Mariana in his Historie, that as it is the manner of England, that the Heire apparant is called Prince of Wales, so they should be called Princes of the Asturias. And thus farre Mr. Heylin.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE KINGDOME OF PORTVGALL.

The originall name.

PORTVGALL was in ancient time by Ptolomie and others called Luſitania, though Appianus maketh it to be Liſitania. M. Varro and Plinie witneſſe, that it tooke this name from one Luſus, the Sonne of Liberus and Lyſa his miſtreſſe with whome he liued in luxurie, from whome it was called Luſitania, as the Countrie of Luſus. But Marcianus is of an other minde, that Luſitania tooke this name from a river ſo called, which poſſibly is now Tagus or Tajo. It hath the name of Portugall giuen it, from the Haven towne Porto, lying upon the mouth of Duerus, where the Gaules uſed to land with their marchandize: & therefore was called Portus Gallorum, and ſince the whole Countrie Portugall. Andreas Reſendius (of whoſe opinion are diverſe other Learned men beſides) deriveth this name De Portu Cale, and ſo (he ſaith) it gott the name of Portugall. If ye will reckon the breath of it from the South part to the North, it is greater then Old Luſitania, and if ye meaſure the length of it from the Weſt to the Eaſtward, it is much leſſer.

Largeneſſe.

Bounds.

The limits of Portugall in our times reacheth Northward beyond the confluence of the rivers Minius and Avia, as farre as the towne of Ribaldania, lying upon the river Avia towards Gallicia. From thence it ſhooteth Eaſtward to Miranda, ſeated upon the river Duerus, and ſo turning Southward goeth directly to the mouth of the river Ana, where Portugall bordereth upon Caſtile, Extremadura, and Andaluzia: on the Weſt the Atlantick Ocean beateth upon it. The Circumference of it is counted to be 880. Spaniſh miles, the length 320. and the breath 60.

Circuit length & breath.

Aire & fertility.

This Countrie lieth in a very good, and a wholeſome aire. For Wine, Oyle, Oranges, Citrons, Lemmons, Almand, Honey, Waxe, Allum, Salt, white Marble, Fruit, and Fiſhe they haue abundance, but the fruitfulleſt part of all the Country is about Conimbra. The fruits for goodneſſe, and taſt excells all the adjacent Countries. And though the ſoile beareth not ſo much Graine, as will ſuffice the people of the Countrie: yet are they ſufficiently furniſheth therewith out of France, Germanie, and England. This Countrie is alſo full of all kinde of Cattell and Beaſts, eſpecially, it aboundeth in horſes, touching the celeritie and ſwiftneſſe whereof, the ancients did verely beleeue that they were engendred by the winde.

The ancient Princes & Gouvernement.

In the yeare of our Lord 1100. Portugall begann firſt to be a Kingdome, for till then it was alwaies comprehended under Spaine. The firſt Progenitor of Portugall (as Hiſtories relate unto us) was Henry Duke of Lorraine, and Earle of Limburgh, a braue vaillant Prince, who making his abode in Spaine, eſpouſed Tyreſia the baſtard Daughter of Alphonſo the Sixth, King of Caſtile and Leon, and had in dowrie for her marriage, that part of Gallicia and Luſitania which is now called Portugall. This Countrie by his magnanimity and valour he hath taken out of the hands of the Moores and Sarracens, and deceaſing Anno 1112. his Sonne Alphonſo the Firſt ſucceeded him, & entituled himſelfe Duke of Portugall, afterward Anno 1139. he was honoured by his Souldiers with the Royall title of a King, having obtained a great victorie in the Obrichian Field, againſt Iſmarius, and foure other Kings of the Sarracens, leaving (as a perpetuall memorie of this defeate) to his Succeſſours fiue Shields for their Armes. After this Alphonſo ſucceeded in a right line Sancho, Alphonſo the Second, Sancho the Second, Alphonſo the Third, Denis, who entituled himſelfe Firſt King of Algarbia. After them followeth in order Alphonſo the Fourth, Pedro, Ferdinand, Iohn, Edvvard, Alphonſo the Fifth ſurnamed African, Iohn the Second, Emanuell, Iohn the Third, Sebaſtian, Henry the Cardinall, Antonio Gouvernour of Portugall, whom (becauſe they accounted him a Baſtard) being chaſed out of the Countrie, Philip the Second King of Spaine, as being the next heire unto Iſabella the eldeſt Daughter of King Emanuell pretended a right to the Crowne of Portugall, and though he made a ſhew, it ſhould be lawfully debated to whome it truely appartained, yet meaning to make ſure worke (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) made Canons & ſwords his Oratours, by maine force tooke it, and ſo his Sonne King Phillip the Third keepeth it and ruleth over it to this day.

Succeſſion.

Cities & Townes. Liſbond.

The chiefe towne of Portugall is Liſbon upon the Tagus, a famous citie for traffique, the Portugalls in all their navigations ſetting to Sea from hence. The Latin writers call it Oliſippo & Vliſippo, becauſe as ſome ſay Vlyſſes in his ten yeares travels coming hither, ſhould haue built it, which is improbable. In M. Varro, Plinie, Anthonine Mela, and ſome other ancient & authentique coppies it is called Oliſippo, and ſometimes Olyſippo and Vlyſippo, but now by the inhabitants Liſbona, & Liſboa. It may truely be accounted one of the chiefeſt Marchant townes of the whole world, abounding in all manner of wealth, and as a rich treaſurie for all wares and commodities, that are brought into it out of Aſia, Africa, and America. It is ſeateth in the mouth of the river Tagus in a very fine and pleaſant place, and is ſo great, that it comprehendeth fiue ſeuerall hills, and as many dales within the circuit of it. Heretofore it was much leſſe having but one hill within it, now greatly enlarged. It is in compaſſe ſeuen miles, & contayneth upwarts of twentie thouſand houſes all of neat, and elegant building. Towers and Turrets it numbreth on the walls about 67. Gates towards the Sea ſhore, 21. and 16. towards the continent. It hath 25. Parochiall Churches in it, beſides many Cloiſters, and Monaſteries. This city is held of all others lying beyond Tagus for a Nurcing mother. Finally, it was taken from the Moores by Alphonſo the Firſt King of this Countrie Anno 1147. The towne called by Plinie, Braga. deth the gallant towne of Braga ſo called at this day, but formerly by Ptolomie Bracar Auguſta, and Anthonine Bracara Auguſta, and Plinie Auguſta Braccarum. It is reported that this towne was founded by the Galli Braccati 290. yeares before the nativity of Chriſt: but the Romans taking it in, gaue it the name of Auguſta. In ancient times this towne was accounted famous; becauſe it was the ſeuenth convocation or meeting place for Citerior Hiſpania, from whence (as Plinie ſaith, 24. townes fetch their lawes.

Rivers. The rivers of this Countrie are Ana, or Guadina, Tagus, Mondego, Duerus, and Minius: but the chiefeſt of them all is the Tagus, and Duerus. On the Weſt and South part of Portugall, lieth the Atlantike Sea, which beſides the abundance of Fiſhe bringeth in many Hills. There are but few hills in Portugall, and thoſe that be in it, are not very great. The chiefeſt of them are called by the Inhabitants Sierra de Monchique, de Chaldecetao, de Sordedas, heretofore called Montes Lunæ, ſome of them haue woods and trees growing upon them. There are alſo throughout all Spaine many woods, wherein the Spaniſh Princes may take their pleaſure in hunting.

Beſides all theſe I paſſe ouer in ſilence, the many Geſt-houſes, Hoſpitalls, Orphan-houſes, Leprous-houſes, Towers, faire buildings and pleaſant Gardens & Orchards, & ſuch things. In this Kingdome there are two Vniverſities. Vniverſities, the one is at Ebora, & the other (as is ſaid) is Coimbra. The firſt of them was founded by Henry the Cardinall, King of Portugall, & Biſhop of the ſame place: the other was lately erected by Iohn the Second, King of Portugall. Amongſt all the Spaniſh nation the Manners. Portugalls are the fulleſt of agility, and dexterity, who quickly will ſett upon an ennemy, and ſoone fall off: they are very light handed, and labourious: they make much of themſelues, are wiſe in their owne conceits, and ſo feede themſelues rather with a vaine oſtentation, then indeed.

They are ſkillfull Navigators, and by their farre Voyages, ſaile into the moſt remote parts of the Earth, whereby their Commerce and Trafficke is much enriched.

The deſcription of

ALGARBIA or ALGARVE.

The Originall of the name. VNder Portugall is now the Kingdome of Algarve, which was ſo named by the Arabians, and ſignifieth in their language a rich field or a fruitfull ſoile, wherein there is plenty of all things, both to liue upon, & to ſend abroad. It was anciently called Regnum
Site. Algarbiorum. It beginneth in a right line (from the Eaſt to the Weſt) by the river Ana, betweene the waters Vataon and Carei-vas, and endeth at a ſmall towne called Odeſeiza, where Algarbia is ſeparated from Portugall, being the leaſt & the pooreſt Kingdome of all Spaine: but there is a great reſort unto it from diverſe parts of Spaine, by reaſon of the ſwift current of the river Ana, which brings into it Sack, Baſtard & Romaine Wines, Wares. beſides diverſe other commodities, which are ſhipt and tranſported from thence into France, England, the Low Countries and other parts.

Townes. The chiefe townes in it are Balſa, ſo called by Ptolomie, Plinie, Antonine, & Pomponius Mela: Coquus thinks that it was that which now is named Tavila, by Plinie and Anthonine Oſſonobo. Plinie giues it the ſurname Luſturia. Ptolomy nameth that Oſſonabo, which now is called Silvis. Neere unto the Promontorium Sacrum, now called the Cape of S. Vincent, becauſe the bones of S. Vincent, being religiouſly preſerved by the Chriſtians, were burnt here & ſcattred abroad by the Sarracens, who were then the poſſeſſours of this Province. Here abouts had wont to lye Lacobriga, mentioned by Pomponius, the ruines and peeces whereof are yet to be ſeene by the Sea-port Lagos, in the village, which the Portugalls call in their ſpeech Lagua, as Vaſæus witneſſeth.

The ancient Princes, & Gouvernment. Algarbia was at the firſt an Earledome (as the ancient Annalls mention) But the Sarracens being beaten out of it, made way to the good fortune of the Kings of Leon, to whoſe crowne this litle Countrie belonged, till Alphonſo the Tenth of that name in Leon, and Fourth in Caſtile, gaue it in dowrie with Beatrix his Daughter (whome he had by a Concubine) wife to Alphonſo the Third King of Portugall, from this conjunction iſſued Dionyſius or Denis King of Portugall, who was the firſt that euer uſed the title of Rex Algarbiorum, Anno 1274. and thus much for Portugall and Algarbia.

THE DESCRIPTION OF OLD and NEW CASTILE.

The originall name.

ASTILIA, or Caſtella tooke firſt this name from a Caſtle, which King Pelagius (after he had overmaſtered the Moores in Leon) built there as a Citadell againſt his Ennemies, but was formerly called Barduſia, being devided by the Spaniſh Geographers into Old, and Newv Caſtile.

Bounds. Old Caſtile is bounded on the North with Aſturia and Biſcay: on the Weſt with Portugall: on the South with Caſtella Nova: (the Mountaines which run with a continuall ridge almoſt through the whole length of Spaine lying betwixt them) and on Eaſt with Arragon and Navarre.

Fertility. It is a very fruitfull Countrie for Corne, Wine, and all manner of Fruits, Saffran, and all kind of Cattell. Rich Caſtile had its beginning in this manner: when King Pelagius had ridd & cleared Leon of the Moores, and built a ſtrong Caſtle or Fortreſſe in it, againſt the furie & violence of the Barbarians, the Gouvernours thereof were called Earles of Caſtel or Caſtilia, who acknowleged and obeyed the King of Leon for their Prince a long time, till Ordogno the Second, being the foureteenth King of Aſturia and Leon, under the ſhewe of frendſhip, ſending for all the chiefeſt Earles and Lords of Caſtile, to haue ſome conference with them, murdered them all: which horrible fact did ſo exaſperate & enbitter the Caſtilians, that caſting of the yoake of the Kings of Leon, they chooſe two Iudges amonge themſelues, to wit, Numius Raſura and Lainus Calvus, whereof the one was as a Iudge for Civill cauſes, and the other for Martiall affaires, whoſe children & ſucceſſours afterward were entituled Earles of Caſtile, till that Sancho the Great, King of Navarre, who by his valour, having taken Corduba and Toledo, from the Saracens, and driven all the Moores out of Navarre, Arragon, Caſtile, Leon, Portugall, and other parts of Spaine, reſtored this whole Countrie againe to the Chriſtian faith, and withal married Elvira the Daughter of Sancho, Earle of Caſtile, being the Siſter of the laſt Earle Garcia, and his ſole inheretrix, who then abandonning the title of Earle, called himſelfe King of Caſtile, leaving this Realme to his Sonne Ferdinand the Firſt, who by the marriage of his Ladie Sancha, enriched himſelfe with the Kingdome of Leon. After Ferdinand his Sonne, Sancho ſucceeded, and next him his Brother Alphonſo, whoſe Daughter Vrraca (the iſſue male failing, after the deceaſe of her firſt huſband Raymund Berengario Count of Toloza) was eſpouſed to Alphonſo King of Arragon, by which match the Kingdomes of Arragon, Caſtile and Leon were annexed together.

The ancient Princes & Gouvernours.

Caſtile at the firſt an Earledome.

Burgos the chiefeſe towne of Old Caſtile. The Capitall Citie of Old Caſtile is Burgos, called by Ptolomy (as ſome imagine) Branum. It was built, or rather repaired by Nugno Belidis a German. This citie contendeth with Toledo for the primateſhip of Spaine. It is a very ancient towne, and famous for many things, and therefore is accounted one of the principaleſt cities of Spaine, having under the reſort thereof 150. great & ſmall townes. It hath magnificent buildings, and fine Mercate-places, faire Streets, Bridges, Churches and Monaſteries, adorned alſo with ſweete Springs and Fountaines, and is very famous in regard of the induſtrie, diligence, and commerce of the inhabitants thereof.

Townes. Round about this Capitall City, lie the townes following, ſeated in very pleaſant places: as Palencia upon the river Carrion, called by Plinie, Mela, Ptol. and Appianus Palentia, by Strabo Pallantia, and by Anthonine, but not rightly Peralantia. The citie of Valdoledum, was once the Kings Seate, lying upon a delicate river called Piſverga, in a very delightſome, & a pleaſant place: ſo that ſcarce the like is to be found in all Spaine, or in whole Europe: and indeed I know not what towne I ſhould preferre before it, lying in a moſt fruitfull Countrie, having a large Mercate-place, containing aboue 700. paces in circuit; & though this city be famous for many things: yet is it the more ennobled by reaſon that Phillip the Second King of Spaine was borne there. It is commonly called Valladolid, which ſome interpret to be Vallum Oleti. Ptolomie his Pintia, in the opinion of Cluſius ſhould be Anthonines Pincia. Simanca is called by Anthonine Septimanca, by Ptolomie Camora, and by Cluſius Sarabris. But Florianus del Campo and Gomerius are of opinion, that Sarabris ſhould be that towne, which is vulgarly named Taro, called in Latin Taurus, lying upon the river Durius. Anthonines and Ptolomies Salamantica, is not one of the ſlighteſt townes, Polyenus calleth that Salmatis, which is now Salamanca. Not farre from thence upon the river Gada lieth Count Roderigo his towne, called Ciudad Rodrigo, which in the opinion of Vaſæus and Cluſius ſhould be Ptolomies Myrobriga, a towne of the Celtiberians in Luſitania. A litle further to the Southward ſtandeth Coria, formerly called Caurita, as Cluſius writeth, which is now named by the Moderne Latine writers (as Andreas Schottus witneſſeth) Curia. Some nine miles further Eaſtward lieth Placentia, a very fine towne, being much commended for the delicate Citrons, & other Fruits that growe by it, as alſo for white bread: it is called at this day Plazencia. This towne hath many other townes under the juriſdicton thereof, amonge the which Xavahicium, is not the leaſt; being gallantly ſeated amonge woods and groues, as likewiſe Piſaro, lying in a fine Valley like an Altar under the rooſe of a Church, as Marinæus hath well obſerved. The hills round about Placenzia are called after the name of this city Vera de Placentia. Ptolomies Olbula is now called Avila, as Cluſius witneſſeth, of which Toſtatus was Biſhop, & is therefore called Abulenſis. He was Preſident of the Councill to Iohn the Second, King of Arragon, and wil be eternally famous, for his learned and painefull Commentaires on the Bible. For ſo great are they (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) that it is ſuppoſed (if wee had all is workes) that he wrot as many ſheetes as he liued dayes, and for the worth of them take along with you this Eulogie, which Caſaubon in his worke againſt Baronius affordeth him, Laudo acumen viri, ſi in meliora incidiſſet tempora, longe maximi. Not farre from the Fountaine of Areva, lieth Segobia called by Plinie and Anthonine Segovia, and alſo now in theſe dayes. This citie is famous for Woll, and Wollen cloath, as alſo for an excellent Aquaduct, which the Romans made there; but much more becauſe no lazie people or Beggars are in it; but onely in regard of age, or ſickneſſe when they are not able to worke, and then they are provided for, and no man dwelleth in it, but he may gett his living well. The towne now called Aranda, lying upon the river Durius, is Ptolomies Rhanda Vaccaorum, placing it in Hiſpania Tarraconenſi, and by Anthonine is called Rauda. That which elſwhere is called Exoma, and Plinies Vxomo is

Romans 14. yeares, during which time having valiantly repulſed and forced them unto two diſhonorable compoſitions, they at laſt reſolved on a ſtrange and deſperate end. For gathering all their armes, money and goods together, they laid them on a pile, and buried themſelues in the flame, leaving Scipio nothing but the bare name of Numantia, to adorne his triumph.

The Deſcription of NEW CASTILE.

New Caſtile.

Site.

NEvv Caſtile hath on the North part of it the Old, buth the other ſides are environned with Portugall, Extremadura, Andaluzia, Granada and Valentia, it lieth on both ſides of the river Tago, and is exceeding rich and fruitfull in Wheate and other Graine.

Toledo.

The Metropolis is called by the Latins Toletum, by Ptolomie Toleton, & at this day Toledo. Plinie nameth it Toletanus in the old Medalls of Auguſtus. H. Gotzius calleth it Colonia Toletana: Villanovanus commenting upon Ptolomie ſaith, it ought to be calleth Sere- zola. This citie lieth in the very center and heart of Spaine, ſeated in a hilly, craggie, & an uneven ground, which in ſome places are very difficult and troubleſome to gett up, and is for the greateſt part defended againſt any ſuddaine aſſault of an ennemy with the river Tagus. That part which lieth Northward, is girt about with a ſtrong wall, having aboue 150. Towers, and Turrets upon it. Here dwells abundance of the nobility & gentrie, and the Citizens being very ingenious and laborious. Among the ſumptuous buildings in it, there is a moſt ſtately, and a fine Cathedrall Church. Here hath bene held (as ye ſhall read in Hiſtories) many Councill, yea more then ſeuenteene, which no towne beſides can glorie in. The city of Toledo is honored by Madrito or Madrid as a Mother and Queene, being ſeated in a wholeſome place, abounding in all things neceſſaire for the ſuſtenance of man, affording the Spaniſh Kings a moſt pleaſant ſeate and dwelling.

Townes.

Not farre from thence is Villamanta, which B. A. Montanus and Tarapha maintaine to be Ptolomies Mantua Carpetanorum, which lyeth in Tarraconenſi Hiſpania. The towne which the Spagnards call at this day with an Arabick name Alcala de Henares is ſo certainely held to be Ptolomies Complutum, that in all Acts and Coppies it is called in Latine by no other name: it lieth in a plaine by the river Henare, and is ſo provided with all things neceſſarie for humane life, that it hath no neede of any outlandiſh proviſions. Anthonines Segontia, is ſeated betweene Complutum and Cæſar-Auguſta, which now as Varrerius and Moralis witneſſe is named Siguença. Alcantara lieth upon the river Tagus, which Varrerius and others make mention to be Ptolomies Norba Cæſaria, and Plinies Norbenſis Colonia. This towne is famous in regard of the fine Bridge and other notable antiquities, Talavara, Beuterus & Moralis thinke it to be Livius his Æbrora. The other townes are Cuença, Plinies Caucenſes, Lebazuza, Anthonines Libiſoſa and Caſſona la Veia, which was Anthonines Guſtulus.

Madrid is the Kings Seate, whoſe reſidencie (though the Countrie be neither fruitfull, nor pleaſant) hath made that place of a village, the moſt populous towne of all Spaine. It is a cuſtome, that except ſome compoſition be made, all the upper ſtories of their buildings belong to the King. Madrid.

Fiue miles from Madrid to the Weſtward lieth the magnificent and ſumptuous Eſcuriall or Monaſterie of S. Laurence, built by King Phillip the Second, with an unſpeakable charge and artifice, that the ſtructure thereof, may truely be compared to the Pyramides of Ægypt, and to the ancient Greekiſh and Romiſh Temples, Theaters, Amphitheaters, Play-houſes, Bathing-houſes, ſtately Tombes, or any other Royall or ſumptuous buildings, whereof the like is ſcarce to be found in the whole World. A place (ſaith Quade, who ſpendeth 13. pages in its Deſcription) of that magnificence, that no building in times paſt or this preſent, is comparable to it. The front towards the Weſt is adorned with three ſtately Gates, the middlemoſt whereof leadeth into a moſt magnificent Temple: a Monaſterie in which are 150. Monkes of S. Ieromes Order, and a Colledge: that on the right hand openeth into diverſe offices belonging to the Monaſterie, that on the left unto Schooles and Out-houſes, appertaining to the Colledge. At the foure Corners there are foure Turrets of excellent workemanſhip, and for height majeſticall. Towards the North is the Kings Palace, on the South part are divers beautifull & ſumptuous galleries, and on the Eaſt ſide, ſundry gardens & wals, very pleaſing & delectable. It containeth in all eleuen ſeverall quadrangles, every one encloyſtered: and is indeed ſo braue a ſtructure, that it cauſeth great admiration & wonder. The Palace of Eſcuriall.

At Toledo alſo there is a ſtately Palace, repaired by Charles the Fifth, with new roomes royally adorned, in which beſides ſome other exquiſite workemanſhip, there is a rare Water-worke made after the Italian modell, which through a ſwift-turning hollow wheele, caſts water out of the river Tagus, up into diverſe conduit pipes, to the very top of the Palace, and there being gathered as it were in great Ceſterne, it led from thence into diverſe places; not onely belonging to the Palace it ſelf, but alſo through the whole citie, and ſendeth forth ſuch ſprings and currents that not onely the gardens, houſes and bathing ſtones of many great Lords are watered and furniſhed there with, but alſo the private Citizens, yea Tradſmen and Weavers receiue much benefite by it. The Palace of Toledo.

This Countrie of Nevv Caſtile, is adorned with two famous Vniverſities, namely Complutenſis Academia, wherein all Arts and Sciences are tought, founded by Fraciſcus Ximenius, Cardinall & Arch-Biſhop of Toledo. The other no leſſe renowned is Toledo it ſelfe, in which city all manner of manufactures are made, wherein it is thought there are aboue ten thouſand people that liue all upon carding and ſpinning of Woll, and Silks. Vniverſities.

The rivers in Nevv Caſtile are Tagus or Tejo. Xaruma honored with the neighbourhood of Madrid; alſo Iavina, and diverſe other riverets and ſprings, which water it. Here alſo beginneth the head of the river Anas, which the Inhabitants call Guadiana.

The rivers of Old Caſtile are Keſannos, Tormes, which glideth by Salamanca: alſo Duerius the moſt violent river of Spaine, with ſome others beſide. Rivers.

OF ANDALUSIA, CORDUBA, SIVILLIA, THE KINGDOME OF GRANADA, and the Territoire of ESREMEDURA.

The originall name.

ANDALUSIA, as a part of Hiſpania Betica was formerly called Vandalia or quaſi Vandaluzia, from the Vandalls a Germane Nation, which in ancient times incorporated this Countrie. For Andaluzia is as much to ſay as the Vandals-houſe, or habitation. Marius Aretius is of an other opinion, that Andaluzia tooke this name from Ante-Luzitania, by changing of ſome letters in it.

Bounds.

Andaluzia is bounded on the Eaſt with Granada, on the North with New-Caſtile, on the Weſt with the Pacenſian and Sylvenſian Iuriſdiction and the river Anas, & on the South with the Atlantike Sea. The principalleſt part of this Countrie, is the Royaltie and Iuriſdiction of Sivill, having on the Eaſt ſide of it Corduba, on the Weſt Algarbia, on the North that part of Portugal which is called Magiſtratus S. Iacobi, and more Weſtward hath the maine Ocean, and the Territorie of Gades.

Teperature, ſoile & fertility.

This Countrie hath a healthfull, a milde and a very temperate aire. The ſoile for Corne, Wine, Oyle, and all kinde of Fruits, is ſo exceeding fruitfull, that it is a wonder to ſee it; in ſo much, that it hath not onely ſufficient for it ſelfe, but alſo furniſhed adjoyning, and remore Countries. And, as Plinie ſaith, Spaine for fertility may almoſt be compared to Italie, eſpecially that part which lieth next the Sea coaſt, as that part of Betica, which is under the Commaund of Sivill, upon which the Ocean beateth, and which is ſubject to the Zephyrian & ſweete Weſterne Windes. And doubtleſſe he would haue extolled this Countrie aboue al others for fruitfulneſſe, hath he not been an Italian himſelfe; and therefore loving his owne Natiue-countrie, preferred it beyond all others. Beſides the fertility, this Country is exceeding rich, abounding in all manner of Cattell, eſpecially in Conies.

And as wee haue mentioned before, that Andaluzia tooke its name from the Vandals, who being chaſed out of it by the Gothes, tooke up their habitation and dwelling there, till they were driuen to make their retreat into Africa, ſo the true Storie thereof is this: Rodericke the 31 King of the Gothes and the laſt, ſent Iulian, whome he had made Earle of Mauritania Tingitana, on an honorable Embaſſie to the Moores of Africa; & in the meane time deflowred his Daughter Cana: which the Father tooke in ſuch indignation and ſo to heart, that he procured the Moores, amongſt whome he had gotten much credit, to come into Spaine. This requeſt they performed under the Conduct of Muſa and Tharif, who Anno 714. coming along the ſtreight tooke in Gibralter, and made almoſt a full conqueſt of Spaine ſaving the Aſtures. It is recorded in a M.S. Hiſtorie of the Sarracens, that at the firſt comming of Tariffe into Spaine, a poore woman of the Countrie, being willingly taken priſoner, fell downe at his feete, kiſſed them, and tould him, that ſhe had oft heard her Father (who was lettered) ſay, that Spaine ſhould be conquered by a people, whoſe Generall ſhould haue a Mole on his right ſhoulder, and in whome one of his hands ſhould be longer then the other. He to animate his Souldiers againſt the next encounter, uncloathed himſelfe, and ſhewed the marke, which ſo encouraged them, that they now doubted not of the victorie. Rodericke had in his Armie 130000 foote, and 35000 horſe. Tariffe had 30000 horſe and 180000 foote. The Battell continued ſeven dayes together, from morning to night, till at laſt the Moores were victorious. What became of King Rodericke was never knowne, his Souldiers tooke one arrayed in their Kings apparell, whom upon examination they found to be a ſheep heard, with whome the King after the diſcomfiture, had changed cloaths. In a ſhort time there were ſlaine on both ſides about ſeventy thouſand men.

The ancient Princes & Inhabitants.

A great battaile fought betweene the Moores and the Gothes.

The Moores now Lords of Spaine, by the treaſon of Iulian, who having ſeene the miſerable death of his Wife and Children, was ſtarved in priſon by the Afrians. They permitted free uſe of Religion to the old Inhabitants, leaſt the ſeeking of new dwellings for the liberty of Conſcience ſhould leaue their native ſoile deſolate. The Moores finiſhed their conqueſt in 4 yeares, ſay ſome, others in two, and others againe in 8 months. To keepe the new Conquered Countrie in ſubjection, no way was ſo convenient, as to plant Colonies: but the Moriſco women would not abandon their old Seates, Hereupon Muſa and Tariffe, by gifts, pardons, and perſuaſions drew many Chriſtian women to forſake their Religion, whom they marryed to the Souldiers. Not long after Vlidor Vbit (whom the M.S. call Almanzar) the great Caliph ſent over aboue 50000 famillies of Moores & Iewes: aſſigning them a convenient portion of Land to be held with great immunities, and upon ſmal rents. The Sarracens being now maſters of Spaine fel a ſharing of it, & devided into pettie Kingdomes and Royalties. Among the reſt Corduba was the firſt, which they called Abinalibeticum: Sivillia the ſecond, and Nova Cartaginia the third, till being chaſed out of theſe places by Ferdinand the Second, they fell into Granada Anno 1216. For Mahomet Boabdelin, who began his reigne in the yeare 1478 was the laſt King of the Moores in Spaine. For as the Kingdome of Granada (as Mr. Heylin cireth) began under a Mahomet, a Ferdinand being King of Caſtile: ſo it ended under a Mahomet, a Ferdinand being likewiſe King of Caſtile. In the tenth yeare then of this Kings raigne, about the yeare 1492 the Empire of the Moores ended in Spaine by the valour of Ferdinand the Catholique, and Iſabel his Wife: being from their firſt entrance into it, more then 760 yeares. Such as after the decay of their Kingdome ſtayed in Spaine, were by a ſtatute in that caſe provided to be Chriſtened: and that they might be knowne to be as they profeſſed, the Inquiſition was ordained, conſiſting of a certaine number of Dominican Fryers, who finding ſuch conterfeyt Chriſtians, were firſt gently to reproue and exhort them, and after, if no amendment followed, to inflict ſome Mulct upon them. This cuſtome in it ſelfe was wondrous tolerable and laudable: but from the Moores the edge of it was turned upon the Proteſtants, and that with ſuch violence, and that extremity of torture, that is it counted the greateſt tiranny, and ſevereſt kind of perſecution under the cope of heaven. This it is that made the people of Arragon and Naples rebell, being Countries where the people are all of the Papall ſide. This was it which (in the time of the bloodie perſecution of Duke d' Alva) cauſed the irremediable revolt of the Low Countries (by the racking of Conſciences) the greateſt part of that Nation, at that time of their taking up of Armes; being then Catholiques. He that deſireth to be further informed of the proceedings of their Inquiſition, may be pleaſed to read Sr. Edward Sands, and a Treatiſe concerning the tortures thereof, publiſhed in the Low Countries. In the yeare 1609. the King of Spaine baniſhed the remnant of this whole Nation out of his Dominions for ever, to the number of aboue a million; and clearing the Countrie of them, ſett them over into Barbarie, after they had liued almoſt 900 yeares in their natiue ſoile: having made this digreſſion wee will returne againe to the Deſcription thereof.

The beginning of the Spaniſh Inquiſition.

The Metropolis of Andaluzia is called by Plinie Hiſpalis, by Ptolomie Iſpalis, by Silius Hiſpal, by Gratianus Spalis; & now in theſe dayes Sevilla; & is the faireſt city not of Andaluzia alone, but of all Spaine. It is in compaſſe 6 miles, & is ſeated upon the river Batis, in a very fine and pleaſant place; is environned with beautifull Walls, and adorned with many magnificent & ſtately buildings. The Cathedral Church of called S. Maries ſurpaſſed all the Churches of Chriſtendome for greatneſſe, for ſumptuous ſtructure and for a faire and high ſteeple, from the top whereof one may ſee all the city and the countrie lying farre & neere about it. Within the Royaltie of Sivilla, there are an infinite number of Monkes and Nunns Cloiſters, and aboue 120 Hoſpitalls, all provided with large incomes, whereof ſome of them haue 8000 yea, ſome aboue 15000 Ducats yearely: but the Monaſterie of Gertoſins exceedeth them all, being endowed with no leſſe then 25000 Crownes of yearely revenue. What ſhall I ſpeake of the Kings magnificent Palace, the ſumptuous houſes of Dukes, Earles and Lords which are in it, beſides the ſtately houſes belonging to the Citizens, being embelliſhed with delicate Orchards, Gardens and Fonntaines and many ancient Aque-ducts, which by conduit pipes conveyeth water into their ſtreets, houſes and Gardens; as alſo the new buildings built for the accommodation of the Citizens upon the cities charge, reaching as farre as the ſtreyght of Gibraltar, beautified with many pleaſant places and walkes. Under the Iuriſdiction of this citie are no leſſe then 2000 ſmall villages. It is alſo a moſt flouriſhing Univerſitie, wherein ſtudied Avizen the Moore, that excellent and learned Scholiar, Pope Silveſter II. and Leander. This city alſo hath bred Benedictus Arias Montanus, that excellent Diuine ſo ſkilfull in all languages; and is famous there beſides for two Prouinciall Councills holden here; the firſt Anno 584. the laſt Anno 636. Here are alſo continually maintained 3000. Gennets for the ſeruice of the King. The river Batis deuided it into two parts, both joyned together by a ſtately and a beautifull bridge. It was recouvered by Ferdinand the II. of Caſtile Anno 1248. From hence come our Sivill Orenges, from hence the Caſtilians hoiſe ſaill towards the Indians. And laſtly here reſteth the Body of Chriſtopher Columbus.

Other leſſer townes. Fiue miles from Sivill is the towne of Palatium or Palantia, where there ſtands a very ancient Caſtle by the Sea ſide called Palacios, upon the way as ye goe from S. Lucas to Gibralter. Then ye come to Cabeca a ſmall towne, lying upon the entrance into the Mountaines to the Southward of Malaga. And ſome three miles further to the Soutweſtward Lebrixa, called by Ptol. Nebriſſa, & by Plinie Venera, having formerly bene ſited, where the river Bathis flowed up and downe, but nouw ſtands 8000 paces from it, becauſe the left arme of the river was dammed up. It was firſt founded by Liberus Pater, being a pleaſant towne with a very ancient Caſtle in it, with excellent grounds lying round about it, and is in regard of its Burgeſſes, much commended by Ælius Antonius as an ornament of all Spaine. The towne now called Carmona was heretofore called by Strabo Carmon, by Anton. Carmo and by Pto. Charmonia. It was alſo heretofore named Colonia Martia, as Onuphrius ſheweth out of the Antiquities.

Marchena. It is now called Marchena, where are bred the beſte Gennets of Spaine, & ſtands upon a hill, having round about it a very pleaſant ſoile. Lora is alſo under Andaluzia, lying upon the right ſide of the river Batis, called in an old ſtone and in ancient monuments Axalita, as Cluſius teſtifieth, and by Ambroſius Moralis Flavium Axalitatum: it lieth betweene Sivill and Corduba. Moron was heretofore called Aruccia, as Cluſius ſheweth out of Plinie, Anthonine and a very ancient inſcription. Oſſuna is named by Appianus Orſona, by Strabo Orſon, and by Plinie Vrſo, but in an old inſcription, as alſo by Hirtius it is called Vrſao. The towne Eçea lying upon the river Singulis is now called Xivil or Chevill: by Ptol. Aſtigis, and by Plinie Auguſta Fenna, being a ſmall towne lying ſome 13 miles from Sivill. Halfe way betweene Sivill and Corduba, on the right ſide of the river Bætis ſtandeth Penaflor, ſuppoſed to be Ptolomies Ilipula Magna ſeated in the midſt of the Confines of the Turduli, called by Plinie Ilpa Italica, being under the juriſdiction of Sivill. Ten miles from thence lieth Ptolomies Corduba, which gaue denomination to the Kingdome of Corduba, once the Royall Seate of the Mooriſh Kings, and the moſt rich, and fertil Countrie in all Spaine. Plinie nameth it Colonia Patritia, which Moralis alſo proueth by an ancient marble ſtone. Iohannes Gerundenſis ſaith, that Corduba is as much to ſay as Cor-Bætis. It hath bred heretofore many braue Souldiers, and famous learned men. Corduba by reaſon of the fertility of its fields, the pleaſant Orchards and Gardens round about it, and the healthfull waters, is held moſt happie, for which reaſon Silius Italicus in his third booke calleth this Countrie lying round about it The Golden field. Here was borne Lucan and both the Seneca's.

The Kingdome of Corduba.

Corduba the golden field.

This Citie (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) is vulgarly called Cordova, whence the true Cordovan leather commeth, made of the ſkinne of a Sardinian beaſt. Neere unto this city is a wood of 30 miles in lenght, having nothing but Oliue trees, and not farre from hence by the village called Munda, was fought that notable Battell betweene Cæſar and the Sonns of Pompey. The honour of the day fell unto Cæſar, who then made an end of the Civill warrs, which that very day foure yeares before were begun by Pompey their Father. In this Battel Cneus Pompejus was ſlaine, and his ſtrength broken; neither did Cæſar eſcape without great loſſe, he never being before ſo put to his laſt trumpe: for ſeing his Souldiers giue back, he reſolutely maintained the fight, bidding them remember they had at Munda for ſaken their Generall. Shame, and his noble example, encouraged his Souldiers to a new ontſet, which was honoured with the Trophies of victorie. This was the laſt field that ever Cæſar fought, he being not long after murdered in the Senate-houſe. In other places he uſed to ſay, He fought for honour, in this for his life. Fiue miles from Corduva to the Southward lieth Mons Major or Monte Major, which is ſuppoſed to be Ptolomies Vlia, a towne of the Turduli in Hiſpania Bætica, and Anthoninus his Vlia. Then miles from Corduva is Mons Aureus called Mont-Oro or the Golden mount, which is held to be Anthonines Epora. In Ptolomie, in ſtead of Epora, it is written Ebura, which is a miſtake, ſeing it lieth not in Batica, but rather in Luſitania, and more corruptly it is read in Plinie Repepora, where it is alſo called Faderatorum.

Cæſars & Pompeye Battel.

Having deſcribed Corduba I will now returne againe to Sivilla, and take my journey through Palatium, over the bridge of Alcantarilla, and will paſſe by Cabeca and Nebriſſa to Luciferi Fanum, which the Latins, imitating Strabo in his third booke, named it Lucea Dubea, that which is now called Lucar di Barrameda, being a great Haven town. About foure miles from thence to the Eaſtward, lieth a towne which the Spaniards call Xeres de la Frontera, which is as much to ſay, as the beginning or end of Spaine, whence come our Xeres ſacke, commonly called Sherrie ſacke. Navigierus in his booke of travells thinks this to be Livius his Aſta and Anthonines Haſta. But Moralis mainteyneth the countrarie, that Aſta retayneth ſtill its ancient name, and that that place ſhould haue laine about the river Guadaleta, which is now called Maſa de Aſta: But Ortelius is of the opinion, that this towne was drownd and ſunke with the Iland Tarteſſus, which lay in the mouth of the river Batis. About a hundred furlongs from the mouth of the ſaid river Batis ſtandeth the towne of Chipiona called by Strabo Capionis Turris. Upon the mouth of the river Lethes, now called Guadaletta, and Guadaleta. in the Arabicke tongue Bedelac lieth Portus Sanctæ Mariæ vulgarly called in Spaniſh El Puerto de Santa Maria. On the other Medina Sidonia. ſide of the river Letha lieth Medina Sidonia, whoſe Duke was Captaine Generall of the invincible Armade 1588. A litle further to the Southward in the nooke of the ſtraight ſtandeth Conilium, a gallant towne, being ſome ſixe miles from Cales Males, and under the Commaund of the Duke of S. Lucar or Medina Sidonæ. Georgius Auſtriacus thinketh, that this Conilium ſhould be Certeia, but Ptolomie makes it to be Tariffa. Tariffa is ſeated at the end of the promontorie toward Afrike, and ſo called becauſe Tariff the Leader of the Moores in Spaine here landed. Vegelium commonly called Vegel is but a litle towne, yet famous in regard of the ſituation and the trading that is in it. It ſtandeth upon a hill, having on the Eaſt ſide of it fine plaine fields, on the South the Arabian Mountaines, & towards the North and Weſt it looketh into the vaſt and raging Ocean. A litle further lieth Munda ſo called by Plinie, but now Monda. Some thinke that Old Munda is that towne which is now called Ronda Veia, and that Monda lying two miles from it, was built by the Arabians, who gaue it this ancient name.

GRANADA.

Name, Site and Fertility. Granada is bounded with Murcia on the Eaſt, Vandaluzia on the Weſt: Caſtile North: and the Mediterranean South. This Countrie is very fruitfull. The chiefe citie is Granada a Townes Granada. fine ſtately town, from whence the Countrie takes its denomination, and whence come our Granada ſtockings. The houſes hereof, are built all of curious free-ſtone, with delicate and artificiall maſonry, ſhewing great magnificencie. It is repleniſhed within with abundance of wholeſome and pleaſant ſprings, and fenced without with a ſtronge Wall, in which are 12 Gates, and 130 Turrets. Heere is ſtill to be ſeene the Palace of the Mooriſh Kings, an excellent and magnificent ſtructure, covered over with Gold, and indented with Moſaicall workes. This city is the ordinarie Parliament and Court of Iuſtice for all the Southerne parts of Spaine. Secondly, Alamia famous for her baths. Thirdly, Malaga or Malaca, a towne ſacked by Craſſus, the rich Romane, who flying into Spaine, to avoid the furie of Marius and Cinna, who had ſlaine his Father and Vncle, hid himſelfe, and his companions eight months together in a Caue, but having intelligence of their deaths, he iſſued out, and ranſacked amongſt many other cities this Malaga. From hence come our Malaga ſacks. This citie was taken from the Moores by Ferdinand the Catholique 1487. The others are Almeria, a great Haven towne and Almeria. Oſſunna.

Alamia. Malaca.

ESTREMADURA.

Eſtremadura hath on the Eaſt and North Caſtile, on the Weſt Portugall, on the South Andaluzia. It was ones called Baturia from the tiver Betis which runneth through it. The principall citie is Merida (formerly called Auguſta Emerita) nigh unto which was the Battell betweene Vallia King of the Goths Merida. and Atace King of the Alani, and Vandals (ſurnamed Silinges) the victorie whereof falling to the Gothes, cauſed the Vandals to leaue their firſt footing in Spaine. This towne ſprung from the ruine of Norba Cæſarea; which by Petronius and Afranius, two of Pompeys Captaines, was layd euen with the ground, for adhering faithfully to Iul. Cæſar. It was built and made a Colonie by Auguſtus, who placing in it his old Souldiers, whome the Latins call Emeriti, gaue it the name of Auguſta Emerita. 2. Guadalcanall, famous for the Mines of Gold and Silver. The firſt Guadacanall. Incola, or Inhabitants thereof where the Veſtones. It was taken from the Moores 1147.

The deſcription of the Kingdome OF VALENCIA, MVRCIA,

VVith the Ilands of Majorca, Minorca and Ivica.

Name.

VALENTIA tooke its name frō the Metrapolis Valentia, being a brave Merchant-towne, and of reverend antiquitie. It is environned on the South with Murcia, on the Weſt with both the Caſtiles, on the North with Arragon, & on the Eaſt with the Mediterranean Sea. It hath as ſweete & as wholeſome an aire, as any other part of Spaine; by reaſon of the coole weſterne winds, which blow upon the ſurface thereof, and make it ſo milde and temperate, that in all ſeaſons of the yeare, yea about New-yeares day, ye ſhall ſee yonge men and maides, carrie Noſe-gayes in their hands, as in ſome other places they uſe to doe in Aprill and Maye. The Soile is rich, abounding in all things, as Sugar, wine, Oyle, Wheate, Rice, and all kinde of delicate fruits. Betweene Valentia and Derthoſa, in a place called Buriel are ſilver mines, & in ſome other grounds named Aioder, they finde ſtones with traces and veines of gold growing in them. At Cabo Finiſterra are yron mines, and about Segorbia coale-pits, out of which in ancient times were digged Marble, which they ſent to Rome. By Piacento they digge out of the earth Alablaſter, and here & there ſome Alum, Red-ſtone, Chalke and Lyme.

Soile. Fertility.

The Mauritanean Princes poſſeſſed the City of Valentia a long time, which was governed by many of them, and having oftentimes bene beſeiged, & aſſaulted by the Kings of Arragon. Was at laſt after a long ſeige taken in by King Iames, who forced their Generall Zaen Maure, and fiftie thouſand Moores, to abandon and forſake this Citie, and to flie to Denia, taking all their gold, ſilver armes, and houſehold ſtuffe along with them. Valentia then being left deſolate, King Ieames planted a new Colonie in it, conſiſting of Catalonians and Arragonians, whereof the Governours divided the town amongſt the new Inhabitants, according to their qualitie & ſtate, where they made new Lawes and Statutes, & recorded in it 380 heads of famillies. About the yeare of our Lord 788, this Province gott firſt the title of a Kingdome, whereof the Hiſtorie ſpeaketh thus: Hizen King of Corduba being deceaſed, his Sonne named Alca, raigned after him about the yeare of Chriſt 788. Whoſe Uncle Aodala, a Lord of Valentia ſending for his other brother called Culema, who was before diſinherited: theſe two brethren joining together, having levied a mightie armie marched directly to Corduba, attempting to thruſt their Nephew out of his realme, but were both of them defeated in a battle. Aodala ſaving himſelfe by flight, retired againe into Valentia. After this the chiefetaines of the Moores interpoſing themſelves, and mediating betweene the Nephew, and the two Uncles prevailed ſo farre with them, that they came to a compoſition, ſo that Aodala ſhould entitle himſelfe King of Valentia, and Culema had given him out of the revenue of Valentia a thouſand Moradines (which were certaine peeces of money) for his table, and five thouſand Moradines beſides for his extraordinary expences. Which agreement Aodala ratifying, he then called himſelfe the firſt King of Valentia.

Amongſt the townes in this royaltie, Valencia is accounted the chiefeſt, being an Epiſcopall Sea, which had her firſt Originall from King Romus, calling it after his owne name Roma. It is ſituated within the inmoſt nooke of the Sucronian Gulfe, upon the right ſide of the mouth of the River Turia, and is very famous for their Civility, good Policy, learned men, all manner of curious and rich manufactures, their Nobilitie and Gentrie (which live in peace, and concerd one with an other) excelling alſo in all kinde of marchandiſes and commodites. Here is a Univerſitie, in which Saint Dominicke, the Father of the Dominicans ſtudied. I cannot paſſe over in ſilence one thing, which Luccus Marineus Siculus relateth of the Valencians, that they have a cuſtome every yeare upon Saint Mathews day, after they have bene at Church, & ſaid maſſe and prayers, they all goe into the gallowes field, where all the dead bodies of condemned perſons, are either buried or hange, whoſe diſperced bones they gather up, or take down from the gallowes, and laying them all upon a Beere, in great ſolemnity carrie them to the Church-yard, where their Citizens are buried, and there after they have ſaid prayers, and made their offers, lay them into a grave. Petrus Medinenſis mentioneth, that there are above ten thouſand freſh ſprings Fountaines and Wells within this Citie.

Upon the left ſide of the River Turia not farre from Valentia, ſtood Ptolomies Saguntum Heditanorum, which by Strabo was called Saguntus, by Stephanus Zacynthus, and by Antoninus Secundum, but abuſively. It is now ſuppoſed to be Morvedere, ſo named à Muris Veteribus: Appianus writeth, that it was a Colonie of the Zacynthioni, which ſome conjecture was firſt founded by Saguntim, the Sonne of Hercules. Some imagine alſo that it got this name from the Sagi Iberici. The Site thereof is deſcribed by Silius Italicus in his firſt booke.

In Seguntum now called Morvedre, beſides the Theater and Scena, are many other antiquities, as the Tombes of the Sergii, Lucius Galbæ and Sergius Galbæ, and diverſe others of their famillie, with whoſe ſtones the Cloiſter of the Bretheren of the holy Trinitie was ſounded. Segorbia is none of the meaneſt townes in Valentia, called by Ptolomee and Strabo Segobriga, in the opinion of Vaſæus, Cluſius, Tarapha, Emanuel Enricus, and ſome others it was called in Auguſtus come Segobrigam, and the Inhabitants by Plinie Segobricenſes, placing them in Celtiberia.: but Moralis is of the opinion, that Segobriga should be Imiſta, or Cabeça el Griego, Johannes Mariana being of the same minde. Hieronymus Surita acknowledgeth plainely, he knows not where Segorbia stood. In an old marble-stone which is at Tarracon, mention is made of Segobrica. The towne Denia, as Moralis & Clusius witnesse, was heretofore called Dianium by Cicero and Plinie, which they likewise named Stipendiarium. Livies Incibilis, which Frontianus calleth Indibilis, is now held by Florianus Chelva, though some make doubt of it: Plin. Illici, Ptol. Illicias; Pomp. Illica or Ilce Colonia, as it is named in old Meddals: also by Ptol. Illicitani, whence the Illicitanus Sinus tooke the name, is supposed to be at this day Alicanta or Elche. Belgida is a towne in Celtiberia, which retaineth still the ancient name. Leria called by Ptol. Hedeta, whence the Heditani tooke their name, is now called Leria. Laureon was once a town of great strength which Sertorius beseiged, tooke & burned even then when Pompey, (whose confederates the Lauronits were) stood with his whole armie nigh enough unto the flame to warme his hands, & yet durst not relieve it. Cullera a Sea-towne, at the mouth of the River Xucar, was formerly named Sucron, after the name of the River, and is famous in Plutarch for the victorie, which Sertorius gott here of Pompey, Pompeys armie being not onely overthrowne, but also himselfe with life hardly escaping.

Rivers. This Country is watered with many Rivers, among the which Turia is the chiefest, the Inhabitants name this River Guadalander, by an ancient Arabicke word Guetalabier, which signifyeth a River of pure water. This River by what townes or places soever he runneth, bringeth good accommodation for traffique, to the Inhabitants thereof. There is also the Xutar, called of old Sucron and Surus, springing out of the Oresped anean hills.

Hills and Mountaines. In this Province also is the Promontory Terraria, now called Promontorium Dianium, the refuge of the above named Sertorius, that worthy Captaine in his warres against Metel. & Pomp. both brave Souldiers: the first aged, and of great experience, the second yonge and of high resolutions; yet the former gave greater check to Sertorius proceedings then the latter: so that Sertorius oftentimes said, that were it not for the old man Metellus, he would have whipped the boy Pompey home with rods. For he twise overcame this great Pompey, the first time dangerously wounding him, the second time driving him out of the field. But when Pompey and Metellus joined together, he was overmatched, and yet seemed to retire out of the field, rather then to flie. Certainely, the Spaniards behaved themselves very valiantly, all the time of these warres under him, to which Florus alludeth, saying: Nec unquam magis apparnit Hispani militis vigor, quam Romano duce. At the last, when he had a long time upheld the Marian faction, he was traiterously murdered by Perpenua, one of his Associates, Metellus and Pompey returned in triumph to Rome.

The other two chiefe Mountaines are called Mariola and Penna Golosa, where a great many Physicians Schollars and Herbalists walke togather, most excellent and rare Physicall herbes and simples, which grow upon it in abundance. Gandia is a University, lately erected by the Duke of Gandia for the Iesuits, he being a chiefe prop of their Society.

For good government and Policie, Valentia excelleth all the townes in Spaine. The Inhabitants here abouts sprang from the Moores, and therefore keepe their ancient language, old manners and customes. This I thought good to cite out of M. Tullius in praise of Valentia in this last Oration against Verres, which he giveth as a testimonie of their honorable carriage and behaviour.

MVRCIA.

MURCIA was in former times a very rich, and a profitable Countrie, stored with all fruits of the Earth, and so abounding in silver mines, that the Romans kept continually 400 men here at worke, and received the profit of 25000 Drachma's daylie. It is environned with new Castile, or the Kingdome of Tolledo West, Granada South, Valentia North, and the Mediterranean East. The chiefe towne is Alicante (mentioned before) a faire harbour, from whence come our true Alicant wine, made of the juce of Mulberies, which grow here in great Plenty. Murcia it selfe (called by Ptol. Murgi) is seated on the River Segourg, from whence this Countrie is named. Nova Carthago, or Cartagena, built by Asdrubal of Carthage, and ruined in the second Punick warre, by Scipio Africanus, a man of that rare chastety, that during all his warres in Spaine, he would not permit any of the young Virgins of the Country, to be brought before him, least his eyes should betray his heart. It is now famous for the haven, which it hath very capacious & of that safety, that that worthy Sea-Captaine Andreas Doria, Admirall unto Charles the fifth, had wont to say, that there were but three safe parts in the Mediterranean, namely, Cartagena, August and July: meaning that these two months, being commonly free from winds and tempests, were no lesse secure to Marriners, then the part of Cartagena.

There is a great trade driven in Valentia, for from thence into the Iles Majorica, Minorici, Sicilia & Sardina they transport these commodities, as Velvets, Satins and Silke of all colors, fine Spanish cloth, Rice, Sugar exceeding white, Reasons, Figgs, and all manner of Confitures.

THE DESCRIPTION OF ARRAGON.

The originall of the name.

ARAGONIA tooke its name as Laurentius Valla teſtifieth from the Autrigoni a people of Spaine or as Antonius Nebricenſis, and Vaſæus imagine, from the ancient citie of Tarracona. Some ſay this name is derived from Ara Herculis, and Agonalibus Ludis, which if ſo; it is ſtraunge, that the Ancients ſhould haue wholly forgotten, to haue written ſome thing of Arragon. Others ſay, it is called after the name of the river Aragon, whoſe head beginneth in this Countrie, & runneth into the Ebro.

Bounds.

This Realme is bounded on the Weſt with Navarre, on the Eaſt with Catelogne, on the South with Caſtile, and on the North ſide of it lie the Pyrenian Mountaines. The moſt part of it is a rough, and a drye Countrie, eſpecially in that part, which lieth next the Pyrenean Alpes, ſo that if one travells a whole day he ſhall ſcarcely ſee a houſe: yet there are ſome Valleys in it, which are very fruitfull in Graine and other fruits, principally in ſuch grounds as are moiſtned with waters and rivers.

The ancient Kings & Gouvernment.

The firſt King of this Countrie was Raymir (as moſt writters witneſſe) who was choſen King in the yeare of Chriſt 1016.

After him ſucceeded in the Gouvernment his Sonne Sancho, and next him Pedro, who added diverſe townes to his Crowne. After the deceaſe of this Pedro, his brother Alphonſo ſucceeded, becauſe he had noe other heires: and dying without iſſue, they fott Raymir out of a Cloiſter, and made him King. His onely Daughter Vrraca was giuen in marriage to Raymund Earle of Barcelona who ſucceeded his Brother in lawe in the gouvernment, and ſo Barcelona was conveyed to the Kingdome of Arragon.

About the yeare of our Lord 1250. Iames Brother in lawe to Alphonſo the tenth King of Caſtile, poſſeſſed this Kingdome fortie yeares, and withall the Iles of Majorca & Minorca, which were alſo called Baleares, he brought alſo the Citie of Valentia under his power & obeiſſance.

Pope Nicolas the Third beſtowed this Kingdome upon his Sonne Don Pedro, who dyed of a wound which he receiued in a navall fight, againſt the French. After him many others ſucceeded in this Kingdome till at laſt Ferdinand the Great, by marrying Queene Iſabel added the Kingdomes of Valentia and Catalonia unto Arragon, and brought the Gouvernment of them under one Kinge.

He that deſireth to be more particularly informed of the originall, and beginning of theſe Kingdomes, and the memorable acts of the Kings of Arragon, Valentia & Catalonia, as alſo how theſe Kingdomes came to be annexed together, may read the firſt part of Roderick Sancho his booke & 13. Chapter of his Spaniſh Chronicle, as alſo Lucius Marinæus Siculus his 18. Booke of the Kings of Spaine, and others.

Cities & Townes. Lerida.

One of the chiefeſt cities of Arragon is 1. Lerida an Vniverſitie, ſituated one the river Cinga, which riſing in the Pyrenean hills, deviding Catelogne from Arragon emptieth it ſelfe into the Iberus. It was called of old Ilerda, and is famous for the incounter, which hapned nigh unto it, betweene Herculejus the Queſtor, or Treaſurer of Sertorius army, and Manilius Proconſul of Gallia, wherein Manilius was ſo diſcomfited, & his army conſiſting of three Legions of foote, and 1500. horſe, was ſo routed, that he almoſt alone was ſcarce able to recouver this city.

Saragoſſa.

But the principalleſt and chiefeſt city of this Kingdome is Saragoſſa, anciently called by Plinie & others Cæſar-Auguſta, and by Ptolomie Cæſarea-Auguſta, as it is written in old Meddalls. It is ſuppoſed that Iuba King of the Mauritani was the firſt Founder of it, who gaue it the name Saldyba, which is as much to ſay as Iubæ Domus, and that afterward it gott the name of Cæſarea-Auguſta. One of the Mauritanian Kings, called Aigoland (who as Biſhop Turpne writeth) longe time made Charlemaigne beleeue, he would be baptized, and the time now at hand, in which he ſhould performe his promiſſe, he very gallantly accompained came to the French Court: where ſeing many Lazars & poore people expecting an almes from the Emperours table, he aſking what they were, was anſwered, that they were the meſſengers and ſervants of God: on theſe words, he ſpeedely returned deſperately proteſting, that he would not ſerue that God, which could keepe his ſervahts noe better. Se Mr. Heylin. This City is ſituated upon the ſide of the river of Ebro, in an euen plaine field; having a longe ſtone-bridge over this river, whereof Strabo maketh mention in his third booke. This towne lieth in the faſhion of a Pantoffle and is as finely, and as brauely built, as any towne in Spaine, having ſeuen and twentie Parochiall Churches in it, whereof the chiefeſt is called Nouſtra Senora del Pilar: beſides 14. Monaſteries. It hath foure Gates of an equall diſtance one from an other, opening towards the foure Corners of the World, & is encompaſſed with a ſtronge wall, & fortified with many turrets upon it. In this citie the Kings of Arragon had wont to be crowned by the Biſhop thereof, who is Primate of this Realme. This towne was recovered from the Moores by Alphonſo of Navarre 1118.

Huesca.

Oſca is called ſo by the Latiniſts, Ptolomie and Plutarke, in the life of Sertorius, is now Hueſca. Iulius Cæſar calleth the ancient Inhabitants thereof the Oſcenſes, & of the Oſcenſean Coine Livius maketh mention in his 24. booke. Vellejus Paterculus nameth it Eteoſca but amiſſe, & writeth that Sertorius was here made a waye. It is an Epiſcopall Seate, & an Vniverſity, a place longe time dedicated to Learning. For heither (as Mr. Heylin citeth) Sertorius cauſed all the noble mens Sonnes of Spaine to be brought, & provided them of Schoolmaſters for the Greeke and Latine tongues; bearing their parents in hand, that he did it onely to make them fitt to undergoe charge in the common wealth; but indeed to haue them as Hoſtages, for their Fathers faith, and loyaltie towards him. It lieth upon the river Suela.

Tarraſona.

Tarraſona is ſeated neere unto Mount Caci, and in ſome mens opinion, was firſt founded by the Tyrians, and the Auſones.

Iaca.

Iaca lieth in a Valley on the very Northerne edge of all the Countrie, & heretofore the inhabitants thereof were called Iacetani.

Calajuta.

Calajuta is ſeated in a plaine, riſen out of the Bibtlitan ruines, which are yet to be seene there to this daye, with diverse other antiquities, leying about halfe a Spanish mile from this towne upon a hill, which is vulgarly called Bambola or Baubola: this hill is almost environned round about with the river Salona. The situatiō whereof Martial lib. 1. Epigram. 62. describeth, as his birth-place: and Paulinus and Ausonius write, that Bibilis hungh upon the ridge of a craggie rocke. Ptolomie calleth it Bilbis but not rightly, Martial names it Augusta Bilbilis, as appareth also in many old Meddalls. It is seated by the river Cinga upon a small hill in a good soile.

Moson. Moson is also a gallant towne in Arragon, famous for entertayning the King of Spaine every third yeare: At which time the people of Arragon, Valence and Catelogne present the King with 600000. Crownes: vidz. 300000. for Catelogne, 200000. for Arragon, & 100000. for Valentia. And well may they doe thus, for at other times they sit rent-free, as it were, onely they acknowledge the King of Spaine, to be the head of their common wealth.

Barbastrum. The other lesser townes in Arragon are Barbastrum, famous for the making of Steele bowes. Ptolomie calleth this towne Burtinum, and Anthonine Berlina.

Fraga. Fraga lieth betweene Ilerda and Cæsar-Augusta. Verrerius thinketh it to be Ptolomies Gallica Flavia, and Anthonines Gallicum, others place Gallicum to lie in that place, where now Zuera standeth, in which Country are found many monuments and peeces of old paved-waies.

Gurrea. Gurrea formerly called Fortum Galore, as Anthonine gesseth, lay betweene Cæsar Augusta and the Pyreneans. Aierbion lieth now as Anthonine & some others suppose where Ebellinum did stand.

Vrgella. The towne Vrgella which is called by Aimonius Orgellum, and possible by Ptolomie Orgia, lieth not farre from the head of the river Sicoris. There were other townes, which haue bene so ruined, that their is noe memoriall left of them, amongst which Calagurris Nassica was none of the meanest, and a better towne then that which is so called in Navarre. Cæsar in lib. 1. Belli Civilis, nameth the Inhabitants thereof Calagurritani: and Sueton writeth, that here laye the gard of the Emperour Augustus, as ye may reade in the raigne of Augustus Cap. 49. Plinie nameth them Nassaci. The rivers which water this Country, are the Ebro, Cinga, Gallego and some others.

This Kingdome of Arragon had an other forme of Gouvernment then the other Kingdomes of Spaine. It was their custome to haue a Magistrate over them, whome they called Medius Iudex, to whome they might appeale from their King, if he had done them any wronge.

An ancient custome. And the King before his Coronation, must not onely accept of this anciēt custome, but also is bound to declare by oath, that he would inviolably maintaine and keepe it, to which end the aforesaid Iudex Medius was ordayned. He was also called Iusticia Majora and Iusticia Arragonia. He was entituled Medius because he was a Iudge, betweene the King and his subjects, & as a Mediatour betweene them both. But his authority growing too great, out of the foure States of this Kingdome were chosen 17. personages, under whome this Magistrate should be subordinate, who had power, and authority over this Iudex or Iudge, to controule him if need should require.

At Sarragossa was wont every yeare to be held a Convocation, which use is now brought to every second yeare, in a place where the Kinge shall appoint their meeting. Three causes there were for which this Assembly was called: The first was when the Kinge was to lay any taxation upon the people, when notwithstanding his Exchequer was well provided. Secondly when neede should require, to consult and to treate of the Succession of the Kingdome. Thirdly, when any new lawes and statutes were to be made and enacted, for the good of the realme. For without the Kings consent, and the whole Kingdomes, noe new lawes could be made, nor the ancient infringed or abrogated.

The ancient Incolæ (as Mr. Heylin noteth) were the Iacetani, Lucenses and Celtiberi. The last were a mixt people, descended both from the Iberi and the Celtæ, of all Gallia the most potent nation, who being too populous for their owne Countrie, passed over the Pirenai, and seated themselues here, whence this nation was called Celtiberi, and their Countrie Celtiberia, of whome Lucan speaketh thus:

—profugique à gente vetusta
Gallorum, Celtæ mistentes nomen Iberi.

That is,

VVho being chas'ed from Gaule their home, did frame,
Of Celtæ and Iberi mixt, one name.

And though wee haue made mention of some of the Kings and sent the Reader to the Chronicles of Spaine: yet to closse up all, wee will giue the Reader here a briefe List of all the Kings of Arragon.

The Kings of Arragon.

I. Raymir raigned 40. yeares. from Anno 1018.
II. Sancho 36. King of Navarre. 1058.
III. Pedro Sancho's Sonne, King of Arragon & Navarre, 14. yeares. 1094.
IV. Alphonso Pedro's Brother, 18. yeares. 1108.
V. Raymir Alphonso's Brother, 19. yeares. 1126.
VI. Raymund Berengary Earle of Barcelona, who had in marriage the onely Daughter of Raymir, 32. yeares. 1145.
VII. Alphonso the Second, the Sonne of Raymund, 34. yeares. 1176.
VIII. Pedro the Second, Alphonso his Sonne, 4. yeares. 1209.
IX. Iames raigned 62 yeares & 9. Monthes. 1219.
X. Pedro the Third, 9. yeares made also King of Sicilia. 1276.
XI. Alphonso the Third, 6. yeares. 1286.
XII. Ieames the Second, 35. yeares. 1292.
XIII. Alphonso the Fourth, 8. yeares. 1327.
XIV. Pedro the Fourth, 51. yeares. 1335.
XV Iohn the First, 9. yeares and 4. Monthes. 1387.
XVI. Martin Iohns Brother, 14. yeares. 1396.
XVII. Ferdinand the Honest Brother unto Henry King of Castile, 5. yeares. 1410.
XVIII. Alphonso the Fifth the Sonne of Ferdinand the Magnanimous, who was also King of Naples and raigned 42. yeares. 1416.
XIX. Iohn the Second King of Navarre Brother unto Alphonso, 20. yeares. 1458.
XX. Ferdinand the great Sonne unto Iohn surnamed the Catholique who marryed Isabella Queene of Castile and Leon, and so united Castil, Leon & Arragon together, by which match all Spaine came under one Monarch, saving the Kingdome of Portugall. 1478.

THE DESCRIPTION OF CATELOGNE.

The Generall derivation of the name.

CATALONIA, or Catalunna, as Volaterranus thinketh, tooke this name from the Gothes, and the Alani, and ought rather to be called Gothalania. Beatus Rhenanus Lib. 1. Rer. German. is of opinion, that it should be named Cattalania after the Catti & Alani, who together conquered this Province of Spaine: others againe, fetch this name from the Castellani, an ancient people of Spaine, who should haue inhabited this Countrie. There are some others, which maintaine, that Cathalonia was so called from Orthogerius Cathalot, a Noble man of this Countrie, of whome much mention is made by Marinaus Siculus Lib. 9. de Rebus Hispaniarum, & by L. Valla in the raigne of Ferdinand King of Arragon Lib. 1.

Site. This Countrie is shutt in with the Pyrenean Mountaines, the Mediterranean Sea, and with the rivers Ebro and Cinga.

Aire. The aire aswell in Winter, as in Summer, in that part which lieth Southward, by the Sea-coast is very milde, and temperate: but the Northerne part, which lieth among the Mountaines; by reason of the cold and snow, which stay long upon them, is raw & cold.

Fertility. This Countrie is Mountainous, having fine Dales, and Valleyes betweene them, which makes it to be very fruitfull, and yeeld much encrease: chiefely in Wine, Oyle, Apples, & other fruits it surpasseth other Countries of Spaine by farre. In the sands of the river Sicoris are found small peeces of Gold. They haue also more store of Yron, then of Lead, Copper, and Tinne, which is somewhat scarce there. Of late they haue found diuerse precious stones, especially, about Signimount, where there is a veine of a precious stone called an Amethist, and also the Onyx stone, which growes not much unlike a mans navell, from whence it tooke this name. About the towne of Tiviot, there are also veines of precious stones, which are very like your Sardius, & Iasper stones, and neere unto the head of the river Rubricat, is found your Hæmatites, or blood stone, which hath an excellent vertue to stanch blood withall.

Precious Stones.

Marble. At Tarragona, and Beuda are digged out of the earth diuerse sorts and kinds of Marble, with fine redd and white speeks & veines in them. And at Saralea they finde a kinde of solid, & hard Alablaster, whereof they make glass-windowes, so that it seemes this is that Countrie, which Plinie meant in his Lapidibus Specularibus speaking of Hispania Citerior. Not farre from Populeta they finde good store of Alum, and red-copper. There growes in this Countrie also excellent hempe, especially about the river side, which runneth by Tarracona, as also a kinde of Flaxe, of which they used to make sailes for shipping, called Carbasa, which groweth there in abundance.

Shipwarfes. It is also remarkeable, that in this royaltie, the most Merchantshipps, and Galleys, which are rigged and furnished with Ordinance and Amunition, & set saile from Barcelona, are built here.

Woods. The Woods and Forests are in euery place full of Deere, and other game.

Ancient Inhabitants. Ancient writers make mention, that diverse Nations inhabited this Countrie. 1. Ptolomy saith the Castellani dwelt here, and that Varrorius had giuen him for his habitation the Dutchie of Cardona. 2. Some call the Incolæ of this Countrie Indigetes, Ptolomie Indigetos, and Stephanus, speaking of the towne Indienna, nameth them Indicetos. 3. Livie and Plinie are of opinion, that the Ilergetes inhabited here, whome Polybius calleth Ilargetas. 4. The Laletani, whereof Plinie writeth, from whome the Martialia Laletania descended. 5. Dionysius and Eustachius their Cempsi. 6. Iulianus his Cerratani, and Plinie his Augustani. Silius and Stephanus nameth them Ceretanos; the remnants whereof seemeth to be Cerveira, Puigcerdia, & Condado de Cerdania. 7. The Vetteres, as Xilander noteth them, were the people & inhabitants, which dwelt in Hispania Tarraconensis betweene Hebro, and the Pyrenean Mountaines. Strabo writeth hem Betteres, and Isaac Casaubon holds them to be Anthonins Secerres. 8. The Ligues by the river Sicanis, whereof Thucydides, and Halicarnassæus make mention. 9. Liviers and Plinies Ausitani, whome Ptolomie calleth Anthethanos. 10. Pliniers Larnenses, which dwelt by the river, that runneth under the Pyrenean hills. 11. The Ilercaones mentioned in Ptolomy, amonge whome the towne Dertosa stood, or Plinies Sercanoenses, or perhapps Cæsars Ilurgavenses. Boterus writeth in commendations of this Countrie in this manner: Catalaunia yeeldeth al things that the other Spanish Provinces produce, saving Sugars, and Italian and Spanish Prunes. There extraordinarie diligence in traffique, and trading makes them growe rich: for there is not a people in all Spaine more industrious, and laborious in all manner of knowledge, arts and manufactures then these, or those which are held in greater esteeme then they. Yet he spends his judgement upon them, that they are a turbulent and inconstant, and a peevish people, given to robberie, and for a trifell will rise up in sedition against their Magistrates, but will undergoe any labour. Otherwise this Countrie breeds many wise, and judicious men. The Carthaginians haue had many a bickering and fight with the Inhabitants thereof. And whensoeuer the Romans fought any Battel with the Carthaginians, it commonly hapned in this Territoire, as also betweene the Gothes and the Romans, the Sarracens and the Gothes, and the French and the Sarracens, this was the ordinary field & place of Battel and Combate.

Towne Barcelonide. The chiefe city thereof is now Barcelone, a gallant towne, seated upon the shoare of the Mediterranean Sea, a towne of good strenght, and antiquitie, as rising out of the ruines of Rubicata, an old Colony of the Africans, before the comming of the Romans into Spaine. It hath belonging unto it an indifferent faire haven, and is the seate of the Vicegerent, as Mr. Heylen saith. It hath also a wide moate, and fine houses built of free stone, pleasant gardens & orchards, with great, and large streets (not usuall in Spaine) which are kept very neate and cleane, by reason of the channells and gutters, which washe away all filt & dirt out of them.

Many Spanish Authours affirme, that Amilcar Barcha, the Sonne of Hanniball the Carthagian Generall, should haue first founded this city. Ptolomy calleth this towne Barcinon, Paulinus Barcinum, Iornandes Barcelona, and Plinie ſaith, that it was formerly named Faventia. Marinæus Siculus lib. 13. 15. Rer. Hiſp. ſetteth forth much the beautie, and magnificencie of this towne. It was heretofore much leſſer then it is now a daies, lying about a furlong from the Sea ſhoare: it had wont to haue foure gates, euery one of them opening and looking to one of the foure quarters of the world, being of a like diſtance one from an other, which now ſtand in the very midſt of the city, each of them having a Cowes head upon the topp of them, as a token and a ſigne of peace, quietneſſe, and of ſafe tillage. In proceſſe of time it was twiſe girt about with a ſtrong wall, and ſtately towers, and turrets ſtanding upon them, and litle by litle came to ſuch magnificencie & perfection that it may now be truely called the Metropolis of Catalogne. Of the Earles of Barcelona, and their deſcent, one maye read in Rodericus Toletanus his ſixth booke of the Spaniſh Chronicle. Cap. 3. and in Lucius Marinæus Lib. 9. Next unto this is Ptolomie his Tarraco, and Plinies Tarracon, called at this day Tarragona. This towne in ancient times was ſo famous, that the greateſt part of Spaine bore the name of it. Amongſt the Sea-ports Mela-Vigua commonly called Vicque or Vicq is the richeſt. Ptolomies Auſa was a towne belonging to the Authetani. Girona is called by Plinie and Anthonine Gerunda: Tortoſa is named in Plinie Dertoſa, and Plinie calleth the people thereof Dertoſani. Lerida is named by Ptolomy, Stephanus, and others Ilerda, & the ancient inhabitants thereof were the Ilergetes. The ſituation thereof is deſcribed by Lucanus de bello Pharſalico in his fourth booke, in this manner:

Tarragona.
Vicq.
Girona.
Lerida.

Colle tumet modico, lenique excrevit in altum
Pingue ſolum tumulo; ſuper hunc fundata vetuſta
Surgit Ilerda manu: placidis prælabitur undis

Leſſer townes.

The towne now called Empurias, or Ampurias is in Silius, Polybius, and Ptolomie named Emporiæ & by Stephanus Emporium. Pomponius and Ptolomies Blanda as Beuterus, Florianus and Navagierus conjecture, is now Blanes. Florianus ſaith alſo, that Livie his Manfreſa ſhould now be Athanagia. The towne Roſa or Roſes is called by Livius Rhoda, by Stephanus Rhode, by Strabo Rhodope, and by Ptolomie Rhodopolis. Ptolomies, Livies, and Plinies Iliberis is Colibra, reduced now into the forme of a village having bene before a great walled towne. The Tabulæ Peutingerianæ name it Cliberre, but ſome againe are of the opinion, that Illiberis was not Colibra, but rather an other towne, which Poldus Sulas, Olivarius Eunam, and Mercator call Illain. That place where now Catalonia ſtands, was formerly called Iulia Lybica, by Anthonine Cinniana, and by Ptolomie Deciana. Perpigna otherwiſe called Perpinga lieth in the Country of Roſſillon. This towne and the Countrie was pawned by Iohn King of Arragon 1462. to Levves the Eleuenth of France for 300000. Crownes, and reſtored to Ferdinand the Catholique by Charles the eight in the yeare 1493. that he might not be hindred in his journey to Naples.

The firſt Earle of this Country was one Bernard by the graunt of Charles the Great, Anno 795. it continued a principality of its owne power, till Raymund Earle hereof marrying Petronilla, Daughter and heire to Don Raymur of Arragon, united this Earledome to that Kingdome An. 1134. I will now conclude Spaine, with an excellẽt Panegyrick or Oration, which a French man, called Latinus Pacatus, made unto the Emperour Theodoſius a Spanjard in praiſe and commendations of Spaine, which is this: Now may we truely ſay, that they haue made ſuch a Prince, which ought of all, and by all to be choſen. For firſt Spaine is your Nurcing-Mother, among all Countries moſt happie becauſe, for the adorning and enriching thereof, the moſt high Creatour of all things, hath bleſſed it aboue all other Nations: for it is neither ſubject to the hott Southerne windes, nor to the chilling Northerne cold, but enjoyeth a milde and temperate aire, and is as an other world, ſituated, and ſhutt in betweene the Pyrenean Mountaines, the Maine Ocean, and the Tyrrhenean Sea. Add hereunto, the many ſtately Cities & Townes, the tilled & untilled grounds, wherein abundance of all fruits, and cattel are. The riches of the Gould-bearing rivers, and ſuch variety of Mettalls. The Poets haue aſcribed to ſome people ſtrange wonders, as that Gargara abounded in Wheate and Corne, Menavia in Beaſts and Cattel, Campania glorying in her lofty Mount Gnarano, Lydia in her pleaſant Pactolo, & yet Spaine is endowed with all theſe, & may boaſt of theſe things much more. For this Countrie breedeth not onely good ſouldiers, but alſo experienced Captaines, & Commandours, what ſhall I ſpeake of their Eloquent Oratours, and famous Poets? This Countrie is the Mother of Iudges, and Princes, having brought us forth Trajanus, then Hadrianus, and now alſo your Imperiall Majeſty. Therefore Creta neede not ſo highly bragg becauſe Iupiter was borne in her: nor alſo Delos for having bred up Apollo and Diana, her two lights, neither alſo Thebæ for her foſterchild Hercules, we know well, that faith is not onely by hearing, but this great God whome wee ſee, hath giuen us Spaine.

THE DESCRIPTION OF HELVETIA or ZWITZERLAND,

With the other Neighbouringh, and Vnited Countries.

Originall name. HELVETIA was ſo called heretofore by the Romans, & at this day the greateſt part of it is corruptly named Suitia or Suicia from the Saxon people, whome Charles the Great chaſed for their rebellion, & perfidiouſneſſe out of their owne habitations into the Alpes, as alſo many thouſands of the Nordalbingi fleeted then into Flanders and Brabant.

It may well be, that this Countrie had this name from the Sueci or Sweeds, who in the time of King Sigebert, by reaſon of the inundation of waters, or the multitude of their Inhabitants, being expulſed out of their owne Countrie, came and ſetled themſelues here. For, Swizerland (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) was in Cæſars time ſo populous, that the Countrie being not able to ſubſtaine the people, they ſet fire on their townes and houſes, and went all with a generall reſolution, to ſeeke new dwellings. The men, women and children amounted to the number of 36800000. which notwithſtanding were by Cæſar compelled to returne againe into their former habitations. It is very likely alſo, that this Countrie might be called Zwitzerland from the village Switz. It is named alſo the Confederate or Vnited Countrie, in regard of the confederacie, & alliance where by they are united together, which confederacie the Germans tearme Eydgenotſchaft. The Helvetii or Zwitzers, were heretofore called by Eutropius the Quadi.

Height. This is reputed to be the higheſt Countrie in all Europa, as ſending forth foure famous rivers, viz. Danubius through Germanie, Hungarie & Dacia Eaſt; Rhene through Germany, France and Belgium North; Rhodanus through France Weſt; & Poo through Italie South.

Bounds. This Countrie lieth betweene Mount Iura, and the Lake of Geneve, Italie, and the Rhene, on the Eaſt it is boundeth with Tirolis, on the South with the Cottian Alpes, Lombardie, and the Dutchie of Mylan, and with the borders of Piemont, on the Weſt with Savoy and Burgundie, and on the North with the Rhene.

Length & breath. It is in lenght 240. miles, in breath 180. and is thought to containe two millions of people. The Zwitzers are a very warlike nation, who will ſtand firme in the day of Battell, & ſince by reaſon of their ſituation, they haue no vent for their men by traffick, they uſe to employ themſelues in the ſervice of any Prince; that will giue them entertainement. The firſt time, that euer they got any reputation by their valour, was in the warrs which Charles Duke of Burgundie made againſt them, whome they diſconfited in three ſett Battels. A warre begun on very ſmall occaſions, and leſſe hopes: the Countrie being ſo barren, and the people ſo poore, that their Ambaſſadour to the Duke (as Comines reporteth) proteſted, that if all his Countrie men were taken, they would not be able to pay a ranſome, to the value of the ſpurrs & bridle bits in his campe. At the Battell of Nancie, where the Duke was ſlaine, they tooke one of the goodlieſt Pavilliõs in the World, cutt it in peeces, & made Slops & ſide Coates of it, tooke diverſe Silver plates & diſhes, which they ſold for 2. ſouſe a peece, ſuppoſing them to be pewter, & a great Diamond of the Dukes, which was the goodlieſt jewell in Chriſtendome, was ſold to a prieſt for a gilder, and by him againe to ſome of the Lords of the Country for three Frankes. After the valour ſhewed in thoſe Battailes, Lewes the Second tooke them into penſion, giving them yearely 40000. Crownes, viz. 20. thouſand to the cities, & 20. thouſand to particular perſons.

The valour of the Zwitzers.

Temperature and fertilitie. The whole Countrie hath a healthfull aire, and though it hath many high and unmanured mountaines, rough & craggie, yet by the continuall labour of the Inhabitants, it is now ſo tilled that it is no where unfruitfull, but yeeldeth aſwell all neceſſarie ſuſtenance, as dainties for pleaſure and delight. It beareth much Graine, though in ſome grounds they are drivẽ firſt to burne the clods, before they begun to ſowe their corne, which barrenneſſe is holpen by the diligence & good huſbandrie of the Inhabitants. In many places the Countrie produceth excellent Wines, which excelleth much your Rheniſh Wine, both for ſmell, taſt, and ſtrength. Add hereunto their rich and fatt Paſtures for their many heards of Cattel to feede in, where by the Inhabitants get great gaine. Wilde Beaſts & game. There are alſo abundance of Wilde-beaſts, as Beares, Staggs, Hinds, fallow-Deeres, Goates and Kides both wilde and tame, Lynces, Loſes or Wolf-hearts, Wilde-boores & diverſe others, where with the Inhabitants often times take pleaſure in hunting, neither want they good ſtore of game for hawking and fowling.

This Countrie is free, and ſubject to no Prince, for when any inteſtine broiles or diſſentions ariſe, they puniſhed moſt ſeverly and cruelly the Ringleaders & Authours that begann it, by which meanes comming into the hate of the nobility and Gentrie, they made a league, and a confederacie amonge themſelues, caſting of all forraine yoaks, to gett themſelues liberty.

The Zwitzers then at laſt being ouerburdened with the tiranny of their Gouvernours, and ſeing the Empire, by the Popes Fulminations, diſtracted into diverſe factions, they contracted an offenſiue & a defenſiue League, into which firſt entred the Vranians, Switz & Vnderwaldens, Anno 1316. neither were they all united together into one confederation, till the yeare 1513. At their firſt beginning to free themſelues from bondage, Fredericke Duke of Auſtria ſent his Sonne Leopold to warre upon them, but they proteſting that they never aknowledged the Dukes of Auſtria, for their Lords, but onely ſuch of this familly, as were Emperours, encountred & overthrew him more byt he conveniencie of the narrow paſſages, through which his armie was to paſſe, then their owne valour, which exemple their other neighbouring townes following, when their powerfull neighbours would not let them be at reſt, did the like, making a ſure confederacie amonge themſelues, which they confirmed by a ſtronge Oath, and ſo became of an equall power and might, to oppoſe and reſiſt their ennemis and neighbours, & afterward having obtained many victories, encreaſing their Allies, they were at laſt a terrour to their ennemies. Confederacie.

Deviſion. All Zwitzerland is devided into foure parts, which in High Dutch they call Gow, ſignifying a tract of Land, namely theſe, Zurichgow, Wipfliſburgergow, Argow & Turgow. The common weale, or communalties of the Zwitzers conſiſteth in three members.

In the firſt there are 13. Villages, called in Italian Cantons, in Dutch Orten, in Engliſh Hundred or Precincts, who aboue all other of their confederates haue their owne lawes, where by they may conſult, reſolue and determine of all cauſes which may concerne the communaltie of the Zwitzers, in a generall day of meeting, to treate of the dammage, or benefit of their common wheale. which they haue gott together, are administred alike, sharing their conquests, and boote equally amongst themselues, as namely, Zurich, which Canton with the three Villages entred into this Confederacie Anno 1351. Berne 1355. Lucerne 1332. Vrania, Switz and Vnderwalt, were the first that in the yeare 1308. entred into this Confederacie amonge themselues, Zugh and Glaries came in 1352. Basil 1505. Friburgh and Soloure entred into this League 1481. so that the whole Confederacie consisted in XI. Cantons, into which also Schaf-husen & Apensol came An. 1502. which made up in al XIII. Cantons. These Cantons or Precincts are devided into twelve severall orders, which they call Roden, where of six lying next to that Village is called the Interiour, and the other the Exteriour: out of every of these parts are chosen twelue Senatours or Counsellours, which make in all 144. Senatours, which gouverne the whole Country.

In the second part are these Confederates and Allies, namely the Abbot with the towne of S. Gal, who entred into Confederation with the other foure Cantons Anno 1455. and afterward made a perpetuall League with the other fixe Cantons, as Zurich, Barne, Lucerne, Zwitz, Zugh & Glaris. The Rhetti, Grisons and Graubunters, made also an everlasting League with the six Old Cantons, Anno 1497. And those of Chur, whose Society are called Gods Hausbundt, entred into it 1498. The third Society, termed Zehen Gerichten, though they made no Confederacie with the Zwitzers, yet being in a perpetuall League and Confederacie with the other two, liue in amitie and loyalty one with another. Sion or Sitten with Valesia made also a perpetuall Confederacie with those of Berne Anno 1475. and afterward when troubles arose about Religion, Adrian Bishop of Sion, and the seuen Decumæ of the Valesians, 1533. made a firme Alliance at Friburgh with the seuen Cantons, namely with Lucerne, Vrania, Switz, Vnderwalt, Zugh, Friburgh, and Soloure, which make all profession of the Popish Religion. Rotweil Anno 1463. entred Confederation with the Zwitzers for 15. yeares, which was often renewed, and Anno 1519. ratifyed for ever. Mulhusen Anno 1468. made an alliance with the Zwitzers. Bienna or Biel made with those of Berne, 1303. 1306. 1357. and 1367. a most firme Alliance Also Geneve made a very strict League with those of Berne, Anno 1536. though it be not accounted one of the Zwitzers Cantons.

In the third part are those Precincts and Corporations, which the Zwitzers haue conquered by armes, or which did willingly yeeld themselues ouer to them. As Turgou came under the obeissance of the Zwitzers Anno 1460. and stands now under the subjection of the seuen Cantons. Baden was taken in by them 1415. and is subject to the eight first Cantons. Rheguſti 1491. was gouverned by the seuen first Cantons, as also now by the thirteene. Sarunetum or Sarungans 1483. was sould by George of Werdenbergh, to the 7. first Cantons, by whome it is now gouverned. The Free-Provinces were subdued 1515. and came under the commaund of the seuen eldest Cantons. These foure Precincts as Lugano, Locarno, Mendresium & Vallis Media, were giuen, and bestowed on the Zwitzers Anno 1513. by Maximilia Sforce, whome they estated in Milan, and all the Cantons saving Apensol, haue commaund ouer them. Bellizona 1513. came under the power of the three first Cantons.

Valesia. Valesia or Wallis-land, contained in this Mapp, is devided into three seuerall people, & into there Confederacies, whereof the two first are the Viberi and the Seduni, which are called by one name Liberi Valesii superiores, and are devideth into 7. Convents, which they terme Decume or Desenas. The Veragi otherwise called Valesiani inferiores are under the commaund of those aboue said: yet the Bishop of Sion is as a Prince and head ouer them, having supreme authority and commaund, as well in causes Spiritual as Temporall, and therefore is called Earle and Gouvernour of Valesia. In Valesia likewise lieth the Countie of Werdenbergh, and the free Lordship of Sax.

Religion. As for the Religion of this people, they are devided into Papists and Protestants, fiue Cantons are wholy Papists, viz. Zwitz, Vrania Vnderwalds, Lucerne and Zugh, but Glaris & Apenzol are mixt. The rest entirely Protestants. The devision begann Anno 1519. or thereabouts, when Zuinglius Minister of Zurich or Tigurum, seconded the beginning of Luther, which innovation the rest of this people not liking, mouved warre with them of Zurich, & the rest of the Reformation, in which Zuinglius was slaine, and the Tigurines discomfited: but Anno 1531. an absolute peace was concluded betweene them; so that notwith standing this diversity of Religion, they liue now in a happie unity, gouverning after a Democraticall forme. See Mr. Heyling in his Description of Zwitzerland.

Lakes. There are not a greater number of Lakes in any countrie in the World then there are in this Province, the chiefest whereof are the Lucernia-Lake, Zurich-Lake, Wallen-Lake, Nuwenburgish-Lake: but the greatest of them all is Lacus Acronius or the Bodenzea, which Solinus & Plinius call Brigantinum, & Ammianus Brigantinum, after the name of an old towne so called. The length of this Lake reached 24. thousand paces, and the breath where it is narrowest twelue thousand. Touching this Lake and the Rhene, I will sett downe Ammianus his owne words, which are to this effect:

The Rene. The Rhene (saith he) powreth downe from betweene the windings of the high Mountaines, with aswift streame, which like Channells and Cutters fall from the steepe Alpes as the river Nilus doth at his first head: it is as a poole, which receiving much waters into it, runneth slowly forward with a soft motion, which encreasing and growing greater by the abundance of melted snow, which fall downe through Channells and Gutters, at last make a round and a huge Lake, called by the Rhetians and Grisons the Brigantine-Sea. The hideousnesse of the vast and thick woods, is the cause that it lies so desolate, and unhabited, saving there where the vertue, and industrie of the Germans made place for Barbarous men; the situation and nature of the places never the lesse & the distemper of the aire striving against them. The running rivers then with their crookling foame, falling into this Lake, gliding through the still waues thereof, The Bodenzee. cuts the same as it were with a line just in the midst, and as an element which after a long fight part one from another doth neither diminish nor encrease his waters brought into it, but runneth his course without either changing the name, or the vertue: yet which is more admirable, this Lake for all the swift currant of waters, that falls into it, is not once troubled or mouved, neither the course of this river hindred by the mudd or durt which is cast up, as not confusedly mingling the water of this River and the Lake together: which would seeme impossible, if one had not seene it with his owne eyes, and that the water of the one and of the other may be discerned and knowne one from the other.

Rivers. The Rivers which water this Countrie, are the Rhene, the Roane, Adua, Ticinis, Lymagus, Byrsa, Langanus, Sara, Taurus or Dur, Ænus, or in Arola & others.

Mountaines. It is in vaine to relate here the Rhetian Alpes, and Mountaines, since they are well knowne to the whole World. Who is it not but hath heard of the straunge mountaine called S. Gothards, which formerly was named Summas Alpes. Next unto them are the Penina Alpes about the Sallassi are the Cottiæ Alpes, & Mount Silius. The S. Bernads great and small Mounts, and by the Lepontii the Gray-Alpes. Adula or the Fowle Mount, which reach as farre as the Misauci. Neere unto the Vale of Engadeia, lie the Alpes Iuliæ, and Mount Permurna, then neere unto the Vendenes, the Mounts Valarius & Brantius. By the Rhucanti is Mount Rheticus & by the Lake of Geneve Mount Iurassius, upon the borders of the Tulingi are the Mounts Annobia, and these are the most famous Mountaines of this region, wee will speake more at large of these Alpes in the Description of Italie.

Woods. There are also abundance of Woods, all parts of the Hircinian Forest or Swart-wood, the chiefest of them changing their names here & there, are the Brigantine-wood, Rhen-wood, Bonwood, and diverse others.

Forme of Gouvernment & Policy. The Zwitzers Common wheale consists of the chiefest and the common people mixed together: some of their townes, & Communalties consists in a meere Democraticall gouvernment, where all causes are consulted and resolued of by the vulgar people, namely, in those Cantons, which haue no walled townes in them, as Vriana, Zwitz Underwaldt, Glaris, and Appenzol, as also Zugh, though it be a towne. Others are gouverned & ruled by the chiefest of the people, viz. the Helvetian Townes, as Zurich, Berne, Lucerne, &c. and yet so, that the supreme power remaineth amonge the Communaltie, who chooses their owne Magistrates, in so much that indeed this Common wheale being a commixed gouvernment, some are ruled after an Aristocraticall, and others after a Democraticall forme, which is, by some chiefe men, and others by the vulgar people themselues.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ZVRICHGOW, AND THE BASILIAN PROVINCE.

AFTER the Generall Deſcription of Zvvitzerland, come the parts, which Mercator delineateth in theſe three Maps following, namely, the firſt comprehendeth the two Provinces of Zurichgovv, and of Baſil: the ſecond of VVipfliſpurgergovv: and the third of Argovv, which with the Lake of Geneve wee will here ſett downe, to followe one another in order. Concerning the firſt Mapp preſented here unto your view; this tract is called in high Dutch Zurichgovv, and in Cæſar Tigurinus Pagus.

Fertility. The Soile in this Countrie, eſpecially about the capitall city of Zurich, is very fruitfull, and rich in Corne and Wine, but hath a very ſowriſh taſt, by reaſon the high Alpes next adjoyning to it keepes away the heate of the Sunne, that the grapes can not grow ripe, but after the Wine hath laine ſome time in a good Cellar, it looſeth the tartneſſe, & ſharpneſſe thereof, having then a more pleaſant taſt.

Zurich. The chiefeſt towne of this Province is called by the Latiniſts Tigurum, and in ſome coppies Thuregum, and now in Dutch Zurich. It is a very ancient towne, ſeated in a pleaſant place at the end of Lacus Tigurinus, or the Zuriciſh Lake, out of which the river called Lindmagus, or Liniat commeth, & receiueth the ſame againe into him not farre from Glaris, deviding this citie into two parts, namely, into the great, & the litle towne, which are commodiouſly joined together by three bridges over which a great concourſe of people continually goe. There is alſo a large Corne market, where abundance of Graine is ſould every weeke. The Lake furniſheth the towne with an incredible number of delicate fiſhe, as alſo with diverſe other proviſions. And though the citie of Zurich be but accounted the fifth Canton in the Helvetian Confederacie: yet in regard of the magnificencie, and power thereof, with the conſent of all the others, taketh the firſt place (yea ſince the Cantons haue bene encreaſed) and keepes it ſtill in all aſſemblies, Embaſſies, and in all publike acts. This citie hath bred many famous, Learned men. and learned men, as Conradus Pellicanus moſt ſkilfull in the Hebrew, Chaldean, and Talmudian tongues, Theodorus Bibliandrus, Conradus Geſnerus, that admirable & worthy Hiſtoriographer. Neere unto this towne, as Sleydan telleth us, Svvinglius the Miniſter thereof was ſlaine. It being the cuſtome of the place for the miniſters to goe in the front of their Armies. And againe (as Mr. Heylin citeth) he being a man of a bold courage, thought that if he ſhould ſtay at home, men would haue deemed him, to haue fainted in the time of warre, which had encouraged others in the time of peace. He was aged at the time of his death, & was by the victorious Ennemy burned, his heart remaining in the midſt of the fire, after the reſt of his body was conſumed whole & untouched, as was alſo the heart of Biſhop Cranmer at his Martyrdome in England.

This Citie hath many Corporations & Lordſhips belonging to it, great and ſmall; the Greater are nine in number, as the Countie of Kyburgh, the Lordſhips of Groyning, Andelfing, Griffen-Sea, Egliſovv, the free Province of Regenſperg, VVadiſchvvell, & Lauffen neere unto the fall of the Rhene. The Leſſer are 22. in number. The townes of VVinterthur, & Steyn are likewiſe under the juriſdiction of Zurich, though they haue Magiſtrates of their ownes, yet when thoſe of Zurich commaund, they muſt ſend Souldiers into the warrs, yet giue their owne colours. In this Province lieth alſo Fugium, or Zug, a towne, canton, & territorie bearing its Zugh. owne name, lying more Northward, & bordering upō Svvitz, at the foote of a Mountaine, having excellent Paſtures, and Vinefields about it, and reacheth to the Lake, which is called after its owne name the Zugiſh Lake, abounding in fiſhe, about which alſo are very good Corne-fields. The Inhabitants of this Iuriſdiction were heretofore called Tugini, and by Strabo in his ſeuenth booke Toygeni, being the ſame, who with the Turingi, and the Cimbri made a League to oppoſe and withſtand the Romans, which ye may read in Plutarke in the life of Marius, and in Eutropius his fifth booke. This towne of Zug, was for a while under the Commaund of the Nobilitie, but afterward came under the power of the houſe of Auſtria, who (during the Helvetian warrs) held alwaies a Garniſon in it, and plagued often thoſe of Zvvitz and Zurich. Which cauſed the Zurichers, with the other foure Cantons in the yeare 1352. to march towards thoſe of Zug, but the Souldiers which lay there in Garniſon, not truſting to the weakeneſſe of this towne, abandoned the ſame before the Switzers came before it, the Burgeſſes deſiring to continue faithfull to Auſtria held out a 15. daies ſiege, but at laſt were driuen to giue it over, and to ſweare to this Condition, that in caſe the Duke of Auſtria did relieue them with his armie in a time prefixed, that then they would come againe under his obeiſſance; if not, the promiſſed reliefe failling, they would enter into a confederacie with the Svvitzers. This Cantō of Zug is devided into two parts, in which there are foure Aſſemblies or meetings, out of each of them are choſen nine Senators Couſellours, who are to gouverne this Countrie. The towne it ſelfe hath a double voice & makes two of theſe Aſſemblies: The adjoyning Territoire hath three, namely the Bergiſh, the Vale of Egero, or Aqua Regi, & the Parriſh of Bara, but thoſe of the towne of Zug commaund, and rule ouer their Officers & Miniſters, as alſo ouer the towne of Chain, ouer the villages of Andreas, Hunetbergh, VVachenhofen, Stienhauſen, and S. VVolfganch. Baden.

Baden is ſeated in the middle of the Countrie & (as Mr. Heylin writheth) is for that cauſe, the place of meeting for the Councell of eſtates for all the Con- Bathes. federates. It taketh name from the Bathes here, two of which onely are publike, the reſt are in private houſes: conſcious, as it is thought, of much laciviouſneſſe. wash together, and which is worst in private: where as Munster telleth us, Cernunt viri uxores tractari, cernunt cum alienis loqui, & quidem solam cum solo; and yet are not any disturbed with yealousie. These Bathes are much frequented: yet not so much for health as pleasure. Their chiefest vertue is the quickning power they haue upon barren women. But as the Fryers use to send men, whose wiues are fruitlesse in pelgrimage to S. Ioyce, the Patronesse of Fruitfulnesse, and in the meane time lie with their wiues: so it may be with good reason thought, that in a place of such libertie as this, the lusty and joung gallants that haunt this place, produce greater operation on barren women, then the waters of this Bath. Now followeth the Basilian Province so called after the famous towne of Basill. Otherwise it is called Sungovia which name is thought to come from the Sequani, or Bourgonians: of this opinion is Beatus Rhenanus lib. 3. Tractatu Rerum Germanicarum.

Fertility. The soile hereabouts is very fruitfull in Corne, and Wine, so that they cann sufficiently furnish their neighbours therewith, when neede requires. There are also fatt pasture grounds for Cattell. As Tschudus witnesseth, Ptolomies Raurici, and Cæsars Rauarci inhabited in ancient times this Countrie, of whome Cæsar maketh mention, that after the manner of the Helvetians, they burned all their townes, villages, and houses to seeke new dwellings. The Metropolis of this

Basil. Countrie is Basil, so called (as some falsely faine) either from a Basiliske slaine there at the building of the city, or from Basilina mother to the Emperour Iulianus. Rhenanus thinketh that it was so named because of a passage, which in French is called Pas, as if one should say Passilea. He addeth further, that in all likelyhood, it was a through-fare, euen when Augusta flourished, by reason of the Valley through which a brooke runneth that commeth out Byrsa, the shoare being euen & plaine, and very convenient for a passage: whereas Augusta lieth very high, and incommodious. But Munster rejecteth this opinion, with the Authority of Marcellinus, who calleth this city after a Greeke word Βασιλείαν naming it Regnum, or a Kingdome, giving us to understand hereby that is a royal citie. The Rhene running through this city devideth it into two parts almost in the very midst, being joyned together with a fine bridge. The Rhene is a great advantage to this towne, because abundance of shippings comes unto it, & that being heavily laden, they may land their fraughts there with great ease. About 200. yeares a goe, this citie had almost perished, by many fearefull Earthquakes; yet afterwards was built up againe. It is a famous Vniversity founded by Pope Pius the Second, Anno 1459. And Anno 1501. was made a Canton, and honoured with the sepulchres of Oecolampadius, Erasmus, Pontanus, Glarienus, & Hottoman the Famous Civilian. It is endoweth with many goodly priviledges, rights, and immunities, and enjoyeth the like liberties, as the Vniversities of Bononia, Colleyne, Heydelbergh, Erffort, Lypsich, and Vienna. In this city Anno 1431. was held that notable Councill, wherein (though the Papall authority was then at the height) it was decreed that a Generall Councill was aboue the Pope. What was then enacted, was immediately put in practise, the Councill thereupon deposed Pope Eugenius the Fourth, placing in his roome Amadeus Duke of Savoy, who was afterward called Felix the Fourth.

Corporatiõs & Iurisdictions. The Basilian Corporations or Lordships are these, namely those of Farenberg, Rhinefeild, standing upon a high-hill. The townes of VVallenburg, Humburg, Munchensteyn & Ramstein. The Countie of Togvvyl belongeth unto the Abbot of S. Gall, though the Inhabitants thereof be Burgesses of Svvitz and Glaris. Also the Counties of Rapperswyl and Straesberg, with the free Lordship of Kilchbergh. The rest of the Zugerish and Zurish Cantons shab be described in the Mapp of Argovv. The Imperiall Abbeys in this Mapp, described neither in the Swabian Circle, nor in the Generall Description of Germanie, are Reichenovv, Schafhausen, Kreutzling, Pfetters or Pfetticon. There are in this Countrie a great number of running rivers and Rivers. brookes, which disburden themselues all into the Rhene, among which the Rhene it self, the Byrsa, and the VVilsa are the chiefest: the head of the Byrsa springeth out of Mount Iura, & gliding through diverse valleys to Basil, carrieth alonge with him many floats of wood and timber. The VViesa floweth out of the Svvartzvvood, carrying downe his streame much timber and beames for building, which those of Litle Basil use. By the benefite and accommodation of these streames, there are many Watermilles sett a worke aswell for sawing of plankes, & the grinding of Corne, as for sharpning and whetting of Smiths and Carpenters tooles. Here are also forged yron barres, necessarie for many uses, besides the excellent fishe that is taken in them, especially Roches, though this river be smaller thẽ the Byrsa, yet it abounds more in fishe. The Byrsa is very commodious for milles & paper makers. There are other rivers besides these, the Tolder, Largus, &c. The Councellours aswell at Zurich, as at Basil are chosen of a like number out of everie Gilde, so that in both these cities, there are two common Councills in great respect, and authoritie, namely: The Grand Councill, which is when manie are called together in the name of the Communaltie, and that onely in causes of weightie importance, which concernes the common people in generall. The Pettie Councill hath the administration of daylie suits, and affaires for the common good, and take notice of all civill causes. The Grand Councill at Zurich consisteth of 200. persons, & at Basil of 244. In the Pettie Councill at Zurich there are 50. men, and at Basil 64. for out of everie Gild are deputed for the grand Councill twelfe persons. Onely those of Zurich choose 18. persons out of the Gentrie. In the pettie Councill at Zurich three persons are elected out of euerie Gilde, and at Basil foure. To these are joyned two Burrough-masters of euery towne, which are as it were the Headsmen of the Common Councill. At Basil they joyne two Gild-masters with them, which they call also Headsmen being almost of like authoritie with the Bourrough-masters. Besides these the Gentrie of Zurich place sixe men in the petty Councill, where as the other Gilds may choose but three, to these are added sixe others chosen by plurality of voices, out what Gild soeuer it shall please the Magistrates. The petty Councill is devided againe into the old & new, those are called the old Councill, that haue bene in this office halfe a yeare, and are also called when the grand Councill is assembled, but not upon all occasions, for some causes may be decided & dispatched by the petty Councill. In the same manner also is the grand Councill of Basil devided, and out of the 12. men chosen by the Gildes, 6. are joyned to the new, and 6. to the old Councill. The petty Councill meets at least three times a weeke, and some times foure. Over both these Councills they place a Bourrough-master, chosen by the Grand Councill: next unto the Bourrough-masters the Gild masters beare the greatest power, called by the Zurichers Ouermasters, and by the Basilers Zunftmasters. There are three of them at Zurich, and two at Basil, who with the Bourrough-masters are called the Chiefe Headsmen: He that desires to be better informed touching their Gouvernment, may read Iosias Simlerus, who writeth very amply thereof, and out of whom wee haue taken this which is here inserted.

THE DESCRIPTION OF VVIPFLISBVRGERGOVV, OR PAGVS AVENTICVS.

Name.

THE Pagus Aventicus, or VVipflisburgergouv, tooke this name from the towne of VVipflisburgh, which in the time of Iulius Cæsar was the chiefe towne of all Helvetia, and was called Aventicum.

Site.

This Territoire is comprehended within the borders of Savoy, though it be subject to the commaund of Berne, & Friburgh, as also the Countrie on the further side of the Bieler, and Neuvburgish-Lake.

Fertility.

This Countrie is fruitfull in Wine, and Corne. In this map are almost all the Bernish, & Friburgish Cantons contayned. Berne, being the chiefe towne of the first, and though it be not very ancient, yet if one considers the situation, neatnesse, civilitie and good manners, statutes and rights of the Burgesses & their power and dexteritie; it neede not giue place to any of the other townes. Touching the structure thereof, It is reported that Berchtold the Fourth of that name Duke of Zeringen, founded there in his time two Free-Castles, the one in Brisgauv, the other in Vchtland, and that his subjects might dwell with the more safety, and assurance in Vchtland, he built an other towne by his Castle of Nideck upon a Peninsul Sack, as they called it then, beset round about with Oaken trees. Duke Berchtold upon a certaine time going a hunting, he tould his huntsmen, the towne which I inted to built here in this commodious place shalbe called after the name of the first Beast that wee shall meete withall and kill, which was a Bern, or a Beare, & because (as is said) there grew great store of Oaken timber, they hewed & cutt downe all the trees for the building of their houses, in so much that when the Carpenters & workmen were at worke in this wood, they had this proverbe among them.

The first foundation of Berne.

Holts lasz dich hauvven gern
Die Stad muß heissen Bern.

Site.

The situation of this towne is such, that it lieth in the forme of a Peninsula, which the navigable river of Arola maketh, for on the South side of it this river runneth through a very lowe ground, from the West to the Eastward, and within a musket shott turneth againe towards the West, as farre as the length of the towne reacheth; so that this river serveth as a moate to the towne, saving onely on the West side, where within a furlong it joyneth to the firme land, which Isthmus, or halfe Iland, being cutt through would make Berne to stand in an Island. On the South and North sides there is a high hill under which the river glideth, on the East side thereof there is an easie ascent up to the highest part of the towne.

Fruitfulnes.

The soile round about it, is very fruitfull in all kinde of encrease, except Wine, which those of Berne notwithstanding gett enough out of other places of their jurisdiction; yea and that of the best sort: upon the one side of the towne groweth Vines, but the Wine is tart & not very good.

But before the building of this towne was finished, the Founder thereof Duke Berchtold dyed, leaving to his Successour, Berchtold the Fifth and last Duke of Zering, the finishing thereof. He procreated by his Lady being the Daughter of the Earle of Kiburgh two Sonnes, which were poysoned by the nobles of this Countrie, because they imagined, that the latter Berchtold finished the building of this towne out of envie and spite to curbe & bridle them, whereby he might put the yoake of bondage upon their necks.

The citie of Berne hath aswell Dutch as French Precincts under it, under which also is Lausanna an Episcopall Seate, having a strong situation: for it is built upon two high hills, which haue a lowe dale in the midst of them. Lausanna.

The Cathedrall Church, and the Canons houses stand upon the hill Nortward, opposite to the other Southward, from whence there goes a way to the Lake in a valley, in the midst whereof the Market-place standeth. After the decease of Charles Duke of Burgundie, Lausanna was bought and purchased by the Prince of Savoye, and yet there continued a neere alliance, and amitie betweene those of Berne, & Savoye, till in the yeare 1536. when as Lausanna with the circumjacent jurisdiction gaue themselues under the Lordship of those of Berne, & yet the Burgesses thereof keepe to this day their ancient Liberties, rights and privilegdes. Anno 1528. all the Images were plucked out of the Churches of Berne in a popular tumult; this being the first towne, that was purged of those excellent Instruments of Idolatrie. The other Precincts are Dutches, and are 31. in number, amonge which foure of them are comprehended under the Suburbs of Berne, over which foure Ensigne Bearers are appointed out of the towne, so that every Precinct must goe into the field under his owne Colours; the other are Haselerthal, or Hasthi, the towne of Vndersehe, the Vpper-thal Simmia, the Nether-thal Simmia, Frutingen, Sana, Ælen, Thun, Louppen, Signauv, Drachselvvald, the Thal of the Flusses, as Emma, Brandis, Siconis VVald, Burgdorff, Biereneck, Lantshout, Arbergh, Nidovv, Erlach, Bippium, VVangen, Arvvangen, Arburgh, Biberstein, Schentkenbergh, Lentburgh, the three free townes in Pago Verbigeno, acknowledg of the Commaund of Berne, as Zoffingen, Aravv and Bruck. Also the nine Precincts of the Cloisters, whereof sixe of them haue temporall Iurisdiction. Precincts.

The French Precincts are eight in number, as Aventicum or VVipflisburgh, Minvidunum, or Movilden, Yverdon, Morges, Novidunum, Nyon, Oron, Zeitia with Vbiscus or Vivey: also the three Precincts of the Monasteries.

I come novv to the second part of the description of this Map, in which Mercator also describeth the Precincts of Friburgh with those of Berne in Generall, as Murten, Schvvartzenburgh, Granson (where Duke Charles of Burgundie lost his first Battell) Chalon or Scherling, over these, those of Berne and Friburgh, appoint every fifth yeare their Deputies, yet so that the Deputies of the one, or the other towne may appeale the one to another, which the Deputies are to examine and informer themelues of.

Friburgh. The towne of Friburgh, lying neere the Nicitones in Vchtland upon the river Sana, was founded and built a few yeares before Berne by Berchthold the fourth Duke of Zeringen. For, in the raigne of the Emperour Lotharius 1127. William Earle of Vchtland deceasing (as Nauclerus writeth) the Emperour Lotharius gaue it in fee farme to the Prince of Zeringen with Vchtland, who also dying, his Sonne Duke Berchtold succeeded him the fourth of that name. He anno 1152. layd the first foundation of both the Friburghs, aswell in Brisgavv, as in Vchtland, as is mentioned before, and endowed both these townes with large and great priviledges, the succeeding Emperours, being no lesse affectioned to the townes, then if indeede they had bene members of the Empire.

Anno 1218. Berchthold the Fift Duke of Zeringen dying, Friburgh, in Vchtland, reserving all their priviledges, came under the Commaund of the Earles of Ksburgh.

And when (Anno 1260.) Eberhard Earle of Habsburgh was Lord over this towne, in the yeare 1270. he sould all his right, title & interest to it unto King Rodolph of Habsburgh, and for this cause Æneas Sylvius calleth this towne, the noble Domicile of the house of Austria.

At last the Inhabitants not relishing well these alterations, for a great summe of money purchased themselues free from the house of Austria: this towne now enjoying at this present the Helvetian right. At Friburgh in an old wall stands this Epitaph.

Dum bis sexcentis ter senis jungitur annus
In Friburg moritur Berchtoldus Dux Alemannus.

This city of Friburgh is strongly sited, hanging as it were partly upon the ridge of a steepe hill, & partly in a dale, environed round about with high hills: about one of them the river Sana runneth. It is of a reasonable greatnesse, the Senate-house standing upon a steepe clift, where heretofore the Castle stood, and from whence the towne was enlarged and built downeward. The hills right over against it, serue as a wall for the defence of the towne, though on the East side there standes no houses upon it. Besides the fortification, into what part of the towne soeuer ye intend to goe, yee must clime up hills and goe downe dales. The Countrie about it yeeldeth all manner of provisions, saving Wine, whereof the Inhabitants haue enough from other places. Fertility.

The forme of the gouvernment of these townes is administred in the same manner, as the other Switzers townes are, being devided into certaine Gilds out of which Senatours, and Counsellours are elected of a like number. But in these townes the chiefe Magistrate, and the head of the Common Councill is called Schulthaissen, which Dutch word was also used amongst the Longobards, who called them also Schuldahis, and seemeth to be derived from Schuld & heissen, that is, a Debt-asker, as being the office of the Schuldheissen, to demaund and constraine Debters to pay their Creditours. This Debt-asker then hath the greatest power, and authority in these townes. Here are also distinct Councills, called the Grand, and the Petty. The Grand Councill of Berne, consisteth of two hundred persons, though sometimes there are commonly more. The Petty Councill of Berne consists of 26. persons, in which city the Senatours, or Counsellours are chosen in this manner: The foure Ensigne-bearers of the towne, choose out of the whole number of the Communalty, sixeteene substantiall men, who haue a good name & reputation, these 20. then together with the Burroug-masters choose first the Grand Councill, and afterward the Petty. Gouvernment. The manner of the Election of Magistrates.

The Burrough-masters, which beare the greatest sway and dignitie, are elected by the unanimous consent of both these Councills. At Friburgh also the Grand Councill, consisteth of 200. persons, & the lesser of 24. The Petty Councill having the ordening and managing of the towne businesses, and the having of the provocations, and suits of the Citizens: besides the Savoyish Precinct conquereth in the last warrs is gouverned in this manner: but whatsoeuer doth concerne the Communaltie in generall, and all weighty affaires of importance, these are remitted to the resolution of the Grand Councill. The Burrough-masters, or Majours, are as Presidents over both the Councills, and are elected by al the Communaltie. The Counties within this territoire are Nouvvenburgh, Nudovv, Arbergh, and the Free-Lordship of Balme.

THE DESCRIPTION OF ARGOVIA, OR ARGOW.

Bounds.

ARGOVIA, or Argovv was formerly a part of the Kingdome Transjurenſis, that contained all that tract, which reached from Mount Iura to the Alpes, as namely the Helvetii, the Rauraci, and a part of the Allobroges, which at this day is the Dutchie of the Savoyards, Vchtland, Briſgavv, Suntgavv, Cremerland, and a part of Zurichgavv, but this mapp onely deſcribeth the Territoires of Lucerne, Vrania, Svvitz, Vndervvald and Claris as large as poſſibly may be.

Lucerne.

The Zwitzers towne Lucerna, which Meyerus calleth Lacocerna, is ſeated upon the river Ruſa (which commeth out of a great Lake, & upon which one may paſſe by water to three villages) at the foote of a very high hill, commonly called Fractum, or the broken Mount.

The great Lake.

This Lake lieth very commodious for this towne, becauſe it is as a through fare into Italie by the Lepontian Alpes, which at this day are called S. Gothards hills, for marchandiſes are carryed over them to the other Alpes, and from thence are brought into Italie upon Mules and Horſes backs. Againe, the Italian Wares and Commodities are tranſported over this Lake into the river of Ruſa, and from thence into the Rhene, where they are ſhipt and ſent into the maine Sea.

The Lucerneans reape more profit, and benefit by this Lake, then they doe out of the Circumjacent Countrie, though there be many fine paſture grounds about it, for the feeding of Cattell. Touching the City of Lucerne it ſelfe, it is a very gallant, and a pleaſant towne, abounding in wealth & riches, being the chiefe towne of trading for Svvitz, Vrania, and Vndervvaldt.

When this towne was firſt founded is uncertaine. It is reported there ſtood a Caſtle on each ſide of the river (which nowe is altered into Burgeſſes houſes.) It is thought the All-mans were the firſt founders of it.

The name and whence it came.

It ſeemes it was called Lucerna from a Lanthorne, which ſtood upon a high Tower, for the benefit of Saylours in the night, and that it was placed upon the old Tower which is upon the bridge, now called Ruſa after the name of the river. There is ſuch another likewiſe at Zurich called after the Water billowes, VVellenberch, for theſe manner of Towers the ancients called Pharus, wherein were continuall lights, and fires, which ſerued for Sea men to ſee the Haven, and to come in ſafely.

The ancient Helvetian Annalls giue us to underſtand, that the Lucerneans ſerved Charles the Great in his warres againſt the Sarracens, for which they obtained from him certaine priviledges, and the uſe of Cornets which they ſound to this day in the warrs in ſtead of Trumpets.

The Colledge of the Canons bore heretofore great ſwaye in this City, which afterward came under the Abbot of Murbac: but a while after, the Emperour Albertus of Auſtria, bought this Lucerne of the Abbot: they then finding themſelue hardly entreated, and oppreſſed by the Auſtrian Gouvernours entred into a league with the Zwitſers, Anno 1332.

Wiken & Sempach with their juriſdictiõs. Other Praincts & corporatiõs.

Mercator maketh mention of two præcincts belonging to thoſe of Lucerne, namely, VViken and Sempach, in which their Deputies or Gouvernours dwell. But the Gouvernour of the Sempach hath nothing to doe with the towne, whoſe commaund reacheth onely over the Lake and the fiſherie, but no further: the other is adminiſtred by Counſellours, dwelling within the towne, as namely, VVillinſovv, the Entlibuciſh dale, Rotenburg or Rot, Habsburg, Berona, with the adjacent Territoire of Chelant, or the Præcinct called Saint Michels, Meriſchvvanden, VVaggis, Ebicona, Horba, and Krientz. The two townes of Surſejum & Sempach ſtand under the ſubjection of thoſe of Lucerne; but yet haue their owne particular Counſellours, who haue the determining and judging of all cauſes, aſwell Criminall as Civill: & yet notwithſtanding the chiefe man of the Senate or Councill of Surſey called the Schultes muſt take his oath to be true, and faitfull to thoſe of Lucerne.

But thoſe of Sempach are choſen by the Councill of Lucerne, yet ſo that they muſt be Burgeſſes of Sempach.

Vri.

Now followes the villages under the Vri, or Vraniæ, whoſe ancient Inhabitants, in the time of Iulius Cæſar were called Tauriſci, and it is verely thought, that the name Vri, by which they are called at this day, had its originall from the Vraniæ, which the old Tauriſci, as they doe at this day, call the Sieventhalers Tauri, or Bulls, and after the old Dutch word Vros.

Hence it came that this Country giueth for their armes a blacke Bulls-head in a field Or.

This Canton of Vraniæ is devided into ten communalties, which in their language they terme Gnoſſaminnes, ſignifying partitions, or comparations: becauſe that all the Senatours, & Counſellours, which are choſen out of them, haue the adminiſtration of all theſe places and offices, appearing alſo in their yearely Land-dayes.

Switz.

The Canton of Suitia or Suicia gaue denomination to all Svvitzerland, and was firſt inhabited by thoſe people, which came out of Suecia, or Svveed, to ſeeke out new dwellings.

Their Confederation.

Of the three Cantons, or Villages, which did firſt Confederate themſelues together, to curbe & bridle the inſo-the insolencie, and tyrannie of the Gentry, this was one. This Territoire hath bred many able and experienced Souldiers in the warres, which haue bene a terror to their Ennemies.

The Inhabitants of this Iurisdiction, liue most upon that which the soile of this Countrie produceth, and yeeldeth dayly: from this Village of Switz all the whole inhabitants of these Countries are called by Straungers Svvitzers, either because they fought there first for their libertie, or in regard the Inhabitãts thereof lived here a long time in great trouble and disquietnesse with the Eremitans or Einsidelars, or else because they were the first & the chiefest of the three Cantons, that endured the first invasion, & brunt of the Austrians, considering also that of the three Cantons, this is the mightiest, and therefore the name of the other Cantons are included under this, as being the most famous of them all from whence all the other confederated Allies, tooke the name of Svvitzers. It may be also, that this name was giuen to the Switzers; because in this Village of Svvitz, the common League was here begun betweene those of Vry, Svvitz, and Vndervvalden.

Devision. The Commaund of Switz is devided into Sixe parts, which they call Quartas.

Vnderwalden. The Canton of Vndervvaldt Anno 1315. entred into a Confederacie with those of Vry and Svvitz. It is a Free village, & environned about with the Alpes, as it were with a Wall, & hath excellent Pastures for the feeding of Cattell; from which the Inhabitants reape a great benefite.

And albeit those of Vry, Svvitz, and Vndervvald were heretofore bound and subject to their Abbots, under certaine limited conditions: yet in some degree, they retayned allwaies their owne liberty, being gouverned by the Imperiall Pretours, in the same forme as the Romans were, which office was of the same nature as our Bourough-Counts or Vicounts are: for they had supreame authority, to judge of matters concerning life and death.

Now for the rest their policie, and gouvernment (me thinkes) it is not much unlike the forme of the ancient Romane Monarchie. For the Gouvernours in those daies ruled not according to their owne lawes and appetits, as they thought good themselues, neither choose they the Magistrates from out amongst themselues, but they were sent thither, and appointed by the Senatours, and Monarks themselues.

The Command and Iurisdiction of Vndervvald, is devided into two Conventus, or Assemblies (the one of them is held at Kernvvaldt) namely into the Vppermost, and Nethermost, but both goes under the name of Vndervvaldt.

Claris. Glarone, or Claris is a Dale, or Territoire under the SvvitZers League, lying along the river Limagus, being not very great and not aboue three Germaine miles in length, and taketh this name from the principalest village of the whole Countrie so called: three parts of Site. it is environned with the Alpes, bounding on the South, and North upon the Grisons; on the West upon the Vri, and Svvitz; and on the North upon Castra Rhetica, where the Limagus leaveth the Dale.

The Iurisdiction of this Territoire, with some other revenues in the time of Saint Fridolinus was giuen by a certaine Earle to the Monasterie of Seckingen in the yeare of our Lord 500. when as Clodoveus the first of that name raigned in France, and was also the first Christian King of it, whose commaund also extended then over Rhetia, Alemania, and Helvetia.

In succeeding ages, this small Territoire gott their owne jurisdiction and libertie, entring also into confederacie with the Switzers Anno 1353.

The Inhabitants liue here for the most part upon milke, making of Butter and Cheese, and killing of meate, they haue fewe or no Corne fields, neither many Vinestocks, because the land is so shutt in with the Alpes & Mountaines: yet they haue braue Orchards, and goodly Pastures, for Corne & Wine there is enough brought unto them from other parts. The Lakes and Rivers furnish them with Fishe, and the rough and woodie Mountaines afford them store of Foule, and Venaison.

Two famous Learned men, Henricus Glareanus, and Aegidius Tscudus whose birth-place this was, haue bene as ornaments to their Countrie. Vnder this Territoire also is the County of Hamburg, and the free Lordships of Humberg and of Ringenberg.

The Commaund of Glorona is devided into fiueteene parts or Wikes, which they tearme Tagvvans. Vnder the jurisdiction of Claris is the Countie of Merdenbergh, which they purchased Anno 1517.

They place also officers with those of Switz by turnes: as at VZenach, Visnach, and in Castra Rhetica VVesom, and thus much in particular touchiug the Gouvernment, Townes, and Villages of the Switzers, Cantons, & Præcincts. It resteth now, that wee briefly speake some what of the straunge, & wonderfull Lake, called the Pilati Lake, lying upon Mount Fractum, not farre from Lucerne, yea upon the very top of it, in a desolate and Mooriish place, being encompassed with thick woods, to the end no man might come to trouble this Lake. For it is reported, that if any man weetingly or willingly cast any thing into it, their suddainely arises in it a great tempest with huge waues; and contrariewise if any thing falls into it by accident, then it is calme and no daunger in it, as hath oftentimes bene seene. The place where this Lake lieth, is hidious to behold, having no outlett, nor receuing any river or waters into it; but continueth one and the same within its bounds, and the waters whereof neuer rise for any raine, or snow whatsoeuer falls into it, but is alwaies of alike height keeping its Swart-billowes. Noe strangers are suffred to come into it, least they should throw any thing into it, whereby the next adjoyning Countrie might sustaine any annoiãce by the stormes. Bodinus hereupon saith, that this is an argumẽt, that violent winds, & tempest are raised by spirits. The Pilati Lake.

Amonge the rivers, which water this part of Svvitzerland, the Limagus is accounted the chiefest, whose head beginneth not farre from Claris, and in the midst of the same territoire, taketh alonge with him an other river called Siniphius; comming out of an other Vale, and running beneath the two villages of Vrna, and aboue Lateritius Pontus, or the Brick-bridge, receving more water out of the Vesenian Lake, separateth the Marck (which was heretofore a marke & limit, betweene the SvvitZers and the Grisons) from Castra Rhetorum, which place is yet also called Castra: thence the Limagus runneth into the Zurickish Lake, deviding the city of Zurick, at his outlett, (as it were) into two townes, and glyding forward to Baden, not farre from thence falleth into the Vrsa, and then into the Arola. The river Vrsa (which they call also Rusa by setting the r before the u) springeth out of the highest Alpes called S. Gothards, and presently winding towards the North, whereas on the contrarie the Ticinus of Tesin gusheth out of the same Mountaine, and turneth to the Southward, taketh his course through the Lepontii, & passing first by Vrsula or Vrsella the first Dale of the Grisons, and then by Via Taurisci, remnants of the Gaules, falleth into the Lake, which watereth the foure VValt-townes called at this day, Vry, Svvitz, Vndervvalden & Lucerne, and then taking along with him the waters of Zugh, passing under the Switzers townes of Bremgarten, and Mellingen, a litle beneath Brug, disburdeneth himselfe into the Arola, and at Coblentz or Confluence these three Helvetian rivers discharge themselves all into the Rhene, namely, the Limagus, the Vrsa and the Arola, and thus much for the description of Switzerland. Rivers.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE VNITED TERRITOIRES OF THE GRISONS.

The name, and from whome it came.

RHOETIA, or the Countrie of the Griſons, lieth halfe in Germanie, and halfe in Italy, ſo that they uſe both languages. It was called Rhætia from one Rhætus, who flying out of Tuſcanie from the furie of the Gaules, planted here a new ſet of people about 187. yeares before the comming of Chriſt, whoſe Goſpell they did receiue in the yeare 448. The Tuſcans then having their Countrie taken from them (which lay betweene the Alpes, and the Poo) by the Gaules, fled up unto the higeſt Mountaines to a people, which dwelt upon the Alpes, called the Tauriſci, and making afterwards a confederacie with them, in the Dale of Tumilia, upon a high ground neere unto the Caſtle of Ottẽſtein, built there a towne, which after the name of their natiue Countrie they called Tuſcana, about which alſo they built three Caſtles, calling them after the name of their Chieftaine, the firſt whereof was High-Rætia, the ſecond Lovv-Rætia, and the third Rætia. Theſe pleople alſo for their better ſafety, caſt up there abouts many other Fortreſſes. Their poſteritie then being envred to that ſharpe aire, and growing more magnanimous, ſparing no paines or labour to extend their limits further, becomming maſters of the rivers Atheſa, & Ardua being hardned & fleſhed by their good ſucceſſe went forward, & ſetled themſelues on both ſides of Lacus Acronius or the Bodenzee, & by the VValleſteiniſh Lake tooke in Como, Verona, & Trent, whence followed that Trent was made the Metropolis of the Griſons, as Auſpurgh was in Vindelicia. The Countries which they tooke in betweene the Rhene, & the Plave were almoſt two hundred miles in length, & 120. in breath, to wit, betweene Verona and Schauze; ſo that their Dominion reached farre & neere. But afterward they were ſubdued, and overcome by the Armies of the Emperour Auguſtus, conducted by Druſus, and Tiberius his Stepſonns, who brought theſe people (ſaving thoſe which dwelt about the head of the Rhene and the Inna) under the Romane ſubjection. Now when the Gothes, Longobards and Hunns fell into Italie, and disjointed the Romane Empire, then they were ſubjected to endure the ſame invaſion & ſpoyles as the Italians were. For in the yeare 780. when Childericke was King of France, the Hunns (as they did other Countries) deſtroyed the Countrie of the Griſons, as farre as the Cloiſter, or Monaſterie of Deſertin with fire and ſword.

Diverſe Countries & Common-weales then combyning themſelues together made leagues one with an other, that in time of warre, they might be the better able, to repulſe and reſiſt the incurſions of their Ennemies, and to keepe and maintayne their owne lawes, rights, and priviledges. The Griſons ſeing that, did the like in diverſe places by making of confederations and unions with diverſe neighbouring Nations, and people.

Anno 1282. Frederick, being deſcended from the houſe of the Montforts, being Biſhop of Chur, & Peter Biſhop of Sion made a confederacie, and a league on with another. The like alſo hapned in the yeare 1400. betweene Iohn Abbot of Diſertin, and the Chaviter with the Communalties. Vldericke Brune, Baron of Rhætia made alſo an alliance with his two Sõnes, Henry & Hulderick, with ſome others. In the yeare 1402. a peace was concluded betweene the Biſhop of Chur, & his Communalty, and betweene thoſe of Glaron, Svvitz, Entilborch and Agrie: That if the State of the Griſons ſhould be warred upon, and aſſaulted by any Ennemies or mightie Potentates they ſhould defend themſelues. The chiefe Lords, and Gentlemen alſo made a perpetuall confederacie one with another in the village of Tyon, which from that time forward was called the Griſon-Confederacie. This was made in the yeare of our Lord 1424. The Chapiters, & the Clergie alſo combined themſelues reciprocally one to an other, who afterward came likewiſe under the union of the Griſons. This was made alſo with the towne of Chur, and with the Vierdorfer, or foure Villages. The people of the ten Iuriſdictions, ſixe of them made likewiſe a league together, and afterward entred alſo into a confederacie with the Griſons. This came to paſſe in the yeare of our Redemption 1471. in which time theſe three ſeverall people mett al together at Bellofort, who for the maintenance of their lawes, rights & Priviledges made a mutuall alliance one with an other, and confirmed the ſame by oath, which euery twelft yeare was to be renewed.

Bounds. The Confines of the Inalpiniſh people, haue on the Eaſt the Vennones, dwelling in the Vale of Venoſta, where betweene the village of Munſter and Tauritz, a Poſt, or Land-partition ſtandeth, but the civill Iuriſdiction of the Griſons reacheth further, on that ſide they haue for neighbours, the Inthalers, in which place this land on the left hand reacheth to Saint Martinsbridge, & on the right hand to the river Schergenbach & ſo forwards. Beſides this, there lies in the ſame confines the Vale Silvia, & the Vale of Sol, or the Sunne, where the higheſt topps of the Mountaines make the Land-partition. The Weſt part of the Griſons bordereth upon the Countie of Beltion, there where the river Lumino, and the topps of Graine and Lucumon, knowne by the name of S. Maries and S. Barnabies Mounts, with Criſpalt, Vepeche and Merche, parts the Countrie. The Griſons Neighbours on the Southſide, are firſt thoſe people, which dwell by the Lac de Como in the plaine of Val Telline, or the Valtoline. Neere the village of Plantedine is a place called Il Sanchietto, which as a right line, cutts the very topps of the Mountaines aſſunder: Alſo Abdua in the Countie of Clavenne, and upon the continent in a place by Lac Mezola, called La Pora: alſo in the Lac Mezola, or Clarenne, a clift upon Davo il Saſſo named d'Olciaſco, beſides all theſe places, there lies the topps of the Mountaines called Valles Saxea, belonging to the Iuriſdiction of the Duke of Millaine. As alſo the Valles, Brembaine, Serine with Scalvie, Bergamois, and Valle Camonicq of Breſcia, which is under the Signorie of Venice. On the North ſide lie the high Mountaines of the Griſons, & behinde them the Montiſunians, which are under the houſe of Auſtria, & in the plaine, is parted by S. Catharines Fountaine, betweene the hills of S. Lucius de Eſtions, Valleducians, being under the obedience of the Count of Vpper Amiſia, of Rhætia, or the Countrie of the Griſons. On the other ſide, the bounds of this Countrie are termined by a ſmall way, which a litle beneath the Rhene-bridge, goeth to the Kings high-way, and so reacheth upward to the very topp of S. Magrets Mount, and then downe ward to the Rhene, with the Countie of the Samnetians. These Borders haue pales and Land-markes sett up.

The figure, or shape of this Countrie is like a Scate-fishe, which the High-Dutches call Platteistin. There is a Mountaine lying betweene Amisia Scheidia & Vmbilia, upon the very top whereof three Allies or three kinde of Confederates dwell, whereof wee will speake in particular. The Alliance of the Grisons, which in respect of their loftie Situation where called the Vpper Grisons, and haue three generall assemblies or Senates. In former times they were but 22. small corporations, but after that Vpper Triny separateth it selfe from Taminia, then there were 23. and likewise as many ministeriall. Touching the order of their precedencie in their generall meetings on their Collegiall dayes, it is this: Disertin taketh the first place, then the Valley called Il Longonezze, Fovea, (in the assembly of Ilant and Darois, the Foreans take place before the Longonezzes: but at Trone, and Chur, the Leguntines before the Longonezzes) then Flemium, Vurtium, Rhetium, Supersaxum in Grisons, Laapium, Vallis Rheni, Sexaminium, Thuscie, Montane, Sclerenium, Vpper Trin, or Trin montin, Taminium, Vallis S. Petri, Stussovie, Cepine, Tenne, Misaucum, Rogoret and Calauche.

Order of Precedencie.

Three Confederations.

The whole Region (as is said) is devided into three Confederations. The first is that of the Cathedrall confederation, which they call Lega Cadi Dio, or The League of Gods house, this hath eleuen great Senates, and 21. lesser Iurisdictions. The chiefe Citie whereof is Chur, or Ceyra the Metropolis of the Grisons. It was built Anno 357. seated about halfe an houres journey from the Rhene: for the forme (as Mr. Heylin saith) it is Triangular, the houses indifferent handsome in themselues, but not uniforme one with an other. In the Corner of it, on a hill, somewhat higher then the rest of the towne, standeth the close, within which is the Cathedrall Church, a stately peece of building, rather in the account of the Natiues, then of strangers, the Bishops Palace, and the Canons houses, all well built, and sufficiently well adorned. This citie of Chur sitteth first of all, where the President of the league dwelleth, then the Valley of Pregoulia, Fustenovv, the Iurisdiction of Tomiliasco, Supra-Saxum with the Low-Castle, Vpper Engadina, Ottensteyn, a Iurisdiction in Tomiliasco, Nether Engadina, Bergunium, Vpper Vatium, the foure Neighbouring villages of Pesclavium, Eremusium, Bivium, Aversa, and the valley of Munster.

1. Chur.

This is called the League of the ten Iurisdictions, because out of the seuen great Senates, the three last are devided into two lesser Iurisdictions, & Alvonovana is at this day parted into two; so that now they are devided into eleuen Corporations, or Iurisdictions. In the assembly of their Collegiall dayes, Davois the President of the League or Vnion taketh place, then Rhetigoia, which comprehendeth three great Corporations, namely Munster, Castel, and Acer with Lacuprat, next followes the Signorie of Maierfeld, under which Malansie, and Maieville are included. Then Alvanora, which is devided into the Iurisdiction of Latiane, S. Alvanovane, Chaaurvvaldt, the valley of Scanavicane by S. Peters Church, and the Long Meddow.

2. The Valtoline.

This second is Lega Grisa, whence all the people are called Grisons, and which is the Country and passage of Vallistelina, or the Valtoline. To the Generall convocation or Assemblie are sent out of the three Confederations. 28. Oratours. 24. Ecclesiasticks, and 15. Deputies out of the common Corporations or Iurisdictions. And looke what place they haue conquered, or shall take in hereafter, they with their rights, priviledges and immunities are to be equally devided amongst the three Confederations.

The Fertility & pleasantnesse of the Valtoline.

Vnder these three Leagues or Cantons are comprised Volturene, Val Telline or the Voltoline, Clavenne, and Bormio. The Voltoline is a fruitfull, and as pleasant a place, as any is in all Europe. The Description whereof ye may briefly read, in an excellent Treatise, written by Enodius Bishop of Pavie, an ancient Authour, in the life of S. Anthonie a monke of Lirines, whose words are to this effect: Our Anthonie by the guidance of the Lord Iesus Christ, & by our ministers was brought into Italie, and comming into the Veltolino, saw the Mountaines lye on both sides of it, which by their fruitfulnesse, and pleasantnesse enrich & adorne this Country with a fatt Soile for the satisfying of the greedie expectation of the Husbandmen, & that not onely with Wine, Corne, goodly Pastures and meddowes, cleare running rivers, fruitfull orchards, and fine woods, but by her naturall situation, is so delightfull, that no better Countrie can be found. This Territoire lieth in lenght to the foote of the higheſt Mountaines of Rhætia, where the rivers, which runne into Italie haue their heads. The Abdua also, whose Head-spring beginneth there, passing through the Signeurie of Bormia, watereth the whole Valtoline, and traverseth through the midst of it.

3. Bormio.

The third is Lega Driture. The Signeurie of Bormio lyeth upon the topp of a heigth, neere unto the Head-spring of the river Abdua, and is devided into fiue small Corporations, or Communalties.

The chiefe towne whereof is Bormio it selfe, which giueth denomination to the whole Lordship. The Gouvernment of this Countrie was given Anno 744. by Charles the Great, to the Bishop of Coyra, who being molested by his Neighbours of Tyrolis, entred confederation with the Svvitzers 1471. They haue free use of Religion both they of the Romish, and they of the Reformed Churches. The Second is the Valley of Forba. The third is the Inmost Valley, where Primadie, & the Valley called Pied de Noix lie. The fourth is the Nethermost Valley, wherein Cepine stands. The fifth is the Valley of Livinium. In the Valley of Telline their are three Tertia, besides Tilium it selfe, from whence the Valtoline taketh its name. The Vppermost Tertia hath eleuen Corporations, or Cõmunalties namely: 1. Tirunum. 2. Sondalum. 3. Grossium. 4. Grossubutum. 5. Veroium. 6. Matium. 7. Torrum. 8. Luverum. 9. Servium. 10. Villa and Stuzona. 11. Blanzonum. Next them followeth the Communalty of Tyli, which is devided into 36. Contractules, as they terme them.

Corporations or Iurisdictions.

The Middlemost Tertia hath 17. Corporations, or Communalties. 1. Sondrium, (whereof Sondrio is the chiefe towne.) 2. Pontrium. 3. Clurium. 4. Trixivium. 5. Mons Aqua, or the VVater-mount. 6. Montanea. 7. Castianum. 8. Postalesinum. 9. Berbennium. 10. Busfettum. 11. Plateda. 12. Foredum. 13. Albosagia. 14. Coialum. 15. Cidrascum. 16. Fusine. 17. Colorina.

In the Lowermost Tertia lye the two Squadræ, which reach no further then the Abdua. These are Morbe, & Trahont. Morbe is againe devided into twelue Cõmunalties, as 1. Morbe. 2. The Cõmunaltie of Furcula. 3. Talamona. 4. Bema. 5. Albaredo. 6. Geroule. 7. Pedesina. 8. Rasura. 9. Cosium. 10. Rogolum. 11. Duletium. & 12. Piantedum.

In Trakon also there are 11. severall Corporations, or Communalties. 1. Trahon. 2. Bulium. 3. Ardennium. 4. Datium. 5. Clivium. 6. Mellum. 7. Cercunium. 8. Civium. 9. The village of Campus. 10. Montellum. 11. Dubinium.

The County of Clavene.

The Countie of Clavenne, which the river of Meine cleaveth in the midst, is 15. Italian or three great Germane miles in lenght, but the breath thereof differs in diverse places here and there.

This whole Countie is devided into foure Quarts: The 1. is the towne of Clavenne it selfe. 2. The towne of Plurium, which in the yeare 1618. entred into confederation, but the Neighbouring places are Ville with some others. S. Iames his Valley, which is devided into 12. Quarts, & the foure Communalties, or Corporations into fiue, as 1. Novatum. 2. Prada. 3. Mese. 4. Gordane, & 5. Samolicum. Rhætia or the Grisons haue of late yeares endured great warres and many shrod brunts by the Spanjards, who became masters of Chur, & the rest of the Countrie about it Anno 1622. But by the interceſſion & mediation of Pope Vrban the Eight, of Levves the Eleuenth King of France, of the Signeurie of Venice, and of Charles, Emanuel, Duke of Savoy this warre was compounded, and appeased.

OF ITALY.

Plinies.

TAly ſaith Plinie (*Lib.*3. *Natur. Hiſt. c.*20.) is a Countrie hollowed to the Gods, the happieſt & beſt of all Europe, a Dominatrix over all things, a Princeſſe of all Nations, a Queene of the World: yea the Nurſe and Parent of all Regions, elected by the providence of the Gods, to make (if it poſſible might be) the Heavens more famous: to gather the ſcattered Empires of the World into one bodie, to temper the barbarous rites of Nations: to unite ſo many diſagreeing languages of men, by the benefite of one common tongue, & in a word, to reſtore man to humanitie.

Definition of Italy.

The ſeverall names & whence deriued.

This Region heretofore had diverſe names. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſaus in his firſt booke of the Romaine antiquities ſaith, that the ancient Inhabitants thereof were called Saturnini, becauſe Saturne drivē from Crete by his Sonne Iupiter, hic latebat abditus. The Greekes Heſperia, Auſonia & Oenotria: & that in Hercules dayes it was firſt called Italie. The name of Saturnia was giuen unto it by King Saturnus, which denomination extended not it ſelfe over all Italy, but onely over Latium. It was called Heſperia (as Hyginus witneſſeth) either from Heſperus, who fled from his Brother Atlas: or as Macrob. will haue it, becauſe it is ſituated under the Evening-ſtar called by the Latines Veſperugo. It gott the name of Auſonia from Anſonius the Sonne of Vlyſſes. Oenotria either from the abundance & goodneſſe of its Wines, or from Oenotrius King of the Sabins. The name of Italy came from Italus, whome Ariſtotele ſaith, was King of Oenotria. Feſtus thinketh (*Lib.*9.) that Italy tooke this name from Italos or great Oxen, whereof here was then good ſtore, and that the Vituli or Calues, were called there Italy. Timæus faineth that it was ſo called from Italus Boveus one of Geryons Oxen, which being driven away by Hercules, ſwome over the ſtraight of the Sicilian Sea; in regard that in the Tyrrhenian tongue Italus ſignifyeth Taurus, a Bull or an Oxe: but, if you will giue credit to Hellanicus, it was formerly called Vitalia: all other ancient denominations of Italy, becauſe they concerne not Italy in Generall, but ſome parts thereof, I will paſſe over.

Bounds.

Strabo and Ptolomy make Italy to be a Peninſula or almoſt an Iland, which Nature hath girt in on three ſides with the Ionian, Tyrrhenian & Adriatique Seas, and on the fourth ſide is ſhut in with the Alpes; for on the Weſterne part, lie the Alpes, to which the ancients gaue ſeverall names, calling them the Maritimæ, Cottiæ, Graiæ, Rheticæ, as farre as the river of Arſia: on the North ſide of it lie the Alpes Pœnæ and Iuliæ, and then the Venetian Sea, reaching from the inmoſt boſome to Sinus Ionius, which meeteth them Eaſtward: and laſtly on the South and Southweſt, the Mediterranean Sea beateth a great way upon it, which is called there the Tuſcan or Genoyiſh Sea: on which ſide alſo, to the Southward, it hath a part of the Adriatique or Venetian Sea, where both the parts, namely Friul & Iſtria reach to the continent and are joyned to it.

Length & breadth.

The length of Italy from Auguſta Prætoria, to Capo Brutio, or the Promontory of Leucopetra is 1020. miles, the greateſt breath in ſome places is but 410. miles, & in others 126. miles, the whole Circuit of Italy after Caſtaldus calculation is 3448. miles. Euſtathius likeneth Shape.

Italy to an Ivie-leafe: Plinie, Solin and others to an Oaken-leafe, ſo that it is a great deale more in length then in breath, turning on the left ſide with a ſharpe point, and end in the forme of an Amazonian target. Our Moderne Writers compare it more fitly to the Thygh and Schacke bones of a man, whereof the hip reacheth, & turneth towards the Nethermoſt Sea, the huckle bones towards the Vppermoſt Sea, & the whole feete towards the Ionian Sea, and the heeles towards Epirus. And compareth Sinus Tarentinus, being the hollowneſſe, & the fleſhie parts, to the three Capes or Promontories, as Zephyrium, Carcinum & Bruteum: and the toes turning towards Sicily, the Knee to Cape Populonium, and the Vpper part of the hip with a large extention to be the Alpes.

Quality.

Concerning the qualitie of this Countrie, which conſiſteth in the Site of the firmamēt, you ſhall finde, if you will diligently conſider it, that the Meridian line that turneth towards the Weſt, will fall in the 29. degree of longitude, & the furtheſt part Eaſtward in the 43. degree, contayning in latitude 8. degrees, for the diſtance of the Southerne Parallells is about 38. degrees from the Æquator, as the Northerne is 46. ſo that Italy containeth & lieth under the 5. & 8. Climats with all the Parallells, which are betweene the 11. and the 16. in which Countrie the artificiall day differeth an hower: for the longeſt day in Summer to the Southerne Parallel contayneth 14. howers and ½. and the moſt Northerne Parallel, 15. howers, and as many fifth parts.

Fertility.

Seing then that this is the celeſtiall Site, & that the Appennine Mountaines trace through the midſt of Italy by deviding it into two parts, eſpecially, where the Meridian Sunne is hotteſt and moſt powerfull, there the ſoile, fields & hills are very fruitfull, and therefore is it no marvell, that in Italie in all ſeaſons of the yeare, they haue ſuch a fertility and abundance of all things, though in ſome parts more, in others leſſe: but if ye take it generally the ſoile is ſo exceeding fruitfull in producing Corne, Wine and other things, that they haue three harveſts in one yeare, the Earth being tilled, ſowne and planted with litle labour and charges. Varro writeth that Ager Roſſelanus and the Countrie about it, lying in Vmbria neere the Lake Velinus, had wont to be ſo exceeding fruitfull, that the Emperour Vopiſcus uſed to call that tract of Land, The fatt and marrovve of Italy.

The ſame Varro teſtifieth alſo in relating what rich gifts Nature hath beſtowed upon Italie; that Ager Campanus yeeldeth abundance of good Corne; the Country of Falernus excellent Wine; that of Caſſinus delicate Oyle; that of Tuſculanus great ſtore of Figgs; that of Tarentine Honey, and the Tyber abounding in Fiſhe. Plinie calleth Italy the Nurce and Productrix of all kinde of Trees. For there growes your Orange, Citron, Lemmon, Quine-trees and others. Take for an exemple the Coaſt of Liguria and Genua, what abundance of braue and flouriſhing trees growe there, not onely bearing great ſtore of delicate fruits, but alſo moſt delightfull to the eye? how many fine Paradices, Gardens and Orchards haue yow there? that the very ſight of them expells melanckoly and refreſhes the minde. What wee relate here of Genua, the like could wee doe in a thouſand places. Plinie witneſſeth alſo, that Pepper trees had wont to growe here. The Fields about Otzanto are ſo beſet with Oliue-trees, that they looke like woods. The Country of Bariano in Apulia Peucetia is ſo fruitfull in Oyle, Wine, Corne, Almones & Cottōs, that one would ſcarcely beleeue it. The Vale of Onelia in Liguria is ſo exceeding rich in Oyle, that every yeare there is 18. or 20000. barrells made in it.

Diverſity of Fruits.

Manna.

Nature hath not denied Manna to Italy: for neere unto Alſomentia in Brutio they gather it, which in the night falleth as a dew on the ground: eſpecially if a ſweete ſhowre of raine hath falne the day before, they gather it and ſtricke it from of the leaues of the trees. Such a kind of Manna is found likewiſe in Magna Græcia, in that place, where the remnants of the Thurini inhabit. Plinie writeth alſo, that the Vine-ſtocks of Italy, excell by farre thoſe of other Regions. He deuideth the noble Italian Wines into foure ſorts, & preferreth the Setian ſo called from the towne of Setia before all others: next after that the Falernean; the third ſort, the Wines of Alba Surentina, Maſſica, Statana, Calena, Fundana, Veliternina, Privernatia and Signina; and the fourth & laſt ſort, the Prælutian Wines which grow in the Countrie of Ancona & thoſe of Palmeſia.

Variety of curious Wines.

Phyſicall ſimples.

Mettalls & Stones.

This Countrie is decked with all kinde of ſimples, & Phyſicall herbes, & is full of aller manner of Stones, Mettalls & ſuchlike; for as Plinie witneſſeth, Italy putts downe all other Countries for the abundance of Mettalls. In Friul by the river Hydra is a Mine of Quick ſilver. Of late yeares alſo hath bene found great ſtore of Alom within the juriſdiction of Maſſa in Toſcanie. In Campagna Felice are Brimſtone Mines. Three miles frō the river Cæcina neere Volaterris in ſome hills they digg out ſalt, as they doe in Bruti. I will ſpeake nothing of the Stone quarries, wherein they finde Marble, Alablaſter, Chriſtall and diverſe ſorts of precious Stones, nether will I make mention of the Coccus or Skarlet-dyes, Azure, Vitriol and other minerals.

Minerals.

Beaſts & Fowle.

Among the many Kind of Animals & Beaſts, which are bred in this Countrie, there are abundāce of huge Oxen, which the Ancients had wont to call Italos, as alſo many Buffles called heretofore Lucana Armenta. Beſides diverſe kinds of fowle & birds: there are many Eagles, Kites, Puttocks & ſuchlike praying fowles.

The ancient Gouvernment.

Touching the ancient Gouvernmēt of this Countrie, under whome the anciēt Inhabitāts of Italy lived, Hiſtoriographers make noe great mention thereof; but if ye will giue credence to Iunius Viterbienſes his fictions, he ſaith that one Gomer inhabited firſt this Region, alſo Cham, Ianus Sabatius, Saga, Cranus, Aurinus, Italus, Morgetus, Roma, Rhemanaſſus, Iaſius & others, and that Ianus his progeny Anno Mundi 1925. multiplyed there exceedingly, & peopled Italy with the tribes of the Laurentini, Brutii, Samnites, Etruſci, Sabini, Tarentini, &c. But the moſt authentique Authours both Grecians & Latins, who haue diligently ſought out the offspring of this Nation, eſpecially Dionyſius Halicarnaſeus, Pomponius Trogus, Solinus Polyhiſtorius and diverſe others haue found that many ages before the foundation of Rome diverſe nations and people Domineered here in Italy, namely, the Siculi, Aborigines, Ligures and Vmbri, who litle by litle came under the power of the Romans, or were extirpated by them. Againe as M. Heylin citeth; the ſecond that came to enjoy the happineſſe of this Countrie was Evander, & certaine other Arcadians, who baniſhed their natiue habitations, ſeated themſelues about the place where Rome was built. The next that ſetled themſelues here, was Æneas and his Troyans, who flying from their ruined Countrie, and enraged Ennemies, ſought new habitations. For Carthage being built but 135. yeares (or as others will 143. yeares before Rome) & that there was no leſſe then 426. yeares, betweene the beginning of the reigne of Æneas in Italy, & the beginning of the reigne of Romulus in Rome; it is impoſſible that euer Queene Dido, as Virgill ſaith, ſhould haue ſeene, or falne in loue with Æneas, unleſſe in imagination or picture. Hereunto conſenteth Auſonius, who honoureth the Statua of this abuſed Princeſſe with an Epigram of eleuen verſes whereof part of th em are theſe:

Ancient People.

VVhy didſt thou ſtirr up Virgils envious Muſe
Falſely my name, and honour to abuſe?
Of me let Hiſtories be heard, not thoſe,
VVhich to the VVorld Ioues Thefts, and luſts expoſe.

Perhaps the unfortunate death of this Queene, who layd violant hands on herſelfe, gaue occaſion to the Poet to faine, that it was for the loue of Æneas, whereas it was indeed to avoyd the luſt of Iarbas a potent King; whoſe violence deſired to haue his pleaſure on her. Whether Æneas euer were in Africke or no, it matters not, but certaine it is he arrived in Italy in a happy hower. For he was noe ſoner landed, then gētly entertayned by Latinus King of the Laurētini: who to make his way more apparent, eſpouſed his onely Daughter Lavinia unto him. This by the way of digreſſion.

At the firſt Rome, for the ſpace of 244. yeares, was gouverned by Kings, as Dionyſius and Livius witneſſe, two credible Authours of the Romane Hiſtorie, wherein ye may alſo read, how the Romane power, & empire grew, & encreaſed litle by litle, as well by their Martiall diſcipline, as by their manner, cuſtome, and well ordered gouverment, as alſo by their wholeſome lawes, ordinances and diſpoſing of places and offices. Moreouer, how that after they had expulſed their Kings for their tirannie and luxurie, which vices haue cauſed great changes and alteration in States & Kingdomes. The Kings of Rome were theſe: Romulus founder of Rome reigned 37. yeares. Numa Pompilius the Authour of the Ceremonies 43. Tullius Hoſtilius who ſubdued Alba 32. Ancus Martius who built Oſtia 24. L. Tarquinius Priſcus the Adorner of Triumphs 38. Servius Tull. who brought the people into Cenſe 44. And Tarquinius Superbus, who for his inſolent behaviour, and a rape committed on chaſt Lucretia, Wife to Colatinus, by his Sonne Sextus, was together with all his kindred baniſhed the towne. A. M. 3457. The people for his ſake euer after loathed the name of a King, and therefore the City was gouverned by two Conſuls or Burroughmaſters, annualy choſen out of the chiefe Citizēs called Patricii. Theſe Conſuls tooke their name a Conſulendo from Counſelling of, & ſeing to the good of the people & Common wealth: Vt Conſulere ſe ſuis civibus debere meminiſſent: their name being a memoriall of their charge. This Magiſtracy of the Conſuls held not longe, but that firſt the Decemviri, then the Tribunes of Cōſular authority & others diſpoſeſſed them of their gouvernment: concerning which thus Tacitus: Vrbem Romam à principio Reges &c. The City of Rome then was in the beginning gouverned by Kings: Liberty & the Conſulſhip L. Brutus brought in. The Dictatours were choſen but for a time: the Decemviri paſſed not two yeares: neither had the Conſulary authority of the Tribunes of the Souldiers any long continuance, nor Cinna, nor Syllas Dominion. Pompey & Craſſus quickly yeelded to Cæſars forces. Lepidus & Antony to Auguſtus, and afterward was gouverned by Emperours. Thus farre M. Heylin.

The firſt Kings of Rome and the Gouvernment.

As long as Italy was gouverned by Conſuls, it continued a free cōmon weale; but afterward was oppreſſed and brought under the Romane Princes. From the dayes then of Iulius Cæſar the firſt Emperour, to Conſtantine An. 310. there ſucceeded 43. Emperours. This Emperour Conſtantine though very famous (as being the firſt Chriſtian Emperour) did more prejudice the Empire, then any of his predeceſſours, firſt in tranſlating the Imperiall Seate from Rome to Bizantium or Conſtantinople, whereby the Empire loſt much of its growth & vigour. For this reaſon Camillus would not ſuffer the Romans, to remoue their Seate to Veium then newly conquered, but to prevent their deſires ſet fire on the towne, and ſo conſumed it, Vt nunc Veios fuiſſe (ſaith Florus) laboret Annalium fides. A ſecond fault of this Conſtantine was the dividing of the Empire, betweene his children: for though it was quickly againe reunited; yet by his exemple, others lerned the ſame tricke in renting the Empire in peeces, which occaſioned the loſſe of the whole. The third fault of this Prince was, his tranſlating the Legions and Colonies into the Eaſterne Countries, which lay on the North Marches as being a Bulwarke againſt the Perſians: thereby opening that gape, by which not long after the barbarous Nations entred. For though in ſtead of theſe Colonies they planted Garniſons & made forts: yet theſe quickly failed and became in a manner unſerviceable. After this the Weſterne Empire from Honorius the Firſt, till Anno 473. was gouverned by 11. Emperours more, till that Momulus Auguſtulus was the laſt, that euer kept his reſidencie in Italy, a thing

Ominous

Ominous (ſaith M'. Heylin) that Auguſtus ſhould eſtabliſh, & Auguſtulus being the deminutiue of his name ſhould ruinate that ſpacious Monarchie. For during the raigne of theſe 11. Weſterne Emperours, and ſome few yeares after, Italy was ſeuen times almoſt brought to deſolation, by the fire & ſword of barbarous Nations. 1. By Allaricus King of the Gothes, who tooke Rome & Naples. 2. By Attila King of the Hunnes, who razed Florence, ſpoyled Lombardie, & by the entreaty of Leo the firſt, was diverted from Rome. 3. By Genſericus King of the Vandals, who ſacked Rome. 4. By Biorgus King of the Alani or Lithuani. 5. By Odoacer King of the Heruli, who droue this Auguſtulus out of Italy, and twiſe in 13. yeares layd the Countrie deſolate. 6. By Theodoricus King of the Gothes, called in by Zeno the Emperour to expell Odoacer. And 7. by Gundebalde King of the Burgundians, who having ranſacked all Lombardy, returned home, leaving the Gothes in poſſeſſion of Italy: who after they had raigned 72. yeares in Italy, where at laſt ſubdued by Belliſarius and Narſes, two of the braveſt Captaines, that ever ſerved the Romane Empire.

Ancient Romans.

The Romans in former times, were warie of behaviour and expences, of great valour, as ſubduing the greateſt part of the World, very deſirous of glorie, as Cicero ſaith, Semper appetentes gloriæ præter cæteras gentes ſunt Romani. In thoſe dayes lived the famous Captaines Camillus the Sword, and 2. Fabius Maximus the Buckler of Rome. 3. Scipio. 4. Pompey. 5. Cæſar, &c. The famous Oratours, Cicero, Hortenſius and Antonius, &c. The worthy Hiſtorians Livius, Tacitus & Saluſtius, & the memorable Poets Virgill, Ovid, Catullus, Horatius, &c.

The revenue of the Empire.

The revenues of this Empire, when it was in its flouriſh, as Lipſius ſaith in his Tract. De Magnitudine Romana, was eſteemed to be 150. millions of Crownes.

For the reſt of the vertues, magnanimous and heroick actions, warrs, inteſtine broiles, and ſeditions, till Rome attayned the Monarchie of the World, & how that afterward by riott, exceſſe, Civill warrs, and the fattall changes of this World, it was ruinated, & loſt its former greatneſſe, power, glorie and richeſſe: I will referre the Courteous Reader to the Hiſtorians aboue mentioned and to others, who haue written at large thereof.

Italy hath many gallant, flouriſhing, populous and rich cities and townes, beſides a World of villages, the deſcription of the chiefeſt of them are elegantly deſcribed by Thomas Edvvards an Engliſh man in theſe Latine verſes following:

Sancta eſt Sanctorum pretioſa ſanguine Roma.

Meeres & Lakes.

Italy hath alſo many Lakes, the principaleſt where-of are in Etruria, as the Meeres or Lakes of Traſumenus, Aprillis, Marinus, Vadimonis, Ciminis, Vulſimenſis, Sabatus, Palus, Bientina & Cinia. In Latium Hoſtiæ Lacus Albanus, Aquæ Salviæ, Lacus Nemorenſis, Iuturnæ Lacus, Rigillus, Fucinus, Pontina Palus, Fundanus Lacus, Tiburtinus, Cacubus, Simbritinus. The Pooles are in Picinus Nurſing; in Vmbria Velinus, Floridus, Cutilienſis; in Campania Lucrinus & Avernus, Linturna Palus, Stativa Pompeia; in Salentinus and Apulia Lacus Andurianus, Leſimenſis; in Flaminia Septem Maria, Paduſa Palus; in Lombardia Tranſpadana, Verbanus, Ortanus, Larius, Luganus, Ganiratius, Monatius, Trinatius, Chivenſis, Puſcianus, Sebinus, Benacus, Idrinus, Pæninus; in Venetia Vigiſiolus; in Iſtria Coſtiacus.

Rivers. Poo.

The chiefeſt rivers of Italy are the Po, Teſinus, Rubicus, Tiber, Arnus, Olius & Abdua. The firſt place we will giue to the noble river of Po, or Padus, which as Strabo witneſſeth, is the greateſt river of Europe, except the Danubius. By Livius, Virgill and other Latine Writers it is called Padus, & by the Italians at this day Po. And as Plinie teſtifieth, it is called Padus, in regard of the number of Pine-trees, which grow about the head of it. By the Grecian Poets it was called Eridanus; becauſe Phaeton the Sõne of Sol, as Servius relateth, was drenckt in this river for his light behaviour. This river alſo, as Plinie noteth, was called Bodincus, and by Polybius Bodincos: becauſe it was thought to be botomleſſe. This river (as Plinie mẽtioneth) ſpringeth out of the Mount Veſol or Veſulus, lying in the Frountiers of Ligurus Gabienorum, from a very tranſparant and a cleare fountaine named Viſendo, which rũneth through very narrow clifts, & falleth from high Mountaines with ſuch roaring and ſuch a noiſe into the Valley, that it makes men admire it: thence he taketh his courſe through a plaine-field, with ſuch a ſtrong ſtreame, that he ſetteth many Water mills a worke for the grinding of Corne; and afterward enlargeth himſelf without keeping of any certaine Channell, till he hath runne three miles together as farre as Paiſana, where he goeth under the ground into ſome hollow-Concaues, ſo that one can ſcarcely ſee it: but a mile further by Paracola riſes up againe, & taketh along with him many other brookes & ſprings, which fall from the Alpes Penninæ, whereby he is much encreaſed and enlarged, taking his courſe forward towards Lombardy, & a part of Romania: at laſt diſchargeth himſelfe into the Adriatique or Venetiã Sea, with ſeuen great mouthes or outletts. And becauſe he runneth farre into the Sea with his outletts, is ſaid to make ſeuen Seas. He that deſireth to know more of this river, may read Plinie lib. 3. cap. 16. Polybius lib. 2. Strabo lib. 5. Pomponius Mela lib. 3. Solinus cap. 7. Alſo Leander Albert and other moderne Writers. Virgill in his ninth Æneidos ſaith, Eridanus is the King of the rivers. Lucanus in the ſecond booke affirmeth, that this river river is not much leſſe then the rivers Nilus and Danubius. The river Atheſis ſo named by Virgill & Plinie, and by Strabo Athigis, by the Italians L'Adia or L'Adeſe, guſheth out of the Trentiſh Mountaines, which at his beginning is ſmall, but afterward encreaſeth mightely, by reaſon of the abundance of waters, which fall into him, which afterward with a ſwift currant turning Southward, beneath Bolſana glideth towards Trent with a ſofter courſe through a plaine, & having paſſed theſe euen fields runneth againe betweene the narrow Mountaines, with ſuch a vehement torrent, as if he ſeemed to carry before him all that came in his way, and ſo paſſing with the like ſwiftneſſe through Verona, beneath this city devideth himſelfe into two armes or Channells, whereof the one runneth into the Fenns, and the other diſburdeneth himſelfe into the Sea at Foſſiones, making there a very braue Haven. From the head thereof to Verona, one cannot paſſe it by ſhipping or boate, becauſe of the ſwift torrent thereof; and ſhallowneſſe, but onely carries downe floates of plankes, and Pinne-trees faſtned together, which come out of the Trentiſh hills & Mountaines: but from Verona to Foſſiones it is navigable, & commodious for boates & ſhipping. Torellus in his Hiſtorie of Verona ſuppoſeth, that Atheſis ſhould be Ptolomies Atrianus: and ſome are of opinion, that Atheſis & Adrias ſhould be but one river, whereof Stephanus and ſome others make mentiõ. The third river is Rubicon, which by Ptolomy, Strabo, & other Grecian Writters is called Ρυβικὼν & now Piſitallus: this is that river as Plinie witneſſeth, which after that the bounds of the riveret Æſus were removed made the Frontiers of Italy, as Lucan mentioneth lib. 1. in ſaying thus:

Puniceus Rubicon quum fervida canduit æſtas,
Perque imas ſerpit valles, & Gallica certus
Limes ab Auſoniis diſterminat Arva colonis.

Adheſis. Rubicon.

The fourth is the Tiber, parting the bounds of Etruria & Latium. I beleeue verely, that in the Romane Hiſtories there hath not bene mention made of a more famous river then this, and therefore is called by ſundry names, Ianus, Albula, Rumon, Tiber, Serra. It was called in ancient times Ianus, after Ianus, as Athenæus witneſſeth; & that it was named Albula, appareth by Varro and others. Paulus Diaconus and Servius imagine, that he tooke this name from the withneſſe of his water. That he is called Rumon by reaſon he eateth ſo into the ground. Some ſay he tooke the name Tiber from Tiber King of the Aborigines, as ye may read in Servius his eight booke of his Æneidos, or as Feſtus will from the King of the Tuſcori. Livius, Ovidius, Feſtus, Pompejus and Euſebius ſay, that he was ſo named by Tyberinus Sylvius, Prince of the Albani. Varro mainteyneth that this river was called by ſome the Heberim, & that after the name of Hebrus, a Prince of the Veientii. The name Serra, the Romans uſed in their Sacrifices as Servius noteth. Beſides it is not onely called Tiber, but alſo Tibris & Tiberinus, and at this day in Italian Tevere. This river ſpringeth out of the Appennine Alpes, from about the midſt of them, in the Frontiers of the Aretini, not farre from that place, where the river Arnus, aboue Aretio, hath his head & beginning. At the firſt he commeth out of a ſmall ſpring, but then enlargeth himſelfe as he taketh his courſe forward with ſome other ſprings & Fountaines, and afterward having received ſome other riverets & brookes into him, groweth bigger and more navigable, not farre from Tipherno: but from thence toward Rome is ſo ſhallow, that one can not paſſe it by Ores & ſmall Boates, and then running forward by Peruſium and Otriculo ſeparateth Etruria from the Vmbri and Sabini. Some 13000. paces from Rome, parteth againe the Veientes from the Cruſtumini and the Fidenati, as likewiſe Latium from Vaticanum, and comming to Rome ſwells ſo great, that it is not paſſable but by a bridge and ſhipping. From thence taketh his courſe forward to Oſtia, where he looſeth him ſelfe in the Tuſcan Sea. The whole courſe of this river is lively deſcribed by Pliny lib. 3. cap. 4. and by Servius in the eight booke of his Æneidos, alſo by Florus lib. 1. cap. 4. by Varro lib. 4. de Lil. Touching the delicate Fiſhe of Tiber, Paulus Iovius hath wrote a ſpeciall treatiſe thereof. Pliny mentioneth that there are two and fortie ſprings, brookes & rivers, which runne into the Tiber. The river called at this day Arno, is by Plinie, Strabo and Ptolomy named Arnus, whoſe Head-ſpring, as Strabo writeth, riſeth on the right ſide of the Appenine Mountaines, which at the firſt is very ſmall, and taking his courſe Weſtward, falleth downe from exceeding high & ſteepe clifts into the Dales, & there growing bigger by the many ſprings and Fountaines, which run into him with a great ſtreame, higheth into the Florentine Iuriſdiction, parting the ſame from Piſa, & taking along with him a great many other brookes, & riverets: at laſt diſburtheneth himſelf into the Sea. The river Mencio or Menzio, is called by Strabo, Virgill, Plinie, and others Mencius, and runneth into the Meere of Benaco, making the waters thereof very cleare, and afterward environning the city of Mantua, with a ſmall Meere, about 13. miles from it falleth into the Po. The river Teſino is by Livie, Plinie, Silius, Polybius, Strabo, Plutarke, Ptolomy, and Stephanus called Ticinus, and in Tabula Itineraria Tianus. His head commeth out of Mount Summano, now called S. Gothards Mount, out of which alſo in other places ſpring the Rhene and the Rhoſne, the Tecin, and others; from thence runneth through the Lepõtii Southward, betweene very ſteepe clifts, unto the ſtrong towne of Belinzona: there he beginns to waxe bigger, by reaſon of the ſprings and waters that runneth into him, and then taketh his courſe forward into the Lake of Verbano; and flouwing through it, as Plinie teſtifieth, runneth afterward through a plaine field, and ſo with his moſt cleare waters, diſchargeth himſelfe into the Po, but not with ſuch abundance of water as he brings into the Lake; becauſe that afterward his waters are led away by many channels and ditches. This river is ſo exceeding cleare, that ye may ſee a penny, or the leaſt thing that lies in the botome of it, and in the ſands thereof are found oftẽtimes many ſmall peeces of Gold & Silver. The river which Plinie calleth Ollius, & the Italiãs Oglio, aboundeth with delicate Fiſhe: in this river not farre from Palatiola they make many wheeles of Oiſiers, which at a certaine ſeaſon of the yeare they laye in the river, and take a world of Eeles in them, which they ſalt and barrell up. The right head of this river is not certainely knowne, but the moſt opinion is, that it comes of two ſmall waters, which runns out of the Lake Frigidulpho, lying betweene the Alpes, whereof the one, that is, on the right hãd keeping the name of Frigidulpho at length falleth into the Ollio. The other on the left hãd rũneth into an other water, which the Inhabitãts hold to be the head of the Ollio, but others agree not with them in this. This river running by Poſonium into the Lake Iſeo, & then paſſing through ſome champian fields, is led from thence by many channells & draines into the commaund, & villages of Cremona and Brixia, whereby the ſtony ground, through which he runns, is made very fruitfull. The water of this river is every where very cleare, and looſeth none of it: alſo he ſevereth the Brixian territorie from that of Cremona and Bergamo, and carrieth along with him aboue 37. riverets and ſprings. The river Adda is called by Plinie, Tacitus, Polybius and Strabo, Abdua or Addua. This river parteth the Cenomanni from the Inſubri, his head beginneth in Mount Braulio, and not in Mount Adula as Strabo mentioneth. He runneth through the Lake of Lazio, & then paſſing a plaine field falleth into the Po, carrying many other rivers with him, as the Piſclavore, Meyra, Lyra, Tarteno, Leciumortum, Brembum, Serimortum & Serium, which river ſpringeth out of the Mountaines of Bergamo, & running throug Seriana in the Winter time hideth himſelfe in hollow concaues, and by Cremona floweth up againe, till he looſeth himſelfe into the Abdua, in the Summer ſeaſon when the ſnow melts he waxeth ſo great, that he filleth not onely onely all the holes and chaps in the earth: but alſo overfloweth the plaine fields. The leſſer rivers for brevitie wee will paſſe over in ſilence.

Gulfes or Boſomes.

Now follow the Seas, Boſomes, Gulfes, & Havens, The Vpper Sea, the Lower Sea, & the Ionium Sea environ Italy on three ſides. Therefore Plinie ſpeakes truely of Italy, It were impoſſible for mee (ſaith he) to relate all the Seas, Gulfes & Havens, which Italy on all ſides powreth out of her lap for the whole World, and for the invitation of all Marchants and men, yea and reacheth farre into the Sea, for the accommodation of commerce and trading. Amongſt the Gulfes and Boſomes of Italy, theſe are reckoned the chiefeſt, as Sinus Rappalinus, Erycis, Amuclanum Mare, Sinus Baianus, Pæſtanus, Hipponiates, Scyliticus, Tarentinus, Ortas, Tergeſtinus Largus & Flanaticus. Touching the Sea Havens, Strabo writeth of them in his ſixth booke, that they are great and admirable, ſome of them lying very conveniently to hinder the invaſion of an Ennemy, and ſituate very well, to offend an Ennemy, being alſo very commodious for traffique. The chiefeſt of theſe Havens are Portus Olivulæ, Anaonis, Aviſonis, Herculis Mœneci, Maurici, Albingauni, Vadorum, Sabatiorum, Savonæ, Genuæ, Delphini, Erycis, Lunæ, Piſanus, Vadorũ, Populonii, Faleſiæ, Scabrorum, Telamonis, Herculis, Graviſcæ, Auguſti, Antias Caietæ, Iulius, Baianus, Vilinus, Metarius Oreſtis, Caſtra Hannibalis, Tarentinus, Brunduſinus, Garne, Agaſus, Anconitanus, Ariminenſis, Ravennas, Peretolus, Levenza, Polæ and many more.

Ports and Havens.

Alpes or Mountaines.

The chiefeſt Mountaines in Italy are the Alpes, whether ye will attribute them to France, Germanie or Italy, it matters not, ſeing that at this day in the length of them they ſeparate Italy from France and Germany, as it were with a mighty Bulwarke or Wall. Feſtus is of opinion, that the Alpes were called ſo from the whitneſſe of them: for ſaith he, the Sabines named that Alpum, which the Latines called Album, that is, VVhite. Iſidorus will haue, that the name of Alpium is an old French word, and that in the ancient Gallican tongue Alpes ſignifie high-Mountaines. The high-Dutches call thẽ alſo at this day Alpes, but not in that ſenſe as Iſidorus taketh them, for Alp and Alpen, among the Dutches, betoken Mountaines rich in Paſtures, upon which no graſſe is mooed, but where Cattel are turned a grazing. Strabo writeth that the Mountaines formerly were called Albia and Alpiona, and Stephanus nameth them alſo Alpia and Alpii. Phavorinus giveth them the denomination of Olbia, & Lycophron of Salpios. Ovid & Lucan name them Alpis, and Dionyſius Afer Alpius. In ancient writings, they haue given diverſe names to the Alpes, a ſigne that in old times there were many parts of the Alpes, over which men paſſed. The names of thẽ are theſe: Alpes Maritimæ or Liguſticæ, the Cottiæ, Graiæ, Pœninæ, Alpes Summæ, Lepontiæ, Rhæticæ, Iuliæ and Carnicæ, and theſe are thoſe Alpes, that by a continuall ridge, ſeparate Italy from France and Germanie. Next follow the Appennini, which ſhoot out betweene the Vpper & the Nether Sea, and in their length ſeparate Italy, as it were into two parts. Some will ſay that it is called Appenninus, from the Pœni or Carthaginians, who cutt a paſſage through it, when Hannibal their Conductour fell into Italy: other againe affirme, that this name came from an ancient Captaine, called Api, who overran all Italy. By Ptolomy and others, this Mountaine is called Apenninus, by Stephanus Appeninũ. Mount Appenninus ſaith Pliny is counted the greateſt Mountaine in Italy, reaching with a continuall ridge to one another from the Alpes, to the ſtreight of the Sicilian Sea. Beſides theſe, there are divers other hills in Italy, as parcells of the Appenini.

There are 5. paſſages over theſe hills into Italy, viz. three out of France, and two out of Germany. The firſt from France through Provence, & ſo cloſe by the Tyrrhenean Seas through Liguria, which is the eaſieſt. The ſecond is through the hills called Geneura, into the Marquiſate of Saluzzes, & ſo into Lombardy, this is the place over which the invincible Hanniball marched with ſuch difficulty, and through which alſo Charles the Eight paſſed with his Army towards Naples. The third is over Mount Cenis, through the Countrie of Turin, which was firſt hanſelled (if wee beleeue antiquity) by Hercules: From the paſſage of theſe Captaines were theſe latter Mountaines called Alpes Graiæ. The firſt way out of Germany into Italy, is through the Country of the Griſons, by the Country of the Valtoline. The ſecond out of Germany into Italy is through the Country of Tyrolis, by the townes of Inſpurch and Trent, and thus much of the Alpes, their ſeverall names and paſſages over them.

Foreſts and Woods.

Theſe aforeſaid Mountaines, Dales and fieldes, are here and there covered and decked with many fine Foreſts and Woods, whereof ſome of them were famous in ancient times, and knowne by ſpeciall names, as in Etruria the Saltus now called Boſco di Monte Fiacone: alſo that of Volſinio or Bolſena, which lieth upon the way, as ye goe to Viterbo and as Leandrus witneſſeth, was called by the Ancients Volſinienſium Lucus. Vpon Mount Cimion in Etruria was ſuch a hideous, & fearefull wood, through which noe man durſt goe till Livies time, but onely the guide himſelfe. In Latium by Capenates was Lucus Ferone, whereof Silius verſifieth thus:

Dives ubi ante omnes colitur Feronia Luco:
Et ſacer humectat Fluvialia rura Capenas.

Plinie writeth, that by the river Numico there was a wood ſacred to Iovi Indigeti. The wood called Diana Ætolica, Livie maketh to be by Agninum Compitũ. The wood Nævia Feſtus placeth to haue ſtood about foure miles from Rome. The wood of the Caminari, Livie writeth lay without the Gates of Capena. And that wood which he then called Algidum Nemus is now Silva del Aglica. Albunea Sylva, as Servius ſaith, ſtood upon the very topp of the Mount Tybur, and another of the ſame name within the Iuriſdiction of the Laurentini. Virgill writeth that the wood Angitia lay by Alba Marſorum. Cicero ſaith that Furinæ Lucus ſtood within the præcincts of Rome. Plinie maketh mention, that the wood Vacunæ was by Mount Ficello in Vmbria. Campania had wont to glorie in her Lucus Sacer and in Gallinaria Sylva. Sacer Lucus, ſo named by Livius, is now called Hami. Sylva Gallinaria is mentioned in Cicero ad Pœtum, and Strabo lib. 5. Amonge the Lucanians the woods Eboli, Peregrimalis, and Veliarum were very famous. Amonge the Apulians, Batini Saltus and Lucus Gargani. Among the Brutii Rhegius or Reginorum Saltus. Alſo in Gallia Ciſpadana, Sylva Lucina and Pedaniæ Sylvæ. In Traſpadania Caſtorum Lucus. Strabo placeth in the Countrie of the Venetii two woods, whereof the one was called after the name of Iuno Argiva, the other Diana Ætolica.

Publike buildings.

Now I come to the publike Edifices and Buildings of Italy, aſwell Eccleſiaſtique as temporall, which are moſt exquiſite and many in number: for, within Rome alone there are at this daye aboue 300. Churches & Chappells, whereof ſeven of them are viſited with great devotion. Saint Peters Church in the Vatican excelleth in Magnificencie and ſumptuouſneſſe, for marble and other ornaments, all the Churches of the World, where ye may ſee many rareties, as namely, ſome pillars, which were brought thither out of Salomons Temple, two braſen Peacocks of the Pyramide brought into it by Cornelius Scipio Africanus, which heretofore ſtood in the Dale of Vaticana. There may ye ſee alſo the Sepulchres of many Popes, and the Marble Tombe of the Emperour Otho the Second. Aboue it ſtands the Popes Chappell, where yee may ſee the day of judgment painted out by Michell Angelo. To be briefe, I will paſſe by al the ſtately Cloiſters, Hoſpitalls, Orphan-houſes, Old-mens-houſes, Findelings-houſes and the moſt ſtately Palaces belonging to the Pope, and his Cardinalls. The Popes Palace ſtandeth upon the Vatican, in a place elevated, built very ſumptuouſly and ſeated pleaſantly: euer ſince the Pope left Lateran he came to keepe his court here in regard of the delightſomeneſſe of the place, and the healthfulneſſe of the aire. The Palace was firſt begann by Pope Nicolas the Third, and was afterward enlarged and made better by his Succeſſours, and at laſt by Iulius the 11. and Leo the Tenth was fully finiſhed, and by Xiſtus the Fift adorned with moſt excellent Images and Pictures, ſo that this ſtructure ſeemeth to exalt it ſelfe up to the Heavens, yea, & hangs at it were in the ſkyes. The ſtares by which ye goe up to his Court are ſo commodious and eaſie, that one may come up to the Palace on all ſides, yea and are ſo broad, that ye may goe up them on horſeback, to the top. This Palace is of ſo large an extent, that it rather reſembles a towne then a houſe. Xiſtus Chappell is as bigg as a reaſonable Church, here the Cardinalls meete, when they are to chooſe a new Pope & that the Papall Seate is vacant. This is commonly called the Conclave: to number up all the other Palaces & houſes in Rome would be too tedious, and therefore will let it reſt till wee come to the particular Deſcription thereof.

The Gouvernment two fold.

The Gouvernment of Italy is at this day twofold, to wit, Politique and Eccleſiaſtique. The Politique and Civill Gouvernment is now ſo ordered, that they haue rent this famous Empire into diverſe Signories and Dominions. Amonge their ſeverall Seigneuries & Dominions at this day next unto the Pope, the King of Naples, the three free Common weales of Venice, Genua, Luca & others, the chiefeſt are thoſe, which be in the Septentrionall parts, as the Princes of Toſcany, Ferrara, Mantua, Millayne, Monſerrate, Parma, Salucen and Verona. there are many, vvhich I vvill deſcribe in their due places. Touching their Spirituality or Clargie, the Pope of Rome is the Hierarcha, and the Head of all the Church, having a mighty ſuite & traine followving him as often as he ſhevveth himſelfe in publike: then ye ſhall ſee him gliſter and ſhine (theſe are S. Bernards ovvne vvords in his booke de Conſideratione, ſpeaking of Pope Eugenius) in Silkes, Velvets & precious ſtones, enammeled in Gold (juſt like the vvhore of Babylon) ryding upon the vvhite palfrey, and not as Chriſt vvho to ſhovv his humility, rod into Ieruſalem upon an aſſes foale) attented vvith troopes of Souldiers, Gentlemen, Pages and Lackies. The graund Clergie men are alſo held in great honour, eſteeme & reputation, for they are more honored & reſpected then the nobilitie themſelues. The Cardinalls (as Peter Meſia noteth) came in the places of the Conſuls, vvho heretofore gouverned the Romane Empire. The Arch-Biſhops are of the like degree vvith Dukes, and the Biſhops in the places of Earles, their Vicars in ſtead of the Imperiall Preſidents. The Priours in the roome of Gouvernours. The Arch-Prieſt in the place of the Tribuni Militum, & the Chancellours repreſenting the Tribuni Plebis, or the Gild-Maſters. He that deſires to be beter informed of theſe things, may be pleaſed to read Meſia himſelfe.

In Italy there are three manner of Lavves, namely, the Papall, the Imperiall & the Civill, or Tovvnes-lavv. What the firſt and ſecond are, is ſufficiently knovvne. The third conſiſteth in thoſe lavves and ſtatutes, vvhich every city or tovvne had vvont to haue peculiar to themſelues. We vvill add hereunto, that vvhich vvas found in an old booke of parchment, hovv diverſe people and tovvnes in Italie, carryed and gouverned themſelues in their conſultations, vvhich vvas this: Thoſe of Mylaine ſaith he vvere graue and excellent; thoſe of Venice ſage and vviſe; thoſe of Luca light-headed; thoſe of Piſa inconſtant; thoſe of Placentia provident; thoſe of Florence teadious; thoſe of Ferrara ſubtil; the Genoa's ignorant; thoſe of Luca profitable; the Volſci perverſe; the Brutii rude and blockiſh; thoſe of Mutina ſharpvvitted; thoſe of Peruſa quick of apprehenſion; thoſe of Sena prolix; and thoſe of Padua ambiguous.

Vniverſities. The Italians are louers of learning, Arts and Sciences, for the advancement vvhereof they haue many excellent Vniverſities, as at Rome, Mylaine, Bononia, Padua, Pavia, Naples, Peruſiũ, Salerno, Piſa, Ferraria, Sena, Florence, Venice, Bergonum, Modena & Turin: for thoſe of Parma, Placẽtia, Ancona, & Macerata are moſt of them decayed. To number up all the learned men vvhich haue flouriſhed in Italy, vvere impoſſible for mee. Manners & behaviour. In their manners, behaviour and geſtures, the Italians are very civill, courteous & gentile, ſurpaſſing all other Nation in mertie conceits and pleaſant diſcourſes: they are of good capacitie, apprehenſion and underſtanding, apt to learne, and invent any thing, ready-handed and teachable in all ſtudies, Arts and Sciences. But from all antiquity haue bene allvvaies ambitious and vaine glorious: yea from the very breſts they haue ſucked in luſts as milke, being much inclined to Idleneſſe, a delicious life & venerie: but vvhich is vvorſt, to un naturall luſts & vile affections ſpoken of by the Apoſtle Rom. cap. 1. Rome 1. 26. & 27. verſ. 26. & 27. (and as Mr. Heylin ſaith) are ſo beſotted vvith jealouſie, that looke hovv many Italians there are, there are for the moſt part as many jaylours to their vviues, for they ſhut them upfrom the common vievv, and permit them not to diſcourſe vvith fevv or none. For there vvas once a Gentleman in Venice, vvho vvas ſo extreamely jealous of his vvife, leaſt ſhee ſhould cornute him, that in his abſence he had a locke for her. Moreouer, they are exceeding revẽgefull: in ſo much that vvhen they can finde oportunity to revenge themſelues of thoſe to vvhome they beare a grudg or ſplene, either by the ſvvord, piſtoll or ſtiletto, they rejoyce, glorie in it & counting it as precious to them as their ovvne liues: but if they cannot effect it themſelues, then they hire others, or lay their commaunds upon their heires, & children to execute their revenge. Of the nature, condition & manners of your Italian Donna's & Weeman, ye ſhall find them liuely ſett out in an ancient manuſcript, or the ſame old booke in this manner followving.

The nature of the Italian Weemen deciphered. Your Dames of Sena, are faire of complexion; thoſe of Florence dainty and tender; thoſe of Peruſia fine; thoſe of Cajeta hanſome; thoſe of Conſentia obſtinate; thoſe of Benevento Sullen; thoſe of Bononia audacious, & high minded; thoſe of Mutina gentill; thoſe of Cæſana griping; thoſe of Genoa laſcivious; thoſe of Crema decevable; thoſe of Placentia hard to be vvonne; thoſe of Luca chaſt; thoſe of Piſtorio kind and tractable; thoſe of Rome full of gravity; thoſe of Capua vvhoriſh; thoſe of Naples good hovvſvvaiues; thoſe of Brũduſio lazie & idle; thoſe of Ferraria covetous; thoſe of Ravenna civill; thoſe of Vrbino affable; thoſe of Vincentia conſtant; thoſe of Parma griple; thoſe of Pavia deſirous of lucre; thoſe of Millayne headie; thoſe of Piemont vvanton and laſcivious; thoſe of Venice vvilfull; thoſe of Verona gravious; thoſe of Brixia diligent; thoſe of Formia ſvveete countenanced; thoſe of Lodi ſuperſtitious; thoſe of Cremona coſtly Dames; thoſe of Tarviſi jealous; thoſe of Bergamo craftie; thoſe of Aretio faſt handed; and thoſe of Puzzoli, farre and beautifull, and if ye vvill haue Mr. Heylins definition of them, they are Magpies at the doore, Saints in the Church, Goddeſſes in the garden, Divels in the houſe, Angels in the ſtreets, and Syrens in the vvindovves.

In ancient times the Italian nation vvere marvailloufly giuen to all manner of Idolatrie & ſuperſtitions, & at this day no leſſe addicted to Popiſh Ceremonies, ſaving thoſe vvhich dvvell in the Southerne parts of Italy, vvho are deſcended from the Grecians, and followv the Grekiſh Ceremonies & Religion. What a vvarlike and Martiall nation they haue bene in former ages, the vvhole World can vvitneſſe, vvhich they almoſt ſubdued. In the parchment booke, before mentioned, appeareth manifeſtly, vvhat people, and tovvnes of Italy carried themſelues beſt in the vvarres, and on the contrary vvhat vices and faults every one of them vvere giuen to. The Peruſini (ſaith he) vvere alvvaies held for braue and vaillant Souldiers; the Calabrians too furious; thoſe of Spoleto vvillie; thoſe of Sena fortunate; thoſe of Bononia raſh headed; the Neopolitans animous; thoſe of Favenſa preſſing upon their Ennemis; thoſe of Prato Sacriledgers; thoſe of Collenſes unteachable; thoſe of Piceno pillagers; the Emiliani temerious; the Placentians cruell-minded; the Romans able and terrible; the Milanoys undaunted; the Piſtorienſes blood-thirſtie; the Vicentians revengfull; thoſe of Pavia ſteadie and firme. For the vvarres the Venetians contribute money; the Milainois Murrions; the Placentians Karrs; the Cremonans Tents; thoſe of Pavia Lances; thoſe of Piſtorio Poingiards; thoſe of Bononia Reeds; the Florentine .....; the Romans perſeverance; thoſe of Ferrara ordnance; the Neapolitans Horſes; thoſe of Parma Shild & Targets; thoſe of Tarviſa ſvvords; thoſe of Viterbo ſpurrs; thoſe of Lodi victualls. He paints them out yet further in ſaying, that the Neopolitans are vigilant in vvarre; the Genovvays perfidious; the Mantuins excellent horſemen; thoſe of Piſtorio ready to receiue a blovv or thruſt vvith their targets; thoſe of Brixia for caſting up of vvalls and trenches excellent; the Genoa's for ſhipping exquiſite; thoſe of Luca capable for the building of Tovvnes; thoſe of Cremona ſkilfull in the ordering of Battailes; thoſe of Venice for rigging and ſetting forth of a navie; thoſe of Padua good Riders of horſes; thoſe of Bergomo for laying of plotts & Ambuſcadoes. Virgill in the ninth booke of his Æneidos deſcribeth the manner of the ancient Italians in theſe verſes:

Quis Deus Italiam, quae vos dementia adegit?
Non hic Atrida, nec fandi victor Vlyſſes.
Durum a Stirpe genus; Natos ad flumina primum
Deferimus ſævoque gelu duramus & undis:
Venatu invigilant pueri, Sylvaſque fatigant.
Flectere ludus Equos, & ſpicula tendere Cornu.
At patiens operum parvoque adſueta Iuventus
Aut raſtris terram domat, aut quatit oppida bello.
Omne ævum ferro teritur, verſaque Iuvencum
Terga fatigamus haſta: nec tarda Senectus
Debilitat vires animi, mutatque vigorem:
Canitiem galea premimus, ſemperque recentes
Convectare juvat pradas & vivere rapto, &c.

The Italians at this day are conſtant in matrimonie, and vvill not ſuffer any bills of divorce to be giuen, as the Romans by a bad cuſtome had vvont to doe, throvv the ſeducement of Sp. Carvilius. The firſt borne of the Princes, Lords and Gentlemen inherite their Fathers livings, according to the ancient cuſtome, but for the common & meaner ſort of people; they devide their lands & goods alike amonge their children, if they be lavvfull borne.

An other deſcription.

Dyet. Touching their Dyet they are very ſparing and ſober, and uſe no great dainties at their tables if neceſſitie require it not. They goe not alvvaies in one faſhion of cloaths, but change their cloaths as time and occaſion ſerues.

Apparell. The Apparell of the Venetians are vvide and longe. Of late yeares their vveemen vvent vvith their armes, breaſt & ſhoulders naked, but novv they deck them, vvearing great and long Sleeues, à la modo Eſpaignolle. Next unto the Venetians the Florentines goe the hanſomeſt and neateſt, in their apparell. Thoſe of Milan; as alſo all thoſe of Æmilia & Liguria goe very braue; but their cloathes are of a ſhorter cutt; the Courteſans of Rome putts them all dovvne for gallantrie, longneſſe & variety of Colours, but the communaltie goe there neate & hanſome, though not coſtly, eſpecially their private vveemen, but of late they are gott into the Tuſcan faſhion. The Neopolitans had rather goe neate in their cloathes then coſtly; the reſt of Italy goe plaine. In all Gallia Ciſalpina or Lombardy, Princeſſes & Ladies take moſt delight in the Spaniſh; and their huſbands, in the French faſhion.

This booke mentioneth alſo vvhat meates they loue beſt in the tovvnes, and hovv they carry themſelues to Ennemies, and ſtraungers; namely, the Florentines are frugall and thrifty; thoſe of Luca neate and cleanely; thoſe of Mantua plaine and ſimple; the Calabrians ruſticall and unſerviceable; thoſe of Luca truſtie; thoſe of Sena kind hearted; the Venetians ſoothers; thoſe of Padua auſtere and churliſh; the Florentins in their bargaines are ſubtile and vvarie; the Genoa's patient; thoſe of Milan openhearted; the Venetians crafty and lordly.

Marchandizes. The commodities vvhich Italy affords, and vvhich are tranſported into forraine Countries are Rice, Silks, Velvets, Satins, Taffaties, Grograinnes, Raſh, Fuſtians, Gold vvire, Armour, Alom and Venice glaſſes, &c.

Their language is grave, courtly and fluent, the beſt vvhereof is about Florence and Siena. And thus much of Italy in generall.

The deſcription of the Seigneurie OF VENICE.

THE Seigneurie of the Venetians reacheth farre, and containeth within three Provinces or Territoires, as la Maria Tervigiana Friuli, and Hiſtria, with a part of Lombardy, lying upon the Po, to wit, Breſcia, Bergomo, and Verona, with the juriſdiction of Cremona. On the Eaſt it boundeth upon the Auſterian Confines, and is partly ſhutt in with Golfo di Venetia, on the North it hath the aforeſaid Dutchie of Auſtria, with the Tridentine commaund, and alſo the Rhetian Graubunters, and Switzers, on the Weſt ſide lyeth the Dukedome of Mantua, & the Popes commaund. The Marquiſate of Tervigiana hath on the Weſt ſide the Rivers Mincius, Benacus, and Sarca: on the North the Moutaines Tauriſani, which ſeperate Germanie from Italy, on the Weſt part lyeth the River Timavi, & the Venetian Sea, on the South the River Atheſis, with the Melarian, and Brigantime Pooles. This is a noble and a rich Countrie, full of gallant townes, whoſe Inhabitants are very laborious, and ingenious, great lovers of all profeſſions, arts and ſciences, & good Souldiers. The ſoile yeeldeth all ſorts of graine, good wine, and delicate fruits, having beſides many hott bathes: wholſome Fountaines and Rivers, abounding in dainty fiſh. The aire is alſo very healthfull, pleaſant and milde, ſo that this Countrie may truely be accounted one of the beſt Provinces of Italy. Forum Iulii, or Friuli, which the Venetians call their Patria, or Native Soile, reacheth Eaſtward as farre as the River Formio, and Northwards to the Alpes Iulii, on the Weſt it is ſhutt in with the Alpes, Vindelicæ, or Noruæ, where the River Kiquentia parteth Friuli, from the Marquiſate Terrigluna, on the Southſide lyeth the Golfe of Venice. The Soile is exceeding fruitfull, the Countrie being full of pleaſant feilds, and watered with diverſe rivers, brookes and ſprings. For wine, woods, mettals, and all kind of ſtone quarries they have ſufficient. By the famous river of Hydra, they finde quick-ſilver: the Inhabitants are given much to all kinde of manufactures, and uſe great trading, and commerce. Hiſtria lyeth on the other ſide of the Golfe of Venice. It is a rough and a craggie Countrie, with many hills running through it, which nevertheleſſe are fruitfull. It hath alſo many woods in it, where they gett excellent timber, for the building of ſhipping. In the ſtone quarries, they have Free-ſtone and Marble, which is tranſported to Venice, and other Cities. By reaſon of the barrenneſſe of the Countrie, the people are not very rich. Breſcia is an exceeding fruitfull Countrie, which affordeth Wine, Oyle, Peaſe, Beanes & all kinde of Fruits in abundance. They have alſo in the Mountaines yron, and Copper mines, which yeelds the Inhabitants noe ſmall profite: within the confines thereof lyeth Lago di Iſeo, or the Lake of Idro, alſo many pleaſant Dales, adorned with populous townes, & Villages. The Country being full alſo of Caſtles, Noblemen, and Gentlemens houſes. The Territoire of Bergamo is very Mountainous, rough and to the Northward very barren, bnt the other part is more fruitfull, having fine Dales in it, where they make curious wine, and great ſtore of Oyle: they have yron alſo, and abundance of Sheepe, which yeelds them excellent wooll, where with they drive a great trade in Italy.

The Royaltie of Verona is ſeparated from the Breſcian commaund by Lago di Garda, beginning at Bruchelio, and reaching in length 65 Italian miles to Riva, lying at the end of the ſaid Lake. This territoire is not behinde with the others in fertility: but yeeldeth abundance of excellent wines, oyle, and moſt pleaſant fruits. They make great gaine of their wools, and ſtone-quarries, and their Rivers and Lakes abound in delicate fiſh. Upon Mount Baldo growes many excellent ſimples, and phyſicall herbes. Cremona is a fine pleaſant Country, in regard of its fruitfull trees, which are ſett in rowes on by an other; the Vines claſping & climing up to the tops of them, whoſe juycie grapes every yeare, cheeres the hearts of her Natives. The gallant, ſtately, and famous Citie of Venice lyeth in Sinu Adriatico commonly called Golfo di Venetia. And may ſeeme to take its denomination from Venetia, which in elder Latin is taken from the ſeething, or frothing of the Sea, on which it is ſituate. It is built upon 72 Ilands, diſtant from the maine land five miles, defended againſt the furie of the Sea, by a banke extending 60 miles in length, through which in ſeaven places there is paſſage broken for boates, but no way for Veſſells of greater burden; ſaving at Malamuco and the Caſtles of Lio, ſtrongly fortified. Touching the foundation of this Citie, many Hiſtorians are of the opinion, that when the Hunnes invaded Italy, many of the Venetians, to ſecure themſelves from the furie of theſe Barbarians, fled from the continent, and harboured themſelves in theſe Ilands, upon which Venice is now built, and whence it was ſo called about the yeare of our Lord 420. Since which time it was ſo mightily enlarged, and grew ſo populous, that the circuit of it is above 8000 paces, which makes 8 miles in compaſſe, & is ſo well fortifyed, that it is impoſſible to be taken, but by an Ennemie, whoſe Armie muſt have a line of circumvalation of above 150 miles. For conveniencie of paſſage, there are 4000 bridges, and 12000 gondeloes or boates. And though this Citie be environned about with water, & noe land left, but that whereupon houſes are built: yet they are ſerved with abundance of all manner of proviſions, both for neceſſity & delight, which is brought unto them by water, and where is great trading and commerce. The City is divided into 6 parts, ſtanding in the flaves aforeſaid, the buildings are faire, ſumptuous, well compacted, & adorned with glaſſe windowes, an ornament not common in Italy. There are 200 houſes in it, fit to lodge any King whom ſoever, moſt of which ſtand on the grand Canale. There are 64 Pariſhinall Churches in it, 17 Friers Cloiſters, and 24 Nunneries: the Patron of this City is Saint Marke, whoſe body they report to have bin brought from Alexandria, and is here buyried in Saint Markes Church, one of the goodlieſt, and richeſt Churches in the world, vvhere in is piled up an infinite maſſe of treaſurie, belonging to the Venetians. It is built through with Moſaique worke, of which worke they vaunt themſelves to be the Authours. Now the Moſaique worke is a moſt curious worke, wrought of ſtones of diverſe colours, and divers mettals into the ſhapes of knots, flowers, and other devices, with that excellencie of cunning, that they ſeeme all to be but one ſtone: and rather the worke of nature then of art. Neere unto this Church, ſtands the Senate-houſe, and the Dukes Palace, moſt rare ſtructures. The Arſenall is above 2000 paces in compaſſe, wherein every day there are at worke above 400 men and ſhipwrights, for the making of ſhips and Gallies, in which are kept 200 Gallies, & nigh to which are houſes ſtored with maſts, ſayles, and other tacklings, ſo that they can ſpeedily rigg, and ſett out a Navie. In their Magazin of warre they have armour for a hundred thouſand Souldiers, among which are a thouſand coates of plate, garniſhed with gold, and covered with Veluet; ſo that they are fit for any Prince in Chriſtendome to weare. Round about this Citie lye theſe Ilands, among the which is that of Murano, where they make their curious fine Venice Glaces, and ſo from a baſe, & an abject beginning, this Citie is growne to be the chiefeſt Bulwarke of Chriſtendome. The chiefe Policie, whereby this Commõ-wealth hath ſo long ſubſiſted in an Ariſtocracie, is firſt the exempting of their Citizens from the warres, & hyring others in their places, by whoſe death the Common-wealth ſuſtaineth the leſſe loſſe. Secondly, the entertaining of ſome forraine Prince for their Generall, whome after the warres ended, they preſently diſcard; by which courſe they avoid faction & ſervitude: which were like to happen, if they ſhould employ in that ſervice any of their owne people: who by his vertue, & courage might chance to make himſelfe their Prince. The Lawes alſo of this Citie permit not the yonger Sons of the Nobilitie to marrie, leaſt the number encreaſing, ſhould diminiſh the dignity: howſoever they permit them unlawfull pleaſures, and for their ſakes allow publike ſtewes. The Dukes authority is but ſmall, as being in all things ſubject to the Senate, and the three officers, called the Capi, without whoſe conſent he may not goe out of the towne, & by whome he is preſcribed an order in his apparell: ſo that he may be counted litle better then an honorable ſervant. His revenue is as litle as his authority, he being allowed out of the common treaſurie but 40000 ducates a yeare. The people of Venice are either Gentlemen, or Artificers, or Commons.

Verona, for a naturall ſite, lying upon the Atheſis, may be compared to Baſil in Germany, ſeated in a fine plaine feild, on the Eaſt, South, and Weſt ſides: but on the North ſide riſeth upon a litle hill, and is embraced with the River Atheſis. It hath large and faire ſtreets paved with bricks, 35 Churches, 10 Cloiſters & Nunneries, foure bridges and two Caſtles vpon the hill: it boaſteth of an Amphitheater, which will containe 8000 people. This City was a longe time under the power of the Romans, and as well as the other townes in Italy hath endured many ſhrode brunts: Afterward, the Gothes poſſeſſed it, and came under Theodoricus, who called it after his owne name, & anno 1404 was under the ſubjection of the Venetians. Padua is a very large, & an ancient City, built by Antenor, whoſe tombe is ſtill here to be ſeene. It is ſeated in a very fruitfull, & a pleaſant ſoile environned with the River Brenta, which il Signore Carraſia led about it: the circumference of this City is 700 paces. Beſides the Cathedrall Church, there be 22 others, 23 Fryers Cloiſters, and 29 Nunneries, a brave Senate houſe, 5 Market places, 38 ſtone bridges, 3 Hoſpitalls, three Maladeries, and about 4000 houſes in it: it is an Epiſcopall Sea, accounted one of the fatteſt in Italie. The Countrie round about it, is very fertill in peaſe and wine, here is made the fineſt, and the whiteſt bread of Italy. Vicenza is very neately built and compacted, together adorned with ſumptuous houſes, through which the two Rivers Bacchiho, and Rezo meeting runne. The circumjacent territoire furniſheth this City withall proviſions in abundant manner, about it growes many Mulberie trees, with whoſe leaves the Citizens keepe a multitude of ſilke wormes. Breſcia lying under the foote of a hill, is accounted the ſecond City for bigneſſe, and beauty in all Lombardy, being finely compacted together. It hath endured much harme by the Hunnes, and anno 412 the Gothes burnt it downe to aſhes, but anno 452 was built up againe by Martianus. The Emperour Henry the 6. did demantle it, & took their priviledges from them, when the Gibellini and Guelphi factions domineerd in Italy, whereby it ſuſtained much dammage and falling into the hands of many Lords, the Venetians at laſt ſnapt it from them. It is alſo the ſeate of an Archbiſhop, who is an Earle, a Marqueſſe and a Duke. Bergamo is an ancient towne ſeated upon the top of a hill: in the Preaching Fryers Monaſtery, is moſt antike and curious carvings, and a fine Library to be ſhowne: the people ſpeake the worſt language of any in Italy: but are nevertheleſſe men of good capacity. This towne anno 1419 in the time of Philippe Maria fell into the hands of the Venetians. Crema lyeth in a very pleaſant ground, being ſtrongly fortifyed with walls, againſt the Millanoys, having gallant houſes in it, and being provided with all things neceſſary for the ſuſtentation of man, till anno 1405, it was ſubject to Vicounts, in which time Philippo Maria, chaſed thoſe Tyrants away. It proved diſloyall to this Philip, and gave themſelves over to the Venetians. Tarviſium is not very great, but ſtrong; the River Sili divideth it into two parts, the moſt of the lands about it, belong to the Citizens of Venice. This towne in the time of the French, and Imperiall troubles ſtood conſtant to the Venetians. In Fruili are diverſe townes among the reſt Udine being five miles about. Aquileia lyeth upon the borders of Hiſtria, & is a very ancient towne, which had above a hundred and twenty thouſand perſons dwelling in it, according to the Romaine taxation. Attila after a long ſeige layd it flatt to the ground. Not farre from thence is the new towne of Palma, built by the Venetians anno 1593. It is built in a circular forme, fortifyed with nine great Bulwarkes, and a deepe moate, and an exceeding thick wall, in the midſt of it ſtands the Citadell, which hath alſo 5 Bulwarkes about it. In Hiſtria are theſe two townes, Capo d'Iſtria lying in a ſmall Iland, with a bridge over it to the continent. In the midſt alſo of the towne lyes a ſtrong Caſtle. Triſt is a Sea-haven, not farre from Capo d'Iſtria.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF MILLAINE

THis part of Italy, which is now called Lombardie is a braue and a moſt pleaſant Countrie, as well in regard of the gallant townes as for the fragrant fieldes, and Meddowes that are in it, & therefore is rightly ſtiled the Garden of Italy.

Ancient names. This Lombardy was knowne to the ancient Romans by the name of Gallia Ciſalpina: Gallia as being then inhabited by the Gaules: Ciſalpina, becauſe it lay on this ſide of the Alpes. It was alſo called Gallia Comata, becauſe of the long haire of their heads: and Longobardia from the long haire of Deviſion. the peoples beards. It is now devided by the river Po in Ciſpadanam and Tranſpadanam. The Tranſpadana, or that part, which lieth beyond the Po comprehendeth the Dutchies of Milan, Mantua, Parma, and the Seigneurie of Venice. The Dukedome of Millaine belon-

Bounds. geth to the Crowne of Spagne, & lieth on both ſides of the Po: in ſo much, that it is counted the greateſt & the beſt part of Lombardy. For on the North ſide it lyeth by Lago Maggiore next the Swiſſers, not farre from Binzo upon the river Teſin, as alſo ſome other townes ſeated neere this Lago Maggiore, with that tract alſo which lieth round about Lago Lugano. Neere the beginning of Lago Como it hath the Griſons bordering upon it. On the Weſt beyond Atheſis and Saſia it hath Piedmont, Montferrate, and the Countie of Vercelli. On the Eaſt it hath Bergamo lying along the river of Adiva belonging to the Venetians, from the towne of Lecco to Trezzus, and along Brekia from Coro to the Calvatones, where the river Ollio runneth betweene them, alſo on the Mantuan, and Sablonitan Territoire. On the South it ſhooteth out to the Dukedome of Parma, namely from Great Caſal to Arena, and from Arena to Bobium, the river Po running betweene them: under theſe one might note and include Genua, and the other imperiall fee ſimples.

Millaine. The Metropolis of this Dukedome is Mediolanum, Milano or Millaine. It is verely thought, that this citie was firſt founded by the Gaules, then called Inſubres, who under the conduct of the King of the Celti, called Belloveſus, having marched into Italy, chaſed away the Tuſcans, and built here this towne. It is very certaine alſo that it is a very ancient towne: Iſaac Caſaubon ſaith in his expoſition upon the fourth booke of Strabo, that it was ſo called from a Gallike towne named Mediolanum, which lay in Zantoigne.

The derivation of the name. The derivation of this name cometh from a high Dutch word, as ſome imagine, namely from Meyland, becauſe of the pleaſant, & greene meddowes wherewith this Countrie is decked in the month of May. Others from the word Midland, becauſe it is ſeated in the center & heart of Inſubria, environed round about with the river Tiſni, & a third opinion is from Maeghdeland or Maids-land, becauſe the Goddeſſe Minerva hath a Temple in it.

Millaine is accounted one of the greateſt, richeſt, and gallanteſt Cities of Europe, for there is great commerce and trading in it, many Sumptuous buildings, ſtately Churches, a ſtrong Citadell; a fine Arſenall, and a Magaſin for amunition. It hath large Suburbs, whereof ſome part of them are walled and moated, which for greatneſſe may be likened to ſome townes: And is ſo plentifully furniſhed with all kind of proviſions, that they haue a common proverbe Solo in Milano ſi mangia. It is a citie very populous, containing 200000. perſons, & of great trade, ſo that they haue an other proverbe: Chi voleſſe raſſetiare Italia, ravinarebbe Milano, here being private ſhopps, equalling the publike Store-houſes of other places, where the people are ſo rich, that the wife of euery Mechanicke will flaunt it out in her ſilkes, and taffaties. It is ſeuen miles in Circuit. There lieth alſo in it a Citadell called Porta Iovia ſo ſtrongly fortifyed, with naturall and artificiall Ramparts, that it is deemed impregnable. Franciſcus Scottus Iter. Italic. lib. 1. writeth at large of all theſe thinges. There haue bene found alſo in this city many monuments & inſcriptions of the ancients and diverſe antiquaries. Their Vniverſity is very ancient, wherein it is thought Virgill ſtudied. Here Aurelius Auguſtinus (as they ſay) was Profeſſour of Eloquence, who maketh often mention thereof. Here flouriſhed Hermolaus Barbarus, Cœlius Rhodiginus, and Cardanus. Here (ſome report alſo) that Saint Barnabie thaught Divinity, and that S. Ambroſe was Biſhop of it. Here alſo were borne the Emperours Didius Iulianus, & Maximianus Herculeus and alſo many Popes. It is honoured with the dignity of an Archiepiſcopall Seate, the firſt primate whereof was Barnabas the Colega, or the Fellow-brother of the Apoſtle Saint Paul.

Millaine was for a longe time under the commaund of the Gaules, & by the conduct of Marcus Marcellus Cos. (who ſubdued the Inſubres) came under the Romane ſubjection, the Emperours, and Generalls making this city their Sedem Belli, againſt the Gaules and Germans, as appeared by the warrs of Iulius Cæſar, Nerva, Trajanus (that built in it the Royall Court now called the Palace) Adrianus Maximinianus and others: For when the Romane Empire began to decline, then the Emperours & Generalls began to take great delight in it, and did mightely enlarge it, ſo that Procopius writeth, this City next to Rome was accounted the greateſt, moſt populous, richeſt and mightieſt. But the power of the Romans being broken & rent, Millaine by the furie of the Barbarians, as the Gothes, Hunnes, & Lõgobards, was deſtroyed & made deſolate. Afterward by the magnanimity, and conduct of Charles the Great, being expulſed out of Italy, they putt themſelues under the French Crowne, & then came under the Emperours of Germany; whereof many of them, according to the rites, and ſolemnities of the Empire, were here crowned with an yron crowne that hung in S. Ambroſe Church. Finally, this towne (as Munſter ſaith) continued an Imperiall towne after the overthrow of the Lombards, till the time of Fredericke Barbaroſſa 1161. from whoſe obedience, in behalfe of Pope Alexander the Third it revolted: the Emperour diverſe times deſtroying the city, and the people thereof ſtill miniſtring freſh occaſion. Beatrix the Emperours wife coming to ſee the towne, was by the irreverend people firſt priſoned, and then moſt barbarouſly handled. For they ſet her upon a Mule with her face towards the taill, which ſhee was compelled to take in her hand in ſtead of a bridle, & when they had thus ſhowne her to all the towne, they brought her to a Gate, and kickt her out. To revenge this wronge the Emperour beſieged and forced the towne, and adjudged all the people to dye, ſaue ſuch as would un-dergoe this ranſome: Betweene the buttocks of a ſkittiſh Mule a bunch of figgs was faſtned, & ſuch as woúld liue muſt with their hands bound behinde them runne after the Mule; till with their teeth they had ſnatcht out one, or more of the figgs. This condition, beſides many a ſound kicke, was by moſt accepted, & performed, ſince which time the Italians, when they intend to ſchoffe or diſgrace one, uſe to putt their thumbe betweene two of their fingers, & ſay Ecco la fico, which is counted a diſgrace anſwerable to our Engliſh cuſtome of making hornes to that man, whom we ſuſpect to be a Cockold. Afterward this city againe rebelled, & was by the ſame Emperour level'd with the ground, the walls pulled downe, and all the platforme of the city plowed up, and ſowne with Salt: that being the Embleme of a towne never in poſſibility to be reedified: yet after this Millaine was rebuilt, & the Pope by the Millanois, and Venetians had the better of the Emperour. At this time the people ſeing the Emperour troubled with warre, begann a Common wealth which continued about 56. yeares, when the Veſconti a potent family uſurped the dominion. The firſt which tooke upon him this authority, was Otho, who being alſo Lord of Angerena ſurnamed himſelfe Viſconti, quaſi bis Comes. The firſt of this family, which obtained the title of Duke was Iohn called Galeazo, becauſe at his birth the cocks crew more then was ordinary, who for this dignity paid to the Emperour VVenceſlaus 100000. Crownes. Afterward the Dukes of Sforza with the conſent of the citizens, and the Romane Emperour gouverned it, and being elected obtained more then euer the Galeazes had.

Their iſſue failing, the Emperour Charles the Fifth ſucceeded them, who annexed this Dukedome to the Crowne of Spaine. That is memorable which Suidas writteth of Attila, that having gained a great victory & coming into this city after he had wonn the towne found in it a picture, wherein the Romane Emperours and Generalls were pictured ſitting upon golden thrones, under whoſe feet the dead karkeſies of the Scithians lay: who ſeing it, commaunded them to picture him alſo upon a golden throne, & the Romane Princes under him with ſacks on their ſhoulders, powring downe gold at his feete. All ſentences of pleas, aſwell Civell as Criminall are here pronounced by the Senatours of Millaine with whom are joyned 16. Councellours at lawe, ſome of the clergie and the choiſeſt men of the Citty. The Countrie round about it is very fruitfull abounding in all things.

Cremona. Cremona is a very ancient tovvne, built in the firſt yeare of the ſecond Punicke vvarre, and vvas burnt to the ground by Veſpaſians ſouldiers, after the defeate of Vitellius his forces, vvhich overthrovv vvas given under the vvalls of this tovvne. For vvhen Antonius Veſpaſians Generall, after his victorie firſt entred into it, he vvent into a bath to vvaſh avvay the ſvveat and blood from his body, vvhere finding the vvater ſome vvhat too cold, he ſaid by chance, that it ſhould anon be made hotter, vvhich vvords the Souldiers applying to their greedie deſires, ſet fire on the tovvne, and ſpent foure dayes in the ſacking of it. By the encouragement of Veſpaſian it vvas againe reedifyed. It lieth ſo upon the Po, that it often ſuſtaineth much dammage by high floods. The Streets are large and broad, the houſes ſtately built, vvith a very ſtrong Caſtle, and a high tovver, vvhich may be accounted one of the vvonders of Europe, built Anno 1284. from vvhich grevv the byvvord: Vna Turris in Cremona, unus Petrus in Roma, unus Portus in Ancona. In the yeare 537. vvhen T. Sempronius, and P. Cornelius vvere Conſuls it vvas made a Colonie to hinder Annibals invaſion into Italy.

Aftervvard this citie vvas miſerably deſtroyed by the Gothes & likevviſe by the Lombards vvas almoſt turned upſide dovvne Anno 630. Then having continued a vvhile under the Italian Kings, at laſt follovving the exemple of other tovvnes purchaſed her ovvne freedome & came under the cõmaund of Rome. The inteſtine vvarre riſing betvveene the Guelphi and the Gebellini, ſhe loſt her priſcan glorie and liberty by degrees: finally comming firſt under the povver of the Galeazes, and then under the Sforzaes, vvas at laſt taken in by Levves the Tvvelfth, and by capitulations of peace delivered over to the Venetians, vvho having gouverned over it ten yeares, the French gott it againe into their hands. Then they being beaten out of Italy, it came under the Dominion of the Sforces, & aftervvard under the King of Spaine. This city vvas called Fida for the Loyaltie, vvhich her citizens bore to their Princes. It is an Epiſcopall Seate, and hath bred many excellent men, as Euſebius S. Ieroms Diſciple, the Biſhop of Placenzia, VVillielmus the Generall of the Sodalitie of the Eremits, and Biſhop of Navarre Franciſcus Regatus, Biſhop of Bergomo, Ioannes, and Martinus Boſiani. Alſo Richardus Malumbra, and Ieronimo Ponzonius, & Mr. Furius Bibaculus, and Quintilius tvvo ancient and famous Poets.

Neere the vvalls of it ſtood the Temple of Memphis, vvhich vvhen Vitellius deſtroyed this tovvne and conſumed it vvith fire, remained, as Tacitus vvitneſſeth, untoucht.

The Countrie about it is plaine, full of meddovves, paſtures, and fieldes, vvhere good ſtoore of Wheate, Barly and other Graine grovves, it yeeldeth alſo Wine and abundance of Flaxe. Fertility.

By Lago de Como lieth the litle, but a ſmall & a very rich tovvne of Como, vvhere there are very ingenious and induſtrious Burgeſſes. The vvalls of it vvhich lookes tovvards Millaine vvas built by Iohn Vicount and Archbiſhop of Millaine 1354. vvho alſo built the round tovver of the Caſtle. Iuſt as Cromona, ſo vvas it ruined and ſpoyled by the vvartes of the Romans, Gothes, Gaules, & Spaignards: but the greateſt miſery that euer it endured vvas by Ceſars Legions, becauſe they receiued into their tovvne the defeated and routed Gaules, vvhich had ſaued themſelues by flight. It is the birth place of Iovie of Benedictus, and of Paul Biſhop of Nocera, famous for their vvritings, as alſo for C. Plinius Secundus. For C. Plinius the hiſtoricall vvritter, of naturall things vvas of Verona, for his Siſter Plinia married C. Cecilie of Novocomo, from vvhich match came C. Plinius Secundus. Como.

Cloſſe by the river Ticinus lieth Pavia, or Papia, an Vniverſitie erected Anno 1361. by Charles the Fourth, and vvas united to Millaine by Iohn Galeaze the firſt Duke, famous for the battle, in vvhich Francis the Firſt vvas taken priſonner by Charles the Fifth 1525. The houſes are not very great, but are as neatly compacted together, as any be in all Italy: the ſtreets are faire and large and goe outright. Pavia.

The chiefeſt buildings are the tvvo Palaces built for the training up of youth, the one by Pope Pius the Fifth, the other by Cardinall Barronius. The Lombards held here their Court, vvhereby this place vvas mightely enriched: the many high Tovvers and Turrets in it, vvere firſt built by the Lombards. Pavia is famous for the Tombe and Sepulchre of that learned man Severinus Boetius.

Vpon the Po lieth alſo an other ſmall tovvne called Dertona, or Tertona built as ſome ſay by the Ligures, or Gaules. Firſt it vvas called Ancilia, & aftervvard Terdona from three gifts, vvhich vvas ſo named from three miracles that hapned in it. The firſt vvas a Stone, vvhich ſvveat out aboundance of Oyle: The ſecond vvas a Fountaine, vvhich every yeare upon the day of the Nativity of Iohn the Baptiſt guſhed and ſprong up: The third a loafe of bread, vvhich being cutt in ſhivers a vvhile before the death of a braue gentleman that liued in it, dropt blood. Plinie ſaith Dertona vvas a colonie of the Romans. It vvas vvholy deſtroyed by Fredericke Ahenobarbus, and built up againe by the Millanois at the foote of a hill. Vpon the ſaid hill ſtandeth Saint Maries Church, vvhich is very ancient. It is an Epiſcopall Seate, famous for D. Martianus, vvho liued in it. The ſoile about it is very fruitfull and yeelds much Wheate, Barly, Wine, and other fruits. Dertona.

The noble families and beſt houſes are the Guidoboni, Cavalchini, Buſſeti, Montemerli, Cróßi, Gentili, Rebrocchi, Malpaſſuti, Vicardi, Calvini & ſome others.

Novara, vvhich Tacitus calleth Novaria lieth upon a high Site, and vvas longe under the Dukedome of Millaine, but aftervvard came under thoſe of Thurin, the Vicounts Sforzias, the King of France, and at laſt under Charles the Fifth and his Succeſſours, and novv this tovvne upon certaine conditions vvas ſubject to the Prince of Parma. The ancient houſes are the Tornielli, Caballatii, and the Bruſatii, by vvhoſe inteſtine broiles Novara vvas miſerably tormented and plagued. In the yeare 1500. vvhen Ludovicus Sforza Duke of Millaine vvas kept priſonner in the Caſtle by the Svvitzers, it vvas ſould and delivered over to Gallus. Albutius Silo a famous Oratour vvas borne in this tovvne, alſo Peter Lombard, Biſhop of Lyons renovvned for his ſentences: Iohannes Maria Cataneus an excellent Poet, beſides diverſe others. The Countrie in ſome places is levell and fruitfull, but in others hilly and barren. Novara.

Within the Dutchie of Millan lieth Lodi and Alexandria novv a tovvne of great ſtrenght, but formerly a poore village named Roboretum. The nevv name and greatneſſe muſt be aſcribed to the often overthrovves of Millaine by Fredericke Barbaroſſa, the people vvhereof at the ſeuerall deſtructions of their citty, retired to this tovvne, calling it ſo for Pope Alexander the thirds ſake, vvhoſe part they then tooke againſt the Emperour, and gott this nevv name: it lieth cloſſe upon the river Tanar diſtant ſome ſeven Italian Miles from Tertana. Alexandria.

The Dukedome of Millaine is in compaſſe about 300. Italian miles, it is reported the King of Spaine at this day exhauſts out of it 80. thouſand Crovvnes. And thus much for the Dutchie of Millaine. Greatneſſe.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE PRINCIPATE OF PIEDMONT.

The originall name.

THE Princedome of Piedmondt, or Regio Pedemontana, is so called becauſe it is a Countrie ſeated at the foote of the Mountaines, namely in the beginning of thoſe Alpes, which part France and Italy one from an other, and was named the old Taurini Regio, from thoſe people which inhabited in it. This nation Livius, Polybius, & others often mention in their writings; eſpecially Plinie placeth them in the ninth territoire of Italy, and counts it among the Ligurian tribes.

Ancient Inhabitants.

Since which time, this region was afterward made a Province, by the Longo-bards, and having elected a Duke called it the Dukedome of Taurin. Livie in relating Hannibals invaſion into Italy, ſpeaketh much of theſe Taurini, as alſo Plutarke in the life of Hannibal.

Bounds.

This Countrie is bounded on the East with Millaine, and Montferrate, on the South with the Seigneurie of Genoa, on the West with Provence and Daulphine, and on the North frountreth upon the borders of Savoy, Svvitzerland, and Millaine.

It is generally held that in Italy no Countrie can putt it downe, either in regard of the fertility thereof, or for the many pleaſant and fruitfull hills wherewith it is adorned. It beareth all kinde of Graine, moſt delicate fruits, and curious Wines, which they in abundance tranſport out of this region into the neighbouring Countries: beſides they haue great ſtore of Cheeſe, Butter, Rice, Hempe, Silke, and ſuch like proviſions with diverſe ſorts of Mettals. The fruitfulneſſe hereof may appeare herein, that in the time of twentie yeares warres, betweene the French and the Spaniards, for all their armies lay in it and eate it up, yet was there no want of Victualls and Proviſions. Likewiſe notwithſtanding the warrs of Duke Charles Emanueli, cauſed by reaſon of the Reformed Religion brought into France and his Countrie, yet this Principate of Piedmont in a few yeares contributed to the maintenance of them aboue eleuen millions of Ducats. To paſſe over in ſilence alſo the late warres in which this Countrie payd to his owne Lord, as likewiſe to the King of France an unſpeakeable maſſe of money.

This Countrie as it is fruitfull, ſo was it populous, and exceeding well peopled: for whereſoeuer they ſettled themſelues in it they found very commodious ſituations and dwellings. And though the townes be not very many and great; yet there are in it aboue 150. places walled, which are ſo populous, that once a Piedemontane Gentleman, being aſked of the extent of his Countrie, ſaid, that it was a Citty of 300. miles in compaſſe. It comprehendeth alſo beſides Lordſhips and Barronies, 52. Earledomes and 15. Marquiſates, & 20. great Abbeyes. It is devided betweene the Dukes of Savoy, and Mantua: the river Tener or Tanarus, parting their poſſeſſions. This Countrie is parted into eight Biſhopricks, namely, the Epiſcopates of Vercelli, Aſti, Oſta, Turino, Mondovi, Foſſano and that of Saluzzo.

52. Earledomes, 15. Marquiſates & 20. Abbeyes.

Rivers.

The chiefeſt rivers, which water this Countrie, are the Po, Stura, Tanarus, Duria, and aboue 28. others, beſides great and ſmall. The Po ſpringeth out of the Marquiſate of Saluzzo, from under the Mount Voſo, and after he hath turned towards the North, and paſſed by Turin, windeth againe Eaſtward, and traverſeth through the Marquiſate of Montferrate. The Stura guſheth out of the Ligurian Mountaines, which ly on the Southſide of this Countrie, and borders upon the Seigneurie of Genoa, and beneath Alexandria falleth into the Poo. Vnder the name of Duria, or Doria are underſtood two rivers both of them comming out of the Alpes, and diſcharge themſelues into the Poo. Duria Bathea haſteth from the North to the Southward and cloſſe by Creſcentio runneth into the Po. Duria Riparta riſeth up not farre from the head of the river Druentia, which winding towards the Weſt falleth into the Rhoane. But Duria which runneth Eaſtward, and watereth the valley of Suza beneath Turino diſburdeneth himſelfe into the Po.

Townes.

Taurin or Turin.

The principall towne of this whole countrie is Taurin called of old Auguſta Taurinorum, becauſe it was the mother towne of the Taurini, not onely mentioned in ancient hiſtories; but alſo in regard it is the reſidence and Court of the Dukes of Savoy at this day. Stephanus the Grammarian thinketh, that it tooke this name from Taurus a bull, which the Maſſilienſes giue for their armes, whoſe Colonie was quartered in this towne. It was in former ages larger, but now is leſſer and narrower, but compacted well together, & if it had continued ſo large it could not haue bene ſo well fortified. It is ſeated juſt in that place, where the Duria and the Po meete together, and is built in a quadrant forme with many fine Turrets, and Gates, and is adorned with ſtately houſes, and ſumptuous buildings, where in the Noblemen and the chiefe Citizens dwell, furniſhed alſo with abundance of all neceſſarie proviſions. Emanuell Philibert Duke of Savoy built in it a braue Caſtle, with fiue points, and Charles Emanuell, who dyed of late yeares embelliſhed it with a fine garden like a Paradice and a Parke into which he putt all kinde of Deere, to take his pleaſure and delight in hunting. The principall Church is dedicated to Saint Iohn, beſides which there are 20. more; having in it alſo a moſt magnificent and princely Palace, being alſo the Archbiſhops Seate, and the Vniverſity, wherein the renowned Schollar Eraſmus of Rotterdam proceeded Doctor of Divinity. In this City (as it is reported) was ſett up the firſt printing houſe in all Italy: not farre from this towne alſo are Yron mines & Stone quarries, out of which they digg Marble. Vpon a ſmall hill not farre from it lyeth the populous ſmall towne of Rivoli, where Duke Charles Emanuell was borne.

Avigliano. Avigliano hath a ſtrong Caſtle, which oftentimes hath hindred and ſtopt the French incurſions. Carignano held out a long and a hard ſiege. The towne of Suza from whēce the Vale of Suza, borroweth its name lieth at the foote of Mount Cenis, and is held to be Plinies Seguſium, ſeated in a very convenient place, where there are two wayes, which goe into France, the one through the Alpes, and the Svvart Mountaines, the other through Savoy. This towne in the laſt French warres, when the Duke ſided with the King of Spagne, was taken from him and fortified exceedingly. The ſoile hereabouts yeeldeth much Wine, and in regard of the abundance of excellent honey, it hath gott the name of Mella Suſina. Pinarolo, lyeth not farre from Suſa, having a mighty ſtrong Caſtle, which was held invincible & commaundeth the Countrie round about it, taken in alſo by the French with fine hills bearing Vines and Grapes, ſo that it never wants any Wine. Here they make much fine linnen cloath. Briqueraſco is 16. miles from Turin lying a litle beneath Lucerna ſeated in a very fruitfull place. Cavor lieth on the river Pella. Saluzzo ſtandeth upon a pleaſant height under the Alpes, and is the chiefe towne of the whole Marquiſate, where the head of the Poo beginneth, and though it be no great towne, yet it lies in a good aire, having many fine Farmes, Paſtures and pleaſant Fieldes round about it, wherein growes abundance of excellent fruits, and is much commendeth alſo for their fine Inns, Lodgins and the entertayning of Strangers, and Travellers. The other townes in this Marquiſate are Dronero & Carmagnola, the people hereof driue a great trade with the French in Provence; for which cauſe many Marchants dwell here, to buy cattell and to deale in yron workes.

Carignano. Suza. Fertility. Pinarolo. Briqueraſco. Cavor. Saluzzo.

Mondoni. Mondoni (or Mons Regulis) as many thinke, was firſt founded by the Emperour Conrade, is ſeated upon a reaſonnable high hill, betweene the rivers Ella and Tanaro. It is thought to be the moſt populous towne in Piemont. The reaſon is becauſe of the incredible fruitfulneſſe of the circumjacent Countrie, which partly riſeth with hills, and is partly enterlaced with ſweete plaines, which lie here and there betweene the hills & mountaines: the hills are loaden with pleaſant Vines, which beares huge bunches of grapes that cheeres the hearts of the Inhabitants euery yeare. The Dales yeeld all kinde of delicate fruits, and excellent Corne, and abundance of Cheſtnutts. The Inhabitans are of a ſhort ſtature, high minded, faſtfiſted, and boaſt much of their gentrie. It hath two Suburbs, the one called Vico, in which the laſt deceaſed Duke built a fine Church, and called it Sancta Virgina, and a Chappell in it, wherein the Dukes which ſhall dye here after are to be entombed & buried. Here the Inhabitants having digged deepe into the ground diſcouvered many veines of blacke Marble, with traces of Mettall Stones mingled amonge them.

Foſſan. Foſſan was made by the Duke an Epiſcopall Seate & lieth upon a Steepe hill, under which runneth the river Stura. The whole ſoile round about it, is exceeding fruitfull, and yeeldeth ſo much Graine, that they reape euery yeare aboue a hundred thouſand quarters of Corne, being moiſtred with fine ſprings and brookes, alſo it hath good Paſtures, and Meddowes wherein a great many Cattel & Neate feed. Amonge the faire edifices it hath a gallant Caſtle. Beneath Coni. Foſſan betweene the rivers of Stura and Gieſſo lies Coni, whoſe Inhabitants by their labour & induſtrie make that ſtonie and barren ground fruitfull; by reaſon of the many channels, and ditches which they haue ledd through it. Here growes an infinite number of Cheſtnutts, betweene which trees they ſowe ſeedes, which returnes them a double encreaſe. Vine-hills and Paſtures, they want not. The people are giuen to labour & tillage, having likewiſe carryed themſelues brauely and couragiouſly, during the time of three ſieges.

Vnder Foſſan we muſt likewiſe reckon Aſti, which is reaſonably well fortified, with a Wall and a Moate. Aſti. There are other leſſer townes in Lombardy which for brevitie we will paſſer over. The whole Countrie is watered with many pleaſant rivers and brookes, there are alſo in it many braue woods & thick groues, wherein are good ſtore of Deere of all kinde, and here and there the Countrie riſeth with pretty hills, pleaſant, and fruitfull Dales, where there is abundance of honey, whereof they make great gaine, beſides diverſe other commodities neceſſary for the uſe of man. The Inhabitants of this Country haue formerly bene ſo animous that they haue wagged warre with Montferrate and their Confederates, and oftentimes gott the better of them: Betweene Mondoni and Aſti lieth Cheraſco, beneath which the confluence of the rivers of Stura and Tanaro meete, it hath broad ſtreets, fine houſes, and is well fortified having a healthfull aire, and warlike people. Not farre from thence is Polentia neere unto which Aldaricus the Vice-Roy of the Goths defeated Stilicon, and after that he had deſtroyed Polentia marched towards Rome. Vercelli is a very ancient towne (and in former times was the Capitall City of the Lybici) lying upon the Seſſi, and is inhabited by braue people, who bragg much of their nobility. The bread which they bake there, is exceeding good and white, and here haue ye alſo large & fatt Capons. Leo the Tenth held here a Councill againſt Berengarius. Plinie ſaith that here abouts had wont to be found gold-mines, the markes whereof are ſeene by Ponderano, which is thought was ſo called from Auro Ponderano. Ouer againſt Vercelli lieth Inurea, which the ancients called Eporidia, and the Natiues at this day Lamporreggio. This was the chiefe towne of the Salaſſi, and the territoire of the Canabeſii ſo named from Cannabe or Kempe. It lieth upon the entrance of the Dale Auguſta upon the river Duria, which runneth through the midſt of it, and hath a ſtronge Caſtle with exceeding high Bulwarkes in it. Oſta was the Capitall towne of Val di Oſta, named by the ancients Auguſta Prætoria, after Auguſtus Cæſar, and lieth in the Northerne bounds of this Country, under the Gray and Pennine Alpes, called the great, and the litle mounts of Saint Bernard. This towne hath many antiquaries and monuments, by which is evidently ſeene the antiquity of it. This Dalie is ſo long, that it is counted two dayes journey to goe through it, and hath ſo many villages in it ſtanding ſo neere and cloſſe together, as if they were but one towne. The left ſide of this Dale is ſowne with Corne, whereof euery yeare they reape abundance. The right ſide is full of vine-Fields, which yeelds them yearely much Wine. The County Nizza lieth upon a lake by the river Varo, which parts Italy and France aſſunder. It is a barren and hillie Country. The towne of Villa Franca hath an excellent Haven, which the Ancients called Herculis Monaci Portum.

The French challeng this Countrie of Piedmont to be theirs, and ſay it belongs to Provence, and was uniuſtly taken in by Iohannes Anno 1363. Alſo they pretend a great part of Aſti which was giuen to the Families of Orleans, as a dowrie with Valentia. The Marquiſate of Saluzzes (as they ſay) belongs to Daulphine. Theſe pretences haue cauſed great troubles and & warres, where by this Countrie hath ſuſtained and endured incredible loſſe, and dammage.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF MONTFERRAT.

Name.

IN Lombardy, alonge the Po, or in Lombardia Cispadana, lyeth the pleasant, and delightfull Countrie of the territoire of Montferrat, called so either a Monte Feraci from the fertility of the mountaines in it, or a Monte Ferrato of some mountaines here stored with yrō: for as yron surpasseth all mettals in solidity, & hardnesse:

Fertility. so this Countrie excelleth all others in fruitfull encrease, especially in delicate Wines, which are made there abouts. The Emperour Otho the Second, made formerly seuen Marquisses ouer this countrie, namely the Marquisses of Montferrat, of Cera, of Ponçion, of Buschi, of Salutia, of Savona and of Finarium. The first were the seuen Sonnes of Aleranus King of the Saxons. Anno 1529. it was united to Mantua, by the mariage of Duke Frederick with the Daughter and heire of Gulielmus Palæologus, which house gouverned this Marquisate, till the yeare 1534. in which time Saint Georgius Palæologus dying without issue, Charles the Fifth gaue this Marquisate of Montferrat, to Fredericke Gonzaga, who was created Duke by him Anno 1524.

Merula in his 6. booke of the description of Montferrat, touching the antiquitie of the Vice-comites speaketh thus: It is a montainous Countrie, exceeding pleasant and fruitfull, full of inhabitants and husbandmen. It

Bounds. beginneth almost a daies journey from the Alpes, and is separated from the Alpes by it selfe, & a levell Countrie lying betweene the Alpes, ye shall not see a patch of ground in it, but is manured; for it lies in a most fruitfull, and a fatt soile. On the left side of it runneth the river Tanarus, and on the right side it is watered

Townes. with the river Po. No river runneth out of the countrie: the higher lands, and those which lie furthest from the rivers side, are the fruitfullest, & most pleasant, so that this countrie maye truely be called Mesopotamia, for it is shutt in on both sides with rivers. Not

Bassignana. farre from the mouth of Tanarus lieth Bassignana. In former times there was a bridge here over the Tanar, where John of Medices Cardinall of Florence, and Legate of Bononia, who afterward was called Pope Leo the Tenth was taken prisoner in a bloodie battel, fought by the French Anno 1512. and was carryed prisoner into France. And being released and set a liberty out of the power of the French, came againe to Bononia, from whence he was sent as a Legate: then followes the ancient townes of Valence, then Pomaro with

Pomaro. Alba. a Castle standing upon a hill. Alba once called Alba Pompeia, where Pertinax the Roman Emperour was borne, who being of base and obscure parents, was after the death of Commodus (slaine by Letus and Electus) called to the Empire. But being overzealous to reforme the corruptions of the State, he was by the Pretorian souldiers (loathing now the Princes for their vertues, as much as formerly for their vices) barbarously murdred, and the Imperiall dignity sold unto Casal S. Vas. Iulianus for 25. Sestertiums the man. Casal S. Vas of late yeares was besieged, and taken in by Marquesse Spinola, as also Frasinetto. Casal was heretofore a Bishopricke, but was bereft of this dignity by Pope Sixtus the Fourth Anno 1474. The Marquises of Montferrat held there their court and residencie. There are two Castles in it, in which the Marquises formerly dwelt. Also there is an other which heretofore was built by Vincent Gonzaga Duke of Mantua, and of Montferrat, which is exceeding strong, and well fortified; bearing the name now of a Cita Della. In it were borne the famous Cardinalls Otho, descendeth from the blood Royall of Aleramus, and Theodorus Palæologus, also Bernardus Comanus, who was the first Bishop of Casal, also Georgius Cacatoxicus an excellent Divine, and a Philosopher with diverse others. Besides Bassignana, upon the hills to the Southward lie some other townes, and villages, amonge which are these, called Monte Castello, Pavon, S. Salvatore, which hath a strong Castle, Gerella, Suizan, Castelletto, Lugo, Monte Magno, &c. As ye goe from Casal to the side of the Po, ye shall come to Ponte de Stura, Camino, Gabino, and other townes. Vpon the Confluence of the two rivers of Bormia and Tanarus lieth Alessandria della Paglia, so named after Pope Alexander the Third, having the surname Della Paglia, because (as some beleeue) he that was chosen Emperour, was to receiue there a Crowne of Straw, but this is thought to be a fable. This towne is seated betweene two rivers, namely the Tanar, which separateth a part of the Suburbs from the city it selfe, and the river Bormia in a very pleasant place. The Inhabitants thereof are able men, and sharpe witted. The Vicounts had for a longe time the rule and Gouvernment of this place, after them succeeded the Sforza's, and then the Kings of France ruled over it, as longe as they had commaund over Millaine.

Alessandria.

Beyond the Tanar lieth Borgolium, which is a peece of the Suburbs of Alessandria, called so from the village of Bergo, which lies not farre from it; there had wont to dwell in it the Gilders, you must goe over a bridge into the Suburbs, and being passed over the river Bormia, on your left hand, as you travell upwards, you shall see standing by the river side, the fine towne of Bosco, which formerly gaue denomination to the Marquisate. Here Bartholmew Bergoma Generall of the Millanois Army, overthrew the French, and routed them. A litle higher betweene Bormia and Burda lieth Incisa, where ye may see Ptolomies Liburnum.

Borgolium. Bosco. Incisa.

Two miles from Alessandria lieth Maricorum, whose Inhabitants in former times fleeted to Alessandria, as also from an other village called Forum, where now there is scarcely a mā dwells, they were formerly built in the same manner as Alessandria was, & were strong, commodious, and very populous. The ruines of their Churches are yet to be seene, with braue floores, and stately free stone walls, marble tables, & monuments with Epitaths written upon them. Besides all these things, the ancient customes of the inhabitants and solemnities of these places shew evidently the antiquitie of them, as also their language and speech: for they haue yet in use many of the ancient words of the Romans, as Strena, Toga, Prosa, and others. There lieth also Nicæa, Asta, a famous, rich, a fine and a fruitfull towne, where they haue abundance of Corne, &

Wine. The Patron of this towne was D. Secundus: in memorie of whome, they haue this inſcription upon their towne ſeale, Aſta nitet mundo,

Sancto cuſtode Secundo. That is,

Aſta is a galland tovvne of fame,
Garded by Saint Secundus his name.

This towne was firſt gouverned by Vicounts, and afterward by the Millanois, till it was giuen as a dowrie by Iohn Galeazo the firſt Duke of Millaine, with his Daughter Valentina to Duke Aurelian, who was a French man. The French then ruled ouer it till the yeare 1529. when a peace was made and concluded at Cambray, betweene Francis the Firſt, the French King & the Emperour Charles the Fifth, who had it ſurrendred ouer to him, who gaue it to his kinſman the Duke of Savoy, and after the death of Duke Charles, Emanuell Philibert his Sonne enjoyed it. Beſides, here lieth Rivulus Francorum Guarnaum, Polentia, now called Palanza, and that by reaſon of the goodneſſe of the naturall readneſſe of the ſheepe ſkinnes, or from the ſtrenght of it, being ſo ſtrongly ſeated on the left ſide of the Tanar, that Claudianus ſpeaketh thus of it:

—Nec plus Pollentia rebus
Contulit Auſoniis: aut mœnia vindicis Aſtæ.

Palanza. There are yet ſome monuments left of Palanza. The wool of Palanze is much commended by Martiall in theſe wordes,

Non eſt lana mihi mendax, nec tingor aheno:
Si placeant Tyriæ, me mea tinxit ovis. That is,

My vvool needes not to be dyed in red
For my ſheepe are ſo, vvhere they are bred.

Acqui. Here lieth alſo Acqui, the antiquitie whereof is well knowne by the ruines of its braue walls. This towne in times paſt was very populous; but now by reaſon of the inteſtine diſcords and diſſentions of her Burgeſſes, lies deſolate, and is almoſt come to nothing. Antoninus called this towne ſimply Aquæ, from the ſprings and Fountaines, which are in it, for the waters thereof haue a healing kinde of vertue in them, for in this towne are publike Bathes, made with walls & ſtares to goe downe into them. That is remarkable which Burſellius ſpeaketh thereof, that in the hott waters of theſe Bathes, there growes alſo phyſicall herbes. They giue for their armes an Eagle, tearing a hare in peeces with her talents.

Beſtano. Cortemiglia. Cairo. Mont-Regall. A litle higher lie Beſtano, Cortemiglia, Cairo, and Mont-Regall, a fine towne in Savoy, ſeated upon the top of a hill, and is aſwel by nature, as by art exceeding well fortified.

Chieri. On the Alpes, betweene Geneve and Acqui, are many fine Caſtles. On the other ſide upon the borders of Piedmont lieth Chieri, a towne heretofore very populous, but now by reaſon of the warres, betweene Charles the Fifth & the French King Francis the Firſt, it lies ruined, and deſolate. Cloſſe by it is Villa Nova, Poirino, Rovigliaſco, and Carmagnuola a gallant towne, being the birth place of that braue and vaillant Captaine Franciſcus Buxonius: not farre from thence alſo is Carmania, Foſſania, and neere the Poo Caſſale, Craſſum, Polonciaria, Reconiocum, Moreta, Rana, and a litle further Savilianum.

Guilielmus the Second Duke of Montferrat, who went with the Emperour Conrade the Third, and Lewes the yong French King into Syria, and left for his Succeſſour

Guilielmus the Third, Marqueſſe of Montferrat, he eſpouſed Sybilla, the Daughter of Baulduin the Fourth King of Ieruſalem, by whome he had one onely Sonne, namely Guilielmus the Fourth, King of Ieruſalem, and Marqueſſe of Montferrat: he dyed without iſſue.

Reynier the Sonne of Guilielmus the Second, the Vncle of Guilielmus the Fourth King of Ieruſalem, he after the deceaſe of his Nephew Guilielmus the Fourth, married the Daughter, and heire of Emanuel Emperour of Conſtantinople, by whome he had

Bonifacius the Third Marqueſſe of Montferrat: he begate of the Daughter of the Duke of Savoy

Bonifacius the Fourth Marqueſſe of Montferrat, and procreated by his eſpouſe Beatrice the Daughter of the King of Caſtile.

Iohannes Marqueſſe of Montferrat, dying without heires, left his Marquiſate to Theodoricke Palæologus, borne of his Grandmother Iordana, the Daughter of VVilliam the Second & Siſter to VVilliam the Third, & Boniface the Second and to Reynier, married the Emperour of Conſtantinople, and her youngeſt Sonne called

Theodoricus Palæologus, after the diſceaſe of Iohn, Marqueſſe of Montferrat, the Sonne of Boniface the Fourth, was made Marqueſſe of Montferrat, who tooke in Aſte by force, and begate

Iohannes Palæologus Marqueſſe of Montferrat, who liued anno 1472. and made Caſall a Biſhoprick: he begate by the Daughter of the King of Maiorca, beſides Guilielmus Palæologus, who dyed without iſſue,

Theodoricus Palæologus Marqueſſe of Montferrat, who had by his Lady

Iacobus Palæologus Marqueſſe of Montferrat, who was choſen by the Emperour Sigiſmund Ambaſſadour for all Italy: he had iſſue by Ioane the Siſter of Amatus the firſt Duke of Savoy

Iacobus Palæologus the Second, Marqueſſe of Montferrat, who dyed without iſſue.

Boniface the Fifth Marqueſſe of Montferrat, marryed Marie the Daughter of Deſpotus Servia by whome he procreated

Guilielmus the Fifth Marqueſſe of Montferrat, who eſpouſed Anna the Daughter of Reynier Duke of Alanſon, who bare him

Boniface the Sixth, which brooke his neck from his horſe. After him ſucceeded his Vncle

Saint Georgius Palæologus, who ſhortly after dying alſo without heires, his eldeſt Siſter was inveſted in the Dutchie. She married Frederick Gonzaga the firſt Duke of Mantua, by which match, though the houſe of the Palæologuſes were mightely againſt, yet this Marquiſate fell into the lap of the Duke of Mantua. This marriage was graunted, becauſe that Iordana the Daughter of VVilliam the Second, obtayned the gouvernment, and was ſo made, that if the heire males failed, then the female kind ſhould ſucceede. At laſt this Marquiſate, and the Dukedome of Mantua, fell to the Duke of Nevers, who calling in the King of France, & the Seigneury of Venice, as his Allies, & Aſſiſtants to ſettle him in them, againſt the Emperour and the King of Spagne, who would haue kept him out of it, cauſed a bloodie warre, conducted on their ſide by their Generall Marqueſſe Spinola, who tooke in Caſal, as is aboue ſaid, but at laſt by the mediation and interceſſion of the Pope and ſome other great Lords, this warre was compoſed and ended upon certaine Capitulations.

The order of Knighthood in this Dukedome (according to Mr. Sledan) is of the blood of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, inſtitued Anno 1608. The authour of it was Duke Vincent Gonzaga, when the marriage was ſolemnized betweene his Sonne Francis, and the Lady Margaret Daughter to the Duke of Savoy. It conſiſteth of 20. knights, whereof the Mantuan Dukes are ſouveraignes. The collar hath threads of gold layd in a fire and interwoven with theſe words, Domine probaſti, to the collar are pendent two Angells ſupporting 3. drops of bloud and circumſcribed, Nihil iſto triſte recepto.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE STATE OF GENVA.

THE Commaund of Genua delineated in this Map, was once very great, and reached farre beyond Liguria, or Riviera di Genua, although it now cõprehended not that whole tract of Land under it: for to the Westward it went no further then to the Countie of Nicæa, and not to the river Varus, which are the utmoſt Confines and bounds of Liguria; but to the Eaſtward paſſeth beyond the river of Macra, wherein lieth the towne of Sarzana in Etruria, and other places, on the North it reacheth to the Appenine, & in ſome places further. It hath bordering upon it the principate of Piedmont, and the Dutchies of Montferrat & Millaine, with ſome other Domaines, & fee-ſimples belonging to the Empire.

Bounds.

This commaund heretofore extended farre, having Capha with the adjacent Countrie in Taurica Cherſoneſus belonging to it, alſo Pera in Thrace, a part of Tuſcany, Sardinia, Corſica, Leſbos, and many other Ilands diſperced in the Greeke Seas. They haue now nothing left them but Liguria, and Coriſca. Sardina was taken from them by the Arragonians, Capha and the Ilands by the Turkes, their Land in Tuſcany, by the great Duke, and their ſtrength at Sea brooken by the Venetians. They brought the Venetians once in ſo great an exigence, that the Senate of Venice ſent unto Peter Doria Captaine of the Genuan Navy, a blanke charter, to preſcribe them what conditions he would, & they would gladly except of them. Doria proud of his advãtage, would haue the Citty of Venice to uſe as he beſt pleaſed, where upon the Venetians growne deſperate, aſſaulted the ſecure Genoys, & tooke a hũdred of their Boates, and Galleis; after which loſſe, the men of Genua ſtill had the worſt, and were at laſt compelled, to ſubmit themſelues to the protection of the King of Naples, then to the French, then to the Duke of Millaine, & now to the Spaniſh, as being Lords of Millaine, and moſt able to helpe them. While they were under the Tuition of Millaine, their good Maſter Lodovvick Sforza exacted a great maſſe of Money of them. His Negotiator (as the tale goeth) was invited by a Genoys to dinner, and walking in the garden he ſhewed the Ambaſſadour the hearb Baſil, he gently ſtroaking it, ſmelt thence a ſweete ſavour, but ſtraining it hardly, as unſavorie a ſmell: where upon the Genoys inferred, S^r. if our Lord Duke Lodevvick will gently ſtroke the hand of his puiſſance over the Citie, it wil be pleaſing to him by obedience; but if he ſeeke to oppreſſe, it may chance to proue unſavory by rebellion.

Ancient Limits.

The firſt that repreſents it ſelfe to your view, on the Weſt ſide is Portus Herculis, Monæci lying by the Sea ſide, which is now called Monaco, in Greeke Μόνοικος, and that either by that reaſon that Hercules dwelt there, after he had chaſed away all the people, or becauſe that in his Temple no other Gods were adored or worſhipped with him, as they were in the Temples of Iupiter, Minerva and Iuno, and thoſe of Venus & Cupido. Leander thinkes it is the ſame haven, which lieth by Nicæa, called now Villa Franca.

Monaco.

Vintimiglio. Next it alonge the ſhore ſtands Vintimiglio, formerly called Albium Intemelium, once a braue towne, & is now a Biſhoprick, in the Senate houſe. Whereof are ſome Reliques of Saints, as S. Catharins and S. Blaſius Iawbones. S. Nicolas his finger, kept there with great devotion. Three miles from Vintimiglio lieth S. Remo, in a very pleaſant and a fruitfull place, where there is a pleine field, betweene the Sea and this towne which is not very great, but full of Citrons, Lemons, and Phyſicall hearbs, which makes a braue ſhowe. From hence the Citrons are tranſported into France, and other Countries, who returne no ſmall quantity of Corne for them into their owne Countrie. Betweene theſe Citron trees they haue ſett many Palme trees, whereof thoſe of the towne makes good gaine. Then yow ſhall ſee lying upon the Sea ſide, beſide ſome ſmaller townes Tabia, Portus Mauritii, Diana and Araza. The towne of Albium Ingaunum, now called Albenga lying upon the ſhore of the Ligurian Sea. This towne was named ſo from the Alpes, which were heretofore called Alpii, and now by the Inbitants Ingauni. It is a very ancient towne, ſeated in a plaine ſome fiue hundred paces from the Sea. It ſtands in a thicke, and in an unwholſome aire, cauſed by reaſon the people perhaps ſoake, & rott a great deale of hempe in their ditches, from whence this proverbe came: Albengana piana, ſe foſſe ſana, ſi demandarebbe Diana, howſoeuer, it is a rich towne, and furniſhed with all things. Next to it lies Finarium, now Finale, which is alſo a fine towne in Liguria, ſeated a litle further from the Sea ſide, having the title of a Marquiſate. Seuen miles from it lieth Naulum now Noli, a Biſhops Seate, & a fine haven with a beacon upon a hill looking into the Sea, which the Inhabitants call Cabo di Noli. This towne is ſome 5. thouſand paces from Vadi, or Vade, which place lieth 30. thouſand paces from Albinga, or Ingaunis. This towne was formerly called Sabbata, and gott the name of Vada, from the adjacent mooriſh grounds, that lie about it. Fiue miles from thence lieth Savona, a towne mentioned in Livie, is populous, well compacted, & adorned with fine houſes, eſpecially the Pallace, which Iulius Secundus Pope of Rome built in it, flouriſhing alſo in trading, and Commerce. This lieth upon the Ligurian Sea, & hath a very ſtrong haven, lined with huge piles of ſtones, to ſtopp the furie of the water, many braue ſhips may harbour themſelues in it, on the South ſide lieth a ſtronge Caſtle. Here were borne Georgius the VII. Sixtus the IV. & Iulius all three Popes, next unto it lie Vutro, Siſtris, which lie all upon the Sea Coaſt, & the famous village called Cornegliano renowned for the houſe of the Spinola's.

S. Remo. Albenga or Ingaunus. Finale. Noli. Vai. Savona.

Next followes the Metropolis of Liguria called Genua, ſome ſay founded by Ianus, who firſt dwelt in Italus, being as braue, as rich, and as mightie a towne, as any is in Italy ſaving Venice. Her ſituation is this: the firſt part lieth Southward ſhooting upward very large and wide in the forme of halfe moonds, and on the North ſide falls with a deſcent, leaning as it were upon the foote of the hills, which ſhelters it from the cold Northerne winds, it is neither very hillie, nor levell, being about ſome 4. thouſand paces in compaſſe. This City may truely be called the Gouverneſſe, and Lady of Liguria. For their dwells in it not onely exceeding rich Citizens & Burgeſſes, but alſo many braue Marchants from farre Countries, who haue their houſes, and factours there. The buildings for the height of two Stories, are made of Marble curiously wrought, but the lawes forbid marble to be used any higher: they are very costly, & decked with all manner of ornaments. The Haven of it is very faire, & capacious, safe from the violence of a tempest, and well fortified, so that the Spagnards say, that were the Catholique King, absolute Lord of Marceilles in Provence, & Genua in Italy, he might commaund the whole World. They haue abundance of shipping, and are good Navigators, who haue had many navall fights with their ennemis. For (as Mr. Heylin noteth) they sent seuen severall armies into the Holy land, & grew so powerfull, that in three dayes they sent to Sea 58. Gallies, & eight Pamphili (being boates of 140. or 150. Oares on a side) and on an other occasion suddenly armed 165. Gallies at once. By this strength they got the better hand diverse times of the Venetians; they won diverse Ilands, and beate the Pisani out of Sardinia, Corsica, & the Baleares, compelling them to pay 135000. Crownes for their peace. During this prosperity they were ruled by a common Councill, without any superiour power. But the people in the yeare 1339. in a seditious tumult, choose on Simon Beganegra for their Duke; the name of which office is still remaining, but not the authority; the Carkasse, but not the body. The Duke being at this time new chossen every yeare, and having his authority limited by 8. Gouvernours, and 8. Protectours, and 7. Recorders. Now fortune moved retrograde, and the people fell to private factions, first betweene the Dorii and Spinoli, against the Frisci and Grinaldi 1174. Secondly the Negri and Mollani against the Salvatici, & Embriaci 1289. Thirdly betweene the Spinoli, and Dorii 1336. Fourtly the nobility, and Commons 1339. These Factions and the overthrowes giuen them by the Venetians, together with the surprisall of their townes & Ilands by the Turkes, so distracted them, that they were glad to submit themselues to the Princes aboue named. The King of Spaine, is now their Protectour, and that not for nought, he being indebted to them a Milion and a halfe of Gold, which they, and Marquesse Spinola sent him to mainteyne his warrs in the low Countries. So that in former ages, by the strength of their shipping that might truely be said of the cómon wealth of Genua, which was boasted of Scipions-house, that by nature they were used and sent by God to vanquish & ouercome their ennemies by shipping. Among other shipping they haue many great Caracks built of the timber which comes from the Ligurian mountaines, their masts from France & Corsica. On the North side of the City lieth upon a hill, a very stronge, and a safe Castle. On the West side of the Suburbs, the Inhabitants by their labour and industrie haue made a new Haven, called the Arsenall, in which their Gallies lie at ancker, which are to be employed against Pirates, and Turkes. The streets in this citie are large, and broad. The Citizens goe very braue and gallant, and for the most part goe all in one habit of cloathes, made of black silkes or cloath, so that ye can scarcly know a Tradsman from a Gentleman. The women are very faire and comely, wearing for the most part their heire in tresses, which they cast over their backs. Yellow haire they account the finest, and if they haue it not naturally, they take great paines, to colour it so by art and casting of Gold dust upon it, that it shines, glisters & looks yellowe.

In this citie are many Reliques of Saints among the rest in the Cathedrall Church of S. Laurence, is a dishe of a Smaragd, or Emerald famous through the whole World, it hath sixe corners, being a finger thick, being about foure palmes, & a halfe in compasse & a palme high standing upon a round foote, having on each side and eare to take it in ones hand. This stone is exceeding greene, and of an inestimable price. The annuall storie of Genua witnesseth, that aboue 514. yeares agoe, when the towne of Cæsaria in Palestina was taken in by Baldvvin King of Ierusalem with the helpe of the Genouvvayes, it was brought from thence, to Genua; but Spanish Historie makes mention, that it came from Almeria in Granado. Within this are 32. Parishes, a braue and a stately Senate-house, guardeth by 500. Germane Souldiers. In the midst of it stands the Statua of Andreas Aurea, made as bigg as a Gyant, having upon his head a laurill wreath, and the heads of three Turkes lying under his feete. By the Sea side lieth the village of Poggio, in which is his Palace of Captaine Adamus, a Burgesse of Genua, with a braue orchard, an admirable fountaine, & a delicate garden full of fruits, and fragrant flowers ministring delight. The Lanterne upon the top of the tower stands so high, as if it were the Pharus of Ægypt, so that the shipps maye see to come in by night many miles into the Sea. Piggio.

On the South side lieth the Ligurian, or Tyrrhenian Seas. The ancient Inhabitants of this Countrie were the Deceates, Oxilii, Emburiades, and the Ingauni. They were vanquished by the Romans, and this city was taken in, and destroyed by Mago the Sonne of Amilcar, and rebuilt by Lucretius, by commaund from the S.P.Q.R. that is, from the Senate, & Citizens of Rome. After the end of the first Punicke warres, the Romans with much labour and paines became masters of it: by reason of the woods, marishes, and Mountaines within & behinde, which they retired, & saved themselues in. And indeed it was a matter of more difficulty, to finde, then to conquer them. Aliquantò labor erat major (saith Florus) invenire, quam vincere. They had diverse times molested the Romans; till at last Posthumius so disweaponed them, that he scarce left them instruments to plowe the Earth. Afterward it was taken in by Rhotarius King of the Lombards, who tooke Desiderius their King prisoner in it, so that at last it was driuen to giue it selfe over into the hands of Pipin, the Sonne of Charlemaigne, who was King of Italy, and so come under his subjection. And afterward carrying her selfe obedient to the Emperours, purchased their owne liberty, to choose a Duke and their owne officers, as Leander witnesseth in his Description of Liguria, and diverse others. Ancient Inhabitants.

In Genua haue bene borne diverse illustrious men, as the Popes Innocent the Fifth, and Adrian the Fifth, descended of the Noble house of the Frisci, of vvhich familly, there haue bene 30. Cardinalls, besides Archbishops & Bishops: of the braue house of the Ciboni came Pope Innocent the Eight: of the progenie of the Fregosia; Paul and Fredericke: of the house of Felisca, Nicolas, and from the descent of Saulia Bendinellus all of them Cardinalls. The famous vvriters of Genua, among others vvas Augustinus Iustianus Bishop of Nebici, Ioannes Balus, Andalotius Niger, Iacobus Cepa, Iacobus Brasilius and others. Among the Illustrious and braue Captaines vvere Lamba, Phillippus, Paganus, Lucianus, Obertus, Petrus, Andreas Magnus, Phillippinus, all descended from the house of Aurea. The famous Sea Captaine and Finder of the nevv World, Christopherus Columbus vvas likevvise a Genoys, called by the Spainyards the Admirall. This vvas the birth place also, of the most renovvned Generalls, and Bretheren Ambrosius, and Fredericus Spinola, the first having bene one of the bravest Captaines, that euer the King of Spayne employed in his vvarres of the Lovv Countries, vvho after many victories, dyed of a burning Feaver at the siege of Cassal Anno 1631. and his Brother Frederick dyed also honorably in a Sea fight, betvveene the Spanish Galleys, and the States ships, in the yeare of our Lord 1600. What those of Genua vvere formerly, vvee haue already made knovvne by their exploits, but novv they are addicted rather to marchandize, then vvarre, the most of them all being given to usury, a vice vvhich the Christians haue learned of the Ievves, and are novv thought to equall, if not to exceed their masters. Popes, Cardinalls & famous men.

The next vvhich followve are the Villages of Nevermum, Buliascum, and Lantum, and then Camolium and Repallium. Along the vvhole Countrie, the Coast of Genua to Camolium the houses stand so thick together, that one vvould take them to be a continuall tovvne. Within the Golfe or bosome of Ripaille, lieth Chiaveri, a small tovvne, vvhich vvas built a hundred and fifty yeares before the birth of Blondus, as he himselfe mentioneth. Lavania, called in Italian Lavagno, is a village by a river that beareth the same name, called Sestri de Levante, by Plinie and Anthonine, it is novv named Segesta. The name of De Levante is added to it as an adjunct, to distinguish it from another village so called, vvhich lieth upon the Westside of the shore. Also the tovvne Portus Veneris, and right opposite to that Portus Ericis, the first had vvont to part the bound of the commaund of Genua, and the other of Pisa. Captaine. Villages.

Vpon the Confines of Liguria, lie also some Castles, as the Castle of Tabia, Castello Levante, Monte Rosso, Vernaza Manarola, Rimaggio, Castello della Speria, and upon the river Macra, vvhich lieth in the utmost confines of Liguria, is Vessano, Abriano, Podentiano, Riccona, Luzzolo, and Molazzo: on the other side of the Macra lieth Sarzana, built from the ruines, and heapes of Old Luna. And thus much for the State of Genua. Castles.

The deſcription of

TVSCANY,

And the Dukedome of

FLORENCE.

TUSCIA, or Tuſcany, was well known to the Ancients by three names, to wit, Tyrrhenia, Etruria, and Tuſcia, being now called Tuſcany, from the laſt name. It is bounded on the South with the upper Tyrrhenian Sea, on the North with the Apennine, where Umbria, & a part of Gallia Togata lye, on the Weſt with Liguria, being parted from it by the River Macra, and on the Eaſt with the Tyber. That tract of land, which reacheth to the Seaſide, is levell and pleaſant to behold, though the inmoſt part is hilly, but if ye take it generally, it is a brave and a good Soile, and ſo bleſſed, that it may be compared with the beſt Provinces of Italy, for there are abundance of large, pleaſant and fruitfull feilds, meddowes, valleys, hills and dales in it, which are adorned with brave Orchards, & plantations with Orange, and Citron-trees, and produceth great ſtore of excellent wines.

The ancient Incolæ of this Countrie, were formerly the Tyrrheni, Etruſci, & Thuſci. It was called Thuſcany from (evew) ſacrificing, and Tyrrhenia from Tirrhenus, Son to Atis, King of Lydia, who planted here a Colonie. The firſt King was Tarquin Priſcus, in the year of the world 2550, the laſt was Turenus Ceſo, after whoſe death the Romans tooke it anno mundi 3682. For the Romans made warre upon the Tuſci, ſince the time of the raigne of Romulus the firſt, King and founder of Rome, who were ſometimes put to ſuch exigencies, that they were faine oftentimes to chooſe a Dictator, to be ſent againſt them. In the yeare after the foundation of Rome 474, when the Vulſinienſes, and Vulcientes, being the mightieſt people of the Etruſci were vanquiſhed by Tit. Coroncanium the Romane Conſull, theſe parts then came under the commaund of the Romane Empire, whoſe Dominions reached as farre as the river Arnus. After that time it was never known that there were any warres with the Tuſci, ſeing that from thence forward they allwayes continued faithfull, and conſtant to the Romans. But when the power of the Romans began to decline, & grow weake, they endured many ſhrode brunts from the Gothes, Lombards, Hungarians, and other forraine nations; and at laſt were brought to that extremity, that they came under the obedience of the grand Duke of Tuſcany, or Florence. Under the grand Dukes commaund are theſe townes, Florentia, Piſa, Sena, Prato, Piſtoia, Volaterra, Monte Politiana, Arrezzo, Cortina, Peſcia, Pientia, Mont Alcino, Livorno, Piombino, and others. Under the Popes called Saint Peters patrimonie, which reacheth from the River Peſcia, and from Saint Quirico to the Caſtle Caparano in Novo Latio, which lyeth not farre from the River Liri, or Garighano. Pontromoli belongeth to the King of Spaine, lying by the head of the River Macra, which place heretofore appertained to the Duke of Millaine: Alſo Porto Hercole, Orbitello, Monte Argentario, the Caſtle of Piombino, the Vale of Carfeniana or Graſiniana, under the Appennine, lying on both ſides of the River Seroia, where the new Caſtle of Granſiniano ſtands, beſides ſome other Caſtles, and places under the commaund of the Duke of Ferrara. Sarſana upon the River Macra is ſubject to the State of Genoa. Maſſa and Carraria have their owne Marqueſſes, to whome they are obedient. There are beſides theſe ſome other townes ſubject to ſome chiefe Lords of Rome, as Braciano, being a Dukedome, belonging to the Vrſini. Among all the townes in Tuſcany, Piſa is accounted one of the chiefeſt, and ancienteſt (as they ſay) built by the Piſæ, a people of Elis in Greece, who following old Neſtor from Troy, were by the violence of winde, and Sea driven into the Mouth of Arnus, where they built this towne, and called it after their owne name; by Trogus and others it is called Poſe. The Inhabitants thereof have a good memorie, which is attributed to the groſſneſſe, and thickneſſe of the aire. It lyeth as Strabo witneſſeth betweene the Rivers of Auſerus and Arnus, over which there are 3 fine bridges. The antiquity, and gallantneſſe of this towne, is much commended by Dionyſius Halcarnaſſæus in his firſt book. The great Duke of Florence holdeth his Court moſt in this Citty. It is accounted one of the twelve Cities of Eutruria. Here reſides alſo the Knights of S. Stephens order, made by the Duke, the great Church is called S. Donio, being 450 paces in compaſſe, ſupported with to brave pillars, alſo the Biſhops Palace, which the Pilans built with the boote and pillage, vvhich they gott by Pilernio from the Sarracens, round about this town there are fine Corne-fields, which beare ſuch goodly crops of Corne, which not onely ſerveth Tuſcany it ſelfe, but alſo furniſheth ſome other neighbouring Countries. The wines there are not very good; but they have delicate Melons.

Luca according to the teſtimonie of Julius Cæſar Scaliger, is the ornament of Tuſcany, famous in all Grecian, and Latine Hiſtorians. It was likewiſe called Luca by Strabo and Ptolomee, and ſtill keepes that name. It is adorned with many Churches, ſtately buildings, and is populons: ſeated in an even plaine with ſome ſmall hills riſing round about it, ſtrong walls, fine paved ſtreets, and though it be of noe great circuit; yet is repleniſhed with Burgeſſes, which have good trading. There are brave Burgers, provident, and ſharp witted, who have mainteined their liberties a long time, though many times they waged warre with their Neighbours.

Piſtoia is an other brave towne, which was firſt walled and enlarged by Deſiderius King of the Lombards, by whom they were afterward ſlighted, & their whole Country ſhared among the Florentines and Piſans, and at laſt came wholly under the commaund of the Florentines. For here began firſt the querrell of the Neri and Beanchi, as alſo that teadious & bloody faction of the Guelfi and Ghibellini, two Duthmen bretheren: whereof Guelfe thought the Pope, and Ghibell the Emperour to be more worthy, in which quarrell they ſlew each other, diſpercing their cauſe through out all Italy. Theſe Ghibellines were ſo hatefull to the Popes, that on an Aſhwedneſday, when according to the Popes inſtitution, the Pope being to caſt aſhes on the heads of the Cardinalls, was to ſay Memento ô homo quod Cineres, & in cinerem converteris, ſeing a Ghibelline among the reſt tranſported with rage, he ſaid unto him, Memento ô homo quod Ghibellinus es, & cum Ghibellinis morieris.

Florence is the chiefe Citty of Tuſcany, ſeated nigh to the confluence of Arnus and Chianus, it is called in Italian Fiorenza, or Firenza, from a floure, which is reſembled in regard of her flouriſhing fortune, and the capacitie of her Inhabitants, or as having firſt bene founded by the Romans, was as the floure of all other townes. It is 6 Italian miles about, and is repleniſhed with ninety thouſand Inhabitants, ſeated in a plaine place, where the River Arnus runneth through it, having foure fine bridges over it. It ſo aboundeth with goodly buildings both for divine, and civill uſes, and hath ſo many ſtreight, and cleane ſtreets in it: it is ſuch a beautifull, & a gallant City, that it is commonly called Fiorenza la bella; the Inhabitants thereof are ingenious wiſe grave, and acute; lovers of Arts and Sciences, but covetous of money and lucre, which makes them ſeeke, and travell into the furtheſt parts of the world. The women are faire and chaſt, & both men and women goe decent, and comely in their apparell. It was firſt built by Silla that bloodie Dictatour, and was made a Colonie by Auguſtus, Antony and Lepidus, the Triumviri, and called Florentia à ſitu ſtorenti, and was raſed by the Lombards, & reedifyed by Charles the great. Here were borne three Monſters, viz. 1. Alexander de Medices, that ſpoyled Florence of her liberty, the faireſt City of Italy. 2. Catherine de Medices, that ruined France the faireſt Kingdome of Europe. 3. Nicolas Machiavill, Recorder of this towne, whoſe Policies have poyſoned Europe, the faireſt part of the whole world.

Ptolomies Volaterra, or Aqua Volaterra, ſo called in Tabula Iteneraria, is ſeated upon a ſteepe & a craggie hill, ſcarcely Mountable: the walls are built with foure ſquare ſtones, 6 foote long and broad, curiouſly joyned together with ciment. This towne hath five gates, every one of them having a ſweete ſpringing Fountaine before them. The antiquity of this towne is marked by the old walls, & in diverſe tombe ſtones, with ſuperſcriptions on them, with Etrurian letters, beſides many marble ſtatues, which have bin digged there out of the ground.

Ptolomies Sena, or Siena lyeth about 800 furlongs from Rome upon a high hill, on this ſide of the River Arbia, in a nooke of the Golfe, and that by reaſon of the crooked ridge of the hills, on the one ſide it is narrow, hanging on the hill, and as it were making three corners, whereof that which is Southward, is broader then thoſe which lye Eaſt and Weſtward. The aire about it is moſt pleaſant & healthfull, though it be often troubled with tempeſtuous winds: the Poëts calls it the Paradice of Italy. The ſtreets thereof are ſtreight and long paved with brick batts, there are alſo many high turrets & ſpires, with ſumptuous buildings. The Inhabitants are very civill, curteous, and exceeding kind, eſpecially to Straingers, they are given much to their gaine and profite.

Ptolomies Peruſia, is called at this day Perugia. This towne is ſeated upon one of the Appenine hills, and is by nature very ſtrong, and hath in it many faire, large and lofty buildings, as well for Gentlemens, as private houſes. Viterbo lyeth in a large, and a fine plaine, having behinde it the hills Cyminia, it is built with foure ſquare ſtones, with many turrets, among ſome of the ſtructures, there is a brave ſpringing Fountaine, much admired. The Soile round it, is good and fruitfull, abounding in corne and wine. In Tuſcany are many Meeres or Lakes, as Lacus Traſumenus, but at this day Lago di Perugia, becauſe the towne of Perugia lyeth not farre from it. Antonmes Aprilii Lacus, is now called Fanhoſa Palude. Marinus Lacus, which is otherwiſe called Salſus, is now called Lago d'Orbitello, the other Lakes are Lacus Vadimonis, Ciminius, Volſinienſis, Sabatus Palus Bientina Ciana. The chiefeſt Rivers, which waters Tuſcany are the Laventia, Frigidus, Ancer, Arvo, Cecinna, Cornia, Alma, Brung, Vmbra, Oſa, Allengia, Floris, Martha, Minio, Eru, Vacina, Sanguinaria, Aron, and others, all of them abounding in fiſh. There are alſo moſt wholeſome, & healthfull bathes, beſides ſome other ſprings endowed by nature with an excellent vertue. The principall Mountaines are Mons Climinius well known to Livie, Virgill and Vbius. Plinies Soractes is called at this day, Monte de S. Silveſtro. In Tuſcany alſo lye the Oroſy, Feſulani Montes, and the Cortonenſis, to the Northward of Lacus Traſumenus. Among the woods and Foreſt, the chiefeſt are Lucus Volſimenſium, Sylva Cominia, Maſia, &c. There are alſo in Tuſcany three excellent Univerſities, namely at Piſa, Siena and Perugia, beſides divers famous Libraries, as at Piſa in the Dominican Fryers Monaſtery, at Luca in the Franciſans Cloiſter. In Florence there are 6. one at Siena, and an other at Perugia. Livius and Diodorus, it is ſaid, that the Etruſci were much addicted to armes, and riches, and given greatly to ſuperſtitions & ceremonies, which appeares by ancient writers, as having been firſt the authours thereof, for the Romans learned of them Divinations and ſoothſayings, as yee may read in Cicero touching Devinations.

Mercatour ſaith that in Italy are theſe Biſhopricks following, Epiſcopatus Nepeſinus, Caſtellanenſis, Montis, Falconis, Viterbinenſis, Suamenſis, or of Soano, Caſtellanus and Vulteranus. The Arch-Biſhops of Siona, Fuſulanus, Zazanenſis, Sutri, Ortanenſis, Cornetanenſis, Tuſcanenſis, Cluſinus, Aretinus, Pientinenſis or Pontito, Piſtorienſis, Binenſis, Corthonenſis, Civalenſis, Balneorigenſis, Vrbevetanus, Caſtrenſis, Puruſinus, Groſſilanus, Lucanus, Florentia an Arch-Biſhoprick, Lunenſis and Piſa an Arch-Biſhoprick, unto whome are Suffragans the Biſhops of Meſſanenſis and Civatenſis, as alſo ſome other Biſhopricks in Corſica.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIES OF PARMA. AND PLACENTIA.

Name. THE Dukedome of Parma taketh its name from the chiefe towne thereof, which is ſo called from the river Parma, it is Bounds. bounded on the Weſt with Placentia and Millaine, on the North with Cremona and the Dukedome of Mantua, on the Eaſt with Modena & Regio, and on the South with the Appennine Alpes, and the Seigneurie of Genoa.

Fertility. This Countrie is very pleaſant and fruitfull in Paſtures, & all kind of fruits, abounding in healthfull & Phiſicall Bathes and Waters, and fine Paſtures, where they make excellent Cheeſes called Parmaſans, and ſheare excellent Wool, which in every Countrie is much commended. Martiall praiſeth the Wool in ſaying thus:

Fondit & innumeros Gallica Parma greges.

And making a Comparaiſon of the Wool, ſaith:

Velleribus primis Apulia, Parma ſecundis
Nobilis Altinum tertia laudat Ovis.

Parma. The antient Inhabitants & Princes. The citty of Parma is built as other townes are within the Confines of Tuſcany, and was firſt maſtered by the Boies, & afterward in tract of time taken in by the Romans, who planted a colony in it, Anno 1570. Cicero lamenteth much the miſery & deſolation of it in his Philip. which L. Antonine brought it to. After the Authority of the Romiſh name was decayed, then with the adjacent townes it became free; yet ſo that nowe they put themſelues under the Emperours, and then under the Popes obedience, but alwaies continued good frends with thoſe of Boulogne. It once endured a hard ſiege by the Emperour Frederick the Second about the yeare 1248. becauſe they ſided with the Pope, & afterward being humbled, had diverſe Lords, as the Correggi, Scaligeri, Ateſtini, Vicecomites, Galeatii, Sforcii, & the French, with whome the Popes of Rome often contended for the ſuperiority, & at laſt were driuen out of Italy by Charles the Fifth, who became ſole maſter of it: this towne having felt the diverſity of Fortune, being alſo ſome times under the Venetians, & otherwiles under the Millanois, came finally under the Roman Prelates. For Paul the Tird, gaue the reuenue thereof to his Sonne Petro Alvigi Farneſis. Anno 1549. adding in recompence to the Church the Signorie of Camerine, which he had taken from Guido Maria Duke of Vrbine. This Petro Alvigi, or Levves Farneſis (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) was of a moſt villanous behaviour, and among other crimes committed an unſpeakable violence on the Perſon of Coſmus Charius Biſhop of Fanum, and then poyſoned him, for which deteſtable action, he received no other chaſtiſement of his Fathers Chriſts-Vicar then, Hæc vitia me non commonſtratore didicit. At laſt behaving himſelfe ſo inſolent, he was ſlaine by Count Iohn Auguzzolo, & Placentia was yeelded up to Ferdinand Gonzaga, the Spaniſh Vice-Roy in Millaine. Parma being fortified by the Pope, was given to his Nephew Octavian Farneſis. Yet could not this donation aſſure the eſtate, but that Octavian had quite loſt it, if Henry the Scond of France had not taken him into his protection. For the Emperour Charles fully determined (notwithſtanding that Octavian had marryed his baſe Daughter) to haue made himſelfe Lord of the Towne, & the French King was loath to ſee ſo great a ſtrenght added to the Emperours poſſeſſions in Italy. When the warre had now laſted foure yeares, Phillip the Second, which ſucceeded Charles, conſidering how neceſſairy it was for his affaires in Italy, to haue this Octavian his frend, reſtored into him againe Plaiſance, or Placentia, and ſo withdrew him from the French faction, Anno 1557. yet becauſe he would be ſure to keepe this houſe in a perpetuall dependance on Spagne, he reſtored it not abſolutely, but onely for foure generations, and to oblidge them the more, he made Alexander Farneſis Generall of the Netherlands, (one of the beſt that euer he had in the Low Countries) therein giving that famely ſome ſmall ſatisfaction for ſtepping betweene them, and the Kingdome of Portugall: his ſonne alſo ſucceeded him.

Without this towne (as Agaſtius witneſſeth) was an Amphitheater. It hath many faire houſes, large & broad ſtreetes, furniſhed with abūdance of all things needefull for the ſuſtenance and delight of man, famous for the multitude of Nobility, and Gentrie, which dwells in it: is ſeated in a plaine ground & enjoyeth a wholeſome aire: in ſo much that Plinie writeth, that there were three Burgeſſes in Parma, which liued 120. and two 130. yeares. The Winter and Summer there is milde & temperate. It hath a ſtronge Caſtle, & many Princely Palaces, Noblemens & Gentlemens houſes of good deſcent. There is a delicate Fountaine ſtanding in the Markett-place, which adminiſters delight to the ſight. The Cathedrall Church is built in the ſame forme as S. Peters is in Rome. The Belfry being ſupported with three huge pillars in the ſteeple juſt like to that of Bologne. The river Parma abouesaid runneth betweene the citty and the Suburbs. It is alſo an Epiſcopall Seate, there dwells many ancient families of Noblemen, there are good Souldiers, & the people are of a good nature, & a merrie diſpoſition. Whereupon Scaliger verſifieth thus:

Inventum mediis præclarum nomen in armis,
Prædita quo ſit gens ignea Marte docet.
Ingenium rapidum facili flammatur ab ira,
Sed viget in patulo pectore purus amor.
Magnanimo pretium eſt non diſplicuiſſe pudore,
Hoc ſatis officio cedere turpe putat.

Leſſer townes. The leſſer townes in this Dutchie are Guandaſana, Belvidero, Pizano, Berzeto, Carona, Belforte, Caſale, Borgo, S. Domino, Guelfum, Soragna, the Marquiſate of Gibello, & Buſſetto, which was wholly deſtroyed by the French, and 1520. Firenzola, and Vizolenga &c.

Rivers. There are in it alſo diverſe rivers, as the Po, Parma, Larda, Stirona, Parro, Henza, Ceno, Tarro and others.

Mountaines. The Appennine Mountaine lies on the South ſide of it like a huge wall.

The Dukedome of PLACENTIA.

THis Dukedome of Plaiſance, taketh its name from the chiefe Citty of Placentia, and as Parma, is Bounds. bounded on the South with the Mount Appennine, on the Weſt and North with the Dutchie of Millaine, & on the Eaſt ſide with the Dukedome of Parma aforeſaid, and is of a greater circuit then that. In this territoire are many Saltpits, out of which are made exceeding white Salt. Here are alſo yron mines, neither want they pleaſant woods & groues to take their pleaſure in hunting.

Rivers. Beſides the Po there are in it theſe rivers, namely Fertility. the Parma, Tidone, Trebbia, Nura, Chiavena &c. It is a fertill countrie where they make abundance of excellent cheeſe, which is much commended for the delicateneſſe thereof, and is tranſported into many parts of the world.

Placentia. The principall towne in it is Placentia, which giveth denomination to the whole Countrie. Some affirme that it had this name from Troye, formerly called Placentulus, but it is more likely, that it was ſo named from the Latin word placido, which is pleaſing. It lyeth about ſome thowſand paces from the Po, in a very pleaſant ſite, being a fatt ſoile for corne, and having many gentile Burgeſſes. It hath new walls, faire Bulwarkes, and is well fortified, having alſo in it a magnificent Monaſterie, founded by Philip the Second King of Spagne, & a very ſtrong Caſtle begun by the firſt Duke of it, & was finiſhed by the Emperour Charles the Fifth. It is a Biſhops Seate, and a famous Vniverſity for all arts, and ſciences. This Citty ſuffred many ſpoyles and much dammage. For when as Hanniball came into Italy, then the Romans ſent into it a colonie of ſixe thowſand men, and afterward that, & other circumjacent places were burnt and deſtroyed by the Gaules, and then was reedified and came under the Romane Subjection, whoſe name and power then declining, with their neigbouring townes, it came under the yoake of the Gothes, and Longobards, whoſe might at laſt being broken, the Emperours gott it, and afterward getting Liberty, was partly by her owne Burgeſſes diſcordance, and partly by forraine Lords diſtreſſed and ouermaſtered by the Palavacinii, Landrii, Scotii, Galeatii, and Sfortii: & having endured many great miſeries and calamities, after diverſe alterations, came under the French Gouvernment, and ſometimes under the Popes, and then againe under the French, who being driuen out of Italy it was reſtored againe to the Popes, with Parma, and ſo got a new Lord the Sonne of Pope Paul the Third, Petro Alvigi or Levves Farneſis before mentioned. This Countrie is exceeding Fertility. faire & fruitfull in Wine, Oyle, Corne, & all kind of fruits, cauſed by the abundance of water fountaines, and brookes, which makes good paſturage and fatt meddowes.

Leſſer townes. The leſſer townes are Ponte Nura, Borgo val di Taro, Rivalgan, Ponizza, Arvia, Riva, S. Gionani. C. Arquato, Bardo, C. Zizi, and others.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DVTCHIE OF MODENA AND REGIO.

Name & Bounds.

THis Dukedome as the others borroweth its name from the Chief towne called Modena and Reggio. It hath on the North ſide of it the Po, and the Dukedome of Mantua, Mirandula, and Ferrareſe, on the Eaſt Bologneſſe, on the South the Mount Appennine, and on the Weſt is ſhutt in with the Dutchie of Parma.

Modena.

The towne of Modena lyeth upon the River Panara, heretofore ſeated neerer the Appennine, as the ancient ruines of houſes demonſtrate. It once belonged to Ferrara, and was giuen by Clement the eight, with her ſpacious territoires unto Ceſar d'Eſte, naturall ſonne unto Hercules d'Eſte, laſt Duke of Ferrara. It is now by marriage alied to Mantua. This towne was of old called Mutina, & is famous for the firſt battel fought betweene Antony and Auguſtus: this latter being by the Lords and People of Rome made head of the league againſt Antony, the common Ennemy. Auguſtus was then aged but 18. yeares, and therefore referred the mannaging of the warre to Hirtius and Panſa then Conſuls. The See Mr Heylin. fortune of the day was ſo equally ſhared, that Antony loſt the field, and the Conſuls their liues: leaving Auguſtus a headleſſe army, into whoſe favour, when he had wrought himſelfe, he preſently poaſted to Rome & made himſelfe Conſul. It is a very fine and a hanſome towne, being alſo an Epiſcopall Seate. It is a braue Vniverſity, wherein that famous Lawyer Azo liued. There are many noble famillies in it, among the reſt the Rangony are accounted the chiefeſt. This towne as the former, hath endured many alterations & ſhrod brunts, aſwell by the Gaules, as by the Boii, coming alſo under the Subjection of the Romans, who planted a Colonie in it, and like wiſe ſuffred great ſpoiles by Conſtantinus Magnus, becauſe it ſided with Maxentius. It was alſo pillaged, and ſaked by the Gothes, but by the Vandals wholly ruined and all things turned topſie ſurvie.

Afterward ſome Citizens began to reedifie it a litle further from that place, where it once ſtood, and at laſt after many changes, acknowledged the Ateſtini for her Lords, anno 1312, then the Mirandulani, afterward the Bonacolſi, then the Pii & the Ateſtini againe, till that Pope Iulius the Second tooke in this towne by force, and ſurrendered it ouer to the Emperour Maximilian the Firſt, by whome it was afterward morgaged to Pope Leo the Tenth, for ten thouſand gold gilders. But when Pope Clement anno 1527. was beſieged in the Caſtle of Adrian, by the Emperour, the Ateſtini watching their oportunitie became againe maſters of this towne, who enlarged it much with houſes & girt it about with ſtrong walls & deepe ditches, that now ſhe beginns to flouriſh againe & to gett up her crummes. This territoire is wonderfull fruitfull in wheate, Beanes, and diuerſe fruits, and yeeldeth ex- Fertility. cellent wine.

Reggio.

Next followes Reggio, lying in a plaine Countrie having (as it ſeemes) taken its name from a riveret called Cruſtula, heretofore named Regium Lepidum. It is a noble, a faire, and a populous towne, lying in a moſt pleaſant and a fruitfull ſoile, which (as they ſay) was firſt built by the Tuſci, who being choſed out of it by the Gaules, and the Gaules by the Romans,

The principall Mountaines are the Appennine, lying upon the South-ſide of this Countrie.

Mirandula is a ſmall Lordſhip, honored with the name of a Principate, lying betweene the Dutchies of Mantua, Modena, and Reggio, ouer againſt Ferrareſe, and Bologneſe. It was firſt built by Manfredus, who married Eurida the daughter of the Emperour Conſtantine, who fled heither ſecretly, and built the Caſtle in it, and gaue it the name Miranda, from admiration. This houſe in a ſhort time did ſo encreaſe, that in a few yeares there were fortie fathers living at one time. The Pici gouverned here a longe while. It hath in it a fatt ſoile, which yeeldeth much corne and wine. The Inhabitants are civill, gentile, and kind-hearted, and make good ſouldiers. Within this Lordſhip lieth the Caſtle of Concordia, which the Pici Mirandulani gouverned a longe time. Boulagneſe and Romagna yee ſhall finde deſcribed in an other Map, and therefore is it needleſſe to make any mention of them here.

It is deuided into two parts: the one containeth all Romandiola, with the Princedomes of Bononi & Ferraria, & is bounded on the North with the Signorie of Venice and the river Po: on the Weſt with the Dukedomes of Mantua, Mirandula and Modena; on the South with the Signorie of the Great Duke of Florence, & with the Duke of Vrbins; Eaſtward it ſhooteth to the Adriatique Sea, or the Gulfe of Venice; the other part comprehendeth theſe territoires following, as S. Peters Patrimonie, a great part of Etruria, as alſo the greateſt part of Latium and the Anconitan Marca.

Romandiola, Bononia & Ferrara, lie according to the ancient calculation in Regione Octava Italiæ, having a part of Gallia Ciſpadana, and of Gallia Togata under it, where the Veii, & neere to Ariminum the Senones dwelt. The name Romandiola or Romanula was giuen to this territoire by Charlemaigne and the Pope of Rome, by reaſon of the loyalty, which the Inhabitants thereof alwais bore to the Papall Seate, & was in ancient times called Flaminia, from Via Flaminia, which was a high way, made from Rome to Ariminum, through all Etruria and Vmbria, which the Romane Conſull C. Flaminius, made to eaſe his ſouldiers upon their marches after he had vanquiſhed the Ligures.

Bounds. Romandiola reached from the Rubicon Eaſt, to the Venetians on the Weſt: from the Appenine South to Padus, and the Adriatique on the North, and ſhooteth farre beyond Flaminia, the limits whereof were leſſe in Fertility. times paſt. Leander ſaith, that this Countrie hath the beſt fields in Italy, being furniſſed with all things, not onely for neceſſity, but alſo for delight: for there are many plaine, large and pleaſant fields in it, which are ſett and planted with all kinde of fruitfull trees. The hills and mountaines moſt pleaſantly couered with Vines and Grapes, Oliue and Figg-trees, as alſo the Woods full of all kinde of Deere, neither want they fine Paſtures for the feeding of Cattell. Moreouer, it hath in many places diuerſe freſh & healtfull waters, and by the Sea ſide there is made great ſtore of Salt, being endowed with many rich commodities beſide.

Townes. Rimano. Rimano anciently called Ariminum, lying upon the Adriatique coaſt and by the river Rubicon. In former times it was a braue Haven, but is now dãmed up with ſand banks, ſo that no ſhipping can come into it, but ſmall Veſſells & Barkes. When yee are paſſed ouer the ſtone bridge neere Ariminum, then ye come to Via Æmilia, where the three riverets Pluſa, Butrius and Rubicon meete together. This Rubicon was famous in the Rõmane Hiſtories, in regard of the prohibition which was made, that none of the Romane Commaundors, without the Conſent of the Senate of Rome, ſhould Cervia. dare to come ouer the Rubicon with his men. Cervia is alſo a Sea towne, but not ſo ancient, which Blondus mentioneth aboue all. Within the Countrie lie Ceſena, Ceſnadigo or Ceſna, & Sarſina a very ancient towne, juſt under the beginning of the Appenine, where the famous Comedian Plautus was borne. Forli is a rich, a fine and a pleaſant towne, which lieth betweene Roncon, where Old Bedeſis ſtood, & the river Montona. Forum Cornelii now called Imola is watered by the river Santerno. The Arch-Epiſcopall citty of Ravenna, lying Ravenna. on the further ſide of the Mouth or outhell of Bedeſis hath exceeding ſtately and well built houſes & Churches, eſpecially the Cathedrall called S. Athanaſius, & is ſeated in a very pleaſant place, with goodly Paſtures & Meddowes round about it, ſo that every yeare they make abundance of delicate Butter & Cheeſe in theſe parts. The Arch-Biſhop of Ravenna hath Superiority ouer theſe Biſhops, namely, the Biſhops of Faront, Imola, Modena, Bononia, Parma, Forti, Forlimpopoli, Fille, Barcina, Cervia and Ceſena, &c.

Bologne or Bononia. The Signorie of Bologne or Bononia taketh its denomination from the citty of Bononia, which lieth upon Via Æmilia, under the foote of the Appenine to the South, betweene the river Reno, wich runneth on the Weſt ſide of it, and the river of Saveno or Sapina which taketh his courſe on the Eaſt ſide. It is ſo adorned with moſt ſumptuous and magnificent Palaces, that fewe townes in Europe can compare with it. At the firſt it was not very great, but now the circuit of it is 7. Italian miles. In S. Dominicus his Cloiſter there is a very braue Librarie, beſides it is one of the chiefeſt Vniverſities of Italy, & the retyring place of the Popes. The civill law is much ſtudied here. Neere unto this towne (in ancient time) was that meeting, betweene Auguſtus, Antony & Lepidus, wherein they agreed on the Triumvirat, deviding the Empire & city of Rome amonge them three. This Combination was confirmed by the enſuing proſcription, wherein, that they might be revenged on Cicero, Lepidus proſcribed his Brother, and Antonius his Vncle.

Ferrara. Ferrara, whoſe territories ſtretch in lengh 160. miles, & in breath 50. containe alſo the worthy citties of Modena and Reggio ſpoken of before. The chiefe city Ferrara was at the firſt but a village, ſo called from the yron Mines about it, is ſeated on the banke of Po, which by reaſon of his breath, depth and ſwiftneſſe is a ſufficient Rampare on that ſide, on the other ſide it is fortified with a ſtrong Wall, & a ſpacious Moate, & was enlarged by the Emperour Theodoſius Anno 433. See Mr. Heylin. & girt about with walls by Smaragdux Exarchus in the yeare 595. The Aire by reaſon of the Moores & Pooles about it, is very groſſe and unhealthfull. Anno 1570. it had like to haue periſhed by an Earthquake, which did great harme in it. In the midſt of the towne is a faire greene, into which doe open on all ſides about 19. Streets, moſt of them are halfe a mile in length, & ſo euen, that the ends may be ſeene: the whoole compaſſe is fiue miles. This towne, after the ruine of the Longobardian Kingdome, belonged to the German Emperours, till the yeare 1107. in which time the Counteſſe Malthida or Maude, tooke it together with Mantua & Parma from the Emperour Henry the Third, & dying without iſſue, gaue her whole eſtate both by conqueſt, & inheritance to the Church of Rome. The Emperour Frederick the Second, to ſpite thoſe of Bononia made it an Vniverſity. In the Carmelitan Cloiſter, there is a famous Bibliotheca, with many ancient manuſcripts in it.

The other part of the Papacie containeth (as is ſaid) S. Peters Patrimony, a great part of Hetruria, the moſt part of Latium, and the Anconita Marca is bounded on the Weſt with the Dutchie Di Caſtro, & the Signorie of the Great Duke of Tuſcany, on the Eaſt it bordereth upon the Kingdome of Naples, and on the North hath the Dukedome of Vrbine, and a part of the Venetian Gulfe, and on the South with the Tyrrhenian or Mediterranean Sea.

S. Peters Patrimony.

That part of S. Peters Patrimony which lieth South along the Mediterranean Sea, is shutt in on the North and East sides with the Tiber, & on the West with the Dukedome of Castro & the Signorie of Siena. Within this Signorie lie these townes following, not farre from the river Pagha is Aquapendente a long towne standing upon a Mountaine, just in the way, as yee goe to Rome, betweene Lacus Vsinens, and the river Prile or Palia. Moreouer a litle beneath the confluence of the rivers Palia & Chiana, Orvieto presenteth it selfe. This towne is seated upon a high hill with a plaine upon it, which serues as walls unto it. It is a very pleasãt towne, and enjoyeth a wholesome aire. Lacus Vulsinus lying hard by it, abounds in fishe: close to it also lieth Bolsena, built up out of the ruines of Volisinus. The whole Countrie is very fruitfull, and yeeldeth excellent Wine and delicate sallet Oyle. Monte Fiascano is Old Mons Faliscorum, & not farre from thence, lieth Lucus Etruscorum, commonly called il bocco di Monte Fiascone. At Catio ends the confines of Etruria. Viterbo is the chiefe towne of all S. Pieters Patrimony and lieth on the foote of the long and euen Mountaines of Cimony in a plaine field. In S. Peters Patrimony are also the Mountaines called Gallicani, in which Anniball that Father of warlike Stratagems, frighted that publick & wary Captaine Fab. Max. with 2000. Oxen, carrying fire in their hornes, while he passed ouer these Mountaines.

Viterbo.

Not farre from Viterbo lie the old ruinous walls of Tarquinia, in which two Romane Kings were borne, Tarquinius Priscus & Tarquinius Superbus. To the Southward of Viterbo lieth Sutri, where a great Battell was fought betweene the Vmbri, Etrusci and the Romans. A litle neerer unto Rome are M. Rosa, Galera & Formille, where once stood the chiefe citty of the Veii. Castra Nova upon the way as ye goe to Rome, hath very ingenious & laborious inhabitants, which gett their living by selling of Woll, Wine & Corne, so that they haue reasonable doings, being a plaine, and an euen soile, where there are abundance of all things in it, needfull for the sustentation of man. Civita Vechia is a principall Haven, where the Popes Galleis had wont to lie.

Sutri.

Castro Nouo.

Civita Vechia Campagna di Roma.

On the other side of the Tiber lieth Campagna di Roma, or Old Latium, which as S. Peters Patrimony shoots out likewise with a tract along the Tyrrhenean Sea, on the West it is parted from S. Peters Patrimony by the river Tiber, on the Northside lieth the territoire of Sabina, & the Kingdome of Naples, which likewise bordereth upon it, to the Eastward. This Country is every where very fruitfull, except in some few places, which are barren and stonie, & some are waterish filled with Moores and Pooles, which makes the aire very unhealtfull. The Inhabitants of this Countrie (saving in the townes) haue bene blockish, clowniish, and headie having had great hands, strong and bigglimmed men.

Sito.

Rome.

The Metropolis of this Countrie is Rome (as Mr. Heylin saith) once the Mistresse of the Vniverse, famous for the triumphs & antiquities, is seated on Tiber, now well growne by the receit of 42. rivers, and is distant from the Sea 15. miles. This Citie when it was built first by Romulus was in circuit about two miles, and contained 30000. Inhabitants, but in the flourishing of that common wealth, the men encreased to 463000. and the compasse of the towne to 50. miles, there being on the walls aboue 740. Turrets. There were in it (saith he) besides womẽ, children & seruans by 463000. men, able to beare armes, free Denizens, and such as were enrolled into Cense. To these if wee add their Children, Wiues and Seruants which could not be fewer then 3. or 4. millions: and so Lipsius in his Tract. De Magnitudine Romana is of opinion.

In this citty vvas the Capitoll saued from the fury of the Gaules by the cackling of Geese. Tacitus called this house Sedem Iouis Optimi Maximi auspicato à majoribus pignus imperii conditam. It vvas twise burnt, once in the civill vvarres of Sylla & Marius, & againe in the vvarres of Vespasian and Vitellius, and a third time fired in divers corners by Nero. In the third building of it Vespasian carryed the first basket of Earth, after him the nobility did the like, to make te people more forvvard in the service: as also the bridge called Pons Sublicius, on vvhich Horatius Cocles resisted the vvhole army of King Porsena, Tarquin & the Tuscans: till the Citizens behinde had broken dovvne the bridge vvho receiued him svvimming to the banke vvith joyefull acclamation, & saved their city from present ruine. Here liued the famous Warriers, here flourished the exact Martiall discipline so memorized by ancient Historiographers; and finally here vvere layd up the Spoiles and Trophies of all Europe.

But Rome as it novv standeth lovver on the banke of Tiber upon Campus Martius, vvhere it vvas built after the Invadation of the Goths and Vandalls, (for it vvas first taken in and pillaged Anno 410. by Athalaricus King of the Goths, and againe in the yeare of Christ 455. by Gensericus King of the Vandalls) is novv in compasse 11. miles. The Inhabitants are about 200000. tvvo parts vvhereof are clergie men and Curtesans, the latter being seldome under 40000. of vvhom the Pope receiueth the yearely tribute of 30000. Ducats, not saith (M. Harding) to tolerate them in their sinne, but to punish their purses. The most vvorthy places are the Church of S. Peter, vvhich if it vvere once finished, vvould be the rarest building in the World, then the Castle of S. Angelo impregnable, unlesse by famine, next the Popes Palace called Belvidere, and lastly the Library of the hill Vatican. This Librarie vvas founded by Sixtus the Fourth, vvho not onely stored it vvith the choisest bookes he could pick out of Europe: but allovved it also a large revenue for the perpetuall augmentation of it. Bibliothecam Palatinam in Vaticano toto Terrarum Orbe celebrem, advectis ex omni Europa libris, construxit: proventusque certos saith Onuphrius. When the Duke of Bourbon sacked Rome Anno 1527. it vvas much defaced and ransacked, but by the succeeding Popes it hath ben againe recovered to its former fame & beautie.

Rome as it is novv.

Rome vvas ruled 1. by Kings, 2. by Consuls, 3. by Decemviri, 4. by Tribuns, 5. by Dictatours, 6. by Emperours, & 7. by Popes; vvho first vvere raised by the Christian Emperours to that dignity, but often vvagged vvarre against them. For it is recorded (as Mr. Heylin noteth) that in the quarrells betvvene Frederick the II. & Pope Innocent the IV. the Emperour sent the Pope these Verses:

Roma diu titubans, variis erroribus acta
Corruet, & mundi definet esse Caput.
Fata volunt Stellaque docent, aviumque volatus,
Quod Fredericus ego malleus Orbis ero.

That is,

Rome tost vvith diverse errours dovvne must fall,
And cease to be the Soveraigne of all
The birds fore tell, te Starrs and fates decree,
That I a terrour to the VVorld shall be.

Ostia lieth in the mouth of the Mediterranean Sea, built by Ancus Martius, seated in an unvvholsome aire, the Haven hath long since bene dammed up to stop the passage of enemies ships to Rome. Next Ardea lieth Antium at this day called Neptuno. Terracina is a small tovvne but is vvell inhabited, it is a Bishops Seate, lying in the Confines of Territorium Romanum and the Kingdome of Naples. Within this Countrie are Villetri, Sermoneta, Albono, Citta di Friscate, round about vvhich are many of the Cardinalls Courts and Houses of pleasure.

Ostia.

Ardea.

Neptuno.

Sabina is environed vvith Campagna di Roma, vvith a part of the realme of Naples, & vvith S. Peters Patrimony. It hath a very fruitfull soile, vvhich yeeldes Wine and Oyle, and is very good for the feeding of Cattell. The chiefe tovvne of it is Reate novv Rieti. Narni lieth upon the river Nar.

Sabina.

Next followveth the Territoire of Vmbria (novv called the Dukedome of Spoleto) from the river Vmbria, & lieth betvveene Sabina and the Anconita Marca. The Mountaines Appenine embrace the most part of this Countrie, & therefore is of diverse natures, being covered here & there vvith Mountaines: but here & there upon the lesser hills grovves Vines, Oliue & Figgs-trees, & other fruits, & some fine plaines, for to feede their Cattel in. The Inhabitants thereof haue alvvaies bene held for the best souldiers in Italy. The chiefe city is Spoleto, being a gallant ancient tovvne, vvherein the Lombardian Princes held their Courts.

Vmbria.

Spoleto.

Next Vmbria lieth the Anconita Marca or Ager Picenus, this Countrie is much more in length then in breath, & hath a very fruitfull soile, as vvel for fruitfull-trees, as for Seeds & Corne. At Sirolo they make excellent Wine. The river Truentus or Tirbato separateth this territoire from the Kingdome of Naples, in the mouth vvhereof upon the Golfe of Venice lieth Porto d'Ascoli, and by the outlet of Torsinus lieth the Castle Grotta. Then followves the rivers Asone and Temna betvveene vvhich the Appenins Mountaines are exceeding high. There is also Firmanorum Regio, the chiefe tovvne vvhereof is Fermo a Bishop Seate. The Sea Coast from Fermo to Ancona is but shallovv. A litle aboue the heath of the River Chiento is the old tovvne of Camerinum or Camerino. A litle further is the Episcopall tovvne of Macerata, vvhich is an Vniversity. Then ye shall see Lauretum a very strong tovvne, in vvhich is S. Maria di Laureto her Church. This place is full of Inns and Alehouses for the entertaining of Pilgrims, vvhich comes thither in abundance. A litle further lies Sirolo.

Marco d'Ancona.

Sirolo.

Porto d'Ascoli.

Finally, under the Promontoirie Cumero lieth the braue Marchant Tovvne Ancona, vvhereunto many Marchants resort, especially, because it hath an excellent Haven, vvhich may be accounted one of the best and safest in the World. Not farre from the river Fiumesino, lieth Sasso, vvhere that Learned Lavvyer Bartholi vvas borne.

The deſcription of the Kingdome OF NAPLES.

Name. THIS Kingdome of Naples containeth almoſt the one halfe part of Italy, conſidering what a tract of land lyeth betweene the River Liris, the Appenine Mountaines, the River Tronto, the upper and Nether Seas. The Kingdome of Naples taketh its name from the capitall Citty of Naples. The length of it from the mouth of the River Tronto, to the promontorie Brutium, called by the Italians Capo Spartinento, reacheth 270 miles, and from Promontorium Athenæum or Minerva, called in Italian Capo Maſſa, lying not farre from Naples, to the foote of Mount Gargani, named by the Inhabitants Monte de S. Angelo is ſome 90 miles in breadth, and in compaſſe Site and bounds. 1468 miles. This Kingdome is partly full of hills and Mountaines, and partly ſtretcheth out in Plaines and Vales, being bleſſed with a moſt healthfull aire & with an exceeding rich Soile, which yeeldeth all things neceſſarie for the uſe of man.

This Kingdome is at this preſent divided into 12 Provinces, namely, Terra di Lavoro, Principato Citra, Principato Vltra, Calabria inferior, Calabria Superior, Terra Hydrunti, Terra di Barry, Abruzzo Citra, Abruzza Vltra, Contado di Molize and Capitanata. Terra di Lavoro was anciently called by the Romans Campania Felix, in regard of the ſuperabundant fertilitie, whereby this region excelled all other Countries. It hath on the weſt the River Liris, on the North the Sannite Mountaines, on the Eaſt the River Silarus, & on the South the Tyr- Fertility. rhen Sea. This Countrie may truely be called happy Campania, for the exceeding fruitfulneſſe thereof, right ly therefore did the ancients name it Certamen liberi cereriſque, ſeing there is a ſtrife betſteene the Vine, and the other fruits of the Earth, who ſhall beare moſt: for here are made diverſe ſorts of curious wines, whoſe Vines grow upon the hills and Mountaines, known to the ancients by the name Falerni and Maſſici. This Countrie alſo enjoyeth a healthfull and a pleaſant aire, which cauſed this land to be very populous, and is inhabited by a great many noble men and gentrie. The Rivers. ancient River Liris is now called Gariglian from Mount Gauro, which lyeth not farre from the outlett of it. The River Vulturnus retaineth his old name: not farre from thence is the ſmall River of Glavis, now Glamo: the Sarno disburdeneth himſelfe into Golfo di Napoli. At Maſſa the land ſhooteth out farre into the Sea, and maketh the Golfe of Naples, which in the utmoſt point maketh the Promontoire or Capo di Minerva. Over againſt it lyeth an other Promontoire, called Capo Miſeno, which ends the other part of the Golfe of Naples. Townes. Neere unto the Citty of Cajeta, lyeth the Cape of Cajeta, from whence the land crookleth with a nooke, & maketh il Capo Cajeta. Cajeta was ſo called either of Cajeta, the Nurſſe of Æneas here buried, or from Vro, becauſe the Troyan Ladies, being here arrived out of Africa, and fearing their Husbands would againe put to Sea, burnt their ſhips, and ſo forced them to ſettle againe in this Countrie. It is a towne commodiouſly ſeated on the Sea-ſide, and ſeemeth to be a place of great importance, in ſo much, if King Charles the VIII of France had but onely fortifyed it, and the Caſtle of Naples the Realme had never bene loſt. Round about the mouth of the Garigham lay heretofore theſe towns, Auſonia, Veſſino, Minturna, alſo Trifanum. Sueſſa now Seſſa, ſtandeth upon the hill Maſſico and Coleno, not farre from Carinula, where they make excellent wine. Galatia, now Cajazza, lyeth not farre from the River Vulturno, being but eight miles from Capua, & 24 from Naples, and was in former ages a very famous Citty. Upon the Vulturno lyeth Capua, a very ancient Citty. whoſe pleaſures enervated the victorious Army of Hannibal. Florus ſaith that ſhee might be accoũted one of the 3 great Citties, and to be raunged with Rome and Carthage. This Citty ſecht downe the pride and braverie of the Romans, for Cicero writeth, that the Campani, eſpecially thoſe of Capua, in regard of her unſpeakeable fertility, & the abundance of all things, would alwayes exalt themſelves above others: but their combes were cutt, when Hannibal invaded Italy, for then Hannibal and his Souldiers ruined it. Afterward Genſericus, King of the Vandals tooke it in and razed it, and though Narſetes built it up againe: yet a hundred yeares after it was againe utterly deſtroyed by the Longobards, and at laſt from her decayed walls and ruinous heaps Capua was reedifyed. Averſa lying betweene Naples & Capua, was built out of the ruines of the towne of Attila. To the Northward a litle beneath Nola lyeth Avella, from whence the Avella man haſell-nuts tooke their name. Cuma neere which is Sybillæ antrum, by which Æneas (as the Poëts faine) went downe to Hell, to talke with his Father, and not farre from thence is the Lake called Lacus Avernus; the ſtinke of which killeth birds as they fly over it: it ſtood in ancient times upon a high hill neere unto Capo Miſeno, which lyes now in heapes, and yet by the ruines thereof one may eaſely conjecture, what a large and a ſpacious towne this hath bene in former ages.

Betweene Mount Miſeno, and the Citty of Naples lay the lands garden and Paradice, of that rich Citizen of Rome Lucullus, where he built many ſtately houſes, and made diverſe fiſh ponds, which coſt him an infinite ſumme of money. Baia famous for the warme bathes, where the chiefeſt Citizens of Rome had their houſes of pleaſure. But the beautie pleaſantneſſe and fecunditie of this place lyes vaſt at this day, and is become rather a haunt for wilde beaſts, then a recreation for man, yet the hott bathes are there to this day. The Romans heretofore taking their delight in this place, were here given to laciviouſneſſe and uncleanneſſe, & therefore it is noe mervell, that God hath deſtroyed this place, & made it deſolate. Puteolis is a ſinall towne, ſtanding on a creeke of the Sea oppoſite to Baule, from which it is diſtant three miles and a halfe, & lyeth betweene the Cape Miſeno, and Mount Pauſilypo. Theſe townes are famous for the bridge, built betweene them by Caligula: it was compoſed of ſundry veſſells, compacted together in that ſort, that there was not onely a faire and a large paſſage, but divers tents and victualing houſes ſet up on both ſides. Cajus in triumphall habit marched and remarched over this bridge: praiſeth himſelfe with his Souldiers as men, to whoſe heroick enterpriſes, neither earth nor ſea was an obſtacle. This he did to keepe in awe Neptune, and to exceed the like acts of Zerxes and Darius, memorized in old hiſtories. Antrum Caninum is a wonder, being a deepe cave in a Mountaine, for if ye caſt a dogg or any other beaſt into it, it lyes as though it were dead, but if ye Through Mount Pauſilypo there is a hollow cave cutt, which is twelve foote broad and 12 foote high, & from the mouth of it to the further end it is above a thouſand paces in length, throw which one may goe from Naples to Puteolis, otherwiſe one muſt clime over this Mountaine with a great deale of difficulty and paines. Miſenum, where Auguſtus keeping one Armada, and an other at Ravenna awed the whole Roman Empire. Here is alſo in this Countrie the famous Mountaine Veſuvius, that caſteth out flames of fire, the ſmoake of which ſtifled Plinie Iunior coveting to ſearch the cauſe of it: the flame hereof brake forth cruelly alſo during the reigne of Titus, caſting out not onely ſuch ſtore of ſmoake, that the very Sun ſeemed to be eclipſed, but alſo huge ſtones, and of aſhes ſuch plentie, that Rome, Africke, Ægypt & Syria were even covered, and Herculanum & Pompejus, 2 great Citties in Italy were overwhelmed with them. Naples the Metrapolis of this Kingdome, is a faire and a famous Citty, lying upon the Golfe of Naples: it is of a large circuit, lying betweene hills and dales, fortifyed with brave Bulwarks, towers and Caſtles, and with a dry ditch 80 foore deepe, having eight Gates, large & broad market-places, many Fountaines and conduits made very ſumptuouſly. This Citty lyes in the forme of a halfe Moone, the compaſſe whereof was heretofore three, but now is five miles about. Touching the foundation thereof Authours agree not, but concurre all in this, that it is a very ancient citty, being before the time of the Romans, counted one of the Grecians chiefeſt townes in Italy. Here Virgill ſeing it was a quiet place (as other famous men did) chooſe to write his Georgicks, whoſe tombe is yet to be ſeene upon Mount Pauſilypo, as the Inhabitants affirme. It hath a very pure, cleare, and a ſweete aire, in ſo much that ye can ſcarcely feele any winter there, wch makes this Citty to be inhabited by a multitude of Noble men and Gentle-men. Here they have a great many moſt magnificent Palaces and houſes. In Saint Claras Church the Kings lye entombed. Among all other things here is a Hoſpitall the revenewes whereof is 60000 Crownes: wherewith beſides other good deeds, they nouriſh in diverſe parts of the Kingdome 2000 poore Infants. In this Citty the diſeaſe called Morbus Gallicus or Neopolitanus: the French poxe was firſt knowne in Chriſtendome. This Citty is ſeated on the Sea ſhore, and fortified with foure ſtronge Caſtles, viz: Caſtle Capodna, where the Kings Palace was Ermo, Caſtello del Ovo, Caſtle Novo. Next followes Principato Citra, and Principato Vltra. Principato Citra on the Weſt bordereth upon Terra ni Lavoro, reaching along the Sea-coaſt, as farre as the Province of Baſilicata, with which as alſo on the North-ſide, and further is bounded with Principato Vltra. Not farre from Salerno is the Epiſcopall towne of Nuceria, whoſe circumjacent territoire is very fruitfull, having many pleaſant Villages about it. Salerno is a brave town, lying upon the Golfe, which borroweth its name from it, and is called Golfo di Salerno. It is a principalitie and an Arch-Biſhoprick, and a Univerſity, where a certaine Phyſicall booke was printed, called Schola Salermtana, dedicated to our Henry the eight. The Countrie round about it, is very fertill, eſpecially in Apples. Evoli not farre from the River Silaro, is a wealthy place, and a pleaſant towne. Policaſtro is both a Princedome & a Biſhopricke. Principato Vltra lyeth within the Countrie, betweene Principato Citra, and the Province Capitanata, upon which it is bounded on the North, on the Weſt with Terra di Lavoro, and on the Eaſt with Baſilicata. Next to Principato Citra lyeth Baſilicata, which by Golfo Policaſtro toucheth the Sea with a nooke, where on the South-ſide it is bounded with Calebria Citra, and reacheth on the other ſide, Eaſtward to Golfo di Taranto, it is a craggie and a hilly Country, heretofore not well inhabited. In the greateſt part of this Province, as likewiſe that of Principato Citra, inhabited heretofore the Lucani, and therefore is called by ancient writers Lucania. The Rivers in theſe parts are the Smo, Agri, Salandrella, Baſiento, Bradan, which diſcharge all their waters into the Golfe of Taranto. Not farre from the head of the River Bradan lyeth Venoſa, honored with the birth of Horatius.

Calabria Citra hath on the North Baſilicata, and on the South Calabria Vltra, on the Weſt it is ſhut in with the Golfo di Taranto, and on the Weſt with the Sea, & is called in Latine Calabria ſuperior, or Magna Gracia, from diverſe colonies of Græcians that there where planted, where alſo dwelt Architas, Pythagoras, Parmenides, Zeno, with diverſe others, famous men, & among the reſt the Poët Ennius. Next followes Calabria Vltra, or Inferior, on the North-ſide of it lyeth Calabria Citra, all the reſt of it is environned with the Sea. In the Weſterne parts of theſe two Provinces the Brutij inhabited. The Rivers in Calabria Citra are the Laſno, Racanella, Cochilo, Crate, Trunto, Neeto, &c. Conſenſia or Coſenza, is the prime Citty of this Country, and an Epiſcopall Sea. On the other ſide of Crate is Sybaris, where there had wont to dwell great Drunkards & Gluttons. Roſana (where there growes Roſes thrice a yeare) is a ſtrong towne and a Biſhoprick, having many ſuffragan Biſhops ſubject to him. In Calabria Ultra are theſe Rivers, Amato which runneth into Golfo di Euphenna, Angetola, Meſſuna, Cems and Alece, which parteth Magna Grecia from the Brutii, as alſo the Apenne Mount, which runneth through the midſt of Calabria. In the Weſt end of Calabria lyeth Regio oppoſite to Meſſina in Sicily, where in the opinion of ſome ancient Authors, Calabria was by an Earth-quake rent from Sicill. Not farre from Capo di Burſano lay Locris upon Jonian Sea, where the famous Temple of Proſerpina was, and where lived the Law-giver Zaleucus: who ordering adulterie to be puniſhed with the loſſe of both eyes, was compelled to execute his Law on his Son the firſt offendor. Therefore to ſhew the love of a Father, and ſincerity of a Judge, he put out one of his Sonnes eyes and one of his owne. Next followes Sinus Sciliaticus or Golfo di Squilacci, and the towne of Squilace. About 150 furlongs from Capo della Collone, called by the ancients Lacinum Promontorium, lyeth Crotona, the men whereof were ſo active: that at one Olympicke game all ſeven, that overcame were Crotians. But their glorie much decayed in a battle againſt the Locrians, where 12000 of them were overcome by 15000 of the Ennemy. And thus much for the Kingdome of Naples.

The deſcription of the Kingdome OF SICILIE.

THE Ile of Sicilia or Sicily is the moſt renowned of all the Iſlands lying in the Mediterranean Sea, called by Thucidides Sicania from Sicanus, who in the opinion of Solin & Capella came to inhabite there before the ſeige of Troy with the troopes of Iberians. It was alſo called Triangular from the figure, becauſe it ranne out with three points, or Capes into the Sea, in the forme of a Greeke Delta. It is bonnded on the North with the Tyrrhenean, on the Eaſt with the Adriatique and the Jonian, on the South with the African, and on the Weſt with the Sardinian Sea. It is in compaſſe not much leſſe then eight dayes journey to ride about it, which containes 700 miles, and though it be of ſuch a greatneſſe, yet it lyes not above twentie furlongs from the continent of Italy.

For a healthfull aire, a fertill ſoile, and the abundance of all things, for the ſuſtentation and delectation of man, it is highly commended. It is ſituate under the fourth climate the longeſt day being thirteene howres and a halfe, and ſo excelleth other Countries for the mildeneſſe and goodneſſe of the aire. There growes ſuch abundance of Corne, that the Inhabitants reape a hundred buſhels for one, for which cauſe they call it in Italian Campo dallo cento Salme. What ſhall I ſay of the delicate, ſavourie, and odoriferous wines? Plinij taſting diverſe wines, was curious to finde out the goodneſſe of them that in deſcribing all ſorts of moſt excellent wines gives a particular commendation to the wines in this Iland above all others, he ſets downe Vinum Balnicium, which taſteth like honey wine, which is called Methegline; ſo that it is thought, that this Vinum Balincium, becauſe of the ſweetneſſe thereof, is Muſcadell: for the grapes which the Bees deſires ſo much to feede upon, are called Apianes or Bee-graps, which Bees and flies ſeeke much after, and therefore are called Mouſcatelles a Muſca, from which they make ſuch ſweete and pleaſant wine, that they call it Muskadell, though ſome imagine it is made, & mingled with muſke. This Iland alſo aboundeth in Oyles, Sugars, Safran, Honey, Salt, Mineralls and fruitfull trees, which beare excellent fruits, alſo in Cardoons or Arringoes, and abundance of wild Date-trees. They have ſtore of all kind of Silkes. This Ile produceth likewiſe precious ſtones, as Emeraulds, Agaths, Berils, Iaſpers. There is alſo Porphiries of two ſorts, the one mixed with white, the other with greene, and a kinde of red Diapre more precious then porphirie. There are Quarries of black marble, and of other ſorts interlaced with veines of diverſe colours. There is Alablaſter and likewiſe ſome mines of gold, ſilver & yron oare, and Diamants: alſo Alume; a number of goodly Oxen, and many great heards of other Cattle. There is brave hunting at Staggs, Hindes, fallow Deere, wilde Boares, and hawking at Partridges Phefants, & Heathcocks. Here are taken your Faulcons ſaker, gentle & outlandiſh, Ennemies to the fowle, which comes out of Barbarie and other Countries to pray here.

The firſt Inhabitants that we finde to have dwelt in this Countrie, were the huge and cruell Gyants ſo often mentioned in the Odyſſes of the Devine Poët Homer, called Leſtrigones and Cyclops, of which laſt ranke was the ſo much famouſed Poliphemus, that with ſuch humanity entertained Ulyſſes, and his companions. Theſe were rooted out by the Sicani, a people of Spaine, who called it Sicania, but the truth is, the laſt name came from the Siculi, who being by Evander and his Arcadians driven out of Latium, came and ſetled themſelves in this Iland, and having overmaſtered the Sicani, called it after their owne name. Now in ſucceeding ages, this Iland once known to the Greeks, there came from all part of Greece colomes to inhabite it, as from Athens, Sparta, Corinth, Sheſena, Mogaris and the reſt, who gaining upon the natives, planted themſelves in this Countrie. In tract of time here was mannaged a great part of the Peloponneſian warre, the Athenians ſiding with the Leontines, & the Spartans with the Syracuſians: in which the whole power of Athens was broken by Sea and Land, and their two Captaines Nicies and Demoſthenes murdred in priſon. Famous was this Countrie of old, for the Tyrants Dionyſi the elder and the younger: for Hieron and Hieronymus, in whoſe time broke out the firſt Punick warre, for the Sicilians calling in the Romans to expell thence the Carthaginians, became maſters of a great part of this Iland: ſo then the Greekes firſt, and then the Romans ruled over them. After the diviſion of the Eaſterne and Weſterne Empire, it was ſubject to the Conſtantino Politans, well nigh 2 hundred yeares Afterward in the time of the Emperour Juſtinian, the Gothes ſeized upon it, who within 17 yeares after were beaten out of it by Beliſarius. Then the Saracens gott it under Michel the Stutterer, and kept it 400 yeares, who were likewiſe expulſed by the Normans, and afterward gott new Lords, as the Longobards, Suevi & Germans, who were driven out of it by Clement the 4. After the Tyrants had bene rooted out, and this Iland conquered by Marcellus: it alwayes followed the Fortune of Naples: and together with it was offred to Richard Earle of Cornewall, brother to our Henry the third, a man of that riches, that he was able to ſpend for ten yeares a hundred markes a day: according to thoſe times was noe ſmall ſumme. The conditions by the Pope propoſed, were ſo impoſſible for the Earle to performe, that his Agent tould the Pope, he might as well ſay to his Maſter, I give thee the Moone, clime up, catch it, and take it. The Earle thus refuſing it, it was offred to the King his brother for his ſecond Sonne Edmund, who was inveſted by the gift of a ring, and in his name the Pope coyned money with the inſcription of Aimundus Rex Siciliæ. But the King being overburdened by his Barons warres, and the Pope having ſucked no ſmall ſtore of treaſure from him, it was in the yeare 1261 given to Charles Earle of Provence & Anjou, brother to Lewes the tenth. Under him thoſe Countries jointly continued ſubject, till the yeare 1281, in which time his Competitour Peter of Arragon promiſſing him to fight a ſingle combate before our King Edward the firſt at Bourdeaux, faild of word, and in the meane time ſo contrived it, that at the ſound of a bell touling to Prayers, all the Frenchmen in Italy were cruelly maſſacred: this exploit masketh now under the name of Veſpiri Siculi. Since which time this Iland hath belonged to the houſe of Arragon, & now to the King of Spaine. The revenews of this Kingdome are as ſome ſay but 800000 ducats onely, but as others lay a million of Ducats. It is divided into three litle Provinces. Vallis de Noto is situate on the South-East of it, the chiefe Citie of it is Siracusa, once containing in circuit 22 miles, and was the Metrapolis of the whole Iland, and a most strange and flourishing Commonwealth. It was built by Archias of Corinth, who being for an unnaturall rape committed on a young Gentleman, banished his Country together with his frend & companion Miscellus. This Citie contained in it foure townes, viz. Asradine, Neapolis and Tyche, together with the Fort Hexapyle, commanding all the rest. It was the custome of this towne, when any of them began to grow too potent among them, to write his name in an olive leafe, which being put into his hand without banishment was called Petalisme. The City Syracusa is so great, that it is said to be compacted of 4 large towns, whereof one of them is the Ile whereof I spake even now, which being girt in with two havens enlarged by the Mouth, and entrance of the one into the other: in which King Jeroms Palace stood, w^ch^ the Pretours now make use of. Shee hath many Temples, but 2 which puts downe all the rest, the one dedicated to Diana, the other to Minerva, brave structure before Varro entred into them. At the end of the Ile is a Fountaine of fresh water called Arethusa, full of abundance of fish, which would be overwhelmed with the waves of the Sea, were it not for the great piles of stones, which lyes before it. In the other town of Siracusa called Acradine, is a brave Market-place, fine gates, & pleasant walkes, a stately Senate-house, a large Court, and the most excellent Temple of Iupiter Olympia: The other parts of the Citty, having long and streight streets, are adorned with many particular houses belonging to the Inhabitants. The third is the City it selfe, where the Temple of Fortunatus stands, called Tyche; in which there is a great Schoole & many Temples, is very populous, and much frequented. The fourth part, because it was last built, is called Neopolis, wherein there is a great Theater, and two famous Temples, the one dedicated to Ceres, the other to Liberus, and the statua of Apollo, called Tennites, being large and very faire.

Secondly Mazzara containeth all the west corner of this Iland. The Cities are Morreall, properly Monreall, famous for the Church and Arch-Bishops Sea, also Gergenti, once Arigentum, where Tyrant Phalaris lived, who tortured Pirrillus in the brazen Bull, which he made for the destruction and torture of others.

Palerno, formerly called Panormus, a Colome of the Phenicians, and now the chiefe City of Sicily, and the seate of the Spanish Vice-roy, is a very ancient towne, as appeareth by the Epitaphs written in Chaldean characters, which is thought was built in the time of Abraham, being situate in the west Cape of the Iland, in a most pleasant and fertill place over against Sardinia, beautified with large streetes, delicate buildings, magnificent houses and temples, and girt about with high and strong walls, by King Fredericke, and by the Sea side stands a brave Castle, repaired and lately fortifyed in our time called the Sea-Castle. There are three old gates in the City & faire walls made of free-stone, adorned with fine towers and turrets. S. Peters Church was founded by Roger King of Sicily, a most stately structure wrought with networke, & layd with freestone polished, wherein are divers pictures, & images made by Gualterus the second Arch-Bishop anno 1185, where in are all the Sepulchres and Tombes of the Kings, Queenes, Dukes and Princes of Sicily.

Mona lyeth towards the North-east of the Iland, opposite to Vallis de noto. The chiefe townes of it are Nicosia in the Midland, Milaso on the North promontoiry, and Mesina a gallant City, lying in the streight just opposite to Rheze in Italy, a towne whose haven and entrances are so strongly sconced and bulwarked, that the people let their gates stand continually open. It is also an Arch-Bishops Sea. Catina a famous towne so often vexed by Dyonisius the Tyrant of Syracusa. And Erix where Venus was worshipped, and from hence called Ericina. The Messenians called afterward the Memartins were famous in the time of the Punicke and Atticke warre. Tornua, heretofore Tauronimium, is an ancient towne built by the Zancleans. Leontium, now Leontini, where the Sophist Gorgius was borne. Augusta heretofore Megaris, Castrogia, formerly Enna, Drepa, Heraclea and others. This Iland is watered with a number of Rivers & Lakes, which abounds in fish, as Mullets, Shads, Eeles, Tenches and Trouts. All the Seacoast as well by Pachina as Palermo, along the Tyrrhenean sea is Tunne fish, Congres, Murenes or Toungleese fish, Lampreys and others. The chiefe Rivers are Sanso, Taretta, Accatuis, famous for its Corall and precious stones. And fourthly Arethusa memorized by the Poëts: into which the Grecian River Alpheus having received 140 lesser streames, and making his way under so great a part of the Sea, is thought to rise againe. In this Countrie is the hill Hybla, so famous for Bees and honey, & the hill Ætna, now named Mungiball, which continually sendeth forth flames of fire from the abundance of Sulphure, and Brimstone contained in the bosome of this hill, which is blowne by the winde, driving in at the chaps of the Earth, as by a paire of bellowes. Through these chinkes also, there is continuall more fuell added to the fire, the very water adding to the force of it, as we se that water cast on coales in the Smiths forge doth make them burne more ardently. Erix was much renowned for the temple, which Æneus dedicated upon it to Venus. There are some other Mountaines, namely, Nebroda & Neptunius, upon which there stands a watch-tower to looke into the Tuscan sea. The abundance of Does and Hindes, which are upon it in great heards, gave the name to Nebroda. The Sicilians are for the most part of an ingenious spirit, eloquent, wittie and accute, but great talkers, suspitious, jealous, malicious, rude and rusticall, but good Souldiers, full of spleene, & thirsting after revenge. They follow the Religion of the Romish Church, and use the Italian language, but very much impaired, and falne from his true elegancy, as having commixture of the Greeke, Saracen, Norman, Spanish & French tongues. The totall number of the Inhabitants is about one million and 300000 Soules.

OF THE ILAND OF CORSICA and SARDINIA.

Name. CORSICA is ſo called from one Corſo, who was Lord of this Iland, or according to ſome mens opinion, in regard of the qualitie, and propertie of a point or top of a hill. The Grecians named firſt this Iland Cyrnus, after the name of Hercules ſonne: Ovide calls it Teraphone, as Villanovanus writeth. Others Teracina, now Corſica from a woman ſo named, who following her Cow hither, firſt diſcovered it, as Maginus witneſſeth.

Bounds. It ſtretcheth out Weſt & Northward to the Genoiſh Sea, and Eaſtward to the Toſcan ſea, and on the South ſide bordereth upon Sardinia.

Length & Bredth. It is in length not aboue 120 miles, though Strabo makes it to be 160, and Plinie 150 miles. And Plinie makes it to be 50 miles in bredth, & Strabo 60, which is ſoo indeed, according to the meaſure of the Compaſſe. The circuit of this Iland by Plinies calculation is 320 miles about. Others ſay but 305, or 309 at the moſt: but Maginus writeth, that he himſelfe meaſuring it exactly, found it to be 325. miles in compaſſe. There is very hard comming into this Iland on all ſides; by reaſon of the loftie and ſteepe Clifts and rocks, being within very montainous, and therefore unfit to beare corne and fruits, which grow but in ſome fewe places, where the land is levill, and open, and where it is watered, and moiſtened with rivers. That part which lieth towards Tuſcanie, is reaſonable plaine, and hath a fertill ſoile, which produceth noble and delicate fruits.

Fertility. This Iland affordeth excellent and choiſe wines, which were in great eſteeme amonge the ancient Romans, & therefore were called Corſican VVine. It yeeldeth alſo abundance of honey, oyle, figgs, reaſons, & roſſin. Servius ſaith in his 4. booke of the Georgicks, that the honey of Corſica is bitter, & unwholeſome; becauſe the Bees feed much upon the leaues of Yewe-trees called in Latin Taxus, which is venenous and cauſeth this bitterneſſe, for Ovide did verely beleeue, that the honey in this Iland was poyſon.

VVines. The precious ſtone called Catochites, being clammy like gumme, is onely found in this Iland, which Democritus Abderites uſed in the battle he fought againſt the Magy; Rhennius writeth thus of Corſica:

In Corſica and Sardinia is found alone (as men ſay) the precious Catochitan ſtone, which like bird-lime cleaues to ones bodie.

The like Plinie ſpeaketh off lib. 37. cap. 10. and Solinus cap. 9. but Plinie is in doubt, whether it be true or no. Here is found alſo good ſtore of Allome, and Mines. in the Countie of Nebio, neere unto the river of Bivinco, are Yron mines, and not farre from Saint Florences hauen are Salt-pitts, commonly called by the Inhabitants della Roia. Neere unto Niola are very deepe vallies, allwaies covered with ſnow, under which it is ſaid lies abundance of Criſtall. In this Iland, as Plinie and Diodorus affirme, grovves a great many Boxe-trees and venomous Yewe-trees.

This Countrie yeeldeth alſo excellent hounds for hunting, exceeding great good mettled horſes, fierce Maſtifes, & the Beaſt called Muſoli, not found in Eu- VVilde Beaſts & Cattle. rope, excepting this Iland and Sardinia. They are horned like Rammes, & ſkinned like ſtags, whoſe ſkinnes are of ſuch an incredible thickneſſe, and hardneſſe, that this beaſt falling headlong downe a rock 50 foote high, takes no hurt, but flies nimbly away from his ennemie, to his Denne. It is of the bigneſſe of a Hart, and runns very ſwift, and the fleſhe is very good and ſavourie: beſides there are in this Iland good ſtore of Cowes, Oxen, and Sheepe.

Ancient Inhabitants. This Iland was firſt inhabited by the Phoſcians, then by the Ligurians, and afterward by the Romans, who planted two Colonies in it, to wit, Mariana, and Alleria, now Galleria. The other parts were in thoſe daies inhabited by barbarous and ſauvage people, which when the Romans became maſters of this Iland, they carryed abundance of thoſe Ilanders ſlaues to Rome, but receiued litle good or benefite by them, though they bought them very cheape, becauſe they were ſo curriſh, dogged, and brutiſh. After the Romans, the Saracens domineered in this Iland, till the Genovvaies chaſed them out of it. Afterward the Piſans turned them out of it: but at laſt the Genovvayes expulſed them againe out of it, and ſo continues at this daye under the Signorie of Genoa.

Deviſion. It is now devided into two parts, Ciſmontanum, and Vltramontanum, that part which ſhooteth Eaſtward, is called by the Inhabitants Banda di Dentro, and the other Banda di Ivori.

Townes. Plinie rekoneth in Corſica 33 Cities, or Caſtles rather as Strabo writeth. The chiefe whereof at this day are 1. Baſtia, ſeated on the North-Eaſt part of the Countrie, upon a Commodious hauen, where the Genoenſian Governour keeps his reſidence, and a ſtrong garniſon. 2. Nebbio (being alſo a Countie) called by Ptolomy Cherſunum. 3. Mariana now Marian. 4. Alleria now Galleria both ancient Romane Colonies, the laſt being ſituate on the Weſterne ſhoare of the Iland, juſt againſt Baſtia. 5. Pila. The principall havens hereof, are S. Florence in the Northerne part: in the midway betweene Marian, and Nebbio, is S. Bo- Havens. niface called by Ptolomy Portus Syracuſanus, juſt oppoſite to it in the South corner: both of good ſafety, and capable of the greateſt Veſſells, that frequent the Mediterranean.

Rivers. The chiefe rivers which water this Iland, are the Golo, Travignano, Sagona, Bavona, Tegiamo, & ſome others.

Mountaines. The principall mountaines are theſe which the Inhabitants call Illia Orba, alſo Mount Chepartono, Tenda, Gualango, and Ruſſus. In the ſea betweene Corſica, and Sardinia is found good ſtore of Corrall.

Manners. The people (as they were in ancient times) are churliſh, dogged, ſtubborne, which their very countenance bewraies. They are alſo poore people, given to ſtealing and lying, very ignorant, and blockiſh in learning of any ſciences, arts or handicrafts. Their language is a corrupt Italian. They are ſaid to be the progeny of the 52 daughters of King Theſpias, who being gotten with child by Hercules in one night, were by their father put to the mercie of the Sea, which brought them into this Iland, & which they and their poſterity peopled, till the comming of the Tyrians.

Biſhopricks. The Biſhopricks of Corſica, which are under the Archbiſhop of Piſa are theſe of Ajacenſis, Alarienſis, Sagonenſis, Civitatenſis. The Biſhop of Nubio, or Nebiano is under the Archbiſhop of Genoa. Et thus much of Corſica.

SARDINIA.

Name. THE Iland of Sardinia tooke its name from Sardus the ſonne of Hercules. Timaus named it Sandaliotes, becauſe it reſembles a pantofle, or the ſoale of a mans foote. Mirſilus, and Chryſippus calls it Ichnuſa from the print of a footeſtepp. It is now named at this day, Sardegna, & is bounded on the Eaſt with the Tuſcan ſea, on Bounds. the South with the Adriaticke, on the Weſt with the Sardinian, & on the North with the Corſican ſea, which parts it from Sardinia.

Temperature. The aire in this Iland is very unhealthfull, for which reaſon alſo M. Cicero doth warne & admoniſh Q. Frater, to take heede to his health, and to call to minde, when he had his health beſt, that he was in Sardinia. He ſaith further in one of his Epiſtles, that one Tigellius lius a Natiue of this Iland, tould him that his countrie was a vile, and an unwholesome place.

Fertility. This Iland abounds in all kinde of Fruits, as wheate, wine, siluer-mines, cattle, and all other things necessairy for the use of man. Here are many horses, hot, headstrong, and hard to be broken; they are of a lesser size then ours, but very well knitt, swift, and generous. In the woods and mountaines there are also wilde horses, which belongs to no man. There is also Game & Caule. such store of game, as Deere of all kinds and other wilde beasts, that the Countrie men gett their livings with hunting. The Bullocks here doe naturally amble; so that the Coūtrie pezants use to ride familiarly here upon them, as they doe in Spaine upon mules and asses. Here also is the Beast Musoli, which wee euen now described, of whose skinne carryed to Cordua, & there dressed, is made our true Corduan leather. Wolues and such ravenous Beasts here are none, neither are there in this Iland any Serpents, or Adders upon which Silius verifieth thus:

Serpentem tellus pura ac viduata veneno,
Sed tristis Cælo, ac multa vitiata palude.

But in stead of snakes they haue a kind of a pernicious animall, called Solipunga, it is but a litle creature about the bigneſse of a spider, Lucanus cals it Salpiga, Plinie Solifuga, because it shunes the light, and liues for the most part in silver mines, (for this countrie is rich in silver.) It creepes slowely forward like a slouw worme; and if one sitts upon it unawares, it sendeth forth a most banefull and pestilent poyson. Finally, here is the Sardonian herbe, which Pausanias in Phocaicis saith is like Parsley or Smallage, called by the Grecians Βατράχιον, and by the Latins Ranunculus, and Strumea, which if one eate of it, is said he shal dye with laughter, whence came the proverbe Risus Sardonicus. This herbe being of a poysonous nature, causeth men to dye with such a convulsion, or contraction of their sinewes, that they seeme to grinne, or laugh.

The Manners & nature of the people. The people are small of Stature, laborious, given to hunting, prone unto rebellions, wherefore the Spaniards, as Ortelius obserueth, permitteth neither Smith nor Cutlar to liue there, and therefore neither weare they sword, rappier, or poniard: yet are they indifferent peaceable amonge themselues, and in some measure curteous to strangers. In matter of religion they are litle curious, going to Masse on Sundaies, & Saints daies, which once done, they fall to dauncing in the midst of the Church, singing in the meane time obscene songs too immodest for an Alhouse. Nay it is thought (as Mr. Heylin saith) that their clergie it selfe, is the most rude, ignorant and illiterate of any people in Christendome. The language they speake is a corrupt Catalonian. Their dyet and meates common, and grosse: their apparell in the townes (especially that of the women) gorgious, & that in the villages clowniſh, and base.

Devision. The Countrie is devided into two parts, viz. Cape Lugudori towards Corsica, and Cape Caghary towards Africke. Of these, when this Iland was jointly under the Pisans and Genovvaies, the first being the least, & withall so mountainous, & barren belonged to Genoa: the last being the larger, and besides levill, and fruitfull appertained to Pisa: the inequality of which devision, caused often discontents and warrs betweene them.

Townes. The principall cities are 1. Caliaris now called Cagler, built by the Pisans, standing upon the top of a hill, by the Sea side, just opposite to Africke, enjoying a goodly hauen, and much frequented by Merchants: adorned with a beautifull Temple, stately Turretts: the seate of the Vice roy & an Archiepiscall seate. This Cittie hath many fine priviledges, and haue two Majours or Bourrough masters of their owne, which the Citizens themselues elect, who haue power themselues also to punish malefactours besides the Kings lawes, as likewise to statuate, and enact new lawes, with the consent of the Communaltie. In this Citty rested the bones of Saint Austin a long time, till Heliprando King of the Longobards tooke them up and carryed them to Pavia. Here also the kings Viceroy keepes his residence, together with many Earles, Lords, Barrons, and gentlemen of quality. Mela and Plinie placeth hereabouts the Cittie of Sulchitana.

Lesser townes. Next unto Calaris are these townes, as Oristagnum, being a capitall cittie seated in a plaine, a litle way from the Sea side. The Countrie about it was heretofore called Arborea, but now the Marquisate of Oristagno. Here was in ancient times a colonie of the Romans, called Turrita. The towne of Sasaris lyeth in a pleasant soile, full of sweete springs, and having abundance of all manner of fruits, but it is ill fortified. Algher is a new small towne, but very populous and stronge, adorned with many fine houses and buildings, whereof the most of the Inhabitants are Arragonians. There is also Bossa on the West side an Archbishops residence, also S. Raparata on Corsica side, and lastly Aquilastro one the East side. Sardinia hath besides diverse other lesser townes, and Villages, which for brevitie I will passe over. There are many faire and pleasant rivers Rivers. in this Iland, but in Summer season are so shallowe that one may easely wade over them.

Here are in diverse places of this Iland the Remainders of sundry towers and Forts, which the people call Norackes, from Nora one of the sonnes of Gerion: who as they thinke came into this Countrie, and built the first mansion in it. It was first under the Iolatenses: secondly frō them taken by the Carthaginians; Thirdly by the Romans; Fourthly by the Saracens Anno 807. From these last it was recovered by the Genoys, and Pisans; and because they could not agree about their bounds, Boniface the eight putting his finger into an other mans pye, gaue it in fee to Ieames King of Arragon, and his successours, who driving thence the Gerovvaies made themselues absolute Lord of it, Anno 1324. The Spanish Viceroy hath (as we now said) his residence in Caliaris, and rules al'most with a great power and authority as a king, and no man must of necessity mannage this place; but he must be a natiue Spaniard, under whome are two Deputy Governours: also Spaniards, one for Capi Caliary, and the other for Cape Lugudovi. The Viceroy, hath also an Assessor, appointed him by the King who must be an Atturny at the law, he is also termed the Kings vicegerent, having likewise other Counsellours under him, by whose advise he disposeth of all things, & his sessions or Bench is called the Royall audience. Every third yeare a newe one was sent into this place, but now they stay longer, at the kings pleasure. Policie & government.

There are in this Iland three Archbishops & 15 Bishops.

The Generall Deſcription and Mapp
OF A S I A.

The name of Aſia and whence.

NExt to Europe followeth Aſia. Varro ſaith, that ſhee taketh her name from Aſia a Nymphe, of whome & of Iapetus Prometheus was deſcended: of which opinion Lycophronus and Herodotus were, who thought that theſe three parts of the World had tooke their names from three women. This fable of the women was rejected by others: which ſaye, that ſhee was ſo called, either from Aſius the Sonne of Artis, or from Aſius a Philoſopher, who gaue the picture of Pallas to Tros for the Gardian and Safetie of this Citie, and that he in the acknowledgment of this favour, called all his Countrie Aſia, which before was called Epyrus; & that ſince all the reſt of Aſia was ſo named from the nobleſt part thereof. Nowe as they called Lybia, aſwell the third part, as a part thereof: ſo was it obſerved that this word Aſia ſignifieth all the continent & parts thereof, which reacheth betweene Mount Taurus, wherein dwelt the Lydians, Cares, Lycaones, Paphlagons, Ionians, Æoles & others, which part for diſtinction is called Aſia the Leſſer. The Turcks call it Natolia, Varro in his 4. Booke de Lan. ſpeaketh thus thereof: Aſia, which is not Europe in which Syria lies, but this Aſia is called a part of the firſt Aſia, wherein Ionia and our Province lieth. All Aſia is called in the holy Scripture Semia. She is ſited almoſt all in the Northerne part of the World, from the Æquator to the 80. degree of the Boreall latitude; ſaving ſome Iles, which are in Aſia: whereof ſome of them extend themſelues beyond the Equinoctiall, whence ariſeth a great diverſitie, touching the length of artificiall dayes throughout all Aſia. For in her fardeſt parallel, which reacheth not farre from the Equinoctiall, and runneth through the laſt Coaſt of the Kingdome of Malaca, the longeſt daye is well nigh twelue howers long. About the midſt of the parallel of Aſia it is 15. and in the ſame parallel which is next to the Pole Arctike, there is a continuall light in Summer almoſt 4. Months. But according to the latitude, which extendeth from the Meridian of the 52. degree, to the Meridian of the 196. degree according to the opinion of ſome. Now if wee followe the deſcription of Mercator, the moſt Weſterne Meridian paſſeth the 57. degree, in the laſt Weſterne Coaſt of Aſia Minor: and the moſt Eaſterne by the 178. degree, from that part which lieth moſt towards the North, and were ſhe is conjoyned to Europe. Lower the river Tanaïs, the Lakes & Moores of Meotis, the Pont Euxine, & the Propontide ſeparate her from Europe. She hath on the North the Scythian Sea, on the South the Indian, on the Eaſt the Eaſterne Sea, on the Weſt the Arabicke Gulphe or the Red-Sea, the Mediterranean and Pont Euxine. And as toward the North, or higher part, ſhee bordereth upon Europe: ſo towards the South ſhee is joyned to Africa by an Iſthmus, or a ſpace betweene the Meriditerranean and the Arabicke Seas. Nevertheleſſe Plinie, Strabo and ſome others ſtretch her out to Nilus, and make all Egypt to be in Aſia. For the Aſiatike ſhore, doth not extend a right lyne from the laſt entrance of the Red-Sea towards the Eaſt, as Mela thought; but is cutt in the midſt by a ſhore, which hath many turnings & Gulfes. The principall whereof are theſe. The Perſian, which now is called Elcatiue & Meſendine: The Argaricke heretofore called the Gulph of Benigala, and the great Gulph which Ortelius imagineth to be the ſame which Plinie calleth Chryſus, named at this day Mare Cin. Aſia hath a Temperate aire very healthfull, ſweete and pleaſant. Yet ſhee enjoyeth not this temperature a like in all parts: for the right and left climes are according to Marius his opinion, malignant and intolerable, in regard of the extremity of heate & cold, which they are ſubject unto. The delicacies of this Countrie are ſo great, that they are become a Proverbe. The Soile is ſo noble for her fertility, diverſitie of Fruicts, abundance of Paſtures, and the multitude of commodities, which are carryed out of her, that ſhe excelleth eaſely all other Countries. There groweth abundance of Fruicts, Spices, Mettalls, Pearles and precious Stones. Here is Balme, Galanga, Incens & Myrra, Caſia, Cynamon, Cloues, Saffrā, Pepper, Sweete-woods, Vines, Grapes, Muſke & Pearles of all ſorts. Here are alſo a great varietie of Beaſts, & an infinite number of Elephants, Camels, Lyons and many other Animals, both tame & wilde. Wee muſt note alſo the ingenious ſpirits, riches & power of her people. For here God created the firſt Man in Paradice. Here was the firſt ſeate of the Church of God. Here were Arts firſt of all invented. Here the Law was firſt given, & here the doctrine of the Goſpell was preached to poore ſinners, with hopes of a bleſſed & an everlaſting life by Ieſus Chriſt the Sōne of the Eternall God. Here was the diverſity and the confuſion of Languages, which God ſent as a puniſhment upon man kinde for raiſing the proud Tower of Babel. In fine, here was firſt introduced and impoſed the domination & commaunds of the mighty over the weake. Here Nimrod the great Hunter began to domineere and raigne over miſerable men, ſpoken of in Geneſis. For the firſt Monarcks of all Aſia, were the Aſſyrians. The laſt whereof was Sardanapalus a Prince wholly addicted to luxurie, and giuen over to all laſciviouſneſſe, among the crue of his whores, who being a while after vanquiſhed in a Battaile, by Arbactus was burnt with all his riches, in a fire that he had prepared for his luſts, and cauſed this verſe, as an Epitath, to be engraven upon his Sepulchre:

Hæc habeo quæ edi, quæque exſaturata libido
Hauſit, at illa manent multa & præclara relicta.

After that, there began the Empire of the Perſian Monarchie, among whome Xerxes the Sonne of Darius, ſpent fiue yeeres in making his preparations for warre, which his Father had begun againſt the Grecians, & brought out of Aſia into Europe ten hundred thouſand men, having layd a bridg expreſly over the Helleſpont for to paſſe over his men, accompanyed alſo with ten thouſand Ships provided with all equipage & neceſſairies. But all in vaine, for he that durſt threaten God, menace the Sea, would lay Neptune by the heeles, ſought to obſcure the Heavēs with darkneſſe, to cutt and playne his way through Mountaines, and to haue made the earth to quake; after his army was defeated, could ſcarcely gett a Cock-boate to eſcape into Aſia, when his bridge was broken by the violence of tempeſts in Winter. Darius being the laſt Monarck of that Empire, was vanquiſhed & overcome by Alexander, who traced out a way to the Macedonian Monarchie, & brought the firſt Empire out of Aſia into Europe.

Aſia may be commodiouſly divided according to her ſeverall Kingdomes and the great States which gouverne her. The firſt part is under the obeiſſance of the Turkiſh Empire, whereof the firſt was Mahomet, who had a large extention: for he poſſeſſeth all thoſe ſpacious Countries, which lye betweene Pont Euxine, the Ægean Sea, the Mediterranean, Egypt, and the Gulph of Arabia, the Perſicke, the Tyger, and the Caſpian Sea. lius a Native of this Iland, tould him that his countrie was a vile, and an unwholesome place.

Fertility. This Iland abounds in all kinde of Fruits, as wheate, wine, siluer-mines, cattle, and all other things necessairy for the use of man. Here are many horses, hot, headstrong, and hard to be broken; they are of a lesser size then ours, but very well knitt, swift, and generous. In the woods and mountaines there are also wilde horses, which belongs to no man. There is also Game & Cattle. such store of game, as Deere of all kinds and other wilde beasts, that the Countrie men gett their livings with hunting. The Bullocks here doe naturally amble; so that the Coūtrie pezants use to ride familiarly here upon them, as they doe in Spaine upon mules and asses. Here also is the Beast Musoli, which wee euen now described, of whose skinne carryed to Cordua, & there dressed, is made our true Corduan leather. Wolues and such ravenous Beasts here are none, neither are there in this Iland any Serpents, or Adders upon which Silius verifieth thus:

Serpentem tellus pura ac viduata veneno,
Sed tristis Cælo, ac multa vitiata palude.

But in stead of snakes they haue a kind of a pernicious animall, called Solipunga, it is but a litle creature abour the bigneſse of a spider, Lucanus cals it Salpiga, Plinie Solifuga, because it shunes the light, and liues for the most part in silver mines, (for this countrie is rich in silver.) It creepes slowely forward like a slouw worme; and if one sitts upon it unawares, it sendeth forth a most banefull and pestilent poyson. Finally, here is the Sardonian herbe, which Pausanias in Phocaicis saith is like Parsley or Smallage, called by the Grecians Βατράχιον, and by the Latins Ranunculus, and Strumea, which if one eate of it, is said he shal dye with laughter, whence came the proverbe Risus Sardonicus. This herbe being of a poysonous nature, causeth men to dye with such a convulsion, or contraction of their sinewes, that they seeme to grinne, or laugh.

The Manners & nature of the people. The people are small of Stature, laborious, given to hunting, prone unto rebellions, wherefore the Spaniards, as Ortelius obserueth, permitteth neither Smith nor Cutlar to liue there, and therefore neither weare they sword, rappier, or poniard: yet are they indifferent peaceable amonge themselues, and in some measure curteous to strangers. In matter of religion they are litle curious, going to Masse on Sundaies, & Saints daies, which once done, they fall to dauncing in the midst of the Church, singing in the meane time obscene songs too immodest for an Alhouse. Nay it is thought (as Mr. Heylin saith) that their clergie it selfe, is the most rude, ignorant and illiterate of any people in Christendome. The language they speake is a corrupt Catalonian. Their dyet and meates common, and grosse: their apparell in the townes (especially that of the women) gorgious, & that in the villages clowniſh, and base.

Devision. The Countrie is devided into two parts, viz. Cape Lugudori towards Corsica, and Cape Caghary towards Africke. Of these, when this Iland was jointly under the Pisans and Genovvaies, the first being the least, & withall so mountainous, & barren belonged to Genoa: the last being the larger, and besides levill, and fruitfull appertained to Pisa: the inequality of which devision, caused often discontents and warrs betweene them.

Townes. The principall citties are 1. Caliaris now called Cagler, built by the Pisans, standing upon the top of a hill, by the Sea side, just opposite to Africke, enjoying a goodly hauen, and much frequented by Merchants: adorned with a beautifull Temple, stately Turretts: the seate of the Vice roy & an Archiepiscall seate. This Cittie hath many fine priviledges, and haue two Majours or Bourrough masters of their owne, which the Citizens themselues elect, who haue power themselues also to punish malefactours besides the Kings lawes, as likewise to statuate, and enact new lawes, with the consent of the Communaltie. In this Citty rested the bones of Saint Austin a long time, till Heliprando King of the Longobards tooke them up and carryed them to Pavia. Here also the kings Viceroy keepes his residence, together with many Earles, Lords, Barrons, and gentlemen of quality. Mela and Plinie placeth hereabouts the Cittie of Sulchitana.

Lesser townes. Next unto Caliaris are these townes, as Oristagnum, being a capitall cittie seated in a plaine, a litle way from the Sea side. The Countrie about it was heretofore called Arborea, but now the Marquisate of Oristagno. Here was in ancient times a colonie of the Romans, called Turrita. The towne of Sasaris lyeth in a pleasant soile, full of sweete springs, and having abundance of all manner of fruits, but it is ill fortified. Algher is a new small towne, but very populous and stronge, adorned with many fine houses and buildings, whereof the most of the Inhabitants are Arragonians. There is also Bossa on the West side an Archbishops residence, also S. Reparata on Corsica side, and lastly Aquilastro one the East side. Sardinia hath besides diverse other lesser townes, and Villages, which for brevitie I will passe over. There are many faire and pleasant rivers Rivers. in this Iland, but in Summer season are so shallowe that one may easely wade over them.

Here are in diverse places of this Iland the Remainders of sundry towers and Forts, which the people call Norackes, from Nora one of the sonnes of Gerion: who as they thinke came into this Countrie, and built the first mansion in it. It was first under the Iolatenses: secondly frō them taken by the Carthaginians; Thirdly by the Romans; Fourthly by the Saracens Anno 807. From these last it was recovered by the Genoys, and Pisans; and because they could not agree about their bounds, Boniface the eight putting his finger into an other mans pye, gaue it in fee to Ieames King of Arragon, and his successours, who driving thence the Genovvaies made themselues absolute Lord of it, Anno 1324. The Spanish Viceroy hath (as we now said) his residence in Caliaris, and rules al'most with a great power and authority as a king, and no man must of necessity mannage this place; but he must be a natiue Spaniard, under whome are two Deputy Governours: also Spaniards, one for Capi Caliary, and the other for Cape Lugudovi. The Viceroy, hath also an Assessor, appointed him by the King who must be an Atturny at the law, he is also termed the Kings vicegerent, having likewise other Counsellours under him, by whose advise he disposeth of all things, & his sessions or Bench is called the Royall audience. Every third yeare a newe one was sent into this place, but now they stay longer, at the kings pleasure. Policie & government.

There are in this Iland three Archbishops & 15 Bishops.

The name of Aſia and whence.

NExt to Europe followeth Aſia. Varro ſaith, that ſhee taketh her name from Aſia a Nymphe, of whome & of Iapetus Prometheus was deſcended: of which opinion Lycophronus and Herodotus were, who thought that theſe three parts of the World had tooke their names from three women. This fable of the women was rejected by others: which ſaye, that ſhee was ſo called, either from Aſius the Sonne of Artis, or from Aſius a Philoſopher, who gaue the picture of Pallas to Tros for the Gardian and Safetie of this Citie, and that he in the acknowledgment of this favour, called all his Countrie Aſia, which before was called Epyrus; & that ſince all the reſt of Aſia was ſo named from the nobleſt part thereof. Nowe as they called Lybia, aſwell the third part, as a part thereof: ſo was it obſerved that this word Aſia ſignifieth all the continent & parts thereof, which reacheth betweene Mount Taurus, wherein dwelt the Lydians, Cares, Lycaones, Paphlagons, Ionians, Æoles & others, which part for diſtinction is called Aſia the Leſſer. The Turcks call it Natolia, Varro in his 4. Booke de Lan. ſpeaketh thus thereof: Aſia, which is not Europe in which Syria lies, but this Aſia is called a part of the firſt Aſia, wherein Ionia and our Province lieth. All Aſia is called in the holy Scripture Semia. She is ſited almoſt all in the Northerne part of the World, from the Æquator to the 80. degree of the Boreall latitude; ſaving ſome Iles, which are in Aſia: whereof ſome of them extend themſelues beyond the Equinoctiall, whence ariſeth a great diverſitie, touching the length of artificiall dayes throughout all Aſia. For in her fardeſt parallel, which reacheth not farre from the Equinoctiall, and runneth through the laſt Coaſt of the Kingdome of Malaca, the longeſt daye is well nigh twelue howers long. About the midſt of the parallel of Aſia it is 15. and in the ſame parallel which is next to the Pole Arctike, there is a continuall light in Summer almoſt 4. Months. But according to the latitude, which extendeth from the Meridian of the 52. degree, to the Meridian of the 196. degree according to the opinion of ſome. Now if wee followe the deſcription of Mercator, the moſt Weſterne Meridian paſſeth the 57. degree, in the laſt Weſterne Coaſt of Aſia Minor: and the moſt Eaſterne by the 178. degree, from that part which lieth moſt towards the North, and were ſhe is conjoyned to Europe. Lower the river Tanais, the Lakes & Moores of Meotis, the Pont Euxine, & the Propontide ſeparate her from Europe. She hath on the North the Scythian Sea, on the South the Indian, on the Eaſt the Eaſterne Sea, on the Weſt the Arabicke Gulphe or the Red-Sea, the Mediterranean and Pont Euxine. And as toward the North, or higher part, ſhee bordereth upon Europe: ſo towards the South ſhee is joyned to Africa by an Iſthmus, or a ſpace betweene the Meriditerranean and the Arabicke Seas. Nevertheleſſe Plinie, Strabo and ſome others ſtretch her out to Nilus, and make all Egypt to be in Aſia. For the Aſiatike ſhore, doth not extend a right lyne from the laſt entrance of the Red-Sea towards the Eaſt, as Mela thought; but is cutt in the midſt by a ſhore, which hath many turnings & Gulfes. The principall whereof are theſe. The Perſian, which now is called Elcatiue & Meſendine: The Argaricke heretofore called the Gulph of Benigala, and the great Gulph which Ortelius imagineth to be the ſame which Plinie calleth Chryſus, named at this day Mare Cin. Aſia hath a Temperate aire very healthfull, ſweete and pleaſant. Yet ſhee enjoyeth not this temperature a like in all parts: for the right and left climes are according to Marius his opinion, malignant and intolerable, in regard of the extremity of heate & cold, which they are ſubject unto. The delicacies of this Countrie are ſo great, that they are become a Proverbe. The Soile is ſo noble for her fertility, diverſitie of Fruicts, abundance of Paſtures, and the multitude of commodities, which are carryed out of her, that ſhe excelleth eaſely all other Countries. There groweth abundance of Fruicts, Spices, Mettalls, Pearles and precious Stones. Here is Balme, Galanga, Incens & Myrra, Caſia, Cynamon, Cloues, Saffrā, Pepper, Sweete-woods, Vines, Grapes, Muſke & Pearles of all ſorts. Here are alſo a great varietie of Beaſts, & an infinite number of Elephants, Camels, Lyons and many other Animals, both tame & wilde. Wee muſt note alſo the ingenious ſpirits, riches & power of her people. For here God created the firſt Man in Paradice. Here was the firſt ſeate of the Church of God. Here were Arts firſt of all invented. Here the Law was firſt given, & here the doctrine of the Goſpell was preached to poore ſinners, with hopes of a bleſſed & an everlaſting life by Ieſus Chriſt the Sōne of the Eternall God. Here was the diverſity and the confuſion of Languages, which God ſent as a puniſhment upon man kinde for raiſing the proud Tower of Babel. In fine, here was firſt introduced and impoſed the domination & commaunds of the mighty over the weake. Here Nimrod the great Hunter began to domineere and raigne over miſerable men, ſpoken of in Geneſis. For the firſt Monarcks of all Aſia, were the Aſſyrians. The laſt whereof was Sardanapalus a Prince wholly addicted to luxurie, and giuen over to all laſciviouſneſſe, among the crue of his whores, who being a while after vanquiſhed in a Battaile, by Arbactus was burnt with all his riches, in a fire that he had prepared for his luſts, and cauſed this verſe, as an Epitath, to be engraven upon his Sepulchre:

Hæc habeo quæ edi, quæque exſaturata libido
Hauſit, at illa manent multa & præclara relicta.

After that, there began the Empire of the Perſian Monarchie, among whome Xerxes the Sonne of Darius, ſpent fiue yeeres in making his preparations for warre, which his Father had begun againſt the Grecias, & brought out of Aſia into Europe ten hundred thouſand men, having layd a bridg expreſly over the Helleſpont for to paſſe over his men, accompanyed alſo with ten thouſand Ships provided with all equipage & neceſſairies. But all in vaine, for he that durſt threaten God, menace the Sea, would lay Neptune by the heeles, ſought to obſcure the Heavēs with darkneſſe, to cutt and playne his way through Mountaines, and to haue made the earth to quake; after his army was defeated, could ſcarcely gett a Cock-boate to eſcape into Aſia, when his bridge was broken by the violence of tempeſts in Winter. Darius being the laſt Monarck of that Empire, was vanquiſhed & overcome by Alexander, who traced out a way to the Macedoniā Monarchie, & brought the firſt Empire out of Aſia into Europe.

thence to the Caſpian Sea and the Iſthmus, a partition of this Sea and Pont Euxine. The third part is held by the Grand Cham Emperour of the Tartarians, whoſe Limits ſtretch Southwards towards the Caſpiã Sea, the River Iaxartus, Mount Imaus, & Eaſtward and Northward is bounded with the Ocean Sea, and Weſtward with the Kingdome of Muſcovie. The Sophie King of the Perſian holdeth the fourth part, who on the Weſt hath the great Turke, on the North the Tartarian, on the South the Red-Sea, & on the Eaſt ſide the River Indus. The fifth part conteyneth India, aſwell on this ſide as beyone Ganges, which is not commaunded by one alone as the others, but by many petty Kings: for almoſt every one of theſe Provinces hath his owne Prince, whereof ſome of them are tributaire to the Great Cham. The ſixth is poſſeſſed by the great King of China. The ſeuenth conteyne all the Iles in the Indian Ocean, Eaſtward, diſperced here and there: among which are Taprobane called Sumatre & Zeilan, the two Iaves diſcouvred in over dayes by the Portugals. Borneo, Celebes, Palohan, Mindanao, Gilolo with the Spiceres of the Molucques. The Iapan & Guinea called the Nevv, becauſe it was lately diſcouvered, & is not yet knowne, whether it be an Ile, or part of the continent of the Countries Antarticke. The ancients as Strabo lib. 11. & Arian lib. 5. divide Aſia into many parts. Ptolomy into 47. Provinces, all which he repreſented in 12. Mapps in the 5. 6. & 7. bookes of his Geographie. Nowe the Regions which Ptolomie ſetteth downe are theſe, Pontus and Bithania, Phrygia the Great, Lycia, Galatia, Paphlagonia, Pamphylia, Capadocia, Armenia the Leſſer, Cilicia, Sarmatia, Aſiatica, Colchis Iberia, Albania, Armenia the Greater. The Ile of Cyprus, Cœloſyria, Phœnicia, Paleſtina of Iudæa, Arabia Petræa, Meſopotamia, Arabia Deſerta, Babylonia, Aſſyria, Suſiana, Media Perſida, Parthia, Carmania the Deſert, the other Carmania, Arabia the Happie, Hyrcania, Margiana, Bactriana, Sogdiana, the Region of the Saces. Scytia betweene Imaus, and Scythia: without Imaus, Serica, Aria Paroponiſus, Drangiana, Arathoſia, Gedroſia, the India on this ſide, and beyond Ganges, the Kingdome of the Sines, the Ile Taprobana with others adjacent.

Ptolomies deviſion.

Cities. Babell. She hath had three Cities famous throughout the vvhole World, Babell, Ninive and Ieruſalem. Babylon the Capitall Citie of Aſſyria or of Babylonia: the greateſt (according to Pauſania in his Arcadicks) of all the Cities that ever the Sunne ſhone upon, but novv their is nothing remayning of it, but the vvalls. Ariſtotle calleth it not a Citie but a Province. Dion Pruſeus in his 6. Oration ſaith, it vvas 400. furlongs in compaſſe. Oroſius lib. 11. c. 6. addeth 80. more to them. Herodotus lib. 1. Curtius lib. 5. Alſo Philoſtratus lib. 1. deſcribes it exactly. Thevetus calleth it Boughedot, Caſtaldus Baldach, Barrius Baggadad. But that vvhich Strabo vvriteth thereof, and after him S. Ierome, is, that Babylon the great Citie, is novv become a great Wilderneſſe or Deſert.

Nineve. Nineve is called by the Hebrevves Rahaboth as Arias Montanus vvriteth. Ptolomy nameth it Νῖν@ and Νινυή, vvho placeth it in Aſſyria. Ammianus doth the like, & ſaith it lay in Adiabena. Shee is called by ſome Muſſula & Moſſa, according to the teſtimonie of Marius, Leo nameth her Moſſall. She laye upon the river Tigris, & vvas built by Ninus ſonne of Belus the firſt King of the Aſſyrians, as S. Auſtin vvriteth in his 15. booke of the Citie of God. Theſe are his vvords, Ninus the Sonne of Belus vvas the Founder of the great Citie of Nineve, vvhich being derived from his name, that is from Ninus, vvas called Nineve.

Ieruſalem. Ieruſalem vvas the moſt famous Citie, according to Plinies opinion, not onely of Iudæa, but alſo of all the Eaſt. Heretofore it vvas called Hieroſyla aftervvard Hieroſolyma as Lyſimachus vvriteth, vvitneſſe Ioſephus againſt Appion. She is alſo called Ieruſalem, from Salem and Iebus, in the holy Scripture: Solyma, and Solyma by the Poets: Ptolomie teſtifyeth that ſhe vvas called in his time Ælia Capitolia from Ælius Adrianus Emperour her reſtorer, as Dion Caſſius relateth. Aſia hath a great manie Lakes, abounding in fiſhe, and a Sea called Caſpia in the forme of a huge Lake: vvhich notvvitſtanding diſcarges it ſelfe not into the Ocean. She hath many Rivers, vvhereof the moſt famous are Tygris Euphratus ſpoken of by Moſes in Gen. Alſo the Iordan, the Indus and Ganges. She hath alſo many marveillous & high Mountaines. Among vvhich Mount Taurus is the chiefeſt, beginning from the Eaſterne Coaſts, and cutteth through all Aſia, being vvith his ſeverall bendings in & out 6250. miles long, & 375. broad. It is very high, and inhabited vvith an infinite number of people. There it riſeth from the Indian Sea, it hath the North on the right, & the South on the left ſide & ſo turning tovvards the Weſt preſſeth through many Countries, till the Sea meetes it, as if Nature vvith a deliberate purpoſe vvould ſtopp & appoſe it vvith other Seas as here the Phanician & there the Pontick, novv the Caſpian & then the Hyrcanian, & on the other ſide the Meotidian Marſhes, vvhere it is then crouded up, and ſhocked on the one ſide & on the other betvveene the ſtreights & encloſſures: nevertheleſſe it broaketh out at laſt vvith ſinovves bending backvvard victorious, & riſeth like the topps of the Riphean Mountaines, having manie diverſe & nevv names, & notable markes in every place, being ſometimes called Imaus then Emodus, Paropaſimus, Circius, Cambades, Pharphariades, Chroates, Oreges, Orontes, Niphates & Taurus. Likevviſe there vvere it overtoppeth Caucaſus, & there vvere it ſtreatcheth out oftentimes vvith Armes, as if it vvould ſound the Seas, is called Sarpedon, Coraceſius, Crage & Taurus againe. But vvhere it openeth and ſpreadeth out, & taketh the names of divers places and Portes, vvhich are called there the Armenian, here Caſpian, and in other places Cilician. The largneſſe of it in many places is three thouſand furlõgs, the length equalleth that of Aſia to vvit 45. thouſand furlongs, that is, from the Coaſt of Rhodes to the furdeſt Confines of China & Tartaria. To come novv to the publick vvorkes, the magnificent Buildings vvhich Aſia hath had, deſerue to be ſett dovvne, for one of the ſeuen vvonders of the World. The firſt vvhereof vvas the lofty Walls of Babyll, vvhich being falne vvere made up againe, and repared by Queene Semiramis, lyned vvith burnt bricks, faſtned together vvith a glevvie lyne like pitch being tvvo hundred feete high, & 50. broade, that foure coaches might meete upon it, and turne at their pleaſure, having 300. Turrets to defend them in. There ſhould haue bine more, if the mooriſh grounds, in ſome places had not encloſſed it as a Wall. Three hundred thouſand men vvere employed in the Conduct & finiſhing of this prodigious vvorkemanſhip. Herodotus vvriteth, that the Walls of Babyll vvere 50. Royall Cubits thick, & that this Citie had a hundred brazen Gates. Then the Temple of Diana of Epheſus, vvhich never had the like: for all Aſia vvas 220. yeeres a building of it in a mooriſh place, to preventh Earthquaks and the rents, and openings of the Earth, and to the end the foundation of ſo hughe a vvorke might not be layd in a unſteddie and an infirme place. They ſtrovved firſt of all coales upon it, and aftervvard fleces of vvoll. There vvas in it 127. Columes or Pillars, 60. feete high. Every King made one for himſelfe, and 36. of them vvere carved vvith a marvaillous ſkill & cunning. The vvhole Temple vvas 450. foote longe, and 220. broade. The Architectour thereof vvas Cteſiphon. One may putt alſo into the ranke of the vvonders of Aſia, the ſumptuous Sepulchre, vvhich Artemiſia Queene of Caria cauſed to be built in the memorie of Mauſola her deceaſed huſband being 25. cubits high, encompaſſed vvith 36. Pillars, & vvas from the South to the North ſide 63. feete. Scopas built the Eaſt, Briax the North, Tymothy the South, and Leocares the Weſt ſide. The Queene dyed before this vvorke vvas finiſhed: Nevertheleſſe the Artiſans left not the vvorke, till it vvas fully perfected. Theſe things are numbred among the miracles of the World. There vvas likevviſe the Temple vvhich Solomon begann to build in the fourth yeere of his raigne, vvhich vvas alſo magnificent and deſerved to be accounted amonge one of the ſeuen vvonders of the World. Thirty thouſand men vvere employed to hevv dovvne Cedars and Cipres trees in Libanon. Then to fetch, cutt & to doe other maſonnerie of ſtones foureſchore thouſand. The breath vvas 20. cubits: the lenght 60. and the height from the Arches and vaults ſixeſcore. The ſtuff of the lovver building vvas vvhite ſtone. The largneſſe of the entrance into the Temple vvas ten cubits. The Chambres in it vvere 20. in number, opening one into another, & anſvvering one to another, and ſome others lovver under-neath them. The rafters vvere of Cedran, and the Seelings all gilt over, & all the Walls. The Holy place vvas ſeparated from the reſt of the Temple by a partition, vvhereof the Gates vvere engraven, & the vales fine and thinne, enriched vvith curious flovvers and rare compartments, vvith many interlacings and excellent figures, vvith tvvo Cherubins of pure gold, the ſtepps & ſquares of the pavement gilt. The Gates 20. cubits high, ſhyning vvith the gould vvhich embelliſhed them. At the entrance into the porch of the Tẽple ſtood 2. brazen pillars, 18. cubits high, and 12. in circumference. There vvas a brazen veſſell ſo great and large, that for the reſemblance thereof it vvas called a Sea: ſupported by 12. Oxen, vvhich bare it up, three & three on a ſide, according to the foure regiõs of the World, tovvards vvhich every one of thẽ locked. He kept 3000. Builders. There vvere many other figures, vvhich vvould be too long to repreſent. The Altar vvas of Braſſe ten foote highe, and tvviſe as long. A Table of gould, and 10000. Cupps and potts of gold, and foure times as many of ſilver. Ten thouſand candleſticks made of gould and ſilver; next to the Temple, there vvas a large hall in vvhich the people ſtood. This vvorkemanſhipp vvas finiſhed in the ſpace of ſeuen yeares, & this may ſuffice for this part of the World: lett us come to Africa, the third part thereof.

TVRCKISH EMPIRE.

Name.

BEING come into Aſia, the Turcks Empire preſenteth it ſelfe firſt of all to our view. Chalcondilas ſheweth, that the word Turck betokeneth a man, whoſe manner of life is ſomewhat auſtere & ſauvage. Poſtell affirmeth, that the Hebrews call them Togarma, and alſo Benjamin of Tudele doth the like. But they themſelves name one another Muſulmans, that is, Circumſiſed, or as ſome interpret it right Beleevers. They cannot endure to be called Turcks, having this terme in deteſtation, as ſignifying in Hebrew banniſhed men, or according to ſome mens opinion Deſtroyers, which ſpoile and ruine all. This Empire of the race and familly of the Othomans or Oſmanides is veryly moſt puiſſant, and of a very large extent, embracing many Provinces in Aſia, Europe and Africa. In Europe it reacheth unto the Coaſt of the Adriatick Sea, from thence unto the confines of Epirus, now called Raguza, and ſo running all along the Ægæum Sea, and the Propontide, with no ſmall part of Pontus Euxinus unto Theodoſia, a Citty in Taurica Cherroneſus, now called Caffa for the ſpace of 8000 miles. For the inward or midland parts, his dominion extendeth it ſelfe from Javarine, a Citty in Hungaria, which the Natives call Rab unto Conſtantinople, ſituated upon the utmoſt ends of Europe. Then in Africa he holdeth all the Sea-coaſt, from Bellù de Gomera unto the Arabick Gulph or Redd Sea, ſaving ſome few places ſubject to the Spaynard, & reacheth very farre into Aſia. The Countrie is for the moſt part fruitfull in graine, as Wheate, Barlie, Oats, winter wheate, Beanes, Peaſe, and all manner of Pulſe. It aboundeth in Rice, Flaxe and Cottons. They have Vines, whoſe fruit they make uſe of after divers manners. The Chriſtians make wine of them, & the Turcks prepare a kind of ſweete meate, by mingling honey & grapes together, which ſeemeth allwayes freſh, both to the ſight & taſt, this they call Vſum Turſi. The ground beareth alſo great ſtore of Pompions, Musk-Melons, Cucumbers, Nutts, Peares, Peaches, Oranges, Citrons, Chesnuts, Figgs, Cherries, but not in all places alike: for in certaine places as in Cappadocia and Armenia the leſſer, no ſuch fruits will grow there by reaſon of the extremitie of the great colde. They have Veines of Gould, Silver, Yron, Copper and Alum, diverſe kinde of Beaſts, as a great number of Camells, Mules and other Cattaile. The Turckiſh Horſe and Doggs are full of mettle, & be in great account. Their firſt chiefetaine was Othoman a Tartar, a Souldier ſerving under the Grand Cham, a ſtrong bodied man, and full of courage, who upon ſome diſpleaſure received, retyring himſelfe with ſome 40 Horſemen from the Tartarians, lay upon, and kept the ſtreights and narrow paſſages of Cappadocia, unto whome ſhortly after reſorted diverſe others, partly for hope of Boote, and partly to eſcape the puniſhment due unto the inſolences and violences, which they had committed, whereby he tooke courage to put into execution his intended deſſigne, which was to make himſelfe maſter of Cappadocia, Pontus, Bithynia, Pamphilia and Cilicia, moſt rich Countries, which came to paſſe about the yeere of our Lord 1300. After him his Son Orchanes ſucceeded, he maintained and encreaſed this Empire by the ſame meanes as his father had left him, but with greater forces, and riches then he had received: making uſe of the diſagreeances & quarrells, which were among the Chriſtian Princes: in ſuch ſort, that he ſeized upon Myſia, Lycaonia, Phrygia and Caria, beſeiged and tooke in Nicea, and ſtretched out his Empire as farre as Helleſpont. Amurath ſucceeded him, a moſt excellent man in feigning, and diſſembling his conceptions, but very laborious and couragious, & well practiſed in the Art militaire, no wiſe inferiour to his predeceſſours. In the yeere 1363 ſeized upon Callipolis in the Cherſoneſus, after which the moſt part of Thracia followed. Then he ſubdued Myſia, Beſſes & Triballes. After that having taken in Adrianopolis by force, would have fell upon Servia and Bulgaria: but was ſtabbed by a Servian, heretofore Vaſſall or Servant unto Lazarus Deſpote of Servia, whome he had committed priſoner. He left for heires Soliman and Baiazet, who after he had put his brother to death, was acknowledged Lord, & fell upon the conqueſt of Thracia, a perſonage of a high ſpirit, aſpiring after great matters, couragious in his enterpriſes, deliberate in managing them, exceeding laborious, ſubtill and diſcreete in laying hold upon all occaſions, and conſtant in the execution of his deſſignes: in ſuch ſort, that having ſubdued all Thracia, eer he attempted Conſtantinople, reſolved to make himſelfe maſter of Theſſalia, Macedonia, Phocide & Attica. Then brought under his ſubjection the Myſians, called at this day the Servians, the Illyricks and Triballes, which are named the Bulgarians, and put to death the Prince of Bulgaria. His Children were Calepin, Moſes, Mahumet & Muſtaphus. They murthered Calepin, and his Sonne Orchanes was ſlayne by his Uncle Moſes, whome afterward alſo Mahumet put to death. He ſubdued Valachia and Macedonia, and advanced his Turckiſh ſtandards as farre as the Coaſts of the Ionick Sea. And eſtabliſhed Adrianopoli for his Court and reſidencie, and 17 yeeres after dyed in the yeere 1422. After him Amurath the ſecond obtained the Empire, who by ayd and favour of thoſe of Genes, defeated in Thracia his Grand-father Muſtaphus, whome the Grecians did favour and helpe, ruined Theſſalonica, an ancient City, & in thoſe dayes very famous for the greatneſſe, beautie, riches & commodiouſneſſe of the ſite, whereof the Venetians were Lords: tooke in Cyprus, Epirus and AEtolia. Then deeming that the amitie and confederation of George Deſpote of Servia would much availe him, as well for the advancement of his affaires, as for the weakning of the Chriſtians, did perſue it in ſuch ſort, that he obteyned his deſire, and afterward marryed his daughter: ſo that with the helpe of his owne forces, and thoſe of his Father in Lawes, he undertooke the ſeige of Belgrade, where he loſt 7000 Turcks. Mahumet the ſecond ſucceeded him, who having ſetled the Empire upon himſelfe by the death of his brother, tooke in Conſtantinople an. 1453, upon the laſt day of May. Two yeeres after he beſeiged Belgrade, where he loſt ſo many men, and where himſelfe was ſo wounded, that he was forced to quit the ſeige: then he fell upon Bulgaria, Dalmatia, Crocia and all Raſcia. Beſeiged and tooke Trapezunte, otherwiſe called Trebizonde and Mytelen with ſome other Iles of the Ægean Sea. Tooke Eubea and Theodoſia, now called Caffa, a towne belonging to the Genois, he reigned 32 yeeres. Baiazet the ſecond made warre againſt the Venetians, from whome he tooke Naupacta, Methon & Duras, heretofore called Dyrrachium. Then having overrun & ſpoiled all Dalmatia, he was poyſonned. His Sonne Selim tooke the ſcepter upon him, who having beſeiged Caira, became maſter of it. The chiefeſt City of Egypt, and put to death the Sultan, and ſo made made himſelfe Lord of Alexandria and of all Egypt, tooke in Damas. Soliman his onely Sonne ſucceeded him, who tooke in Belgrad, not onely the Bulwarke of Hungarie; but alſo of all Chriſtendome. Rhodes, Strigonia, Buda and other Citties, beſeiged Vienna, and afterward dyed at the ſeige of Zygeth, having reigned 47 yeeres. Selim the ſecond ſucceeded him, who made a truce with the Emperor Maximilian for 7 yeeres. He bereft the Venetians of the Ile of Cyprus, ſeized upon Tunis and the Gouletta, and dyed anno 1575. Amurath ſucceeded him, and after him came Mahumet the third, who began to reigne by murthering of his bretheren: the Emperor of the Turcks then hath great and large Dominions. In Europe Hongaria and Thracia, with all Grecia, that is, Macedonia, Epyrus, Achaia, Peloponneſus, with the Iles belonging to the Ægean Sea: beſides a part of the Ilyride, or of Sclavonia, then Boſna, Servia, Raſcia and Bulgaria, which regions are all deſcribed in the Maps of Europe. In Africa he hath Algiers, Tunis, Tripoli, all Egypt from Alexandria unto the Citty of Aſna, which is Syena. But in Aſia he hath Natolia, which is Aſia minor, Cyprus, Paleſtina, and beſides theſe, Cæloſyria, Babylonia, all Arabia with Armenia. He hath in his Dominions 4 moſt famous and rich Cities, to wit, Conſtantinople, Alcairo, Aleppo & Taurus. Conſtantinople heretofore called Byzantium, which for the multitude of people ſurpaſſeth all the Cities of Europe: for it is reported, there are more then 700000 men in it: containing three German miles in circuit, and is rightly and truely called a world of the world, & the royall Seate of the Turckiſh Emperors. Aleppo is the greateſt Citty of Syria, and the moſt famous place for traficke, and is as it were the center, unto which all wares and Marchandiſes are brought out of Aſia. It is watered with a braunch of the River of Euphratus, which one of their Sultans led thither. Tauris or Tauriſium was heretofore the greateſt Citty of the Perſian Empire, which the Turcks have razed. The circuit whereof was well nigh 16000 paces, wherein it is verely thought, there lived 200000 Citizens. Alcairo is the moſt renowneſt of all Africa, and doth ſurpaſſe all others: the circuit thereof is above 8 miles. And is not onely as it were the Garner & Store-houſe of Egypt, & a great part of Africa: but alſo of India, whoſe Treaſures are brought thither by the Red-Sea, and from thence are carried upon the backs of Camells unto Cairo, and ſo are diſtributed along the Regions, which lye upon the Coaſts of the Mediterranean Sea. The Turcks delight greatly in building of Moſquees or Temples, Carbarſara or Hoſpitalls, Bathes, Stoves, Conduits, Bridges, Highwayes and other publick workes, which are very remarkeable among the Turcks, and make a faire ſhow. The Temple of S. Sophia in Conſtantinople is the faireſt edifice, that is to be ſeene yet ſtanding, and in the opinion of Bellon ſurpaſſeth by art the Pantheon of Rome. For all the inward parts of this Temple is built with arches, which are open in the upper part to give light unto it, ſupported with pillars of divers coulours: this temple hath as many doores to it, as there be dayes in the yeere. The Othomans Government is wholly deſpotique: for this Emperor is ſo abſolute a Lord of all whatſoever is in his Empire, that his ſubjects dare not call themſelves Maſters or Lords of any thing, but account themſelves Slaves of the grand Seignor, ſo that noe man is maſter of himſelfe, much leſſe of the houſe wherein he dwelleth, or of the lands which he poſſeſſeth, ſaving ſome few famillies in Conſtantinople, to whome Mahomet the ſecond, out of favor gave ſome rights and priviledges in acknowledgement of their merits. Among his Miniſters the Interpretor of the Alcoran called Muffli, like to the Pope of Rome, taketh the firſt place. The Cadileſquers have the ſecond, which are as chiefe Juſtices in all cauſes, and as Patriarcks, to whome they appeale for all ſuits and cauſes. Heretofore there were but 2 throughout the whole Empire: the one ordained for the adminiſtration of Rumelie, that is Romania, or of Europe, the other for Natolia, but the third was added by Selim the firſt, whoſe juriſdiction over all Egypt, Syria, Arabie, and a part of Armenia: theſe have commaund over the particular Iudges of every Province, who are called Cadis. After theſe Cadileſquers the Veſire-Baſſes follow in order: theſe are the Emperors Councellors, and are at this day about nine, whereof the chiefeſt of them is called Vezirazem, theſe adminiſter the ſole Government with great power and authority, with whome for the moſt part the Emperor adviſeth of ſerious affaires. Next unto them are in very great authority three Beglerbegs, whoſe office anſwere to the dignity of him, who is called Generall of the Campe: the firſt is Rumeli Beglerbeg, that is, of Romania: the ſecond Anatoly Beglerberg, that is, of Anatolia or Aſia: the third Demzi Beglerbeg, that is, Admirall of the Sea. The Turcks are ſevere Executors of Iuſtice, for if any man ſheds an other mans bloud, he is puniſhed with the ſame penaltie. He which is taken in adulterie, is ſtoned to death with the adultreſſe, without any mercy, remiſſion or delay. He which is found to have committed fornication, is to endure 800 ſtrips with a whipe or a cudgill. A theefe for the firſt or ſecond time is beaten with as many blowes, if he be taken the third time, he hath his hand cutt of, if the fourth his foote. It would be too tedious to relate all their Lawes and cuſtomes. They have divers ſchooles, wherein many are taught in their civill Lawes, given by the Kings for the adminiſtration of Iuſtice, and the defence of the Realme, whereof ſome afterward are advanced te Eccleſiaſticall functions, others to ſecular. They are dull ſpirited, blockiſh and laſie: curteous to one an other, but cruell to Straingers, great boaſters, arrogant and proud: they ſhunne all play of hazard, but delight in tables. In ſtead of Religion their falſe doctrine Mahumitiſme and ſuperſtition beareth ſway among them, which was firſt invented and forged by Mahomet about the yeere 623 when Heraclius reigned. In the Law of Mahomet all things are abſurd & rediculous, as touching the creation of the world, and the end thereof, of Paradice, Hell, Heaven, Earth, the creation of man and Mahomets voyage into Paradice. Nevertheleſſe he ackowledgeth one God, and commaundeth alſo to honor Chriſt, as a great Prophet, as alſo Moſes and himſelfe. He will have them count the yeere not by the courſe of the Sunne, but by the Moone: the Huſbandmen which dwell in Villages, till their lands by their ſervants: the Handiecrafts-men mainteyne themſelves by mechanicall arts: they trade diligently in Merchandiſes: they eate three times a day, lying upon the ground, laying their leggs croſſe one upon an other: their victualls is rice, fiſh and fleſh, but no porke: they uſe a kinde of bread, which hath no ill taſt, called Echmech, both white and browne as ours is. In dreſſing of their meate they uſe divers arts and ſundry ſauces: they drinke no wine, becauſe it is forbidden them by their Law, but in ſtead thereof, they mingle water, honey, ſugar or juleb together. Opium is in great uſe among them: they are all cloathed in long rayment: they weare a white Tulban upon their heads, but thoſe of the race of Mahomet is greene.

OF ASIA THE LESSER, OR ANATOLIA.

Names.

THis part of Asia vvas called by the Romans Asia Minor, to diſtinguiſh it from Asia Major, vvhen they made it a Region. It is novv called Anatolia, & corruptly by the Turkes Natolia, for the Eaſterne ſituation frō the Greeke vvord ἀπὸ ἀνατολῆς, according to Bellonius his opinion in his moſt learned obſervations. Some of our Modernes names it Turkie the Great. Wee Nevv Turkie, and the Barbarians Rom as Marius noteth, to vvit, that part vvhich containeth Bithynia, Galatia & Capadocia, to the Northvvard, and that quarter vvhich lieth Southvvard, as Lycia, Cicilia, & Pamphilia is named by them Cottomanidia.

Limits.

Anatolia is bounded on the Eaſt vvith the river Euphrates, on the South vvith the Mid-land Sea, ſometimes called by the name of the Region through vvhich it paſſeth, as the Lycian, the Pamphilian, the Cilician or Caramanian Seas: On the Weſt vvith the Ægean, or Archipelagus of Greece: and on the North vvith Pontus Euxinus, & Mare Majus, comprehending all that part of Cherſoneſus, vvhich teacheth from Mare Majus to the Cilician & Pamphilian Seas. According to Plinie it is 200000. paces in bredth, or thereabouts, to vvit, from Sinus Iſicus, or the Gulph Laiazza and Ports Amanicks to Trebizond, vvhich lieth upon the Coaſt of Pontus, agreeing therein vvith Herodotus, vvho ſaith, that the Iſthmus of Aſia Minor is fiue daies journey for a good Traveller.

Site.

This Countrie (as M. Heylin noteth) is ſituate under the fifth & ſixth Climates of the Northerne temperate Zone, the longeſt day being 15. hovvers and a halfe. It is adorned vvith many commodious Havens, & vvas once of great fertility: but is novv layd vvaſt and deſolate, greeveouſly lamenting the ruines of 4000. Cities & Tovvnes.

Fertility.

Theſe people vvere once valiant and induſtrious, novv ſo much addicted to a luxurious effeminacy, that the Turkes (unleſſe conſtrained by urgent neceſſity) never inrole their children in the number of Ianizaries. Here once flouriſhed the faith of Chriſt, ſealed by the blood of many of this nation. Here vvere the ſeuen Churches, to vvhich Iohn dedicated his Revelation. 1. Epheſus, 2. Pamphilia, 3. Thyatyra, 4. Laodicea, 5. Pergamus, 6. Philadelphia, 7. Sardis. All vvhoſe Candleſticks haue bene long ſince remoued, & novv curſed Mahumetiſme hath ſo farre encroached on them, that fevve Chriſtians remaine, and they vvhich are of the Church & communion of Greece.

Temperature.

Touching the mildeneſſe of the aire, & the goodneſſe of the ſoile heretofore, Cicero vvriteth thus: The Annuall tributes & reuenevves of the other Provinces (ô Romans) are ſo litle, that they vvill ſcarcely defray the charges of mainteyning them. But Aſia is ſo fatt & fertill, either in regard of the revenevves of the Lands, or the varietie of Fruits. The great Store of Paſturage, & the abūdance of all things, vvhich are trāſported out of it, that one maye truely ſay it ſurpaſſeth all other Countries. Formerly then it vvas rich in fruitfull fieldes, fatt Paſtures, Meddovves and Rivers, vvhich yeelded Gold. Once it vvas content vvith its ovvne bleſſings, and had enough to maintaine a happie and a bleſſed life, vvithout any neede of others. For Wine and Oliues it came ſhort of noe other Countrie. But herein it vvas unhappie, in that it vvas more ſubject to Earthquakes, & ſvvallovving up of tovvnes, then any other Countrie in the World, as Plinie lib. 2. in the raigne of Tiberius Cæſar relateth: ſo that 12. tovvnes in one night vvere ſvvallovved up. The Turkes vvhen they travell, accuſtome to aſſemble themſelues in troups and bands, vvhich they terme Carvans, that they may travell vvith the more ſafetie, every one of them cloathed according to their faſhion, having the Grand Signors paſport and an Interpretour & a Guide to ſhevve them the vvaye: and maye goe vvhich vvay he pleaſes, but onely through the Deſerts, & fardeſt borders of the Countries as Bellonius vvriteth.

The ancient gouvernment & Princes.

In Aſia there vvere heretofore many large Kingdomes, as that of the Troyians, of Cræſus, Mithridates, Antiochus, of the Paphlagons, of the Galatians, of the Cappadocians and others. It vvas firſt taken in by Cyrus King of Perſia, aftervvard by the Macedonians, and vvith Syria, Egypt & Babylon ſtrangly ſhared amonge Alexanders Captaines, & then ſaccaged by the Romans: & being brought to deſtruction by them, vvas at laſt miſerably loſt to the Turkes, and reduced to that thraldome and extremitie, that novv there is nothing of moment left in it; being all under the Seigneurie of the Turkiſh Emperour, vvho hath rooted out all the nobilitie and blood Royall, to make them all alike, as Slaues of the grand Signor, over vvhome he hath placed Sanziacks & Beglerbeys in every Province.

Natolia comprehendeth the Regions of Pontus and Bythinia (vvhich Province is properlie named Aſia) Lycia, Galacia, Pamphilia, Cappadocia, Cilicia & Armenia Minor. Deviſion.

Pontus.

Pontus & Bithynia vvere heretofore ſeparated by the river Sangar, vvhich ran through the midſt of it, and vvere both reduced into one Province, vvhich is named at this day Burſia or Becſangial. This vvas heretofore the Kingdome of Mithridates. The moſt famous Cittie vvas Trapezus, environned vvith a great Mountaine, formerly the Royall Seate of the Emperour of Trapezoncia, built out of the ruines of Conſtantinople, vvhere Georgius Trapezuntius vvas borne, vvhoſe learned vvritings giue ſufficient teſtimonie of his knovvledge. 2. Calcedon ſituated oppoſite to Conſtantinople, famous for the 4. Generall Councill, aſſembled by the cōmaund of the Emperour Martianus to repell the hereſie of Neſtorius, vvherein vvere 350. Biſhops. 3. Nicomedia, an ancient tovvne ſeated upon a pleaſant hill, vvhoſe name declares the Founder: hereabouts are many ſvveete ſprings, famous for the Baptiſme of Conſtantine the Great. 4. Pruſa novv Burſa a great citty ſituated neere unto Mount Olympus, once the chiefe cittie of Bithynia. This Cittie vvas founded by Pruſias King of Bithynia, vvhich betrayed Anniball, vvho fled to him for ſuccour. This Pruſa vvas a long time the ſeat of the Ottoman Kings till Mahomet the Firſt began to keepe his reſidencie at Adrianople, and tooke Conſtantinople. 5. Nice formerly the capitall citty of Bithynia, vvhere the firſt generall Councill vvas held Anno 314. to vvhich there aſſembled 318. Biſhops, to beate dovvne the Arian hereſie. 6. Heraclea Ponti. Herodotus maketh an exact deſcription of all theſe parts, and ſaith moreover, that the tovvnes of Tium, Pſyllum, Diopolis, Calpa-port, Artaca, the Temple of Diana & Chryſopolis lay all upon Pont Euxine. Aſia is properly called novv Sabrum or Sarcum, being bounded on the Eaſt ſide vvith Galatia, on the North vvith Pontus and Bithynia, the reſt is eaten up vvith the Sea. It comprehendeth Phrygia and Lydia, both the Myſia's, Caria, Æolis, Ionia and Doria. There are tvvo Phrygia, Phygria Minor and Phrygia Major. The Greater lieth Eaſtvvard: there are in it fevv tovvnes; but many villages. Amonge the reſt. 1. Midæum ſeated neere the river Sangar, the Royall Seate of Midas Sonne to Gordius. 2. Appanna the greateſt citty of Phrygia, lying not farre from the river of Meander. 3. Docymeum is a ſmall tovvne. 4. Coloſſe vvhere dvvelt the Coloßians to vvhome S. Paul vvrote one of his Epiſtles. 4. Synnada & Peßinuns, vvhere the Goddeſſe Cibele being vvorſhiped vvas called Dea Peſinuncia. In Phrygia the Leſſer or Troade ſtood. 1. Illium or Troy, a famous cittie, reedified by Pryamus, vvho ſuffred his Sonne Paris to raviſh Helena, vvife to Menelaus King of Sparta, vvhoſe rape cauſed the Greekes to ſitt dovvne before it, and after ten yeares ſiege, forced the tovvne, having loſt of their ovvne men 860000. and of them 6660000. A. M. 2783. ſo as that of Ovid may truely be inferred.

The greater Phrygia.

Troy.

Corne ſit for Sithes novv grovves, vvhere Troy once ſtood
And the Soyle's fatted vvith the Phrygian blood. Againe,
So rich, ſo povverfull, that ſo proudly ſtood,
That could for ten yeares ſpace ſpend ſo much blood,
Novv proſtrate, onely her old ruines ſhovves
And tombes that famous Anceſtors incloſe.

This cittie is renovvned aſvvell by the verſes of Homer as in Virgils Æneades. 2. Pergamus vvhich King Attalus of a Caſtle made a faire and a large cittie, by enlarging it vvith nevv edifices and buildings. This vvas the birth-place of the Oratour Apollodorus, and of Galen the Phyſician. Bellonius vvitneſſeth, that amonge the rubbiſh & ruines of Troy there are yet remayning ſome Tombes, and Sepulchres of Marble, & the ſtumpes of ſome Towers, and the ruines of the Walls. Here is that famous promontorie of Sigeum, & a ſmall towne honored with the ſepulcher of Achilles: which Alexander (viſiting it in his Aſian expedition) covered with flowers, and ran naked about it, as then the cuſtome was in funeralls, ſacrificing to the Ghoſt of his kinſman, whome he reputed moſt happie, that had ſuch a trompet as Homer, to reſound his vertues.

Lydia.

Lydia called alſo Mœonia, renowned for the birth place of Homer, who is therefore named Mœonius Vates, the chiefe cittie is Sardis, the Royall Seate of King Cræſus. Myſia upon Helleſpont bordering upon Troas. Here ſtood Lampſacus a towne & people of the Pavians, where the beaſtly God Priapus was worſhipped in as beaſtly a manner and forme, alſo Abida and Cizias.

Myſia.

Caria lyeth betweene Ionia and Lydia, wh of the Metropolis was heretofore Miletum, which is thought to be at this day Malaxo, but erroneouſly: for this fame was Mylaſſe amonge the ancients, which Plinie calleth lib. 5. cap. 29. Villa Franca. There is alſo at this day Magneſia neere unto Meander. But touching theſe people of Asia, it will not be amisse to cite here that excellent passage of M. Cicero, in his Oration to L. Flaccus. As I thinke (saith he) your Asia consisteth of Phrygia, Mysia, Caria & Lydia. This Proverbe then is it yours or ours, that Phrygia is accustomed to amend themselues by the whipe? what of all Caria? Is not this divulged by your Speech? If thou wilt make tryall of any thing with danger, make experience of it in a Carian: now what is more commun and more commended in the Grecian language, then if any one be dispised, or is of noe worth, he is said to be Mysiorum postremus.

Ionia. Vpon this Coast lieth Ionia, neere unto the Ile Chios, in which stood the famous cittie of Ephesus, whereof Timothie was Bishop, to which people the Apostle S. Paul directed one of his Epistles. This Cittie was first founded by the Amazones, renowned also for the Temple of Diana, which for the spaciousnesse, furniture and workemanship was accounted one of the seuen wonders of the World. It was 200. yeares in building, contrived by Ctesiphon: being 425. foote long & 220. broad: sustained with 127. pillars of Marble, 70. foot high, whereof 27. were most curiously graven, & all the rest of Marble polisht. It was fired seuen times. Here was held also a generall Councill. Also Smyrna and Colophon, both which stroue for the birth of Homer, and fiue others besides, cited by S^r. Georg Sandys in this Distichon.

Seven Cities striue for Homers birth: Smyrna, Ios, Rhodes, Colophon, Salamis, Athens & Argos.

Aolis. Æolis lieth betweene it, and Lesbos, watered with the riuer Caicus. The chiefe townes are Mirina, 2. Hidra, 3. Erithro. Cuma at this day Castri & Phocea, is now Foghia Vecchia. Dorida stretcheth out into the Carpathian Sea in Chersonesus, famous for the citie of Guida, and the Statua of Venus. Some place also in this Countrie Halicarnassus the natiue soile of Herodotus & of Dionysius Historiographers. This whole Province, as M^r. Heylin noteth, is in some approved Authours named Halicarnassus & Artemisia, who ayded Xerxes against the Cretians, is called the Queene of Halicarnassus. This is thee, who in the honour of her husband Mausolus built that curious Sepulchre, accounted one of the Worlds wonders, it being 25. cubits high, & supported with 36. curious pillars, of which Martial.

The Mausolæa hanging in the skie
The men of Caria's praises deifie.

Gallatia. Gallatia otherwise called Gallo-Gracia, tooke this name from the Gaules, who here planted themselues under the leading of Brennus, & who mingling themselues amonge the Greekes dwelt heretofore in these parts, upon Pontus Euxinus, betweene Pontus and Capadocia. To the people of this Province did S. Paul dedicate one of his Epistles. The principall cities are Gutia or Iuliopolis. 2. Ancyra (now Angouri) famous at this present for the making of waued and unwaued chamlets, & in former times for a Synode holden here, called Synodus Ancyrana.

Paphlagonia. Paphlagonia so called from Phaphlago Sonne to Phineas, where stands Sinope upon a hill in the Peninsula neere Mare Majus, being a good haven famous for Brasse, Lead & other Minerals. 2. Pompeyopolis, built by Pompey the Great. 3. Tios of old a Colony of the Milesians. 4. Curos built & named so by Citorus the Sõne of that Phryxus of whom Phrygia tooke denomination. 5. Amisus a Sea towne once of great fame, now called Symoso. In this Countrie was borne Mithridates, who for that cause so loued it, that he here kept his residencie, and made Sinope his regall Seate. This litle Countrie according to Maginus was heretofore the Seate of 4. different Nations, viz. The Tibareni, the Heptacometa, the Mossynoci, & fourthly the Heneti from whome the Venetians are descended.

Cappadocia. Cappadocia heretofore Amasia, reacheth from Gallatia to Anti-taurus, having Cilicia on the South & Pont Euxine on the North. It is 450000. paces in length. There, in the Themiscyrian fields was heretofore the renowned Kingdomes of the Amazons, which Tatianus, as Isidorus saith, surnamed Vnimammes from one papp. The leader of these people into Cappadocia were Plinos & Scolpithus two yong men of a great house, whome a cõtrarie faction had banished. They held a great hand over the Themiscyrii, who inhabited this region, & the nations round about them. At last they were all murdered. But their Wiues now doubly vexed, both with exile and widdowhood, and extremitie of griefe and feare, they sett upon the conquerours under the conduct of Queene Lampedo and Marpesia, and not onely overthrew them; but also infinitely enlarged their Dominions. The other Amazon Queenes were Ortera, Antiopa & Penthisilea, who came with a troope of braue Viragoes to the aide of Priamus King of Troy, the invented the battaile Axe, & was at last slaine by Pyrrhus Sonne to Achilles. The chiefe cities are Trapezus or Trapezond, the Imperiall Seate of the Comneni: for immediately after the Latites were possessed of the Constantinopolitan Empire, Alexius Comneus one of the blood Royall withdrew himselfe to this towne, & raised here a new Empire contayning Pontus, Gallacia & Cappadocia, about the yeare 1205. & flourished till An. 1461. when Mahomet the Great tooke it from David the last Emperour, whose name & progenie he quite extinguished. Erzyrũ, situated upon the Confines of the Greate Armenia, is the Rendevous for all the Turkish Souldiers, when there is any expedition in hand against the Persians. Amasia is the place, where the Turkish Emperours send their eldest Sonns, immediately after their circumcision, whence they neuer returne againe, till the death of their fathers. Mazaca called The Amazons Queenes.

by Tiberius Neo-Cæsarea, where Saint Basill liued. Sebastia in which, when Tamberlaine had taken it, he buried 12000 men, women and children, in some few pitts aliue together. Nazianzum whereof Gregorie Nazienzenus was Bishop, & Nyssa where lived an other Gregorie called Nyssenus brother to S. Basill.

Lycia. Lycia is adjoyning to Caria watered with the river Xanthus, of which the people hereabouts were called Xanthii, who being to weake for Harpagus the Persians Kings Lieustenant, first burnt their wiues, children, seruants and riches, and them made a sallie against Harpagus. The chiefe townes are Patras, Isaurus & Phaselis a notable towne for Pirats. Pamphilia is separated from Lycia by the onely river Cataracta. The chiefe townes are Seleucia, built by Seleucus one of Alexanders Successours. 2. Perga where Diana was adored. 3. Faselis, the people of this Countrie and of Cicilia, were called Soli, from whose barbarous kind of pronounciation came the word Solæcismus. In this Coutrie is the river Eurymedon, in and nigh unto which Cimon, the Sonne of Miltiades, Captaine Generall of the Athenians overthrew the Sea and Land Forces of the Persians in one day. He tooke and sunke no fewer then 40. Ships, and 3000. Gallies in the Sea fight: which ended he stowed the Persian Ships with his best men, attired in the habite and waving the coulours of the Persians. Vpon the Approach the Campe was opened, and all prepared to entertaine their victorious Countrymen. But the Greekes once in, suddenly put them to the sword, and tooke 20000. of them prisoners. Pamphilia.

Cilicia lyeth on the South East of Anatolia: the Metropolitan citie is Hama or Hamsa, called by the ancient Tarsus the birth place of S. Paul, an ancient Schoole of learning, situated in a pleasant valley. In this Province is the hill Anti-Taurus in the streights of which Mountaine was fought that memorable Battaill, betwixt Severus and Pescenius Niger, for the Monarchie of the World. Wherein the Nigrians being possessed of the entrance into the streights manfully withstood the Severians, till at last a sudden tempest of rane and thunder, continually darting in their faces, the very heavens seemed to fight against them, they were compelled to leaue the passage, and the victorie to the Ennemie, having lost 20000. of their fellow-Souldiers. Nigh unto this place Alexander the great with 30000. men, overcame the Army of Darius King of Persia, consisting of 600000. men, whereof 110000. lost their liues. The other chiefe Cities in those parts are Nicopolis built by Alexander in memorie of his victorie, and Pompeyopolis (mentioned before) founded by Pompey the Great, after his victorie over the Pirates, who not onely lorded it over the Sea, but wasted and spoyled the villages of Italy it selfe. Cilicia.

Armenia Minor reacheth to the river Euphrates, and is bounded on the West with Cappadocia. It is thought by some to be the Land of Ararat, on whose Mountaines the Arke rested, the remnants whereof Iosephus saith were in his time to be seene. The chiefe towne is Malexona, whose territorie is aboundant in Oile and Wine. Armenia.

Amõge the Lakes of Natolia, the Lake Astanus now called Lagedi Isnic, is the chiefest, through which the river Astanus runneth into the Sea. Lakes.

Natolia is watered with many rivers, the chiefest whereof are Iris now Casalmach, Halis, Ottomanquick, Parthenius now Dolap, and Sangar, Sangri: all which discharge themselues into Pontus Euxinus. Then Ascanus, Rhyndacius, Aesopus and Granicus, which disburden themselues into the Propontide, moreover Simois and Scamander, which is also called Xanthus, & falls into the Hellespont: the other are these, Caicus, Hermus, Castrus and Meander, which hath in it 600. windings in and out. Rivers.

These rivers loose themselues all in Archipelagus: but Calbis, Xanthus, Limyrus, Cataracta, & others disgorge themselues into the Mediterranean Sea.

The Seas which embrase, & beat upon Lesser Asia, are Pontus Euxinus, the Aegean, the Pamphilian, the Propontide, Hellespont: those of Icarus, of Myrtoe & of Rhodes, which are not onely most commodious for the bringing of all commodities into those Countries: but also aboundeth in all kind of fishe, whereof they make great gaine. Especialy the Pontus is full of fishe, because it is so shallow, that no great Whales or Brownе fishe can swime in it, but onely Sea Calues, Thornbacks & Daulphins, as Isidorus obserueth, for the greater fishes doe commonly devoure the lesser, for here they gather partly together in shoales, to cast their spawnes, and are partly allured thither, by reason of the sweetnesse & freshnesse of the waters, and by fishers are taken by making of hedges of wichers, bowred about when they come to sport, coole & refresh themselues under them from the heate of the Sunne. Seas.

The most famous Mountaines are Mominius in Pontus, & Mysius called also Olympus. The Synnadick Mountaines are commended for their Carreeres and Spinie topps. Ida a Mountaine in Phrygia, famous for the strife of the Goddesses, in spending their judgment about Paris. Tmolus in Lydia yeelding Gold. Argeus in Cappadocia, Aman now Mount Nigro in Cicilia, upon which grows tall Cedars. Iuneperus the Grand, & Mount Subina, which produceth most excellent & physicall herbes. Dindima and Mount Chimara in the topp whereof Lyons roared, in the middle Goates grazed, and in the Lower part Serpents lurked. Hence is Chimera, by the Poets fained to be a monster, having the head of a Lyon, the body of a goat, & the taile of a Serpent. Mountaines.

This Mountaine cast out fire as Mount Gibel, which as Plinie reporteth encreaseth by the infusion of waters. This is one of the highest topps of Mount Taurus. To conclude, through this Countrie runneth Mount Taurus, which reckoning his seuerall bending in and out, is 6250. miles long, & 375. broad. For it beginneth about Caria & Lycia in Anatolia, and is in diverse places called by diverse names, as Caucasus, Parapomisus, Niphates, Sarpedon, Penadres, Gordias, and Anti-Taurus.

At this day in Natolia and the Turkish Commaund, there is no great matter to be seene, but their magnificent Temples & Thermes, and Bathes, which are all like great Palaces. They haue also many Hospitalls & Lazarus-houses, called Carbacara. Throughout all Turkie, they haue no Inns or Alehouses for travellers, but onely these common Edifices, built for divers ends and occasions, especially for this: The grand Lords, which are growne very rich, built these Edifices in their life time, as memorialls after their death. The Turkes are contented with homely fare, are filthy in their dyet, and not acquainted with such delicacie as are amongst us. They loue powdred meates, which having taken salt, strowe cummin powder upon it, and them hang it a drying like Bartholmæus beefe, or smookt flesh in Dutch. They take Beefe, and the fatt of a mutton, and lord the leane with it, which they cutt into mammocks, salt it a little, and then drie it. The Turkes haue diverse waies for the dressing of their meate, among the rest a kind of a dish called in Greeke Stopides. Which they make in this manner: they cut a great nutt into foure quarters, and drawe a thred throwe them the length of a bodkin and dipp them often into hott wine, just as chandlers doe their candles. Some strowes meale upon them to thicken them the sooner. Thus also they prepare their Almands, Nutts, and other hard fruits. Their Handiecrafts-men liue most by mechanick Arts, & occupations, and many of them resort unto Markets and Faires very diligently, & thus much for lesser Asia or Anatolia. Marmers & Dyet.

Cyprus, Lemnos or Salamina, Chios, Mitylena, Negroponte, Cerigo and Rhodes.

Names. CYPRUS hath the honour to be the greateſt Iland of the Mediterranean Sea, dedicated to Venus, to whome the firſt Temple in this Ile was conſecrated. Heretofore (as Pline witneſſeth) it was called Acamantis, Aſpelia, Amathuſa, Colinia. Alſo Cryptus in that it was often hidden of the Surges. It was once called Salaminia, Lapethia, Paphia & Macaria or Bleſſed, becauſe of the wonderfull fruitfulneſſe thereof, containing in ancient times nine Kingdomes. Finally, it was by ſome named Cyprus from the abundance of Cypreſſe trees Site. that grow therein. It is ſituate according to Ptolomie in the midſt of the Iſſick Gulfe, called commonly Golphe de Laizzo, lying betweene Cilicia & Syria, haveing on the Eaſt the Syrian Sea, and the Iſſick Gulfe, on the Weſt the Pamphilian, on the South the Egyptian Sea, & on the North the hard and craggie Rockes of Cilicia, called otherwiſe Turcomania, & by Circuit. ſome Caramania. It is in circuit according unto Strabo 427 miles, 60 miles diſtant from the rockie ſhore of Cilicia, & from the maine of Syria a 100, from whence it is ſaid to be devided by an Earthquake, ſee Sr George Sandijs.

Promontoires. It hath many Promontoires or Capes: in the Weſt-part are the Promontoires Acamas, Drepan, Zephyrus: on the South the Promontoires of Phruria, Curia, Dades & Throna, on the Temperature. Eaſt Pedaſia, & in the North part Crommyon. The aire for the moſt part is unhealthfull & unpleaſant, by reaſon of the foggs & damps, which ariſe out of the Lakes & pooles: notwith*Fertility.* ſtanding this Iland is every where exceeding fruitfull, and aboundeth with all things neceſſarie, pleaſant and delightfull for humaine life: becauſe of the great ſtore of Corne, Wheate, Barly & other graine, which the Earth & Soile beareth, beſides, it yeeldeth moſt excellent Wines, which for goodneſſe may contend with thoſe of Candia, & have bene kept 80 yeares. It affords alſo delicate Oyle, Sugars, Honey, naturall Salt, digged out of the earth, Pomgranates, Orenges, Citrons, Lemmons, Dates & other daintie fruits. Alſo Cotton-Wool, Saffran, Corianders, Silkes & Lentils. Beſides al manner of herbes, there growes Egyptian Beanes or Colocaſes & other herbes, which have a ſavourie taſt: There are alſo many Phyſicall plants, as Terebintha, Coloquinta, Rhubarbe, Scammonia & diverſe other ſimples. There are in it alſo many mines of Gould, of Chryſocola, of Calchanta, of Alum and of Yron. There are found alſo ſome precious ſtones, as the Emrauld, Diamants, Chriſtall, white and redd Corall, and your Load ſtone; but it yeeldeth more copper & braſſe then any thing elſe. The Inhabitants reape great benefit by their Cottons, Wool and Goats hayre, whereof they make chamlots. There is a parcell of ground neere the ſmall towne of Lymiſa, which is ſo full of vermine and uncleane creatures, that noe man dares dwell upon it. Never the leſſe, there is a monaſterie where they breed ſo many Catts, which roames into the feilds and deſtroyes them much, and when a bell rings in this monaſterie they returne from their chaſe. Diodorus Sicil. lib. 16. re*The ancient Governours & Princes.* porteth that it was commanded by nine Kings, never theleſſe all of them tributaire and obedient to the Kings of Perſia. It was alſo governed by the Tyrants of Greece. Devided it was (as Sr George Sandys noteth) into 4 Provinces, Salamina, Amathuſia, Lapethia & Paphia, ſo named of their principall Cities. His poſterity poſſeſſed it to the daies of Euagoras, whome his ſonne Nicocles ſucceeded, to whome Socrates made an Oration. Afterward as Strabo witneſſeth by the aide of the Romans, it fell into the hāds of the Ptolomies, whereof the laſt of them not giving content to the common wealth, was depoſed and afterward poyſonned to death, and ſo came to fall into the lapp of the Romans. Their Empire beginning to decline, it was held by the Conſtantinopolitan Emperour, for whome it was governed by Dukes about 800 yeares. The Latine Kings ſucceeded them diſcended of the moſt noble famillies of the Luſignane of Gaule. Finally, this Ilād became ſubject to the Venetians by right of Inheritance, who governed it from the yeare of our Lord 1473, till Anno 1570, whē it was taken in by Solin the Turkish Emperour. It was once famous for 15 Cities; whereof the moſt of thē are ruined. The chiefeſt whereof was new Paphos, now Bapho. At ancient Paphos the natives ſay Venus firſt landed. Weſt of Baſſo or new Paphos ſtood Cythera, a litle village at this day called Conucha, ſacred alſo unto Venus, and which once gave a name unto Cyprus. Curias, Amathus & Ceravina erected by Cyprus, are now of great ſtrength & called Cerines ſituated in the Septentrionall part of the Ile. Nicoſia heretofore Letta, is partly inhabited by the ancient Greeke-Cypriots, and parthy by Turkes and Moores. Famagoſta is ſeated in a plaine, betweene two Promontoires in forme well nigh quadrangular, whereof two parts are washed with the ſea, in differently ſtrong, and containing two leagues in circumference. Beſides theſe Cities & Townes there are about 800 villages in it.

Neere unto the ſea-coaſt there is a very great Lake, which is 12 leagues about, into which there falls a ſmall river which comes frō Mount Olympus, which running a lōg the ſea-coaſt, is called Saline, from which they make ſalt in abundance; for the Lake it ſelfe is oftentimes congealed into ſalt, wherewith they lade ships of great burden. There gusheth out of Mount Olympus 2 fine rivers Lycus & Lapethus, the one rūning South the other North, ſome calling them Torrents rather then rivers: for ſome times they are dryed up and exhauſted by the Sunne, ſo that the Inhabitants were much troubled for want of water. There is but one haven neere unto Famagoſta, where ships can come in, but in times paſt there were many, which are now choaked up with ſand. There are many Mountaines in this Iland; but Mount Olympus ſurpaſſeth all the reſt in height, heretofore called in Greeke Trohodos, now the Mountaine of the Holy Croße, clothed with trees of al ſorts, & ſtored with Fontaines, and fruitfull trees, whereon are a number of Monaſteries poſſeſt by the Greeke Coloieros of the order of S. Baſil. The Inhabitants, of this Ile are civill, and live well and deliciouſly, they love ſtraingers, and uſe them curteouſly.

LEMNOS.

Name. LEMNOS is an Ile in the Ægean ſea containing in cir*Site.* cuite 100 miles, called by the Turkes Stalimina, & lies oppoſite to Thrace, betweene Cherſoneſus of Thrace & Mount Athos in Macedonia. The Countrie is plaine, if compared with the adjacent Iland. It is very fruitfull in Fertility. Corne, Wheate, Pulſe, Peaſe, Beanes, Wine, Flaxe, Hempe and other things. It wanteth wood eſpecially in the Eaſterne part, which is dry. But that which lyeth in the Weſt & South is more moiſt and flourishing. In the middley part and the plaines ſituated betweene the Hills there growes Figg, Nutt, Date and Olive trees. Here is digged that ſoveraigne minerall againſt infections, called Terra Lemnia & Sigillata, recerving thoſe excellent vertues of curing of wounds, ſtopping of fluxes, and expulſing of poyſons. It is called Terra ſigillata in that it is ſealed (after it is made up into pellets) with the Turkish Character and ſigned & ſo diſperſed over Chriſtendome. In regard of the quality of this earth, which is hot, the Iland was conſecrated to Vulcan, who ſignifieth fire. They uſe a great ceremonie in digging of this Earth, which they doe onely upon the ſixth of Auguſt, when they open the hole for it; neither is it lawfull for them ſo much as to looke into it all the yeare; but upon that day. The Inhabitants are forbidden upon paine of death to tranſport it noe where elſe, and the place out of which they digg it, is called Mount Vulcan. There are many Horſes in this Ilād of a roane or yealowish colour, The moſt of them are pacers, the others trott. There are abundance of Serpents in it. The chiefe Cities are Hepheſtia where Vulcan was adored now altogether decayed. The ſecond Lemnos or Myrirna, ſtanding in a pennifula joyned to the Ile by a narrow Iſthmus, It is a poore towne and of noe great luſtre. It containeth in all 75 villages inhabited by the Greekes, all except three fortifyed by the Turkes. Plinie ſaith there was in this Iland a Labyrinth, reputed the third next to thoſe of Egypt, and like unto that in Creta but Belloniu ſaith there are now noe markes remayning of it.

CHIOS.

Names. THE Ile of Chios, which ſignifieth white, was ſo called from Chione a Nymph, or as ſome ſay of the Snow; that ſometimes covers theſe mountaines. It was here*Site.* tofore named Æthalicus in Ephorus his opinion. It is ſituated betweene the Iles of Miteline and Samos, right over againſt Erythres. Sixe ſcore and five leagues it containeth in circuite, extending from South unto North: the North and Weſt quarters are extraordinary hilly. In the midſt of the Iland is the mountaine Arvis (now Amiſta) producing the beſt Greeke Wines and Malmeſey. It beareth alſo excellent Figgs and diverſe coloured marble, which the Romans com-

Theſe grow at the South end of the Iland, and on the leiſurely aſcending hils that neighbour the shore. In height not much exceeding a man, leaved like a Service, & bearing a redberry, but changing into blacke as it ripeneth. And that with noe leſſe dilligence then vines, other-wiſe they will afford but litle maſticke. In the beginning of Auguſt they lanch the rine from whence the Maſticke diſtilleth, untill the end of September, at which time they gather it. None ſuffred to come among them during the interim, it being death to have but a pound of new Maſticke found in their houſes. The wood thereof is excellent for pick-tooths. By reaſon of theſe trees they have the beſt honey of the world. This Iland alſo produceth Corne and Oyle in indifferent plenty. Some Silke they make, and ſome Cottons here grow; but short in worth unto thoſe of Smyrna. Their Orchards are here enriched with excellent fruits, among the reſt with Oranges, Lemons, Citrions, Pomgranates & Figgs; ſo much eſteemed by the Romans for their tartneſſe. There are abundance of Partridges greater then ours & differing in hue, the becke and feete red, the plume ash colour, in this Iſlād ſo tame thy fly into the fields to feede, & having their bellies full come back againe and run up and downe the ſtreetes and other places. The Gouernours. people of this Countrie were ſucceſſively ſubject to the Romans and Greeke Princes, till Andronicus Paleologus Emperour of Conſtantinople gave them, and their Ile to their Iuſtinians a familly of Genoa, from whome it was taken by Soliman the Magnificens on Eaſter day 1566.

This Countrie is divided into two parts, the one called Apanomeria the Upper, the other Catomeria the Nether part. The chiefe Citie heretofore was Chio now Sio, was one of the 7 townes, which contended for Homers birth, whoſe ſepulchre the Chians ſay is yet to be ſeene in an old Caſtle on the hil Helias. This City hath a very commodious haven though ſomething a dangerous entrance. And a Roade environned with Mountaines ſafe for shiping to ride in, beſides this it hath 25 other townes in it and many villages.

The Chiots were firſt a free people: being a cōmon wealth of themſelves, and maintaining an Navie of 4 ſcore ships. (Not deſtitute of diverſity of Harbors, whereby they, became the Lords of the ſeas.) This Ile bred Ion the Tragedian, Theopompe the Hiſtorian and Theocritus the Sophiſt.

LESBOS or the Ile Mitelene.

LESBOS or Metelene ſo named from the principall Citie, lyes oppoſite to Phrygia on Aſia ſide, lying not a bove ſeven miles & a halfe from it, containing in compaſſe 168 miles. The aire is very healthfull and good, the ſoile fatt and loaden with goodly crops of all kind of Corne and yeelds moſt excellent wine to be preferred before that about Conſtantinople. It affordeth alſo great ſtore of Marble, and the Agath ſtone, and many ſtrong and well metled Horſes, beſides Sheepe and other Cattell. As Methimna had a Citie which retained her name, ſo had her ſiſter Mitylen, which gave, & doth at this day give a name to the Iland.

Mitelene. Mitolino is at this day the chiefe City ſeated on a peninſula, which regardeth the maine land, ſtrong by nature and fortifyed by art, heretofore adorned with magnificent buildings, and numbred among the Paradices of the Earth, for a temperate aire, & a delightfull ſituation. On either ſide it enjoyeth a haven, on the South ſide convenient for Gallies, the other (incloſed with rocks and profound) for ships of good burthen: it had alſo formerly foure other townes, viz. Antiſſa, Pyrrha, Ereſſos and Cirava. This Iland was given by Calo Iohannes the Greeke Emperour, together with his ſiſter unto Franciſcus Cataluſius a Genoeſe anno 1355. in recompence of his valour and ſervice done him in the Turkiſh warrs. But when the Turke had poſſeſt him ſelfe of all the cōfinning nations, they became his Tributaires paying for the ſame the annuell ſumme of 4000 Ducats: his poſterity enjoyed it, till Mahomet the great ſeized on it Anno 1462.

The Ile of NIGROPONT.

Name. EUBOEA, now Nigropont is ſituate on Europe ſide over

Site. againſt Chios, hath on the South the Cape of Gereſtus, and on the North advanceth beyond the Coenea, being very ſtreight, and not above two miles over, where it is narroweſt. This Ile is in circuite 365 miles. It abound-

Chalcis. ships. The chiefe Citty of Euboea is firſtly Chalcis ſituate juſt againſt the cōtinent to which it was once joyned by a bridge. This towne when it was in the hands of the King of Macedon, together with Demetrias in Theſſaly, and the Caſtle of Acro-Corinthus nigh unto Corinth were called the fetters of Greece: in ſo much that when the Roman Senate commanded Philip the Father of Perſeus to ſett the Grecians at libertie, the Grecians made anſwer that in vaine was their liberty reſtored them, unleſſe theſe 3 townes were firſt diſmanteled. This Chalcis was taken from the Venetians by the Turkes and together with it the whole Iland Anno 1451. The ſecond towne is Euboea or Negroponte, the third Cariſtia. The principall rivers are Cireus and Neltus. It is related by Strabo, that if a sheepe drinke of the former his wool turneth white, if of the latter coale black. Here is the Euripus, which Titus Livius tearmeth the Euboick Gulph, a rapid & violent arme of the ſea, which ſeven times in a day and a night runneth with ſuch a violent torrent through the creeks and marshes, that a ship having a ſtrong winde can hardly beare up againſt it.

The Ile of CERIGO.

Name. THE Ile Cythera ſo called by Ptolomie, by Pline Porphyris and by Euſtacius Porphyruſa; becauſe of the Site. abundance of purpled Marble, which is digged out of the mountaines of it. It is the firſt Ile of the Ægean ſea, and lyeth Weſtward over againſt Laconia, and looketh towards Capo malo in Peloponneſus ſome 5 miles diſtant from it if Pline and Strabo doe not erre: it is in compaſſe ſome 60 miles. As Bordonius relateth, there are abundance of wilde Aſſes in it, which have a certaine kind of ſtone in their heads of an excellent vertue for the falling ſicknes, Aches in the flankes, and good to help the deliverance of women. It hath a towne of the ſame name. It is deffended by the rocks in them ſelves inacceſſible, which on all ſides environ it, havens it hath many, but thoſe ſmall and difficult to enter. In this Ile was a temple dedicate to Venus, out of which Helena the wife of Menelaus was willingly ravished by Paris.

VVilde Aſſes.

RHODES.

Name. THE Ile of Rhodes as Pline ſaith, was heretofore called Ophiuſa, Aſteria, Æthrea, Trinachia, Atabyria & Macaria. Some write as S^t. Georg Sādis ſaith, that it tooke this name of Rhoda a Nymph of theſe ſeas, and there compreſſed by Apollo; others that here he lay with Venus, and of her begatt that Rhoda: for Rhodes in the Greeke tongue ſignifieth a roſe, and by likely hood ſo called of the abundance of Roſes, which this ſoile produceth. It lyeth ſome

Site. 20 thowſand paces diſtant from the continent of Aſia in the Carpathian ſea, over againſt Caria a Province of leſſer Aſia, & is in circuit 140 miles. The aire is here moſt temperate, producing fruits abundantly, rich paſtures, ſprinkled with flowers, and trees ſtill flouriſhing as Oranges and Citrons. This Iland was conſecrated to the Sunne, becauſe there is not

Fertility. a day that paſſeth over it but the Sunne is ſaid to shine in it. Rhodes was given by Emanuell the Greeke Emperour to the Kinghts of Ieruſalem, who kept and defended it many times againſt the furie, & aſſaults of the Turks, til at length it was taken by Solyman the magnificent, (Villerius being then great maiſter) after ſixe months ſeige, with a world of people and the loſſe of moſt of them, in the yeare 1522, after it had ben by thē defended againſt the Infidels 240 yeares, having then one Cittie onely, but that well fortified, ſeated towards the morning Sunne, on the aſcending hill, a part on the levell shore, embracing as it were a moſt ſafe and admirable haven, treble walled, adorned with towers, and fortifyed with five ſtrong fortreſſes. It was famous alſo for the mildneſſe of the aire the art of Navigation, the ſtudie of Eloquence, and for the ſerenity, and brightneſſe of the Sunne. In this Iland was erected to the Sunne, that huge Coloſſus of braſſe, worthily re-

A Coloſſus. puted among the worlds ſeven wonders, made by Charetus of Lindus, the ſervant of Lyſippus, & whereof as ſome affirme, they were called Coloſsians. In height it was 70 Cubits, every finger as great as an ordinary ſtatue, and the thumbe to great to be fathomed. Twelve yeares it was a makeing, and a bout 66 yeares after throwne downe by an Earthquake, which tirribly shooke the whole Iland, propheſied of by Sybel. The peeces thereof made wonderfull ruptures in the Earth: & an other wonder it was to ſee the maſſe of ſtones cōtained therein, whereby the workemen had confirmed it againſt the violence of weather, with the braſſe thereof 900 Camels were laden. Noe place in times paſt was held ſuperiour unto this for conveniencie of harbour, magnificent buildings, & other excellencies. Famous it was alſo for government, & men ſo expert in navigation, that they became Lords, and for many yeares held the Soveraignity of the ſeas.

The deſcription of the HOLY LAND,
Or the Land of PROMISE.

Name. IN former ages this was one of the moſt famous Provinces of Syria, called firſt the land of Canaan, from Canaan the Sonne of Cham, who by his often chaſings was driven to poſſeſſe and inhabite the ſame. Secondly, it was called the land of Promiſe, becauſe the Lord had promiſſed it to the Patriarcks Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, and their ſeed. Thirdly, Iſrael of the Iſraelites, ſo called from Iacob, who was ſurnamed Iſrael. Fourthly, Iudea from the Jewes, or people of the tribe of Iuda. Fifthly, Paleſtine by Ptol. & others, quaſi Philiſtini, the land of the Philiſtines, a potent nation, that dwelt there. Sixtly, the Holy Land, ſo named by the Chriſtians, becauſe herein was wrought by Chriſt the worke of our ſaluation.

This Countrie is ſituated in the midſt of the world, betweene the third & fourth Climates, the longeſt day being 14 howers & a quarter, betweene the Midland-Sea and Arabia, from which it is bulwarked beyond Jordan, with a continuall ridge of Mountaines, on the Bounds. Eaſt lyes Cæloſyria, and Arabia Petrea, on the South Idumea, the wilderneſſe of Pharan and Egypt, on the Weſt a part of Phœnicia, and the reſt hath the Mediterranean Sea, and on the North are the Mountaines of Libanus, and a part of Phœnicia. It is diſtant from the line 31 degrees, extending unto 33, ſo that in length from Dan unto Berſheba, it containeth not more then 140 miles, where brodeſt not 50.

Temperature. This famous land was once commended above all Countries under the Sunne, eſpecially in regard of the ſalubritie and wholeſomeneſſe of the aire, being ſeated under a temperate clime, where the winter is not too colde, nor the ſummer too hot. And for fertility a land, Fertility. that flowed with milke and honey, adorned with beautifull Mountaines & delightfull Vallies, the rocks producing excellent waters, and noe part emty of delight or profit, for the Soile yeelds abundance of all fruits, and encreaſe, having at once ſuſtained of her own thirteene hundred thouſand fighting men.

Cattell & Beaſts. This land alſo aboundeth in ſweete ſprings, & pleaſant Paſtures, where they fed a great many flocks of Sheepe, and Heards of Cattell & Bullocks, which gave as excellent milke as any countrie in the World. There is alſo brave hunting, & hauking, for Deere, Goates, Hares, Partridges, Quailes, and other Birds; likewiſe they have all kinde of Foule: alſo there are great ſtore of Wolves, Harts, Lyons, Beares & other wilde Beaſts founde there in abundance.

The land of Canaan was heretofore divided into 30 Kingdomes and Kings, when the Iſraelites conquered it, the moſt of the ancient Inhabitants, being for their ſinnes by God expulſed this land, and put to the ſword by the Iſraelites. The Iſraelites ruled this land about 450 yeares by Princes and Judges, till the time of the Prophet Samuell: theſe Princes or Judges were not all of one tribe, but the beſt graveſt and eldeſt were ſelected and choſen out of every tribe. Afterwards the Iſraelites growing weary of this Government, at their earneſt requeſt the Lord appointed them a King, & ſo their Government was changed into a Monarchie, which continued many ages: but in proceſſe of time, the Iſraelites endured many miſeries & afflictions, till at laſt they ſaw the utter ruine and ſubverſion of their Kingdome

What alterations hapned to this nation, & with how many ſeverall warrs they were plagued (either becauſe of their owne ſtifneckedneſſe, that they would not be obedient to their own Princes, or brooke any forraine Government, or that for their rebellion, and ſinnes the wrath of God was oftentimes kindled againſt them, or that forraine Princes were ambitious to incorporate this happy land) holy writ, and Hiſtoriographers witneſſe the ſame at large. For how oftentimes were they ſubdued and brought into ſlavery & bondage, becauſe of their ſinnes, and that they did not governe and behave themſelves well: for ſometimes their necks were brought under the yoake of their Neighbours: Otherwhiles udder forraine and remote Nations, as the Egyptians, Chaldeans, Medes; Perſians, Macedonians and Romans, yea, & would never ceaſe by their rebellions, ſeditions & conſpiracies, to bring their Government and Common-wealth to utter deſtruction, to perſecute & put to death the Saints & Prophets ſent them from God, yea, & at laſt to crucifie the Sonne of God, the Lord of Glorie, and the Saviour of mankind, by their horrible and murderous hand, and to naile him to the Croſſe. After this, what plagues & puniſhments fell upon them againe by the juſt judgement of God. For Titus Veſpaſianus in the yeare of Chriſts nativity 73. after he had conquered their Countrie, and taken in Ieruſalem, carried away with him many 1000 Jewes Captives, and a million of them was conſumed by famine, peſtilence, fire and ſword, & deſtroyed & burnt the Temple and all the ornaments thereof, & layd vaſt and levell with the ground, the magnificent ſtructures and buildings thereof, ſo that herein was verified the Prophecie of Chriſt, while he was upon the Earth, that one ſtone ſhould not be left upon an other.

The whole land containeth 4 Regions, Idumea, Iudea, Samaria and Galilea. Idumea beginneth at Mount Caſſius, or as ſome will from the Lake Sirbon, reaching to the Eaſtward of Iudea. The chiefe Citties are Mareſa, Rhinocorura, Rapha, Antedon, Aſcalon, Azotus & Gaza. Mareſa was the birthplace of the Prophet Micha. Neere unto this towne Iudas Macchabæus overthrew Gorgius. Rhinocorura, Rapha and Antedon are townes of noe great note. Of Aſcalon Sir George Sandis writeth thus in his travells, that it is now a place of noe great reckoning, more then that the Turke doth keepe there a garriſon. Venerable heretofore among thoſe Heathen for the Temple of Dagon, and the birth of Semiramis begotten of their Goddeſſe Decreta, who enflamed with the love of a certaine youth, that ſacrificed unto her, and having by him a daughter aſhamed of her incontinencie, did put him away, expoſed the child to the Deſarts, and confounded with ſorrow, threw her ſelfe into a Lake, repleniſhed with fiſh, adjoyning to the Citty. This Decreta is ſaid to be that Dagon the Idoll of the Aſcalonites, mentioned in the Scripture, which Idumea.

signifyeth the fish of Sorrow, who had her Temple close by that Lake, with her image in the figure of a fish, all excepting the face, which resembled a woman. But the Infant nourished by Doves, which brought her milke from the pailes of the Pastors, after became the wife of Ninus, and Queene of Assyria, whereupon shee was called Semiramis, which signifyeth a Dove in the Syrian tongue. In memoriall whereof, the babylonians did beare a Dove in their Ensignes, confirmed by the Prophecie of Jeremia, who foretelling of the devastation of Iudea, adviseth them to fly from the sword of the Dove. Azotos where was a sumptuous Temple built to the Lieutenant to Demetrius. Eight miles beyond that, stands Acharon or Ecron, where Belzebub was worshipped, to whome Ahaziah sent to enquire of his health. Lastly, Gaza or Aza, one of the five principall Citties belonging to the Palestines, called Philistines in the Scripture. Gaza signifyeth strong. In the Persian language a treasurie, so said to be called by Cambysis, who invading Egypt, sent thither the riches purchased in that warre: it was also called Constantia by the Emperour Constantine. First famous for the acts of Sampson, who lived about the time of the Troyan warres, whose force and Fortunes, are said to have given to the Poëts, their inventions of Hercules, who liven not long before him. And afterward famous for the 2 wounds there received by Alexander the great, then counted the principall Citty of Syra. Also there lyeth Ioppa, now Iassa, a famous Mart-towne, & a good haven, where Ionah tooke ship to fly into Tarsus, where Peter raised Dorcas from death, to life and where he lying in a house of one Symon the Tanner, was in vision taught the conversions of the Gentiles. This citty they report to have bene built before the flood. Here raigned Cepheus the Sonne of Phœnix, whose daughter Andromeda was by Peseus delivered from a Seamonster, some of whose bones the people had wont to shew to Straingers, even till the flourishing of the Romans. Here lyeth Gath also the Countrie of that huge Giant Goliah.

Iudea is the chiefest part of Palestina, and is of the same extent now, as it was when it was the Kingdome of Iuda, and contained the 2 great and puissant tribes of Iuda and Benjamin. It lyeth betweene the Midland Sea, and Lacus Asphaltitis, or the dead Sea, and betwixt Samaria & Idumea. It tooke this name from the tribe of Iuda. Among other Citties and townes lyeth Ierusalem.

Besides Ierusalem also there are in this Countrie diverse other townes and famous Citties. as Iericho, called now Iaffa, Turris Stratonis, afterward named Cæsarea, Hebron formerly Arbea, also Mambre and Carioth, that is to say a towne of foure men, the birth-place of Iudas Iscariot, who betrayed our Saviour Iesus Christ, Emaus and divers others, and beyond Iordan Makherus a town with a strong Castle. Here stood also the Citties of Sodom and Gomora, which for their Sodomie and Abhominations, were utterly destroyed, and consumed with fire from heaven, and lyes now buired in that cursed Lake Asphalites, so named of the Bitumen, which it vomiteth, called also the dead Sea, perhaps in that it nourisheth noe living creature, or for his heavy waters, hordly to be moved with the windes, so extreame salt, that whatsoever is throwne thereunto, not easely sinketh. Vespasian for a triall caused divers to be cast in bound, hand and foote, who floated aloft as if supported by some spirit. They say that Birds flying over, fall in as if inchanted or suffocated with the poyson of the ascending vapors.

Samaria lyeth in the midst betweene Iudea and Galilea; this land is so called from the Metrapolis Samaria, built by Amri King of Israell, and now called Sebasta. The townes in it are Sichem, afterwards Named Neapolis, Capernaum, Betzaida and Chorazin.

Galilea lyeth betweene Mount Libanus & Samaria, and is divided into upper and lower Galilea. Upper Galilea bordereth upon Tyrus, called otherwise Galilea Gentium, or the Heathenish Galilea. Nether Galilea lyeth neere unto the Lake of Tiberius and Genezareth. In it are the townes of Naim, Cana, Nazareth & Gadara. The Holy land is seated betweene two Seas, & the River Iordan, it hath within it many navigable Lakes and Meeres, abounding in fish. The River Iordan is called by the Hebrewes Iarden, and runneth through the midst of this Countrie, dividing it into 2 parts. Ierome writeth, that this River springeth out of two Fountaines, not farre distant one from another, the one called Ior, the other Dan, shooting out like 2 hornes, which meete together, and which make this River Iordan. The chiefest Mountaines in the Holy Land are Mount Hermon, lying in the East part thereof, and Mount Tabor in the West, both of them being very great and high, so that the other hils about them are but armes and braunches of them: for the Mountaines Ebal, Bethoron, Mispa or Maspha and Bethel, are reckoned under Mount Hermon, Gelboe, Gerezim, Sarona and Mount Carmel by the Sea-side are accounted under Mount Tabor. There are also these about Ierusalem, Mount Sion, Moriah, Mount Olives, Mount Calvary and others. Besides, there are many goodly woods, and Forests, full of all kinde of Deere and many wilde Beasts.

In this land, especially about & in Ierusalem, there were many magnificent & stately buildings, as namely Mons Domus, and the Castle of the Iebusites, into which King David brought the Arcke of the Lord, where it remained till Salomons Temple was finished, the Remainders and ruimes of these buildings are yet to be seene to this day, yea, it is said that in that very place, the Lord Christ ate the Paschall Lambe with his Disciples: there are also to be seene the Sepulchres of King David, and the other Kings of Iuda: there stood also the house of David, which yet retaineth the name of Davids tower. Upon Mount Moriah are yet some remainders to be seene of Mello. Above all, we must call to minde the most excellent & beautifull Temple of King Salomon, upon which one hundred and fifty thousand men wrought seven yeares continually, till it was finished, the glorie and magnificencie whereof, ye may read in the first booke of the Kings, the 6 and 7 Chapters, and in the second booke of the Chronicles, the third and fourth Chapters. The Temple of the Sepulchre at the first building, was highly reverenced by the Christians of those parts, and even untill this day is much resorted to, both by Pilgrims from all parts of the Romish Church, & also by diverse Gentlemen of the reformed Churches, partly for curiosity, & partly for the antiquity of the place. It is farmed from the Turke, & kept by the Popes Creatures, whosoever is admitted to the sight of this Sepulchre, payeth nine Crownes to the Turkish Officers, so that this tribute is worth to the grand Signeur 8000 Ducats yearely. And thus much briefly for the description of the Holy Land, or the land of Promise.

The deſcription of the Kingdome OF PERSIAN.

Name. AMonge the Ancients, the Perſian Monarchie or the Sophian was very famous, and is no leſſe commended at this day. The Inhabitants thereof are called Perſians. This Site and bounds. Kingdome is ſituate betweene the Turkiſh Empire: the Tartars Zagatheans the Kingdome of Cambaya, betweene the Hircanian or Caſpian Sea, and the Perſian Gulfe: in ſuch ſort, that on the Eaſt it bordereth upon India, and the Kingdome of Cambaia, from which it is ſeparated by Mountaines and a wilderneſſe: on the North are the Tartars, partly ſevered from them by the River Abianus or Oxus, and on the other part the Caſpian Sea beateth upon them: on the Weſt lye the Turkes, the River Tigris, and the Lake Giocho, being betwixt them, and on the South is the Perſian Gulfe and the India Sea. The circuit of this Countrie is of a very large extent, for from the Eaſt to the Weſt, it reacheth 38 degrees in length, and almoſt 20 from the South to the North in breadth.

Fertility. This Country is not in all parts of a like nature: for that tract, which lyeth next the Perſian and Caſpian Sea, is moſt bleſſed and happie by reaſon of the ſweetneſſe of the Rivers, which waters it, the mildeneſſe of the aire, and the coole gales of winde, which refreſheth the Earth, makes her to be as a nurcing-mother in yeelding abundance of all manner of Fruits, & all kinde of Cattell, as Wheate, Barly, Pulſe and other graine, alſo it is not wanting in mettalls and precious ſtones, having plentie alſo of wine and diverſe other fruits: but the reſt of this Country in regard of the heate and drought thereof lyeth vaſt and barren.

The Perſian Nation was heretofore unknowne, and firſt gott their name and fame from King Cyrus, the firſt Perſian Monarch, who ſubdued the Empire of the Medes and Lydians, and brought them firſt under the Perſians, leaving behinde him a mighty and a flouriſhing State and Government, eſpecially after he had conquered Aſia and all the Eaſterne Countries: for having vanquiſhed Aſtyages, he united to his Empire of Perſia the Countries of Armenia, Phrygia, Cappadocia, Arabia, and alſo the Monarchie of the Aſſyrians, after which victories he was ſlaine by Tomiris a Queene of Scythia. Cambyſes ſucceeded his father Cyrus in the Empire, and ſubdued Pſamniticus the laſt King of Ægypt, which Countrie he united to his Empire, till the time of Darius Hiſtaſpis, one of the ſeven Perſian Princes or Governours, who was elected King, and tooke Babylon by the ingenious fetches of Zopirus, & overran all Aſia and Greece.

At this day the Perſian Empire governed by the Sophie, is accounted one of the mightieſt Monarchs of the whole Eaſt, and though for a time it lay obſcure 535 yeres, viz, from the 3635 yeare of the world, to the 228 yeare of Chriſt: of which time they were 83 yeares under the Syrian Succeſſours of Alexander, & 450 yeares under the Arſacidan King of Parthia, and was much oppreſſed now with the Saracens, and then with the Tartarians: yet in the time of the government of Iſmael Sophie, it began to beare up the head againe, and continued ſo, during the reigne of ſeven Kings, till Schiaharabbas now living a more fortunate Prince againſt the Turkes, (who hath taken Babylonia from them) then any of his predeceſſours. The Compaſſe of this Sophian Empire, is or was before the avulſion of Media and Armenia 4560 miles, being of equall length and breadth, every ſide of which quadrangle extendeth it ſelfe 1140 miles. The revenew of this Sophian Empire in the dayes of Sophie Tamas, amounted to 4 or 5 millions of gold, which he by doubling the valew of his coine, raiſed to 8 millions.

The countries & Provinces, ſtanding under the Perſian Empire are theſe, namely, Media, Aſſyria, Suſiana, Meſopotamia, Perſis, Parthia, Hyrcania, Margiana, Bactriana, Paropamiſſus, Aria, Drangiana, Gedroſia, Carmania, &c.

Media is called at this day Servan, lying betweene Perſia and the Hyrcanian Sea, having on the Eaſt ſide Hyrcania and Parthia, on the Weſt great Armenia and Aſſyria. It is divided into the great or Southerne Media, and into Atropatia or the Northerne. That part which lyeth Northward, is much coulder then the other, leſſe inhabited, and generally barren, ſo that they make their bread for the moſt part of dryed Almons; their drinke of the roots of certaine hearbes, & feed ordinarily on veniſon: yet is it not defective in paſture grounds, here being ſome graſſie plaines of that bigneſſe, that 50 thouſand Horſes may paſture on them. The chiefeſt citties thereof is Symmachia and Caucaſia Porta, built hard by the hill Caucaſus, one of the beſt fortifyed townes in the Eaſt: it was ſaid by Plinie to be ingens naturæ miraculum, & is now called Derbent, a ſtrong citty environned with 2 walls, and fortifyed with yron gates, taken in the laſt warres againſt the Perſians by the Turkes. The other townes are Eres, Sechi & Giavot: the Southerne part is better inhabited and manured. The Metrapolis whereof is Tauris, ſeated at the foote of Mount Oront, being eight days journey from the Caſpian Sea. The circuit of this citie is almoſt 16 thouſand paces, within which compaſſe it is thought there dwells 200 thouſand Burgers. This countrie ſeemes to have bene ancient Ecbatana, where the Perſian Kings in ſummer held their Courts. Neere unto the ſame tract are Turcoman, Sata Sultan, Naſſiaum, Ardovil and Marant. Media.

Aſſyria is called at this day Arzerum, and is bounded on the Eaſt with Media, on the Weſt with Meſopotamia, on the North with Armenia, and on the South with Suſiana, heretofore theſe Provinces were reckonned to be under it, as Arrapachites, Adiabena and Sittacena: alſo the Citty of Nineve on the Tygris the circuit whereof was deemed to be 60 thouſand paces. Aſſyria.

The Province of Suſiana is at this day called Chus or Cuſetan, quaſi Chuſhiana from Chus the Sonne of Ham, the Sonne of Noah, who firſt peopled here, and beareth alſo the name of its principall Citty called Suſan, being 15 thouſand paces in compaſſe. Athenæus affirmeth, that it is ſo called from a flower, for Suſan in the Perſian tongue ſignifyeth a Lilly.

Meſopotamia is called in the holy Scripture Padan Aram, and at this day Pierbecke: this Countrie lyeth betweene Euphrates and Tigris, whence it beareth alſo the name, as environned with two Rivers. According to the Confines and Seaſons, thereof it is diverſe: for the one part thereof is made fatt and fruitfull by the overflowing of the Rivers, and the other part dry and unfruitfull, not bearing any graſſe, hearbs, or trees: and yet in ſome places the Soile is exceeding fertill, yeel- Meſopotamia.

ding in ſome places 200, yea in ſome 300 increaſe. Here Abraham was borne, hither he ſent his ſervant to chooſe a wife for his Sonne Iſaack, hither Jacob fled from his brother Eſau: and here Paradiſe is by men skilled in Divinity and Geography affirmed to have ſtood. The chiefeſt Citties are Orfa, which is 7000 paces about, but Caramit is much greater, being accounted the Capitall Citty of all Meſopotamia, which Selym the Turkiſh Emperour tooke from the Sophie. Mardin is the reſidencie of the Patriarke of the Chaldeans: and Moſus is the habitation of the Patriarck of the Neſtorians, whoſe authoritie reacheth into India and Cathaia. Citties. The Metrapolis of Perſis, which countrie is now called Far, is Siras heretofore Perſepolis: in theſe parts in former ages dwelt the Magi: this citty Plinie nameth the capitall citty of the Perſian Empire, and Q. Curtius the royall ſeate of all the Eaſt. Hircania is now called Girgia, Corca, or Dargument. This Province lyeth cloſſe upon the Caſpian Sea, for which reaſon alſo it is called the Hircanian Sea. This country is as it were a continued Foreſt, wch gives lurking holes to an infinite number of Tigers, celebrated in all writers for their horrible fierceneſſe, whence it grew to a common addage concerning cruell men, that they had ſucked an Hircanian Tyger as in Virgill. The chiefe cities in it are Hircana, called Scythians Carizath, Beſta, and Meſandra. The Province of Margiana is now named Iſelbas, on the Northſide it is bounded with the River Oxus: the chiefeſt cittie is Godion, called heretofore by the ancients Antiochia. The countrie of Bactriana is called at this day Barter or Charaſſaa, & is a part of Tartaria Zagathaa. The chiefe townes in it are Bactra, now Bochara and Iſtigias. Paropamiſſus is a part of Bactriana, lying by mount Paropamiſſus: it is at this preſent called Candahar or Ambreſtus: Candahar is the chiefe citty, & a famous Mart-towne. Aria beareth its name from the capitall citty thereof Eriis, which citty is 13000 paces about. Carmania Carmania, Circa or Chermain reacheth as farre as the Indian Sea, yea unto Gedroſium, and hath many towns and havens in it: the chiefe citty whereof is Chirmain. In Carmania are alſo theſe Rivers Macran, Eracan, Guadel and Patan. Gedroſia is held by ſome but erroneouſly for Guzarate, ſeing that Guzarate is the Kingdome of Cambaia it ſelfe. Babylonia lyeth betweene the Perſian Gulfe, and Meſopotamia ſhut in both on the right and left ſide with Suſiana and Vaſt Arabia, and beareth this name from the Metrapolis Babell. Chaldea joyneth unto it: in Chaldea was Ur, called by Joſephus Ura, from whence Abraham by the commandement of God went into Meſopotamia. Within the Perſian Empire are many Rivers, as the Carnac, Arax & Cyrus, watering the Septentrionall parts of Media. In Aſſyria is the Tygrù, in Suſiana the Enælius, in Meſopotamia the Euphrates, in Marginia the Oxus, Arius and Margù, in Bactriona the Ochus, which is very navigable, and full of ſhipping, and diverſe others: in Aria the Arius, Tonicletus Arapenus & others. Neither are there Mountaines wanting, among which the chiefeſt are in Media as Orontes, in Hircania mount Coronus, alſo mount Taurus, which reckoning his ſeverall bendings, in and out is 6250 miles long and 375 broad, and runneth cleane through Perſia, and hath diverſe names after the Regions and nations throw which it paſſeth. There are alſo many Foreſts & Woods chiefly in Parthia, which is allmoſt all covered with woods, eſpecially in the Northerne parts of Hircania, where there are huge woods full of Oakes and Pine-trees for maſts. In theſe woods haunt many fierce and cruell Beaſts, as Tigers, Leopards, Panthers and diverſe others. Aria is alſo full of woods & Mountaines, as likewiſe Perſis for the moſt part. Now touching the publick edifices & buildings it is ſo, that heretofore in this Empire, eſpecially in Babylon, were many ſumptuous and ſtately buildings: as firſt the magnificent bridge, which Queene Semiramis made over Euphrates. Moreover, ſhee made in Babell an admirable garden, whereof you may reade the rareneſſe and ſtraingeneſſe thereof at large in Munſter. In Suſiana in the Citty of Suſia was a Caſtle, where the Median Kings held their Court: which Caſtle as Caſiodorus witneſſeth, was built by Memnon with an admirable cunning, the ſtones whereof were cymented together with gold, ſo that it was accounted one of the ſeven wonders of the world. But for brevities ſake, I will paſſe over theſe things, and come to the cuſtomes and manners of the Perſians. The cuſtome and manners. They elected heretofore their Kings out of one familly: he that did not obey the King, his head & armes were cutt of, & his carkeiſe unburied caſt away. Every man might mary many wives for procreation, and were beſides permitted to keepe a great number of Concubines, and the King gave a reward and recompenſe to him, that could gett moſt Sonnes in a yeare. To the end they might endure colde and heate the better, they uſed to ſwime over Torrents and violent Rivers: they never entred into Councill about affaires of importance, but they were drunke, ſuppoſing that their deliberation would be more firme and reſolute. Their neereſt frends and acquaintance of a like condition, kiſſed one an other in all humility, but thoſe of a meaner ſort doe great reverence one to an other when they meete: they burie the Corpſes of their dead, after they have annointed their boddies with waxe: either to laugh or ſpit before the King, they hold for a horrible offence. But at this day the manners of the Perſians are more gentil then thoſe of the Turkes, Tartars or Saracens. They are by nature bountifull, courteous & civill, given to learning and to the attaining of liberall Arts & ſciences: eſpecially unto the learning of Aſtrologie, Phyſick & Poeſie. They uſe and entertaine their parents & kindred very kindly, and make great account of their Nobility, and of men diſcended of a good houſe, wherein they differ from the Turkes which acknowledge no difference of men of quality or high diſcent. They uſe and entertaine Straingers with all curteſie, but are mightely ſubject to jealouſie, for which reaſon their women are not tolerated to ſhew themſelves to Forreiners, though they honour them, & love them dearely contrarie to the Turkes, which keepes their wives like ſlaves: the Perſian woemen are exceeding faire. Mechanick Arts, eſpecially working in ſilkes are in great eſteeme and uſe among them, and they tranſport them into all Syria, and other Orientall Countries. They drive alſo a great trade in pearles, precious ſtones, ſpiceries and all ſorts of ſilkes, whereof they have an incredible ſtore: for Lewes Patri Rom. ſaith, that at Eris a citty of Perſida, they have ſuch abundance of ſilkes, that in one market-day they may buy enough to loade 3000 Camells.

TARTARIA or the Empire of the GRAND CHAM.

Name.

TARTARIA, or as Leunclavius will haue it Tataria, is a very large Kingdome: for beſides that which he holdeth in Europe, it containeth all Sarmatia Aſiatica, with Scythia, and the Region of the Seres, now called Catay. It is ſo called from the river Tartar, which watereth that part of it, which is named by us Magog and by the inhabitants Mongul; and lieth Northward. It is bounded on the Eaſt with the mighty Kingdome of China, on the South with India, and with the rivers of Ganges and Oxus: on the Weſt with the Caſpian and Polonian Sea, the reſt bordering upon Muſcovia, and on the North with the Frozen Ocean, where it is unknowne, unhabited & unmanured. This Countrie extendeth it ſelfe from Eaſt to Weſt 5400. miles, and from North to South 3600. miles.

Bounds.

Extention.

This Region was of old knowne by the name of Scythia, whoſe Inhabitants were the poſterity of Magog, the Sonne of Iaphet, called firſt Magogins, afterward Scythes from Scythus their firſt King. The ſeverall Inhabitants (as Mela hath them) were firſt Eſſedones, men who rejoyced moſt at their Parents deaths, of whoſe heads trimely wrought, and rounded with gold, they uſed to make their carouſing Cups. Secondly, Agathyrſi, who uſed to paint themſelues, every one, the more noble he was, the more deformed and ſtained: for which cauſe ſome haue conceited our Picts to haue drawne their Originall from hence. Thirdly, Nomades, who having no houſes uſed there to abide longeſt, where the fodder for their Cattell was beſt, which being once conſumed they departed. Fourthly, Axiaca, who were very valiant, but withall barbarous & inhumaine, uſing in their warrs to drinke the blood of him, whome they firſt ſlew, even as it guſhed out of his wounds. Fifthly, Geloni, who uſed to apparell themſelues with the ſkinns of their Ennemies heades, and their horſes with the ſkinnes of their bodies. And ſixthly, Neuri, of whome (beleeue it who liſt) it is reported, that they could turne themſelues into Warewolues, and anon againe reſume their true being.

See M. Heylin.

This ancient name of Scythia extended it ſelfe into Europe, euen unto the Regions lying North from Danubius called alſo Sarmatia & Scythia Europæa, & ſo populous hath it allwaies bene, that it is by diverſe Authours called, the mother of all Inundations, Vagina gentium, and Officina Generis humani, whereof alſo Du Bartas verſifyeth thus Engliſhed by Ioſ. Silveſter:

From hence indeed Hunnes, Hercules, Frankes, Bulgarians, Circaſsians, Sueves, Burgundians, Turkes, Tartarians,
Dutch, Cimbres, Normans, Almaines, Oſtrogothes,
Tigurins, Lombards, Vandals, Viſigothes,
Haue ſvvarmd like Locuſts round about this ball,
And ſpoyled the faireſt Provinces of all.

The aire in this Region is very intemperate & tempeſtuous: for in the Summer time there are ſuch fearefull lightnings and terrible clapps of thunder, that many people dies for feare. In Summer it is ſome times extreme hott, & at other times exceeding cold with great flakes of ſnow, which fall upon the Earth, and oftentimes there are ſuch huge ſtormes of winde, that they blowe a man from his horſe, overthrow people as they goe afoote, and overturne abundance of trees with the rootes upward, which many times doe great harme. In the Winter ſeaſon it never rayneth there, but often in Sommer, yet ſo litle that it ſcarcely moiſtens the Earth, & yet notwithſtanding it is reported to be a fruitfull Countrie, having good ſtore of Wheate, Rice and ſuchlike Fruits, and that they haue abundance of Silkes, Ginger, Cynamon, Pepper, Cloues, Rheubarbe & Sugar, likewiſe Muſke & pytch, yea in ſome places Mines of Gold & Silver.

Temperature.

Fertility.

There is litle Wine made in this Countrie, and none at all in the whole Region of Catay. They haue a kind of a black ſtone like a Coale, which they digg out of hills, whereof they make good fyring, which they uſe for want of wood. Moreover, they haue abundance of Cattel, Goats, Deere & Swyne, and an incredible number of Horſes and Mares. Wee read in the Tartarian letters, that the Emperour of Tartaria keepsten thouſand ſnow-white Mares, of whoſe milke he drinketh, and that he keeps beſides 20000. Huntſmen, & 10000. Faulconers, ſo that this Countrie is full of Pheſants, Partriges, Cranes and diverſe other fowle.

Wee read that in that part of this Countrie, where the Zavolhenſes inhabit, they haue a kinde of a ſeede much like the ſeede of a pompion, but leſſe and longer, which if it be ſett in the ground beareth a plant, which they call Bonaretz, which is as much to ſay as a Lambe, for it groweth up in the ſhape of a Lambe, almoſt three foote high, with feete, eares and head, except hornes in all proportion like a Lambe, & in ſtead of hornes a kind of thick haire like a horne, being covered over with a thinne ſkinne, whereof the Natiues make capps, and cover their heades. It is reported alſo, that he inward part of this pla.it hath fleſh like a crabb, and being prickt will bleede, that it is delicate meate, & that the roote thereof ſpringeth out of the Earth, as high as the Navell: but this is more marvellous that it liveth like a Lambe in a fatt paſture and as long as there groweth good ſtore of herbes about it; but they failing, it pines and conſumes away. They ſay it happens not by alteration of the ſeaſon, but if one cutts or takes away purpoſely the herbes from about it; and which is more ſtrange, many Wolues and other ravenous Beaſts deſires to come unto it.

A ſtrang plant called a Lambe.

In the citty of Quelinfu there are Hennes, which in ſtead of feathers haue haire upon them like black Catts, and lay good eggs.

The Princes & gouvernment.

The firſt Tartarian Emperour, which obtained this Kingdome, & inſtituted firſt good Lawes & Statutes was Cingis, otherwiſe called by ſome Cinchius, Zingis or Changius, who liued about the yeare of our Lord 1202. and was made King or Cham, of the Tartars; he ſubdued Tenduch and Cathaia, changing the name of Scythians and Scythia to Tartarians and Tartaria. Before his gouvernment, the Tartars liued a ſauvage & a brutiſh life, without any good manners, Lawes or Civility, & converſed with the Scythians, who kept heards of Cattel, having noe reputation amonge them, nor any other nation, paying tribute for themſelues and their Beaſts. From this Changius all the ſucceeding Princes of this Empire fetch their offſprings & pedegree. He with an incredible expedition, in a ſhort time enlarged his Dominions from China & the maine Ocean unto the Caſpian Sea.

2. Iocuchan Cham his Sonne ſucceeded him. In his time the name of Tartar was firſt knowne in Europe Anno 1212. In which yeare they droue the Peleſockie from the banks of the Euxine Sea. By his Captaine Bathu or Rhode, he ſubdued Muſcovia; planted his Tartars in Taurica Cherſoneſus, waſted Hungarie, Boſnia, Servia, Bulgaria, and by his other Captaines tooke Perſia from the Turkes.

3. Zaincham, Bathu or Barcham, he ruined the Turkes Kingdome of Damaſcus & Aſia the Leſſe. He alſo ſpoyled Ruſſia, Polonia, Sileſia, Moravia and Hungaria.

The great Chams.

4. His Sonne Tamer Cutlu, Tamir Cham or Tamirlaine a great Tyrant, but vvithall an excellent Souldier. It is thought that he ſubdued more Prouinces in his life time, then all the Romans had done in 800. yeares, at vvhat time their Monarchie vvas at the heigth: for he vvaſted all Aſia, overran Egypt, & ſubdued Bajazeth the Turkiſh Emperour, and chaining him in goulden fetters, carryed him in a Batket through Aſia.

5. Tamir Czar ſucceeded Tamirlaine, vvho fighting couragiouſly in a Battle againſt the Croſiers of Pruſsia, vvas ſlaine by the ſvvord, as it is reported.

The 6. Emperour vvas Mamet Czar, the Sonne of Tamir Czar.

The 7. vvas Armet Czar. he begott Sziachmet the Eight &c. Paulus Venetus and Haiton Armenius haue ſpoken of the Tartarian Proceeding: vvhat King haue ſince raigned, vve cannot learne, nor vvhat memorable acts haue bene done among them.

The Tartarian Ceremonie in Crowning their Cham.

This Gouvernment is Tyrannicall, the Great Cham being Lord of all; & in his tongue, beſides vvhich they haue almoſt no lavves, conſiſting the povver of life and death. He is called by the ſimple vulgar, The Shadovv of Spirits, and Sonne of the immortall God: and by himſelfe is reputed to be the Monarch of the World. For this cauſe every day aſſoone as he hath dined, he cauſeth his trumpets to be ſounded by that ſigne, giving leaue to the other Kings and Princes of the Earth to goe to dinner. A fine dreame of univerſall Monarchie. At the death of the Cham, the ſeuen chiefe Princes aſſemble to crovvne his Sonne, vvhome they place on a black courſe cloth, telling him if he raigne vvell heauen ſhalbe his revvard; if ill, he ſhall not haue ſo much as a corner of that black cloath to reſt his body on: then they putt the Crovvne upon his head, and kiſſing his feete ſvveare unto him fealty and homage. And at the funerall of theſe great Monarchs they uſe to kill ſome of his guard Souldiers, vvhereof he hath 12000. in cõtinuall pay: ſaying unto thẽ; Ite & Domino noſtro ſervire in alia vita. Paulus Venetus reporteth, that at the obſequies of Mango Cham, no fevver than 10000. vvere ſlaine on this occaſion.

Diviſion.

Tartaria is divided into many Provinces and parts, as firſt Litle Tartaria, vvhich reacheth into Europe, & is ſhutt in and lieth betvveene Boriſthenes and Tanais, contayning Taurica Cherſoneſus, in vvhich the Tartars Precopenſes inhabite. 2. Vaſt Tartaria in vvhich are many Hords or Troupes of vulgar people vvhich fleete up & dovvne, and liue in tents made of Beaſts ſkinns, accounting it a great miſerie to ſtaye longer in a place, then the paſtures affords meate for their Cattel. 3. Sagathai, vvhich is properly Scythia, and is ſhutt in intra Montem Imaum from the Caſpian Sea, extending to the South borders of the Sophian Empire. 4. Cathaie, and the Kingdome of Tangut (vvhich is Old Scythia beyond Imaus, & the Province of Serica) is alſo a part thereof. And 5. Old Tartaria unknovvne to Ptolomie. The Metropolis of all Tartaria is Cambalu, ſeated upon the river Poliſanga; the circuit vvhereof contayneth 28. miles. It hath 12. Gates, vvithout vvhich there are 12. Suburbes. It is a moſt famous and a rich Citty for commerce, eſpecially for precious Stones, Gould, Silver and Silkes. It is reported there is bought and ſold in it every day a thouſand cart loads or vvagons of Silks, and other rich commodities, vvhich are brought out of China. Beſides this there are alſo diverſe other braue Cities as Samarcanda founded by Tamirlaine: likevviſe Canido a famous mart-tovvne in the utmoſt confines of Tartaria, vvith diverſe others, vvhich for brevity I vvill paſſe over.

Citties & Townes Cambalu.

Lakes.

In Tartaria there are many Lakes, vvhereof vvee vvill make mention of ſome of the principaleſt, becauſe it vvould be tvvo long to deſcribe them all. In the Province of Caniclu there is a Lake in vvhich they fiſhe abundance of Pearles, the value vvhereof undoubtedly vvould come dovvne, if every man vvere ſuffred to fiſhe in it, and to take as many as they liſted: for the preventing vvhereof, the great Cham hath forbidden all men upon paine of death (ſaving ſuch as haue his conſent) to fiſhe for any Pearles in this Lake. This Lake abounds alſo in Fiſhe. Likevviſe in the Province of Caraim there is an other Lake, vvhich is full of all kind of Fiſhe, vvhich is a 100. miles about.

Rivers.

This Regiõ is vvatered vvith many rivers, among the vvhich there is the huge river Puliſachnus many laden Ships ſayling up him, at laſt diſchargeth him ſelfe into the maine Ocean. They can make no bridge over the river Caramora, in regard of the great breath and depth thereof: this river diſburdeneth himſelf likevviſe into the Ocean. Quiantu is a mile and a halfe over, and is exceeding deepe and full of Fiſh. Quiam (as Paulus Venetus vvriteth) is held to be the greateſt river in the World; for in ſome places it is 10. 8. & ſome 6. miles broad, & from the head to the mouth thereof a hundred daies journey, beſides diverſe others vvhich vvee vvill paſſe over.

Publick Edifices.

Novv vve come to the publick buildings in this Countrie, vvhich are very many and ſumptuous. In the Cittie of Canda is that magnificent Palace of the Great Cham Cublai, adorned moſt richly vvith Marble & Gold. In the Citty of Cambula there is an other built vvith admirable ſkill and cunning, being 4. Italian miles about, built fourſquare, & every ſquare contayning a mile, having about it a ſtrong thick Wal ten paces high, the outſide being of a vvithiſh & reddiſh coulour, and betvveene theſe ſeverall Walls are Walkes, Gardens, Orchards, Fiſhponds, places for exerciſe, Parkes & Chaſe for game. Vpon all the foure corners of this Wall alſo there ſtands a great and faire Palace like a Caſtle, having alſo in the midſt of every ſide of the Wall foure other Palaces, vvhich make 8. in number. In theſe Palaces are kept and ſhut up all manner of Armes, engines & Inſtruments of vvarre, Ordinance, Bovves, Arrovves, Quivers, Sparrs, Bitts, Lances, Polaxſes, Whips and diverſe other neceſſaries belonging to vvarre: every Palace being as an Arſenall furniſhed vvith them. In the midſt of the inner Court, ſtands the Kings Palace, vvhere he keepes his reſidence. This Palace hath vvithin noe chambers or ſellors, the floure thereof being ten palmes higher then the ground vvithout, the roofe is very high and painted. The Walls of all the halls and roomes are gilded vvith Gould and Silver; in every Roome there are curious Pictures, and many repreſentation of memorable Battles of vvarre, ſo liuely ſett out in colours, that they gliſter like Gold.

Policie & manner of living.

The Great Cham hath under him 12. Barons, vvho are appointed to gouverne foure & thirtie Provinces; their office is to place Gouvernours over every Province, and to provide the Kings Hoaſts, vvhere they encampe vvith all neceſſarie proviſions, vvhat reſolutions they take, they firſt make them knovvne unto the King, vvho by his authority ratifies & confirms them. Malefactours are puniſhed by the Tartarians in this manner: If any of them commits any ſmall theft or fellonie, not vvorthy of death, he is then beaten ſeuen times vvith a cudgill, having giuen him ſometimes 17. 27. or 47. blovves, yea ſomevvhiles a hundred according as his offence deſerves, and ſometimes they giue him ten blovves over, ſo that diverſe of them dye of them. If any man ſteales a horſe, or any thing that deſerues death; he is runne through the bovvells of his body vvith a ſvvord: if he vvill redeeme his life and come free, he muſt then reſtore the vvorth of that he hath ſtolen ninefould. A man in Cambalu, taking a paile of milke from a vvomans head, and beginning to drinke thereof vvas upon the vvomans outcry apprehended, and preſently cutt inſunder vvith a ſvvord: in ſo much that the blood and the milke came out together. The next capitall Crimes to theſe are Lying and Adulterie, ſo that according to the firſt lavves of Cingis, both man and vvoman are puniſhed vvith death.

The Tartarians ſevere Iuſticiers.

An Exemple.

The Solemnities of their marriages.

The Solemnities of their marriages are thus related by M^r. Heylin. Their vviues they ſee not till they are married, but hearing a good report of the yonge maid, ſolicite her Father for her. If he yeeld, then they meete at the Chancell of the Church in vvhich there is a partition, the man & his frends ſtanding on the one ſide, and the vvoman and her frends ſtanding on the other. When they are met, the Caſſiſe or Churchman biddeth the yonge man put his hand through a hole in the partition, & take his vvife by the hand, vvhich he doth. Then cometh the mother of the yonge vvoman, and vvith a ſharpe-pointed inſtrument pricketh the nevv married mans hand. If vvhen he feeleth the ſmart, he letteth his vviues hand goe, they take it for a ſigne that he vvill not loue her; but if he hold her faſt, and vvring her by the hand, till ſhe cry, then he is counted a loving man, and her frends are glad that they beſtoued her on him. After the marriage is conſumate, if a male-child de borne unto them, the Father looſeth his ovvne name, and is called by that name of his eldeſt Sonne: as if the Fathers name be Moſes, and the Sonns name Ioſeph, the Father is no more called Moſes, but Aben Ioſeph, that is, the Father of Ioſeph: ſo highly doe they reverence marriage, & the fruit thereof, poſterity.

The Tartars divide themſelues & dvvell in Hordes or Troopes, & as they are of diverſe Provinces, farre remote one frõ an other: ſo haue they alſo diverſe manners and cuſtomes among them.

Dyet.

The people are very vvarlike, ſtrong in matters of action, feareleſſe of the greateſt dangers, and patient of labour & vvant. They are of a meane & thick ſtature, fatt & broad fac'd, ſquint and hollovv eyed, ſharpe ſighted, vveare their beards thinne, others are balde & bare vvithout haire. And as M^r. Heylin ſaith, they are of a good vvitt, dreſſe themſelues gorgeouſly, and fare on occaſions ſumptuouſly. Thoſe of Cathaie are the moſt honorable people of the Tartars indifferently civill, lovers of Arts both mechanicall & civill, having many Aſtrologers, or rather Fortune-tellers among them. Their Horſemen vvhen they are ſent upon any expedition, if they be hungrie or haue thirſt, they open a vaine of the horſe, vvhereupon they ride and drinke of his blood. The vvoman of Caraian uſe to gild their teeth.

Many of them haue no houſes; but in ſtead of them dvvell in Carrs, and becauſe they haue no ſetled abode, but fleete up and dovvne continually here and there like ſvvarmes, they take the ſtarres eſpecially the Pole Artick for their Beacons & Guide, never ſtaying long in one place. Money is not in uſe amonge them, but they exchange and batter vvares for vvares. They ſay they are Iſmaelites, and vvil be accounted ſuch.

Religion.

This people heretofore vvere converted by S. Andrevv, and long continued Chriſtians, though infected vvith the opinion of Neſtorius, vvhoſe ſect at this day is ſpred all over the Eaſt: but in the yeare 1246. they receiued Mahumetiſme.

Marchandiſes.

The Tartarians uſe groſſe dyet, eſpecially meate, vvhich they eate, either ravv or halfe enough: they feede much upon milke and cheeſe. They abſtaine from eating of Svvines fleſhe, but drinke Mares milke, vvhich though they prepare in ſuch a manner, as if it ſeemed to be vvhite Wine; yet it is very fulſome. They are very naſtie in their dyet, uſing neither table clothes, napkins, nor tovvells, neither vvaſhe they their hands, faces, bodies or cloathes. They drinke vvater, milke, and Beare brued vvith Roſſin.

The Marchandiſes vvhich are ſent out of Tartaria, are Rice, Graine, Wool, Silkes, Hempe, Rhevvbarbe, Muſke, excellent Chamlets, Pearle: and from Tebeth, abundance of Corrall, ſo that it ſcorneth to giue precedencie to any of the flouriſhing Provinces of Europe.

The deſcription of the mighty Kingdome OF CHINA.

The Countrie & the ſeveral names.

THE moſt large & moſt mightie Kingdome of China, is the ſame Countrie, which Marke Paul nameth Mangi: the Natives Tarne: according to Magin, & our Mercator, or as the Authour of the Hiſtorie of China ſaith Taybinco; They call them ſelves Tangis. Ptolomie calleth them, as Ortelius beleeveth, & as their neighbours ſay Catayans: but Mercator approveth beſt of the name of Sines. All this Countrie lyeth upon the Eaſterne Ocean, and is thought to be the furtheſt Countrie towards the riſing of the Sunne. The ſite. It boundeth Eaſtward upon the Ocean ſea, and a litle further upon the Ile of Corea, and then upon the Iles of Iapon. Southward, partly upon the Ocean, and partly upon the Kingdome of Cauchinchina. Weſtward, upon the Brachmans, and a part of Tartaria. Northward, onely upon Tartaria, frō whome they are ſeparated by Mountaines, & a very long wall. So that the compaſſe of this wall, and the Mountaines are counted to be five hundred thowſand paces. The Hiſtories of China report, that this wall was made two hundred yeeres agoe by King Trintzo, after he had delivered his people out of the hands of the Tartarians, who had bin maſter of them 93 yeeres. Nowe this Kingdome reacheth almoſt from the Tropick of Cancer, unto the 53 degree of latitude, and containeth in length all the Meridians, compriſed betweene the 130, and the 160 degree. Temperature. The aire and Soile is ſo temperate, that by the Induſtrie of men, it becometh fruitfull for all things. Fertility. For the Inhabitants there, are not given to Idleneſſe, but are uſed to labour, and cannot endure a Lazie life. Whence it commeth to paſſe, that there is noe peece of ground in theſe parts, but yeeldeth ſomething upon the hard and dry lands, though they be ſtonie: yet they ſowe Corne, as Barlie, Peaſe and Oates. In the moiſt grounds, plaines and marſhes, they ſowe Rice, whereof they have 4 harveſts in a yeere. The hills and Mountaines are full of Pine-trees, betweene which they ſowe Panick or pulſe, ſo that there is not a place, which yeeldeth not ſome profit. In everie place they have Gardens full of Roſes and other flowers, with great varietie of fruits. Flaxe groweth there in abundance. There are a great nūber of woods, & Mulberie trees for the nouriſhing of Silk-wormes. Beſides all theſe, they have good ſtore of gould, ſilver, copper, Iron and other mettails, precious ſtones and Gemms, as Pearles of all ſorts, Sugar, Muſke, Rhubarbe, but that which is moſt excellent, is that which is brought unto us through Perſia; becauſe the ſea doth much diminiſh the vertue thereof. It beareth alſo a wood moſt ſouveraigne in Phyſick, called by thoſe of China Lapala, with us Radix China, or the China root, which is uſed much through all India againſt Apoſtumes, Palſies, & the French diſeaſe. It hath a hard root, heavie, and of a whitiſh coulour. There are infinite Herds of Cattaile in the meddowes, paſtures, & upon the Mountaines. The Foreſts and woods are full of Wild-boores, Foxes, Hares, Deere, Connies, Martins, Sables and diverſe other Beaſts, whoſe skinns make excellent Furrs. There is very pleaſant hunting, hawking and fowling. There are great ſtore of fowle, eſpecially of waterfoule, whereof there are ſuch abundance, and principally of Ducks, that in one of their leaſt Townes called Canton, they devoure in one day 10 or 12 thouſand. And though the Countrie of it ſelfe is very firtill: yet the Inhabitāts thereof help it greatly by their Art and Labour. In the Springtime, they cover under Dung 2 or 3 thowſand eggs, by the heate whereof, in time, there are hatched young ducklings: & in Winter they doe the like without dung, by laying them in a Baſkett of Flaggs, under which they keepe a litle fire, ſo that in time there are hatched ducklings in the ſame māner as before. The Government. All this large Countrie obeyeth one Monarch, whome they call Lord of the World and Sonne of God. Anthonie Pigiafetta calleth the King of China, the mightieſt of the World, and ſaith, that his Royall palace is fortifyed with 7 walls, and rounded in ſuch a ſort, that within the ſpace of the one wall to the other, they make lodge 10 thowſand ſouldiers, which have the ordinarie gard before the Kings palace. And that he hath commanded over 17 Roytelets or petty Kings, that he keepeth 10 thowſand Elephants, and as manie Archers. He hath in his ſervice 948350 horſemen, and 584650 foote, which at leaſt are under his oath. Theſe are the ordinarie garniſon of his Kingdome. He keepeth his Court at Paquin, which is a Cyty lying towards Tartaria. He never goeth out of it, but in the time of warre. His predeceſſours dwelt in the City of Manquin in memorie, and honour whereof they keepe a table of Gould. There is almoſt cōtinuall warrs betweene the Chinaes & the Tartars. The Tartars excell them in force, the Chinaes in craft and ſubtiltie: In ſuch ſort, that they are often vanquiſhed by the ſtrength of the Tartars, & they likewiſe overcome the Scythians many times by their frauds and wiles. This Kingdome is divided into 15 Provinces, whereof 6 of them are the Maritimate as Cantam, Foquiem, Chiqueam, Xantora, Naqui & Quioci: and 9 Mediterranean to wit, Quichin, Iuana, Quancy, Suinan, Fuguan, Canſij, Xancy, Hoaum & Sancy. They have 240 famous Cities, the names whereof end all in Fu which ſignifyeth a City, as Cantonfu, Panquinfu: Townes. The Townes whereof the number is great end in Cheu. The Bourroughs are infinite and populous, by reaſon of their continuall manuring. Almoſt all their Townes are ſituated by a rivers ſide, which is navigable, encōpaſſed with moates and deepe ditches, girt about with walls made of Free ſtone from the lower to the upper part, and upon the tops they are layd with bricks made of the ſame matter, as ther porcellaine diſhes, & ſo cunningly cimented together, that in a ſhort time, they become ſo hard, that they cānot breake or looſen them with pickaxſes or hammers. Some of theſe walls are ſo broade on the topp, that 4 or 6 men may march in frount upon them. Upon theſe walls there are high turrets and Forts a prettie diſtance one from an other, which are ſeene a great way off. The circuit of Cantō, whereof we ſpake, is 12000 paces & more. Marchādiſes. It is one of the greateſt places for traffick in all the Eaſt. There arrives often 500 marchants ſhips at a time. There is great ſtore of kopper, Allum, Cynamon, Muske, Rhubarbe, Swords & Silver. Some what neere unto this City the Ieſuits have Churches. Quinſay deſerveth rather the name of a Kingdome, then of a City: the circuit of it is a 100 miles. This payeth greater tribute to the Prince for Salt and Spiceries, then the King of Perſia received heretofore for all his tribute of Babylon It is ſituated upon a Lake of freſh water, and hath 12000 bridges in it, whereof ſome of thē have ſuch high Arches, that the ſhips may paſſe under them with their maſt upright, & with full ſailes. The pleaſantneſſe of this place is memorable, by reaſon where of ſome call it the City of Heaven, for the word Quinſay ſignifyeth ſo much. It were an endleſſe matter for him, that would deſcribe every thing. Among the pleaſant Lakes, which are here, that in the Province of Sancy is remarkeable, where there hapned an mundatiõ anno 1557, by which there was 7 townes drowned, beſides Bourroughs, villages & agreat number of people, none eſcaping but a yong child, which was ſaved upon the bodie of a tree. The rivers and ſeas here are full of fiſhe. All that part of this Countrie which is maritimate, is noe leſſe inhabited in ſhiping, than in howſes, for ſome of them never come out of their ſhips, but betake themſelves to fiſhing & fouling, whereupon they live. They have a mãner of fiſhing remarkable in the townes ſituated upon the rivers. They keepe in Cages a great number of Cormorants, called in Spaniſh Sea-Ravens, which they carry in their boats, and binde a ſtring about their necks ſomewhat looſe, ſo that they may ſwallow a fiſhe, but not putt it downe. This done they let theſe Cormorants goe ſo tyed, and then they dive after a ſtraing mãner unto the bottome of the ponds and ditches, and having takẽ a fiſhe, they come againe to that place where they were lett looſe, and then they take the pray from it, or they vomit it up. Among the publick workes the Gates of the Cities are exceeding faire. Their ſtreets are made as even as a line, & ſo large and ſpacious, that 10 or 15 may eaſely paſſe one by an other, diſtinguiſhed one from an other by great, & faire arches of poliſhed ſtone adorned magnificẽtly, which the Gouvernours make with diverſe inſcriptions, before they depart out of their Cities, when the time is expired, which the King hath preſcribed them. Some Portugalls report, they ſawe in the Citie of Fuchco a towre founded upon 40 pillars all of marble 40 palmes high, according to Architect meaſure, & 12 in breadth: the workemanſhip was ſo great & of ſo rare a bewtie that it ſurpaſſeth, & putts downe all the ſuperbe buildings of Europe. They have moſt ſumptuous Temples, aſwell in their townes as in the fields. The King hath under him a Governour, as a Lieutenant, whome they name Tutan, who is Iudge of all the controverſies in the Kingdome, & adminiſters ſevere Iuſtice. Theeves & Murderers are cõmitted to perpetuall priſon, untill they dye of hunger and cold, or with the ſtripes of a whip: for whenſoever they are condemned to death (which cõmonly is done by whiping) yet never the leſſe the execution thereof is deferred ſo long, till the moſt part of the cõdemned dye in priſon. In every Towne there are ſuch a number of Malefactours, that in Cãton alone there are oftentimes more then 15000. Theeverie among them is accounted the moſt odious crime, and Theeves are puniſhed with moſt cruell ſcourgings, they whip them in this manner, firſt they make the Malefactour to bowe downeward, & bind his hãds behind him, & then they laſhe him upon his thighes, & the calves of his leggs, with a whip, or a ſcourge made of a Cane, or of a reede, whereof the laſhe is ſo violent, that it fetches blood at the firſt blowe, & the ſecond, taketh his ſtrength from him, that he is not able to ſtand upon his feete. Every hang-man is to whipe his legg, which they doe with ſuch violence, they many of them dye upon the 50 or 60 blowe: for all their nerſs, ſynowes and muſcles are torne and rent in peeces. And the Portugals affirme, there is not a yeere that paſſeth, but there dies more then 2000 of them. This ſcourge is 5 fingers broad, & one in thickneſſe which they dip into water to ſupple it and to make it ſtiff.

Rivers.

Their manners.

Their men may marrie many wives, whereof one of them keeps his howſe, and the others are elſwhere. They have noe ſtewes within their Cities, but the whores are bound to live in the ſuburbs. They hold their marriages at the new moones, and moſt of all in the month of March, which is the firſt day of the yeere, in which they keepe their feaſts with great preparation & Solemnity. Their Feaſt laſts manie dayes with inſtruments of muſicke and gamings. The Chinaes for the moſt part have broad viſages, ſmall eyes, flatt & crooked noſes, noe beards, but a fewe thinne hairs on both ſides of their chinns. True it is, that ſome of them have broad eyes a good beard, & have a faire countenance, but the number of them is few. They have a like coulour as thoſe of Europe, but thoſe, which dwell about Canto are more browne & blackish. They ſeldome, or never goe out of their Countrie, and doe not willingly entertaine any ſtraingers in their Countrie, unleſſe, they have the Kings leave and letters. They are naturally inclined to feaſtings, and drinkings in noe leſſe manner then the Germans and Netherlanders. For their religion, they beleeve that all things created and inferiour with the Government of them, depend upon the ſuperiour & of heaven, which they think to be the Soveraigne God, and marke him with the firſt character of their Alphabet. They worship the Sunne, the Moone, the Starrs and the Devill himſelfe to the end, as they ſay, that he may doe them noe harme, & paint him out in the ſame shape, as they doe in Europe. They have two ſorts of Prieſts, the one are cloathed in white, with their heads shavẽ, and live in cõmon as the Moncks doe here. The others weare black cloaths, and long haire, and have their dwellings a part, as our Prieſts doe here. Neither of them muſt marrie, but in the meane time live a luxurious and a villanous life. In every mechanick art, and manifacture they are ſo exceeding skillfull and cunning, that their wockemanship ſeemeth rather to be made by nature, then by the hãd of man. The Arts of printing, and making of ordnance are ſo ancient, and have bin in uſe with them ſo long, that they knowe not the Authours of them. In writing and printing, they doe not as wee doe, in reading their lines from the left hand towards the right, nor according to the manner of the Hebrewes, which doe the contrarie: but they draw their lines from the top of the page downeward to the bottome. Their letters are neither vowells, nor conſonants wherewith they forme, their words, but every letter maketh a word: the firſt betokeneth God, the others ſomething elſe, for which they have more then 15000 marks: and yet never the leſſe underſtand one an other, not like unto the Hieroglyphicks of the Egyptians, which were but pictures & ſimilituds of things, which they would expreſſe, but after the manner of characters. They uſe alſo carvings, & are great Painters & drawers, of leaves flowers birds and beaſts, as ye may ſee in the bedds, hangings & tables, which are brought out of the Kingdome. The Portugalls report many ſtraynge things of the ſubtilitie of their ſpirits, among the reſt, which is moſt to be wondred at, they have wind-chariots or wagens with ſailes and knowe how to ſteere and governe them with ſuch dexteritie, that in a short time they can carrie themſelves where they pleaſe. Their poterie is cleare, neate, and whiter then ſnow, which wee hold in ſuch great eſteeme under the name of Porcelaine, ought not to be forgott. It is made as they ſay in this manner, they mingle and mix or breake in peeces certaine ſea-ſhells with the yolkes of Eggs, adding unto them ſome other ingrediens, which they knead, and lay in lumps, and burie in the ground, where they lett it lye and ſoften for 80 or 100 yeers, and leave it as a rich treaſure to their Inheritours, which they make uſe of as bequeathed to thẽ by their Fathers & Grand-fathers, & keepe this ancient cuſtome to emplaiſter as much new, as they take up of the old. The fashion, and manner of their dyet is delicate; not much unlike thoſe of France & Germanie. They dreſſe their meate well and make curious bancketts. They ſit at a table as they doe in Europe, upon ſtooles or formes, and not upon the ground as the other people of Aſia doe. And though the Chinaes have great abundance of Fowle, of Venaiſon & both Shell, and ſcale fiſhe, yea moſt daintie meates; yet the meate which they eſteeme moſt of all, is ſwines fleshe or porck. They uſe pincers, or forks of gould and ſilver to take up their meate. The rich and wealthie men, cloath themſelves in ſilke of divers coulours, the meaner ſort in black cotton, & in linnen cloth, for they have not the knowledg to make wollen cloth among thẽ. Their men weare longe haire, as our wemen doe here, and binde them together upon the crowne of their heads, tying and faſtning them together with a ſilver button. Their women adorne themſelves with gould and precious ſtones. Their greateſt trading is in Spiceries, but chiefly in ſilks. For they bring from Malacca, Bengala and other places Pepper, Cloues, Safran, Nut muſcades, Caſſia & other kind of Spiceries, which yeelds them great profit. But their chiefeſt trading is in webbs of ſilke. For Iohn Barrius writeth in his Decades of Aſia, that certaine Portugalls have noted, that out of the Citie of Nimpo, which others call Liampo, there hath bin brought in the ſpace of 3 monthes 160 thowſand pounds of ſilke.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ILAND OF IAPAN,

And the Leſſer Iles lying about it.

Name. THis Iland is called by Marcus Paulus Zipangri: in Magnus his opinion it was named Chryſis, & by Mercator held to be Aurea Cherſoneſus: but at this day it is commonly called Iaponia or Iapan. There are three principall Ilands as Petrus Maffejus witneſſeth, beſides ſome other ſmall ones betwixt, which a ſmall arme of the Sea flowing, ſeparateth one from another.

Deviſion. The chiefe and greateſt Iland is called Iapan, and was divided into 53. Princedomes or Kingdomes, amonge which thoſe of Meacum, Amaguncum & Tenze, were the mightieſt.

The ſecond Iland is called Ximo, conſiſting of nine Kingdomes, whereof Bungum and Figer are the principaleſt.

The third Iland is Xicoum, and containeth foure Kingdomes or Provinces.

Lenght & breadth. The length of this whole Iſland in ſome mens opinion is 600. miles, but the breadth is nothing anſwerable to the length, for in ſome places it is not aboue 30. yea in the broadeſt part but 90. miles over: how many it is in compaſſe is not certainely knowne. It lyeth Northward of the line from the 30. to the 38. degree. Situation & bounds. It is ſeated over againſt Nova Hiſpania, on the North ſide it hath the Schytians and Tartars, with other unknowne ſauvage people, on the Weſt the Chinois, & on the South the vaſt Ocean beateth upon it. There borders upon it alſo ſome unknowne Countries.

Temperature. The conſtitution of the aire in this Iland is wholeſome. This Countrie is ſubject to much colde and ſnowe, which makes it not very fruitfull.

Fertility. In September they reape their Rice, and in ſome parts mowe their Wheate in May. They make their no bread as wee doe, but a certaine kinde of Dow like a haſtie pudding. The Inhabitants digg out of the bowells of the earth diverſe kinds of Mettalls, wherewith they allure forraine nations to come & trafficke with them, and as Marcus Paulus Venetus witneſſeth, this Countrie is ſo exceeding rich in golde, that the Kings Palaces are overlayd & covered with plate of Gould, abundance of Gould. in the ſame manner as ſome great mens houſes amongſt us are covered with Lead or Copper.

The Trees there (both ſuch as beare fruit, as others) are not much unlike ours. In many places there growes Cedars, exceeding tall and thick, whereof they make pillars for Churches, & long maſts for ſhipping. The Iaponites keepe in their Houſes, neither Sheepe, Swyne, Hennes, Geeſe, nor any uncleane thing. In their Paſtures they breed and feed whole heards of Cattell, and troupes of Horſes for ſervice. In their woods and Groues, there are diverſe kind of game, and wilde Beaſts, Deere, Harts, Hares, Connies, wilde Swyne, Wolues, &c. Wilde Beaſts.

There are alſo great ſtore of Pheſants, Wild-Ducks, Stockdoues, Turtledoues & Wilde-hennes. Fowle.

All Iapan heretofore was ſubject to one Emperour (whoſe title or name was called the Vo or Dair) till that by a long and continued peace, having wallowed in the mire of luxurie and ſloth, grew into contempt, and was at laſt made away by his two principall Gouvernours of Cubis. The one of them afterward ambitious of gouvernment brought the other to his end. The Princes Gouvernment.

That King which now holdeth Meacum and the adjacent Countries (which tract beareth commonly the name of Tenze) with Caſtles & Armes, is accounted the greateſt & mightieſt of all: for (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) the Kingdome of Tenze of it ſelfe, comprehendeth fiue other petty Realmes all lying about Meacū, & doth now Lord it over 50. of theſe ſmall Kingdomes: ſo that the King of Tenze writeth himſelue Soveraigne Lord of Iapō. Of late yeare the Tyrant Nobununga gott theſe places under his power: in his Throne ſucceeded Faxiba, one of the principall Lords of the Countrie, the Father of Taicoſama now living, who with his faction brought the ſaid Tyrant to his end, putting ſome of his Children to death, and baniſhing others: & that he might the better aſſure himſelfe of his new conqueſt, tranſported the vanquiſhed Kings from one Countrie to another, to the end that being removed out of their commaunds, & placed among ſtrange ſubjects, they ſhould remaine weake, and without meanes to revolt gainſt him, a Politicke & a mercifull courſe. At this day the Monarch of all Iaponia, who raigneth over them is called Taicoiſama or Taico. What the revenewes of this King are, wee cannot certainely tell, onely wee may geſſe them to be very great: in that he hath two millions of gold for the yearely rent of that Rice, which is gathered out of thoſe poſſeſſions, which he hath reſerved for his Demeanes.

The chiefe Cittie is Meacum, a very great towne, Cities. Meancum. which was heretofore 21. miles about, but through the inteſtine warres is much decreaſed, yea almoſt to a third part. Here reſideth the ſupreame Magiſtrate conſiſting of a Triumvirat, or of three men.

There is alſo Oſſacaia, a braue, mighty & a Free Citty, Oſſacaia. held for one of the richeſt in all the Orientall parts. Hither comes a great cōcourſe of Marchants, whereof the meaner ſort are accounted to be worth at the leaſt three thouſand pounds, but the richer ſort are men of an incredible wealth.

Bungum is ſeated in a very commodious place, and Bungum. is the capitall Cittie of thoſe parts, wherein it lieth, having many Chriſtians in it.

Coia. Coia is sacred to a Bonzi or a Prieſt, which they tearme Combadaſſi. All their Princes are buried in this Citty, & if any of them be enterred in any other towne, yet they muſt ſend hither a tooth of them at the leaſt to be buried here: in ſuch reverence doe they hold this place.

Fianocanca. The Cittie of Fianocanca lieth 54. miles from Meacum, and in the dayes of the Tyrant Nobunanga was deſtroyed, and in the yeare 1596. was overthrowne with an Earthquake, and ſhortly after being rebuilt, a great part of it was burnt with fire.

Amangaſaqui. Amangaſaqui is a fine towne, lying fiue miles from the Sea over againſt Sacai, there are alſo many other gallant townes, as Voſoquin, Funarium and Toſa, which for brevity I will paſſe over.

Sea-Havēs. Here are alſo many commodious Havens, among which Ochinafamannus is the chiefeſt, where there lies continually many ſhipping.

Mountaines & hils. Here are alſo many high and ſteepe Mountaines, among the reſt two of them are very famous; the one is nameleſſe, & ſendeth out continuall flames of fire, upon the top whereof the Devill appeares to ſome men, who with faſting and devotion haue for a long time afflicted themſelues, & ſhowes himſelf cloathed with a bright cloud. The other is called Figeneiama being exceeding high, & reacheth ſome miles aboue the cloudes.

Publicke buildings & workes. The ſumptuous buildings, Palaces, Monaſteries, &c. we will leaue to the relation of Paulus Venetus, being noe leſſe ſuperbe in their building at this day. Taico or Taicoſama, who gouvernes them at this preſent as a Monarch, built himſelf a Court, which is of a ſtrange and admirable ſtructure. It is hung about with a thouſand coſtly hangings & Tapiſtries, laced about with Damaſk, Veluet & Gold, and is built with moſt coſtly wood and timber, the inſide being overlayd with pure Gold. Before this Palace he hath erected an Amphitheater, where they act their Comedies. On the one ſide of it a pretty way from it, there ſtands two high towers, having three or foure chambers a peece in them. Their houſes are for the moſt part built with timber, in regard this Countrie is very ſubject to many Earthquakes, ſome againe are built with ſtone, and compact together after a fine and a neate manner.

Their Policie & Gouernment. The Gouvernment of this Countrie (as is ſaid) conſiſteth in three men, which are eſteemed the chiefeſt in the Kingdome, and beare the greateſt ſway, and authority. The firſt they call Zazo their high Prieſt, who hath the adminiſtration over their Clergie. The ſecond is named Voo, & he hath the charge and diſpoſing of all places and dignities. The third they tearme Cubacama, & he hath the diſpoſing & managing of all affaires touching Peace and Warre.

The whole people are devided into fiue States or Degrees. The firſt degree are thoſe which haue the Gouvernment, & theſe they call Tonos, of theſe their be ſome of them that are of a higher Degree & Quality then the others, as are our Kings, Dukes, Marquiſes, Earles, Lords, &c. The ſecond Degree are the Spirituality, all theſe haue the haire of their heads and beards ſhaven cleane of, and never marrie; having many ſects amonge them, and though they be Spirituall yet ſome of theſe betake themſelues to the Warres, like the Knights of Malta, being all called by one common name Bonzy. The third Degree conſiſts of Cittizens, Burgeſſes & of the Gentrie. The fourth Degree are men of occupations, ſkilled in all manner of occupations, Handiecrafts and Manifactures: and the laſt Degree are the Huſbandmen and Peſants.

Malefactours of what State or condition ſoeuer they be, are for the leaſt crime or offence, either baniſhed, or putt to death, and are oftentimes at unawares runne through the body with a ſword. But in ſome places they ſett their murderers & pyrates upon Carts through their ſtreets to be mocked & laughed at by the people, and without the towne they naile them to a croſſe after the manner of the Iewes.

In their Religion they are great Idolaters and erre groſly. Their Miniſters and Teachers are the Bonzy, as wee haue mentioned before.

Their Gods. Amonge their Gods they call upon Amida & Xaca, whome they worſhip with great humility. They haue others which they name Fotoques from theſe they expect life Eternall; beſides theſe they haue their petty Gods, which they terme Camis, theſe they adore for the diſpoſing of their houſehold affaires, for health and riches, and for the procreating of Children.

Vniverſities. They haue alſo in ſome Cities Vniverſities, as at Bandum, which is ſaid to be an Vniverſity bigger then Paris. Here their Bonzys haue ſpeciall ceremonies, and proceede in learning. At Bungum is alſo a Seminarie, or Schoole of Ieſuites, where the Iaponites ſpeake Portugal, and the Europians learne the Iaponian language.

Printing in uſe among them. The art of Printing is alſo in uſe among them.

The manners of the Natives. The people for the moſt part are induſtrious, wittie, ingenious, docible & of a good memorie and underſtanding. Poverty is accounted noe ſhame amonge them: they haue in deteſtation chiding, brawling, theverie, vaine ſwearing and playing at Dice. To be tall, and a well proportioned bodie they like exceeding well; they are of a ſtrong conſtitution; till they are ſixtie yeares of age, they make good Souldiers: they lett their beards grow reaſonable longe: they pull their Childrens haire out of their foreheads with a paire of ſmall tangues or pincers. The vulgar ſort & the huſbandmen cutt halfe the haire of their head off, and the gentry almoſt all, leaving but a litle tuff of haire in their necks, which they hold as a ſhame, if any man touch it.

Their lodging. The Floures of their houſes are covered with matts, & are made in the faſhion of matraſſes, whereupon they lye, hauing onely a ſtone for a pillow under their heads: They eate upon their knees; leaning upon their thighes and ſitting upon their arſes, they are as punctuall and neate as the Chinois.

In eating of their meate they uſe two ſmall ſticks leaſt it ſhould fall on the ground, neither doe they waſhe their hands before dinner.

Before they goe to dinner, or ſupper they pull of their ſhoes, leaſt they ſhould foule their matts.

Their manners when they eate. The meaner ſort, eſpecially thoſe which dwell by the Sea Coaſt, eate Herbes, Rice and Fiſhe; but the richer know how to dreſſe daintie Cates & Diſhes. At every courſe their geſt haue a cleane table (but without either table cloath or napkins) made of Cedar-boards, being about a hand bredth high from the ground.

Their Confitures and Banketting ſtuff they ſett upon their tables in the forme of a Piramide, gilding them over, and beſetting them round about with Cypreſſe ſprings and branches: they uſe alſo to gild the bills, and the leggs of their foule & birds, before they diſh then up.

The Portugals trading. The Portugals driue a great trade in theſe parts, for here they finde great ſtore of Pearle, which are round and thick, and of a reddiſh colour. They finde there alſo many precious ſtones, which with the abundance of Gould they haue, enriches this Countrie mightely.

The General Deſcription OF EAST-INDIA.

Name. INDIA is the biggeſt, and nobleſt Countrie of all Aſia, & is ſo called from the river Indus, Ptolomie divideth this great Region into two parts, namely into India intra Gangem, and India extra Gangem. India beyond Ganges is called in the Holy Scripture Hevila, or as ſome write Havilath, or Evilath. India on this ſide Ganges is alſo called Seria, and by the Inhabitants Macym, or Magin, as Marius writeth. Likewiſe Mangi and China. Ioannes Barrius ſaith, that it is named alſo Indaſtan. Pomponius affirmeth, that India is of ſuch a large extent, and takes up ſuch a ſpace and tract, that one cannot ſaile along the ſea Coaſt in 60 daies, & nights.

Bounds. Strabo and Plinie bound India on the Weſt with the river Indus (which ſeparateth Perſia from India) on the North with mount Taurus, on the Eaſt with the Eaſterne Sea, and on the South with the Indian Ocean.

The extention. This Countrie (as Mr. Heylin ſaith) extendeth in length from China to Perſia 3600 miles, and ſtretcheth from Taurus to the Ocean: this being the biggeſt Countrie, comprehended under one name of any in the world, excepting Tartaria, & China. It is ſituate betweene the firſt and ſixth Climates, the longeſt day being in the South part of 12 howers onely; but in the North fiueteene howers and a halfe.

The Aire. India is a halthfull Countrie, being refreſhed with many ſweete weſterne windes; but is not everywhere of a like tẽperature, in regard of the greatneſſe thereof: for in ſome places, eſpecially neere vnto the line, it is extreme hott, and in other places very temperate; but towards the North cooler.

Fertility. This Countrie throughout ſurpaſſeth all the other parts of the world for a good ſituation, a temperate aire, a fatt and a fruitfull ſoile, having an other face, and countenance than other Countries: for here new ſtars doe riſe and ſett: it hath two Summers, beareth fruits twiſe a yeare, betweene which there blowes many coole Eaſterne gales of winde, which doe refreſh & allay the extraordinarie heate thereof.

And though there groweth not much Corne: yet haue they plenty of all kinde of Fruits, eſpecially Barly, Rice, and the like, which they pull up with their handes. There are likewiſe many fruit trees.

This Countrie alſo produceth abundance of Pepper, Franckencenſe, Myrhe, Aloes, Cloues, Ginger, & in the Southerne parts, Cynnamõ, Calmus, Nardus, & other Aromatick ſpiceries, & as in Arabia & Æthiopia, ſo the Canes haue honey in thẽ. There are alſo many Phyſicall Hearbes and drugges, many wholeſome roots, and ſome poyſonable: what ſhall I ſpeake of the mineralls, mettals, precious Stones, and other gifts of Nature, which are there? From hence comes gold and ſilver in abundance, copper, yron, and Lettanie, as Diodorus withneſſeth, though Plinie be of a contrarie opinion, that it affords neither Copper, nor Lead; but in ſtead of them Pearles, and Stones, for from hence alſo comes great ſtore of precious ſtones, as Berils, Chryſophraſes, Adamants, Carbuncles, Chryſolits and exceeding great and faire pearles. Here they haue ſuch abundance of ſilke, that they furniſh the whole world therewith. All Beaſts are larger, and greater bon'd here then in any other part of the world. Here are huge wilde Bulls, Camells, Lyons, Rhinocerots, Elephants, and Doggs. In the wilderneſſe are terrible Dragons, which are almoſt as bigg as Elephants, with whome they fight continually: There are ſuch fierce Maſties, that they dare ſeize upon a Lyon. A number of wilde Beaſts.

There are alſo an infinite number of Serpents, which the Indians eate, after they haue roaſted them, as they doe a kind of Ants which they eate with pepper as wee doe Crabbs. There are found alſo white Apes, and Chamæleons, which liue onely by the aire, & can tranſforme themſelues into any colour. There are alſo many kinds of ſtraunge foule and birds never ſeene by any other nation, beſides an infinite number of Hennes, Phеſants, Partriges and Parrets of diverſe fine coulours.

The Princes & Governours. Touching the governement of the Indians Plinie writeth thus, Amonge all Nations the Indians were never beaten out of their Frontiers, or habitations. They count that, from the time of Liber Pater, till Alexander the great, they had 153 Kings, which ſucceedid one an other and raigned over them 1911 yeares, and three monthes. Strabo writeth alſo of the Indians, that no man had ever any victorie over them, but onely Liber Pater, or Bacchus, who was the firſt that entred, & conquered this countrie, then Hercules & Alexander the greath: though Cyrus and Semiramis Queene of Aſſyria had aſſaulted them, and made part of this countrie tributairie to her, and ſlew Staurobates the King thereof. Next unto her Alexander the great invaded it, at which time there were many Kings, and free Citties, whom the Gymnoſophiſts perſwaded to defend their liberty. Thoſe which accompained Alexander the great in his expedition, relate, that in this tract of India, which they ſubdued, they found fiue thowſand townes, whence one may eaſely marke what a great and a large Region this was.

Cities and Townes. Calecute. The Metropolis of this Countrie is Calecute, which for three miles together lyeth along the ſea ſhoare, and is the moſt famous Mart-towne, and a ſtaple of all the Indian trafficke. There are beſides many goodly Citties, as Cambaia, Decan, Barticalla, Cononor, and diverſe others.

Lakes. Neither want they great Lakes. In the hiſtorie of Alexander Magnus mention is made of a Lake, which is beſett round about with woods and trees, and was a thouſand paces broad; where his Armie being almoſt dead with thirſt refreſhed themſelues. But the greateſt of all is the Lake Chiamay, being foure hundred miles about, and lyeth 600 miles from the ſea, from whence many famous rivers haue their ſource and head: next unto this there is the Lake Cincuihay, & diverſe others. Chimay.

Rivers. Here are alſo wonderfull great Rivers: Hiſtorie relateth, that Alexander the great ſayled every day 600 furlongs up the River Indus with his ſhipping, & that he could not ſaile unto the end of it in leſſe then fiue months and odd days, whereas it is manifeſt, that this river is leſſer then the Ganges. This river ſpringeth frõ the topp of Mount Caucaſus, heretofore called Paropamyſus, and now Naugocrot, and after he hath runne 900 miles in length diſchargeth himſelf into the South, or Indian ſea with two mouthes, carryng along with him nineteene others rivers, whereof the chiefeſt is the Hydaſpis, into which there falls foure other rivers, and the Cantabra, whoſe waters are encreaſed with three rivers more. Indus.

Ganges. Touching the river Ganges ſome write, that it hath no certaine head, others that it ariſeth in the Sythian hills, and carryeth 19 other rivers along with him.

Others say againe, that it gusheth out with a great noise, and so falleth downe steepe clifts, and then runneth through plaine fields, and so forward with a slowe streame, till he dischargeth himselfe into the sea. The bredth thereof being in the narrowest place 8, and in the broadest 20 miles, and the depth thereof never lesse then 100 foote: some haue supposed this to be the river Pison, mentioned in the holy Scriptures, which compasseth the Land of Havilah, where there is gould. Some also are of opinion, that this is the same river, which runneth into the Gulfe of Bengala, and that in regard of the likenesse of the name: for he is called in those parts by the Inhabitants Guengua: but Mercator with good reason saith, that Ganges is that River, which is now called at this daye Rio di Cantaon.

Besides these rivers, these following are the chiefest, as the Mandona, Chaberis, Ava, Campumo, Mena, Menõ, & some others. Megasthenes mentioneth that there are sixty rivers in India, which in the Summer time overflow (as the Nile doth) & fattens the ground, which is the principall cause of the fruitfulnesse thereof. It is reported that Ganges as the Nyle breedeth & feedeth Crocodells, Dolphins, and Cunngers, which are 30 foote long, as Plinie relateth.

The best and fairest part of India lyeth alonge the Indian or Southerne Ocean. And though there be many good havens: yeth it is very dangerous saying along this Coast; because of the many Rocks, Clifts, and Quicksands, which lye about this Coast.

Whales & other huge fishe.

Solinus writeth that in the Indian Ocean, there are whales, as bigge as foure acres of ground, and an other huge fishe called Physeteras, or a whire poole, which are so exceeding great, that they seeme as Pillars to rise aboue the Sayle-yard and hatches of a ship, & drawes in so much water, that when they cast it out through thier spouts sometimes it overwhelmes and sinkes a shipp neere vnto them.

Mountaines

To number up all the Mountaines in this Countrie, the most whereof are without Trees, or any greenenesse, would be here too teadious; but the Imaus, Emodus and Paropamissus are all parts of Mount Caucasus, and the chiefest.

Woods.

The woods in India, as Solinus relateth, grow so exceeding thick, that one cã scarcly shoot an arrow into them. In orchards there growes figg trees, so bigg, that they take up 60 paces of ground, the armes and boughes whereof overshade two furlongs in circuite. Their leaues are as broad as an Amazonian Targett, and the apples of them are exceeding Sweete.

In moorish grounds there growes such thick reedes; that they use them in stead of boates. In India onely groweth the Ebon tree, and upon steepe clifts: there are some trees, which sweats out Franckincense, and an other kinde of a tree, which beares great Indian nutts.

Devision of the people.

This whole nation was in times past divided into seven orders or states. The first was Philosophers: the second Husbandmen for the manuring and telling of their Lands: the third was shephards: the fourth Handiecraftsmen: the fifth Souldiers: the sixth Epophors, spyes, or ouerseers of the people, as being the chiefest of them which remonstrated to the King whatsoeuer hapned in India: and the seventh were Counsellours, whereof there were but a fewe in number chosen out of the noblest, and wisest; these commonly assisted the King with their Councills, & decided all ambiguous causes. By these all Captaines, & Princes were elected.

Lawes.

Touching their Lawes, and Statutes, the most of them liued without any written Lawes, others governed themselues according to their written Lawes, in which they use simplicity without guile, as they doe likewise in all their contracts & dealings, & are never giuẽ to disputes or cõtroversies; for they trust out any wares, or commodities, neither use any obligations, or morgages, but credit one an other simply upon their bare word. Those which are cõvinced of bearing false witnesse, the first joynts of their fingers are cutt off. He that cutts off the member of any man, loseth not onely the same member; but shal also haue his hand chopt off. But if any man maines the hand, or putts out the eye of an Artisan, he forfeits his neck.

Their Nobility is in great estimation among them, according to their ancient manner. The most part of them are vnlearned, doing all things by memorie.

Their Spirituality.

The Spirituall functions are administred by Gymnosophists, These Gymnosophists vvere to the Indians, as the Magi to the Persians, the Chaldei among the Assyrians, the Druides to the Britaines, and are called by the Indians Brachmanni. They are had in great reverence, and liue for the most part, a very austere and a solitairy life in Caues and deserts, feeding on herbes, vvearing poore and thinne vveedes, and for a certaine time doe abstaine from all kind of vvickednesse. But that time once past, maye (as it vvere) by priviledge defloure Virgins, and committ vvhat riots they list. They are skillfull in Astrologie, Philosophie, and Physicke.

Manners.

The people are indifferently civill, and ingenious. Both men and vvomen imitate a majesty in their going & apparrell, vvhich they svveeten vvith oyles and perfumes, adorning themselues vvith Ievvels, Pearles, and other ornaments befitting.

They are novv a nation (as Mr. Heylin observeth) composed of fiue severall people. I. The Indians or Natiues, vvhich are in part Gentils, in part Christians. Those vvhich are Gentiles retayning amonge them many of their old Customes, as not knovving their vviues after they haue borne them tvvo children. Secondly, not accompanying them if after fiue yeares cohabitation they can raise no issue by them, but exchanging them for others: Thirdly, they are never revvarded for any militairie exploit; unless they bring vvith them an ennemies head in their hand: Fourthly, killing their frends vvhen sickness vvithereth thẽ. Moreover, the people of Narsinga use to burne their vviues vvith their husbands, and shee is tought to haue bene most loving, during his life, vvhich is novv most vvilling to accompany him in his death, & offer herselfe to his Manes at the Funerall pile, vvhere unto thus alludeth the Poet:

A Shame 'tis not to die, they therefore striue
Vvho may be fam'd to follovv him aliue.
The Victor burnes, yeelds to the flame her brest
And her burnt face doth on her husband rest.

As for the Christians (to vvhich religion they vvere converted by Saint Thomas) they still retaine the name, and profession, wich they haue novv deformed, or rather reformed according to the Church of Rome, vvich vvas effected in the Synode, held for that purpose at Goa, Anno 1599. at vvhat time, they deliuered up all their bookes, to the censure of the Roman-Spanish Archbishop of Goa, to be by him corrected: and permitted their liturgie also to be by him altered. Before this union they used first to administer the Sacrament vvith bread seasoned vvith salt: Secondly, in stead of vvine (because India affordeth none) to use the juyce of raisins, softned in vvater one night, and so pressed forth. Thirdly, not to baptise their children till 40 daies old, unless in danger of death. Fourthly, to permitt noe images in their Churches, but of the crosse onely: Fiftly, to debarre their Priests from second Marriages: and Sixtly to paint GOD vvith three heads on one body denoting thereby the Trinity. The second sort of People, vvhich inhabite this Countrie are Mahumetan Persians, and Tartars, especially since the Moguls great victories here. Thirdly, the Ievves, vvho liue strangly disperced in all quarters: The fourth are Arabians, and Moores, vvho 200 and odde yeares past, seized on some Hauen-tovvnes, driving the natiues up higher into the land-Countrie. And the fifth Portugals, vvho possessing some fevv Sea-touvvnes, commodious for trafficke, bragg of the conquest of the vvhole Countrie, vvhich they are in no possibility to conquere, the English and Dutch having their shares, Castles, and holds in those parts asvvell as they. Hitherto Mr Heylin. All the Indians vveare long haire, their greatest braverie consisteth in Pearles, and precious Stones, but they haue sundry sorts of apparell, some vveares vvoollen, some linnen, others are clothed vvith skinnes of Beasts, and Birds feathers: some goe starcke naked, others couver onely their privities; they are commonly of a dusk ish and a tannie colour, vvhich they bring vvith them from out of their mothers vvombes. They are tall and af a large stature, they haue many married vviues giuen them by their Parents: buying them for a paire of Oxen. Some they use for servile vvorkes, others for pleasure, and the propagation of children: they maye lie vvith other vvomen, unless their vviues can persvvade them to chastety. Artificers & Handycraftsmen are in great request & esteeme amonge them, being not onely free from all taxations, but also haue a proportion of Corne allovved them out of the Kings Garniers. They driue a great trade here in many places; especially in precious Stones, svveete spices, cottons, and silkes.

The Second Deſcription OF THE EAST-INDIAN ILANDS, AS GILOLO, CELEBES, BORNEO &c.

Gilolo. GILOLO, or Gilolum, named alſo Batochina, is one of the Ilands, which they commonly call Del Moro. The aire here is hott, and intemperate. The ſoyle aboundeth with Rice, and the pith of a certaine Tree, which is called Sagu, whereof they make bread, and drawe out of the ſame tree a kinde of juyce, of which they make their wine. It hath great ſtore of wilde Hens, diffring much from ours. And the Sea neere vnto it hath abundance of Crabes, which taſte like mutton. The Natiues are Barbarous, and Cruell, and as their Predeceſſours heretofore, ſo now they will eate mans fleſh. The Temperature. The Fertility.

Celebes. The Iland Celebes with ſome others, which goe vnder the ſame name, doe lie weſtward from the Moluccos. Theſe Ilands haue good ſtore of Viniger. The Natiues are white, Anthropophagi, or Men-eathers, Idolaters, and Pirates. They goe naked, hiding onely with a ſhirt their privities.

Ambon. The Ile Ambon giveth denomination to certaine Ilands, lying next vnto it. It is 50. miles in circumferene. This Ile yeeldeth noe great ſtore of ſpices; but the ſhipping, which comes from Malacca to the Moluccos ſtrikes there, and refreſhes themſelues in this Iland. The Inhabitants of theſe Iles, giues their owne parents one to another to be eaten and devoured, when they are broken with age, or are afflicted with any incurable maladie. And by their piracies trouble much alle the adiacent Ilands.

Banda. Banda are ſeven ſmall Iles, or thereabouts, lying on the ſouth ſide of the Snida, & Molucco Ilands, vnder the ſeventh degree of Southerne latitude: others doe place them in 4 degrees, and a third part of one. The names are Banda, which is the greateſt, & giveth name to all the reſt, Mira, Roſolargiũ, Ay, Rom, Niera, & Gunuape the leaſt of them all burneth vnceſſantly, and therefore is vnhabitable. Theſe Ilands haue Nutmegs, and Maſtick growing vpon one and the ſame tree. The Nutmegg-tree is tall, and braunceth out like to our Oake. The Nutt hath three ſhells, or coverings: the firſt is thick to defend it againſt the violence of the weather, windes and raine: the ſecond is a thin ſkin, which covers it after the manner of nett, & is encompaſſed with a third ſhell: the thin ſkin is the bloſſome of the Nutmege, which the Spanjards call Macis, and wee Mace, being an excellent and wholeſome kinde of ſpice. The nutmeggtree.

Ginger. The Ginger, which growes in all theſe Ilands are of two ſorts. The one wilde, the other planted: which is better than the other, having a leafe like Saffran, and a ſweet-ſmelling roote, but being eaten biteth like pepper; and is hotter then pepper.

Timor. The Iland Timor is ſituate in the tenth degree of Southerne Latitude. It produceth great ſtore of white, and yellow Saunders, which the Ilanders ſwopp away for yron, hatches, kniues and ſwords. Saunders. There are three kinds of theſe Saunders, yellow, white, and redd. There are groues of the white, and yellow, both very good in the Iland of Timor: but the red groweth in the quarters of Choromandel & Tanaſſerim. It is like a nut-tree, the fruit thereof is of no vſe, but the wood pounced, is good againſt burning feavers, being mingled in ſome thin liquor, in chafing ones forehead and temples therewith. Mercator nameth that Iland Borneo, which Ptolomy calleth The Iland of good Fortune, is ſituate betweene Camboia and Celebes: Calamianes is next vnto it. Borneo Site.

The South part lieth vnder the Æquinoctiall-line, the reſt Northward. It is the greateſt Iland in that Ocean, and ſome report that the compaſſe of it takes vp three months ſaile: others relate that the circuit of it is 2200 miles. It aboundeth with all things neceſſairie, and yeeldeth Camphire, Muſhroms, Diamants, and litle horſes. The Fertility. There are in this Iland many good havens, and faire Cities, as Cabura, Tajacopura, Tamoaratas, Malano, and Borneo the chiefeſt of them all, which hath in it 25000 Inhabitants. Cities. It is ſituate in a Moorish ground by the Sea ſide like Venice. The Kinge whereof is a Mahumetan, with whome they cannot ſpeake; but by an Interpretour. The Natiues are whitiſh, they are ſharpe witted, and more craftie then in the other Ilands, and yet are Idolaters.

The Philippines. The Philippina are many Ilands ſo called from Phillip the ſecond of Spaine, in whoſe time they were diſcovered by Legaſpi a Spanjard Anno 1564. Name. Ptolomie calleth them Baruſſes. The chiefeſt of them are Luzzon, or Lucon, Tandair and Mindanoa. Climate. The climate in theſe Ilands is good & temperate, but ſomewhat hott, eſpecially by the Sea Coaſt: for that part, which lieth within the Land is cooler. Fertility. The ſoyle is very fruitfull in wheate, Rice, Sugar, Pulſe, Hony, and Figgs, almoſt halfe a cubit longe. They finde in them alſo ſome Gold and Yron mines, many Horſes, Oxen, Kine, Swine, Deare, and abundance of Civett-Catts. Tandair. The Ile of Tandair, which is commonly called Philipina is fairer, and more pleaſant, being 160 miles in compaſſe. Luzzon Luzzon. is much greater but leſſe manured: in which the Spanjards haue built the towne of Manila, lying very commodiouſly vpon the Sea. Mindanao. Townes. The Ile Mindanao hath many townes in it, as Cailon, Pavaodes, Subut, Papito, and Suriaco. The Spanjards inhabit theſe Iles for the moſt part, who trafficke with the neigbouring Ilanders, & the Chinois; and from thence ſett forth ſhipping for new Spaine, and the Kingdome of Mexico, through a famous paſſage. Camboia. The Kingdome of Camboia aboundeth in all things neceſſarie to life. It taketh the name from the chiefe Citty Camboia, ſituate on the river Meicon: which ariſing in China, ſo augmenteth his waters, that his owne Channell being inſufficient to receiue them, he renteth the Earth into a hundred Ilands, & at laſt he filleth a Lake with his Streames of 60 miles long. Name. The river Meicon. This Ile & towne is of great trafficke for its plentie of Gold, Silver, Aloes, Rice, Meate, and abundance of Wines made after their manner, and breedeth many Horſe & Elephants. Fertility. The Inhabitants are warrlike, but Idolaters. The Kingdome of Malacca is 270 miles in length, and lyeth altogether vpon the Sea Coast. It hath a moist soyle, dirtie, and not very fruitfull, yet in the best grounds thereof there growes Corne and Saunders. The Cittie of Malacca is situate vpon the famous river Gaza. It is a great Cittie, populous, and is almost 20 miles in circuit. There resorts vnto it an infinite number of Marchants, aswell from our parts, as from the adjacent places. The Inhabitants of this Kingdome haue vggly faces, longe hayre, are wickedly minded, in delighting to committ murders in the night, that the Autheur may not be seene, or knowne. Their King was heretofore a Mahumetan, who for some time having troubled and made warres against Lopes di Secheira a Portugall, had his Kingdome taken away from him by Alphonsō d' Albuquerque, who brought this citty & the Moores vnder the subjection of the King of Portugall. Here resideth now the Archbishop. Here also they coine their gold, and silver, whereof the Inhabitants before made no vse, but had a kinde of copper money, which went currāt amonge them, being of a great weight, and a litle value.

Summatra. The site, Clime & Soyle.

Summatra lyeth vnder the Æquinoctiall line, and reacheth from the North to the South part 900 miles. Aristotle in his booke de Mundo, calleth it Taprobane, and was by him esteemed to be the biggest Iland of the world: but moderne experience hath found it otherwise; it being onely 700 miles long. and 200 broad. It is situate vnder a badd Climate, being vnwholesome, by reason of the abundance of Exhalations, and Foggs, which arise out of the Lakes and pooles in it, and the heate of the Sunne, which reflecteth continuall vpō the rivers, causeth these dampes: yet the Sunnes vicinitie makes the soile abound in Ginger, Aloes, Cassia, Camphire, Mushromes, Silke, gold and silver, and abundance of common & longe pepper, whereof the Inhabitants lade tuenty shipps therewith, and sends it every yeare to Cathay. In some parts of it there are Elephants greater, and fitter for the warrs then those of other countries. Here is also a hill called Balalvanus, which continually burneth,

The Fertility.

A burning Hill.

and here are reported to be two strange fountaines, whereof the one runneth pure Balsamum, and the other, the best Oyle. This Ile is divided into 10 Kingdomes: the chiefe being of Pedor, and Acem: whose subjects are the most loving men to their ennemies, that are; other wise they would never eate them. They vse the skulls of their eaten Ennemies in stead of Money, exchanging them for their necessaries, and he is accounted the richest man, that hath most of these in his house. The chiefe Cities are 1. Daren 2. Pazzen, and 3. Androgeda, as Mr. Heylin witnesseth.

The Princes. Their manners.

Townes.

Iava is either the greater, or the lesser, as Marcus Paulus Venetus relateth: he devideth them into eight Kingdomes, whereof he travelled trough sixe of them, viz. Ferlech, Basman, Samata, Drogoiam, Lambri, & Fausur. He reporteth in his descriptions, that in the Kingdome of Basman there are Vnicornes not much lesse then Elephants; being of the haire and colour of a Buffle. Iava major lies not farre from Summatra to the Eastward of it, and is in compasse 3000 miles, and in length 570, and for its wonderfull fertility is called by Scaliger the Epitome of the vvorld. There is abundance of Gold, Copper, Corne, and lofty trees, and a multitude of troopes, and heards of horse and Cattle. They salt their meates, both for them selues, and Straungers. They haue some fowle without feete. They gather abundance of silke in the woods and upon the trees without any great labour. There is in this Iland most excellent Emraulds, which giues a great lustre from them. There is also great store of pepper, cinamon, ginger, Cassia and diverse sweete spices. The Inhabitants in the Northerne parts are Moores, & the midlanders Southward Gentils: for this countrie is so divided by a continuall ridge of high and steepe mountaines. The Natiues are of a litle stature, broad-faced, corpulent, sharpe witted & ingenious: All what they vndertake, they beginn it happily, & finnish it diligently. They are skillfull in marchandise, Arts, Armes, learning Erudition, industrious and eloquent.

The third Deſcription
OF THE
EAST-INDIAN ILANDS, among vvhich the
MOLVCCO ILANDS
are the moſt Famous.

The Name.

THe Molluccoes are famous through the world, in regard of the abundance of all ſorts of ſweete ſpices, but eſpecially for the Cloues, which comes from them.

The Situation.

Vnder this name fiue other Orientall Ilands are comprehended, as Ternate, or Tarante, Tidor, or Theodory, Motir, or Muthil, Machian or Mate, Bachian, or Bacianum, they lie under the line, betweene the Iles of Celebes and Gilolo. The greateſt of them is hardly 18 Engliſh miles about, and all of them within the Compaſſe of 75 miles. They are very unhealthfull for many Marchants dye in them, who preferre their gaine before their owne liues.

The Soile.

The ſoile is exceeding dry & ſpongie, which quickly ſucks up all the raine that falls, before it can runne into the Sea.

The Fertility.

It produceth diverſe ſweete ſpices, as Nutmeggs, Maſtick, Aloes, Saunders, Cynnamon, Ginger, Pepper, and Cloues in abundance, without any labour or pruning, which is a wonder in nature; but as for other fruits for daylie food there are litle or none; therefore the Inhabitants liue by baſtering, and exchanging theſe ſpices for other proviſions and huge Canes, which grow ſo great in the Moluccoes, that the Natiues make of them Tonnes, and Barrells for their neceſſarie uſe.

The Cloue-tree.

The Cloue-tree grows out of rocks, and clifts, but beares no fruit, till they be foure yeares old: they are thick, and haue leaues like a Bay-tree. The bloſſomes ſhoote firſt out like fenell-ſeed or like Oreng-budes. The bloſſomes being falne off, then ſprouts out the fruit, litle by litle like a naile: at the firſt they are red, but being dryed in the Sunne, become black, and that they maye be the harder, and keepe their vertue the longer they uſe to ſpringle ſalt water upon them. Theſe trees grow cloſſe one by an other (whether this happens by reaſon of the goodneſſe of the ſoile or of the fruitfullneſſe of the ſeede, roots and ſpriggs, which growe like a groue. The Inhabitants ſhares the trees, and ſhrubbs among them, and gather the fruits of them, to ſell it unto Marchands.

A ſtrang and admirable bird called Manucodiata.

In theſe Ilands there falls out of the aire a ſtraung bird without feete, called Manucodiata of the biggneſſe of a Mag-pye, with a flatt head like a ſwallow, having a forked taile as long as an Arrow, flying in the aire with a continuall Motion: the feathers upon his head are ſo ſmall, as the leaſt haire you can ſee. They are greene like the feathers of a wild drake, but of a more liuely colour like an Emrauld; beneath the neck he hath ſhorter and leſſer feathers, of a yellow or of an Orange Colour, and falling downeward towards his breaſt are more bright & ſhyning; the uppermoſt part of his neck is couvered thick with feathers of a ſooty colour, which from his back to his taile grows greater, & thicker, but looſes ſomewhat of the brightneſſe thereof: thoſe feathers under his belly differ not much from the ſame greatneſſe and hue, when he ſpreadeth out his wings, they are at leaſt a foote and a halfe in bredth: the feathers under his wings are browne, but the uppermoſt white, intermingled with ſome reddiſh ſpecks: The quils and feathers on his wings are not ſo cloſſe one by an other; but that the aire maye come in through them. The Superſtitious Natiues beleeue, that this bird falls out of Heauen, or from the Mahumetan Paradice. They hold this bird in great eſteeme: yea their kings thinke themſelues ſafe from perills of warre if they haue one of them vvith them, vvhen they ſtand in the fore front of a battle.

Tidor and Ternate.

Among theſe fiue Ilands before mentioned, Tidor, and Ternate are the principalleſt. Ternate having two commodious hauens. Vnder the King of Ternate (as Mr. Heylin relateth) 70 Ilands ſubmit their delicious commodities. Add unto theſe two the Ilands of Banda, or Bantan both for the vicinity in ſituation, & qualities, as abounding more in Nutmeggs, then any of the ſlaues of India, and for that cauſe much frequented. The Chiefe towne is, Nera. In all the Ilands, aſwell of Banda, as the Moluccoes, the faith of Chriſt beginneth now to take deepe roote, though according to the tenets of the Roman Church. Galvano reporteth, that in this Iland there is a fruit of which if a woman vvith child eate, her child will preſently moue: that there is a riuer plentifully ſtored with fiſhe, whoſe water is yet ſo hott, that it doth immeadiately ſcald off the ſkinn of any Beaſt that is caſt into it.

Nera.

The Natiues.

The Inhabitants of theſe Ilãds, for the moſt part are Caffars or Heathens, which worſhip the Sunne, and the Moone aſcribing the Government of the day to the Sunne, and of the night to the Moone; And ſay the Sunne is the man, and the Moone the wife, and that they are the Father and the Mother of the Starrs, which they hold alſo for their children, and petty Gods. They ſalute & reverence the riſing of the Sunne with their verſes. And their publick affaires are handled in the night by Moone light, at which time the Counſellours of ſtate meete & aſcend ſome tree, to view the Heavens, till the Moone riſes, and then goe into their Senate houſe to conſultation. They doe alſo pray unto her when ſhee ſhines, for propagation of Children, the breeding of their Cattle, and that the Earth maye produce her fruits in due ſeaſon and ſuch like matters. They reverence and affect honeſtie, and upright dealings, are Lovers of peace and quietneſſe, and haters of warre and diſſentions.

Their Idolatrie, Superſtition and Manners.

The Forts.

There are two ſtrong Forts in the Ile of Ternate, the one called Grammallamma. The other Malayo. In the Ile of Mothir lieth Naſſaus fort, and in Machian Tabilola and Mauritius Forts, as is deſcribed in this map.

The firſt diſcoverie of the Moluccos.

The Moluccoes were diſcovered firſt in the time of Charles the fifth: for when a great ſtrife and diſſention aroſe betweene the Portugals in the Eaſt, and the Caſtilians in the Weſt, each nation ſtriving to enlarge their bounds and territoires, that the one might not be in the way one of an other, this quarrell was pacifyed by the authority of Pope Alexander the ſixth, and this new world was then divided into two parts; and certaine conditions and articles drawne betweene them: namely, that whatſoeuer was found by nauigation or might be diſcouered hereafter beyond the Ilands of the Atlantiek Sea, called heretofore Heſperides, as farre as the Eaſt, and the Orientall Iles ſhould belong unto the Portugals, and that which was found to the Weſtward ſhould appertaine unto the Caſtilians, and ſo through the ſearch and diligence of this nation America was knowne. The Portugals by litle and litle gott ſo farre into the Orient, (being tranſported with a deſire of gaine) that they began to entrench and fall into the part of the Caſtilians, which ſtrife could not be decided, but by judgement of Ferdinandus Magellanus. For he being a natiue Portugall, being incenſed by a diſcontentment and hate he had againſt his prince Emanuell; becauſe he had not rewarded his paines according to his deſert, pretented that the Moluccoes; according to the partition made of the new world, belonged to the Caſtilians. Therefore to end this ſtrife, Charles the fifth ſett him out Anno 1519, to ſeeke out an other paſſage to theſe Ilands: he directing his Voyage ſo, that from Spaine he rann his courſe outright to the 52 degree of the Southerne Latitude, and then turning his courſe towards the Weſt, paſſing a huge and an incredible way beneath the under-Hemiſphare, at laſt he ſaw the Orient or the riſing of the Sunne, and arrived with his ſhip in the Moluccoes, which he ſought for. From thence his men returned againe towards Spaine, through the upper Hemiſphare, along the Coaſt of Aſia and Africa, and ſo with an admirable magnanimity, ſayled about the globe of the whole Earth, which was never done afore by any man. Now Magellanus himſelfe ere he had found out all the Moluccoes was ſlaine and overthrowne in a fight againſt the Sauvages. And his Fellowe helpers afterwards found out the reſt of the Moluccoes, when their ſhips were diſperced, and many of them ſlaine and taken priſonners by the Sauvages: ſo that there was but one of their ſhips which returned ſafe into Spaine, laden with Spiceries and pearles as great as piggons eggs. Which Navigators gott themſelues an everlaſting fame, and gained more honour, then the Argonauta, who was embarked with Iaſon in Colchis: yea, this ſhip that had paſt through ſo many perills, and daungers might rightly be called after the name of a Starre, as the old ſhip of Argos was: for that onely ſayled no further, then out of Gracia to Pontus Euxinus; but this Magellanian ſhip, about the whole compaſſe of the world. And thus much for theſe fiue Ilands.

OF AFRICA.

The name & from whome.

PTOLOMIE, Dionyſius and Plinie, would haue Africa to be the ſecond part of the World. Strabo the Third, it matters not, whether wee followe this or that opinion, the order of Strabo pleaſeth ſome: his authoritie here then wee will follow and make Africa the third part of te World. It is ſoo called (if wee will giue credit to Nicias) from a certaine man called Afer, the Compagnion of Hercules, who accompained him to Gades. If wee followe Ioſephus and Iſidorus, it was ſo named from one of the Succeſſours of Abraham named Aſer: or as Feſtus thinketh, from the Greeke word Φρίκη, which ſignifieth Horror, for ſhe is exempted thereof being ſited betweene the Tropicks. The Arabians callit Fricchiam from the verbe Faruca, which ſignifieth with them, to ſeparate: for it is almoſt divided from the other parts of the Earth: or alſo from Iſricus King of Arabia the Happie, which they ſaye firſt inhabited theſe Countries. The Grecians calls it Lybia from Libya the Daughter of Epaphus: or becauſe it is Lyphya, or that the Winde called Libs, bloweth from this part. In the holy Scripture it is called Chameſia, of the Arabians and Æthiopians Alkebulam, and of the Indians Beſecath. The Equinoctiall Circle cutteth it almoſt in the midſt. The Tropickes ſurpaſſe it not, but goes beyond it on both ſides ten degrees and more. The Mediterranean Sea; and the Streight of Gybralter boundes it on the North. The Red-Sea or Erythrea, with the Iſthmus, or the narrow neck of this land that parteth this Sea, and the Mediterranean on the Eaſt, the Ethyopick Ocean on the South, and the Atlanticke on the Weſt, having the forme (as it were) of a Peninſula joyned to the partition of the Seas aboue ſaid. Now though the longitude which is taken from the Weſt, Eaſtward is ſhorter then that of Europe: yer that which runneth towards the South extendeth it ſelfe ſo farre, that Europe can ſcarcely compare with it. For it hath the ſpace almoſt of 70. degrees, & Europe hath hardly 35. Beſides this, Europe is crooked and wynding; but Africa all alike, and alwaies continueth in one forme. Europe (as wee haue ſaid) is very well manured. and this lies waſt an deſert in many places. That for a long time knowe, this not. That pars which is manured in Africa beareth much: but for the greateſt part it is couvered with barren ſands, and ſubject to much extremitie of the heate of the aire. In the Deſerts are fierce dangerous & cruell beaſts, which are found there. Many ſtraunge things are ſpoken of the exceeding abundance of her fertility, as yeelding in ſome ſoyles, a hundred Cornes for one ſeed that is caſt into it, & it is wonderfull to heare what is ſaid of the fruitfulneſſe of Mauritania, that there are found ſuch Vineſtoocks, that two man can hardly graſpe them about, and which beare grapes a cubit longe. Upon Mount Atlas, the Trees are exceeding high, cleane poliſhed & without knotts, whereof the leaues are of Cypreſſe. It breedeth Elyphants & Dragons, which as Ennemies perſue the greater Beaſts & kill them, if they can but gett them in their clawes, through the ſinous fouldings of their Tayle. Lyons, Buffles, Leopards, Goates, Apes are there in great number. Herodotus reporteth that Aſſes are bred there with hornes. There are alſo Hyana, Hiſtrices, Wylde Rammes, Thores begotten betweene the Wolfe and the Hyana, Pantheres, Auſtriges, and beſides many ſorts of Serpents, as Snakes & Aſps, as an Antidote, for the venome whereof, nature hath oppoſed the Ichneumon, the leaſt beaſt of all: therefore as the ſaid Herodotus relateth, there is neither Hart nor Wild-Boore. In the Deſert of Lybia as in ſome parts of Numidia which lye next unto Lybia, there are abundance of Serpents, the ſundry ſorts whereof this vers following in Latine maketh mention.

From whence this vulgar proverbe came, That Africa allwaies breedeth ſome new thing. The Romans divided Africa into ſix Provinces, the Proconſular in which Carthago ſtood; Numidia Conſular, Bizacchium, Tripolitania, Mauritania Cæſariana, & Mauritania Sitiphenſis. Ptolomy in the beginning of his fourth booke mentioned 12. Provinces or Satrapies, Mauritania Tingitania, Mauritania Cæſariana, Numidia, Africa propria, Cyrenaica, Marmarica, Lybia propria, Egypt the Superiour & Inferiour, Libya Interiour, Æthiopia under Egypt, and Æthiopia Interiour. But theſe divide not Africa ſuch as it was, but ſuch as was then knowne to them. Leo Africanus one of our Moderne Writers, devideth all Africa into foure parts, vidz. 1. Barbarie, 2. Numidia, 3. Libya & the Region of the Negroes or Blacks. But he erreth herein, in that he doth not bound Africa from the Red-Sea but from Nilus, which occaſioneth him to attribute Egypt & ſome other Eaſterne parts to Aſia, therefore beſides theſe foure diviſions of Leo, wee place Egypt in Africa, the Superiour & Interiour Æthyopia, where the Abaßines are with Æthyopia the Inferiour, in which Manicongi and the Iles lye. Egypt doth extend it ſelfe in a long tract from the South, towards the North. The bounds are on the Weſt beyond Nilus & the Deſerts of Barca, Libya, Numidia with the Kingdome of Nubia, on the South it is clooſeth up with the Countrie of Bugia and by the Nile, in that place where this rivier runneth crookling from the Weſt, towards the Eaſt. On the Eaſt ſide it hath the Deſerts of Arabia ſtretching out betweene Egypt, and the Red-Sea; and the Mediterranean Sea on the North: what remayneth to be ſpokē of Egypt it ſhal be expreſſed in the particular deſcription thereof. At this day wee call Barbarie that tract of Africa, which runneth from Egypt to the ſtreight of Gibralter, and ſhutteth betweene the Mediterranean & Mount Atlas. It contayneth the Kingdomes of Marroco, Feſſe, Teloſine, Tunis and Barca, whereof wee will ſpeake more at large when wee ſhall deſcribe the Mapps of Barbarie. It ſufficeth then at this preſent to knowe the Bounds and Limits of it. The Kingdome then of Marroco is divided into theſe Provinces, Hea, Suſa, Guzula, Maroco, Ducula, Hoſcora, Tedleta. On the Weſt ſide it hath the Atlantick Sea, Atlas likewiſe, and the Kingdome of Feſſe. The Kingdome of Feſſe hath on the Weſt ſide the Atlantick Ocean, on the North the ſtreight of Gibralter, on the Eaſt the river Mulvia, and on the South ſide the Kingdome of the Marocos. Her Regions are Temeſna, the Territoire of Feſo, Agara, Elhabata, Errifa, Garete & Elchauſa. The Kingdome Teleſine, which is alſo called Tremiſen, is bounded on the South-ſide with the Deſert of Numidia: on the Eaſt lieth the great River, on the North the Mediterranean Sea. The Romans called it Mauritania Cæſarienſis, in it is the Citie Argiers. The Kingdome of Tunes, contayneth all thoſe Countries, which lye from the great river Major, to the river which is in the region of Meſrata to the very Confines of Egypt. Numidia is called at this daye Biledulgerid: the Bounds thereof are the Atlantinck Sea, on the Weſt; Mount Atlas on the North; the Confines of Egypt, on the Eaſt; and the Deſerts of Libya, on the South. The Regions are Teſſet, Semelgeſſe, Seb. Biledulgerid, Darda and Fezzen. Libya hath bin called by the ancients Sarra, becauſe it is deſert. It taketh the beginning from the Kingdome of Gao, neere unto Nilus, and reacheth towards the Weſt, to the Kingdome of Gualata, which lyeth next to the Atlanticke Sea. The Kingdome of Numidia cloſeth it on the North, and the Nigres on the Southſide. The Deſerts of Libya, are Zanaga, Zuenziga, Targa, Lempta & Bordea. The Nigroes, are ſo called, either from the blackneſſe of the coullour of the Inhabitants, or rather from the river Niger, which runneth through this Countrie. They haue on the Eaſt ſide the Confines of Nilus, on the weſt the Ocean Sea, on the South partly the Æthyopian Sea, and partly the Kingdome of Manicongo, then on the North ſide the Deſerts of Libya. There are 25. Kingdomes, Galata, Guinea, Melli, Tombutum, Gago, Guber, Agadex, Cano, Caſena, Zegzeg, Zanfura, Guanara, Bornum, Goaga, Nubia, Biro, Temiamo, Dauma, Medra, Goran, Territorium Anterotenſe, Territorium Gialofæ, Ora Guinea, Territorium Melegenſe, & the Kingdome of Benin. The Abaſines inhabit in Sperior or Upper Æthiopia, whoſe Prince is called Preſter Iohn. His Countrie is of a large extent, and reachet almoſt from the one & the other Tropick, and ſtretcheth it ſelfe out betweene the Athiopian Ocean, and the Red-Sea. On the North ſide, it hath the people Nubia and Bugia of limitrophes of Egypt. The Red-Sea on the Eaſt, and the Mountes Lunæ on the South, & on the Weſt the Kingdomes of Congo, of Nubia, and the rivers Niger and Nilus. The Kingdomes following are al ſubject to him, as Barnaganes or Barnagaſſuro, Tigremaon or Tigrai, in which the Citie of Caxumo ſtandeth, Angote, Amara, Xoa, Goyami, Bagamedran, Guagere, Fatiagar, Damur, Daucali & Dobas, The Lower or Inferiour Æthiopia, is the Meridionall part of Africa un knowne to Ptolomy. It taketh its beginning on the Weſt from the river Zaira, not farre from the Æquator, & conteyneth all the part of Africa Litorall, running under the Æquator till it comes to the Red Sea, it hath fiue Regions. The Land of Ajam in which are the Kingdomes of Del & Adea Magaduzze, the Countrie of Zanguibara, whoſe Kingdomes are Melinde, Mombazza, Quiloa, Mozambique, Monoemuci, Ceſala, Monomotapa, Torra and Butea. The Countrie of the Caffres and of Manicongo hath ſix Provinces, Sunde, Pongo, Sungo, Bamba, Batra & Pemba: to which one may add the Kingdomes of Angola, Loangi & Anzichi. Now all theſe places of Inferior Æthiopia, were un knowne to our Anceſtours, as I haue ſaid, and begann to be knowne to us in the yeere of Chriſt 1497. in which yeere Vaſco de Gama, having paſſed beyond the Cap of Good Hope, and circuled all Africa, atrived at Calicute, add ſhowed firſt to the Europians, the waye to the Eaſt-Indiens. Surely Ptolomie knew no Countries beyond the 17. degree of the Southerne latitude, and his furtheſt Limit was in Praſſus a Cape of Agiſymba a Region of Æthiopia, which at this day is called Mozambique.

Cities. In this part of the World there hath bene very noble Townes heretofore, whereof the greateſt part of them are deſtroyed. Among the reſt the City of Carthage might take the firſt place as Strabo ſaith, πόλις ἀνθικρὺ τῆς Ῥώμης, to ſaye as Plinie rendreth it, Envyous of the Romane Empire, & coveting the Monarchie of the whole World. Strabo relateth in his laſt booke in the beginning of their warres with the Romans that ſhe was Lady of 300 Townes, in which there were beſieged by the Romans ſeven hundred thouſend men, which were by Scipio forced to yeeld. There were other famous Townes, as Tripolis neighbour to Syrtes, Thebes: ἑκατόμπυλαι, famous for her hundred Gates. Memphis according to Plinie heretofore the Caſtle of the Kings of Egypt, at this daye Babylon of Egypt and Alcairo the greateſt Cities of the whole World. Alexandria built by Alexander the Great. Ptolomeis Cyrene heretofore emulating Carthage and many others, which wee will paſſe by for the avoyding of prolixitie. There are ſome great Lakes in Africa, which reſemble Seas, the chiefeſt whereof is Zembre Lake, lying betweene moſt high Mountaines, diſtant from the Æquator ten degrees Southward: the circumference whereof is 50000. paces, out of which (ſome ſay) ſpringeth the Nile, Senega, Cambra, Zaira and Cuaman, all rivers in Africa. There are other great rivers, as Niger, and the river of the holy Gooſt, all which doe water it marvailloufly, and make thoſe Countries very fruitfull, through which they paſſe. It hath alſo many very high Mountaines, whereof the principalleſt of them is Atlas: it riſeth in the midſt with Sandie downes, elevateth his gaſtly ſkirts, & ſtrang heads interchopt ſo high aboue the clouds, that the topps of them can be ſeene: from hence came the fable of Atlas the Gyant, whome the Poets fained to haue borne the Heaven upon his ſhoulders. The Natives of the Countrie call it the Heavens pillar, it beginneth from the Ocean, where it quiteth name to the Atlantick Sea, where running with his topps, continueth with many windings & turnings, the end thereof reaching to the Eaſt of the Frontiers of Egypt, in ſome places round, hard to clyme, full of downfalls, becauſe of the Quarries of Stone that haue bin taken out of it, without any path, very could, and hath manie Foreſts, being watered with an infinite number of freſh Springs & Fountaines. The topp of this Mountaine is allwaies white couvered over with ſnow: the top alſo (the winde blowing from the North) is couvered ſo high with ſnow, that it reacheth aboue the topps of Trees. So that aſwell men as Beaſts are ſmethered to death. The Fountaines which ſpring out of it are very cold in the heart of Summer, in ſuch ſort, that if one hazards to touch them never ſo litle with his hand, he is in danger of looſing it. After Atlas the Mounts called by the Portugas Pici fangoſi, ſituated in the Meridionall part, are very famous and becauſe of their height & ſteepneſſe, being almoſt inacceſſible, a meere deſert, wanting all goods things, Sierra Liona is alſo a very high Mount, the toppe whereof is continually hidden with ſnowe: from whence there comes fearefull noiſes, & great tempeſts, yee ſhall ſee it a great way of in Sea: for which occaſion, it is called the Lyons Rocke. Many were of opinion as Ptolomie, Plinie, Mela & Hannon, that it was called the Chariot of the Gods. The Mounts alſo of Luna, knowne by the ancients, lye under the Tropick of Capricorne, very hard, & incredibly high, inhabited neverthelleſſe by ſauvage & rude people, under which there are valleys exceeding lowe: ſo that one would thinke the Center of the Earth was in this quarter. There is alſo the Mount Cantaberes in the Kingdome of Angole, very rich in Silver Mines: and beſides theſe there are others, whereof wee will ſpeake in our particular Mapps. The chiefeſt Iles of Africa lye in the Atlantick Ocean, the Ile of S. Port, Madere, the Canaries, and thoſe of Cape Verd. That of S. Port was ſo named by thoſe which diſcouvered it, in memorie of the dangerous & uncertaine navigation that they had. The Compaſſe of it is about 15. miles. Madere was ſo called becauſe of the great abundance of trees growing there, the circuit of it is 140 miles. The Canaries were ſoo called by reaſon of the great number of Doggs, which they found there: the ancient called them the Fortunate. Plinie maketh mention of Six as Ombrio Iunonia the Greater and the Leſſer, the Goatiſh, the Snowie, the Doggeſh or Canarie: Ptolomie nameth hem Aproſitum, Hera, or Autolala, Plurtalia, Caſperias, Canarie and Centuria, and ranketh them almoſt all in a right line towards the North. Cadamoſt ſetteth downe ten, ſeuen peopled, and three deſert. The manured are Lanzarotta, Fort Aventure, the Gomera, the Iron, the Great Canarie, Teneriffa & Palma. The Greene Cape is planted full a Greene trees, whereof it tooke the name. Theſe Iles which lye in the midſt of the Ocean towards the Weſt, is imagined were called the ancient Gorgones. Theſe are S. Anthonies, S. Vincents, S. Lucias, S. Nicolas, the Salt Ile & Belle videre. The Ile of Maye, S. Ieames, and that of Fyre. In the Æthiopick Ocean are the Princes Iles and S. Thomas, beyond the Cape of Good Hope: there are innumerable other Iles, all deſert, ſaving that of S. Laurence. There is alſo the Zocotara Ile, as the entrance into the Arabiſch Gulffe, right over againſt the Promontoire Guardafue, whereof wee will ſpeake more amply in an other place.

THE DESCRIPTION OF BARBARIE, THE KINGDOME OF TVNIS and EGYPT.

THE first Countrie, which presenteth it selfe unto us in Africa, the third part of the world, is the most noble Region of Barbarie. It is so called either from the murmuring sound of the Natiues, which the Arabians named Barbar; becauſe that the old language of the Arabians seemed so to the new Conquerours, or from the many wildernesses, that are in it: for Bar signifieth in their tongue a Desert. It reacheth from Egypt to the straight of Gibralter, comprehending within it both the Mauritanies, namely the Tingitania, and the Cæsarea; And this part is Africa propria, together with the Cyrenaica and Lybia exterior. Our moderne Geographers bounds it on the East upon the Marmarick Desarts, otherwise called Barca, to that part of the hill Atlas which is called Meies, and is the same perhaps, which Strabo nameth Aspis. And from mount Atlas to the South, accordingh to its longitude from East to West to the Atlanticke Ocean, having the Atlanticke on the West, and the Mediterranean Sea on the North. The nature of the aire is diverse: For in the Spring time it is pleasant, milde & cleare, in the Summer it is extreame hott: Especially in the months of Iune and Iuly. In Autumne the heate decreaseth. In winter it is nipping colde in the months of December, and Ianuary, chiefly in the Mornings onely: so that none are forced for colde to runne unto fires. The windes blowe ordinarily there: especially in the latter end of Harvest, and all the Winter, and a part of the Spring.

Name. Site. Bounds. Temperature.

This Region very subject to great tempests of Thundring, and lightningh, as also in winter to abundance of Snowe. The soile is very fruitfull in Dates, and Pomgranates, but yeelds not much graine, which occasioneth the Inhabitants for the most part to liue upon Barke-bread. It produceth abundance of other Fruits, as Cherries, Figgs, Apples, Peares, Prunes, Peaches, Quinces, Oliues and the like, and great store of Oyle, Hony, and Sugar. Moreouer, diverse sorts of Wilde-Beasts, for it breedeth in the uncouth wildernesses Dragons, Elephants, Goates, Buffles, Lyons, Leopards, Wesills & Ferrets, wilde Catts & Apes, and by the Sea Coast Crocodils, Sea Horses, Hyenas and such like. The Phœnicians were the first that inhabited this quarter, with some other nations that came out of Asia, or Egypt: secondly it was subdued by the Romans, afterward the Grecian Emperours, and next followed the Vandals, Saracens, and Arabiens, whereof Du Bartas writeth thus in his Colonies.

Fertility. Fruits. The ancient Inhabitants.

The Almane and North-Vandall beaten both
From Corduba & Sevill by the Goth.
Seize Affrica first, vvhich afterwvard they lost
To vvise Iustinians valiant Roman host.
And Romans since, joyn'd vvith the Barbarous troope,
Of curled Moores unto the Arabian stoope.

At this day part of it is under the Turke, and a part under their owne Zeriff. The King of Spaine also holding some Fortresse in it. It comprehendeth now foure Kingdomes, to wit, 1. Morocco. 2. Fesse. 3. Telesine, and 4. Tunis, unto which some add Barca, wee will describe the two first in the Map following; the two latter in this. The Kingdome of Telesine, or Tremisen was of old called Mauritania Cæsariensis: Mauritania from the Mauri, who inhabited it, and the westerne tract Cæsariensis from the chiefe citty Cæsarea. It reacheth in length from the East to the westerne part 380 miles, and in breath but 25: that is, from the Desarts of Numidia to the Mediterranean Sea. The most part of this territoire is hard, dry, rough and barren, especially, the South part: but the Maritimate quarters are somewhat fruitfull, and beare better. There are in it some Townes and rare Castles. The Capitall cittie was heretofore Telesine or Tremisen, spacious and stronge, having had in it 16 or 17 thousand chimnies: but in regard of the warrs, which it sustained first in a siege of 7 yeares by Ioseph the puissant king of Fesse, then the warres betweene Charles the fifth, who tooke it under his protection, and the Turkes who at last became master of it, as afterward becauſe of the warres betweene the Zeriff and the Turke the most part of it lies ruined at this day. In this quarter is now Argiers a great towne, and well fortified. This towne revolted first from the obedience of the King of Telesine, becauſe of the insupportable taxations, which he layd upon it, and putting it selfe under the king of Bugia, afterward forsaking him, came under Ferdinando King of Spaine. Finally, being taken by Barbarossa, it was added to the Ottomannick Empire. This towne is famous for being the Receptacle of the Turkish Pirates, who domineere so infinitely over the Mediterranean, to the great dammage of all nations, which frequent those seas. Famous also for the shipwracke, which Charles the fifth here suffred, who besieging this towne, lost in the Haven of it at one tempest, besides an infinite number of Karvels & small Boates, diverse stronge Gallies, 140 ships, a great many excellent peeces of ordnance: and such a number of gallant horses, that in Spaine the race of horses for service was like to haue bene lost for ever; and aboue halfe his men. It is situate in, or nigh unto the place of Iol, or Cæsarea, upon the hanging of some hills, being three miles in circuit, having in it eighty thousand famillies commanded by the Lieutenant of the Great Signor. The Turcks haue continually fortified this place, and haue now made it impregnable. Caſtaldus thinks it to be Ptolomies Salda: but Ortelius and Mercator beleeue that Salda was rather Tadelis. Paulus Iovius ſuppoſeth it to be Iulia Cæſarea, other Cirtha. The other townes are Merſalcabir, Meſſagran, Muſtaganni and others. This Kingdome hath two famous Sea-ports, the one is Orami, or Orania, with a ſtrong Fortreſſe: the other Marſe-Eltabir, where many Marchants arrived, eſpecially Italians, of which the King of Spaine became maſter, a few yeares ſince, to the great prejudice of this Kingdome.

Tunis extent and bounds. The Kingdome of Tunis containeth all that tract, which the Ancients called Africa propria, or Africa the leſſer, and old Numidia: for from the great river, which Maginus beleeues to be Ptolomies Audun, it reacheth unto a river in the Country of Meſrat, having on the Eaſt Cyrenaica, and on the Weſt Algiers. The Fertility. ſoile in this quarter is reaſonable fruitfull, fit to beare fruits, and breed Cattle: very fertill in trees, eſpecially in the Weſt part, but on the Eaſt ſide is barren, wanting water. It is divided into five provinces, bearing the name of their Metropolies. 1. Bugis once a Kingdome of its owne Iuriſdiction, a great Citty & populous, which Peter of Navarre tooke in by force, and razed it Anno 1508, being at this day in the poſſeſſion of the Turke, after they had chaſſed the Spaniard out of it. 2. Conſtantina in which Bona, built by the Romans a 100 miles from the Sea, where S. Auguſtine was borne: & Hippo whereof he was Biſhop. Some thinke that this citty was ancient Cirta, where king Maſsiniſſa held his reſidencie, and which Ptol. called Iulia. It is rich, faire, & girt about with high & ſtronge walls. Tunis. 3. Tunis vulgarly called Tuniſi, and by Ptolomie Themiſa. In the beginning it was a very litle towne; but was enlarged by the ruines of Carthage. In this Citty there is a Mahumetan temple called Ameth Benatos, which they hold in great reverence, being the Refuge and Sanctuaire for offenders, whereof Scaliger verſifyeth thus:

Invide demolire altas Carthaginis arces
Quem ſors æqualis, parque fortuna manet.
En te invito iterum florens, exciſa renaſcor.
Te non vinco ego, nec me tamen ipſa premis.

Vpon the ſtreight of the next poole lyeth the Goletta as ye goe to Tunis a ſtrong fort, taken by Charles the 5. afterward ruined by Vichiali Baſſa. 4. Ezzach Ezzach. wherein is the Citty Cairaon, built by Hucba, who being Captaine Generall to Oſmen the fourth Saracenicall Caliph, ſubdued all Barbarie. 5. Tripolis becauſe of the three prime cities Abroton, Taphia, and Leptis. This Tripolis. Tripolis, & its Provinces was by the Genois taken from the King of Tunis, & ſold to him of Feſſe, from whome when they of Tunis had regayned it, it fell into the handes of Ferdinando King of Caſtile, whoſe nephew Charles the fifth, gaue it to the Knights of Malta, & they not long after loſt it to Sinan Baſſa lieutenant to Selim Carthage. the ſecond 1551. 6. Carthage once a citty of great eminencie, peopled by the Phænicians, which fled from the victorious ſword of Ioſua, & the Iſraelites. To theſe Dido ſiſter to Pigmalion joyned her Tyrian troopes, and built this citty. A. M. 3078. before the building of Rome 135 yeares. This towne ſtood juſt oppoſite to Rome, whoſe Rivall it was in wealth, valour, and deſire of the univerſall Empire, whereof one verſifyeth thus:

There vvas an ancient Citty cald as then
Carthage, and built by baniſh't Tyrian men,
Iuſt gainſt old Tibers mouth & Italy,
Great in vvealth, ſkill'd in martiall chevalry.

In the midſt of it there was a Fort called Birſa, built by queene Dido, which was thought to be two thowſand paces about, as much as a Bulls hide cutt out in thonges could encompaſſe. The Citty it ſelfe contained 21 miles in circuit. The Cittizens were called Pæni, and are ſtill infamous for their perjury, and falſe hearted dealing. That they were of the Canaaniteſh race may be proved by the name Pæni, or Phæni, litle differing from the Phænices. This Citty was almoſt girt about with the Sea. Appianus to the Punicks deſcribeth at large the ſituation thereof. The power thereof was not onely felt in Africa, but farre & neere in Europe: for it conquered Spaine from the ſtreight of Gibralter, as farre as the Pyrrhenian Mountaines, and plagued Italy and Sictle with a long warre ſtriving with the Romans tooth and naile for the Monarchie of the world, but loſt their owne liberty, being throwne in three ſeverall Battailes by the Romain. The firſt was for the poſſeſſion of Sicilie, Sardinia, and Corſica. The ſecond was begun by Hannibal, who terrifyed the Romans with many fatall overthrowes, but was at laſt overcome by Scipio, having kept the Romans worke 18 yeares, was at laſt taken by Scipio, and burnt ſeuen daies together. Afterwards, it was rebuilt by Cajus Cæſar, who planted there in a Colonie of the Roman people, but was after that ruined by the Vandals, Gothes, and Sarracens: ſo that now it lyeth vaſt like a wilderneſſe, and retayneth nothing of its priſcan Majeſty, but ſome ruinous heapes of ſtones, and ſome old Aquaducts.

Rivers. The rivers which waters Barbarie are Bagradas, Cynips, Tenſiſt, Omirabik, Subu, Luccus and others. There Hills. are many hills and mountaines, among the which Atlas, whereof wee haue ſpoken heretofore, is the chiefeſt. The natiues haue the repute of good people, ſimple & without diſſimulation, having very ſtronge boddies and well ſett.

Name. The Noble, and ancient Countrie of Egypt was firſt inhabited by Miſraim the Son of Chus, the Sonne of Cham, and was called in the Hebrew tongue Miſreia; the footſteps of which name remaineth ſtill amonge the Arabians, who call it Miſre. 2. It was named Oceana from Oceanus a king hereof. 3. Oſiriana from Oſiris, and 4. Ægyptus from Ægyptus, being the ſurname of Rameſes a prince of great power. The Turkes call it now Elquibet, or Elchibet.

Bounds. It is bounded on the Weſt beyond the Nile, with the Deſerts of Barca, Libia and Numidia, & the Kingdome of Nubia: on the South with the Countrie of Bugia, and the river Nile, where it turneth a litle from the Weſt towards the Eaſt; but Plinie bounds it on that ſide with the Citty of Siene called now Aſna: On the Eaſt ſide are the Deſerts of Arabia, which lie betweene Ægypt and the Red-ſea: and on the North the Laignes. Mediterranean now called the Egyptian Sea. This Countrie is in length frõ Siene to the Mediterranean Sea 562 miles, and in bredth from Roſetta Weſt to Damiata Eaſt about 140 miles But it continueth not alwaies in this bredth: for leſſening it ſelfe Southward like a Pyramis, reverſeth being in ſome places but 37 miles broad, and at the very point, or bottome, but foure. It is ſituate betweene the ſecond and the fifth Climates, ſo that the lõgeſt day is 13 howers & a halfe. Temperature. The aire is hott, and ſubject to Northerne windes, having ſeldome any Eartquakes or raine, which it needeth not, becauſe the ſoile is fatted by the ſwelling & overflowing of the Nile, which makes their grounds exceeding fruitfull, and a moſt nourriſhing-Mother both to Man and Beaſt. For which cauſe this Countrie was called Horreum populi Romani: and in the time of Ioſeph ſupplyed Iacob and his familly with corne. Fertility. Now alſo is the goodneſſe of the ſoile ſuch, that Lucans braggs are ſtile good of it.

The Earth content vvith its ovvne vvealth, doth craue
No forreine Marts, nor Ioue himſelfe, they haue
Their hop's alone in Nilus fruitfull vvaue.

Manie haue commended the happineſſe of this ſoile. Iuſtinus reporteth that the Land of Egypt is ſo fertill in graine, that it maye truely be called the Garner of the vvorld, for the abundance of al kinde of encreaſe and fruits neceſſarie for the ſuſtentation of Man.

Man. And Plinie affirmeth that the greatneſſe of the Roman Empire, could not haue ſubſiſted without the riches, and Fruits of Egypt, for as much as the abundance, or famiſhment of the Romaine People depended on the Nile. He ſaith moreover, that the countrie of Egypt aboundeth ſo in herbes and rootes to feede upon, in regard thereof ſurpaſſes the corne: though they haue great ſtore of al kinde of graine, as Wheate, Rhye, Barly, Oates, Beanes and Peaſe, excellent Wines, and fatt Paſtures. This countrie yeeldeth litle oyle and wood. Beſides the fierce and wild beaſts whereof it is full. They haue many kinde of Domeſticall Beaſts; as Buffles, Kine & Oxen, Camels, Horſes, Aſſes and Sheepe, and Goates all of an extraordinarie greatneſſe (as Belonius relateth) becauſe of the mildeneſſe of the aire, the abundance of paſtures where upon they feede, and the ſtore of roots and graſſe which is overflowne with the Nile. Among the reſt there are very large and fatt Weathers with long and thick tailes hanging downe to the ground, with Deaw claps like an oxe, and blacke fleeces. And becauſe this Countrie is warme in winter overflowne & mariſh, there comes into it abundance of waterfoule into the grounds & meddowes thereof, ſo that they are all covered with them, & eſpecially with Storkes. They haue abundance of froggs alſo in theſe parts, that if the Storkes did not devoure them, yow ſhould ſee the lower groũds bedecked with them. There are alſo many Chamaleons (as Belonius writeth) which are found amounge ſhrubbs. Hennes doe not uſe to ſitt upon or hatch their eggs here in Egypt; but to this effect they heate ovens made ſo artificially, that laying three or foure thouſand henns Eggs into them, they know ſo to moderate and to temper the heate, that al theſe egges hatches together, which Ariſtotle relateth of the Egyptians. There are alſo in this countrie diverſe Mettals, eſpecially in thoſe parts; which border upon Æthiopia, as likewiſe Amethiſts, & many other precious ſtones. Egypt hath flouriſhed under many Kings, and with diverſe names, till the time of the Ptolomies, and Pharaohs which laſted not long. Manethon in his hiſtorie of Egypt maketh a Catalogue of 300 kings wanting eight, which raigned before Amaſis under 17 Dyaſtinies, whoſe names it would be needeleſſe, & tedious to recite. Oſiris onely is worthy mention, in whoſe time it is thought Iacob went downe into Ægypt, who ſaies that he & his Succeſſours were then all called Pharaohs. The name of the Ptolomies continued long, untill the time of the Roman Empire, who placed over them a Gouvernour, that remained there, till the time of the Agarenes of Arabia Felix, under their Prince the Sultan, as they named all their Mahomitans following, who Domineer'd there, till the Turkes droue them out of it, who commanded there under their Emperour, by whome there was a governour eſtabliſhed called the Baſſa of Egypt. Part of it was alſo under Alexander of Macedonia, as appeareth by the names, & governments of Townes; ſo that Herodotus maketh 18. Strabo 19. Ptolomie 46. & Plinie 50, adding alſo hereunto, that ſome of them chãged their names, ſo that one muſt not thinke that Egypt hath had heretofore ſo many Governmẽts, as one may collect out of the names of hiſtories; ſeing that one, and the ſame Government might haue ſeverall names. Leo Africanus ſaith it was devided into three provinces by the Mahomitans, to wit, into Sahid, which is the upper or Thebaide, reaching from the Frontiers of Bugia to Cairo; into Erriſia, which is the Occidental part, ſtreching out from Cairo to Roſetta; and into Maremma, which is the Orientall part. It is thought that Egypt, in the dayes of Amaſis, had in it twenty thouſand townes. And Diodorus affirmeth, that in his time there were three thouſand, Pomponius Mela 2000, and Herodotus 1020. The moſt famous, and chiefeſt of them were: Siene, Thebes, Tentyra, Heliopolis, Memphis, Babylon, Alexandria, Peluſium, Roſetta and manie others.

The manner of hatching of their eggs.

The Kings & Gouvernours.

Deviſion.

Townes.

Siene. Siene now Aſna, is ſituate under the Tropicke of Cancer. This was a place as Plinie witneſſeth, where the Mathematicians had an exceeding deepe well, into which the Sunne ſhone with right lines, when it touched the Tropicke of Cancer.

Thebes. Thebes was built by the Tyrant Buſiris, containing 17 miles in circuit, and as Herodotus relateth opening with a hundred gates, having many ſumptuous buildings, aſwell publick as private. But now no more mention is made of it.

Tentyra. Tentyra taketh this name from an Ile in the Nile. The Natiues call it Fontyrites, being by nature contrarie to Crocodils.

Heliopolis. Heliopolis (now called Betſamie) whereof Potipharah, whoſe daughter Aſsineta was by Pharaoh giuen in marriage to Ioſeph, who was prince of it. This was heretofore the reſidencie of their Prieſts, and as Strabo calls it, the ſeate where they learned Aſtronomie and Philoſophie.

Memphis. Memphis heretofore Arſinöe, or the Citty of Crocodils, to which Beaſts the Cittizens attributed divine honour. Nigh unto this Cittie were the Piramides. Here the Nile divideth himſelfe firſt for the forming of his Delta. It is called at this day Cairo, or Alcairo, lying in a triangular forme, being aboue eight miles in circuit: The Inhabitants thereof are Turkes, Egyptians, Arabians & Ievves with others.

Babylon. Babylon ſtandeth a litle aboue Memphis, as Bellonius writeth, where are ſeene the ruines of the mighty, and magnificent ancient buildings. It is now but a village inhabited by the Chriſtians.

Alexandria. Alexandria built by Alexander the great, now called by the Turkes Scandria, a famous and a noble Citty, ſeated in a very ſweete, and a pleaſant place. It is a towne of great marchandiſe.

Peluſium. Peluſium now called Damiata, beſeiged by Iohn de Brenne the titulary King of Ieruſalem. The ſiege continued 18 months, during which time the plague and want of ſuſtenance ſo raged together, that the towne was in a manner diſpeopled. Of thoſe extremities the Beſiegers knew nothing, till it fortuned that two venturous ſouldiers, admiring the ſilence and ſolitude of the people, in a bravado, ſcaled the walls, but ſaw no man to make reſiſtance. This being certified to the Commaundours, the next day the whole army entred the towne, where they found in every houſe, and every corner of the ſtreetes whole heapes of dead bodies, ſome ſlaine by famine, others by the peſtilence: a lamentable and ruthfull ſpectacle; beſides theſe, there is Roſetta and diverſe other Citties and townes, which for brevitie wee will paſſe ouer.

The famous river of Nile.

Through this Countrie runneth the Nile, the moſt famous river of the world, in one continuall Channell: Some ſay it hath his head, either in the Mountaines of the Moone, or the Lake Zembre. But king Iuba affirmeth that his head begins in a mountaine of Mauritania inferior, not farre from the Ocean, out of a lake, which turneth it ſelfe into a pond, called Nilida: Running out of this lake paſſeth a longe courſe 3000 miles in length through diverſe Countries full of ſand. In the place where this Egypt, and Habuſſia meet is the laſt Cataract of Niles, which is a fall of the waters, after much ſtrugling with the Rocks for paſſage, an incredible way downe into the lower vallies: The hideouſneſſe of the noize, which it maketh, not onely deafeth all the By-dwellers; but the hils alſo are torne with the ſound: for as Lucan hath it,

The noiſe the mountaines ſhakes, vvho roare in ſpight,
To ſee the vanquiſhed vvaues cloath'd all in vvhite.

This Nilus from the 15 day of Iune ſwelleth aboue his bankes, the ſpace of 14 daies, and in as many more gathered his waters againe to their proper bounds. If it flowe not to the height of 15 Cubits, then the Earth is deficient in her abundance of encreaſe, for want of moiſture. And if the waters ſurmount the ſuperficies of the Earth more then 17 Cubits, then like a drunken man it cannot produce its naturall operation. During this inundation the Beasts and Cattle liue on hils, & in the townes to which they are driuen before hand and there foddered. An other strange thing in this river is, that keeping its water together, it changeth the colour of the Sea further into the Mediterranean, then the sea can thence be discerned. Having traversed the Midland of Egypt, before its influx into the Sea, it devideth it selfe into seuen channells. A fourth miracle is, that not in fruits onely, but in producing also liue Creatures, as Ovid hath it.

For vvhen the seaven-mouth Nile the fields forsakes
And to his ancient channell him betakes;
The Tillers of the ground liue creatures finde,
Of sundry shapes, ith' mud that's left behinde.

Pyramids. Among the rest there liues the Crocodile. Famous is this Countrie also 1. for that raine is seldome seene amongst them, whose absence is supplyed by the Nile. Secondly, for the Pyramides, built nigh unto Memphis, whereof two are most famous, the first and greatest was built by Cheops: the Basis whereof contained in circuit 8 Acres of ground, and was in heigth 1000 foote, being made all of marble. The greatest was the chiefe of the worlds seuen wonders, being square at the bottome, every square being 300 single paces in length, the square at the top consisting of three stones onely: yet large enough for threescore men to stand upon: ascended by 250 stepps, each stepp aboue three feete high. The other Pyramide was almost equall to the first, as Herodotus writeth. It is supposed by many good Divines and recorded by Iosephus, that the Brickes, which the children of Israell did burne, were partly employed about such Pyramides, but now

Let Barbarous Memphis ceas to raise
Her vvondrous Pyramides vvith such praise.

Here also are the Mummes of Egypt lying in a place, Mummes. where many generations haue had their Sepulchres, there bodies having bene enbalm'd with Cassia, Myrrhe, and other Aromaticall odours with Bitunien, and the juyce of Cedars, which by the extreame bitternesse & siccatiue facultie, haue preserved them from corruption, the continuance of aboue three thousand yeares, being of Soveraigne vertue for Physike.

The deſcription of the Kingdome of

MAROCCO,

AND OF

FESSE.

Name.

THAT part of Barbarie, which formerly was called Mauritania Tingitina, comprehendeth at this day two Realmes, namely Marocco and Feſſe, which wee will here deſcribe in order. The Kingdome of Marocco taketh its denomination from the Metropolis Marocco it ſelfe. It lyeth betweene Mount Atlas, and the Atlanticke Sea, almoſt in the forme of a Triangle. Site and bounds. It is a very pleaſant Countrie, abounding in all kinde of Fruits, having alſo good ſtore of Oyle, Honey, Sugar, Dates, Vines, Figgs, Apples and diverſe ſorts of Peares. There are alſo many Cattle and Sheepe, with an incredible number of Goates, whoſe skins are called Marror-skins: the haire whereof is excellent good Fertility. to make fine Chamlots of. Provinces. The Provinces thereof are theſe, as firſt Hea, ſhut in on the Eaſt-ſide with the River Eſſivala, on the South with the Atlanticke Sea, & on the Weſt and North-ſide with the maine Ocean, being a craggie, a hillie, & a woodie Country, but rich & well inhabited. And though there growes not much Corne in it, but ſome Barly, Hirſe and Buckwheate, and that the Inhabitants want diverſe kinde of graine: yet this cannot be imputed to the barrenneſſe of the ſoile or the aire, but rather to the ſloth and negligence of the people: howbeit they have abundance of Honey, where upon the Natives for the moſt part live. Here are few townes, but many Villages, Hamlets & ſtrong Caſtles. The Province of Suſa hath on the North-ſide of it Mount Atlas, and on the Eaſt the River of Sus. It is a fruitfull Countrie, rich and very pleaſant. In Townes. the Hill of Ilalemo are gold-mines. The chiefeſt townes in this countrie is Taradent, built by the old Africans, is reaſonable great, and is inhabited by diverſe Engliſh and French Marchants, which barter & exchange, yron, lead and tinne for ſugar. There is alſo Maſſa, a towne abounding in Amber, under which three ſmall townes are comprehended, which lye not above a mile one from an other, built alſo by the ancient Africans upon the Sea-coaſt. The towne of Teijeut was in times paſt alſo built by the Africans in a fair plaine, ſeated upon the ſide of the River, and was divided into three parts, which being joined together made a triangular forme. Tedſi is a great towne, founded by the Africans, & ſituate in a very fruitfull place. Tangoviſta is the greateſt citty in this countrie. In this territoire lyeth the citty of Marocco, built by Aberamen once the Metropolis of Barbary, and thought to be Ptolomies Bocanum Hemetum, contained 100000 houſholders, and accounted one of the greateſt citties of the world, in the time of Prince Hali, the Sonne of Ioſeph, but now is inferiour to Feſſe for populouſneſſe, ſpaciouſneſſe & beauty. The chiefe buildings hereof are the church and the caſtle.: the church is bigger, though not ſo beautifull as that of Feſſe, and hath a towre ſo high, that the hills of Azafi, being 130 miles diſtant, may be thence eaſely diſcerned. The caſtle is very large, & on a towre thereof ſtand three Globes, made of pure golde, weighing 130000 Barbary Duckats. Diverſe Kings have gone about to take them downe, and convert them into money, but have all deſiſted by reaſon of ſome ſtrange misfortune that hath bene afflicted on them, ſo that the common-people imagine they are kept by a guard of Spirits. Unto the Royalty of this citty belongs other townes, namely, Elgiumuha a ſmall towne: Tenezza is a ſtrong towne, ſeated on that ſide of Mount Atlas, which is called Ghedmina. Delgumuha is a new towne, lying upon a hill, with a ſtrong Caſtle. Imizmizi is a great towne, ſituated upon a Rocke. Teſraſt is a Bourrough, lying by the River Aſifelmel: there abouts are alſo Agmet and Hanimmei. Guzzula is bnilt upon a ridge of the Northſide of Atlas, bordering on the Eaſt-ſide upon Hea. This country is exceeding fruitfull in Barly, having many heards of Cattle, copper and yron mines. The townes and caſtles here are unwalled, having many great and rich Villages in it: yea the whole Countrie is full of Inhabitants. The Province of Duccale beginneth on the Weſt-ſide of the River of Tenſiſto, & in the North is environned with the maine Ocean, on the South it hath the River of Habiel, and on the Eaſt the River of Hammirabith: in this Countrie there are but few walled townes, among which Azaphi, lying upon the Seacoaſt is accounted the chiefeſt. Conte was built by the Gothes, and Tit by the Africans. Elmedina is the Court for this whole Province; Centopozzi is a ſmall towne, the others are Subeit, Temaracoſt, Terga, Bulativa, Azamur and Meramer. The Province of Haſcora is bounded on the North with Duccale, on the Weſt with the River Tinſit, and on the Eaſt it is ſeparated by the River Quadelhabit from the territoire of Tedeletes. In this Countrie there are many rich and populous townes, as namely, the Citty of Alemdim, ſeated in a Valley, and environned with 4 hills, where many of the Gentrie, Marchants & Handiecrafts-men dwell. Tagodaſt lyeth upon the top of a high hill, which is encompaſſed with 4 other hills. Elgiumuha lyeth alſo upon a very high hill, betweene two others of a reaſonable heigth: the towne of Bzo is ancient, ſeated upon a ſteepe mountaine, lying about 20 miles Weſtward from Elgiumuha. The territoire of Tedles is not great, being bounded on the Weſt with the River Servi and Ommirabih, on the South with mount Atlas, on that ſide which lyeth next unto the River Ommirabih. In this Province there are alſo ſome townes, the chiefeſt whereof is Teſſa, built by the ancient Africans, and is reaſonable well inhabited. The principall Rivers of this Kingdome are Tenſiſt and Ommirabih, which have their heads out of Mount Atlas, and diſcharge themſelves into the Ocean: but Tenſiſt ſpringeth out of the Moroccoiſh territoire, and is encreaſed by many other Rivers, amongſt which the Sifelmel & the Niffis are the moſt famous. Here and there upon the ſands they finde many burning ſtones, which are tranſporten from thence by the Portugals and other Forreiners. Here are alſo many Mountaines, but Niſipha, Semeda and Seuſana are the chiefeſt.

The Inhabitants of theſe Kingdomes, are in ſome places very civill, but in others exceeding rude and Barbarous. And thus much for Marocco.

The Kingdome of FESSE.

Name. FESSE was formerly called Ampeluſia, in regard of the abundance of vines which grew there but at this day taketh its name from the Metropolis, or chiefe town thereof Feſſe: it is a very mighty Bounds. Kingdome. It is bounded on the Weſt with the Atlanticke Ocean, on the North with the ſtreight of Gibralter, on the Eaſt with the River of Mulvia, and on the South with the Kingdome of Marocco. The aire in some parts of it is very temperate and milde: in others intemperate and grosse, as likewise the Countrie it selfe in some places is rough & barren, having colde hills and Mountaines, and here and there some desarts and wildernesses, but to take it in generall, it is very happy and fruitfull, for they have excellent corne, and many fruitfull fieldes. This country aboundeth also in all kinde of Cattle: the Provinces in this Kingdome are 7 in number. Timesna on the West side beginneth at the River Omirabih, and reacheth Eastward to the River Buragragum: on the Southside lyes Mount Atlas, and on the North the Ocean. This Kingdome was allwayes held for the Court of Africa, in which there were heretofore 40 townes and 300 Castles: but now all these townes and Bourroughs are by the warres destroyed. In our age this Country beginnes to breath againe, to build up their ruined townes, and to putt up their heads againe, among the which Rabato is the greatest, built upon the Sea-coast, the others are called Thagia, Salla, &c. The Royaltie of Fesse beginneth at the River of Buragragum, and reacheth Eastward to the River of Inavum. On the North it boundeth upon the River of Subu, and on the South upon the foote of Atlas. Within this royaltie and jurisdiction of Fesse, there are some townes, whereof Fesse is the Capitall of all Mauritania, so called from Fesse, where abundance of gold was found, in digging the foundation, & was built by Idre a Mahumetan Prince anno 786, and seated in the very midst of this Kingdome. It is divided by the River Subu into 3 parts, all of which containe 82000 housholds, and 700 Moschees or Saracenicall temples, the chiefe whereof is Carne or Carnuen, being a mile and a halfe in compasse. The Marchants have there a court, or exchange enclosed with a strong wall with 12 gates & 15 streetes. There is also a Colledge called Amarodoc, a most curious and delicate structure. It hath three Cloisters of admirable beauty, supported with 8 square pillars of diverse colours: the Roofe curiously carved, and the Arches of Mosaique, Gold and Azure: the Gates are of brasse, faire wrought, and the doores of the private chambers of inlayed worke: this Colledge did cost the founder King Abuchenen 480000 Crownes. The River of Fesse running through the Citty, divideth himselfe into an infinite number of small channels, and runne almost by every House, Church, Colledge, Inne & Hospitall; yea into private mens houses, so that they carry away all the dirt and filth with them in the Citty. And this is said to be called old Fesse, having since also built new Fesse, which is girt about & fortifyed with a high and a strong wall. The Province of Ascara hath on the North the maine Ocean, on the West it reacheth to the River Buragragum: the East-side is shut in with the Mountaines of Gumara, Zarony, and the foote of mount Zalaga, and on the South with the River of Bunaza. It is a plaine Country, and hath a temperate aire. There are such abundance of Horse and Cattaile in it, that it doth not onely furnish richly all Fesse, but also the Inhabitants upon the hills of Gumaræ. Few woods there are, but in the fields and Mountaines are many Goates & Hares. Heretofore there were many townes & Castles in this Province, but most of them were ruined by the warres. The chiefest townes now remaining, are Larisa and Casar Elcabir. The Province of Habat is bounded on the North with the Mediterranean Sea, on the West with the Moore and Marshes of Algara, on the South with the River of Suarga, and on the East with the Hills, over against the streight of Gibralter. It is a fruitfull Countrie, and rich in all kinde of encrease, having bene heretofore more famous, and flourished better, in regard of the ancient townes, which the Romans & Gothes built in it. The chiefest townes which are now at this day, are Arzilla or Arzella; being a reasonable great towne, & lying some 70 miles from the streight of Gibralter. Tingis or Tanger is an ancient Citty lying upon the Sea-coast, nigh unto which Hercules kild Anteus, about 30 miles frō the said streight. Septa or Seuta is a very great towne, seated upon the streight of Gibralter, having bene in former ages the Metropolis of all Mauritania. Alcazer Guer was the towne, nigh unto which the three Kings Sebastian of Portugal, Mahomet and Abdelmelech competitours for this Kingdome were slaine in one day, in which battaile also was slaine the great Englisn rebell Stuckley, who fled out of Ireland to Rome anno 1570, though he had great proffers made him by the Pope, as a dutifull Sonne to the Church. The Province Errita beginneth about the streight of Gibralter, and reacheth Eastward to the River Nicor or Hoccore: on the North as Leo witnesseth, shooteth out to the Mediterranean Sea, & on the South-side reacheth to the rough Mountaines of Fesse. This Country is craggie, & full of cold hills, producing litle Corne, but abundance of Vines, Figgs, Olives and Almones: there are but few Cattle, but on the Mountaines and hills are great store of Goates, Asses and Apes. The Province of Garetum beginneth on the West-side from the River of Medulus, and reacheth Eastward to the River of Mulvia, on the South it bordereth upon the Desarts of Numidia, and on the North stretcheth out to the Mediterranean Sea. This countrie is moorish, barren and until'd, of the same nature as the Desarts of Numidia are. Since the 2 principall townes thereof Medela & Chesulæ, were taken in by the Spaniards, this Countrie hath had but few Inhabitants in it. Chaus is the last Province of Fesse, and taketh up almost the third part of the Kingdome, for it extendeth 190 miles in length, to wit, from the East part and the River Zha, to the River Gurguigara westward, & 170 miles in breadth: for that whole part of Mount Atlas, which runneth through Mauritania, containeth the breadth of this countrie. The chiefest townes in these confines are Dubdu, and Teza, a great and a rich citty, which in regard of the multitude of her Inhabitants, and the riches thereof, may well be accounted the third citty of this Kingdome. This Kingdome is watered with many Rivers, whereof some of them are navigable: the chiefest of them are Subu and Luccus: the Subu hath his head in a hideous wood, nigh unto the hill Seligi in the Province of Chaus: it runneth a long course, and carrying many brookes along with him, at last with a large and a deepe mouth, disburdeneth himselfe into the Ocean. The Luccus springeth out of mount Gumara, and dischargeth himselfe into the Maine Sea. Upon the mouth of it lyeth the towne of Ifaraidos which is a very dangerous haven to come into. In this country there are many mountaines and hills, among which the hill Zarhon is the chiefest, this beginneth from the plaine of Esais, and runneth westward 30 miles in length, and some ten in beadth. A farre of it seemes to be a great and a vast wood, whose trees are all Olive-trees: the other hills are called Zalaga, Selelgo, Azgan, Centopozzi, &c.

And thus much in briefe, touching the Kingdomes of Marocco and Fesse.

The Description of the Kingdomes of the ABASSINES and CONGO, otherwise called ÆTHIOPIA SVPERIOR.

Name.

HE mightie Kingdome of the Abaſſines is called by Ptolomie Æthiopia ſub Egypto. This countrie is named Abaſine, either from Abas a prime river hereof, or from an Egyptian word ſignifying ſcattered Nations. The princes thereof are called by the Moores Aſiclabaſi, and in Æthiopick Ioannes Belul, that is, high & precious: but vulgarly Preſter Iohn: with the prænomen as ſome will of Presbiter, affirming, that he executeth aſwell the Miniſteriall, as the Kingly office, Idem hominum rex, divûmque Sacerdos. The title of this great and mightie Emperour runneth thus. N.N. Supreame of his Kingdomes, and the beloued of God, the Pillar of Faith, ſprung from the ſtocke of Iudah, the Son of David, the Son of Solomon, the Sonne of the Columne of Sion, the Sonne of the ſeede of Iacob, the Sonne of the hand of Mary, the Sonne of Nahu after the fleſh, the ſonne of Saint Peter and Paul after the ſpirit; Emperour of the higher and leſſer Æthiopia, and of the moſt mighty Kingdomes, Dominions and Countries of Goa, Caffares, Fatigar, Angola, Barne, Balignazo, Adea, Vange, Goyami, vvhere are the fountaines of Nile, Amara, Banguamedron, Ambea, Vangucum, Tigremahon, Sabaim, the birth place of the Queene of Saba, Bernagaſſum, and Lord of all the Regions unto the Confines of Egypt. Doubtleſſe he ought to be ranked among the greateſt Monarchs of our age, whoſe Dominions reach from the one to the other Tropick; from the Red-Sea unto the Æthiopicke Ocean. Now to deſcribe a litle more exactly the limits of his Empire: on the North it bordereth upon Egypt with the neigbouring Countrie of Nubia, on the Eaſt upon the Red Sea, and part of the Indian Ocean, and upon the Barbarick Gulfe unto the Countrie of Melnida: on the South nature hath bulwarked it on that ſide with the Mountanies of the Moone, on the Weſt with the river Niger, or Senega, with the Kingdomes of Congo, & Nubia & with the river Nile which watereth it. Theſe bounds it ſeemes old Æthiopia gaue it, ſurnamed Æthiopia under Egypt, Troglodítica, and Cinnamomifera, and part of Lybia interior. Thoſe who haue laſt travelled through theſe Countries aſſure us, that it is very fruitfull; that they haue two Summers in a yeare which laſt almoſt continually: in ſuch ſort, that in one, and the ſame ſeaſon in one place they ſovv their ſeeds, and in an other reape their harveſt. In ſome quarters likevviſe they ſow their nevv graine every month, eſpecially peaſe, beanes and pulſe, with other graine with ſtalkes. This Countrie yeeldeth but litle wheate, but in ſteed thereof it beareth great ſtore of Barly, Millet or Buck-weate, Dry-peaſe, Beanes and graine unknovvne to us. Here is alſo plentie of Perſick Eborne, Gith, or Biſhops-wort, Pepper, Cynnamon, Ginger and other ſpices. It produceth alſo abundance of Sugar, but the Abaſſines knovv not hovv to bake, and refine it. They haue alſo good ſtore of Vines. Here grovves alſo an infinite number of Orenge, Citron, and Limmon-trees. More ouer, they haue abundance of Honey, and ſo much Waxe, that they make great ſtore of Candels vvith it, vvithout uſing any tallovv. The Countrie alſo yeeldeth much flaxe, but the Inhabitants knovv not hovv to make linnen cloath therevvith, vvhich cauſes them oftentimes to make Cotton of it, vvhereof they haue abundance. There are in this Countrie alſo many mines of Gould, Silver, Yron and Braſſe, but the Inhabitants are ſo blockiſh, that they knovvne not hovv to digg them out, and refine thoſe mettals. Moreouer this Countrie hath almoſt all kinde of foure footed Beaſts, and alſo all ſorts of foule and birds, vvhich are ſeene in Europe and other remote Countries, as Elephants, Lyons, Tygers, vvilde Horſes, Onces, Rhinocerots, Bagers, Apes, Monkies, Harts, (contrary to the opinion of the Ancients, vvho affirmed that Africa bred no ſuch Beaſts) Oxen, Muttons, Sheepe, Goates, Aſſes, Horſes, & Camels.

The ancient Princes and Government.

This Countrie vvas heretofore governed by Queenes. Hence it came to paſſe, that vvee reade in the old Teſtament, that the Queene of Saba came out of the South to Salomon to heare his marveillous vviſedome, about the yeare of the vvorld 2954. Her name vvas Magueda. The Æthiopian kings beleeue, that they are ſprung from the race of David, and deſcended from the familly of Salomon: and therefore ought to be called the ſonnes of David, and Salomon, becauſe they iſſued from them. For they feigne that Queene Maqueda had a Sonne by Salomon, vvho vvas called by his Mother Melilech and by Salomon David. They report (but ye muſt not take it for Goſpell) that vvhen he came to be tvventie yeares of age, his mother ſent him to Salomon his father, and Maſter; that he might be inſtructed by him in the doctrine of Salvation. Whereunto being attayned by the permiſſion of his Father, he vvas accompained into his Country aſvvell vvith Levites, as vvith ſome of the Nobility of euery one of the tvvelue Tribes, as Aſſociates in his journey, and being returned into the Kingdome of Æthiopia, tooke upon him the government, and eſtabliſhed in it the Lavve, and Circumciſion.

There are in this Empire of Æthiopia Superior 70 tributarie Kingdomes, the chiefe vvhereof are 1. Bernagaſſum, 2. Tigremaon, 3. Angote, 4. Amara, 5. Guagere, or Meroe, 6. Fatigar, 7. Dancali, 8. Goiamy, 9. Bagamedran, and 10. Xoa. Tributarie Kingdomes.

Bernagaſſum is ſhutt in vvith the river Abanthi, and the red-Sea. The chiefe citty thereof is Beroe, or Bearne a colonie of Ptolomies in the opinion of Sanutus. The Pro-rex reſideth here, vvho payeth every yeare as a tribute to the King of the Abaſines 150 Horſes, vvith ſome peeces of Velvet, and other Marchandize. And to the Turkes Baſhavv 1000 crovvnes yearely.

TIGREMAON famous for her mines of golde lyeth neere unto the river Marabo, the Red Sea and the gallant citty of Caxumo, or Caſſumo, the ancient reſidencie (as their Annals record) of the Queene of Saba, and aftervvard of the Queene of Candace and giveth the King yearely 200 Arabian horſes. The Kingdome of ANGOTE is an inland Province, ſeated betvveene Tigremaon, and Amara: they haue no money, but in ſtead thereof the people uſe ſalt, pepper, and vron. They feed on ravv fiſhe. This cuſtome of uſing Salt, & Pepper, and the like in ſtead of money vvas in former times amongſt moſt people in thoſe parts and the onely bartery or vvay of exchange.

AMARA is ſituated in the middle of the Countrie, in this there is a hill from vvhence it is ſo called, being in circuit 90 miles, and a dayes journey high: on the toppe thereof are 34 palaces, in vvhich the jonger ſonnes of the Emperour are continually encloſſed to avoyd ſedition. They enioy there vvhatſoeuer is fitt for delight, or princely education, & from hence ſome one of them, vvho is moſt hopefull, or beſt liked, is againe brought out, if the Emperour die Sonneleſſe to be Succeſſour. This Mountaine hath but one aſcent up, vvhich is impregnably fortifyed, and vvas deſtinate to this uſe Anno 470, or thereabouts, by the Emperour Abraham Philip: adviſed hereunto as he gaue out by a heavenly viſion.

GAVERE of old Meroe is an Iland in the river Nilus, being 175 miles long & 125 broad. The chiefe citty vvas Meroe, ſo named of Meroe, mother to Cambiſes, in vvhoſe memorie her ſonne built this Citty, 6. Fatagar, 7. Dancali, 8. Goyami, 9. Bagamedran and 10. Xoa, litle famous, of the lake Zembre in Goyami Ovide ſingeth thus:

VVho doth not knovv the Æthiopian Lake,
VVhoſe vvaters he that drinckes his thirſt to ſlake,
Either grovveth mad, or doth his ſoule oppreſſe,
VVith an unheard of heavie drovvſineſſe.

The chiefe cities (as Mr. Heylin noteth) are firſt Saba, built by Queene Maqueda or rather by her repaired & beautified. It hath foure gates made of Alabaſter, and Iaſpis Stone vvrought vvith antique vvorkes, and the doores thereof curiouſly carved. It hath 5000 houſes great and ſumptuous, the ſtreets ſpacious, and ſo ſhaded vvith Penthouſes, that men maye vvalke ſafe from the violence of the Sunne or raine. 2. Aruma built by King Aruc. 3. Coſſomum. 4 Zameta. 5 Erocco, & Syvachen, the onely hauens of this Empire are now under the Turkes. 6. The Kings court, vvhich is as a vvandering cittie: for vvhich his tents, and Pavilions belonging to him, and his retinue covereth no leſſe then ten miles. 7. Tanape of old the reſidencie of the Æthiopian Emperours, ſacked, and ruined by Petronius Preſident of Egypt, 8. Zenebra. &c. Cities. Saba.

There are tvvo famous rivers, vvhich runne through Æthiopia. Abanhi called by Ptol. Aſtabas, and Totcaſis, named by him alſo Aſtoborus, into vvhich many leſſer rivers fall. Abas or Abaſtus ſpringeth from the lake of Barenna, a very ſpacious lake lying under the Equinoctiall line, in vvhich there are many ſmall Iles. 3. Nilus vvhoſe ſpring unknovvne to ancient vvriters, is by ſome ſuppoſed to ariſe out of the lake of Zenire. Thence this famous river taketh his courſe tovvards Egypt, and diverſe times meeting vvith lovver vallies falleth dovvne head long vvith ſuch a force & fury, that the continuance of the noiſe deafeth all the neighbouring Inhabitants. In this Countrie are many ſluces, ditches, and by channels to curbe the othervviſe uncontrolable povver of the river, vvhich elſe vvould ouerflovv all Egypt. Rivers. Aſtaba Totcaſis Nilus.

The Chriſtian faith vvas firſt preached here by the Eunuch of Queene Candice, vvho vvas baptized by Philip the Deacon, but not totally propagated ouer the vvhole Empire, till the raigne of the Emperour Abraham, anno 470, vvho in his life time intituled himselfe Defendor and propagator of the Religion of Christ: and vvas after his death Canonized a Saint. The particulars of their opinions vvherevvith they haue infected the true purity is registred in Mr. Breervvoods Enquiries. Hovvsoever, the subjects of Prester Iohn hold to this day the greatest part of the Christian Religion, and hold these articles of faith assuredly. They beleeue in one God onely, Creator of Heauen & of Earth distinguished into three persons, God the Father; God the Sonne begotten of his Father from all Eternitie, vvhich tooke humaine flesh upon him for our sakes, dyed and rose againe; & God the Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Sonne. And this is the Summaire of their beliefe, to vvhich vvee vvill add here some particulars, touching their practize. They ioyne the old Testament vvith the nevv in such sort, that they mixe some Iudaicall, and Christian Ceremonies together. They doe not onely circumcise the Male, but also the Female children on the eight day: and yet ascribes no salvation to circumcision, vvhich they place onely by their faith in Iesus Christ. They Baptize the Males 40, the Females 80 daies after their circumcision, if some accident of sickneſse happen not in the meane time. They rebaptize themselues every yeare, asvvell the aged as the yonge children, upon every Epiphany day in lakes, & ponds, pronouncing these vvords, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, of the Sonne, and of the Holy Ghost; because that day they suppose Christ to haue bene baptized by Iohn in Iordan. This custome they haue observed religiously from their Ancestors, not for to diminish or vveaken their first Baptizme, but to putt every man in minde of the remission of their sinnes. They obserue the administration of the Lords supper under both species, asvvell the Clergie as Laymen. They doe not hold confirmation & Extreame Vnction for a Sacrament, neither doe they practize them. They celebrate asvvell the Sabbath, & the Sunday after the fashion of the ancient Christians. And this they account the greatest use of the Lavve, that it shevveth us our sinnes: & beleeue verely, that no man can keepe it, but onely Iesus Christ, vvho hath fulfilled it for us? They loue vvell the Saints, and reverence them, but never pray unto them. They haue the Virgin Mary in great honour: nevertheleſse they doe not vvorship her, or require her ayd or helpe. Marriage is permitted asvvell to the clergie and Priests, as to Lay-men. They punish severely all fornication and vvhoredome. They haue a Patriarch President of their Churches, a man of an approved vertue, grave, excellently learned & vvell stricken in age. Whose function is to keepe, and conserue the Church and Eccleſiasticks in union, to maintaine the Church discipline, and to excommunicate the rebellious. The Election of Bishops, & other Churchmen is onely in the povver of the King.

ÆTHIOPIA SVPERIOR vel INTERIOR; vulgo ABISSINORVM ſive PRESBITERI IOANNIS IMPERIVM.

ÆTHIOPIA INFERIOR

CONGO.

Name. THe Kingdome of Congo, or Main Congo is rich and mighty. It reacheth from S. Katherins Cape, vvhich is vvithin tvvo degrees and a halfe of the Equinoctiall, and shooting tovvards the Bounds. South as farre as Cape Ledo. It is bounded on the West vvith the Æthiopick Ocean, on the South vvith the hils called Luna Montes and the Caffres, on the East vvith the Mountaine from vvhence the rivers spring, vvhich run into the Fountaines of Nilus: and on the North vvith the Kingdome of Beninus. These Countrys vvere discouvered by Diego Can, a Portugal, Anno 1486. and are populous. Temperature. The aire there is very milde and temperate, having never noe winters. Neither is the Summer ouer heate or offensiue to the Fertility. Inhabitats. The soile aboundeth in all sorts of graine, as Wheate, Turcky Hirse, Barly, & fruitfull trees. In the fields there grovves many kind of Palme trees, some of them bearing Dates, others Indian Nutts. There are an other kind of Palmes, from vvhich they make oyle, vvine, bread & viniger. They make oyle of them like our Butter, vvhich they use in their meates, Vnctions, and lamps. The vvine they extract by percing the topps of the trees, out of vvhich there runns a vvhite kinde of liquour, deare & freshe: at the first it is svveet, and after vvard becomes sharpe, so that in stead of Viniger they use it among their Whit-meates, and vvith the Nutts of these Trees they make bread. These Nutts are like Almands, but somevvhat harder. Your Cassia or Aromaticall vvood, and Cedars grovv there in abundance. Their Gardens, & Orchards are full of all kind of herbes and fruits, as Pompions, Muske Melons, Cucumbers, and the like vvith diverse others, vvhich grovv not under the climates of Europe. They haue in some places a tree called Ensada, out of the braunches vvhereof their shoots some scions, vvhich having touched the Earth, shoot and grovve up in trees vvith a great desire of multiplication. All this countrie is rich in mines of mettals: especially of Silver, neere unto the Ile of Loanda. They haue a great number of vvilde Beasts, vvilde beasts. chiefly of Elephants. They haue a Beast there, which the Natiues call Zebre, very like a Mule, saving in the act of generation, he hath strange haire, for from the topp of his back dovvne to his belly, he hath as it vvere laces of three colours, that is, vvhite, black, and yellovv, being of a just proportion & distance one from an other, & either of them being three fingers broad. They are very vvide, and can by no meanes be tamed, nor made ready for the use of man. They are exceeding svvift, in so much that the Portugals haue a proverbe amonge them, he is as svvift footed as a Zebre. There are also Lyons, Tygers, Buffles, vvilde Asses, Wolues, Foxes, Staggs, Hares, Connies, Apes, Chamælions vvith diverse kind of Serpents & Snakes. Also Oxen, Svvine, Sheepe, and Goates, but they haue neither Horses, nor Mares for the use of man: but in stead of them as Maphea vvitnesseth, they haue vvodden-horses made after this manner: they couver them vvith an Oxe hide, or vvith a Goathes made in the fashion of a sadell nine ynches thick, & eight foote long: Travellers ride upon this Sadell, having tvvo Porters, vvhich carries it upon their shoulders and if it be a long journey they relieue one an other vvith fresh men. They have a great many Civets, like our Catts; but are lesser, frō vvhich they take Zivet. Moreover, they haue abundance of foule, & birds of all kind, especially Greene, Gray, and Ash-coloured Parrats: Austruches, Peacocks, Turckie Cocks, Phesant, Partriges, Ducks, Pigions, Ringdoues, Turtledoues, and an infinite number of small birds, called Becca Fichi. Foule & birds.

This Kingdome is divided unto sixe famous Provinces, name- Division. ly Bamba, Songo, Sundi, Pango, Batta and Pemba. The Province of Bamba. Bamba reacheth to the Sea Coast, from the river Ambriza, to the river Coanzo. It is governed by diverse Lords called Manni. The Townes. prime Cittie is Bamba, seated in a plaine, betvveene the rivers of Loza, and Ambriza. The Governour of this Province keepes his residencie in it, being a hundred miles distant from the sea. The secōd Province of the Kingdome of Congo, is Songo, lying betvveene Congo. the rivers of Zaira & Loango. The Capitall citty is also called Songo, vvhere the Governour dvvelleth. The Province of Sundi, rea- Sundi. cheth from the citty of Congo, vvhich the Portugals novv call Saint Saviour unto the river Zaira. This Province aboundeth in diverse kinde of Mettals. The Natiues preferre yron aboue all others, because of that they can make svvords, kniues, and armes. There are also Sables, Martines and other Animals asvvell as in other Countries. The chiefe tovvne of this Province is Sunda. The Pro- Pango. vince of Pango bordereth Northvvard upon Sundi, on the South upon Batta, on the West upon Congo, & on the East upon Montes Solis. Pango is the principall Citty, vvhere the Governour keepes his abode. The Province of Batta boundeth on the North upon Betta. Pango, on the East upon the river of Barbola, and extendeth to Montes Solis, and to the foote of the Mountaines Aphroniles; and on the Southside of these Mountaines, it bordereth upon the river of Barola even to the burning Mountaine. The chiefe tovvne is also called Batta, vvhere the Prince keepes his residencie. The sixth Province is Pemba, lying in the midst of the Kingdome, in Pemba. vvhich stands the prime and royall Cittie of Congo, novv called Saint Saviour, but heretofore Banza, vvhich signifieth a pallace, in Saint Se- vvhich the King or Governour for the most part kept his Court. viour. It is situated upon a hill, being about 150 Italian miles distant frō the Sea. This Countrie is vvatered vvith many rivers, the chiefest Rivers. vvhereof is Zaira, springing out of the Lake of Zembre, being in some places 5 miles broad, carrying vvith him a great many lesser rivers and brookes, vvhich fall into him & retaines his fresh vvater some times ten, at other times, vvhen he svvells, 16 miles into the sea. Their boates, and shipping are made there vvith a kind of vvood called Licondo capable to hold 200 men. In this river they take Crocodiles, Sea-horses, and a kind of a great fish called Ambize Angulo, vvhich vveighs 500 pound vveight, of an excellent tast, assoone as the fishers haue taken it they must presently bring it to the King upon paine of death. There are besides other rivers as Le Conda (upon vvhich the Royall Cittie of Congo is built) Ambriza, Onzo, Lemba, Danda, Bengo, and Coanzo. The last flovving out the Danda, makes the Ile of Loanda, vvhich is plaine vvithout hils. In this Iland if ye digg into the ground, vvhen the river flovves, you shall finde fresh-vvater, but if vvhen it ebbs salt vvater. They fishe Abundance of fishe. out of this vvater shells, vvhich goes as currant Money through Ser. the vvhole Kingdome. The rivers are very full of fishe. The Sea makes there many large Bayes, Roades, and Gulfes. They take there abundance of small fishe, vvhich the Inhabitants call Sardinaes, vvee Anchioves. Tovvards vvinter the Sea Coast is couvered vvith these kinde of fishe, vvhich comes thither in vvhole shooles. They haue also other delicate fishe, as Sturgions, Barbils, and the like, and Crabbs in such abundance, that the Inhabitants vvhich dvvell upon the Sea Coast make them their ordinary foode. For Mountaines the Mountaines, the highest are called by the Portugals Sierra Complida, that is, the Longe Mountaine, the Christall Mountaine, Sierra de Sol, The Sunnes-Mountaine, Sierra de Salnitre, The Salt-peter Mountaine or Mount Cabamba. The natiues, especially those of Bamba are very tall, and as strong and nimble as Fencers, The Constitution of bodies & Manners. they are vvell limmed vvith great Muscles, & vveare longe tvvo-handed svvores like the Svviſſers, vvhich they buy of the Portugals. They haue a delight to cutt off a mans body in the midst, and likevvise to chopp of the head of an oxe. Some of them are so strong, that they are able to carry a vessell of vvine, vvhich vveighs 325 pound upon their armes. Angola is of most esteeme, vvhich not long since revolted from their subjection, and alleagiance to the King of Congo: and it is certainly a most populous Province: For in the battaile betvvixt the King of this Countrie, and Paulus Diazius a famous Leader of the Portugals, the King had in his Army 1200000 souldiers: yet a fevv of his Ennemies vvisely, and politickly governed, gaue him a dismall, and a fatale overthrovv Anno 1582. as Mr. Heylin relateth.

The deſcription of

GVINEA,

VVith the Iles of

S. Thomas, the Prince, & of Anbon.

Name. GUINEA lyeth in that quarte , in which the Etheopian Gangines inhabit. The Inhabitants are called Ghinnies, being one of the countries of the Negroes. The Negroes are the Inhabitants about the River Niger, which runneth through the midſt of this countrie, which after the manner of the Nile fattens, and makes the fieldes thereof fruitfull. It ſwelleth & overfloweth as the Nile doth in the beginning of Iune for the ſpace of 40 dayes, during which time they goe in boates, & wherries to viſite their neighbouring countries, The grounds being couvered with ſlime makes it exceeding fatt: and fertill for the bearing of corne, graſſe, and all kinde of fruits. Nigh unto this River there is a great Plaine, no Mountaines nor hills, but an number of Woods & Forreſts, which ſerve as paſtures to Elephants. There are many Lakes made by the inundation of the Niger. The aire is very healthfull, ſo that if any man that had the French poxe did goe thither, he would be ſurely cured. They ſpeake diverſe languages, according to their ſeverall climes & countries: they are alſo of ſundry religions: in the midland countries there are Chriſtians, Mahumetans and Gentils. In the maritimate parts they worſhip Idoles: the Nigroes have three Kings, the King of Tombutum, the King of Bornum, & the King of Gaoga. The Gualates have a King alſo of their owne, being exceeding black, which they count faireneſſe. The Kingdome of Guinea lyeth betweene Gualata, Tombutum & Melli, and from the River Niger to the Æthiopicke Ocean. The aire of Guinea is contrarie to the nature of our bodies. aſwell by reaſon of the diſtemper, as for the raine which engendreth putrifaction & vermine. Yet this country aboundeth in Barly, Rice, Cotton, Yvory, Golde, Ghinnie Hennes and Sheepe, and a kinde of ſpice, which taſtes like Pepper, called by the Portugals Melegnete, and an other kinde of ſpice they have, which bites twiſe as ſtrong as the Pepper of Calicute, which the Portugals name Pinnenta del Rabo, & is forbidden to be ſould, leaſt it ſhould bring down the priſe of the ordinary Pepper. This countrie affordeth noe other fruits but Dates, the reſt they fetch from Gualata or Numidia. They have abundance of foure footed beaſts, eſpecially of Elephants, Apes, Monkies, Foule and Birds in abundance, principally Peacocks and aſh-coloured Parrets. The Guinois have neither townes nor Caſtles, but onely a great Village, where their Princes, Prieſts, Phyſicians and Marchants dwell: the others live here and there in woods, & other places in troopes. Neere unto the Cape of Lupus Conzalvo, the Natives adore the Sunne, the Moone and the Earth, thinking it is a great ſinne to ſpitt upon it. They cutt their skin rather then ſacrifice it, then they beſmeare and paint themſelves with a coloured oyntment, as they imagine a fine and a pleaſing ſpectacle to themſelves, but to us an ugly and a gaſtly ſight. The people here alſo account the principall part of beauty to conſiſt in a flat-noſe, and therefore they preſſe them down in their Infancie. They ſalute their Princes upon their knees with their hands foulded, crying one to an other Fuio, Fuio, Fuio. They live long though given to glutto- nie and ryot, in ſo much, that ſome of them live with alacrity, & ſtrength unto the age of a hnndred yeares. They drinke not at their meales, but having dined they drinke either water or palme-wine, which is not that palme-tree that beareth Dates, or Indian Nuts, but an other kinde, which diſtilleth in ſappe and juyce at all ſeaſons in the yeare. They pierce the body of this tree, and ſuck the liquor out of it, till they be drunke, letting the liquor of it alſo droppe into a Veſſell, which they have prepared for that purpoſe: for this liquor is more noble & ſtronger then any wine one can drinke, being of an aſhcolour, and called Mignolum: this tree diſtilling forth ordinarily every day 2 or three quarts or meaſures full. It beareth beſides 3 ſorts of Olives, an oyle alſo which ſmells like a Violet, and an other oyle, which taſts like an Olive, it ſelfe that growes yellow like Saffran, where with they eate their meate. The moſt of their men and women goe bareheaded: ſome of them covers them with a Cap, made of the barke of a tree, or with the ſhell of an Indian Nut. Some of them have holes bord through their upper lippes and Noſtrils, hanging peeces of yvorie or ſhells at them, thinking thereby that this ornament makes them very fine: ſome after they have made a great hole through their upper lippe puts their tongue through it as a fine tricke to ſalute one. They couver their nakedneſſe and privities with the rindes of trees, they weare not onely for uſe, but alſo as an ornament and for gay clothes the skinnes of Apes, Alpine Mice, or Mountaine Ratts, tyed together with knots of the ſame, with a bell. They paint one of their eyes with a red, and the other with a blew colour: the richer ſort of women weare about their leggs a ring of yron, ſome of copper, others of lead and tinne. Finally, they delight wonderfully in theſe ill favored, ſottiſh & Barbarous faſhions. Their Money is gold without any ſtampe picture or inſcription upon it. In buying of trifles or petty things, they uſe to give litle peeces of yron.

Site. Temperature. Fertility. Fruits. Beaſts,

When the Portugalls firſt ſailed into theſe Coaſts, the people hereof tooke their ſhips for great birdes with white wings: and after upon better acquaintance, they could not be brought to beleeve, but that the eyes, which were caſually painted on the beakes of their ſhips, were the eyes by which they ſaw how to direct themſelves in their courſe. Gunnes ſeemed to them for their hideous noiſe, to be the workes of the Devill, and for Bag-pipes they tooke them to be living Creatures: neither when they had bene permitted to feele them would they be perſwaded otherwiſe but that they were the worke of the Gods owne hands, ſo voyd were they of the uſe of reaſon. The very Nobles are ſo ſtupid, that when they are in preſence of their King, they never looke him in the face, but ſit flatt on their buttocks with their elbowes on their knees, & their hands on their faces: and for their greater gallantry they annoint their haire with the fatt of fiſhes, which makes them ſtinke abhominably.

The Countrie is abundantly ſtored with Gold and Silver, very fine and pure.

The Ile of S. THOMAS.

Name. THIS Iland was ſo named, becauſe that the Portugals found it upon S. Thomas day. It is of a round Figure, and lyeth directly under the Æquinoctiall line. The Diamiter of it is 40 miles, & 180 miles in compaſſe. When it was firſt diſcovered it ſeemes to be nothing, but a huge wood, full Temperature. of trees with great boughes and high branches. The aire is hott: few Chriſtians live in it till they be above 50 yeares of age. And it were a ſtrange thing among the Portugals to ſee them live there till they had a white beard. But the Natives & Negroes live there, till they be a hundred yeares old. The dayes & nights are there of an equall length. In March and September there falls oftentimes huge ſhowers of raine, which moiſtens the Earth, and in the other Monthes it is re- Fertility. freſhed with Deawes. The Earth being ſlimie, ſoft, & of a reddiſh colour, will beare no Wheate, Vines, or any fruit that hath a ſtone in it: yet it produceth Pompions, Coucumbers, Citrons, Figgs, Ginger, and is ſo fruitfull in Sugar, that the Portugals load 40 ſhips with it every yeare: in ſtead whereof they exchange Wine, Cheeſe, Wheate, Leather and other neceſſarie things, but this trade is much decreaſed, becauſe there are certaine wormes, which doe breede and eate up the rootes of their Canes: ſo that now they bring not above 6 Veſſells loaden with Sugar from it. It beareth alſo Millel, Hirſe, Rice and Barly, Lettice, Coleworts, Turneps, Beetes, Perſley, and diverſe Pot-herbes. And beſides theſe a luxurious roote, which groweth in the Eaſt-Indies in the Ile Hiſpagniola, called Patata; which the Negroes of S. Thomas Ile name Ignama, and ſets it as a ſingular herbe, very neceſſarie for humaine life: the peele of it is blacke, the inſide white, and is like a long turnep, having many ſmall rootes ſhooting out of it. It taſts like a Cheſt-nut, but is ſweeter & more delicate. The Spaynards which inhabite there, have brought thether ſome Olive-plants, Peaches, Almands and other fine Fruits: but they never tooke, nor came to any good. This Ile breedeth a certaine kinde of ſtrange Crabbs, which live in the Earth like Moles, of a blew and azure colour, which rootes up the Earth, Foule and Birdes. gnawes and ſpoyles all where they come. It breedeth alſo a great number of Foule and Birds, as Partriges, Turtledoves, Starlings, Black-birds, Greene-ſparrows, which chirpe and ſinge, and many Parrets.

The Portugals have here a Citty called Pavoaſan, built by a River ſide, in which they have 700 Famillies, beſides their Biſhop and his Clergie men. It hath a good haven, and is ſeated upon a fine & a wholeſome River. The Sea round about it yeelds abundance of fiſh, which invites them to fiſhing. It is a wonder to ſee what an infinite number of Whales are upon the coaſt, as alſo upon all the coaſt of Africa. There is in the midſt of this Ile a Mountaine full of trees, ordinarily ſo couvered with clouds, that there comes ſhowres of raine enough from thence, to water the Sugar-canes, & the higher the Sunne is, the more cloudes encreaſe and are about this Mountaine. The Inhabitants of this Ile are partly blacks, & partly whites, but it is a ſtrang thing, which they report, that the Negroes are troubled with Lice and Flees, but the whites have not ſo much as a Louſe or a Flea in their beds, or about them.

The Princes Iland.

THIS Iland lyeth within three degrees of the Æquinoctiall line, and is called the Ile del Principe, becauſe when the Portugals had conquered it, the revenues hereof was allotted to the Portugal-Prince. It is reaſonable well manured, and there growes in it abundance of Sugar, which is tranſported out of it. There is alſo a kinde of a Palme-tree, out of which the Inhabitants drawe a liquor which ſerveth them for drinke, and which if they drinke too much of it the ſtrength thereof doth diſtemper them.

The Ile of ANBON.

THIS Ile was ſo called, becauſe it was diſcovered upon New yeares day, and therefore taken as a preſage of a good yeare, it is ſituated beyond the Æquator, under the ſame Southerne diſtance, as the former is towards the North. It is unhabited: but there is excellent fiſhing upon the coaſt thereof, here are alſo flying fiſhes: there are a great many of Crocodils, and other venomous Crea- Crocodils. tures. The Crocodile is in ſhape like a Lizard, & ſome of them of an incredible greatneſſe: ſo great from ſo ſmall a beginning, is more then wonderfull; ſome of them being above 30 foote long; hatched of Eggs no bigger then thoſe that are layd by a Turkie. His taile is equall to his body in length, wherewith he enfoldeth his prey, and drawes it into the River. His feete are armed with clawes, and his backe and ſides with ſcales ſcarce penetrable, his belly tender, ſoft and eaſely pierced; his teeth indented within on an other, having no tongue, but moving his upper jaw onely: his mouth ſo wide when extended, as ſome of them are able to ſwallow an entire Heiffer. The Female layes a hundred Eggs, as many dayes they are in hatching, & as many yeares they live, that doe live the longeſt: they will devoure and teare in peeces both man and beaſt, which makes the countrie-people to fence thoſe places, where they fetch their water. By day for the moſt part he lyeth on the land, when betweene ſleeping and wakeing, they write that a litle bird, called Troculus, doth feede herſefe by the picking of his teeth: wherewith delighted, and gaping wider, the Icnumon his mortall Ennemy, ſpying his advantage, whips into his mouth, and gliding downe his throate like an Arrow, gnaweth away through his belly, & deſtroyes him: for which the Egyptians themſelves gave divine honour nnto the Icnumon, for the benifite he did them in the deſtroying of that Serpent. And thus much aſwell for Guinea and theſe Iles, as for Africa, now let us come to America, or the new found World.

OF AMERICA.

Name.

Hriſtopher Columbus having diſcovered to our Predeceſſours theſe unknowne Countries called it India, others for the greatneſſe thereof The Nevv VVorld: for it is exceeding large, & almoſt as great as our world: reſſembling theſe three parts, Europe, Aſia, and Africa, as may eaſilie bee ſeene by the Generall Mapp, which wee haue publiſhed of it: It is called America, from Americus Veſpuſius a Florentine, who was the firſt after Columbus which diſcovered that part of it, which lyeth beyond the Æquator towards the Eaſt, in which are the Region of Paria & Braſilia: It is not knowne when it was firſt of all Inhabited. But certaine it is, it was before many ages unknowne: for that which ſome imagine of the Romains, may rather be ſaid, then proved, which opinion by Gaſpar Varrerius is well refuted: ſome againe perſwade themſelues, that Seneca being tranſported with a rapture, with a Poetical furie and Divination ſung ſomething of it in his Medea.

—Venient annis
Secula Seris, quibus Oceanus
Vincula rerum laxet & ingens
Pateat tellus, nec ſit terris
Vltima Thule.— That is,
In after age the time ſhall come,
In vvhich the all devouring foame
Shall looſe its proper bound and ſhevv
An other continent to vievv:
Nor frozen Thule ſhall vve ſee
The Vtmoſt parts of th' Earth to be.

But it is follie to thinke, that theſe Countries were then knowne, either to him, or any others in his time. After many ages then unknowne, Chriſtopher Columbus of Genua, a man of an acute & a divine Spirit, firſt of all found out this part of the World, Anno 1492. under the authoritie, charge & commande of the King of Caſtill, inſtructed herein (as ſome will ſaye, to deminiſh the glorie of ſo high a worke) by a Spaniſh Navigator called Buxola, returning from his long, & troubleſome voyages made upon the Atlantick Sea, affirme that he being toſſed up and downe by ſtormes, wandred here and there out of his courſe, and at laſt was caſt upon theſe Countries, and returning from thence, arrived in the Iland of Madera, then under the Iuriſdiction of Portugals, and ſeated himſelfe in Africa: In which Ile newly found dwelt then this Chriſtopher Columbus. This Mariner being kindely entertained by Columbus, related all that had befalne him in his voyage. Columbus being on fire with the newes thereof, under Ferdinando King of Caſtile; & of Iſabella his Wife, with three ſhipps undertooke this voyage, An. 1429. & being the firſt of September, upon the Ocean made ſaile & diſcovered firſt the Iles Hiſpaniola, Cuba and Iamaica. Amõg the other memorable things which happned in this voyage, after they arrived in the Ile Iamaica, he & his men were brought into greate extremity & danger of their lives, for want of victualls. The Barbarians hoping by this means to overthrowe this ſmall Chriſtian Armie, from which danger neverthelеſſe, by a notable Stratagem, he preſerved himſelfe and his men: & to this end making uſe of his witt, by the opportunitie of an Eccliplе in the Moone, which approched nigh, being very expert in the Aſtronomicks, he knew well, that ſhee would ſoone be Eccliplеd: upon this he advertized the Iamaick Captaines, that unleſſe they did ſend him all proviſions neceſſarie, that ſhortly they ſhould be afflicted with many great evills, and for the confirmation of his ſaying, that the night following, he would cauſe the Moone to become darke. Theſe Barbarians hearing this, deſpiſed his threatnings, but ſeing afterward that it fell out ſo, even at the very houre in which he had fore-tould thim that the Moone began by little, and little to darken, being frighted & ſeized upon with feare, rann to him and caſting themſelues downe at one of the Captaines feetes gaue him abundance of victualls, and withall promiſed willingly to ſupply them with whatſoeuer they wanted. Americus Veſpaſius a Florentine undertooke the very ſame diſcoverie after him, at the charge and ſetting forth of Emanuell King of Portugall; ſo that in acknowledgement of his honour & deſert, it beareth to this daye the name of America.

Now all this new World, reacheth from the South, towards the North, in the forme of two great Penn-Inſuls, joyned together a litle Iſthmus, or a narrow Strait of land. The one is called Northerne America, the other the Southerne. The longitude thereof extendeth betweene the Meridian of 190. to 67. degrees.

Bounds. The bounds of the largeneſſe thereof to the Southward is the Strait of Magellan, that lies under the 52. degree: but to the Northward from the 67. degree, many Countries lying beyond that, are yet unknowne to us. It hath then on the Eaſt ſide the Atlanticke Sea, commonly called Del Noort, on the South ſide, the Southerne Magellanick, ſeparated by a Strait, which runneth betweene them: on the Weſt, the Mare Pacificum, or Del Sur: on the North ſide it is yet uncertaine, whether there be land or Sea. All the circuit of the Navigation about it is 32000. miles, according to the opinion of many ſkilfull men; for all the coaſt thereof haue bin diſcovered, ſaue the Northerne. In Generall, this Region is full of diverſities & varieties.

Fertility. At the firſt it yeeldeth neither Wine, nor Wheate, but in ſtead thereof, they uſed a certaine kinde of Pulſe, or a Graine vvith a Reed or Stalke, vvhich they called Maiz, as alſo the Wine Chichia. They had little boats named Canovvs, & Petty-Kings called Cacikes. They neither ſovve nor plough the earth: but in their ditches & holes, vvhich they digge reaſonable deepe, put three or foure of theſe graines into them, and then caſt earth upon them, everie ſtalke being covered vvith three or foure Skins, grovves up by little & little yeelding, aboue a hundred graines.

Their ſeverall ſorts of bread. The blade of this Maiz it aboue a mans height, and is gathered tvviſe a yeare in diverſe Countries. They haue another kinde of bread, vvhich they uſually call Cazabi made of Iucca rootes, vvhich is of the bigneſſe of a Turnep. It beareth no ſeede, but ſtif canes, and ſtalkes full of knotts, having greene leaves like hempe. In harveſt time they cleave theſe Canes in peeces, ſome 2. paulmes bredth long, theſe they ſett in hillocks, vvhich they call Chonuchos, & cover them vvith earth, and vvhen they make this kinde of bread they take out as many of theſe rootes as they liſt, though but a fevv at a time, becauſe they are ſoone rotten. There are alſo tvvo ſorts of rootes, called Pattates & Haies, almoſt of a like forme, ſaving that the Haies are leſſe and more ſavourie: theſe they plant alſo, and in 6. Months eate of the fruits of them: ſome of them haue a ſvveete relliſh, but they are quicklie glutted, and grovv vvearie of them, and ſeeing they haue but little juyce in them, they cauſe vvindineſſe. They haue alſo many trees vvhich beare a fruit like vvilde grapes, their kernills are covered vvith a blacke ſkin like Bullaces or Sloes, vvhich grovv in hedges, but becauſe there is a greate kernel, and litle juyce, the natives of the Countrey make no Wine of them. They haue Trees alſo vvhich beare Oliues: but haue an unſavourie ſmell, and a vvorſer taſt. They haue great varietie and abundance of fruites, as the Hovii, Platains, Pines, Guaiaves, Mamei & Guanavans. Several Indian fruits. The Hovi are fruits of the bigneſſe of a middle ſized plumme, vvith a thick ſtone, and is ſmall vvithin, and vvaxeth yellovve vvhen they are ripe, and haue a ſovvre taſt. The tree that beareth them is great & tall, & the leaues of them litle. The Platains are more longe then thick, & the leſſer much better then the greater: this tree beareth broad leaves a Palme in breadth and foure in length, in the midſt vvhereof a branch ſprouteth out, from vvhence a hundred leſſer Platains grovv: but if greater, then 25. or a fevv more. This tree is tender and beareth but once a yeare ripe fruite, and from the ſame roote ſpringeth other ſpriggs: vvhen this fruite is ripe they gather it, but never greene, & having hevven dovvne the tree, they lay it in a hott place: There theſe Platains grovv ripe quicklie, & become yellovv. They are covred vvith a peele, the thickneſſe of the backſide of a knife, all the reſt is a Coare, or a kernell, vvhich is good to eate, delicate, vvholeſome and good for nouriſhment. The Pines grovv from litle ſhrubs of a yellovv colour, vvhen they begin to be ripe they haue a ſvveete odour and an excellent taſt: Theſe they hold for great dainties, and according to Benzo his opinion, there is not a fruite upon earth more louely or of a more delicious and ſvveete taſt, then this. The ſkin being taken avvay the Coare is full of juyce, and hath a moſt pleaſant ſmack tempered vvith a litle tartneſſe. Guiavus is a tree like a peach, or an apricock tree, vvith leaves like bay-trees, but are thicker & longer, they grovv rotten quicklie, the fruite is like a medler, but much greater and hanging upon the tree grovveth ripe, but being not gathered, rotteth & engendreth vvorms: theſe fruites haue many kernells and cloſe graines, thoſe of a purple colour are accounted the beſt and haue the ſvveeteſt taſt. There are alſo the Mamei of the biggneſſe of a nut-tree, having a leafe more long then broad; the fruite thereof is round: theſe grovv in the Ile Hiſpagniola, in Terra Firma; ſome of them are longer and greater, others of a better relliſh. They haue alſo Guanavans, a ſmall ſlender and thinne tree, and the fruite thereof like a heart. It hath a greene thinne ſkinne, like unto the ſkale of a fiſhe, the inſide is vvhite: It beareth alſo an other kinde, vvhich are round, & yellovv, theſe laſt are accounted much better then the others, and all of them in generall haue in them certaine litle kernells of a cheſt-nut coulour. This continent beareth alſo Sugars, Cotton, Flaxe, and ſuch like commodities, vvith many other trees, good plants & hearbes, Speceries, Pearle, pretious Stones, vvith an incredible quantitie of Gould and Silver, vvith other Mettalls, & other Mineralls. But before, it had neither Oxen, Kine, Horſe, Mules, Aſſes, Sheepe, Goats, nor Dogs in it: and therefore it is no marvaile, though the natives of thoſe Countries vvere amazed at the firſt ſight of a horſe: Myce and Ratts, they had none, afore they vvere brought thither by Ship of Antvverpe, vvhich vvas caſt avvay by the Streight of Magellan, vvith an intét to haue gone further; ſince vvhich time they are ſtrangely multiplied, vvhether it be by the nature of the Countrie, or the naturall encreaſe of theſe Creatures, vvhich gnavving of the tender graſſe, hearbs & fruites, from the ground oftentimes haue cutt of the Inhabitants from all hope of reaping and having a good harveſt. It breedeth all kinde of Beaſts knovvne to us, and ſome unknovvne to forrayners, one more ſtrang then all the reſt, under the bellie vvhereof nature hath placed a bagge, fitt to vvhip up and encloſſe her younglings, vvhen ſhe removeth from a place, ſhe hath a bodie and a ſnout like a foxe, hands and feete like an Ape, & ears like a Bat. There is another beaſt called by the natives Caſcuy, like a black hogge, full of Briſſells, vvith a very tough ſkin, yes, great eares, cloven hoved, vvith a very little nou Eliphant, & roareth ſoe hydeouſlie, that it amazeth men are it, the fleth vvhereof is good to eate. There upon the Mountaines a great many vvilde Boares, and moſt crueil firce Tygers, and Lyons, yet are they ſo fearefull of a man that they flye avvay aſſoone as they perceiue him. Thei eacocks, Pheaſants, Patridges and other kinde of fovvls and birds, but much differing from ours: of them vvee vvill ſpeake in our particular deſcription more at large. All America (as is ſaid) is devided into tvvo very great Peninſuls, vvhereof the one is called Septentrionall America, vvhich lieth all under the lyne, and to the Northvvard the other Meridionall, becauſe it extendeth it ſelfe for the m part, on the other ſide of the Æquator to th Southvvard, though ſome of the Countries thereof lie alſo the Æquator. The Northerne is devided into divers Provinces, as , Nova Hiſpania, Nicaragua, Iucatan, Florida, Apalchen. N Francia, Nova Anglia, Terra Laboratoris, & Eſtotilandia. ot parts are many, but the chiefeſt and thoſe vvhich are novv quiſhed by the Spaniard, and taken in hy ſ fr ans are Golden Caſtile, Popaiana, Peru, Chile and Braſill. The g much in tvvo Cities, in Cuſco and Mexico. Cuſco is the Capitall, or Metropolitan of the Southerne America. It is of ſuch a largeneſſe, might & magnificencie, that it may truely contend vvith the faireſt Cities of France or of S , & that for the Fortreſſe vvhich is impregnable; the multitude of people, eſpecially of Gentlmen, the faire forme of buildings, and the beautie of its ſituation. No common pe ple are admitted to dvvell in it, but is held the reſidence, and retreate of the Nobles, Lords & Princes, vvhereof ſome of them dvvell in the Cittie & others haue their houſes in the fields next adjoyn b oit. Among the reſt there are foure ſtately Palaces for the greateſt Lords, vvhich haue the Gouvernment, & of managing k iblick affaires, built very ſumptuouſly, raiſed vvith Marble free Stones; and rich pictures, vvhich coſt an infinite charge. Their Streetes goe right out, by reaſon that in ſome places they meete croſſe vviſe, yet there is not ſo much as one of them, but hath a little channell or a vvater running through the midſt of them, vvith a ſtone vvall on both ſides. It is built in a quadrant forme, & lieth finely compact together, & is pleaſantly ſeated upon the ſide of a hill, vvhich beareth it up. In the bottome or valley, vvhere is a hard coming up to this hill there lies a ſtrong & a very faire Caſtle, vvhich maketh this Cittie admirable and pleaſant, if one conſiders either the beautie, or the raritie of the buildings: in ſo much that thoſe vvhich haue travelled through many parts of the World, ſay, they haue not ſeene the like in all Europe. Mexico or Tremiſtan lying in the Mexican Province of Nevv Spaine, is a moſt rich and a very famous Cittie, vvhereof vve vvill ſpeake here after in the deſcription of Nevv Spaine, vve vvill proceede forvvard. This part of the World is vvatered vvith many faire, great, and excellent running Rivers, vvhereof many of them haue Gold in their ſands, beſides this continent is full of many Lakes, and freſh ſprings. The Lakes & Rivers abounding in fiſh. Among the reſt there is one ſort of fiſh called in Hiſpagnola Manati. It is almoſt like an Otter 25. foote long, & 12. thick, having a head & a tayle like an Oxe, ſmall eyes, a hard Skinne, hairie & Skye-colouted, having tvvo feete like an Eliphant. The females of their kinde Calve like a Covve, and giues her young ones milke vvith tvvo teates. There are alſo many Mountaines, among vvhich as Benſo reporteth, there is a Mount vomiting out fyerie flames, and caſting out ſuch greate flaſhes and flakes, that the light of them is ſeene more then 100000. paces in the night. Some haue beleeved, that there is great ſtore of moulten Gould in it, vvhich miniſtreth perpetuall fuell to this fire and flaming. To make a triall thereof, there vvas a Monke of S. Dominicus Order, vvho made a great Caldron or kettle, vvith a chaine of yron faſtned to it: attervvard he vvent up to the topp of it vvith 4. Spaniards, and let dovvne his chaine, and kettle into the bottome of this furnace, but the Caldron vvith part of the chaine vvas molten by the heate and violence of the fire. The Monck being vexed hereat, vvent to Legion, charging the Smith, that had made the chaine a great deale leſſe, then he had commaunded him: upon this the Smith made another, a greate deale bigger, the Monke to trie an other concluſion, came once againe to the Mountaine, vvith his kettle, & a greater chaine, but vvas ſerved in the very ſame manner, as he vvas before: for his Caldron did not onely melt avvay; but alſo on a ſudden brake out ſuch a violent flame, out of this Abiſſe, that it had almoſt ſvvallovved up this Monke and his Companions, and putt them into ſuch a pittyfull feare, that they ran backe againe into the Tovvne, and durſt never attempt any ſuch triall againe. I vvill paſſe by ſome other ſtrange things. The Citties and their Streetes are of a ſuperbe building, having in them many magnificent houſes. They ſay, there vvas a Kings Garden, in vvhich the herbes, the trees, the ſtocks, the branches & fruites, vvere of pure Gold, and haue alſo maintayned firmely, that the very Coares in the Apples & other fruits, vvere ſoe. There vvas likevviſe a Kings Chamber, vvhere there vvas the pictures of all kindes of Beaſt, ſet out in precious Stones, and dravvne out partly vvith Moſaicke vvorke, & partly engraven, and ſome of them adorned vvith diverſitie of rare feathers. That vvhich is reported of tvvo high vvayes is very remarkeable, the one is paved through vvaggie hills, hanging dovvne from the Mountaines, the other over the plaines and fields from Guito a Cittie of Peru, unto Caſco the lenght of 500. miles. The honour and merrit of this vvorkemanſhippe is the more by reaſon of the ſtrangeneſſe of the great heapes of Stones and flints, vvhich men rouled thither vvith their hands, vvithout the helpe of Oxen, or of horſes, vvhich they had not. The high vvay over the fields is cloſed on both ſides vvith vvalls fiue & tvventie foote thick, betvveene vvhich runn many riveletts, flouriſhing vvith diverſe Shrubbs, on the one, & the other ſide, vvhich they call Molli: the other of a like bredth being hevven through Stones & rocks, paſſeth through the midſt of the mountains, and over the lovv groues and unplayned valleys, fenced in vvith heapes of Stones, as vvell as the nature of the place vvould permit. King Guaimacapa (vvho lived in the dayes of our Grand-Sirs) repaired theſe vvayes, raiſed & ſtrengthned the vvalls of them. It vvas a moſt ancient and a publike vvorke, vvhich vvas not finiſhed in a mans age: upon theſe vvayes vvere ſpacious, Inns, pleaſant & faire, called Tambos, vvherein the King & his vvhole trayne might lodge, theſe things vvitneſſing manifeſtly, that America hath bin inhabited of old times, and not a few ages agoe. To conclude (as M. Heylin noteth) they are without queſtion the Progenie of the Tartars, which may be proved by many arguments. Somo negative, other alſo affirmative. The negative Arguments are theſe: firſt they haue no reliſh, or reſemblance at all, of the Arts, Learning and Civilitie of Europe: Secondly, there colour ſheweth them, not to haue deſcended from the Africans, here being no black men in all this Countrie, but ſome few vvhich inhabite the Sea Coaſt over againſt Guinea in Africke, from vvhence they are ſuppoſed by ſome tempeſt to haue bene brought hither. Thirdly, they haue not the leaſt token or ſhevv of the Arts or Induſtrie of China, Eaſt-India, or any civill Region on this ſide of Aſia. The affirmative argumenis proue firſt, they came from Aſia next in particular from Tartarie. That they came out of Aſia, is more then manifeſt, in that the Weſt ſide of the Countrie towards Aſia is farre more Populous, then the Eaſt towards Europe: of which there can be no other reaſon aſſigned, then that theſe parts were firſt inhabited, & that from hence the reſt was peopled. Now for the next, the Idolatrie of this people, and the particularities thereof, their incivility and barbarous properties; tell us that they are moſt like the Tartars of any. Secondly, the Weſt ſide of America, if it be not cõtinẽt with Tartarie, is yet diſioyned by a very ſmall ſtraight, as may be perceived in our Mappes & Cardes, as alſo in the deſcriptiõ of theſe Countries: ſo that there is into theſe Countries a very quick and eaſie paſſage. And thirdly, the people of Quivira, which of all the Provinces of America is the neareſt unto Tartarie, are ſaid to follow in the whole courſe of their life, the ſeaſons and beſt paſturing of their Oxen; juſt like the Scythian, Nomades or Tartarian Hordes: an evident argument of their offſpring & originall; an thus much of America or the new World in generall.

THE DESCRIPTION OF VIRGINIA.

Name. VIrginia, as ſome write, tooke this name from a petty King of theirs called Viguinus. But ſure it is, that it was diſcouered by the Engliſh at the direction, & charges of S. Walter Rawleigh Anno 1584. And in honour of our Virgin queene Elizabeth of bleſſed memorie, was called Virginia. The Natiues name this Countrie Wingandacoa, & Apalchen. Bounds. It is bounded on the Eaſt with Mare del Nort; on the Weſt, we yet know not what limit; on the North with Norumbega, & on the South with Florida. Fertility. It is ſo fruitfull that two acres of land wil returne 400 buſhells of Corne. There is ſaid to be rich veines of Alum, Pitch, Tar, Rozen, Terpentine, ſtore of Cedar, plentie of ſweete Gummes, Dies, Timber trees, mines of Yron, and Copper, abundance of Fruits, both for neceſſity, and delight, as Wine, Oyle, Beanes, called by the Inhabitants Ohingere, Peaſe, named by them Wickanzeur, Melons, Pompions, called Macoeque, and diverſe others, as Cheſtnutts, Walnutts, Strawberries, and other delicate fruits; likewiſe Silke, Hempe, Flaxe and ſome precious Stones, and amongſt the reſt, that Indian graine called by the Natiues Pagotour, or Maize, whereof there is ſuch ſtore, that it is admirable to behold: for they take noe great paines in manuring or ſowing the Lands with it; but onely keepe the upper part of their grounds cleane by weeding it, neuer uſing either plough or harrow, for they knowe not what they meane, neither knowes what belongs to the dunging, and fatting of the ſoile, which we commonly doe in Europe, but onely take a woodden ſpade, and digg holes in the ground, and putts in a ſtick into it, and ſetts the ſeed and cornes thereof in the ſame manner as wee doe our Turkie Beanes, & then cover them with Earth, which afterward ſhootes up and growes very finely.

Wilde Beaſts In ſome parts of this Countrie, they haue diverſe wild beaſts, as Beares, Lyons, Wolues, Deere, Connies, and other ſtrange beaſts, called by the Inhabitants, Saguenuchet, Maguowoe, and Squiret. There are alſo abundance of Indian Turckie Cocks and Henns, Doues, Partriges, wilde Swanns, Geeſe, Parrets, diverſe kinde of Hawkes, and an infinite number of ſmall birds. Foule.

They haue but two townes or villages, wherein there are not aboue ten or twelue houſes, built upon piles of Timber, and empaled round about, having but one narrow entrance into them. Theſe houſes are built uniforme, round about their temple, their Princes court, and the Markett place. The names of the Indian townes upon this Coaſt are The Indian townes. 1. Pyſhopannock that is, the womens towne, 2. Chipanum, 3. Weoponnok, 4. Muſcamungo, 5. Mattaguen, 6. Oanoke called by the Engliſh the blinde towne, 7. Penieòke, 8. Shycaoke a very great towne, 9. Chowanaoke, and 10. Sequotan, and others. The chiefe townes of the Engliſh are 1. Keguoughton, 2. Iames-Towne, and 3. Daleſgift.

There is but one entrãce into this Countrie by Sea: which is at the mouth of a very goodly Bay, called Trinity Harbour: the Capes on both ſides, being called Cape Henry, and Cape Charles, as likewiſe an other called Cheſepiock ſinus, or gulfe. This Countrie is watered with Rivers. the rivers called Quibequeſſon, Apanawapeske, Occam, Cipo, Nomopano, Neus, and diverſe others. In the months of February, March, Aprill, and May, they take abundance of Sturgeon, and Hearings: beſides, for freſh water fiſh, they haue delicate Roches, Daces, Perches, and Sea-place, with diverſe of other kinds.

Woods There are alſo many Woods full of Deare, Hares, Conneys and fowle. The hils, mountaines and wilderneſſe are not there bare and barren as in Bohemia, Muſcovia, and Hyrcania, but there growes in them as faire & goodly Cedars, as in any countrie in the World, as alſo many Pine-trees, Cypreſſe-trees, Maſtick-trees, and ſuch like ſweete-ſmelling-trees.

The habit, diſpoſition & manners of the Natiues. The people of this Countrie are of a middel ſtature, they uſe to paint their bodies with the pictures of ſerpents, & other ugly beaſts, and goe cloathed in a looſe mantle made of Deeres ſkinne, and weare an apron of the ſame before their nakedneſſe. They worſhip all things, and them onely which are able to hurt them, as fire, water, lightning, thunder &c. Notwithstanding they are upright and just in their dealings, loving righteousnesse. They beleeue the immortality of the soule, which they haue in Common with other Americans. They spend the most part of their time in excesse, ryoting, and dancing; yet are they haters of eating mans flesh, as other Indian Canibals doe. They delight greatly in hunting, and catching of deere & wilde beastes. Their armes are bowes and arrowes.

They beleeue also that there are many Gods, whome they call Mantoack, but make a difference of degrees among them, holding one onely for the high and mighty God, who is from eternitie, who (as they say) before he decreed to create the World, created first some principal Gods, whose helpe he was to use in the creation and Government of the World. Afterward, he created the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starrs, as petty or lesser Gods, to serue as Instruments to the Chiefest order. They say moreover, that first the waters were created, out of which, by the helpe and operation of the Gods, all visible and invisible creatures had their Original & beginning.

Concerning Mankind, they say a woman was first created, and that by the helpe of the Gods, she should conceiue, and bare children, and that from her came the offspring of mankind. But if any man be desirous to informe himselfe better of the property, nature, and quality of this Countrie, and the manners & qualities of the Inhabitants, may be pleased to reade the Description of Virginia, written by M. Iohn Whyte, and the relation of M. Thomas Hariot, who will satisfie him upon that subject.

THE DESCRIPTION OF NEW ENGLAND.

The Name. NEw England, by the Kings Majeſties grant of his gracious Letter patents to the Engliſh colonies and plantations, is of late yeares (ſince Captaine Smith firſt deſcovered it anno 1608) much encreaſed. The place whereon the Engliſh haue built their Colonies, is judged by thoſe, who haue beſt ſkill in diſcoverie, either to be an Iland, ſurrounded on the North-ſide with the ſpacious river Cannada, and on the South with Hudſons river, or elſe a Peninſula, ouerlapping one an other having their riſe from the great lakes, which are not farre from each other, as the Indians ſay. On the Weſt it hath certaine high mountaines: and on the Eaſt Mar del Noort, or the Virginian Sea. It is ſituate betweene fortie one and fortie five degrees of Northerne latitude, neere the Bay of Maſſachuſets, which lieth under 42, and 43. bearing North-Eaſt from the land; at the bottome whereof are ſituated moſt of the Engliſh plantations, having the Indians called Connecticuts & Mowhacks on the Weſt-ſide of them. The Tarrenteens on the Eaſt. The Pequants, and Narraganſets on the South, and the Aberginian on the North. The Engliſh habitations are certainely upon the beſt ground, and ſweeteſt climate in thoſe parts, agreeing well with the temper of our Engliſh bodies, being high land, a wholeſome and a ſharpe aire: and though moſt of our Engliſh townes border upon the Sea Coaſt, yet are they not often troubled with miſts, unwholeſome foggs, or cold weather from the ſea; for the ſituations upon the ſea Coaſt, which in other Countries are unwholeſome and cold, are otherwiſe here, becauſe in the extremitie of winter, the North-Eaſt, and South winds comming from te ſea, produce warme weather, and bringing the warme working of the ſea, looſeth the frozen Bayes, carrying away their yce with the tides, melting the Snow, and thawing the ground. And though there comes many ſharpe Froſts, yet the extremity of this cold weather laſteth not aboue two months, or ten weeckes, beginning in December, and breaking up the tenth day of Februarie, which hath beene a paſſage very remarkeable, that for ten or a dozen yeeres the weather hath held himſelfe to this day, unlocking his ycie Bayes, and rivers, which are never frozen againe the ſame yeare. To arme themſelues againſt this, they haue abundance of wood, and timber to make braue fiers wherewith our Engliſh maye warme and heate themſelues. And for the heate of Summer, it is not ſo overhott, but that the Inhabitants are refreshed with the coole gales, which commonly blowes out of the ſea, and the many ſpreading trees, which with their great leaues overſhades them. The times of moſt Raine are in the beginning of Aprill, and at Michelmas. The early Springs, and long Summers make but ſhort Autumnes, and Winters. And the daies in Summer be two howers ſhorter, and the nights two howres longer then in England.

The Soile. The Soile is for the generall a warme kinde of Earth, having litle cold, no Spungie land, no mooriſh fenns, no quagmires, the loweſt grounds being marſhes, ouer which every full & change the Sea flowes. Theſe marſhes being rich grounds bring plenty of hay, as alſo the broad meddows for the feeding of Cattell. Beſides, the abundance of Indian Maize, there growes as good Engliſh corne as can be deſired: eſpecially Rye Oates, barly, and wheate: moreouer, there are Turneps Parſnips, Carrots, Radiſhes, Pompions, Muſkmilions, Concombers, Onyons, and whatſoeuer growes in England growes aſwel there. Alſo many pot hearbes, without either the art, or the helpe of man, as ſweete Marioran, Purſelane Sorrell, Peneriall, rarrovv, Mirthe, Saxiferilla, Bayes, &c. and abundance of great ſtravv-berries, ſome being two ynches about, vvhereof one may gather a buſhell in a fore-noone: Likevviſe at other times Gooſeberries, Bilberies, Raſberries, Treacle-berries, and Currents, Hempe, flax, and rapes. It is certainely reported, that there is yron, ſtone, black-lead, and Sea-coale. It is alſo verely thought, that the Spaniards bliſſe may lie hidden in the bovvells of the mountaines. There are overgrovvne vvoods, foreſts & mountaines, goodly trees, both upon hills, and plaines, as huge Oakes, vvhich they uſe for timber, & building: of theſe there be three kinds, the red, the vvhite, and the black Oake; as theſe are different in kind, ſo are they choſſen for ſuch uſe, as they are fit for, one kind being more fit for clappboard, others for ſavvne board, ſome fither for ſhipping, others for houſes. Theſe trees affords much maſt for hoggs. The other are Cypreſſe trees, Cedars, tall Pines, Firrs, Cheſtnutts, Walnutt trees, Aſh, Elme, Mapple, and Cherrie trees, Rezin, and Terpentine trees, and divers others. The Engliſh haue there aboue tvvo thouſand head of Cattle, and abundance of Swine, vvhich breeds, feeds, and proſpers there, aſvvell as in England; by reaſon of their rich and fat paſture grounds, and meddovves; and fort the better encreaſe of them they onely kill the males & keepe the female for breede: for vvilde beaſts both in the plaines, and vvoods, I referre yovv to Mr. VVilliam VVood his verſes in Nevv Englands Proſpect, vvhich are theſe:

> The Kingly Lyon, and the ſtrongh arm'd Beare,
> The large lim'd Mooſes, vvith the tripping Deare,

> Caſtell'd in the hollovv of an aged tree,
> The skippingh Squirrill, Rabbat, pur blinde Hare,

> VVhoſe meagre paunch ſucks like a ſvvallovving gulfe.
> Black gliſtering Otters, and rich coated Bever
> The Civet ſented Muſquaſh ſmelling ever.

The beaſt called a Mouſe is not much unlike a red Deare, this beaſt is as bigg as an Oxe, ſlovv of foote, headed like a Bucke, their fleſh is as good as Beefe, & their hides good for cloathing. There is good hopes that the Engliſh vvill make them tame. Abundance of them are devoured by the ravenous vvolues. The ordinarie Deare, be much bigger then the Deare of Old England, of a brighter colour, more inclyning to redd, vvith ſpotted bellies: vvhen the ſnovv is hard frozen, the Deare being heavie ſinkes into the ſnovv, the grey hounds and doggs being light, run upon the top, overtake them and pull them dovvne: ſo that ſome, by this meanes haue gotten tvventy fatt Buckes, and Does in a vvinter. The Ounce, or the vvilde Catt, is as bigg as a Mungrill dogg. This creature is by Nature fierce, and more dangerous to be met vvith all, then any other Creature, not fearing either dogg, or man. The vvolues in ſome reſpect are different from them of other Countries, being greater and much like a mungrill, big-boned, lange-paunched, deep-breaſted, having a thick necke and head, prick eares, a long ſnoute vvith dangerous teeth, long ſtaring haire; and a great buſhe tayle: and yet it vvas never knovvne, that a vvolfe ever ſett upon a man, or a vvoman. In the beginning of the Springe, theſe devouring Rangers doe moſt frequent our Engliſh habitations, followving the Deare, vvhich come doune at that time to thoſe parts. Alſo they pray upon ſvvinne, goates, & red calues, vvhich they take for Deare. The moſt of them be black, vvhoſe ſkinne and furre is vvorth five, or ſix pounds ſterling. There are alſo abundance of Birds, and of land, and vvater Fovvles: As Eagles of tvvo ſorts, one like the Eagles in Europe, the other ſomevvhat bigger vvith a great vvhite head. There be alſo diverſe kinde of Havvkes, vvhich pray upon and make havouck of Henns, Partridges, Heathcocks, and Ducks, often hindering the Fovvler of his long look't for ſhoote. The Humbird is one of the vvonders of the Countrie, being no bigger then a Hornet; yet hath all the dimenſions of a bird, as bill, and vvings vvith quills, ſpider like-leggs, ſmall clavves: for colour ſhee is as glorious as the raine bouvv; as ſhee flies, ſhe makes a litle humming noiſe like a Humble-bee, vvherefore ſhe is called the Humbird. The Pigeons of this Countrie are ſome thing differing from our Doue-houſe-pigeons in England; being more like Turtles, of the ſame colour, but haue long tailes like a Magpye. Theſe come into the Countrie to goe to the North parts in the beginning of our ſpring, and fly in ſuch multitudes for foure, of five houres together, as if the airy regiment had ben pigeons, ſeing neither beginningh nor end, length, or bredth of theſe millions of millions. At Michalmas they returne back to the Southvvard. And in the Summer they build among the Pine-trees, thirtie miles to the North-Eaſt of the Engliſh plantations; joyning neſt to neſt, and tree to tree by their nests; so that the Sunne never sees the ground in that place, from vvhence the Indians, fetch vvhole laods of them.

The Indian Country. The India Turky is a very large bird, of a black colour, yet vvhite in flesh, much bigger then our English Turkie. He hath the use of his long leggs so ready, that he can run as fast as a Dogge, and fly as vvell as a goose; of these they kill good store, for some times there vvil be 40.60. and a hundred in a flock. They liue upon acornes, haues, and berries; and in vvinter, vvhen the snovv covers the ground, they resort to the Sea shoare, to looke for shrimps, and smal fishe at a lovv tide. Such as loue Turkie hunting, must follovv it in vvinter after a nevv falne snovv: by their tracts some haue killed ten, or a dozen in halfe a day: If they can be found tovvards euening, and vvatched vvhere they peirch: if one come about ten, or eleuen a clock in the moone shine, he may shoote as often as he list, for they vvill sit, unlesse they be slenderly hurt. The Partridges be bigger then they be in England, the flesh of the Heathcock is red, and the flesh of the partridge vvhite. Pheasants be very rare, but Heathcocks and partridges be common. Besides, there are abundance of vvild Geese, Ducks, Teale, Cormorants, Herons and Cranes, almost as tall as a litle man, vvith an infinite number of other foule, and brids. The rivers abound in all manner of fresh vvater, and sea fishe. I vvil onely for brevities sake name them out of Nevv Englands prospect, as they are sett dovvne by the authour in verse.

The King of vvaters, the sea shouldering VVhale.

The English plantations. Having described the Situation of the Countrie in generall, vvith all his Commodities, arising from Land and Sea, vve vvill novv come to every severall Plantation, to giue satisfaction to the Reader, as briefly as possibly vvee may. The first plantation then to the Soutvvard is called VVessagutus, an Indian name.

VVessagutus. This is but a small village, yet very pleasant, and healthfull, having very good ground, and timber about it. Three miles to the Northvvard of this is Mount vvallaston, a very fertill soile. This

Mount vvallaston. place is called Massachusits fields vvhere the greatest Sagamore (or king) in the Countrie liued, before the great plague, vvho caused it to be cleared for himselfe. Six miles further to the North

Dorchester. lieth Dorchester vvhich is the greatest tovvne in nevv England, vvell vvooded and vvatered, very good arable grounds, and Hay-ground, cornefields, and pleasant gardens. In this plantation is a great many Cattle, as Kine, Goates and Svvine. And hath a reasonable Harbour for ships. A mile from this tovvne lieth

Roxberrie. Roxberrie, a faire and a hansome Countrie tovvne, the Inhabitants being all very rich. This tovvne lieth upon the Maine, having a brooke running through it, vvhere there are great store

Boston. of smelts, and therefore it is called smelt brooke Boston, is tvvo miles North-East from Roxberrie: his situation is very pleasant, being a Peninsula hem'd in on the South vvith the Bay of Roxberie, and on the North vvith Charls-river. On the North side of Char-

Charels Tovvne. les river is Charles Tovvne: so called from King Charles, standing upon the neck of the Land, on vvhose North-side runneth Mistick river. Here may ride 40 ships at a time, up higher is a broad Bay, being aboue tvvo miles betvveene the tvvo shores, into vvhich runns Stonie river and Mudeie river. Tovvards the south-vvest in the middle of this bay is a great Oyster banke. Tovvards

Med ford. Nevv tovvne. VVater tovvne. the North-vvest of this bay is a great Creeke, upon vvhose shore is situate the village of Medford, a very fertile, & a pleasant place; and upon the river in the bottome of the Bay lies Nevv tovvne. VVater tovvne is nothing inferiour for land, vvood, Medd-ovvs and vvater, to the others. A mile and a halfe from this tovvne is a fall of fresh vvaters, vvhich convey themselues into the Ocean through Charles river. A litle belovv this fall of vvaters, the Inhabitants of vvater Tovvne haue built a VVayre, to catch fish, vvhere in they take great store of shads and Alevviues. In tvvo tides they haue gotten one hundred thovvsand of those fishes: this is noe smal benefit to the plantation: for in diverse rivers, there are great store of Alevviues, of vvhich they make good red Herrings, in so much that they haue bene at charges to make vvayres, and Herring-houses, to dry these Alevviues in, vvhich being a staple commoditie in other Countries brings them in great profite. Mistick is three miles Mistick. from Charles tovvne by land, and stands very pleasantly, by a rivers side. At the head of this river are great and spacious ponds, vvhither the Alevviues prease to spavvne. The last tovvne in the still Bay is VVinnosimet, a very svveete place for Situation, VVinnosimet. and stands very commodiously. In the North parts lie these plantations, as Saugus, Nahant, Plimouth, Salem, Agovvamme, and Merrimack, vvhich for brevities sake vvee vvill passe over.

The Chiefe Ilands are Deare Iland, vvhich lies vvithin a flight shott of Pullin-point. This Iland is so called, because of the Deare, vvhich often svvime thither from the Maine, vvhen they are chased by the vvolues: some haue killed sixeteene Deare in a day upon this Ile. The others are Long-Iland, Nodles Ilet. Ile, and Round Isle, the Governours garden, vvhere is planted an orchard, and a vineyard vvith many other Conveniences, State Iland, Glasse Iland, and Bird Iland.

The chiefe Bayes and rivers are Massachusetts Bay, Nevv Plimouth Bay, The great Bay, Narraganscts Bay, vvith others. Bayes & rivers. Charles River, Narroganscts river, Merimock river, &c. The Capes, Capes. are Cape Charles, Cape Anne, and Cape Codd.

For the Governement of these Indians Kings: It is the cu- The Princes & Gouvernement. stome of their King to inherite; the Sonne allvvaies taking the kingdome after his fathers death. If there be no Sonne then the Queene rules; if no Queene the next to the blood royall, vvho comes in othervvise is counted but an usurping Intruder.

The Kings haue noe lavves to commaund by, nor haue they any annuall revenevves; yet commonly are so either feared, or beloued, that halfe their subjects estate is at their service, and their persons at their commaund, by vvhich commaund he is better knovvne then by any thing else. These Indians vvorship tvvo Gods: Kesan, vvho is their good God, to vvhome they Sa- Their Gods. crifice after their garners be full, and invocate this God for faire vveather, raine in time of drought, & for the recovery of their sicke. The other is the Devill, least he should doe them harme. They haue Conjurers, and Nigromancers among them, vvhich Nigromancers. they call Pou-vvovvs, betaking themselues to their exorcismes, and Negromantick charmes by vvhich they bring to passe strage things, if vve may beleeue the Indians, vvho report of one Pissacannavva, that he kan make the vvater burne, the rocks moue, the trees dance and metamorphize himselfe into a flaming man, all vvhich is but deceptio visus. But since the English frequented those parts, they daylie fall from his colours, relinquiching their former fopperies, & Idolatrie, and acknovvledg our God to be supreame. They acknovvledge the Englishmans God, becaus they could never yet haue povver by their conjurations, to damnifie the English, either in body or goods, becaus (say they) he is a good God, that sends them so many good things, so much good corne, so many Cattle, temperate raines, and faire seasons, vvhich they likevvise are the better for, since the arrivall of the English, the times and seasons being much altered in seuen, or eight yeares, freer from lightningh, and thunder, long Droughts, suddain and tempestuous, dashes of raine, and lamentable cold vvinters. They tooke te first ship they savv for a vvalking Iland, the mast to be a tree, the saile vvhite clouds, and the discharging of Ordnance, for lightning and thunder. They doe much extoll and vvonder at the English for their strange inventions, especially for a vvinde mill, vvhich in their esteeme vvas litle lesse, then the vvorlds vvonder, for the strangnesse of his vvhisking motion, and the sharpe teeth, biting the corne (as they terme it) into such small peeces: they vvhere loath at the first to come neere his long Armes: though novv they dare goe anyvvhere, so farre as they haue an English guide. They are very kind and loving to the English, and loue just and upright dealing. The English are in these tovvnes, and plantations betvveene fiue and sixe thousand Inhabitants, vvhereof they haue some tvvo thovvsand trained men, vvith good armes and some forts vvell provided vvith ordinance, and Munition, having bredd there great store of English Cattle, vvhich they preserue, and keepe for more encrease, returning many commodities from those parts into England to the enriching and benefite of the Planters & Ovvners. And thus much briefly of this Countrie, collected for the benefite of the Reader out of Nevv Englands prospect.

The deſcription of the BARMVDAS.

Temperature. Fertility.

THERE are freſh water wells and pits, digged but 4 or 5 foote from the Sea. The aire is cleare, milde, moiſt and reaſonable warme. The Soile yeelding much encreaſe, and produceth all things in abundance, that are brought thither from other Countries and parts, & becauſe the heate is not overmuch, many fruits growe not ripe: the trees are allwayes greene though ſome of the leaves fall of. They have a certaine kinde of graine called Maize, of which they make their bread of throughout all the Weſt-India. It nouriſheth and feedeth thoſe that are uſed to it better then our graine doth, and is much more fruitfull then ours: for one graine of it yeelds ſometimes a pound weight. They ſow it there twiſe a yeare (as they doe other graine) once in March, which they reape in Iuly, and againe in Auguſt, which they cutt in December. One can ſcarcely ſee there any ſignes of ſnow & yce; neither is there any great heate, ſeing the winde bloweth with coole gales, cõming out of the Sea the whole yeare through, which purges & cooles the ayre greatly. Thunder and lightning happens there more often then with us in Europe, with more fearefull claps, but doth not ſo much harme as in theſe parts. There is noe venemous beaſts, not ſo much as a ſpider, but onely a plant, which growes like beanes, or peaſe having leaves like a Vine, which hath a venemous quality, but is very weake. When the Engliſh came firſt to inhabite there, this Iland was all decked with greene trees and plants, ſome knowne, others unknowne, of diverſe ſorts, & now it abounds in all fruitfull trees, which are planted in it. The Sea and waters in and about it, abounds with delicate fiſh, whereof ſome of them are not knowne in Europe. There are alſo great ſtore of Foule and Birds. In the beginning of the yeare, they take there a great many Torteiſes, which is a great nouriſhment to the Inhabitants. The Engliſh report, that they finde there a plant which grows in the Weſt-India, called Nuchly and Tunam, from which they gather Couchenille as in Nova Hiſpania and other places, though they bring noe Couchenille out of this Iland, but a certaine fruit called by the Engliſh ſpeckle peare, which they finde in ſuch places, where noe other fruit can grow, to wit, among ſtones by the Sea-ſhore, as if it tooke delight in growing by the Sea-water.

M^r. Henry May, an Engliſh man deſcribeth this Iland in this manner: The Iland of the Barmudas are divided into many ſmall Ilands, whereof the greateſt is not above 4 or 5 miles long, and two miles & a halfe broad, planted with trees and fruits of all kindes: eſpecially Cedars and others. In the Southerne part there are ſome wilde Swyne, but are found to be leane, and not fit to be eaten, the reaſon is, becauſe this Soile is ſo hard & drye; but for other proviſions they have abundance of fiſh, Torteiſes and Foule. On the Eaſtſide are commodious Bayes and havens, where ſhips may come in and ride of 400 tonne. There is likewiſe good fiſhing for pearle. Theſe parts are very ſubject to fearefull thundrings & lightning, ſaving in the Monthes of Aprill & May, when the aire is exceeding milde, temperate and pleaſant. There is not much freſh water, but it is verely thought, that if they digg their pits deeper into the Earth, as experience hath taught them, that they ſhould finde good ſtore.

There is an other diſcription made by Sir Thomas Summers, who likewiſe ſuffred ſhipwrack here, which was the occaſion, that the Engliſh diſcovered & found out this Illand. His diſcription is this: the ſhape of this Iland (ſaith he) with the circumjacent, lyes in the forme of a halfe Moone, but ſome what rounder, being divided into many litle Iles. It hath diverſe Havens & Creekes: yet we found but one, that had a ſafe comming in & going out. At our firſt entrance into it, wee found but three fadome of water, but within it 6, 7, yea 8 fadome, being a very good harbour, & commodious for ſhips to ride in. Wee bound our ſhips with our Cables faſt to the bodies of trees: the entrance is ſo narrow, that it may eaſely be defended with Canon. There are plentie of daintie fiſh and many Swine, and birds as bigg as pigions, which lay their eggs by thouſands upon the Sea-ſhore. Ye find alſo there a kinde of Foule which dives to the bottome of the water, whoſe eggs differs litle from Henns eggs. There are abundance of Herons, and many Torteiſes of a wonderfull bigneſſe, and yeeldeth ſpeckled peares, which hang greene all the yeare long upon the trees, with white and red Mulberies: there are alſo upon them ſilke-wormes, which ſpinne white and yellow ſilke, and a kinde of Palme-tree, that beares acornes, which taſt very well, there alſo they finde orientall Pearle, good & round, as likewiſe Amber, which is much commended. Along the Coaſt, and upon the ſands, ye ſhall often ſee Sea-Monſters and huge Whales, which might eaſely be taken here (as in Greeneland) for from Ianuarij till May they play round about this Coaſt. Here alſo growes reaſonable good Tobacco.

I will conclude with a ſtrange accident, which hapned here in the yeare 1616, of five men, that put from hence to Sea in a ſmall open boate, which held not above 6 tons, and by the admirable providence of God, paſſed over, the raging Ocean with great danger in the ſpace of ſeven weekes: & arrived ſafe & ſound in Ireland. whereof noe man ever living heard the like.

Name. This Iland tooke its denomination from the firſt Diſcoverer Iohn Barmudas, being alſo called Summer-Iland, becauſe Sir Thomas Summers gave a more exact relation of them then before had bene: this Iland was likewiſe named La Garca, from the name of the firſt Engliſh ſhippe that arived in it.

Height & Site. It lyeth (as the Mexican Gulfe doth) under the heigth of 32 degrees, and 25 minutes, and of 270 degrees of longitude, from London about 3300 Engliſh miles, and from Roanack to the South Eaſtward of Virginia 500 miles. This Iland hath 400 ſmall Iles about it, & lyeth in the forme of a halfe Moone. The King of Spaine was once councelled to ſend thether a Colonie under the conduct of Harnando Camelo a Portugall, anno 1527, becauſe the ſhipping which came from the Havana to Spaine, might ſtrike ſaile there, and take in freſh water, by the Strait of Barbaham. M^r. Barbotiere a French man, by reaſon of his careleſſe ſayling ſuffred ſhipwracke there anno 1593, and ſo did likewiſe Sir Thomas Summers an Engliſh man in the yeare 1609, his ſhip ſtricking, and beating upon the Sands, and his men eſcaping, diſcovered, and vewed this Iland. Here upon it was reſolved, to ſend thither an Engliſh Colonie, who inhabite here ſtill, and manure the land ſo that in the yeare 1612, 60 Engliſh were brought thither under the conduct of Captaine Richard Moore, having bene ever ſince from time to time encreaſed. This Governour had three yeares time given him to fortifye diverſe places, & to furniſh them with ordinance, men and amunition. But it ſo fell out, that at the firſt they were troubled with a multitude of land-Mice and Ratts, which ate up and ſpoiled the fruits of the Earth, the Inhabitants knowing not how to remedie it; but as they multiplyed & encreaſed on a ſudden, ſo to the encouragemeut of the new Inhabitants, they quickly were conſumed & dyed. After Maiſter Moore, ſucceeded Maiſter Tucker as Governour, he was very diligent & laborious in planting of trees, which he brought and got out of the circumjacent Ilands in the Weſt-Indies, & alſo tilled the grounds well, reaping from them a good encreaſe, and diverſe fruits, for the maintenance of the Inhabitants and the profit of the Owners. This Iland was divided into three parts, ſo that every man had his ſhare, and might ſow or plant whatſoever he thought beſt, as ye may ſee every mans part deſcribed by number in this Map. Afterward, in the yeare 1619 Maiſter Butter was ſent Governor thither with 4 ſhips, which brought a Colonie into it of 500 Engliſh, and ſo the number of the Inhabitants were augmented. This Map alſo demonſtrates the circumjacent Ilands, with their names, as they are called by the Engliſh.

The names of the circumjacent Iles, points, Bayes, Forts and Havens.

On the Eaſt-ſide, there is a long Iland preſents it ſelfe firſt of all to your view, where the habitation is of Warcwick-fort, as alſo Sandis and Davers Forts. The weſterne part is called Burne-point, where it is very narrow, by a Bay called Worſenholm-Bay. It is called Saint Georges Iland. Cloſſe unto it lyeth a ſmall Iland with two Forts, the one called Cavendiſh Fort: the other Pagets Fort, & hard by it is a greater Iland, called S. Davids, & an other named Smiths-Iland with diverſe others. Not farre from thence lyeth Coopers Iland, and Pembrocks Fort, next theſe are the ſmall Iles Nonſuch and Moores, and the Forts called Charles Fort, and Kings Caſtle, which Iles with their circumference make a great Gulfe, called Southamptons harbour. Then have ye Long-birds Iland, & an other in Burnt-haven called Cony-Iland. The others are Walſinghams-Bay and Stockes-Bay.

The Eaſt part of the great Iland is environned with a Lake, called Haringtō-Sound, which hath a very narrow entrance into it, called the Flats. Betweene which and the point of the Northerne Iland called the Spaniſh point, lyes Brackiſh point with a Village cloſſe unto it, and not farre from this point is Abbots Bay. Now the Spaniſh point, or Cape lyeth 4 Engliſh miles from the boſome of the Flats, where the Iland is broadeſt, to wit, an Engliſh mile and a halfe over. A litle more inward from the point, is a great Gulfe called Pagets Port, at the entrance into which lyes many litle Iles. More weſtward, where this Iland turnes in the forme of the point of a halfe Moone, there ye meete with an other point called the Flemiſh Wreck, and then the Ile of Sommerſet, round about which are many ſmall Ilands. Then ye ſhall ſe Walforts-Iland, Gates-Iland, and laſtly, Ireland, betweene the two out nookes, & the aboveſaid Spaniſh point, there lyes a great Gulfe called the great Sound, in which there are ſome ſmall Iles, as Pearle-Iand, Elizabeth-Iland, Dorrell-Iland, Brothers Iland, having alſo two Bayes called White-hearne Bay, and Georges Bay. Now on the South part of the great Iland, next unto Charles-Fort lyes Harriſons-Bay, with houſes joyning to it. Three Engliſh miles from thence is Elbow-Bay: the two others Port Royall, where the Iland is narroweſt, betweene the Ocean, and the great Sound.

The nature of theſe Ilands.

Theſe Ilands are environned with Rocks, Clifts, Shelves and foule ſtonie ground, which makes the entrance into them very difficult and hard, and ſo conſequently are very ſtrong and invincible. There are but two ſafe havens without danger to come into, which are well knowne to the Engliſh, and ſtrongly fortifyed. The rocks are ſeene every low water, & when it is high water, they are not all overflowne, becauſe the Sea flowes there but five foote. The ſhoare is ſtonie and broken, and is made ſo hard by the heate of the Sunne, that the billowes of the Sea makes them not once to move: ſo that one can not call it clay or ſand, but rather of a nature betwixt them both, that which is red, is the worſt, the whitiſh is good, and the browneſt clay better, but that which is commixt with both colours is beſt of all. If one diggs into the ground three foote deepe, he ſhall finde a kinde of whitiſh Earth of a ſolid and a hard ſubſtance, into which the trees ſhoots their rootes: it is not ſo hard as a ſtone, but as dry chaulke, is ſpungie and full of chaps, ſucking in moiſture eaſely, and retaines it long.

THE DESCRIPTION OF MEXICO, OR OF NEW SPAINE.

Name.

MExico giving name to halfe America is now called Nova Hiſpania, whence the Kings of Spaine ſtile themſelues Hiſpaniarum Reges. This new Spaine is a region of a large extent, and is moſt inhabited, and mannured of any province in the new-world, being a pleasãt Countrie, and populous. This Region reacheth very farre: namely, from Taraſco or the River Grialus Weſtward, to Saint Michaels Land, and Culiacan. It is bounded on the North with Nevv-Granada, and other Mexican Countries: on the South with the ſhoare of Mare Pacificum. It lieth almoſt all of it betweene the Æquinoctiall line, and the Tropicke of Cancer: where there is litle difference betweene the length of the daies and the nights. which makes it ſeeme as a continuall ſpringe. In the months of Iune, Iuly, Auguſt, and September, it raines there almoſt continually, and the extremity of heate is by the Miſts, Dewes, and ſweete gales of winde, which comes from both the ſeas, cooled, to parallell the heate of the day.

Bounds.

Quodque die Solis violento excanduit æſtu;
Humida nox reficit, paribuſque refrigerat horis. That is:

VVhat is by day Sun-burnt, the night renevves,
And juſt as much doth coole vvith pearly devves.

Temperature.

And this is the principall cauſe that Tropicus Æſtivus may be commodiouſly inhabited, againſt te opinion of the ancient Philoſophers, & that this Region hath a temperate aire though it lie under the torrid Zone.

Mines.

Fertility.

It hath many rich mines of golde, ſilver, yron, and copper. There is alſo Caſsia Fiſtula, and ſome fruits, which the Inhabitants call Cacao, being almoſt like Almands, whereof the Natiues make a kinde of drinke much deſired of them. There is alſo abundance of Cottons, and all manner of Fruits, which grow in Europe, as Wheate, Barlie, and pot herbes in abundance, which they pull up with their handes, having alſo Lettice, Cabidges, Turneps, Garlicke, Onions, Parſley, Radiſhes, Parſnips, Carrots, Beetes, Spinage, Peaſe, Beanes, Pulſe. And for fruits Orẽges, Limmons, Citrons, Peaches, ſome Apples, and Peares, a few Damſons, abundance of figgs, and great ſtore of Quince, and Pomgranate-trees, but cherrie trees vvil not grow there. There are alſo Vines which beare grapes, but they make no wine of them. They haue alſo Oliues, Sugar, and Mulberies. In this Countrie is that excellent tree (noted by Mr. Heylin) called Metl, which they plant, and dreſſe, as wee doe our Vines. It hath 40 kinde of leaues, which ſerue for many uſes: for when they be tender, they make of them Conſerues, Paper, Flaxe, Mantles, Mats, Shooes, Girdles and Cordage. On theſe leaues growes certaine prickles, ſo ſtrong and ſharpe, that they uſe them in ſtead of Sawes. From the roote of this tree commeth a juyce like Sirrop which if jou ſeeth, it will become honey; if you purifie it, it will become ſugar: you maye alſo make wine and Vineger of it. The rinde roſted, healeth hurts & ſores, & from te top-boughes iſſueth a gumme, which is an excellẽt Antidote againſt poiſon. There are alſo many other fruits, unknovvne to us, eſpecially Maize, vvhich grovves there in abundance, and vvhereof they make their bread.

A tree of admirable uſe.

Cattle & Beaſts.

This Countrie alſo breedeth many kindes of Cattle, and Beaſts: As Sheepe, Bullockes, Kine, Goates, Svvine, Horſes, Aſſes, Mules, Doggs, Catts, and the like; Alſo Lyons, Tigers, Beares, vvilde Hogges, Foxes, and other vvilde beaſts. Alſo, Staggs and other Deere, Hares, and Connies. There is alſo a kinde of a beaſt of the bigneſſe of a pigg, vvhich hath his navell upon his back-bone: theſe run up and dovvne the vvoods in vvhole heards. There are alſo abundance of all kinde of fovvle, and birds, as Geeſe, Duckes, Indian Turkies, Henns, Quailes, and diverſe others, vvhich for brevitie I vvill paſſe ouer.

This Countrie vvas conquered by the Spainards anno 1518. under the conduct of Ferdinando Cortez; but not vvithout the loſſe, & ovverthrovve of a great many men. He had giuen him as a revvard for his ſervice from the Emperour Charles, the fifth, the Territoire of Teconanteper, lying in nevv Spaine: The Mexicans firſt vvere the Inhabitants of Nova Gallicia, vvhence they made a violent irruption, as is conjectured anno 720. They lingred in diverſe places, till the yeare 902. when under the leading of Mexi their Captaine they built the Citty of Mexico, and called it after the name of their Generall. They vvere in all ſeuen Tribes, vvhich ruled long in an Ariſtocraticall ſtate, till the moſt puiſſant of the tribes called Navatalcas, elected a king, to vvhom they ſubmitted themſelues, and ſo had nine kinges, vvhich raigned ouer them in Mexico, namely. 1. Vithzilovith. 2. Acamopitzly. 3. Chimalpapoca. 4. Izchoalt. 5. Motecumo the firſt. 6. Acacis. 7. Axiaca. 8. Antzol. & 9. Motecumo the ſecond. Theſe raigned 130 yeares, to vvit, 619 yeares ere the kingdome of Mexico vvas firſt ſubdued, and taken in by the Chichimercy. The moſt unfortunate of theſe kings vvas Motecumo, vvho in an uproare vvas brought to his end, and ſo the royall ſtemme of theſe kings failed: for he vvas vanquiſhed by Ferdinando Cortez, and Mexico made ſubject to the king of Spaine 1521. The Armie vvhich Cortez led vvith him, to conquer this ſo puiſſant and flouriſhing eſtate, conſiſted of a hundred thovvſand Indians, or Americans, 900 Spaniards onely, 80 horſe, 17 peeces of ſmal ordinance, 13 brigandines, and 6000 vvherry boates, vvhich he employed in infeſting Mexico from the Lake. Moſt of theſe 100000 Indians vvere of the Citty and territory of Tlaſcalan, vvho never held good ſide vvith the Mexicans: for vvhich cauſe, that citie enjoyeth many immunities to this day.

The ancient Kings & conqueſt of Mexico by the Spaniards.

Spaniſh Colonies.

Deviſion.

The Spaniards dvvell ſtrong in theſe parts, having ſetled there many colonies & plantations, as that of Compoſtella, Colina, Purification, Guadalajara, Mechoaca, Cacatula, Mexico and diverſe others. Nevv Spaine is divided into foure famous Provinces viz. 1. Nova Gallicia. 2. Mechuacan. 3. Guaſtachan or Guaſteran, 4. Mexico or Tremiſtian.

1. Nova Gallicia Cities.

Nova Gallicia vvas heretofore called by the Inhabitants Xaliſco vvhich vvas diſcouvered & taken by Nonnio Guſmano 1530. It is vvatred vvith the rivers of Piaſtle, and S. Sebaſtian. The principall Cities and tovvnes are 1. Xaliſco. 2. Guadalajara. 3. Capala, novv nevv Mexico. 4. Coanum, vvhere the men are content vvith one vvife, vvich is a miracle. 5. Compoſtella, vvhich is an Epiſcopall ſeate, & the reſidencie of the Kings Councill. 6. S. Eſprit. S. Conceptionis: all vvhich vvere built by Nonnio Guſman after the taking of Xaliſco. The people hereof, that liue upon the ſhoare feede moſt on fiſhe, thoſe of the Inland parts on fleſh, vvhich they take in hunting. They goe for the moſt part naked, and before the coming of the Spaniards acknovvledged no Lord, but liued in a Common libertie. That countrie vvhich lieth betvveene the tvvo rivers of Piaſtle, and S. Sebaſtian abouementioned is by a peculiar name called Couliacan. This Countrie is ſtonie & rough, as the reſt of Nova Gallicia; yet yeelding mines of golde in good plentie. The chiefe tovvne is Saint Michael, vvhere is a Colonie of Spaniards.

2. Mechuachan.

Mechuachan containeth in Circuit fortie Leagues. It is one of the beſt, and fruitfulleſt Countries of Nevv Spaine, for there is Maize, vvhich grovves ripe three times in a yeare. Beſides, it aboundeth in Mulberry-trees, Silke, Hony, VVaxe, Blacke-amber, and ſuch ſtore of fiſhe, that from thence it tooke its name Mechuoncan, ſignifying a place of fiſhing. The men are tall, ſtrong, and actiue: They ſpeake a moſt elegant, and copious language, and ſeeme to be of a very good vvit. The chiefe tovvnes are. 1. Sinſonſe, the reſidence of the old kings of this Countrie. 2. Paſcuar. 3. Colima. 4. Valedolit a Biſhops Seate. The chiefe hauens are Saint Anthonies, and S. Iames or S. Iago.

Tovvnes.

3. Guaſtacan.

Guaſtacan, is moſt poore in the naturall commodities of the Soile: but rich in the more civill life of the Inhabitants: it lyeth upon Mare del Nort, vvhere the Spaniards haue tvvo Colonies, Patinco & in S. Iames Valley. The Metropolis is Tlaſcalan the chiefe cittie of al theſe parts next unto Mexico, (unto vvhom onely it yeeldeth precedencie) are ſeated in the pleaſanteſt place of all the Countrie: rich it is, populous, and governed after the forme of a Common-vvealth, under the protection of the King of Villeriche. Spaine. 2. Villeriche a Port-tovvne very vvealthie, becauſe of all the trafficke betvvixt Old and Nevv Spaines, doth paſſe through it. The Spaniards haue in it tvvo Colonies viz. Panico, and Saint Iames in the valleyes.

4. Mexico. The Province Mexico, or Themiſtitan is not onely the greateſt, and nobleſt of Nevv Spaine, but alſo of all America. It taketh its denomination from Mexico, vvhich is the Capitall Citty of this province, the Seate of an Archbiſhop, and of the Spaniſh Vice-Roy, vvhoſe povver is to make lavves, and Ordinances, to giue directions, and determine controverſies; unleſſe it be in ſuch great cauſes, vvhich are thought fit to be referred to the Councill of Spaine. This Cittie ſtood in times paſt in the midſt of a lake, or morras before Cortez tooke it in, but is ſince ſituate by the lake ſide, and in an Iland like Venice, every vvhere interlaced vvith the pleaſant Currents of freſh and ſea vvaters, and carrying a face of more Civill government, then any of America; though nothing, if compared vvith Europe. It is very vvell built, containing ſix Italian miles in Compaſſe, being partly inhabited by Spaniards, and partly by the Natiues. Mexico ſignifieth a fountaine or a Spring: This Citty having bene ſo called from her firſt Founders, in regard of the manie fountaines and Springs that are about it. This vvas formely the braveſt and nobleſt Citty of all India: yea one of the greateſt in the vvorld. Ferdinand Cortez tooke it in Anno 1521. vvhen it vvas the Metropolis of the Mexican Empire, there vvas 70 thouſand houſes in it. The Kings Palace, and the noblemens houſes vvere faire, and large, and kept very cleanely: but the private houſes ſtood lovve, lay filthily and vvere kept ſlutiſhly.

The Citty of Mexico.

The plaine, vvherein the tovvne ſtandeth, (as Mr. Heylin relateth) is ſaid to be 70 leagues in compaſſe environned vvith high hils, on the toppes of vvhich ſnovv lieth continually. The lake on vvhoſe banke it ſtandeth, is 50 miles in compaſſe, all a long vvhoſe bankes ſtands 50 pleaſant tovvnes, and diverſe houſes: on vvhich lake alſo, 50000 vvherries are continually plying. Mexico hath novv in it 6000 houſes of Spaniards, and 60000 of Indians. It is a by-vvord, that at Mexico, there are foure faire things, viz. the Woman, the Apparell, the Horſes, & the Streetes. Here is alſo a printing houſe, an Vniverſity, and a Mint. The other chiefe Citties of this province are Villarucca, Antithero, Meccioca, Ottopan. Alſo Ieſcura a gallant tovvne, ſeated alſo upon the ſide of the lake, being almoſt as great as Mexico it ſelfe. In this province alſo lieth the Citty Angelorum, firſt called Vacipala, that is: the land of Serpents. It is famous for its drapperie. The Circumjacent plaines, fieldes, and Valleys feede many Cattle, and beare good ſtore of corne, and other fruits.

The gulfe of Mexico.

Nigh unto this Cittie is the Gulfe of Mexico, vvhoſe current is ſo ſvviſt and headie, that ſhips cannot paſſe directly to and fro; but are compelled to beare, either much North, or much South. It is 900 miles in compaſſe, and hath tvvo parts, one betvveene the fardeſt part of Iucutan, and the Ile of Cuba, at vvhich the tide vvith a violent ſtreame entreth: the other betvveene the ſaid Cuba, and the fardeſt point of Florida, at vvhich the tide vvith like violence goeth forth. The Sea is very tempeſtuous, and hath onely tvvo ſafe ports, viz. The Havana on the North ſide, and S. Iohn de Lua on the South, both ſtrongly fortifyed by the Spaniards.

The manners of the Mexicans.

The people of Mexico or Tremiſtitan, are vvittie and induſtrious, full of courage and valour, good handiecraftsmen if they giue their mindes to it, & rich marchants. In their vvarres they uſed heretofore ſlings & arrovves, but ſince the comming of the Spaniards among them, the Harquebuſe.

Lakes.

In Nevv Spaine are many Lakes, the vvaters vvhereof are ſo briniſh, that they make ſalt of them, the chiefeſt of them is called Mare Chapalicum, in regard of the greatneſſe thereof: next unto this is the lake of Mexico. It aboundeth vvith golden-Sandie rivers, and vvith fiſhe in vvhich are many Crocodiles (though not ſo bigg, as the Crocodils of Egypt) vvhich the Inhabitants eate.

Mountaines.

This Countrie alſo is full of mountaines, rocks, and clifts. The mountaine of Propochampeche is of the ſame nature vvith Ætna, and Veſuvius, caſting out great flames of fire. In the Province of Guaſtachan there are tvvo fountaines: out of the one ſpringeth blacke pitch, & out of the other red ſeething pitch.

Woods.

Moreouer, in this Region there are many Thickets, Woods and Foreſts, vvherein there grovves abundance of great bodied trees, out of the very bodie vvhereof they can make litle boates, and vvherries. There are alſo many loftie Cedars, ſo great and thicke, that they can hevv out of them foure ſquare timber 120 foote in length, and 12 foote in breath: Theſe Cedars grovves there in ſuch abundance, that they cover and overſhade vvhole Mountaines, even as our Oakes and Pine-trees doe in theſe partes.

Publike buildings.

In theſe Confines vvere heretofore many ſtately, and magnificent Temples dedicated to Idoles, & Devils, vvhich the Spaniards formerly called Cu. Amongſt the reſt that vvhich vvas in the Cittie of Mexico, vvas a famous Temple conſecrated to an Idoll, called Vitziliputzli, vvhich vvas very large, and great, vvith a faire court vvithin it.

That vvhich vvas moſt to be vvondered at in this Countrie vvas the great care & diligence, vvhich the Mexicans being Infidels had for the bringing up of their children: vvhence one might perceiue and conclude firmely, that there is nothing in the vvorld, tends more to the common vveale, and particular vvelfare of every man, then the good education of their children.

In the knovvledge of all handiecrafts, they are vvonderfull expert and ſkilfull, eſpecially in the connexing and ſetting of Feathers, & the ordering of vvilde-beaſts furrs & ſkinns: vvith plumes and feathers they knevv hovv to fovve and joyne together, vvith ſuch varietie of colours, that it is admirable to behold, and ſo induſtrious and laborious in taking this paines, that they vvould ſitt at it a vvhole day vvithout either eating or drinking, to joyne them together vvith the beſt luſtre & grace, ſome times in ſpending a good vvhile in looking onely upon one feather in the Sun-ſhine or ſide-vviſe, vvhere it and the glimps thereof might ſtand beſt. With theſe feathers they can make the Pictures and ſhapes of al kinde of Beaſts, of Flovvers, & Herbes, yea ſo cunningly, that they ſeeme rather to be living then dead.

Excellent Gold-ſmiths.

The principaleſt, & excelleneteſt of theſe Artiſans are the gold-ſmiths, vvho are ſo cunning and ingenious in this profeſſion, that vvhatſoeuer they ſee they can forge and counterfeyt it, as if it vvere living. Their moſt ſkill is in melting, vvhere by they can caſt the likeneſſe of any herbe, that you ſhall ſee vvith litle difference, betvveene the thing pourtracted, and the naturall. If one conſider vvel the Cittie of Mexico, there vvas found in it both good manners, civility, and policie: vvhich vvere in the vvhole land before it vvas ſubdued. And for as much as this Cittie, vvas the Metropolis of the Mexican Empire, all ſorts of people reſorted to it, either to dvvell there, or to uſe marchandize: yea, they had ſuch good orders amonge them, that every nation dvvelt in a place appointed for them, having a market every fifth day, vvherein they might buy abundance of all vvares and commodities. Beſides, every handiecraft and occupation had their ſeverall places ordained for them, & no man might dvvell vvithin them, but them ſelues: vvhence vve may eaſely marke, vvhat policie & government they had amonge them in times paſt. For as Xenophon vvitneſſeth, a Tovvne or a houſe cannot be better governed then vvhen every thing is ordered in its ovvne place appointed, vvhich rule vvas vvel obſerved by theſe Indians. The moſt part of this Citty of late yeares vvas drovvned & periſhed by an inundation of vvaters. This Countrie vvas exceeding populous before the arrivall of the Spaniards, vvho vvith their cruelty, and tyrannie, vvith unheard of torments, & tortures in the ſpace of 17 yeares ſlevv in this Region, and the other parts of America, ſix millions of them, roſting ſome, plucking out the eyes, cutting off the armes of others, and caſting them living to be devoured of vvilde beaſts, as a Spaniſh Biſhop, and their ovvne hiſtories relate.

The cruelty of the Spaniards in Mexicana.

THE DESCRIPTION OF FLORIDA.

Name. FLorida was first discovered by the English, under the conduct of Sebastian Cabot Anno 1467. But afterward was possessed by Iohn Ponce a Spanjard 1527. who called it Florida, either because he came first to it on Easter day, which the Spanjards call Pascha Florida: or else (as Mr Heylin saith) Quia Florida erat Regio, because it was a flourishing Countrie, and as it were ouer-decked with greene trees, and flowers. The Inhabitants call this land Iaquasa. It is a Bounds. very great, and a large province, & is bounded on the East with Mar del North, Bahama, and the Isles Leucayas: on the West with Mexico, on the North with Nova Francia, & on the South with Cuba, Iucatan, and Virginia: and by Iucatan shooteth out in the forme of an Isthmus, a hundred thousand paces, and where it is smallest, and narrowest, there it is not aboue 30 miles broad. To the Northward of Florida lie the Countries of Canada Virgina, New England, New Netherland, Auanares and Nova Francia.

Fertility. This is a very pleasant, and a fruitfull Countrie, abounding with goodly fruits, and all manner of provisions, and hath good quantity of gold and silver: Emeraulds are also found here, and here are Turquoyses and Pearles. In the months of March & Iune, they sett their Maize, which in three months growes ripe, and is carryed into Barnes. There growes also diverse other fruits, as Mulberries, Cherries, Chestnutts, Grapes, Medlars, and diverse plummes which haue a sowrish tast. They haue alsoo a kinde of roote there called Harle, whereof in time of dearth they make bread off.

Wilde Beasts. There are here also abundance of wilde Beast, as Staggs, Hindes, Goates, Beares, Leopards, Wolues, wilde Doggs, Hares, and Connies.

Foule. There are also great store of foule, and birds, as Peacocks, Turkie Cocks, Partriges, Pigeons, Stock-doues, Turtle-doues, Blackbirds, Crowes, and such like. Besides there are diverse kinde of Serpents, and a certaine Beast, which is not much unlike an African Lyon, & an other strange Animall of the shape of a Foxe, which hath a bagh, or a pouche hanging under her belly, which opens and shutts, into which shee whips her younge ones in the time of neede, and so scudds away with them.

This Region was for a time unhabited when Iohn Ponce left it, noe man daring to abide in it, by reason of the savageness, and cruelty of the Natiues, till that Ferdinandus Sotus, obtained the Government thereof from Charles the fifth, who gott togheter a good number of old souldiers, and sayled thither Anno 1534: but being too greedie and Covetuous in searching out of the gold mines, and neglecting to plant a Colonie in it, to manure the soile after he had travelled up and downe this Countrie to noe effect, dyed for very griefe: and his Associates, and souldiers were consumed, and brought to their ends by the savadges.

After this Iohn Ribaulte and his French in the raigne of Charles the nineth 1562 made a voyage into Florida, wherein they had noe good successe, nor likewise their Captaine Laudomere, who went thither in a second voyage, which tooke as litle effect: for the Spanjards envying to let the French be eye-witnesse of their rich booty, wayed warre with them so long, that they tooke their new built Castle of Carolina from them; this warre lasting so longe, that there was not a man left on either side, to maintaine the Quarrell: & Florida was againe abandonned Anno 1567.

Two yeares after Dominicus Courgues undertooke this voyage a third time, and sayled thither with 3. ships, 150 souldiers and 80. saylours, to revenge the overthrow of his nation, tooke in againe the Castle of Carolina, and slighted it, since which time the French quitted the Countrie, leaving Florida in the possession of the Spanjard, though unhabited.

The Provinces. The manners of the Natiues. The Chiefest Province of Florida, which the Spanjards discovered is Panuca, bordering upon Nova Hispania. The Inhabitants whereof are fierce, and cruell in warre: for they kill their prisoners and offer them up in sacrifice to their Gods. The men pull out the haire out of their beards, that they seeme the finer and yonger: they bore holes through their nostrills, and eares, and marry not till they be 40 yeares of age. The women when their husbands are dead, use to cutt off their haire closse to their eares, and strew it on his sepulchre,&cannot marry againe,till their haire be growne long enough to cover their shoulders. Hermophrodites are here also in great plenty, whome they use as Beasts, to carry their baggage, and to putt them to alle kinde of drudgerie. The Natiues are crafty, and very intelligent, as appeareth by the answere they gaue to Ferdinando Soto a Spainard, who was here among them Anno 1549. For when he went to persuade the people, that he was the sonne of God,&came to teach them the lawe; not so replyed a Floridan: for God never bad thee to kill, and slay us, and worke all kinde of mischiefe against us.

Next unto that lies the Province of Avanares, and Albardaosia, whereof the Natiues are subtill, and craftie, and excell diverse other Indians in manners and life. In Florida lieth also the Province of Iognasia, the Inhabitants whereof are such swift footmen,that they can fetch up a stagg, and catch him,&never grow weary; though they runne a whole day together. There are other smaller Provinces in Florida, as Apalchia, Authia, Somovia, and other.

Townes & Forts. The principall Cities are 1. Arx Carolina built by the French. 2. S. Helens, 3. S. Mathewes founded by the Spanjards. Here are also three strong forts holden by the Spanjards,and well garnisoned, viz. S. Iames, S. Philip, and S. Augustine which was taken, and burnt by S^r Franciscus Drake Anno 1586.

Rivers. This Countrie is watered everywhere with many fine rivers, which doe moisten it much. out of the Mountaines of Apalchia springs many great rivers, which carries litle peeces of gold and gild dust along with them, which the Inhabitants gathers up in litle channels that they cutt in these rivers, and from these rivers brings them to the Sea side.

Among these rivers Port Real or the Kings hauen, is accounted the chiefest. The mouth of this river is three miles broad, having also two Capes, the one turning Westward, and the other Northward.

The other rivers are, Rio Secco, Rio Grande, Caronne, Charente, Loyre, Asonne, Seyne, Ay, Serravahi, Maio, & others named so by the French. The Countrie for the most part is levell, and plaine; with few mountaines and hills, unlesse in Apalchia, where the chiefest are.

About Port Real growes many stately Ookes, & tall Cedars, in which haunts many Staggs, Deare, Indian Peacocks, and Turkies. And thus much briefly of Florida.

THE DESCRIPTION OF TERRA FIRMA, or PERVANA.

vvith the Kingdome of NOVA GRANADA, and POPAIAN.

Name.

THis part of South America, vvhich vvas at the first called Castella del Oro, and aftervvard Terra Firma, hath very narrovv limites; in regard the Audience or Court vvhich onely resideth there, for the maintenance and dispatch of the Spanish Fleetes, and for the administering of justice to the Marchants, vvhich goe and come from Peru, being from the East part to the West but ninetie Spanish miles in length, to vvit, from the Governement of Cartagena and Popajan, to Castillo de Veragua, and is in bredth from the Southerne to the Northerne Sea, vvhere it is broadest, but 60miles, & in the narrovvest place betvveene Nombre de Dios, or Puerto Belo, and the tovvne of Panama, but 18 miles.

Largenesse.

The nature of the soile.

This tract of Land is for the most part rough, barren and Montainous, full of pooles, and mooriſh grounds, vvith a thick aire, often times having many foggs and Dampes, vvhich arises from them, vvhich infects the aire, and makes it moiste, hott, and sulfrie, and therefore exceeding unhealthfull, especially, from May to November. Neither is this Countrie very fruitfull; because it wants many things, having none or litle Maize grovving in it. Notvvithstanding there are good pastures for Bullokes and Kine, vvhich feede there in great heardes. Vnder the obedience of this Audience is the Province of Veragua, and under that, as likevvise under the Province of Panama, are these Tovvnes follovving:

Panama.

Panama it selfe, being one of their chiefest tovvnes lyeth upon the Coast of the Southerne Sea, and vvas seated in a very unhealthfull place, having about 600 Burgers or inhabitants in it, the most part being Marchants. Besides, there resides the Kings Audientia, as likevvise the Kings Receiuers of toles, and other incomes.

The court or Audience.

There is also a Cathedrall Church, vvhose Bishop is Suffragan to the Arch-bishop de los Reyes, or Lima. There are likevvise three Cloisters of Fryers, and Monkes, to vvit, the Dominican, the Franciscan, and that de la Mercede.

I should vvrong my Countrie (as M^r^ Heylin saith) in concealing the vvorth of her people, if I omitted the attempt of Iohn Oxenham, one of S^r^ Francis Drakes follovvers in this place: for through these tvvo tovvnes Panama, and Nombre di Dios, commeth all the trafficke, that is betvveene Spaine and Peru: and vvhatsoeuer commodity is brought out of Peru, is unladen at Panama carryed by land to Nombre di Dios, and there shipped for Spaine, and Vice Versa. This man arriving vvith 70 companions a litle aboue these tovvnes, drevv a land his shippe, covered it vvith boughes, and marched over the land vvith his Associates, guided by Negros untill he came to a river. There he cutt dovvne vvood, made him a pinnase, entred the South Sea, vvent to the Iles of Pearles, lay there ten dayes: intercepted in tvvo Spanish shipps sixtie thovvsand pount vveight of gold: and tvvo hundred thousand pound vveight in barres of silver, and returned safely againe to the Maine-land. And though through the mutinie of his Companie, he neither returned to his Countrie, nor to his hidden ship: yet is it not an adventure to be forgotten, in that it vvas never by any other attempted, & by the Spanish vvriter vvith much admiration recorded.

Nombre di Dios, nevv Puerto de Belo.

The tovvne of Nombre di Dios vvas built Anno 1510 (as Panama likevvise) by Didacus Niquesa: for this Niquesa, having bene tossed vvith many dismall chances, and misadventures, vvhen he came hither, bad his men goe on shoare, en nombre di Dios, in the name of God, an so this tovvne vvas called Nombre di Dios. The aire in this place vvhere he built them, being very unhealthfull, the King of Spaine, Anno 1584, commanded that they should be plucked dovvne, and rebuilt in a more convenient place, vvhich vvas performed by Peter Aria, & Nombre di dios had a nevv name giuen it, and vvas called Puerto Belo, or Puerto Buenaventura, vvhich is more healthie, and a better place for the lading, and unlading of their shipping. Their Marchandize is brought tvvo vvaies from Puerto de Belo to Panama; the one over land eight miles, and the other by vvater up the riuer Chagre, vvhich lieth from Puerto de Belo 18 miles Westvvard, vvhere the river ends; there they loade their commodities upon Karres, and so brings them to Panama. Nata lieth about 30 miles Westvvard from Panama likevvise upon the Southerne Sea. The Province of Veragua lieth upon the height of ten degrees, and is bounded on the West vvith Costarica, being fifty miles in length from East to West, and some 25 in bredth. This Countrie is every vvhere hilly, full of vvoods, and trees, unprovided of Cattle, Corne and herbage, having nothing in it, but a litle Maize; othervvise it yeeldeth very rich mines of golde. The Indians here are vvell exercised and trained up in the Warres. In this Province more Westvvard, lieth the tovvne De la conception, in vvhich resides the Governour, and the Kings officiers, vvhich are sent thither from the Court of Panama: likevvise the tovvne of Trinidad, lying three miles from the Sea, one cannot come to this tovvne by Land (because there is never a vvay,) but onely by vvater.

Santa Fe hath many houses in it, vvhere they melt their gold, having diverse overseers in it. The tovvne of Carlos is seated upon the Coast of the South-Sea. All the Indians in this Audience, goe into the Warres vvith the Spanjards, as vvell those of the Southerne, as of the Northerne part of this Audience. It hath never a good haven belonging to it: yet there are these riuers, Capes, and havens, in this province, namely, the Gulfe of Crabaco, or Saint Ieromes, the riuer of Trinidad, and De la Conception, the riuer of Belon. The Ile Escudo, the riuer Chagre, the Portete, vvhich vvas the furtheſt place that Christopher Colombe discovered: the Havens Langostas, de Gallinas, Buenaventura, and Belo. The Ilands de las Miras, and de Bastimentos, the riuer Sardinia, lying to the Westvvard of Sardinia de Mayz, de Culebras, de Francisco. The Gulfe Vraba vvithin vvhich lyeth the haven of Nilcos, upon the mouth of the riuer Darien. On the Southside lieth Saint Maries Cape and the point Guierra: the Gulfe of Parita, the river Coquira, the other called de la Blasa, or Cogos, aftervvard more Southerlie is Saint Miguels gulfe, the Cape, and puerto di Pinas, Las Anegadesos, Puerto Quemado, and Capo di corientes upon the height of ten degrees.

Capes Rivers Havens and Ilands and Gulfes.

The Kingdome of Nova Granada, reacheth 300 miles from East to West and litle lesse from the South to the North part; in vvhich lyeth the Province of Granada, the Audience of S. Martha, and Cartagena, with a part of the Countrie of Popajan. This Countrie is partly plaine, and partly hillie, vvhich for the goodnesse of the Pastures, and consequently for the abundance of Cattle of diverse kindes is much commended. It yeeldeth also in many places Maize, likevvise found Corne, and other fruits of Castile. They haue there most pure gold, and copper. The Inhabitants are vvary and craftie in their trading, being cloathed in cloathes made of Cotton.

Nova Granada.

There are in this Province these tovvnes, viz. Sante Fe de Bogota, built at the foote of the hill Bogota, in vvhich the Generall Gonzalvo Ximenes planted a Colonie, the Inhabitants vvhereof being borne in Granada in Spaine called this Province & tovvne after their ovvne name. It hath in it about 600 Tovvnsmen. Here lieth the Audience, and the Receiuers of the Kings incomes. Here is a Treasurie and a Casting-house, a Cathedrall, and a Metropolitan Church, unto vvhome are Suffragans, the Bishops of Popajan, Carthagena, and S. Martha. They haue a Cloister of Dominican, and an other of gray-fryers. And besides fifty Thousand Indians tributaires. Here lies the lake of Guaravita, neere unto vvhich the Indians heretofore vvorshipped their Idoles, & offred them much golde.

Tovvnes.

Sante Fe de Bogota.

Saint Michels tovvne vvas built to the end they might trade vvith the better accommodation vvith the Indians called Panches, vvho dvvelling in a hott climate vvere constrained to goe as farre as Sante Fe to trade in a colder climate, vvhich could not be done, but to the great impairing of their health.

Saint Miguel.

The tovvne of Tocayma vvas first peopled by Ferdinand Vanegas, it lyeth upon the faire riuer Pate vvhich falleth into the riuer of Madalena, & hath a Cloister of Iacobins. There is noe gould, neither falls there any devves a nights, being the hotteſt countrie in all theſe partes: they ſpeake noe other language but that of the Panches, vvhich is moſt in uſe.

Trinidad. The tovvne of Trinidad vvas peopled by Loys Lanchere anno 1582, vvhen he vvarred againſt the Indians called Moſcas, a feare-full people it is, but very ſubtile: in this countrie is a mine of Emraulds.

De la Palma. The Tovvne de la Palma lying under a more hott, then a colder climate, vvas founded by Gutiere de Ovalla, anno 1572. and is built upon a very high mount, that it might ſerue as a Bulvvarke againſt the Indians. This Tovvne in time of vvarre muſt bring tvvo hundred horſemen into the field. This Countrie excells all other Countries in proviſions, foode, and other fruits neceſſarie for the ſuſtentation of humaine life. Beſide, here is more trading then in any other quarter of this Kingdome. There are alſo tvvo cloiſters, the one of the Dominicans, the other of the Gray-Friers.

Pamplona. The Tovvne of Pamplona lyeth 60 miles to the North-vveſt vvard of Sante Fe, built by the Commaund of Michel Diaz de Armendariz. There is great ſtore of gold and much Cattle.

Chriſtoval The tovvne of Chriſtoval vvas peopled by Franciſco de Cacyres. This is a good Countrie for the breeding, & feeding of Cattle, having not much gold in it.

Merida. Beler. The tovvne of Merida lyeth upon the confines, in a fruitfull ſoile, aſvvell for Cattle as gold. Beler lieth 13 miles Northvvard from Sante Fe, and 15 from Tunica, having a Convent of Franciſcan Monkes. Gonzalvo de Ximenes did firſt people this place: Here is a mountaine, vvhich burneth continually, caſting forth many S. Sebaſtian. Stones, and aſhes. The tovvne Mariquita othervviſe called S. Sebaſtian del Oro, lyeth 40 miles to the Northweſt of Sante Fe, and was built, and peopled anno 1551, ſeated in a valley upon the Ibagua. ridge of a hill, under a very hott climate. The towne of Ibagua was the firſt Colony, which was planted in this newe Kingdome, lying upon the Frontiers of Popajan. Andre Loper planted here a Colonie 1551, by command from the High Court, to hinder the inroads of the Indians, who quelled and troubled much the Burgers of Tocayma, and Cartago, and to keepe open the paſſage to the Audience of Popajan. The towne de la victoria de los Remedios, is exceeding rich in gold mines, called in the Mapp Sennora de los Remedios. The towne called S. Iuan de Los Lanes is Sennora de los Remedios. S. Iuan de Los Lanes. 50 miles from Sant Fe Southward, where they digg aut abundance of gold. The Governour of Vrſua puld downe the towne of Tudela, which lay in this parts, becauſe they uſed the Indians of theſe places with to much cruelty and rigor, calling the Indians Moſches. There are ſeuen places in it belonging to the Audience of Popayan, viz. Sante Fe del Antiochia, Caramanta, Arma, Anzerma, Carthago, S. Sebaſtian de la Plata, and S. Vincent de Los Paxes. Marchandizes are brought into this Countrie up the riuer of La Madaleyne, from Malambo, a towne lying in the mouth thereof. This riuer runneth with ſuch a violence into the ſea, that if the ſhipps tack not a good way about, they are in danger of being caſt away, by reaſon of the raging thereof. In the mouth of this riuer lieth an Ileland. It is navigable 150 miles into the maine land. It was called Madaleyne, becauſe it was found upon Mary Magdalens day.

The Audience and Province of S. Martha. S. Martha's Audience reacheth along the Coaſt of Terra Firma, betvveene Cartagena, and the riuer de la Hache ſome 20 miles. This tract yeeldeth much Gold, Copper and precious Stones. There are fiue places in this Audience inhabited, by the Caſtillans, vvhoſe Inhabitants are giuen much to warres. The tovvne of Santa Martha lying upon the Sea, vvas peopled by their chiefe Baſtidas Anno 1525. Here dvvells the Governour, and the Kings officers. This tovvne hath a Cathedrall Church, and a good hauen. This Audience containeth foure Provinces, Portgua, Berona, Chimica, & Tayrona, vvhich is as much to ſay as a Furnace, becauſe that in this Province they melt an infinite deale of mettals. Here Tenerifa. they finde alſo very precious Stones. Tenerifa lieth upon the riuer Madalena, in vvhich Franciſco Henrico, by the Commaund of Thamalameque, de los Reyes. Gonzalvo Peres planted here the firſt Inhabitants. Tamalameque, or Cidade de las Palmas, had Inhabitants put into it by Bartholomeo D'Alve, Anno 1561. The Cividad de los Reyes in the Valley of Vpares, lying 50 miles from Santa Martha is fruitfull in Maize, cattle, and all ſorts of Fruits, alſo in copper: here a colonie vvas placed by Captaine Santana; here lieth alſo the tovvne of Ocania, and the riuers of Bubia, Piras, and Palamino.

The Province of Cartagena. The Province, and Audience of Cartagena, reacheth a long the Coaſt of Terra Firma in length, from the riuer Madalena to the riuer Darien: but from the South to the North part is 80 miles ouer. This Countrie is Montagnious, full of Rocks, and clifts, and hath many valleyes ouergrovvne vvith vvood & buſſches: It is a moiſt and a rainie Climate. The Fruits, vvhich comes from Caſtile vvill not grovv there, neither vvill the ſoile beare Corne, nor yeeld gold, but onely in ſome places. They gather there much pitch, and ſvveete ſmelling Gummes, and other odoriferous Sapps, vvhich drop from the trees. Alſo there is Cartagena. found Dragons-blood, and precious Balſum. The tovvne of Cartagena hath aboue fiue hundred famillies in it, among vvhich there are tvvo thouſand vvomen. This is the Governours ſeate, and the Kings Receivers. There is likevviſe a Treaſurie, a Cathedrall Church, and a Convent of Iacobins. It lieth in a plaine field in a place almoſt encompaſſed on the North ſide vvith vvater. The Coaſt is broade, and ſtonie, ſhooting out in ſome places as it vvere vvith armes into the Sea. They goe out of the tovvne ouer a bridge 250 paces long into the maineland. The tovvne is vvell built, and hath fiue outright ſtreetes, vvhich goes dovvne to the Hauen, every ſtreete being 600 paces long. The hauen is accounted one of the beſt vvhich the Spanjards haue in the Weſt-Indie, though great ſhipps muſt ride a loafe from the tovvne. The firſt that diſcovered Cartagena (called before by the Natiues Calamar) vvas Roderigo de Baſtieas anno 1502, vvho made great vvarres upon the Indians, vvhoſe armes & vveapons vvere poyſoned. This Cartagena S^t. Francis Drake ſurpriſed 1585, and beſides ineſtimable Sommes of Money, tooke vvith him from thence 240 peeces of ordinance. There are other tovvnes beſides, as S. Iago de Tolu, Maria, S. Cruz de Mopox and on the other ſide of the riuer La Barranca de Melambo, A long this Coaſt lie the Iles of Tortuga Fuerte de Baru, and Caramari.

The Audience of Popayan. The Audience of Popajan, lieth under the Æquinoctiall Line, and reacheth Northvvard to Cartagena, & to Novo Regno Weſtvvard. The tovvne of Popayan, lieth Northvvard vvithin the heigth of tvvo Degrees and a halfe, of the Æquinoctiall line. The nature The qualitie of the people. and diſpoſition of the Inhabitants differs much from thoſe of Peru, if you either conſider their Spirits, their manners, their civilitie, or their innate goodneſſe, vvherein they farre excell thoſe of Peru. They dvvell in a more colder aire, and therefore more healthfull. The tovvne of Cali lieth in a Valley by the ſide of Cali. the riuer Cauca, and is the reſidencie of the Governour, and the Kings officers, having alſo their Caſting-houſes, and a Treaſurie in it for the King. There are alſo tvvo Cloiſters, one for the Auguſtines, & an other for thoſe Monkes vvhich be of the order de la Mercede. Caramanta is likevviſe ſeated upon the ſaid riuer. Caramanta. Sante Fe del Antiochia is rich in gold mines, lying in a plaine field, Sante Fe del Antiochia. the Inhabitants thereof are kind-hearted, ſtrong-bodied, vvhitiſh; the aire is there of ſuch a temper, that they may ſleepe freely in it vvithout feare. They haue abundance of Fruits and Cattle, and Lakes full of fiſhe. Caſpar de Rodas a Captayne planted a Colonie in it Anno 1541. The tovvne of S. Iago de Arma, S. Iago de Arma. hath many gould mines about it, it lies under the obedience of the Audience of Nuevo Regno as Antiochia is. The ſoile vvill beare noe corne, or Caſtilian fruits; but abundance of thoſe, vvhich nature yeeldeth there. The Cruelty and inhumanity of the Inhabitants hereof vvas ſo great in time paſt, that they ate their ovvne dead: yea they vvere ſuch Canibals, that the husband did not ſpare his ovvne vvife, the Sonne his Father, the Brother his Siſter. There vvas alſo in the tovvne of Saint Ana de Ancerma di- S. Ana de Ancerma. verſe Canibals, vvhich vvent ſtarcke-naked, having neither image nor Idoll to vvorſhip. This countrie hath neither Corne, nor Cattle, but is ſubject to fearefull Thunders, yet very happie in mines of gold. Cartago lieth in a temperate Province, vvhich affordeth not much gold. It hath many Mountaines, vvhere Lyons haunte, Tigers, vvilde Bulls, and Bagers. This Colonie vvas planted by George Robbedo, giving it this name of Carthago; Cartago. becauſe the moſt of them vvere borne at Cartago. The tovvne of Timaine. Timaine lieth vvhere the Valley of Neyva beginneth. The Natiues of this Countrie are ſo barbarous, that they ſell mans fleſh in their Shambles: in this Countrie there is a Hill, out of vvhich they digg Load-ſtones. Saint Sebaſtian de la Plata hath diverſe S. Sebaſtian de la Plata. mines of Gold, containing in circumference 24 Tribes of Indians. Here are alſo diverſe other tovvnes, as Villa de los Angelos. Neyva, S. Vincent, Almaguer, Truxillo, Madrigal, Agreda, and Paſto ſo named from the rich paſtures about it, vvith diverſe others. They haue alſo there gold mines, and 24000 Indians. When they vvere as yet gentiles, they had neither Image, nor Idoll, but imagined that after this life they ſhould come into a certaine pleaſant place, vvhere they ſhould liue in great delight and pleaſure, and that (as they ſaid) behinde ſome Mountaines, vvhich they ſhevved them.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ILANDS of CVBA, HISPANIOLA, IAMAICA, S[t]. IOHANNES, and MARGARITA.

Name. THE Iland of Cuba is ſo called by the Natiues, though the Spaniards gaue it the name of Fernandina and Ioanna; Alſo Peter Martyr witneſſeth, it was named Alpha & Omega. On the Weſt it is ſeparated from Iucatan by the Sea: on the Eaſt with the Straight, which parts it from Hiſpaniola, and on the Southſide lies Iamaica. The length of it from Eaſt to Weſt, is 300 Spaniſh miles, the bredth 15, and in ſome places alſo twentie miles. The Tropicke of Cancer cutteth it in two.

Bounds.

Forme. Thoſe which haue ſeene this Iland, compares the forme of it to a Willow leafe; becauſe it lieth much more in length then in bredth. It hath a temperate climate, but is ſome times coldiſh. The Soile is very fertile, producing braſſe of excellent perfection, but gold ſomewhat droſſie. There growes much Rubia Tinctorum, or Woad. It aboundeth alſo with Ginger, Caſſia, Maſticke, Aloes, Cinamon, Sugar, and hath of fleſh, fiſhe and fowle no ſcarcity. The people here are prohibited the eating of Serpents, as a daintie reſerued for the higher powers. In the woods are many wilde-ſwine, bullocks and kine. There are in this Iland ſixe townes, whereof the chiefeſt are Saint Iago, named ſo from Iames de Valaſco, who founded it, and is a Biſhops Seate. And Havana the ſafeſt rode for ſhips in the whole Iland, and a ſtaple of marchandize. Here rideth the King of Spaines Navie, till the time of the yeare, and the conveniency of the winde joine together, to waft them homeward to Spaine. Heere lie likewiſe ſome Gallies, to ſcowre the Coaſt from their Ennemies. This towne is ſeated upon the Northerne ſhoare. The leſſer townes are Saint Chriſtopher, and S. Trinidad.

Temperature. Fertility.

Townes.

Rivers. This Iland hath many gold-yeelding Rivers, with freſh and delicate waters, good to drinke. There are alſo many freſh and ſalt water lakes, of which they make good ſtore of ſalt. It is a rough, a high and a mountainous Countrie, out of which much gold is digged.

In this Iland not farre from the Sea ſide, there is a hill, out of which there flowes pitch, which is uſefull for the tarring of ſhips. Gonzales d'Oviedo writeth of an other ſtraunge wonder in this Iland, which is, that there is a Dale, lying betweene two hills, being about two or three miles in length, which the Ancients (as thoſe of Languedoc did) called Stone-fielde, where they finde ſtones as round as a ball, and are ſo circle-round by nature, that a Turner (if they were wood) cold not poſſibly make them rounder, being found here in ſuch abundance, that they ballace ſhips with them.

The nature and diſpoſition of the Inhabitants. The Natiues in this Iland before the Spaniards arrived here, were in times paſt contented with what nature afforded them, and liued like Tenants in common: money not being knowne amonge them, they neither quarrelled for it, nor vvere troubled with that covetous deſire. They liued among themſelues without lawes, and if any had tranſgreſſed or offended, they did juſtice, as they where tought by the law of Nature. They went for the moſt part naked, having ſeldome a garment of Cotton about them. They obſerved a ſtrange cuſtome at their marriages; for the Bridegrome lay not with his bride the firſt night, but if the Bridegrome was a Land-Lord, an other Landlord muſt lie with her that night, if a marchant, a marchant, if a peſant his Land-Lord ſhould cornute him and doe him this ſervice. Huſbands for a trifle turn'd away their wiues, if they liked them not, but the wiues for no cauſe whatſoeuer muſt forſake their huſbands. The men are much giuen here to lecherie, and luxurie. When Chriſtopher Columbus & the Spaniards tooke in firſt this Iland, it was very populous, & well inhabited, but is now inhabited onely by the Spaniards: the moſt part of the Inhabitants being famiſhed for hunger, dead with over labouring themſelues, many of them conſumed, with the Spaniſh poxe, and thouſands of them made away by the Spaniards: The remnant were ſent into Nevv Spaine, after that Cortez became maſter off it: ſo that now there are ſcarce any of the ancient Natiues living in it. Not farre from S. Trinidad, were the Lucaie, aboue 400 in number, which glorie in the matchleſſe beautie of their women, and mourne for the loſſe of a million of the Inhabitants, murdred by the Spaniards.

The Spaniards Tyrannie ouer theſe poore Ilanders.

Names. The Natiues called this Iland heretofore Haitie, & Quiſqueia, after-wards it gott the name of Cipangi, but after being diſcouered by Columbus, it was in honour of the Spaniards named Hiſpaniola, lamenting now the loſſe of three millions of her Inhabitants, murdered by her new maſters of Spaine. It was likewiſe called S. Domingo, in whoſe honour they built there a towne, which is the Metropolis ouer the others. It is in compaſſe 1400 miles, and 500 in length, the bredth being according to the promontoires, and Capes ſome times more and ſome times leſſe. Peter Martyr calleth it, The mother of all Ilands. The middle of this Iland lyeth 30 degrees from the Æquinoctiall line. Towards the North it ſhoots out ſomewhat long, from whence it growes larger, and ſpreadeth out further from Eaſt to Weſt. It hath a temperate aire, which makes the trees to be alwaies greene, and flouriſhing, very fruitfull and pleaſant. The Sugar-Canes are greater, and fuller then in other places, for one ſugar Cane hath filleth 20 & ſome times 30 meaſures, yea the fertility of the ſoile for tillage is ſuch, that here one corne yeeldeth a hundred fold. Beſides, this Iland produceth Caſſia, Ginger, Maſticke, Aloes, Cinamon, Sugar, Amber, and rich mines of gold, and ſilver, with diverſe minerals, eſpecially Azure, and abundance of ſalt.

Circuit length and bredth.

Cattle and other Beaſts. Before the arrivall of the Spaniards there were but three kind of foure footed-beaſts in this Iland, ſince it is exceedingly ſtored with all kind of foure footed Beaſts, brought hither from other Countries, ſo that now there are an incredible number of ſkins, and hides (for which they kill their cattle) tranſported from hence by ſhipping into Spaine.

Townes. There are many townes in this Iland, the chiefeſt whereof is Saint Domingo taken & ranſackt by S^r. Francis Drake, that famous & braue Sea Captaine An. 1585. It is ſeated upon the mouth of the river Ozama. Here the Kings Gouvernour holdeth his reſidencie, being alſo a Biſhops Seate. The other townes are Iſabella. S Thome which was taken in & plundred by S^r. VValter Ravvleigh, S. Iuan, Meguma, Porto di plata, Porto del Rey, Canana, Xaragua, and diverſe others.

There are alſo in this Iland, many rivers, Lakes, & Fountaines abounding in fiſhe: but the Principall rivers which yeelds the Inhabitants moſt profite and delight, fattens the ſoile, and enriches all the foure quarters of the Countrie: viz. 1. Iuna, the Eaſt. 2. Artibinnacus, the Weſt. 3. Iacchus, the North; and 4. Narhus, the South: all foure ſpringing from one Mountaine, which ſtandeth in the very midſt and Center of the Countrie.

Bainoa. There is alſo in Bainoa a huge lake, called by the Indians Haguia gabon and by us Mare Caſpium, & though it encreaceth much by the confluence of many rivers and waters which runns into it: yet hath it neuer an outlet; but is ſwallowed up through ſome ſecret whire pit under the Earth, and it is very probable, that there are ſome chaps, and holes through the Spungie Clifts and Rocks which lye about it, which drawes the ſea water to it, the likelier becauſe there are many ſea-fiſhe taken in it, and that the waters thereof are brackiſh and ſaltiſh. There are beſides this ſome other ſmaller ſalt lakes, and beſides an other great river, having brackiſh water, notwithſtanding the many freſh rivers which falls into it.

IAMAICA.

Name. Bounds. IAMAICA, or Inſula S. Iacobi, lieth to the Eaſtward of Hiſpaniola about 25. miles, and ſome 16 degrees from the Line. On the North it ſhooteth out towards the Ile of Cuba, on the South towards the Ilands of Saint Bernard, and Cartagena on the Weſt towards Iucatan, or the Honduras. This Iland is in Circuit. compas 600 miles, in length 280, and in bredth 70 miles. This Iland for the ſweetneſſe, and goodneſſe of the aire, and the fertility of the ſoile maye compare with the beſt of them in al theſe parts. There are gold mines, and they make a great benefit of Sugar, and Cotton, as alſo of diverſe kindes of beaſts. Fertility. It was once very populous, but now almoſt deſtitute of Inhabitants: The Spaniards having ſlaine in this, & the Ile of Boriquen more then 60000 living Soules: inſo much that women, as well here, as on the continent, did kill their children before they had giuen them life; that the Iſſues of their bodies, might not ſerue ſo cruell a nation. This Iland hath two townes of note: Sivill or Hiſpalis is the chiefeſt, and Oriſtana the ſecond. Sivill hath a cathedrall Church in it, and an Abbay, the Abbot whereof was that famous Hiſtoriographer Peter Martyr of Milan. In this Iland are many rivers and lakes abounding in fiſhe. The Inhabitants of this Iland for their lawes, cuſtomes, and manner, differed not much from thoſe of Cuba, and Hiſpaniola; but were more wily and craftie in their dealings.

Sivill & Oriſtana. Rivers & lakes.

S^t. IOHANNES.

Saint Iohns Iland is commonly called Puerto ricco. It was named alſo heretofore Boriquen. It is bounded on the Eaſt with S^t. Cruxes and ſome leſſer Ilands: on the Weſt with Saint Domingo's Iland, and on the South with the Cape of Paria, from whence it lieth about 136 miles. It is in length about 50, in bredth 18 miles. The North part is moſt plentifull of gold; the South part of vitall proviſions, as Birds, Cattle & Corne. The firſt that ſet foote in it was Iohn Ponce a Spaniard, Anno 1527. The principal townes are 1. S. Iohns with a good hauen. 2. Port Ricco ruined by Henry Earle of Cumberland Anno 1597. Some rivers here are, whereof the greateſt is Cairabonus taking his courſe Northward, and though this & the others carrie much corall and golden ſands along with them, yet the Northerne part (as is ſaid) is much richer in gold. The South part hath more commodious hauens, and is everywhere very fruitfull, and produceth Maize, and many other proviſions needfull for the maintenance of mans life.

MARGARITA.

THe Iland of Margarita or Pearle-Iland is otherwiſe called Cubagna, is ſituate neere unto Caſtella Aurea. It is 10 leagues in circuit, and lieth ten degrees and a halfe from the Æquinoctiall line. It is deficient in Corne, graſſe, trees, and water: in ſo much that if the People, by reaſon of the contrarineſſe of the winde, cannot get freſh water from the continent of Cumana, they would gladly change for a bucket of water, a bucket of wine. The abundance of Precious ſtones, maketh ſome amends for theſe defects; from whence the name of Margarita is impoſed upon it: in eſpeciall it yeeldeth the gemmes, which the Latine writers call Vniones; becauſe they alwaies grow in couples. Nulli duo reperiuntur indiſcreti (ſaith Plinie:) unde nomen Vnionum, ſcilicet Romanæ impoſuere deliciæ. There are abundance of Connies, fiſhe and ſalt, and excellent fiſhing for pearles. The Inhabitants are of a ſwart colour, having litle haire, and the moſt of the men without beards: they are wilde, and ſavage. They eate the oyſters out of which they take their pearles.

THE DESCRIPTION OF VENESVELA, And the Southerne part of ANDALVSIA.

THE Government of Venezuela upon the Coaſt of Terra Firma, hath on the Eaſt ſide Nova Andaluzia, on the Weſt the Government of Rio de la Hacha, & Saint Martha, being counted 130 leagues betweene theſe two Governments.

Bounds.

The Soile is very fruitfull, producing great ſtore of graine, becauſe in theſe parts they ſow, and reape their corne twiſe a yeare. They haue here alſo abundance of Cattle. It furniſheth the neighbouring Provinces, with Corne, Biſcuit, Cheeſe, and Bacon, and alſo Cotton-Linnen. But about the Hauen of Guayra within the Confines of Caracares, they haue many Bullocks hides and much Sazzaparilla. Here is excellent hunting for all kinde of game, & the river of VVara abounds in fiſhe. Which is the Cauſe, that the Natiues haue had great warres one with an other for the maſterie of this river. There are alſo in this quarter mines of gould. This great Province was by a Contract giuen by the Emperour Charles the fifth to the Velſers of Auſburg anno 1528 to conquer, who ſent thither their ſubſtitute Governours. This Countrie in every place was full of Deare, and game: when the Germans tooke upon them firſt this government, they ſought not to people it, but onely to make a prey of it, in ſo much that this Countrie was almoſt diſpeopled of its Inhabitants, the Spaniards being jealous, and diſtruſtfull added fuell tho this fire.

Fertility.

The Originals of the name.

This Province was named Venezuela, that is, Litle Venice, becauſe that when Alphonſo de Ovieda, firſt diſcovered it Anno 1499. he found in it a habitation of the Indians, whoſe houſes were built in the water upon high piles, ſtroke in cloſſe one by another, ſo thal they went from one houſe to an other ouer wodden bridges, and ſo into the maine land. This Government is exceeding great & vaſt, but chiefly within the Continent, contayning many great and large provinces, as Curiane, Cuicas, Caracas, Bariquicimeto, Tucuyo. This Countrie is very well ſeated for trading; by reaſon of the great Lake of Maracaybo, which runneth farre into the Land: for twiſe a yeare there fares from hence many ſmall veſſells, laden with meale, Biſcuit, and other Marchandize, among the which they haue good Tobacco, Hides of Beaſts, Waxe, and ſome Gold.

Deviſion.

Townes. Coro.

The Spaniards inhabite here in theſe parts eight townes, whereof Coro is accounted the chiefeſt, lying under the height of eleuen degrees to the Northward of the Æquinoctiall line. It ſtands in a good aire, but being ſeated in a plaine, wants rivers and ſprings, the Countrie about it being full of hills. This Towne Anno 1595 was ſurprized by the Engliſh, and burnt. The Indian call it Coriana. There is a Gouernour in Coro, and the Cathedrale Church is under the Dioceſſe of the Biſhop of S. Domingo. It is ſo healthfull a place, that one needes not take there much phyſick. The ſecond Towne is called Nueſtra Sennora de Carvelleda, lying in the Province of Catracas 80 leagues to the Eaſtward of Coro. It hath a dangerous, and a bad hauen.

Nueſtra Sennora de Carvalleda.

Vpon the Sea Coaſt the Spaniards haue a Fort, as ye goe to Saint Iagos, which is commonly called Caracas. It ſtands upon a hill, as high as the topp of Teneriffe, the Sea under is very cockling, and high, in ſo much that their is ill landing, but onely in a ſmall creeke, right under the fort. The Thrid is Saint Iago de Leon, lying in the ſame Province of Carracas, being ſeuen miles within the Countrie, and three leagues Southward from Carvelleda, 70 from Coro, and as much from Tucuyo: the Governour of this Province keepes his reſidencie heere: This towne was likewiſe taken in, and plundred by the Engliſh Anno 1595.

S. Iago de Leon.

The fourth is Nova Valentia, lying 60 leagues from Coro, and 25 from Saint Iago de Leon, and ſeuen from Burburata.

Nova Valentia.

The fifth is Nova Xeres, ſeated 15 leagues to the Southward of Valentia, and 20 from Nova Segovia, and 60 from Coro, being lately built.

Nova Xeres.

The ſixth is Nova Segovia, lying within the Countrie, upon the river of Bariquici meto. The Inhabitants liue here for the moſt part upon breeding of Cattle, and ſelling of Marchandize. It lyeth 20 leagues to the Southward of Xeres, & to the Eaſtward of Coro 80. Iuan de Villalogas was the firſt that planted a colonie in it.

Nova Segovia.

The ſeuenth is Tucuyo, bearing the name of a valley, where in it lies, and is 50 miles from the ſea, and 85 from Coro. There are there ſome ſugarmakers, and much Cotton gathered, there is alſo here ſome gold, and abundance of wilde beaſts.

Tucuyo.

The eigth is Truxillo, otherwiſe called Nueſtra Sennora de la Paz, being in the province of Cuicas, lying almoſt 80 miles to the Southward of Coro, & 25 from Tucuyo, and 18 leagues to the Weſtward of the Lake Maracaybo, having a village upon it, from whence they bring meale, Gammons of bacon, biſcuit and other commodities, which are tranſported from thence into other parts of the VVeſt-Indie. There is an other habitation called Lagunna, lying upon the Coaſt, 40 leagues to the Weſt-ward of Coro, towards Capo de la vela. There are many wilde beaſts, eſpecially of fierce Tigers, which by night come to teare & deuoure men in peeces.

Truxillo.

The Golfe or Lake of Maracaybo runneth fortie leagues into the Countrie, being 10 leagues broad, and 80 in circuit. It flowes and ebbs, and is ſubject to ſtormes as the ſea is, & by reaſon of the many freſh water rivers, which runns into it, the water is reaſonable good to drinke; at the end of this Lake their is a river, which cometh out of Nova Granada, along the which is great commerce & trading. About this lake inhabite the people called Pocabuyes and Alcohelados, which had once great ſtore of gold.

Iles, Capes and Heads.

The Havens, Capes and Heads of this Government, as alſo the Ilands, beginn firſt from Maracapana. The Vrchila is an Iland lying ouer againſt the river Oynare, and an other beſides named in Spaniſh Bocoa de los Iſleos. Here beginns the Cape of Cordera, and the haven of Fleſchado: Alſo Sardinus, and oppoſite to it is the Iland called Des Aves. A litle further lies the Haven of Burburata, where there are Saltpannes, and a habitation of Spaniards.

Golfes.

Sixe miles within the Continent, lieth the ſweete lake of Tocariqua, next unto this lies upon the Sea Coaſt Golfo triſte, and ouer againſt it Bonayre, likewiſe Cape Seca, and right ouer againſt it the Ile of Curacao, upon the North ſide whereof, there is good anckorage for ſhipping: a litle further to the Weſtward lyeth Curacante, and ouer againſt it Capo S. Roman, and then the Ile of Aruba. Theſe three Iles Curacao, Bonayre, and Aruba are inhabited by the Indians, which are become Chriſtians. There is in this Iland a certaine kinde of Red-wood, whereof the Dutches fetches much of it. S. Romans Cape ſhooteth out 20 leagues into the Sea, the Countrie about it is plaine, but in the midſt thereof there riſes a high mountaine, which is ſeene a great way off: next this lies Golfo de Venecuela and the river Metare with the three Ilands called Los Monges. Then Capo de Coquibocoa, 2. Baia, Honda, and 3. Del portete, and laſtly Cabo de le vela, lying under the heigth of 12 degrees, and 18 leagues from the river la Hacha. The Germans mentioned before were minded to haue built here a towne, Anno 1536; but when they ſaw that it was a plaine Countrie without any hills, barren, without fruit, and deſtitute of rivers, that the Natiues ate no Maize, but liued onely upon huntingh and fiſhing, and in ſtead of bread uſed to eate the ſeedes of herbes, deſiſted from their purpoſe, notwithſtandingh under this Cape there is a very good haven, and a firme ſand.

The river de la Hacha.

The river de la Hacha falleth into the Sea betweene Venezuela, & Saint Martha, where there is not found the leaſt ſigne of gold. Neere hereunto lyeth a place, named Nueſtra Sennora de los remedios, a thouſand paces from the ſea, upon a ſmall hill. Here they finde gold, and precious ſtones and haue many ſalt panns.

Nova Andaluſia.

Nova Andaluſia, lieth to the Eaſtward of Venezuela, and is likewiſe called Paria. It is a large Countrie, not yet wel knowne, in which there is a great river named Oronoque. Cumana is likewiſe comprehended in this province, and is a ſmall towne, lying upon the Golfe of Cariaco. Right ouer againſt it lies the famous Saltpanns of Puna de Araya, the which after they lay open many yeares for euerie man, eſpecially for our Nation, were of late yeares ſhut up by the King of Spaine, and a Fort made upon the entrance into them. The Spaniard haue here a ſtronge towne, called S. Thomas, lying upon the river of Oronoque, which diſchargeth himſelfe into the ſea with many mouths and outletts, which towne was taken in ſome yeares ſince and pillaged by S. VValter Ravvleig, a famous Sea Captaine, who was executed for it. The Spaniards were a long time eer they diſcovered this their deſired Guiane, or Dorado. Many ſmall Ilands lie upon this Coaſt, whereof the principaleſt is S. Margarita, diſcovered firſt by Chriſtopher Columbus, anno 1498. It is 15 leagues longe, and ſix broad, a very fine and a pleaſant Iland, well inhabited, lying ſix or ſeuen leages from the continent. Betweene this Iland, and the maine land, are two ſmall Iles Cubagua, and Coche. But Margarita is much commended for the many pleaſant Trees, paſtures, and the abundance of Maize which are in it.

Site. Cumana.

The river Oronoque.

There are alſo two townes belonging to the Spaniards, one lies upon the Coaſt with a Caſtle, where the Governour holds his reſidencie. The other is ſeated two miles within the Land. Vpon the North ſide of it there are ſome Shelues, and ſmall Iles called Los Teſtigos.

Our Countrie men report, that this Iland hath very high land, on both ſides is full of hills, & craggie clifts: ſo that of it ſelfe, is not able to feede the Inhabitants. There is an excellent fiſhing under this Iland for Pearle, where upon the moſt of theſe Ilanders liue.

Pearle fiſhing.

They haue here many Canovves, which putts them into the ſea, whē they fiſhe for theſe pearles. This they doe by Blackes, or Moores, (which are excellent Divers) bought for ſlaues at Capo Verde in Guinea, & Angola, and are brought thither, where they diue and ſwimme, and are kept a long time under water with great cruelty.

The Indians out of good will let the Spaniards come into this Iland, & ſhowed them this ineſtimable treaſure of fiſhing for pearles, litle regarded by them; for which the King of Spaine declared them à free people, & for his frends, and Allies, which did make them much affect the Spaniards. But at this preſent, this taking of pearle is come to nothing: ſo that this Iland is likewiſe forgotten.

The Continent of Nova Andaluſia beginneth at Cape de Salinas, and reacheth to Punta d'Araya, where there is good Saltpanns. There lies a lake of ſalt water not farre from this ſhoare, well knowne to the Netherlanders. In the Countrie round about it there are many Deare, Staggs, and Hindes, Peacocks, wilde Swine, Hares, and Connies, likewiſe harmefull creatures, as Serpents and fierce Tigers. The chiefeſt province is Cumana, lying ouer againſt S. Margaritas Iland, it is full of ſtrange beaſts, called by the Indians Caimannes, and by the Spaniards Lagantes; in ſhape much like unto a Crocodile.

A litle aboue Cumana there runnes an arme of the ſea into the continent, called Golfo di Cariaco, the Inhabitants round about it are ſavage, wilde and goe naked, which notwithſtanding when they goe to warre, they caſt a mantle about them, & adorne their heads with braue plumes of Fheathers. Vpon their feſtivall dayes they beſmeare their bodies with a kinde of faſt cleaving lime, and then cleaues fine feathers upon it. They ſhaved themſelues aboue their eares, and pull the haire from off their beards and chinns. Black teeth was in great requeſt among them, which they gott by eating of an hearbe.

Their manners.

The Maides went ſtarke naked, and made litle account and eſteeme of their virginities. They loued to haue thicke calues on their leggs, and therefore tyed them hard about with a lace, or a band, that they might ſwell and growe the bigger. The women couer their nakedneſſe downe to their knees, and liue reaſonable honeſt, and chaſt, being in the power of the huſband to puniſh adulterie. The chiefeſt of them may marrie many wiues, which they giue to their geſts, that comes to viſit them, to abuſe them as often as they liſt, and takes it as a curteſie from them. Their women, are taught to ſwimme, leape, and caper, and are not long in childbed. They binde their childrens heads with laces of Cotton, that their cheekes maye be ſmall and leane, and not fatt and thick, which they hold for an ornament.

The deſcription of

GVYANA,

Or the Kingdome of the

AMAZONS.

Name. IN the deſcription of this Province, the firſt thing that wee meete, with is the deſcription of the River of the Amazons, the Countries lying Eaſtward, then thoſe which lye betweene this River and Oronoque, and laſtly the River of Oronoque it ſelfe. This exceeding large and mighty River, is called by the Spaniards S. Iuan de los Amazonas. The Mouth of this River is very large, ſome ſay 60, others 50 leagues, and runnes with ſuch a violence & noiſe into the Sea, that it retaineth its freſh water many miles within the Sea, eſpecially in the raynie times and ſeaſons of the yeare, for then this River ſwells and riſes exceedingly, which happens commonly betweene September and March. The weſterne nooke of this river lying upō the heigth of two degrees and a halfe of the Æquator, is called Site. Cape de Nord. The exacteſt Mappe, which hath bene made hitherto, is that which makes Sapenow to lye 50 minutes to the Southward of the Æquinoctiall, and right over againſt it to the Eaſtward the Ile of Coaria, and to the weſtward of the ſaid River a litle above Sepenow. lyes a litle River Northward, called Arrowas, & to the Southward Paricores, two habitations of the Savages, and to the South-eaſtward Arrowas it ſelfe: but on the weſtſide almoſt under the line, is an other River, which makes a triangular Iland in the very mouth of it, where the Village of Matarен lyes, & a litle further into the land, Roakerie & Anarcaprock, and over againſt it South Eaſt the Ile of Sapanapoock, and Matiana right under the line, and to the Southward of the line within halfe a degree, the Ile of Coropokery. A litle further up this Kiver under the height of a degree to the Southward of the line, ye come to an other arme of this River, where there are many habitations of the Indians, as Aropoya, Corpoppy, Capitan, which in an other Mappe are called Wayecorpap, Mannetibi, Corpappi, and a litle further Matorion and Huaman two habitations of the Savages. The Inhabitants in winter time dwell in trees for feare of inundations, making on them many Artificiall Villages, and ranges of building. The Netherlanders built upon the mouth of this River 2 ſmall Forts, the one called Naſſaw, the other Orange, but afterwards left them.

In the Mouth of this River there lyes an Ileland called Conney-Ile under the heigth of 2 degrees, and 45 minutes. Thirty leagues to the weſtward lyes Crabbepoere, or Carripapoori, as ſome call them, being many litle Ilands. From thence to the weſtward, as farre as the nooke of the Bay, and River of Wiapoco, ye come to many Rivers. Mr. Harecourt placeth in this diſtance theſe places, Arrapoco, Arawary, Micary, Conawiny & Caſſipurog: the River Arrikary lyeth under the heigth of 2 degrees: the River Wiapoco lyeth under the heigth of almoſt 4 degrees Northward, being at the Mouth two fadome deepe. The Indians there abouts are of the offſpring of the Iayos or Copayas, though others thinke they come from the Arwaccas.

The ſituation of this Countrie upon the Sea-coaſt is very unhealthfull: this River hath many falls of water, the one higher the other lower, which one can hardly het up, eſpecially in the Month of Auguſt. Upon the Northweſt-ſide of this river, lyeth the Mountaine Gomeribo, at the foote whereof growes Tobacco, Maize, Cotton-trees, Annoto-trees, Vineyards, & ſome other plantations. On the North-ſide of this River lye rowes of very high hills, reaching unto the River of Apurwaca, the Soile being good to plant Tobacco in it.

The Seaſons of the yeare upon this Coaſt, & in this climate is differing, for in the Orientall parts of Guyana, next the Amazons, it beginneth to be dry weather in Auguſt, which they call Summer, & the winde & raine which makes their Winter beginneth in Februarie. But in the weſterne parts, which lye towards the Oronoque, their Summer beginneth in October, and the raine and winter in Aprill. There are litle difference betweene heate & colde, becauſe theſe Countries lyes ſo under the Æquinoctiall, and that the dayes & nights be of an equall length. Theſe people make no diviſion Manners. or calculation of times & numbers, but reckon by the Moones, as 1, 2, 3 Moones, &c. And for their dayes, they count them from one to ten, and then backward from ten to one againe: and for the better expreſſion of their mindes, when they tell 20, they put up their fingers & lay their hands upon their feete. When they promiſſe to pay any thing within the ſpace of certaine dayes, they will give one a litle bundle of ſticks of the ſame number, which they keepe, and every day till the appointed day be expired, will take away one ſtick from the bundle, till they have the laſt, & ſo they know their promiſſed time is out, and that they muſt keepe their promiſe and pay their Creditours. They are of noe Religion, yet make they great account of the Sun and the Moone, but never adore them, nor ſacrifices any thing unto them, unleſſe they uſe ſome ſuperſtition in their drunken Feaſts. For when any of their Caſiques, Captaines or frends come to die, they keepe a ſolemne feaſt for 3 or 4 dayes, or as long as their drinke laſts, paſſing that time away in dancing, leaping & ſinging: in which vices they put done all other Indians, holding him for the braveſt fellow, who is firſt drunke, now while the men be a drinking, ſome woemen of their neereſt kindred of the dead, makes a houling noiſe, and cry: and this is their kinde of ſuperſtition. Sure it is alſo, that their Prieſts or Sooth-ſayers which they terme Peenios, have ſometimes conference with the Devill, whome they call Wattipa, and are often deceived by him: nevertheleſſe they hate and feare him exceedingly, and ſay he is the evill one, and not without cauſe, for he oftentimes beates then black & blew. Afterward wee found, that they worſhipped likewiſe one Tamauco, who as they ſay dwells above, & governs all thing. They beleeve that the good Indians after their death goes to Heaven, which they call Caupo, & that the wicked diſcend downewards pointing to the Earth, which they call Soy. If any of their Pacigues or chiefe men dye, if he hath any Slaves or Priſonners, they will likewiſe kill them, if not, one of their ſervants, which muſt ſerve him in the world to come.

The qualitie of the land in theſe quarters is diverſe

AMSTELODAMI, Henricus Hondius excudit.

The nature & quality of the land. by the Sea-side the land lyes low, and is extreame hot, but that sometimes the aire is refreshed with coole Briezes or gales of winde, which comes out of the Sea, and from the East, and in the very heate of the day blowes strongest. In many places these low grounds are very unhealthfull, and litle inhabited, by reason of the overflowing of the water. But for the most part there are many fine Rivers in it, and is a fruitfull Soile, well peopled, and hath an wholesome aire.

The fruits of the Country. The provisions in this countrie are many, as first the roote of Cassavi, whereof they backe their bread as followeth: they breake this roote upon a stone, and squize the juyce out of it, which being raw is poyson, but being sod with Guinea Pepper, whereof they have abundance, this giveth it an excellent and savoury tast: then they dry these broken roots, and bakes them upon a stone, in the same manner as they doe Oaten-cakes: these make excellent bread much like but farre better then Oaten-cakes, being a finger thicke.

Their bread and drinke. There is also a kinde of great Wheate, called by some Maize, and by others Guinycorne, which graine is very good for this Countrie, and doth so encrease, that one corne of it yeeldes a thousand, yea fifteene hundred, and sometimes more. It maketh good meale for bread, and good malt for beare or ale, and is of diverse other necessarie uses for the sustentation of man: for this Cassavi bread & their Indian Wheate make a kind of drinke, which they terme Passiauw, that must be drunke out within 4 or 5 dayes: they make an other kinde of drinke of Cassavi, which they call Parranow, which is strong and good, & tasts much like unto your March-beare in England, and this will last good at least ten dayes. There is also abundance of Hony, & though it be wilde hony, being found in hollow trees, & holes in the ground, yet it is as good as is any in the world, whereof they can make good Methegline: there growes noe Vines, notwithstanding the Soile being fatt, fruitfull, and the climate warme, they would grow if they were planted there.

Beasts. There are also many other necessaries, needfull for the sustenstation of humaine life: namely, all kinde of Deare, abundance of wilde Swine, of which there are two kindes: the lesser is called by the Savages Pockiero, which hath his navell upon his back: the other is named Pangio, being as faire and as great as there be any in England: there are moreover abundance of Hares, Conneyes, but differs from ours: also for wilde beasts, there are Tygers, Leopards, Ounces, Catta Mountaines, Maipuries, Baremoes, Apes and Monckies of diverse sorts: there are a multitude of these Beasts, and some more strange.

For Foule and Birds you have there great store, as wilde Ducks, Teale, wilde Geese, Herons of diverse colours, Cranes, Storkes, Phesants, Doves, Thrushes and Black-birds, Bittours, Woodcocks, Snipes, Parrets of many colours, and diverse other kinde of great Foule and Birds, besides many preying Foule and Haukes of all sorts.

For fish here is great varietie, & besides those which are knowne to us, there is a kinde of fish, named by the Indians Cassoorwa, which hath in each eye two sights, & in swimming beares the one of them above, and the other under the water, the ribes and back-bone of it, is like the ribes, and back of a man.

Diversity of Fruits. There are also diverse kinde of Fruites, as the Pinna, Plantana and Potato: the Pinna tasts like a strawberrie, if ye put wine and sugar to it: the Plantana eates like an English Pippin, the Potato is well knowne: the Plummes that grow there, are not very good, because they breede the fluxe, which is dangerous in these Countries. The Nuts are good if ye eate not to manie of them. Sundry commodities. The chiefest commoditie of this Countrie, is your Sugar-canes, whereof there growes abundance in this quarter, and the Soile is so fit thereunto, as there is in any place of the world, and grow here in a short time very great: in so much, that if the Indians had but that skill, to make Sugar out of them, as the Brasilians doe, it would bring them in an incredible profite. Cotton is there a cõmon commoditie, whereof the Natives make bedds, called Hamaccas. There is also a kinde of hempe or flaxe of great use, being almost as fine as silke, and is excellent good to make linnen of. They have there singular Dyes, whereof one is called Annoto, a red berrie, which being prepared & used as it ought, dyes a good Orange-tawnie colour: there is likewise a certaine Gumme taken from a tree, which dies a good yellow, and there are some leaves of a tree, which dies a scarlet, or a deepe red colour, and likewise some kinde of wood, whereof the one dies a purple and the other a yellow. Here are found also precious stones, as Iaspes, Porphyr, &c. Finally, here growes good Tobacco, and great hopes of finding rich mines.

The River Oronoque separateth Nova Andalusia from Guyana, & was called heretofore by the Spaniards Orellana. The Spaniards and the English report strange things of this River, thinking that one may saile up it to Golden Guyana, and the Cittie of Manao, being the greatest of America, yea as some relate of the world too. But this passage hath cost the Spaniards manie men, & much money to search it out, but all in vaine. The head of this River beginneth first in Nuevo Reyno de Granada, and is there called Tuipari: the mouth of this River lyeth under the heigth of 18 degrees, and 50 minutes. Upon the same also lyeth the Province Amapaia, rich in golde, but hath a low site. The waters and Rivers which runne through Moorish, and filthie places are reddish, being full of a small venemous beast which spoiles them, and makes them dangerous to drinke. Now this Guyana whereof wee speake, is environned with high Muuntaines, as ye may see in the Mappe. The inmost parts are not yet knowne to our people. But it is reported that Diego Ordas a Spaniard, one of the Companions of Corter, is said to have entred into Manao at noone, and to have travelled all that day, and the next also, untill night through the streets thereof, before he came to the Kings Pallace. This Citty is situate on a Lake of salt water 200 leagues in length, called Iaos or Charibes Parime, & is by the Spanjards called El Dorado, from the abundance of gold, both in coine, Plate-Armour, & other furniture, which the said Diego Ordas there saw.

The deſcription of

BRASILE.

Name.

THE King of Spaine in the name of the Kingdome of Portugall poſſeſſeth in America the region of Braſile, lying to the Southward of the line, which the Pottugals called the Province of the H. Croſſe. This large Countrie being firſt diſcovered by Peter Alvary Capraly, at the expences of Emanuel King of Portugall 1500, but was more exactly ſurveighed by Americus Veſpuccius, at the charge of the ſaid Emanuell: next by Iohn di Empoli, a Florentine 1503. Afterward by Iohn Stadius a German 1554, and was by the Edict of Pope Alexander the 6. appropriate, & given to the Portugals, the reſt of America being allotted to the Caſtilians.

Bounds.

Braſile hath on the North Guiana, on the South Rio de la Plate & Chile: on the Eaſt the Vergivian Ocean, & on the Weſt the Mountaines of Peru, called the Andes. It beginneth in the opinion of Nicolas d'Oliveira, at Para, which is a Caſtle of the Portugals, lying upon an arme of the mightie River of the Amazons, within 2 degrees to the Southward of the Æquator, or as ſome ſay from the River or the Iland of Marannon, and reacheth from the North-Sea to the Eaſt, which tract is called North Braſile, and from thence turning with a nooke by Capo S. Auguſtine towards the South, beyond the Tropike of Capricorne, to the height of 35 degrees, of the Equinoctiall line Southward, containing 1041 miles in length, which was once all under the juriſdiction of the Portugals: the ſame Author divides this countrie into 14 Capitanias, or Governments, ſo called by the Portugalls: namely, the Capitania of Para, Maranhaon, Ciara, Rio Grande, Parayba, Tamaraca, Pernambuco, Seregipe, Bahia, Ilheos, Spiritu Sancto, Porto Seguro, Rio de Ianeyro and S. Vincente, whereof 6 of them have their owne Lords, which tooke them in by force of armes, and are yet to this day in their owne poſſeſſion: the others belong unto the King. The breadth betweene them is differing, from Para the 1 Capitania, to Maranhaon the 2 is counted 160 miles, & from thence to Ciara 125, & from thence to Rio Grande 100, frō thence it is counted 45 to Parayba, & from thence to Tamarica 25, & from Tamarica to Parnambuco 6, from thence to Seregipe 70, from Seregipe to the Bay de Todos los Sanctos 25, from thence to Ilheos 30, from Ilheos to Porto Seguro 30, & from thence to Spiritu Sancto 65, from thence to Rio Ianeyro 75, and laſtly from S. Vincent to the arme of the River de la Plata 220 miles. But in Herrera his opinion and ſome others, Braſil reaches not ſo farre; but onely comprehends that tract of land, which lyeth betweene the Æquator, & the Tropike of Capricorne, and which was given to the King of Portugall from the 29 degree of longitude, unto the 39 degree, that is, from the Meridianus Toletanus 200 miles from Eaſt to Weſt; but from the North to the South 450 miles, betweene the ſecond degree Boreall, or Northward, to the Auſtriall, or Southward, to wit, from the Cape de Humos, to the Iland of Boienabrigo, ſo that from the firſt Colonie of the Portugals, to the furtheſt is counted 350 miles. This Authour maketh mention of no more then 8 Capitanias, among the which the chiefeſt and ancienteſt is Tamaraca, Pernambuco, Todos los Sanctos, Los Ilheos, Porto Seguro, Spiritu Sancto, Ianeyro and S. Vincents. Unto theſe have bene added ſince the Capitania de Parayba.

Vincent Ianiez Pinzon, by order from the Catholique King, and after him Diego de Lepe in the yeare 1500, and 7 months after Pedro Alvarez Cabral, arrived here unexpected by ſtormes in this Countrie, when they intended to have gone with a Portugall navie into the Eaſt-India, and ſeeking to ſhunne too much the coaſt of Guinea, fell upon this coaſt which they named Santa Cruz, becauſe they diſcovered it upon this holy day.

Bayes and Rivers.

There lyes upon this coaſt 8 or nine brave Bayes & Havens, beſides many famous Rivers, as firſt Rio Sancto Domingo & de las Virtudes, S. Franciſcoes, lying under the height of 10 degrees & a halfe: a litle further ye have the Bay or Gulfe of Todos los Sanctos, being at the mouth three miles broad, and runneth into the countrie 13 miles, as farre as Sancto Salvador. Then have ye the River and haven of Tranado, where many paſſing that way refreſh themſelves: the River Canamum lyeth in the heigth of 14 degrees: S. Auſtins River, otherwiſe called las Cuentas lyeth in the heigth of 14 degrees, and a halfe: the River de las Virgines under the heigth of 16 degrees. Porto Seguro in the 17, Paraiba by the River Spiritu Sancto 20 degrees: & laſtly S. Vincent 24 degrees.

Petrus Maffeus writeth, that this territoire extendeth from the ſecond degree of the Æquator, to the 45 of the Southerne latitude, and lyeth in the forme of a triangle, the Baſis whereof windeth towards the Æquatour and the North, & from the Eaſt to the Weſt, as it were in a right line: the utmoſt confines to the Southward butteth upon unknowne Countries: the Eaſtſide lyeth over againſt the Æthiopis Heſperios, being ſeparated from them by the maine Ocean: the other ſide is ſhut in from Peru with the hideous high Mountaines, which they report a Foule canſcarcely fly over, much leſſe to be climed over, ſeing that to this day there is but one knowne paſſage over them. The aire here is of a healthfull and a ſweete temper, & the whole land flouriſhing & pleaſant: having many coole gales, comming out of the Sea, which allayes the heate, and refreſhes the aire. The whole Region is full of ſweete ſprings, Rivers and fine Woods, where the trees are of that bigneſſe, that whole famillies live in an arme of thē, every tree being as populous as many of our Villages: the wood whereof is called Braſile or Farnambuck-wood, being red and excellent good for dying, & colouring of red cloth: among the Rivers there is the famous River called Rio de la Plata, or the ſilver River, which runnes with ſuch a foaming noiſe into the Sea, that Mariners report, they have taken up freſh water that comes out of it before they diſcovered the ſhore. The Soile is fatt, being partly plaine, and partly hillie, which beareth all kinde of graine with good encreaſe, and eſpecially great ſtore of Sugars, being rich alſo in Mines: this gift from Heaven excelleth farre in ſweetneſſe your Atticke honey: it groweth upon high canes, out of which they preſſe a moſt ſweete liquor, which is ſod in Copper Kettles or Caldrons, & afterward made up in ſugar loaves: they ſeeth it oftentimes twiſe, and make of it all kinde of formes and figures, which they die with colours. There are abundance of Sugar-mils in this Countrie, which the Portugals call Ingenios, ſo that they tranſport from thence to Liſbon in Portugall onely, every yeare 26000 cheſts of Sugar, each cheſt coſting at the leaſt 25 pounds, this was done in the yeare 1617, in which year there arrived alſo at Viana 5000 Surgar-cheſts: beſides more, which came into the other Havens of Portugall, which without all queſtiō were many. For theſe Sugar-cheſts, they muſt pay a cuſtome of 10 the hundred to the King of Spaine for which he is bound to keepe & defende them: aſſoone as they arrive with this Sugar in Portugall, they muſt alſo pay 20 per cento.

Likewiſe there are ſome herbes & rootes, called by the Inhabitants Copagba, which if you peele off the rinde, there runs out of it a delicate ſapp like Balme, the vertue whereof is highly eſteemed, & ſoone cures wounds. They finde often by the leaves of it, that when a Beaſt is ſtung with a Snake or a Serpent, or elſe being bitten by ſome cruell Beaſt, they come & have their recourſe to this herbe, as if it were by the inſtinct of nature to heale them. Here is alſo an herbe called Sentida or Viva, w^ch^ if one touch, it will ſhut its leaves and not open them, till the man, which did diſpleaſe it be gone out of ſight. The Zabucales as they terme them grow high, and beare an exceeding hard ſhell in the forme of a cup, hanging down to the ground ward, are full of Cheſt-nuts, having a pleaſant taſt, which being ripe, falls downe of themſelves one after an other. The Cajuſies are a kinde of wilde peares, full of juyce, not hurtfull, but may be eaten in the heate of the day with great deſire: Among theſe Peares, there growes very great beans, which hath a very bitter ſhale, which nevertheleſſe being layd in water to ſteepe, growes ſweete and delicate: theſe Peares cooles one, and the beanes are hott. Above all fruits the Ananazes are highly ſett by: for the daintineſſe of them, which is a tree, upon the branches whereof hangs fine Nuts, the which being gathered in ſeaſon, and cut in peeces, makes not onely a ſavourie diſh, but may alſo be kept long without Sugar: there are alſo Melons, Pompians, Coucumbers, Pom-granates, Qunices, Figgs & Vines, which beare twiſe or thrice grapes in a yeare: there are alſo many Phyſicall hearbs and ſimples, which are brought out of theſe parts, & growes there: there are likewiſe many ſorts of wilde beaſts, among the reſt, there is a kinde of a wilde Swine, which lives aſwell in the water as on the land, and is good meate to eate, it hath a ſlow gate, becauſe the fore feete are very ſhort, and the hindmoſt very long, when the Huntſ-men ſeeks to catch him, he dives downe into the next water, that they cannot finde him. The Antes are much like unto Mules, but are leſſe, having a very ſmall ſnout, ſaving the undermoſt lip, which is as long as a trumpet, having round eares, & a ſhort tayle, flying the light, and ſeeking their prey in the night. The Cotia is of the biggneſſe of a Hare, and taſts like one: having eares like a prick eard curre, with a ſmall tayle, being a litle greater then the others, w^ch^ they call Paca, which is almoſt like a Catt, but of a duſkiſh colour, mixed with white ſpots, the fleſh whereof is good meate. Beaſts.

The Tatuſes are ſtrange Creatures to beholde, of the bigneſſe of a good pigge, the hide whereof covers it as it were with a target, ſo that it lyes like a Snaile in a ſhell, and puts out its head and leggs, as a Torteize, and puls them in againe: the Cerigenes have 2 baggs hanging under their bellies, in which they carry their yonglings, it is a beaſt of a ſtrange nature and quality, which the Portugals calls Pareſſa, that is lazie bones, becauſe of the ſlowneſſe thereof: there is alſo an other litle beaſt, which cannot goe in leſſe then fourteene dayes, as farre as a man can throw a ſtone, and is therefore called by the Spaniards Pigritia.

The Natives worſhip noe God, but are ſo mightily adicted to ſoothſaying, and telling of things to come, that they oftentimes goe out of their wits, and grow madde. Howſoever, the people are endowed with a pretty underſtanding, as may ſeeme by him, who tartly blamed the covetouſneſſe of the Spaniards, for comming from the other end of the world, to digg for gold and holding up a wedge of gold, cryed out Behold the God of the Chriſtians; but in moſt places they are Barbarous. Men and Women goe ſtarke naked, and on high Feſtivall dayes, hang Jewels in their lips. Theſe Feſtivall dayes are, when a companie of good Neighbours come together, to be merry over the roaſted body of a fatt man, whome they cut in collops, called Boucon, and eate them up with great greedineſſe and dilectation, ſuch Canibals are ſome of them. They have two vile qualities, as being mindefull of injuries, and forgetfull of benefits: the Men are cruell without meaſure, & the Women infinitely laſcivious. They cannot pronounce the letters L. F. and R. the reaſon of which one being demanded, made anſwere, becauſe they had amongſt them neither Law, Faith nor rulers. They are ſtrongly limmed, and are able ſwimmers, as well women as men, & will ſtay under water an houre together. Women in travell are here ſoone delivered without any great paine, and preſently goe about their buſineſſe, belonging to good houſe wives, they weare long haire on their heads, letting it fly at length, but can not endure any haire in any part of their bodies: they runne together confuſedly in troopes, in a ſtraing manner, & w^th^ great ſilence, the women going before, and their huſbands following them. Hitherto they made their bread, and preſſed their Wine out of the roote called Mandioca, whereof they alſo make meale. Many houſholds and famillies live together under one roofe, which is long in the forme of a long ſhip, which is turned upſide down. A nights they lye in their Hamacks or hanging nets, leaſt they ſhould be troubled with any vermine or flies. Their Ennemies, which they take in the warres, they firſt make them fatt, and then roaſt them, and dancing round about them, eates them up as is already ſaid.

There are diverſe townes amongſt, which theſe are the chiefeſt, as S. Salvador, or Bahia de Todos los Sanctos, in which the Viceroy or Governour with the Biſhop keepes their reſidencie. The Weſt-Indian Companie in the United Netherlands, being erected anno 1623, ſent a fleete thither under the commaund of their Admirall Iacob Willekes, and the land Souldiers under the conduct of Colonell Dort. Theſe ſet ſaile with 26 good ſhips out of the Netherlands the 21 of December, & arrived the 29 of Ianuarij 1624 new ſtile in the Bay of S. Vincent, & on the weſtſide of the Salt-Ilands, which place was their rendevous. They ſett ſaile from thence the 12 of Aprill, and the 6 of May came into the Bay de Todos los Sanctos to ſurpriſe, and make themſelves maſter of the towne of S. Salvador, which notwithſtanding was well provided for a ſudden attempt, as well with ammunition, ordinance, as with 2500 men. Nevertheleſſe our Souldiers being ſet a land, in foure ſmall ſhips, tooke in the Suburbs in the night, & ſtaying in them all night, they entred the towne the next morning, on the 10 of May, &c. Townes.

The Marchandiſes, which comes from Braſile into Europe, are Ambergris, precious Balſum, Braſill wood, for dying and ſtaves, Tobacco, Pepper, Ginger, and abundance of Sugar, and hides of Beaſts.

THE DESCRIPTION
Of the Golden Kingdome
OF PERV.

The Name.

Bounds.

Extention.

NEXT vnto Popayan lieth Peru, the nobleſt, richeſt, and greateſt Province of all America, or the nevv vvorld. It is bounded on the North vvith Popayan: on the Weſt vvith Mare Pacificum, or Del zur: on the Eaſt vvith the Peruvian mountaines, and the unknovvne Countries: and on the South vvith the Kingdome of Chili. It reacheth from the North to the South ſixe hundred Spaniſh miles in length, & from the Sea-ſide to the high mountaines commonly fifty miles in bredth, and in ſome places more, or leſſe.

Temperature. Soile. & Fertility.

The ſoile is fruitfull in all manner of graine, fortunate in the civilitie of her Inhabitants, frequencie of Citties and Salubritie of aire, yet in ſome parts the aire is various, and changeable: for under one Climate you ſhall finde it extreame hott, temperate, and exceeding colde.

Mines of Gold and Silver.

This Province aboue any other in America, is abundant in rich mines of Gold, and Silver: the mines vvhereof in diverſe places yeeld more of theſe mettalles then of Earth: by vvhich abundance, not Spaine onely, but all Europe alſo is more ſtored vvith pure and fine Coine, then ever formerly it vvas.

Deviſion.

This vvhole Kingdome is governed by a Vice-Roy, but divided into three Circles, vvhich the Spanjards tearme Audientias. The firſt is called Quito, the ſecond Lima, & the third Las Charcas, or La Plata, or ſilver Circle.

The circle or Audience of Quito.

The Audience of Quito is 120 or 180 miles in length, and ſome 30, or 40 in bredth. The Spanjards inhabite theſe tovvnes followving.

The cittie of Saint Franciſco, or Quito, vvhich is commonly held to lye vvithin 30 ſcruples of the Æquator South vvard, is ſeated in a fruitfull and a temperate ſoile, being rich, and populous, and almoſt as vvealthie as the Capitall Citty it ſelfe: for the Countrie round about it is alvvaies greene, & full of fruits, vvhere there proſpers and grovves your European fruits abundantly, having alſo all kind of tame Cattel, great ſtore of Gold, & a ſpeciall kinde of Quick-ſilver, vvhich is as yellovv as Saffran.

Rhiobamba.

The Tovvne of Rhiobamba lieth 22 Spaniſh miles from Quito, and is a place vvhere many Heardſ-men dvvell.

Puerto Viego.

Puerto Viego lieth upon Mar del zur, almoſt vvithin a degree Southvvard of the Æquinoctiall line; being 80 miles from Saint Franciſco's, vvhich lieth to the Weſtvvard of it. There is a very troubleſome and a hard vvay to it: it is novv not ſo riche as it had vvont to be; becauſe the Smarages, vvhich came frō thence, are not in ſuch great requeſt as they haue beene. Here the ſextons in digging up of graves finde many times the teeth of men vvhich are three fingers broad.

Guayaquil.

The tovvne of Guayaquil, lying upon the river Guayaquil, hath its hauen upon the Ile of Puna. It vvas heretofore famous, and is yet in good eſteeme, becauſe of the timber it affordeth for ſhipping.

Cuenca.

Cuenca, or Bamba is ſo called by the Natiues, & lieth 50 miles Southvvard from Saint Franciſco.

Loxa.

Loxa of Zarſa lieth 16 miles to the Southvvard of Cuenca. Zamora 80 miles from Quito and Saen, and is accounted to be 55 miles from Loxa.

S. Michaels.

S. Michaels vvas the firſt Colonie, vvhich the Spanjard placed in theſe parts, and lieth in the Dale of Prura 120 miles to the Southvvard of Quito. It hath a reaſonable good hauen called Peyta, being vvithin 5 degrees, and ſome ſcruples from the Æquinoctiall line to the Southvvard, and vvithin 25 miles of the ſaid citty. On the Weſtſide of the haven lieth a ſmall tovvne, vvhich vvas taken in, and pillaged by the English.

In the Province de Los Quixos are foure tovvnes, namely Baſa, Archidona, Avila, and Sevilla del Ora. This Province lieth in the territoire of Quito Weſtvvard, is very hot, but by the continuall ſhovvers of raine much moyſtned.

Theſe three tovvnes are in the Province of Brocomororum, or Guarſongo. viz. Vallodolit beyond the Mountaines of Andes, being 20 miles from Loxa, Loyola, or Combinama and S. Iago de las Montannas, in a Countrie rich in Gold, vvhich puttes dovvne all the neigbouring Countries about it for fineſſe of gold. This Province lyeth to the Southvvard of theſe Countries before mentioned.

The audience of Lima.

The Audientia of Lima, beginneth vvithin ſix degrees of the Altitude, and endeth vvithin 16, or 17 degrees of the Southerne Latitude. This Audience runneth alonge the Coaſt of the South-Sea almoſt 300 miles, and is not much leſſe in bredth: In vvhich the Spanjardes poſſeſſe theſe tovvnes.

Lima.

Lima, or Los Reyes is the Metropolis of this Countrie, and is a very rich marchant tovvne, though it be ſeated tvvo leagues vvithin the land from the Sea: yet it hath a very faire hauen, and a large Gulfe to come into, which is ſhutt in vvith an Iland, lying over againſt it, called Collao. It is built vvith much art, for all the chiefe Streetes anſvvere to the market place, and there is ſcarce any private houſe, vvhich hath not vvater conveyed to it from the river. There are many braue houſes in it vvith all ſorts of Marchandizes, and is fortified vvith Forts and vvalls againſt the attempts of the Engliſh and the Hollanders, vvho haue viſited it heretofore. It is the faireſt and moſt populous Citty of this Region; into vvhich all the ſilver is brought, vvhich comes out of the South Countries, and from thence is tranſported to Panama: this tovvne vvas firſt built by Franciſco Pizarro Anno 1553. Here is the reſidencie of the Peruvian Viceroy. The Arch-Epiſcopall Seate, vvho hath many Suffragan Biſhops under him, and this is the Chancerie for the vvhole Province.

Miraflores.

The other townes are Miraflores, lying upon the Sea 95 leagues to the Southvvard of Lima.

Trugillo.

Trugillo is 80 leagues from Lima, having a dangerous hauen to come into, vnleſſe it be vvith a fore-vvinde.

Parilla.

Parilla, or Santa is 55 leagues to the South-vvard of Lima, and is accommodated vvith a good hauen, vvhere they haue abundance of vvood and freſh vvater.

Canette.

Aruedo is ten leagues to the South vvard of Lima: and Canette, or Guarco 25 from Lima is rich and vvell furniſhed vvith good meale.

Arequipa.

Finally, Arequipa lieth 120, or 130 leagues from Lima, and 12 leagues from the Sea, ſeated on the river of Plata, and vvas heretofore as famous as Potoſi, all the ſilver having bene brought unto it, but is novv of litle account. Betweene Valverde (vvhich lieth 35 leagues to the South vvard of Lima) and Arequipa are very fine & pleaſant dales vvith hauens, vvhere the Spanjards inhabite here and there, having fortifyed them againſt attempts in diverſe places.

S. Iuan de la Frontiera.

In the midſt of this Countrie, and firſt of all in the Province of Cachapoyarum, you ſhall meete vvith Saint Iuan de la Frontiera, being 120 leagues South vvard of Lima.

S. Iago.

Alſo Saint Iago de los Valloi, being in the Province of Moyhamba, and is 25 leagues from S. Iuan aforeſaid, and to the North vvard of Lima aboue a hundred miles.

Leon de Guanuco.

Leon de Guanuco is forthie miles to the North vvard of Lima, ſeated in a pleaſant and a fruitfull ſoile, vvhere there are ſiluer mines.

Cuſco.

Guamanga, or Saint Iuan de la Vittoria lieth 60 leagues to the Eaſtvvard of Lima, about vvhich there are many mines of Gold, Silver, Quickſilver, Copper, Yron, Lettanie, and of Loadſtone. Laſtly, Cuſco the ancient Seate of the Indian Kings & Monarchs, before the arrivall of the Spaniards. The King, the more to beautifie this cittie, commanded every one of the nobility, to build a pallace here for his continuall reſidencie: it hath a faire market place, in the midſt of vvhich tvvo high vvaies thvvart one an other, vvhich are 2000 miles long ſtrait, and levell, and vvhich run croſſe the Countrie. Not farre from Cuſco Eaſtvvard lieth the lake of Titiaca, out of vvhich there runneth a very ſvvift riuer tovvards the Weſt, vvhoſe vvaters ſpread themſelues out very large, but after vvard grovve narrovver, as if they vvould diſcharge themſelues of their great burden: but being againe encreaſed by the confluence of many rivers, they make againe a ſmall lake, and at laſt looſing themſelues under the ground, fall into the Sea. In this Countrie there are rich and excellent mines of Quickſilver, called by the na-tiues Guantabelica, vvhich brings the King of Spaine in yearely great benefit, much vvhereof is carryed to the golden and siluer mines of Potosi, being of singular use for the scovvring, and refyning of Gold & Silver. There are some other tovvnes, under the command of Cusco, as Viscabamba, Saint Francisco de la Vittoria, and Saint Iuan del Oro, a small tovvne in the Province of Carabuya, about vvhich are mines of most pure, and excellent gold.

Mines of quick silver.

The audience of Charcas, or de la Plata.

The Audientia Charcensis called also La Plata, beginneth from the Confines of Lima, and extendeth as farre as the Kingdome of Chili, being 300 leagues in length. The bredth is not certainely knovvne, seing it reacheth from Mare Pacificum, to that Province, vvhere the riuer de la Plata lieth. There are many provinces in it vvhereof many of them abounds in rich mines of gold, out of the bovvells of vvhich an infinite treasure for a long time hath bene digged out of them, & transported from thence into Spaine.

In this territoire are these tovvnes follovving inhabited by the Spanjards 1. Nuestra Sennora de la Par, being within the Province of Chuquiabo, vvhich is a part of Collao, and lyeth 80, or 90 leagues to the Eastvvard of Lima. There is here exceeding fine gold; yea many are of the opinion, that the very bovvels of these mountaines are full of pure gold.

The Silver mines of Potosi.

The Metropolis Potosi is 18 leagues from Villa de la plata, or the Silver tovvne, called also by some Argyropolis: but is noe great tovvne. The Silver mines here about the Mountaine of Potosi, are so exceeding rich, that a quintall yeelded 80 markes of fine Silver, vvhich vvas never heard off in other places. The Indians in travelling found out first these rich mines, vvhich being knovvne in Argyropolis, they presently shared this mountaine of Potosi among the cittizens thereof, vvho through the labour of the Indians haue digged so much Silver out of it, that it hath sufficiently furnished all Europe.

Arica.

Vpon the Sea Coast they haue a braue hauen called Arica from vvhence at this day they transport all their Silver, and lieth from the Silver mount of Potosi about 70 leagues, being exceeding strongly fortifyed against the attempts of the English, and the Netherlanders. In former ages there were 8 Indian Kings of Peru. vitz. 1 Ingaroia. 2. Vanguazaguaque 3. Vixococa. 4. Picachuti. 5. Guaimacapa. 6. Guascar and Atabalipa. 7. Mangocapa, and 8. Amare.

The ancient Kings of Peru, & the conquets thereof. See Mr. Heylin.

The most lucky Prince of these eight vvas Guaimacapa, vvho extended his Empire to the largenesse it hath now: Since his death fortune hath frovvned on them all. For his tvvo Sonnes Guascar, and Atabaliba, immediately after the solemnizing of his funerall, striued for the Empire, till Francisco Pizarro a Spanish Captaine (vvho first discovered and found out this rich Countrie in the time of Charles the fifth) ended the controversie; by seazing on the Kingdome, to the use of his master of Spaine. Guascar vvas slaine, and Atabalipa seing the whole Kingdome lay at stake, layd all his riches, life, and liberty upon it, and cast the dice on a plaine, nigh to the Citty of Caximaca, vvhere the dice running on the Spanjards sides gaue them the glorie of the day, and hapless Atabalipa remained a prisoner, after an infinite slaughter of his Subjects. He gaue unto the Spaniards, as a ransome for his life and liberty, a house piled upon all sides with refined Gold, & Silver, being in estimation about ten millions, vvhich vvhen they had receiued they most perfidiously slevv him. His tvvo Successours laboured for the restoring of their ruinated inheritance, but prevailed nothing. For the vvickednesse of the Peruvians vvas novv full, and God sent these Spanjards amongst them, as executioners of his Vengeance, Anno 1533. The Spanjards since there comming into America, haue here and in other parts behaued themselues most inhumainely tovvards these poore and unarmed Indians, killing them up like sheepe to the slaughter, and forcing them like Beasts to labour in their mines, carry all burdens, and doe all drudgeries. Hathney a noble man being vvith many applausiue arguments persvvaded to embrace the Christian religion, demanded first, vvhat place vvas ordained for such as vvere baptized, ausvvere vvas made Heaven, and its ioyes: Secondly, vvhat place vvas bequeathed to them, vvho vvould not be baptized, ansvvere vvas made Hell, and its torments: Thirdly vvhich of these places vvas allotted to the Spanjards; and vvhen ansvvere vvas made, that Heaven vvas, he renounced his intended baptisme, protesting that he had rather goe to Hell vvith the unbaptized, then to liue in Heauen vvith so cruell a people.

Rivers.

Mountaines.

Wilde Beasts.

The plaine Countrie of Peru is sandie and for the most part barren, the more, because there are but a fevv rivers, and lakes in it, or by reason it seldome raines. The chiefe rivers are Maragon, Guaraquil and Rio de la plata, being 150 miles broad at the mouth and 2000 long or thereabouts. There are Mountaines in Peru, vvhich stretch out a greatvvay subject & colde and often times covered vvith snovv: upon these mountaines are a great many Lyons, Wolues, Blackebeares, Geese, & a beast like a Camell, of vvhose vvoll they make Clouthes, and other things. Here also in this Countrie is a very strange Beast, vvhich hath about her neck hanging dovvne by her belly a bagg of indifferent greatnesse, into vvhich shee putteth her younglings, at the approach of any body, and scuddeth avvay. Betvveene these Mountaines are many faire, great, deepe, fruitfull and rich Dales and Valleys, vvhich participate of a vvarmer ayre, vvhich makes the Inhabitants of these valleys more sharp-vvitted, fuller of dexterity, and agilitie, and haue better manners, then the other Indians. Andes are likevvise Mountaines vvithout Dales, vvhich runn from the North to the South vvith continued topps and ridges. These Mountaines environne the Province of Callao.

The Andes.

The manner of the Peruvians.

Touching the manners of these people in Generall, Levinus Apollonius vvriteth thus. The vvhole Countrie is divided into three seuerall kindes of people, and every of these into diverse Habits, for they tooke delight in their severall fashions differing and unlike one an other, vvere diligent in learning the languages of one an other, and oftentimes provoked each other to vvarres living in continuall troubles and dissensions, till at last this vvhole Countrie as farre as the Æquator came under the Commande of their Lords (called Gynacane) vvho domineered ouer them, so that every man learned the Cusconish speech, vvherevvith they could travell through the vvhole Countrie. The vveemen vveare long vvollen Coats dovvne to their knees, and the men a shirt dovvne to their thighes vvith a mantle cast ouer it. And though this fashion be used commonly through all the land, yet differ they much in the tyre of their heades, for in many places they use severall head-bands, diverse being of one colour, and others of severall dies. And there is not one of them, but is knovvne by these distinct bands, and colours in vvhat place soever he dvvelleth. They are by nature for the most part of a simple and a vveake capacity: suffring themselues oftentimes to be deceived and cossoned in their barteries, and bargaines: being also so blockish that they scarcely knovv vvhat Gold and Silver they haue; using onely vnmunted peeces and lumpes, vvhich they thirst & longe after, as much as vvee doe. Notvvithstanding this foolish simplicitie they are more vicious, then those vvhich dvvell under the line, being Hyppocrites, Dissemblers, silent murmurers and bearing private grudges like the Ievves: & are also giuen to lust and luxurie, making litle or noe account of their vviues, but using them like slaues and Drudges; and for a trifle vvill beate them pittifully: they make them goe in a thinne smock, vvhich covers their secret parts from their navell dovvnevvards, the rest of their bodies are starcke naked, and their armes and legges they adorne vvith round ringes about them, and as other Indians, boore holes through their lares and lipps vvearing smarages, and yron rings in them. There vveapons are Svvords, Bovves, Clubbs, Silver pole axes, yea some of Gould, and the like. In their temples they use to vvorship tvvo carved Images. The one being of the likenesse of a black Goate, the other of a longe Serpent, before vvhich they fall dovvne and vvorship. They haue noe knovvledge of any Arts, Letters or of picturing, as the Mexicans haue, vvho use in stead of vvords and letters Hieroglyphs in expressing their minds by figures and images: after the manner of the Egyptians. They use vvollen threds, vvhich they call Quippos, tyed together vvith severall knots, by vvhich they reckon their numbers, accounting from one to ten, and so forvvard. These knotts they die & giue them seuerall colours, vvhereby they can distinguish diverse things. Every Province hath its Notarie, vvho by these knotts, noteth up everie memorable act, vvhich hapneth, and tells the people vvhat came to passe many ages agoe.

The People hold opinion, that men use after their buriall to eate, drincke, and vvantonnize vvith vvomen, and therefore commonly at the death of any of their frends they kill some of their servants (vvhom they bury vvith him) to wait on him in the other vvorld. They are of a good courage, and feare not death, aud knovv vvell hovv to mannage their Weapons. When they had conquered any Countrie, they used to divide it into three parts, alotting the first to the service of their Gods: the second to the revenevv of their King: and the third to the maintenance and reliefe of the poore, a very just and equall division, and in vvhich there is nothing barbarous.

They haue some knovvledg by heare say of Noahs flood.

The Peruvians haue thus much notice of the generall deluge, that the Countrie vvas overvvhelmed vvith vvaters and all men perished except seuen, vvho hid themselues in a hole, vvhich they call Paticambo, vvhere having lived in safety, till the furie of the vvaters vvere assvvaged; they came out of the lurking place, and repeopled the Countrie. The chiefe of these seuen vvas Mangocapa, vvhose posterity possessing in this Countrie a plat of ground 20 miles in circuit, governed themselues in an Aristocraticall state; & at last choose the a King, vvhich mutation of their cõmon-vvealth, vvas (as by their computation is coniectured) Anno 1280, or some vvhat nigh it, as Mr. Heylin relateth.

THE DESCRIPTION OF PARAGVAY; or the Provinces called RIO DE LA PLATA, with the adjacent Regions of TVCVMAN, & SANTA CRVZ DE LA SIERRA.

Name.

THE Provinces Rio de la Plata, borroweth their name from this river; the certaine bounds of them being not yet knowne, but onely that part, which looketh to the North Sea. Southward they begin at the ſhoare of the ſaid river, lying under the 36. degree of Southerne altitude, and reaching Northward are bounded in that part of Braſil, which lieth under the Tropick of Capricorne. Weſtward they ſhoote out as farre as the Province Tucuman, & in ſome places border upon the vtmoſt confines of Peru.

Bounds.

Fertility.

This Region is much commended for the abundance of all things, and the fertility of the ſoile, yeelding good ſtore of Graine, Wines, Sugars, and a good encreaſe of all fruits growing there, tranſported out of Spaine. There are alſo goodly paſtures, which feedes all kinde of Cattle, eſpecially Horſes, which at the firſt were but ſeuen and thirty in all, to wit, 30. ſtone Horſes, & ſeuen Mares, in the ſpace of forty yeares haue had ſuch a breede, that the countrie is full of them. There are alſo three ſorts of Deere, the firſt ſort almoſt as bigg as your leſſer Cowes, having great and lofty hornes, they lodge in fennie grounds, and amonge reedes: the other ſort are of the bigneſſe of a fallow Deere and feede in fields: the other of the leaſt kinde liue upon the Mountaines. They haue alſo many Swyne and Babons, with beards and longe tailes, almoſt as bigg as a man, likewiſe Tigers, Lyons, and other Wilde-beaſts. And ſuch great and long Serpents, whereof incredible things are written. In this Countrie alſo is the Chameleon, which turneth its mouth towards the winde and liveth by the aire, but is not hurtfull to man. Alſo there are many Lizzards. And though it was thought heretofore, that there were no Gold Mines in it: yet of late yeeres the contrarie is ſeene, & many veines of Gold, Silver, Copper, Iron and Amathiſts haue bene found in it.

Wilde Beaſts.

The river de la Plata.

The Indians call Rio de la Plata, Paranaguaza, and alſo Parana. Next unto the river of the Amazons, for greatneſſe it will giue place to none in the Word. The mouth of it windeth towards the South, and lieth from Mar del Noort under the altitude of 35. and 36. degrees. The mouth whereof is 30. Spaniſh miles broad betweene Cabo de Santa Maria on the North, and Cabo Blanco, now called Cabo di Sant Antonio, on the South ſide. If you goe higher upward into the Continent, it is 10. miles broad, having many litle Iles in it, which lie diſperced here and there. This river in diverſe places, receiueth many other rivers into it, coming from the East and from the West, as farre as Port de Los Reyes: which is a great Lake called Lago de Los Xarayes, lying litle leſſe them three hundred miles from the mouth of it, ſwelling and encreaſing with the rivers, which fall from the Andean Mountaines. Rio Parana neere unto Ciudad Real hath a great waterfall (much like unto that of the river Nilus in Egypt) making ſuch a roaring noize, and ſending forth ſuch a dampe, that no man dares approch within 200. paces: it falls from the top of a ſteepe rock ſome 200. fathome high, neither dares any man come neere it with Canovves or boates within a league, leaſt they ſhould be overturned, becauſe the violence of the ſtreame runs as ſwift as an arrow out of a bowe.

It is reported, that Iean Diaz de Solis was the firſt that euer ſailed up this river anno 1515. and after him Sebaſtiã Gabot an Engliſhman, ſent thither by thoſe of Seville, to paſſe through the Strait of Magellan, to the Moluccoes. He having ſailed ſome leagues up this river found a great deale of Silver, which the Indians of their Warres had gotten from the Peruvians, and for this reaſon, called it Rio de la Plata, or the Silver River, which before this Iohn had named (Rio di Solis) the River of the Sunne. Theſe Regions are all under one Gouvernment and Superintendencie: being ſubject to the Viceroy of Peru, in regard of their vicinity. They are likewiſe under one Biſhop, and haue three villages and Societies of Caſtillians. There are alſo in theſe parts a multitude of Indians, which are very tall and haue ſtrong & corpulent bodies.

Townes.

The chiefe townes are theſe: firſt that of Nueſtra Senora del Aſſumcion, where the firſt Colonie was planted, & is the Metropolis of this Countrie, lying under the 25. degree of the Southerne altitude, firſt founded by Duke Iohn Salazar, by the Commaund of Pedro de Mendoza Gouvernour. On the right ſide of it neere unto the Tropicke, lieth Ciudad Real, called by the Indians Guyara, and alſo by an other name Oliveros, being 80. miles from the towne of Aſſumcion, neere unto the river Parana, ſituate in a fertile ſoile, where there is plenty of victuals. On that part which looketh towards Peru, ſtands the towne called S. Cruz de Sierra, which was firſt planted with Inhabitants by Nuſto de Chaves, built upon the river Paraguay, having 300. Caſtillians Burgers in it, and 300. begotten by the Caſtillians of Indian women, which they call Meſtizos or Mungrils. Here the Gouvernour holds his reſidencie, having a Cathedrall Chutch, & the Kings miniſters in it, called de la Plata, and is ſuffragant to the Arch-Biſhopricke de los Reyes. There are in this region foure hundred thowſand Indians tributaire, the number whereof encreaſed daylie. The towne of AMSTELODAMI, Excudebat Ioannes Ianßonius.

Buenos Ayres lieth next unto the mouth of the river, upon the South ſide of it, being a good ſoile, it aboundeth moſt in Caſtillian fruits. Pedro di Mendoza putt Inhabitants into it Anno 1535. It is a plaine and a levell Countrie throughout; ſaving that here and there are ſome ſmall hillocks and hills, neere unto the river ſide. Vpon the South ſide of the towne of Aſſumcion lieth Sante Fe in a plaine, bordering upon the Province of Tucaman and Corduba. There are barbarous people in it, which are neighbours to the Calchinos, Menepes and Chiloacas. It is about 120. miles diſtant from Buenos Ayres, and almoſt as farre from the towne Aſſumcion.

Vpon the Edg of theſe Provinces, which reach from Braſil to the river de la Plata, there are fiue or ſixe Ports, very commodious for the rigging of ſhipping, to wit, S. Vincents Port, lying under the 33. degree of altitude, and beſides the river Vbay; as alſo the Port de la Canavea, under 35. degrees of altitude: likewiſe the Port de la Barra, the river and Port of Sant Franciſco, the Ile of Sant Catharina, a ſafe place for ſhipping, the Port Cerrado, the Port Riopholado, the river Tiraquiri being 32. degrees. In the yeare 1545. in which time the Duke Salazar commanded, after the Death of Don Pedro di Mendoza, there hapned a ſtrange accident in this Province, that a Tiger gitting into a houſe by night tore a Caſtilian greeveouſly, lying in his bed in the ſight of his wife, & ſone: after pulling him out drag'd him to his Denne, where he devoured him. The Duke going out very earely in the morning with 50. Souldiers to ſeeke this beaſt, found him a devouring of his pray, & leaping towards him let fly his piſtoll at him, and ſhooting the Tiger through his heart, kild him.

The Province of

TVCVMAN.

THe Province and Juriſdiction of Tucaman hath its ſituation in the Midland, the territoire whereof reacheth from the Province de Los Chicas, which are under the royaltie of the imperiall Citty of Potoſi to the river de la Plata. It is a temperate Countrie, and conſequently fruitfull, but hath hitherto noe Mines of Gold and Silver found in it. The places and habitations of the Caſtillians under one Biſhop are theſe. 1. S. Iago del Eſtero, firſt called del Yarco, lying under the height of 28. degrees and 85. miles to the Southward of Potoſi, by the Lake and river Eſtiero. This is the Gouvernours Seate, The Kings Miniſters, the Kings Treaſurie, and the Biſhops Seate, having a Cathedrall Church. The towne of S. Maria de Talavera is fiue and forty miles to the Northward of Sant Iago 40. miles from Potoſi under the height of 26. degrees. The towne called S. Michael de Tucuman lies 28. miles from Sant Iago to the Weſtward, under the height of 27. degrees. It had a colonie putt into it, when as the father of Garcia di Mendoza, Marqueſſe di Canieta commanded there in the quality of Vice-roy. There are alſo other new townes, as Londres and Chalcaque, which they call the Nevv Corduva, in the Province de los Iurias and Dragnitas: the Inhabitants whereof removed of late yeeres unto ſome other place. The Natiues of this Countrie weare Wollen cloaths, cunningly woven with interlaced leather after the manner of the Spaniſh Carpets. It nouriſheth a great number of Cattle, whoſe wool they uſe, and yeelds them good profit. They joyne houſe to houſe, lying not diſperced or ſeparated one from an other, having long ſtreets, and joyning cloſſe together, though the villages be but litle & few, everie familly dwelling within themſelues and fence their houſes round about with buſhes and thornes, becauſe of the continuall warre and ennimitie which is amonge them. The Inhabitants of the Countrie are very laborious, and are not given to drunkeneſſe, as ſome other Nations of the Indians are. Seuen great rivers water this Province, having beſides aboue 80. leſſer rivers and currents, much commended for the goodneſſe of their waters. There are many goodly large & faire paſtures, alſo for the feeding of Cattle. It is of the very ſame temperature both in Summer and Winter as Caſtile is: having a very cleare & ſweete climate. The Captaines Diego de Roias, Philippo Gutierraz, and Nicolas de Heredi, were the firſt that diſcovered it on the South ſide from the River de la Plata, to Gobotas Fort.

The Province of

SANTA CRVZ DE LA SIERRA.

Santa Cruz de la Sierra, (whereof wee haue ſpoken heretofore) is likewiſe a Midland Province, bordering upon Peru, having receiued this name from the Capitall towne, ſeated in a dry place voyd of water. The towne is built at the foote of a hill in a plaine, from whence the Mountaines begins to riſe, the houſes for the moſt part being covered with Palme-leaues. There is a litle river comming out of a rock, which doth diſcharge it ſelfe in the next Lake, in which there are taken many ſavourie fiſh, which are brought into the towne. It aboundeth in houſehold fruits, agreable to the ſoile as Platanos, Guayabas, Pinnas, Granadillas, Ambabayas, Lurunias and Tucumays, all well taſted. There are alſo Dates, the meale whereof is exceeding nouriſhing. There are likewiſe Grapes, Figgs and Melons, very like to thoſe of Caſtile. But the Trees grow not ſo longe, for Pomgranates and Quinces, will not grow well there. Heretofore the Inhabitants thereof dwelt in houſes made of dirt, with earthen walls, and kept raine water in pits, and oftentimes dyed for thirſt. Indiã fruits.

Theſe Indians were greeveouſly moleſted by others called Cheriguanſaes, as alſo the Titanes diſtant ſome 35. miles from them, who dwelt in a plentifull ſoile. In this Countrie of the Titans, there are Mines of Gold, of Silver and of Lead. And as by theſe Countries one enters into Peru: ſo at firſt was diſcovered the Negotiation betweene them, and the people dwelling in Rio de la Plata found out firſt Anno 1541, by Nuſlo de Chaves a Spaniard. Within 30. miles of this place Eaſtward, lieth the Province of Ytatin, being full of Mines of all ſorts of Mettall. Moreover, upon the Confines of Santa Cruz, there are other Countries and people, as the Chivichicocis, Los Mexos, Cheriguanaes and Tipiones. Heretofore the Spaniards had here an other towne called La nova Rioia, and the village La Baranca, both deſtroyed by the barbarous Cheriguanaes, in that time when as te Vice-roy Conde de Neyve commanded over Peru.

THE DESCRIPTION OF CHILE.

Name. THE Province of Chile taketh its denomination from the vehemencie of the cold & chilnes thereof, & lieth betweene the tropicke of Capricorne, Peru, and the Countrie of the Patagones; the one part of it South, the other North: On the West it hath Mare Pacificum, shut in by a very large tract, from the Confines of this region, and the Empire of China. In the same nature as Europe is, so is it subject to raine, thunder, and lightning, and alteration of the seasons of the yeare; saving that by the vicissitude of times, it is Summer there, when it is winter with us. You discover and see the Pole Antarticke, by the revolution of a small cloud, the Circumference vvhereof hath the Pole for its center. All this region is partly maritimate, and partly mountagnous. And that part which lieth next the sea coast, is most subject to heate. There are abundance of Cattle, and of Austriges, and the seeds, and fruits, which are brought thither out of Spaine prosper and growe quickly. Many rivers are frozen too, and stopp their currents in the night, by reason of the extremitie of the colde, but in the daye time the Sunne melts the yce and they runne againe. The Inhabitants are of a great stature and corpulent, wel limmed & couragious in warre. They use bowes and Arrowes. Their cloaths are the shinnes, and furres of wild-beasts, and Sea-wolues.

Bounds.

The Pole Antartick.

Fertility.

The Largenesse. This Region extendeth 500 miles from North to South, and reacheth as farre as the Straite of Magellanus, and 400 miles from East to West, or from Mar Pacificum to the Antlanticke, and 500 miles beyond it. Nevertheless if ye take the Province of Chile more restrictly, and as it is now inhabited and manured by the Spaniards, it is not aboue 300 miles in length, & onely twentie in bredth, & some times lesse, but principaly towards the mountaines called Cordillera los Andes, it is of a large extent, and almost all waies covered with Snow. Now, thoug it is said, that the temperature of these regions are various, and that they are subject to heate, cold, & stormes, by reason of the alteration of the heigth of the Pole, under which they lye: yet notwithstanding the aire in some places is so milde, and the climate so good, that it will not giue place to any other part in India, either for the multitude of inhabitants, being almost situated (over against) and in the same heigth of degrees, as Castile is: or for the abundance of all sorts of victuals, and provisions, the plentie of all things. The opulentie of the mines, and other riches, as also for the power, might, agility, & dexterity of the Natiues, for which it maye contend, and compare with all the other Regions of India. The people are giuen to follow the warres; & are of a gigantine stature, being some of them eleuen foote high, that can hardly be brought into order, & Civilitie: In so much that they yet fight vaillantly for their liberties in the Mountaines, and in those places, where the Cordilleras confine, especially in the Provinces of Arauco, Tucapel, and the valley of Puren, which lies betweene the towne de la Conception, Los confines, and the imperiall Citty.

Temperature.

Fertility & disposition of the natiues.

Deriſion. It is devided into two provinces, viz. Chica, & the Patagones. The Countrie towards the midland is very mountainous, and unfruitfull: towards the sea-shore levell, fruitfull, and watered with many rivers, flowing from the mountaines; this being the chiefe benefit the Countrie reapeth from them. The Spaniards finde here good plenty of gold, abundance of hony, store of Cattell, and wine enoug for their owne use: the Vines brought hither out of Spaine prosper exceedingly.

In that part of Chile, which frontreth upon Peru, is the Valley of Copiapo, which in the Indian tongue signifyeth the Land of Iaspes, for in the mount next adjoyning to it, they finde abundance of these precious stones, and because there are so many in these parts, they are litle sett by, and of no great value. This Valley hath an intervall, or space of 35 miles, and is bounded with an other valley called Guasco lying under the heigth of 29 Degrees. Next unto that lies the valley of Chile, more famous then all the other vallies in this Region, and as some say, from whence this province tooke its name. Here were heretofore found the golden mines of Quillota from which Validiva brought such great treasure, and riches.

Three valleyes.

Townes. La Serena. Now the first towne next unto Peru is called by the Spaniards La Serena built Anno 1544. by Valdivia Governour of Chile in the Valley of Coquimbo not farre from Mar del Zur, or the South sea. Ye haue the longest day there upon the 14 of December, being 14 howers longe, and the longest night upon the eleventh of Iune. Lopes Vas in the description of these regions reporteth, that there are but two hundred houses in this towne which is confirmed to be true, because S. Francis Drake landing here abouts, & marching with some of our Nation into the Countrie, to wit, with some three hundred light horsemen, & two hundred foote, made the whole Countrie to fly before him. For the rest, raine falls seldome there, and not passing three or foure times in a yeare.

S. Iago. Saint Iames towne called by the Spaniards S. Iago is the Metropolitan of all the Province, the first colonie of Chile, planted there by Pedro de Vandivia Anno 1541, it lieth under the heigth of 34½ degrees, 15 miles distant from the sea, and ten from the Valley of the Chilois. It is the Seate of a Cathedrall Church, and hath three Conventsin it, viz. The Dominicans, the Cordeliers or Gray-frayers, and the Mercenaires. It is situated in a soile abounding in wheate, wine, and other things, especially, in rich mines of gold. It hath aboue ten thousand Indians tributaire, divided into sixe famillies or tribes. The port, or haven of Valparayso, lying upon the mouth of the river of Topocalma runns through it, and lies very commodious for it.

Mendoza & S. Iuan de la Frontera. In the Province of Chucuito, beyond the Cordilleras de los Andes, mountaines so called, are situate in a chill and a barren region, the townes of Mendoza and Saint Iuan de la Frontera, which were peopled by Garcia de Mendoza. The towne Mendoza lieth in the same heigth as Saint Iago doth; being 40 miles distant from it. There is an open way to it through the midst of the Mountaines, but very troublesome to passe, in regard they are covered continually with snow, which one shall meete with al. Saint Iuan de la Frontera lieth to the Soutward of Mendoza.

La Conception. The Towne called La Conception, is seated by the side of Mare Pacificum or the calme sea, and was peopled Anno 1550 under the conduct of Petro de Valdivia. The Governours keeps there their residencie since the Court or Soveraigne Audience brake up, which was held there from the yeare 1567. till Anno 1574. There are in it three Cloisters of Dominican, Gray, and Mercinarie Fryers: The Haven is a winding gulfe in the sea, having an Ile opposite against it, which lies as a bulwarke to defend it, so that stormes and tempests cannot hurt it. The Inhabitants are daylie troubled with the Arauces which are accounted the best souldiers of the Chilois, having good experience in the Art militairie, which is the cause that the king of Spaine, is forced to keepe strong garnisons of souldiers in them, having bene once sacked & destroyed by the Barbarians. To this Continent joyneth S. Maries Ile, which the Spaniards haue much adoe to keepe against the inroads of the Barbarians.

Villanueva de los Infantes. Ville-neuva delos Infantes, or de los Confines, was first of all made habitable by Garcia de Mendoza. It lies 16 miles from la Conception, and eight from the mountaines called Andes. It hath a Convent of Iacobins and Cordeliers: The Indians lye upon the confines, who by warrs and armes defend their borders; so that this towne cannot be kept and defended against the attempts of the Barbarians, but with a great garnison of souldiers. Throug this countrie passeth the famous river of Biobio, and others that falls into it, as also the river Nivegueten.

The Imperiall. The citty called The Imperiall, was peopled by Pedro Valdivia anno 1551, & lieth under the heigth of 39 degrees, being seated three miles from the sea. It hath a Cathedrall Church, and a Convent of Cordeliers, & Mercenaries. It hath within the Iurisdiction thereof 8000 Indians, which follow the warres. It is watered with the river Cauten, from which you may saile into the sea, though the haven be none of the safest. It is the Metropolitan of the second Bishoprick of the Kingdome of Chile. The soile is good for corne, but bad for vines, the grapes whereof seldome or never grow ripe there. They haue good store of pasturage for the feeding of neate, and cattell, but their kine giues them no good milke.

Villa Ricca. Villa Ricca is about some twentie miles distant from the sea, is situated upon the lake of Mallabangien, which dischargeth it selfe into the sea by a river called Rio de Tolton. There is within it a boyling fountaine, (with two springs) as great and as bigg as a mans bodie. They haue also Pine appels, which the Spaniards call Pinons de Libano. This place was first inhabited by the same Valdivia.

Baldivia. But Baldivias towne, which for spight to its Founder was puld downe and so named, is seated almost in the very midst, to wit, betweene the Northerne confines of Chile, and the Strait of Magellanus in the Province of Guadalanguen, being two miles distant from the Sea, and 50 from the towne of la Conception. This region is fertile abounding in Indian wheate, & pulse. It hath excellent pasture grounds but yeeldeth no wine. Marchandizes, and other commodities are brought unto it by the river of Valdivia, which runns through it. It is also rich in most pure gold, having a commodious haven, which may easely be fortifyed. It hath bene sometimes spoyled by the Barbarians, but was afterward repaired by the Spaniards.

Osorno. Osorno is situated seuen miles from the sea side in a colde Climate, but rich in golde, and was first inhabited by Garcia de Mendoza. It hath a Convent of Dominican, of Gray fryers, and a Nunnerie, having under the commaund and jurisdiction of it, twentie thousand Indians.

Castro. Next this lies Castro, called by the Indians Chilue; lying betweene three or foure & fortie degrees of the Æquator, in the midst of the Iles, which spread themselues upon this coast along the great lake called Ancud. These places were peopled by Lopez Garcia de Castro, when he governed in the Empire of Peru.

Now the Archipelagus of the Iles is 42 miles distant from Osorno the greatest of them, being 58 miles long, in some places 9 miles broad, & in the narrowest part but two. The Sea flowes in betweene them to the Andean Mountaines. The aire is sharpe by reason of the cold hills and mountaines, it is fruitfull in wheate; and Maize, which is rare there, having mines of gold within the limits of them.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE STRAITS OF MAGELLAN, AND LE MAIRE.

Name & frō whome.

THE Strait of Magellan, called in Latin Fretum Magellanicum, and in Spaniſh Eſtrecho de Magellanes, was ſo named from Ferdinando Magellanus a Spaniard, being expert in Navigation, was earneſtly entreated by Charles the Fifth, to finde (if poſſible it might be) a ſhorter cut to the Moluccos. This requeſt he willing to performe, addreſſed himſelfe in his voyage, Anno 1520. taking his courſe Southward upon the 24. of Auguſt. When the Sea grewe calme, and that the ſtormie windes in Winter and the raging of the Sea begann to ceaſe, he put out of the Haven, or S. Iulians Gulfe, where he had harboured, and layne ſtill, to heare what would become of the mutuall warre and ſtrife, which was betweene the Caſtillians and the Portugalls, and having ſailed ſome daies Southward, at laſt came to Promontorium S. Crucis, or the Cape of the H. Croſſe, in which place one of his ſhips by a ſtorme had ſtrooke, and by good happ came of well without any harme: he perceiving there, that the ſhoare, & Coaſt bending litle by litle Weſtward, was in good hope to finde out a Fretum, or a Strait: ſo that on the 26. of December he found an opening, ſailing into it with his foure ſhips, and there coming into a Bay he lay ſtill at ancker, and ſent three of his ſhips out to diſcover the Strait, whereof one of them, in which was Alvaro Meſchita, Magellanes Brother, gaue him the ſlip out of the Strait, and ſteered their courſe Northward towards Africa, and from thence after eight months voyage returned into Spaine, where he and his Companions were by commaund from the Emperour Charles the Fifth clapt up, and put in priſon. The ſecond ſhippe brought Magellanus intelligence, that this ouverture was but a Boſome or a Gulfe, or ſome great Bay, which was ſhallow and not deepe enough. The third ſhip had obſerved better by the flowing and ebbing of the Sea, that it muſt of neceſſity be a Fretum, or a through-faring Strait. This diſcouverie was made in the Winter time, when the night were 19. howers long. On either ſide of the ſhoares, aſwell on their right as on their left hand, they ſaw an overgrowne wilderniſſe, but not a living creature in them, but onely on their left ſide, they perceived aloofe, as farre as they could diſcerne, a great many fires: in ſo much that they called this part of Land, Terra del Fuego, & were of the opinion, that the Natives had diſcovered them. Magellanus, then having loſt two of his ſhips, trimmed up, and repaired the other three as well as he could, and upon the 22. day after he entred the ſtraight, came into an other Sea, which they in regard of the calmeneſſe thereof, named Mare Pacificum and alſo Mare del Zur.

The diſcouerie of this Strait.

Terra del Fuego.

On both ſides of this Strait are high Mountaines, and Cliftes being 40. leagues in length, or as ſome ſay 76. Dutch miles. It beareth no certaine bredth, for in ſome places it is two, three, fiue, or ten leagues broad, but where it is narroweſt, and there it is properly called the Strait of Magellane: it is not aboue a mile, or halfe a mile, the courſe of the water being full of turnings and changes, and ſo violent, that when a ſhip is once entred, there is no returning. The water of the North-Sea, which runnes into this Strait upon the Eaſt ſide, with an entrance of 17000. paces, where the water of the South-Sea meets it (flowing in from the Weſt) at Promontorium deſideratum or the Deſired Cape, with ſuch a violence and raging noize, that all the water in this Strait ſeemeth to be a foame. On the Weſt ſide, it hath a more ſoft and a ſlower courſe of ebbing & flowing, being here exceeding deepe. But the Eaſt ſide is very dangerous and hazardous to paſſe, becauſe on both ſides of it, there lies here & there many Shelues and Iles, which are much troubled with the raging & beating of the Sea: by the ſhore-ſide growes exceeding high trees, & from the loftie Mountaines, continually covered with ſnow, comes thoſe dangerous counter-windes, that beate on all ſides of it. After Magellane had ſtayed almoſt halfe a yeare upon this Coaſt, he diſcovered nothing, but Shoares & Sandes, the inland part of this continent being unknowe unto him, onely he ſaw that it was a vaſt, and a Mountainous Countrie covered with ſnow, & in regard of the fires they diſcouvered, gaue it the name of Terra del Fuego, as is ſaid before.

We uſe to ſay, that S. Francis Drake was the firſt that (through this Strait of Magellane) ſailed round about the World, which may be true (as M. Heylin ſaith) in a mittigated ſenſe: viz. that he was the firſt Captaine or man of note, that achieved this enterprize. Magellanus himſelfe being ſlaine in a Battaile by the Ilanders of the Moluccoes, and periſhing in the midſt of it: and therefore is reported, to haue given for his device, a Globe, with this Motto, Tu primus circumdediſti me. This navigation was begonne Anno 1577. and in two yeares and a halfe with great viciſſitude of Fortun finiſhed. Concerning which his famous voyage, a Poet then living directed to him this Epigramme.

Drake pererrati novit quem terminus Orbis,
Quemque ſemel mundi vidit uterque Polus.
Si taceant homines, facient te ſydera notum;
Sol neſcit Comitis non memor eſſe ſui.

Terra Auſtralis incognita, hath on the Weſt ſide beyond the South Sea Iava Major and Minor, Summatra, Nova Guinea and the Moluccoes. On the Eaſt the African and Æthiopian Sea. And on the North this Strait of Magellan, and the Countrie of the Patagones. Terra Auſtralis. Sive.

The whole Soile on both ſides of this Strait, lying in the height of 52. degrees, is barren, vnfruitfull, and beareth no kinde of fruit or Corne; but hath good Paſtures & fine trees. When you are paſſed from the Eaſt through this Strait, ye come then into a large Mare Pacificum or Mar del Zur.

Sea, which is called Pacificum, becauſe of the ſtilneſſe, and calmeneſſe thereof, and becauſe Magellanus met there with no tempeſts or contrarie windes, it is likewiſe named Mare del Zur.

The maners of the Inhabitants.

The people & Natiues of the Countrie of Terra del Fuego, are as it is reported of a ſhort Stature, whereas the Inhabitants called Patagones, on the North ſide of the Strait, are exceeding great & tall like Gyants, ſome of them being 12. or 13. foote longe, being of a white colour almoſt like our nation, they haue a very lowde, & barbarous voice, which one would take to be rather the bellowing or lowing of a Bull, or of an Elephant, then of a man. They are as ſwift footed as a Hart, and runne ſo faſt, that they can hardly be ſhott with a peece, unleſſe one ſhootes at a whole crue of them, & hits them unawares. When they haue warres one with an other, they chooſe them a Captaine, to whome all of them are obedient & execute his commaunds. They are ſo ſkillfull Archers, and ſo ſure marke-men with their Bowe, that whatſoeuer they aime at, they lightly hitt, and ſhoote the heads of their arrowes ſo farre into the ſide of a ſhip, that one can ſcarcely pull them out. They haue great bowes, and their bow ſtrings are made of the gutts of wilde Beaſts, being of the thickneſſe of a thumbe: beſides them, they uſe wodden Swords and Clubbs, there cloaths are ſkinnes of wilde Beaſt, but principally of great Porpeiſes and Sea-calues, which they daylie take.

The Deſcription of the STRAIT LE MAIRE.

THe 15. of Iune Anno 1615. Iacob le Maire of Amſterdam, accõpanied with Cornelius Schouten of Horne, both Hollanders, ſetting ſaill out of the Texel, to diſcover the unknowne Southerne Countries, arrived upon the 7. of December in Porto Deſire, and after they had diſcovered the Ilands of Sebald de VVeert, lying upon the height of 51. degrees, they put againe into the Sea, running their courſe South-Eaſt, becauſe they ſaw the land bore that way, and making more to the landward, they perceiued an opening, out of which the water ebbed with ſuch a rage and violence into the North Sea, that the billowes thereof ſeemed to overwhelme their ſhips, into which Strait they entred in the after noone, and the next day, very early in the morning, being faire weather, they gott in further into the Strait, and firſt ran their courſe South, & then South-Eaſt, and at laſt directly South againe, diſcovering on both ſides of this Strait, very craggie Mountaines & rocks, and caſting out their plommet to ſound, found it 50. fadome deepe; where upon they rejoyced greatly, that for the benefit of their Countrie, and the good of all Navigatours they had found out this Strait and Channell, for which they gaue thankes to God.

Terra Mauritii de Naſſaw. Staii Land.

That part of the Land, which being entred into the Strait, lay on the Weſt ſide: they called Terra Mauritii de Naſſovv, the other on the Eaſt Staten Land, the Strait it ſelfe Fretum le Maire, after their Admirals name Iacob le Maire, which found it. The entrance into this Strait is 55. degrees & 30. minutes. It is in lenght ſeuen Dutch miles, or 28. of ours, and of a very faire, and equall bredth, plentifull of good fiſh, eſpecially Sea Calues and Whales, both at the entrance into it, and in the South Sea. There was abundance of greene Weedes, which floated upon the water, & the land was covered with Fowle, called Pinguins. In Maurice-land were exceeding high Mountaines covered with ſnow, but the States-land was Greene, & faire to beholde. Vnder the height of 75. degrees, they diſcovered ſome Ilands, which they named Barnevelts Ilands: for a perpetuall memorie of the diſcoverie of this Strait, they put up this inſcription or writing following upon a poſt.

Barnevells Ilands.

In the name of God, Creatour of Heauen and of Earth, vvho diſpenſeth richly all his gifts, and by his providence maintaineth all things; to vvhoſe honour and glorie, all our purpoſes, actions, and doings ought to be directed. For aſmuch then as all Countries, Provinces and Common VVeales, vvhoſe vvelfare dependeth, and conſiſteth chiefely in Navigation, and the diſcoverie of unknovvne Countries, & that being diſcovered they might tend greatly to their praiſe, and the encreaſe of their povver and authority: VVe vvhoſe names are hereunto ſubſigned, make knovvne to all thoſe, vvho ſhall ſee, or read this preſents: That vve in Ianuarie Anno 1616. (after vve had put to ſaile vvith tvvo Shipps, the one called Concordia, the other Horne, by charge and commaund from the mighty Lords, the States Generall of the united Provinces, and the Illuſtrious, Maurice Prince of Orange, under the Admirall Iacob le Maire, & VVilliam Cornelius Schouten, to diſcover the unknovvne Countries lying on the other ſide of the South Pole) at laſt having met vvith many viciſſitudes of fortune, and paſſed through many daungers, haue found and paſſed through this Strait and paſſage, vvhich to this day vvas never found, through vvhich vve came out of the Æthiopian Sea, into the South-Sea, called Mar del Zur, lying in the height of 55. degrees, and 36. minutes, beyond the Strait of Magellane; vvhere the ſaid Seas joyne neere one to an other, and ſeing this cutt, and paſſage is much neerer, and may be performed vvith leſſe daunger then that, vvhich is through the Straits of Magellanus, and verely thinke, that it vvas never diſcovered, or found by any man before; vve haue thought good, to deſcribe unto yovv the adjacent Countries, vvhich lie on both ſides of this Strait. The firſt lying VVeſtvvard vve named Mauritius-land, and the other on the Eaſt ſide Staten-land, the Iles beyond it Barnevells Ilands, and the Strait it ſelfe, Fretum le Maire. And therefore haue vve vvith good right & equitie, appropriated the prærogative, & inheritance of theſe Countries, Seas, Ilands & the Strait it ſelfe, and the name of them to the Lords the States Generall, and the Illuſtrious Prince of Orange, having taken poſſeſſion thereof, and for the more aſſurance haue ſigned hereunto vvith all our hands. Giuen in the Shipp Concordia &c.

Anno 1625. the ninth of Iune, there was a Dutch Genleman unknowne, ſent Mr. Heylin the deſcription of this Strait, to inſert into this part of his Microcoſme, ſubſcribed G. B. and a litle under Sub grundas Taridus, but whether this be the Motto of this Gentleman, or his name by way of Anagramatiſme he knew not. For his encouragement then he gaue him this direction: The newes of this new-found Strait coming into Spaine, the King in the yeare 1618. ſent to ſearch, whether the truth were anſwerable to the report. And finding it to be much broader, then the other, and not aboue ſeuen Dutch miles long: decreed, that being the more eaſie, and ſhorter cutt for Navigatours, and leſſe ſubject to dangers; his auxiliary forces, ſhould be ſent that way unto the Eaſt-Indiens, to defend the Philippinæ and Molucco Iland, and the way by the Cape of Good Hope to be left, in regard that every ſuch voyage, required twiſe as much time: beſides the varietie of Windes, and often change of the Aire, not onely troubleſome, but alſo full of diſeaſes, conſumed the one halfe of his men, before they returned. Whereas this way gayneth time (and if neede be, they may diſpatch buſineſſe in the Weſt, as they travell into the Eaſt) without any extraordinary danger or loſſe of men. Theſe were the very words of his letter. The intelligence giuen him in this letter was found to be confirmed in a narration of the voyage, made by Captaine Don Iuane de More, Anno 1618. at the command and charge of the King of Spaine: who preſently armed and furniſh'd eight tall Shippes, to ſend this new way unto the Philippines and Moluccoes; under the conduct of Petrus Michaeiles de Cordoelen. Since it hath bene found by experience, that euen from our parts to the Moluccos, through this Fretum de Maire, is but a paſſage of eight months: Sine ulla inſigni Navigantium clade, ſaith the Narrator. And thus much of this Strait.
